27.	Communion in D flat / Preludium e Fughetta	B. Luard Selby	1	0
28.	Introduction and Fugue	F. E. Gladstone	1	0
29.	Allegretto	F. E. Gladstone	1	0
30.	Andante and Fugue	B. Luard Selby	1	6
31.	Pastorale and Melody in A flat	B. Luard Selby	1	6
32.	Orchestral March	B. Luard Selby	1	0
33.	Sonate	Oscar Wagner	1	6
34.	Sketch in C minor	John E. West	1	0
35.	Fugue in E minor	John E. West	1	0
36.	Minuet and Trio	B. Luard Selby	1	0
37.	Andante in B flat, and Short Postlude	B. Luard Selby	1	0
38.	Sarabande	B. Luard Selby	1	0
39.	Postlude in D	B. Luard Selby	1	0
40.	Andante Grazioso	C. S. Heap	1	0
41.	Fantasia in C	Berthold Tours	1	6
42.	Allegretto Grazioso	Berthold Tours	1	0
43.	Menuetto	Berthold Tours	1	0
44.	Postlude	Berthold Tours	1	0
45.	Fantasia in C minor	W. S. Hoyte	1	6
46.	Four Short Voluntaries	Kate Westrop	1	6
47.	Concert-Fantasia and Fugue	W. G. Wood	2	0
48.	Sonata in D minor	Charles H. Lloyd	2	6
49.	Andante in E, Minuet and Trio, No. 2, in A minor	B. Luard Selby	1	6
50.	Postlude in D	W. G. Wood	1	0
51.	Allegro in C	W. G. Wood	1	0
52.	Melody in B flat	Arthur Carnall	1	0
53.	Three Andantes	Hamilton Clarke	1	6
54.	Postlude, in B flat	John E. West	1	0
55.	Allegro in form of a Minuet	W. G. Wood	1	6
56.	Allegro ma non troppo	H. M. Higgs	1	6
57.	Prelude and Fugue	H. M. Higgs	1	6
58.	Mélodie, Prière, Pastorale	H. M. Higgs	1	6
59.	Offertoire in D minor	H. M. Higgs	1	6
60.	Andantino in D	J. Barnby	0	6
61.	Communion and Larghetto	Edouard Batiste	1	0
62.	Prelude and Postlude	Edouard Batiste	1	6
63.	Andante in A flat and Pastorale in F	Hamilton Clarke	1	0
64.	Grand Offertorio in A	Hamilton Clarke	1	0
65.	Minuet in B flat	Hamilton Clarke	1	0
66.	Larghetto in C	C. J. Frost	1	0
67.	Fantasia in B flat	C. J. Frost	1	0
68.	Sonatina in C	C. J. Frost	1	6
69.	Andante Moderato in A	G. M. Garrett	1	6
70.	Prelude in C minor	F. E. Gladstone	1	0
71.	Allegro Marziale	F. E. Gladstone	1	0
72.	Prelude and Fugue in A minor	Ch. Grædener	1	0
73.	Andante in F	J. W. Gritton	0	6
74.	Marche Triomphale in E flat and Postlude in F	Alex. Guilmant	1	6
75.	Fantaisie sur Deux Mélodies Anglaises	Alex. Guilmant	1	6
76.	Festal March in E flat	C. S. Heap	1	6
77.	Fantasia on Mendelssohn's Volkslied	Geo. Hepworth	1	6
78.	Prelude in G	W. Macfarren	0	6
79.	Religious March in E flat	G. A. Macfarren	1	0
80.	Andante in G and March	G. A. Macfarren	1	0
81.	Variations on the Psalm-tune "Windsor"	G. A. Macfarren	1	0
82.	Andante in D	H. S. Oakeley	1	0
83.	Præludium et Fuga	F. A. G. Ouseley	1	0
84.	Prelude in C sharp minor	W. Parratt	0	6
85.	Postlude in C minor	E. Prout	1	0
86.	Andante in E flat and Postlude in C	F. J. Read	1	0
87.	Andante Serioso in D minor	C. Reinecke	0	6
88.	Allegro vivace in D	C. T. Speer	1	0
89.	Prelude and Fugue in E minor	C. V. Stanford	1	6
90.	Postlude in C	H. J. Stark	1	0
91.	Allegretto Pastorale in A and Fugue in D minor	C. Steggall	1	6
92.	Offertoire in F	C. E. Stephens	1	0
93.	Concert-Fantasia in D minor	R. P. Stewart	1	6
94.	Fugato in C	Ph. Tietz	1	0
95.	Pastorale in E flat and Concluding Voluntary, Fugato in G minor	Ph. Tietz	1	0
96.	March in F	J. H. Wallis	1	0
97.	Voluntary (Grave and Andante)	S. S. Wesley	1	0
98.	Concert-Fantasia, D minor	Johann Worping	1	6
99.	Theme in A	F. W. Hird	1	0
100.	Maestoso alla marcia	F. W. Hird	1	0
101.	Postludium in F	Algernon Ashton	1	6
102.	Postlude in C minor	C. S. Heap	2	0
103.	Offertoire	J. F. Barnett	1	6
104.	Scherzo Symphonique	Albert Renaud	1	0
105.	Marche Solennelle (from Leavy)	Albert Renaud	1	0
106.	Meditation (from Nicou-Choron)	Albert Renaud	1	0
107.	Andante Religioso (from Nicou-Choron)	Albert Renaud	1	0
108.	Toccata in D minor	W. G. Wood	1	6
109.	Introduction and Variations	B. Haynes	2	0
110.	Three Offertories	Hamilton Clarke	2	0
111.	Pastorale	B. Luard Selby	1	0
112.	Six Easy Voluntaries	Kate Loder	2	0
113.	Twelve Characteristic Pieces. Book I.	Rheinberger	1	6
114.	" " " " II.	Rheinberger	1	6
115.	" " " " III.	Rheinberger	1	6
116.	" " " " IV.	Rheinberger	2	0
117.	Festal March	G. Calkin	1	0
118.	Romance	Battison Haynes	1	0
119.	Larghetto	F. E. Gladstone	1	0
120.	Solemn March	B. Luard Selby	1	6
121.	Elegy	B. Luard Selby	1	0
122.	Festival Præludium	Otto Dienel	1	6
123.	Concert Fantasia (No. 1)	Otto Dienel	2	0
124.	Concert Fantasia (No. 2)	Otto Dienel	1	6
125.	Adagio	Otto Dienel	1	0
126.	Andante Pastorale	Algernon Ashton	1	6
127.	Concert Overture in C minor	W. G. Wood	1	6
128.	Minuetto	George Calkin	1	0
129.	Postlude	George Calkin	1	0
130.	Nuptial March	B. Luard Selby	1	0
131.	Six Short Pieces (Nos. 1, 2, 3)	W. G. Wood	1	6
132.	Six Short Pieces (Nos. 4, 5, 6)	W. G. Wood	1	0
133.	Monologues (Nos. 1 to 3)	J. Rheinberger	1	0
134.	Monologues (Nos. 4 to 6)	J. Rheinberger	1	6
135.	Monologues (Nos. 7 to 9)	J. Rheinberger	1	6
136.	Monologues (Nos. 10 to 12)	J. Rheinberger	1	6
137.	Andante Grazioso	Percy W. Pilcher	1	0
138.	Andante con moto	A. H. Allen	0	6
139.	Introduction and Air, with Variations	W. G. Wood	2	0
140.	Six Easy Voluntaries (second set)	Kate Loder	2	0
141.	Fantasia Sonata on the Ancient Melody for "Dies Iræ"	B. Luard Selby	2	6
142.	Sonata on a German Chorale	Oliver King	2	0
143.	Fantasia	E. Silas	2	0
144.	Allegretto Pastorale	H. W. Wareing	1	0
145.	Sonata in D minor	Alfred Alexander	3	0
146.	March in C	H. Elliot Button	1	0
147.	Festival March	H. W. Wareing	1	6
148.	Short Offertory in F	Hamilton Clarke	1	0
149.	Andante	Arthur Henry Brown	1	0
150.	Meditation	Hamilton Clarke	1	0
151.	Andante in D minor	Hamilton Clarke	1	0
152.	Idyl	Hamilton Clarke	1	0
153.	Meditation	E. Townshend Driffield	1	0
154.	Pastorale	E. Townshend Driffield	1	0
155.	Offertoire	E. Townshend Driffield	1	6
156.	March (For a Church Festival)	E. Townshend Driffield	1	0
157.	Tempo di Minuetto	E. Townshend Driffield	1	0
158.	Andante (Ave Maria) / Fugue	E. Townshend Driffield / E. Townshend Driffield	1	6
159.	Tempo di Minuetto	W. A. C. Cruickshank	1	6
160.	Adagio in A	Otto Dienel	1	0
161.	Scherzando in A minor	Otto Dienel	1	0
162.	Adagio in D	Otto Dienel	1	0
163.	Concert Fugue in E minor	Otto Dienel	1	6
164.	Two Preludes	Percy W. Pilcher	1	6
165.	Offertory in F	G. F. Blatch	1	0
166.	Church Preludes (Nos. 1, 2)	R. Ernest Bryson	1	0
167.	Church Preludes (Nos. 3, 4)	R. Ernest Bryson	1	0
168.	Church Preludes (Nos. 5, 6)	R. Ernest Bryson	1	0
169.	Postlude in G	H. Elliot Button	1	0

(To be continued.)

Nos. 41 to 45, and 60 to 100, from "The Organist's Quarterly Journal."

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

NEW FOREIGN PUBLICATIONS.

	s.	d.
BACH, JOH. S.—Meditation on the 6th Prelude. For Violin, Harp (or Pianoforte), and Harmonium	4	0
BATTANCHON, FELIX.—"Le Rêve." For Violoncello and Pianoforte. Op. 63	4	0
—— The same. For Violin and Pianoforte	4	0
—— Gavotte préférée. For Violoncello and Pianoforte. Op. 64	4	0
—— The same. For Violin and Pianoforte	4	0
BEETHOVEN.—Largo from Op. 10, No. 3. Arranged for Violin, Violoncello, Harp (or Pianoforte), and Organ (or Harmonium)	7	0
BRAHMS, JOH.—Lullaby from Op. 117. Arranged for Orchestra:—
Score .. .. net	2	0
Parts .. .. „	3	0
BORDIER, JULES.—Suite fantaisiste. For Violin and Pianoforte. Op. 40:—
No. 1. Air d'église; No. 2. Menuet polonaise	10	0
No. 1, from above, separately. For Violin and Pianoforte	5	0
The same. For Violoncello and Pianoforte (or Organ)	5	0
BUSONI, F. B.—Sonata in E minor. For Violin and Pianoforte	14	0
CILCA, F.—"La Tilda." Melodramma in tre Atti:—
Canzone. Arranged for Pianoforte.. .. .. net	2	0
Preludio. Arranged for Pianoforte.. .. .. „	2	0
CLAUSSMANN, A.—Scherzo (B minor). For Organ .. „	2	6
—— Elévation (D flat major). For Organ .. .. .. „	1	6
—— Cantilène (E minor). For Organ .. .. .. „	2	0
—— Offertoire (E major). For Organ .. .. .. „	2	6
—— Elévation (A major). For Organ .. .. .. „	2	0
DUBOIS, TH.—Twelve New Organ Pieces. 2nd Volume „	8	0
FOCHEUX, JULIEN.—Romance (A major). For Violin and Pianoforte	4	0
—— "Souvenir d'Helfault." Caprice. For Violin and Pianoforte	5	0
GABRIEL-MARIE.—Sérénade badine. For Mandoline and Pianoforte	5	0
GILSON, P.—Alla Marcia. Rhapsodie. For String Orchestra:—
Score .. .. net	2	0
GOHTHELF, F.—Hymnus (A flat). For Violin, Violoncello, Harp (or Pianoforte), and Harmonium (or Organ). Op. 6 ..	9	0
LEONCAVALLO, R.—"Pagliacci." Dramma in due Atti. Vocal Score. Italian words .. .. net	15	0
Serenata di Arlecchino. For Tenor, with Pianoforte Accompaniment. Italian words .. .. .. net	2	0
Recitativo ed Arioso. For Tenor, with Pianoforte Accompaniment. Italian words .. .. .. net	2	0
Recitativo e Ballata di Nedda. For Soprano, with Pianoforte Accompaniment. Italian words .. net	2	6
Selection. For the Pianoforte .. .. .. „	2	6
Menuetto. For the Pianoforte .. .. .. „	2	0
Gavotta. For the Pianoforte .. .. .. „	1	6
Ballatella. Arranged for Pianoforte Duet .. „	2	6
MASCAGNI, P.—"I Rantzau." Opera:—
Selection. For the Pianoforte, by FUMAGALLI .. „	2	6
Romanza di Luisa. For Pianoforte Solo, by FRUGATTA net	2	0
Cicaleccio. For Pianoforte Duet .. .. .. „	2	6
MENDELSSOHN.—Festival Prelude on the "Hymn of Praise." By G. HECHT. For Harmonium, Pianoforte (or Harp), and Two Violins	5	0
—— "The Hebrides" Overture. Arranged for Pianoforte Duet and Harmonium by W. WAEGE	9	0
NICOSIAS, CH.—Caprice-Sokol. For Violin and Pianoforte	4	0
PIUTTI, C.—"Pfingstfeier" (Whitsun Festival). Prelude and Fugue. For Organ	4	0
—— Sonata (G minor). For Organ	8	0
POENITZ, F.—Nordische Ballade. For Harp	6	0
—— Three Easy Pieces. For Harp	3	0
No. 1. Serenade; No. 2. Musical Box; No. 3. Lullaby.
—— Elegie. For Violin, Violoncello, and Harp	4	0
REHBAUM, TH.—Trio-Suite. For Violin, Viola, and Pianoforte. Op. 23	16	0
SCHUMANN, R.—Adagio (C minor). For Harmonium and Pianoforte. Op. 61	4	0
—— Larghetto (E flat). For Harmonium and Pianoforte. Op. 38	4	0
WEBER, C. M.—Adagio and Rondo. For Harmonium and Pianoforte. New edition, by A. REINHARD	4	0
WENNER, E.—"Mélancholie." Marche Funèbre. For Violin and Pianoforte (or Organ). Op. 21	5	0
—— "Chanson d'Avril." For Violin (or Viola), and Pianoforte. Op. 22	5	0

Sold at half-price, if not marked net.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

Just Published.

INTERVAL EXERCISES

FOR SINGING CLASSES

TO WHICH ARE ADDED A FEW TWO-PART TIME EXERCISES

BY

FLORENCE A. MARSHALL.

Price Eightpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

BISHOP'S GLEES, &c.

THE ORCHESTRAL PARTS

REPRINTED FROM THE ORIGINAL FULL SCORES.

	s.	d.
ALLEGIANCE WE SWEAR	6	6
BLOW, GENTLE GALES. Quintet	2	9
CHOUGH AND CROW. Trio and Chorus	5	0
COME O'ER THE BROOK. Glee	2	6
DAUGHTER OF ERROR	2	6
FISHERMAN'S GOOD-NIGHT. Glee	2	0
GOOD-NIGHT, GOOD REST. Glee	2	0
HARK! 'TIS THE INDIAN DRUM. Round for four Voices	3	9
HART AND HIND ARE IN THEIR LAIR	4	9
MERRY BOYS, AWAY	5	0
MYNHEER VANDUNCK	4	9
NOW BY DAY'S RETIRING LAMP. Quintet	3	6
NOW TRAMP O'ER MOSS AND FELL. Chorus	4	3
O BY RIVERS. Serenade	3	3
SLEEP, GENTLE LADY. S.A.T.B.	2	3
Ditto. A.T.T.B.	2	3
SPIRITS, ADVANCE	3	3
STAY, PR'YTHEE, STAY. Sestet	3	9
THE TIGER COUCHES IN THE WOOD	4	3
TO SEE HIS FACE. Round	3	0
WHAT HO! CLANSMAN. Chorus	6	0
WHAT SHALL HE HAVE THAT KILLED THE DEER. Glee, with Chorus ad lib.	4	0
WHEN THE WIND BLOWS. Round for three Voices ..	3	9
WHO IS SYLVIA? Glee	2	0
WINDS WHISTLE COLD. Glee..	3	3

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE PSALMS

BIBLE VERSION

POINTED FOR CHANTING

BY THE

REV. DR. TROUTBECK.

CLOTH, ONE SHILLING.

The principles on which the pointing has been done are mainly those of the Cathedral Psalter, of which Dr. Troutbeck was Co-Editor, a Psalter which has now successfully endured the test of long experience. The book is not, of course, divided into daily portions like the Prayer Book Psalter, as it is intended for the use of those Christian bodies in which the Psalms are not sung throughout a monthly course, but it can easily be so divided by those who use it.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE

ART OF TRAINING CHOIR BOYS

BY

G. C. MARTIN

Organist and Master of the Choristers of St. Paul's Cathedral.

Price Three Shillings; in paper boards, 3s. 6d.

(No. 39. NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S MUSIC PRIMERS, Edited by Sir JOHN STAINER.)

The Exercises for the use of Boys also published separately. Price One Shilling; in paper boards, 1s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NOVELLO'S CONCERT EDITION.

HANDEL'S SONGS

FROM THE

ORATORIOS.

TWELVE SONGS

FOR

SOPRANO

Edited, with marks for expression, phrasing, and breathing,

BY

ALBERTO RANDEGGER.

Price Two Shillings.

CONTENTS.

Air—"Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion" (Messiah).
Air—"Come unto Him" (Messiah).
Air—"How beautiful are the feet" (Messiah).
Air—"I know that my Redeemer liveth" (Messiah).
Recit.—"No more in Zion" .. .. .. } (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"Wise men flatt'ring, may deceive you" }
Recit.—"O grant it, Heaven" .. .. } (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"So shall the lute and harp awake" }
Recit.—"O let eternal honours crown His name" .. .. } (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"From mighty kings he took the spoil" }
Recit.—"To Heaven's Almighty King we kneel" .. .. } (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"O Liberty! thou choicest treasure" .. }
Air—"Pious orgies" (Judas Maccabæus).
Recit.—"Ye sacred Priests" .. } (Jephtha).
Air—"Farewell, ye limpid springs" }
Air—"O! had I Jubal's lyre" (Joshua).
Recit.—"O, worse than death" .. } (Theodora).
Air—"Angels ever bright and fair" }

TWELVE SONGS

FOR

TENOR

Edited, with marks for expression, phrasing, and breathing,

BY

ALBERTO RANDEGGER.

Price Two Shillings.

CONTENTS.

Recit.—"Comfort ye, my people" } (Messiah).
Aria—Ev'ry valley shall be exalted" }
Recit.—"Thy rebuke hath broken his heart" .. } (Messiah).
Arioso—"Behold, and see if there be any sorrow" }
Recit.—"He was cut off out of the land of the living" } (Messiah).
Air—"But Thou didst not leave his soul in hell" .. }
Recit.—"He that dwelleth in Heaven" } (Messiah).
Air—"Thou shalt break them" .. .. }
Recit.—"'Tis well, my friends" } (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"Call forth thy powers" }
Recit.—"Thanks to my brethren" .. .. } (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"How vain is man who boasts in fight" }
Recit.—"My arms! against this Gorgias will I go" } (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"Sound an alarm!" .. .. }
Recit.—"O loss of sight" } (Samson).
Air—"Total eclipse" .. }
Recit—"Deeper and deeper still" } (Jephtha).
Air—"Waft her, angels" .. .. }
Air—"The enemy said" (Israel in Egypt).
Recit.—"My grief for this" .. .. .. } (Samson).
Air—"Why does the God of Israel sleep?" }
Air—"Where'er you walk" (Semele).
Recit.—"O God, who from the suckling's mouth" } (Esther).
Air—"Sing songs of praise" .. .. }

TWELVE SONGS

FOR

CONTRALTO

Edited, with marks for expression, phrasing, and breathing,

BY

ALBERTO RANDEGGER.

Price Two Shillings.

CONTENTS.

Recit.—"Behold! a Virgin shall conceive" .. } (Messiah).
Air—"O thou that tellest good tidings to Zion" }
Recit.—"Then shall the eyes of the blind be opened" } (Messiah).
Air—"He shall feed His flock like a shepherd" .. }
Air—"He was despised and rejected" (Messiah).
Air—"Father of Heav'n" (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"Return, O God of Hosts" (Samson).
Air—"Their land brought forth frogs" (Israel in Egypt).
Air—"Thou shalt bring them in" (Israel in Egypt).
Air—"O Lord, whose mercies" (Saul).
Air—"Lord, to Thee each night and day" (Theodora).
Recit.—"Great prophetess, my soul's on fire" } (Deborah).
Air—"In the battle fame pursuing" .. .. }
Recit.—"'Twill be a painful separation" } (Jephtha).
Air—"In gentle murmurs will I mourn" }
Recit.—"See, she blushing turns her eyes" } (Semele).
Air—"Hymen, haste! thy torch prepare" }

TWELVE SONGS

FOR

BARITONE OR BASS

Edited, with marks for expression, phrasing, and breathing,

BY

ALBERTO RANDEGGER.

Price Two Shillings.

CONTENTS.

Recit.—"Thus saith the Lord" .. .. } (Messiah).
Air—"But who may abide the day of His coming" }
Recit.—"For, behold, darkness shall cover the earth" } (Messiah).
Air—"The people that walked in darkness" .. .. }
Air—"Why do the nations so furiously rage together?" (Messiah).
Recit.—"Behold, I tell you a mystery" } (Messiah).
Air—"The trumpet shall sound" .. }
Recit.—"I feel the Deity within" } (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"Arm, arm, ye brave" .. }
Recit.—"Be comforted" .. .. } (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"The Lord worketh wonders" }
Recit.—"The good we wish for" .. .. .. } (Samson).
Air—"Thy glorious deeds inspir'd my tongue" }
Air—"Honour and arms" (Samson).
Air—"How willing my paternal love" (Samson).
Recit.—"It must be so" .. .. } (Jephtha).
Air—"Pour forth no more unheeded pray'rs" }
Air—"Revenge, Timotheus cries" (Alexander's Feast).
Recit.—"I'll hear no more" } (Esther).
Air—"Pluck root and branch" }

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

UNISON CHANTS

FOR THE PSALTER

A COLLECTION OF SINGLE ANGLICAN CHANTS

EDITED BY

THE REV. CANON SIR F. A. G. OUSELEY

AND

EDWIN GEORGE MONK.

The Voice Part—Price One Shilling. Organ Harmonies—Price Five Shillings.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

In furtherance of a more general chanting of the Psalter in Churches, this Book of Unison Chants is an attempt to supply a plan sufficiently easy to secure extensive adoption, yet varied enough to be attractive, upon the one and only basis regarded by the Editors as being universally practicable—viz., the employment of Single Chant Melodies, to be sung "in Unison."

The present Work, projected (and even announced) some score of years ago, is intended to meet the need indicated, by providing a Series of easy and suitable Chants, for Unison Singing only, for the monthly course of the Psalter in the Book of Common Prayer. Not only have small and moderately qualified Choirs been kept in view, but also particularly the Voice of the great Congregation. In order to secure this much to be desired end—Chanting of the Daily Psalms by Choir and Congregation combined—the following means are proposed:—

I. Singing in Unison (strictly speaking, Octave-Singing).

II. Employment of Chants of Restricted Compass only; especially as to all Reciting-Notes.

III. Provision for Change of Chant at every fresh Psalm; and also, whenever in the course of any of the longer Psalms such change could be made to follow the significance of the Sacred Text, conduce to its clearer understanding, or enforce its teaching.

IV. Suggestion for occasional Change of Instrumental Harmony as a further mode (often of much value and potency) of heightening the desired expression; or of calling attention to important divisions, and changes of subject or utterance, in cases when actual change of the voice-part seemed undesirable.

DAILY GRAPHIC.

Opinions may differ as to the superiority of single over double chants, and as to the general attractiveness of octave singing, but there can be no doubt that if it is to be widely adopted no better collection can be found than that which two such experienced choirmasters as the editors of this work have brought together.

THE QUEEN.

This work is a thoroughly practical solution of the problem, "How is the Psalter to be chanted in that vast majority of churches which have only small choirs, with rugged voices and little training?" and the editor's reply, "Let it be sung in vocal unison, supported, emphasised, and coloured by instrumental harmony," is, to our mind, conclusive, their publication providing the means by which so healthy a practice may be followed easily and satisfactorily. . . . With what loving care, mature judgment, and perfect good taste Dr. E. G. Monk has fulfilled this duty is evident upon every page of the book, which will undoubtedly find its way into very general use, and prove the means of effecting a much needed reform in our parochial and especially rural parochial Anglican Service.

THE ROCK.

This is a work of much importance. That it has taken twenty years to complete, and not without the melancholy interest attaching to it in the death of the first of these two editors; and that such distinguished talent has been employed to complete the work is, à priori, a great deal in its praise. . . . There are some very good suggestions for choir and congregation singing, which forms no invaluable part of the work.

THE FAMILY CHURCHMAN.

A remarkably desirable addition to Church Music. . . . Well bound and printed clearly on firm paper, it is most decidedly worth its price (5s.). The publishers are Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., who have also issued the voice part alone, price 1s.

THE RELIGIOUS REVIEW OF REVIEWS.

This work marks a further step towards simplifying and facilitating our Church music as regards the Psalter. . . . The collection provides a series of over 300 easy and suitable chants for the monthly course of the Psalter in the Book of Common Prayer. The chants themselves are the best known of Anglican Single Chants, admirably selected, adapted, and collected. The type of the notation in this edition is singularly clear, and the size of the Voice Part a convenient one for the pocket. . . . Especially to organists we commend this work of laborious industry, and highly talented ability and musical understanding. But not less helpful and instructive will it be to all of those who are interested in making this part of the Church Service hearty and impressive by a plan sufficiently easy to secure adoption, yet varied enough to be attractive.

CHURCH BELLS.

Not only will it be found useful in village choirs, where part-singing is not always available, but well-trained choirs might with advantage use it occasionally as a contrast to the singing of the full harmonies.

THE NATIONAL CHURCH.

The Preface and the Explanations and Suggestions will well repay the earnest attention of the clergy and choirmasters, and testify to the devout and loving care with which each step of the work has been taken.

THE MODERN CHURCH.

The volumes are beautifully printed; it is a pleasure to handle them and read them, and as that containing the voice part costs only one shilling, the price ought not to stand in the way of their adoption.

THE INDEPENDENT.

It is a useful book, even for Nonconformist organists, and is a convincing demonstration of the value of unison singing for the congregation, and the beauty of changing harmonies.

METHODIST TIMES.

There is a varied and abundant provision of chants, and the organ accompaniments, as might be expected from the names of the editors, are specially rich in changing harmony and illustrative beauty.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

OFFERTORY SENTENCES, &c.

THE OFFERTORY SENTENCES, with an Appendix for Festal use. Set to music by JOSEPH BARNBY. Price 1s.; or in Numbers at 2d. each. Tonic Sol-fa, 6d.

1. Let your light so shine.
2. Lay not up for yourselves.
3. Whatsoever ye would.
4. Not every one.
5. Zacchæus stood forth.
6. Who goeth a-warfare.
7. If we have sown.
8. Do ye not know.
9. He that soweth little.
10. Let him that is taught.
11. While we have time.
12. Godliness is great riches.
13. Charge them who are rich.
14. God is not unrighteous.
15. To do good.
16. Whoso hath this world's good.
17. Give alms of thy goods.
18. Be merciful after thy power.
19. He that hath pity upon the poor.
20. Blessed be the man.
21. Let your light so shine. Festal setting.

THE OFFERTORY SENTENCES, set to music by J. T. FIELD. Price 1s.

1. Let your light so shine.
2. Lay not up for yourselves.
3. Whatsoever ye would.
4. Not every one.
5. Zacchæus stood forth.
6. Who goeth a-warfare.
7. If we have sown.
8. Do ye not know.
9. He that soweth little.
10. Let him that is taught.
11. While we have time.
12. Godliness is great riches.
13. Charge them who are rich.
14. God is not unrighteous.
15. To do good.
16. Whoso hath this world's good.
17. Give alms of thy goods.
18. Be merciful after thy power.
19. He that hath pity.
20. Blessed be the man.

OFFERTORY SENTENCES.

	s.	d.
JOSEPH BARNBY. "Let your light so shine," "Whoso hath this world's good," and "Blessed is the man," with other movements, from the Service in E	1	0
J. BAPTISTE CALKIN. "Whoso hath this world's good," with other movements, from the Service in B flat	1	0
G. M. GARRETT. "Lay not up for yourselves," with other movements, from the Service in D	1	0
G. M. GARRETT. "Give alms of thy goods," with other movements, from the Service in F	1	0
JOHN STAINER. "Let your light so shine," "Lay not up for yourselves," "Whatsoever ye would," "Not every one," "While we have time," with other movements, from the Service in E flat	1	0
JOHN STAINER. "Whoso hath this world's good," "Be merciful after thy power," "He that hath pity on the poor," "Blessed be the man," with other movements, from the Service in A and D	1	0
FERRIS TOZER. Six Offertory Sentences, with Benedictus	0	6

Octavo, Sixpence.

EASY OFFERTORY SENTENCES

INTENDED CHIEFLY FOR PARISH CHOIRS, BY

GEORGE C. MARTIN, Mus. Doc.

Organist, St. Paul's Cathedral.

1. Let your light so shine.
2. Lay not up for yourselves.
3. Not every one.
4. Zacchæus stood forth.
5. If we have sown. Do ye not know.
6. He that soweth little.
7. To do good.
8. Whoso hath this world's good.
9. Give alms of thy goods.
10. Be merciful after thy power.
11. He that hath pity.
12. Blessed be the man. [ting).
13. Blessed be the man (2nd set-

OFFERTORY SENTENCES

SET TO

TUNES FROM "THE HYMNARY"

BY

J. POWELL METCALFE.

Price Fourpence.

PREFACE.

There is an ever-increasing conviction that decency and order are better promoted by the singing than the saying of the Offertory Sentences—and that not only in our larger, but in our smaller churches as well. In the latter the adoption of the desired use is to a great extent prevented by the anthem character of the music employed in the usual offertory setting.

The following arrangements are more especially intended for the use of those choirs who, not being regularly trained in anthem-singing, are accustomed to rely on the tunefulness, form, and compactness of the hymn-tune for aid in fitly rendering the words they sing.

E. V. HALL.

SEVEN

OFFERTORY SENTENCES.

Price Fourpence.

TALLIS'S PRECES, RESPONSES, and Litany (in 5 parts). Price 6d.

TALLIS'S RESPONSES, for Evening Service. Arranged for Four Voices, by Sir JOHN GOSS. Price 3d.

TALLIS'S PRECES and RESPONSES, with Litany, for Four Voices. Arranged by JOSEPH BARNBY. Price 4d.

THE FERIAL RESPONSES, with Litany, as used at St. Andrew's, Wells Street. By JOSEPH BARNBY. Price 4d.

THE PRECES and RESPONSES, with Litany. Set in Monotone, by JOSEPH BARNBY. Price 4d.

THE NICENE CREED. Set to music by the following composers:—

	s.	d.
Sir JOHN GOSS. Unison, with Organ Accompaniment. Key of D. Voice Part, 1d.	0	3
A. S. COOPER. Unison or in Harmony, with Organ Accompaniment. Key of F. Unison copy, 1d.	0	6
A. S. COOPER. Monotone, with Organ Accompaniment. On G	0	3
R. W. CROWE. Monotone, with Organ Accompaniment. On G	0	3
MERBECKE. With Organ Accompaniment by J. STAINER. Key of F. Folio. Unison copy, 1d.	0	6
MERBECKE. With Organ Accompaniment by J. BARNBY. Key of F	0	1½
MERBECKE. With Organ Accompaniment by H. J. POOLE. Key of F	0	4
J. STAINER. Unison or Harmony, with Organ Accompaniment. Key of G. Folio. Without Accompaniment, 1½d.; 8vo, 2d.	0	6
F. E. GLADSTONE. Set to Eighth Gregorian Tone and Tonus Peregrinus	0	3
S. S. WESLEY. In the Key of E	0	4

THE

VERSICLES & RESPONSES

AS USED IN

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL

(FERIAL USE)

EDITED BY

J. STAINER, Mus. Doc.,

AND

G. C. MARTIN, Mus. Doc.

Price Fourpence.

VERSICLES, RESPONSES, AND LITANY

FOR T.T.B.B.

Arranged from various sources, and partly composed, for use in Keble College Chapel, by

CHARLES H. LLOYD.

Price Sixpence.

THE APOSTLES' CREED.

	s.	d.
E. CRUSE. In Monotone Recitation, with Harmony for the Organ. On G. Folio	1	0
E. G. MONK. In Recitative, Unison with Organ. Key of G	0	3
W. STATON. Monotone, with Organ Accompaniment. On F	0	3
J. H. CORNELL. In Monotonic Recitation, with Organ Accompaniment. On C	0	3

ATHANASIAN CREED.

	s.	d.
A. S. COOPER. With Chants	0	3
E. H. BIRCH	0	4
W. T. BEST. Set to a new Chant. For Chorus and Organ. In F. Organ Score	1	6
Vocal do.	0	3
J. STAINER. The Ancient Plain Song. Arranged for Voices in Unison, with Organ Accompaniment	0	3

THE LORD'S PRAYER (Pater noster).

	s.	d.
BANSON, C. From Communion Service (in D) Four Voices	0	3
J. T. FIELD. In D. Four Voices	0	2
BATTISON HAYNES. In G. Unison and Organ	0	2
W. S. HOYTE. In G. Four Voices	0	4
R. E. PARKER. In G. Four Voices	0	3
T. ROYLAND SMITH. In F. Four Voices	0	4
H. TOWNSEND. Two settings, in Monotone. On G. Folio	1	0

THE CATHEDRAL PRAYER BOOK

BEING THE

BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER

WITH THE MUSIC NECESSARY FOR THE USE OF CHOIRS

TOGETHER WITH THE

CANTICLES AND PSALTER

POINTED FOR CHANTING

EDITED BY

SIR JOHN STAINER, M.A., Mus. Doc., Oxon.
(Professor of Music in the University of Oxford)

AND

THE REV. WILLIAM RUSSELL, M.A., Mus. Bac., Oxon.
(Succentor of St. Paul's Cathedral).

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.

Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co. have conferred a great boon upon the choirs and congregations of churches in which the services are choral, by publishing "The Cathedral Prayer Book." . . . One book instead of many—that is a good recommendation for the new issue, and we must compliment the editors and publishers on the manner in which they have discharged their task. With regard to the music, the Responses, Litany, and so forth, are given as sung in St. Paul's, and the contents generally in this department have been gathered from authoritative sources, and most carefully edited. The music and letterpress leave nothing to desire, while the get-up of the book is worthy of the Novello Press. We cannot conceive a more efficient aid to the Choral Service of the Church of England.

THE GUARDIAN.

The first of the two publications now before us is, on the whole, the best attempt which we have yet seen to provide on the lines of "Anglican" music a complete setting to the whole of the Prayer Book. . . . It is practically the use of St. Paul's Cathedral published in a simplified and yet complete form, and edited by the two musicians to whom the high position of the choir of St. Paul's amongst those of other cathedrals is chiefly due. The pointing of the Psalms which has been used is that of the "Cathedral Psalter," a preliminary instalment of the present work which has already appeared. Immediately after the general preface a short explanation of this pointing is given which is a model of clearness, and well worthy of study, not only as an explanation of this particular Psalter, but as a concise and practical exposition of the structure and form of the Anglican chant.

CHURCH TIMES.

"The Cathedral Prayer Book" is complete in all its parts, and neither priest nor singer need have any other copy of the Prayer Book in choir, a great advantage where choir stalls are of restricted dimensions. . . . The book as a whole is excellently printed, and prepared for the press with singular care. . . . We commend this book to the respectful attention of clergy, organists, choirmasters, and all other lovers of choral worship with the certain conviction that, whether they approve or not of various details, it cannot fail to be of material value in helping them to perform the Divine offices and to celebrate the highest Act of our worship with the solemnity which befits our approach to the Holiest.

SCOTSMAN.

The musical editing is most thoroughly done, and—what is no small matter in a book of this kind—the printing both of words and music is admirably clear and legible. The work will be welcome to choirs and choirmasters throughout the English Church.

SATURDAY REVIEW.

Clergymen and all the denizens of "quires and places where they sing" ought to be very much obliged to Sir John Stainer and Mr. Russell for bringing out this book. It does for the intoned service what "Hymns Ancient and Modern" has done for the service of song. . . . In the volume before us an attempt is made—and it seems to us a very successful attempt—to remedy the state of things thus described in the Preface: "The Music of the Versicles and Responses—Festal as well as Ferial—and a Psalter and Canticles pointed for chanting are almost indispensable for the careful and accurate rendering of a Choral Service. And yet, hitherto, it has been scarcely possible to procure these, unless in separate numbers, involving not only much additional expense, but also the disadvantage arising from the continual shifting of books during Service time, which is such a hindrance to a devout participation in Divine Worship." Any clergyman will agree in these expressions of the editors, and will look on the new volume as a boon.

JOHN BULL.

Of the convenience of a manual which provides in a compact form, and so far as is possible, all that is requisite for the choral rendering of the Church's Services, little need be said. The compilers of "The Cathedral Prayer Book" have aimed at doing for the Book of Common Prayer what was done for the Service Books of old by proper ecclesiastical authority. . . . "The Cathedral Prayer Book," compiled by the former Organist and the present Succentor of St. Paul's Cathedral, at least enjoys the prestige arising from the fact that it embodies the existing musical use of that great church—a church celebrated all over Europe for the excellence of its music. . . . On the assumption that Anglican music is that which ought to be adopted, "The Cathedral Prayer Book" is probably as near perfection as anything we are likely to see.

IRISH TIMES.

One of the principal objects of the present volume is to prevent the inconvenience arising from the constant shifting of books during the service, as well as the expense of supplying several books to each member. As, however, we have remarked before, there is even a stronger reason for recommending the work to Churches—namely, that it will encourage the general congregation to an intellectual participation in the choral portions of the service, and thus prevent that drowsy indifference which is at present too often manifested in many cases. The book is small and portable, about the same size as the present Church Hymnal, and is sold at a price marvellously small, considering its character. . . . The work has evidently received all that care and thought in its compilation which it is in the power of two such well-known and distinguished musicians as the Professor of Music of Oxford University and the Succentor of St. Paul's Cathedral to bestow, and we would recommend it very strongly to the notice of our clergy, choirmasters, and organists.

EDITIONS.

		s.	d.
1.	Demy 8vo, 628 pp., large type. With Canticles and Psalter pointed for chanting. Cloth, red edges	6	0
2.	Demy 8vo, 600 pp., large type. With Canticles and Psalter pointed, set to appropriate Chants (Cathedral Psalter Chants). Cloth, red edges	6	0
3.	Imperial 32mo, 696 pp., Pocket Edition. With Canticles and Psalter pointed for Chanting. Cloth, red edges	3	6

The Clergy can be supplied with copies, in quantities of not less than 25, on liberal terms.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

NOVELLO'S VIOLIN & PIANOFORTE ALBUMS.

		s.	d.
*1.	MENDELSSOHN.—Four Marches. Transcribed by B. Tours. No. 1, Wedding March; No. 2, War March of the Priests; No. 3, Cornelius March; No. 4, Funeral March	2	6
*2.	BERTHOLD TOURS.—Thirty Melodies (expressly written to be used in connection with the Author's Violin Primer)	2	6
*3.	MENDELSSOHN.—"Elijah." Ten Transcriptions by B. Tours ...	1	0
*4.	GOUNOD.—"Mors et Vita." Ten Transcriptions by B. Tours ...	2	6
*5.	BATTISON HAYNES.——Twelve Sketches	2	6
*6.	SIEGFRIED JACOBY.—Hungarian Dances. (Transcribed)	2	6
7.	IPPOLITO RAGGHIANTI.——Nine Morceaux de Salon...	2	6
8.	OLIVER KING.—Twelve Pieces ...	2	6
*9.	JOACHIM RAFF.—Six Morceaux de Salon	2	6
10.	SIEGFRIED JACOBY.—Six Characteristic Pieces. For Two Violins	2	6
11.	ARCANGELO CORELLI.—Twelve Sonatas. In Two Books. Edited by A. Dolmetsch. Book I. ...	3	6
*12.	ARCANGELO CORELLI.—Twelve Sonatas. In Two Books. Edited by A. Dolmetsch. Book II. ...	3	6
*13.	SIEGFRIED JACOBY.——Eight National Melodies. (Arranged)	2	6
*14.	GOUNOD.—"Redemption." Nine Transcriptions by B. Tours ...	2	6
*15.	ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.—Twelve Easy Pieces	2	6
*16.	HAAKMAN.—Twelve Characteristic Pieces	2	6
17.	HANDEL.——Six Sonatas. The Pianoforte Accompaniment by A. Dolmetsch	3	6
18.	ARCANGELO CORELLI.——Six Trios. For Two Violins and Violoncello, or Pianoforte; or as Quartets, with Violoncello and Pianoforte. Edited and the Pianoforte Accompaniment by A. Dolmetsch	3	6
19.	KATE RALPH.—Six Pieces ...	2	6
20.	VARIOUS COMPOSERS.—Fourteen Pieces	2	6
21.	VARIOUS COMPOSERS.—Twelve Pieces	2	6
22.	VARIOUS COMPOSERS.—Thirteen Pieces	2	6
23.	ROSALIND F. ELLICOTT.—Six Pieces	2	6
*24.	ARTHUR SULLIVAN.——"The Golden Legend." Nine Transcriptions by B. Tours	2	6
25.	J. MÜLLER.—Forest Pieces (Op. 9)	2	6
26.	ETHEL M. BOYCE.—Eight Pieces	2	6
27.	I. B. POZNANSKI.—Ten Pieces ...	2	6
28.	CH. DE BÉRIOT.—Eight Pieces...	2	6
29.	HENRY PURCELL.——Fourteen Pieces. The Pianoforte Accompaniment, Marks of Expression, Bowing, and Fingering by Arnold Dolmetsch	2	6
30.	H. W. ERNST.—Seven Pieces ...	2	6
31.	F. DAVID.—Five Pieces	2	6
32.	H. VIEUXTEMPS.—Four Pieces ..	2	6

 These Albums may also be had arranged for Violoncello and Pianoforte.*

	s.	d.
A. C. MACKENZIE.—Six Pieces for Violin. With Pianoforte Accompaniment. No. 1, Gavotte; No. 2, Berceuse; No. 3, Benedictus; No. 4, Zingaresca; No. 5, Saltarello; No. 6, Tema con Variazioni net	5	0
Zingaresca (from the above) ... ,,	2	0
Benedictus (from the above) ... ,,	2	0
,, ,, Arranged for Orchestra. Full Score	5	0
Orchestral Parts	3	6
Highland Ballad, Op. 47, No. 1, for Violin with Pianoforte Accompaniment...	3	6
Two Pieces (Barcarola and Villanella), Op. 47, No. 2, for Violin with Pianoforte Accompaniment ...	3	6

A. C. MACKENZIE—continued.

	s.	d.
Pibroch.—Suite for Violin Solo. Arrangement for Violin and Pianoforte net	6	0
Orchestral Parts ... ... ,,	18	0
JOSEPH NEŠVERA.—Ten Pieces for the Violin. With Pianoforte Accompaniment ... ... net	6	0
C. GURLITT.—Six Pieces for Violin. With Pianoforte Accompaniment net	4	0
Romance (from the above) ... ,,	2	0
EDWARD GERMAN.—Three Dances from the Music to Shakespeare's "Henry VIII." Arranged for Violin and Pianoforte by the Composer ... ... net	3	0

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

FULL ORCHESTRAL SCORES

PUBLISHED BY

NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

	£	s.	d.
J. BARNBY.
THE LORD IS KING (Psalm 97) ...	1	1	0
J. FRANCIS BARNETT.
THE ANCIENT MARINER (English and German words)	2	2	0
JULIUS BENEDICT.
ST. PETER	3	3	0
THE LEGEND OF ST. CECILIA ...	2	2	0
W. STERNDALE BENNETT.
THE MAY QUEEN	2	2	0
F. CORDER.
PROSPERO. Concert-Overture	0	12	0
MICHAEL COSTA.
GOD SAVE THE QUEEN	0	2	6
F. H. COWEN.
RUTH	3	3	0
SLEEPING BEAUTY	2	2	0
SYMPHONY, No. 4 (THE WELSH) ...	0	15	0
ANTON DVOŘÁK.
ST. LUDMILA (English, German, and Bohemian Words)	4	0	0
THE SPECTRE'S BRIDE. Op. 69. (English, Bohemian, and German words)	3	3	0
A PATRIOTIC HYMN. Op. 30. (English, Bohemian, and German words)	1	1	0
STABAT MATER	2	5	0
REQUIEM MASS	3	3	0
SYMPHONY (No. 4) IN G MAJOR ...	1	10	0
H. GADSBY.
THE FOREST OF ARDEN. Orchestral Scene	0	7	6
CH. GOUNOD.
TROISIÈME MESSE SOLENNELLE ...	2	0	0
BY BABYLON'S WAVE	0	5	0
MORS ET VITA	3	3	0
THE REDEMPTION	3	3	0
HANDEL.
THE MESSIAH, with Mozart's Accompaniments. Cloth, gilt edges	1	1	0
ACIS AND GALATEA (English and German words), with Mozart's Accompaniments	1	11	6
SAMSON, with E. Prout's Additional Accompaniments	3	3	0
HAYDN.
THE CREATION. Cloth, gilt edges ...	1	1	0
G. HENSCHEL.
THE MUSIC TO SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET	1	10	0
ADOLF JENSEN.
THE FEAST OF ADONIS (English and German words)	0	15	0
OLIVER KING.
AMONG THE PINES. Concert-Overture. Op. 36	0	4	0
NIGHT. A Symphony in F. Op. 22 ...	0	10	6
C. HARFORD LLOYD.
HERO AND LEANDER	1	1	0
HAMISH MacCUNN.
THE LAND OF THE MOUNTAIN AND THE FLOOD. Concert-Overture ...	0	10	6
G. A. MACFARREN.
MAY-DAY. A Cantata	1	1	0
A. C. MACKENZIE.
ROSE OF SHARON. Op. 30	3	3	0
CONCERTO FOR THE VIOLIN. Op. 32	1	1	0
TWELFTH NIGHT. Overture	0	12	0
BENEDICTUS. From Six Pieces for Violin. Op. 37	0	5	0
THE STORY OF SAYID. Op. 34 ...	2	12	6
JASON. Op. 26	2	2	0
INTERMEZZO from ditto	0	7	6
THE BRIDE. Op. 25	1	1	0
PRELUDE to the Opera COLOMBA. Op. 28	0	4	0
BALLET MUSIC and RUSTIC MARCH (COLOMBA). Op. 28	0	10	6
LA BELLE DAME SANS MERCI. Ballad for Orchestra. Op. 29	0	7	6
RHAPSODIE ECOSSAISE. Op. 21 ...	0	5	0
BURNS' SECOND SCOTCH RHAPSODY. Op. 24	0	5	0
MENDELSSOHN.
ATHALIE. Op. 74. (English words) ...	1	0	0
,, The Overture	0	4	0
,, Priests' March...	0	2	0
A HYMN OF PRAISE. Op. 52. (English words)	1	1	0
Ditto The Symphony ...	0	7	6
ELIJAH. Op. 70. (English and German words)	1	5	0
ST. PAUL. Op. 36 ,, ,,	1	5	0
HEAR MY PRAYER ,, ,,	0	6	0
M. MOODY.
DER STERBENDE KRIEGER CONCERT OUVERTÜRE FÜR GROSSES ORCHESTER	0	4	0
OUVERTÜRE IN A DUR FÜR GROSSES ORCHESTER	0	5	0
MOZART.
TWELFTH MASS	0	15	0
E. MUNDELLA.
VICTORY OF SONG (Female Voices) ...	0	5	0
C. H. H. PARRY.
BLEST PAIR OF SIRENS	0	7	6
E. PROUT.
SYMPHONY IN F (No. 3, Op. 22) ...	1	5	0
C. SAINT-SAËNS.
THE HEAVENS DECLARE (Latin and English words)	1	5	0
SPOHR.
THE LAST JUDGMENT (English and German words)	1	11	6
Ditto The Overture	0	5	0
Ditto The Second Overture ...	0	5	0
GOD, THOU ART GREAT (English and German words)	0	10	6
CALVARY (English and German words) ...	2	2	0
C. V. STANFORD.
THE REVENGE. Op. 24	1	1	0
IRISH SYMPHONY IN F MINOR. Op. 28	1	10	0
PRELUDE TO THE ŒDIPUS REX OF SOPHOCLES	0	6	0
SUITE FOR VIOLIN SOLO AND ORCHESTRA	1	1	0
SYMPHONY (No. 4) IN F. Op. 31 ...	1	10	0
A. SULLIVAN.
OVERTURE DI BALLO	0	12	0
IN MEMORIAM. Overture	0	15	0
TE DEUM. Composed in celebration of the recovery of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales	1	5	0
THE GOLDEN LEGEND	2	12	6
MUSIC TO "THE TEMPEST"	1	10	0

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

PRODUCED AT THE GLOUCESTER FESTIVAL, 1892.

JOB

AN ORATORIO

FOR TREBLE, TENOR, BARITONE, & BASS SOLI, CHORUS, & ORCHESTRA

BY

C. H. H. PARRY.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.
Full Score and Orchestral Parts may be had on hire.

THE TIMES.

The whole monologue is an extraordinary exhibition of sustained power and effect, such as very few composers of any period have surpassed. . . . The various instances of God's omnipotence are treated with consummate skill, and a fine climax is reached at the words "Then shall God also confess that thine own right hand hath saved thee," which are set to a passage of broad seven-part writing, without accompaniment. . . . The impression produced by the work was very great, and it must be said deliberately that recent years have not seen a composition more free from flaw or weak point of any kind.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.

Dr. Parry's music is of the sort which cannot readily be dealt with by a critic who would do it justice. In its general character, in its details, and in special peculiarities, it calls not for a hurried, but for a leisurely survey. The reason is that our brilliant English composer—perhaps the foremost musical man in these islands—never brings forward a new work which can be labelled as belonging to such-and-such a category and then put on its proper shelf with a few common-place words. Whatever Dr. Parry does has a stamp of its own, and the stamp, I do not hesitate to say, is that of genius—that of a man who thinks for himself and has thoughts which, unlike many others, it is worth while to express. . . . It made to-day a profound impression upon an audience which included a host of musicians drawn from all parts by the reputation of our "English Bach."

STANDARD.

To describe the numberless changes of time, rhythm, and manner would be impossible, the music sometimes rising almost to fury, and then quieting down with sobbing accents as the mood of the afflicted Patriarch changes. Mention, however, must be made of an exquisite melody in D flat, given out by the violoncellos, and supported by the trombones pianissimo, at the words "Man that is born of woman." This is truly a bit of inspiration, such as only comes at rare intervals even to a gifted composer. . . . That "Job" will materially add to the composer's growing reputation may be said with confidence; it is an honour to English art, lofty in conception, and masterly in execution.

MORNING POST.

His setting of the beautiful lines "Man that is born of a woman is of few days," to quote only one instance, is a marvel both of beauty and appropriateness. The succeeding scene, in which the answer of God from the whirlwind is set for the full chorus, is also portentous in length, but in this the picturesqueness and variety of the words have helped the composer immensely. They would indeed inspire any musician, and in Dr. Parry's hands the form the text of the most remarkable piece of writing that he has yet given us. It is impossible within the limits of a brief and hurried notice to do justice to this astonishing chorus. The general verdict will no doubt declare "Job" to be Dr. Parry's masterpiece.

DAILY CHRONICLE.

It literally teems with beautiful phrases—in fact, the possession by Dr. Parry of the inestimable gift of melody has, I am inclined to think, never been so evident as in the verses commencing "Why died I not?" and "Man that is born of woman." . . . From whatever point of view it may be criticised, "Job" is thoroughly worthy the composer of the stupendous "De Profundis."

THE GUARDIAN.

As for the music, it is worthy at all points of the composer of the "De Profundis." . . . The ballad in the second scene is preluded by a charming solo for clarinet, and breathes throughout a spirit of exquisite freshness and simplicity. . . . One of the most effective passages in the work is the interview between the messenger and Job, which Dr. Parry has set to music of the rarest tenderness. . . . Satan's invocation of the winds is a brilliant declamatory solo, admirably orchestrated; but an even higher level is reached in the noble chorus that concludes the second scene, "See the clouds that sweep o'er the heavens." . . . Those wonderful "lamentations," in which the speaker sounds the very depths of heroic despair, have inspired the composer with a chain of musical phrases invariably dignified and at times rising to heights of real tragic grandeur and lofty ecstasy. . . . Very powerful and impressive again is the long chorus in the last scene, in which the unfailing picturesqueness and variety of the orchestration shows a decided advance on any of Dr. Parry's previous works. The great sombre chords which follow the words "The waters are hid as with a stone, and the face of the deep is frozen," are a veritable inspiration, while the passage, "Hast thou given the horse strength?" is treated with intrepid and irresistible vigour.

THE ATHENÆUM.

It opens with a theme of striking grandeur, fully scored for orchestra and organ. . . . The work of destruction is described in two wonderfully energetic and descriptive choruses, separated by an equally vigorous air for Satan. . . . The "lamentation" is not only one of the longest declamatory solos in existence, but also one of the finest. . . . An episode in D flat commands special attention by reason of its wonderful melodic beauty and expressiveness, and there are many other points from which admiration cannot be withheld, though to describe them would be impossible without copious illustrations in music type. . . . That Dr. Parry has written nothing finer than "Job" is generally admitted, and his boldness in dispensing with set airs, fugal choruses, and an elaborate Finale is abundantly justified by results; indeed, he might say, with Haydn, that "the rules are all my obedient, humble servants."

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES

FOR THE PIANOFORTE

EDITED, ARRANGED IN GROUPS, AND THE FINGERING REVISED AND SUPPLEMENTED

BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

THIS Collection of Studies is intended to illustrate the various elements of a complete course of pianoforte technique, and to provide students with the means of attacking and overcoming the different special difficulties which have to be encountered. With this view, the Studies have been arranged in groups, those in each group being placed in progressive order, and having reference to some one particular difficulty. The greater part of the Studies themselves have been selected from the standard works of the most eminent Study-writers, and with these are included numerous others, which, though of equally great practical utility, have hitherto been less generally accessible.

1.	FIVE-FINGER STUDIES	Part 1*
2.	„	„ 2*
3.	SCALES	Part 1*
4.	„	„ 2*
5.	BROKEN CHORDS	Part 1*
6.	„	„ 2*
7.	„	„ 3*
8.	„	„ 4
9.	„	„ 5
10.	LEFT HAND	Part 1*
11.	„ „	„ 2*
12.	„ „	„ 3
13.	„ „	„ 4
14.	ARPEGGIO	Part 1*
15.	„	„ 2*
16.	„	„ 3
17.	VELOCITY	Part 1*
18.	„	„ 2*
19.	„	„ 3
20.	„	„ 4
21.	„	„ 5
22.	„	„ 6
23.	„	„ 7
24.	FIGURES IN SEQUENCE	Part 1
25.	„	„ 2
26.	BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES	Part 1
27.	BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES	Part 2
28.	SHAKES	Part 1*
29.	„	„ 2*
30.	„	„ 3
31.	DOUBLE NOTES	Part 1*
32.	„ „	„ 2*
33.	„ „	„ 3
34.	„ „	„ 4
35.	OCTAVES	Part 1*
36.	„	„ 2*
37.	CHORDS	Part 1*
38.	„	„ 2
39.	STACCATO
40.	REPETITION	Part 1
41.	REPETITION AND TREMOLO	„ 2
42.	„	„ 3
43.	PART-PLAYING	Part 1
44.	„ „	„ 2
45.	ORNAMENTS	Part 1
46.	„	„ 2
47.	ACCOMPANIED MELODY	Part 1
48.	„	„ 2
49.	EXTENSIONS AND SKIPS	Part 1
50.	„	„ 2
51.	RHYTHM	Part 1
52.	„	„ 2

* These Parts are already published.

FIFTY-TWO BOOKS, PRICE ONE SHILLING EACH.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

Printed by NOVELLO, EWER and Co., at 69 & 70, Dean Street (W.), and published at 1, Berners Street (W.), and 80 & 81, Queen Street (E.C.)
Sold also by KENT and Co., Paternoster Row (E.C.)—Monday, May 1, 1893.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR.

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH.

No. 604.—Vol. 34. JUNE 1, 1893. Price 4d.; Post-free, 5d.
Registered for transmission abroad. Annual Subscription, Postage-free, 5s.

THE
SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW
FOR JUNE

CONTAINS:—

General Notes.
The Scotch Schools and Music.
School Singing and Voice Training. By G. Dunn, H.M.I.
The Decline of Sacred Music in Elementary Schools.
Suggestions for Lessons.—Filling up Bars.
Song in School.
Reviews.
Singing-Class Competitions.
Correspondence.
News from all parts.

THE
SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW
FOR JUNE

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING MUSIC IN BOTH NOTATIONS:—

"The Quiet Mind." Unison Song. By Henry Smart.
"Waving Forest, Flowing Stream," and "Slumber, lovely child." Two Unaccompanied Two-part Songs (from Silcher's "Sixty Melodies for Youth," adapted by F. Soper).
Easy Studies in Time and Tune Combined. By W. G. McNaught.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Office: 1, Berners Street, W.

THE
SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW
CASES
FOR BINDING NUMBERS 1 TO 12,
VOL. I.,

Are now ready, and may be had of all Musicsellers in Town and Country.

Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Handsome Design,
PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE MISSES TULLOCH'S RECITALS.

THE POETICAL AND MUSICAL RECITAL,
THE "CHILDREN'S HOUR" RECITAL,
THE TENNYSON RECITAL,
THE HUMOROUS RECITAL,
THE CLASSICAL RECITAL, AND THE SACRED RECITAL WILL BE GIVEN AT THE Gentlemen's Concert Hall, Manchester, commencing June 8.
Tickets, 5s., 2s. 6d., and 1s., at Forsyth Bros., Deansgate, Manchester.
For Press notices and particulars of these Recitals, address, The Misses Tulloch, Erith, Kent.

MR.
CHARLES FRY'S RECITALS.

DREAM OF JUBAL (MACKENZIE).
(Original exponent.)
ATHALIE, ANTIGONE, ŒDIPUS (MENDELSSOHN).
HAMLET (TOURS'S MUSIC).
MERCHANT OF VENICE (SULLIVAN'S MUSIC).
AS YOU LIKE IT (PART-SONGS AND ORCHESTRAL MUSIC).
SHAKESPEARIAN AND MISCELLANEOUS RECITALS.
Address, Belmont, Blenheim Gardens, Willesden Park, N.W.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC,
TENTERDEN STREET, W.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patrons: HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN AND THE ROYAL FAMILY
Principal: Dr. A. C. MACKENZIE.

Lecture by F. Corder, Esq., Wednesday, June 7.
Fortnightly Concerts, June 10, 24.
Midsummer Half-Term commences June 15. Entrance Examination, June 12, at 2.
Chamber Concert, a St. James's Hall, June 19, at 3.
Entry Forms and all information may be obtained from the Secretary.
F. W. RENAUT, Secretary.

THE GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.
Established by the Corporation of London, 1880.

Principal: Sir JOSEPH BARNBY.

The Half-Term commences Monday, June 5.
For prospectuses and all further particulars apply to the Secretary
By order of the Committee,
CHARLES P. SMITH, Secretary.
Victoria Embankment, E.C.

COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS.

June 6.—Lecture by Dr. Philip Armes, M.A., "On Robbing Haystacks, or the repeated use of Thematic matter, as exemplified chiefly in the works of G. F. Handel." July 11, 12, 13.—F.C.O. Examination. July 14.—F.C.O. Diploma Distribution. July 18, 19, 20.—A.C.O. Examination. July 21.—A.C.O. Diploma Distribution. July 25.—Annual General Meeting at 8.

Candidates' names for Midsummer Examinations must be sent in on or before July 4.

The College Library is open daily from 10 to 5 and on Thursdays from 7 to 9.

Members desiring occasional practice on the College Organ may obtain particulars on application.

E. H. TURPIN, Hon. Secretary.
Hart Street, Bloomsbury, W.C.

TO CANDIDATES FOR FELLOWSHIPS, COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS.

The undermentioned pieces have been selected by the College Council for the next Fellowship Examination, July, 1893:—

		s.	d.
Prelude and Fugue in E minor (The Wedge), Bach	price net	2	9
Fantasia in F minor (Op. 118), E. Silas	,,	2	6
Sonata in F sharp, Rheinberger	,,	3	0

THE ORGAN WORKS
OF
JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH
EDITED BY
J. F. BRIDGE, Mus. Doc., & JAMES HIGGS, Mus. Bac
IN TEN BOOKS (to be continued).

BOOK VIII. contains the Prelude and Fugue in E minor (The Wedge) selected by the College of Organists for the July Examination.
PRICE THREE SHILLINGS NET.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.
SUMMER ON THE RIVER
CANTATA FOR FEMALE VOICES
THE WORDS WRITTEN BY
SHAPCOTT WENSLEY
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY
FREDERIC H. COWEN.

Price Two Shillings.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES.

MISS FLORENCE ARMRIDING (Soprano)
(Pupil of Mr. Shakespeare and Medalist, R.A.M.).
For Oratorios, Concerts, Lessons, &c., at 20, Conduit Street. Address, Leicester Villa, Ealing, W.

MADAME BARTER (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., Westbury Road, Wood Green, N.

MADAME CARRIE BLACKWELL (Soprano)
(Pupil of the late Madame Sainton-Dolby).
Orchestral, Oratorio, Ballad Concerts, &c., 4A, Sloane Square, S.W.

MISS EMILY DAVIES (Soprano)
Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., address, Severn House, Seven Sisters' Road, Finsbury Park, N.

MADAME ELEANOR DAY (Soprano)
Concerts, Private Lessons, &c. Strathaven, Hendon, N.W.

MISS MARJORIE EATON (Soprano)
(Pupil of W. Shakespeare, Esq., London).
For Concerts, Oratorios, &c. 237, Katherine Street, Ashton-under-Lyne.

MADAME MADELINE HARDY (Soprano)
27, Loughborough Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS ADA LOARING (Soprano)
(Pupil of Albert Visetti, Esq.)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 75, Friern Road, Dulwich, S.E.

MISS FLORENCE MONK (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., Glebe Field, Stoke Newington, N.

MADAME POWELL (Soprano or Mezzo)
Diplomée (Honours) Singing and Theory, Society of Arts, &c. Concerts, Lessons, terms, and Press notices. 8, Frederick Road, Edgbaston.

MISS KATIE THOMAS (Soprano)
Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, Pupils. 47A, Welbeck Street, W.

MISS ETHEL WEBB (Soprano)
Concerts, &c. 14, Balmoral Road, Nottingham.

MISS GERTRUDE WESLEY (Soprano & Harpist)
(Great-granddaughter of Samuel Wesley).
For Oratorio or Ballad Concerts. Testimonials and Critiques from 53, High Street, Doncaster.

MISS LILY HOWARD (Mezzo-Soprano)
(Pupil of Madame Bella Monti).
Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., address, 1, Arundel Rd., Croydon.

MISS FRIDESWIDE C. SLATER (Mezzo-Soprano)
For Ballad Concerts, At Homes, and Private Lessons.
17, Wood Lane, Highgate, N.

MISS MARY WILLIS (Mezzo-Soprano)
For Oratorios, Operas, Concerts, or Private Lessons, address, 9, Rochester Terrace, Camden Road, N.W.

MISS M. L. BOOKER, L.R.A.M. (Contralto)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, care of Mr. Wm. Marriott, 295, Oxford Street, W.; or, Shirebrook Villa, Heeley, Sheffield.

MISS FLORENCE CROFT (Contralto)
88, Lady Margaret Road, Tufnell Park, N.

MISS EMMIE FINNEY (Contralto)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c.
42, Pembridge Road, Notting Hill Gate, W.

MISS LILIAN HOVEY (Contralto)
(Medalist, R.A.M.; Pupil of Mr. Richard Cummings, A.R.A.M.)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 82, Norfolk Road, Sheffield.
"'ELIJAH.'—Miss Hovey's finished style was manifested in 'Woe unto them,' and 'O, rest in the Lord,' which she rendered very beautifully and with rare devotional expression and pathos."—Sheffield Daily Telegraph, April 15, 1893.
"'ST. PETER.'—Of the principals, Miss Hovey takes the chief place for her sympathetic and reverent singing of the numerous recits., and for her consolatory rendering of the air 'O Thou afflicted."—Sheffield and Rotherham Independent, April 27, 1892.

MISS RINA ROBINSON (Contralto)
For Oratorio and Ballad Concerts. 67, Carleton Rd., Tufnell Park, N. References kindly permitted to Dr. A. H. Mann, Dr. E. H. Turpin, and Mr. F. A. W. Docker.

MADAME and MR. SUTTON SHEPLEY
(Contralto and Baritone).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 97, Dalberg Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS CLARA SPENCER (Contralto)
(Licentiate of the Royal Academy of Music (Artist), 1893, Pupil of Mr. Walter Mackway).
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., address, 7, Manor Road, Stoke Newington, N.; or, Holmdale, Parkstone, Dorset.

MISS LOTTIE SWEENEY (Contralto)
(Pupil of Madame Sainton-Dolby).
For Concerts, Oratorios, &c., address, Miss Sweeney, Vocalist, Armley, near Leeds.

MR. BEN. BURY, L.R.A.M. (Tenor).
Oratorios, Concerts, &c. Church, Lancs.

MR. D'ARCY CLAYTON (Tenor)
"Displayed his fine voice to great advantage in several songs, and was deservedly encored for Clay's 'I'll sing thee songs of Araby.'"—Musical Times, May, 1893.
9, Ospringe Road, N.W.

MR. HERBERT CLINCH (Tenor)
Oratorio, Ballads, &c., address, 41, Frederick St., St. John's Wood, N.W.

MR. C. EMLYN JONES (Tenor)
MADAME EMLYN JONES (Contralto)
Of the Albert Hall Royal Choral Society Concerts.
348, Kennington Road, S.E.

MR. JAMES LEYLAND (Tenor)
106, Bolingbroke Grove, Wandsworth Common, S.W.

MR. HARRY STUBBS, R.C.M. (Tenor)
(Of St. George's Chapel, Windsor).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 18, The Cloisters.

MR. GORDON HELLER (Baritone)
(Of St. James's Hall Concerts, London; late Pupil of Hy. Blower, Esq.)
For Oratorios, &c., address, 20, Blenheim Terrace, Leeds.

MR. GILBERT THORNE (Baritone)
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., address, 11, Penryn Street, Oakley Square, N.W.

MR. WM. THORNTON (Baritone)
Care of Wood and Marshall, Bradford.

MR. JNO. W. GREENWOOD (Bass)
For Concerts, Ballads, &c. 140, Queen's Road, Halifax.

MR. SMALLWOOD METCALFE (Bass)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c.
"Special praise must be given to Mr. Smallwood Metcalfe for his admirable singing. He is the possessor of a fine bass voice of considerable compass and sonority."—The Times, December 6, 1892.
Terms, &c., address, 142, Belsize Road, London, N.W.

MISS CHRISTINA BRUMLEU
(Violinist, A.L.A.M.).
For Concerts, At Homes, &c., address, Heimath, Sidcup, Kent.

MADAME MARY OWEN (Soprano), returned from abroad. For Oratorio, Concerts, At Homes, and Private Lessons. 68, Southampton Row, Russell Square.

MADAME LAURA SMART (Soprano) requests that all communications respecting Oratorio, Operatic Recital, or Ballad Concerts be addressed, 29, Burton Road, Kilburn, N.W.; or, 50, Church Street, Liverpool.

MR. W. CARTLEDGE-WHITE (Tenor) begs to announce his CHANGE OF ADDRESS to 7, Guildford Road, South Lambeth, S.W., where all communications respecting Concerts, Opera, Oratorio Engagements, and Private Lessons should be addressed.

MR. THEODORE FRANCE (Baritone) requests that all communications respecting Oratorio, Operatic, or Ballad Concerts, be addressed to 31, Melrose Gardens, West Kensington Park, W.

CHANGE of ADDRESS.—MR. DAN PRICE (Baritone, of Westminster Abbey) begs to announce his CHANGE of ADDRESS to 9, Clarendon Road, Holland Park, W., where all communications respecting Concert, Masonic, Oratorio Engagements, and Private Lessons should be addressed.

MR. EGBERT ROBERTS (Bass) requests that all communications respecting Oratorios, Opera, or Concerts be addressed, 45, Pentonville Road, N.

MR. STANLEY HAWLEY, Organist, St. Peter's Belsize Square. Present address, 18, Alma Square, N.W.

MISS LANE (Accompanist) can undertake to play from manuscript. References: Miss Zippora Monteith and Mr. Isidore de Solla. 38, Beckenham Road, S.E.

MISS CARRIE LEWIS (L.R.A.M.), Performer and Teacher, Accompanist (good reader), and Solo Pianist, accepts ENGAGEMENTS for Concerts, At Homes, Private Practice, &c. 218, Upper Richmond Road, Putney, S.W.

MISS CLARA TITTERTON, Associate and Silver Medalist, R.A.M., First Class Certificate Society of Arts, &c., &c., receives PUPILS for the VIOLIN and PIANOFORTE on moderate terms. Lessons given at pupils' own residences. Schools attended. Miss Titterton also accepts Engagements for Concerts and At Homes. 38, Agate Road, The Grove, Hammersmith, W.

HIGH-CLASS SINGING LESSONS.—MDLLE. JEANNE HENRY (Pupil, highly recommended by Madame Viardot-Garcia, Paris Conservatoire). FINISHING LESSONS, VOICE PRODUCTION (Italian method). Highest references. 12 Lessons, three guineas. Engagements for Concerts and At Homes accepted. Apply to Mdlle. Henry, Blandford Mansions, East Street, Manchester Square, W.

MR. FRANK FREWER, L.R.A.M., A.C.O. (Organist, St. James's, Garlickhithe, E.C.), teaches the PIANOFORTE, ORGAN, &c. For terms for Concerts, Organ Recitals, Pianoforte or Organ Lessons, address, 6, Wilmot Place, Rochester Road, Camden Road, N.W.

MISS

FANNY BOUFFLEUR

(PRINCIPAL SOPRANO, St. Peter's Church (Catholic), Seel Street, Liverpool).

For Oratorios, Cantatas, Operas, Concerts, &c.

Répertoire includes "Messiah," "Elijah," "Samson," "St. Paul," "Creation," "Acis and Galatea," "Alexander's Feast," "May Queen," "Rose Maiden," "Bride of Dunkerron," &c.; also "Stabat Mater" (Rossini), "Imperial Mass" (Haydn), "Twelfth Mass" (Mozart), "Requiem" (Mozart); Haydn's, Hummel's, Mozart's, and Beethoven's Masses and Motets, Cherubini's Mass in C, "O fons amoris," "Alma Virgo," "Ave Maria," &c.

For complete répertoire, Press opinions, photo, &c., address, 239, Upper Parliament Street, Liverpool; or, Agent, N. VERT, Esq., 6, Cork Street, London, W.

MISS

MARIE HOOTON

(CONTRALTO)

(Late Westmoreland Scholar and Parepa-Rosa Gold Medalist of the Royal Academy of Music)

AND

MR.

EDWARD BRANSCOMBE

(TENOR)

(LAY-VICAR OF WESTMINSTER ABBEY)

Are now booking Engagements for the present and ensuing seasons.

Please address, 37, Torrington Square, Bloomsbury; or,
Mr. W. B. HEALEY,
17, Great Marlborough Street, W.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS.

MR. DUTTON (St. Paul's Cathedral) provides SOLO BOYS for Church Festivals, Organ Recitals, Concerts, At Homes, &c.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Have made a great reputation.
MASTER ALBERT LEE.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Are specially experienced in Sacred Music.
MASTER W. A. GOUGH.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Have received splendid testimonials.
MASTER EDWARD WOOD.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Are trained entirely by himself.
MASTER FRANK CAMPBELL.

Address, 19, Alpha Road, New Cross, S.E.

MR. THOMAS KEMPTON

(Bass, Vicar Choral, St. Paul's Cathedral)

AND

MR. JAMES BATES

(Director of Choir, Christ Church, Lancaster Gate, W.),

PROVIDE:

SOLO BOYS and LEADING BOYS

For Oratorios, Church Festivals, Concerts, &c.

MASTER SYDNEY LOVETT

"Master Sydney Lovett is possessed of a singularly sweet soprano voice and a most refined style."—Daily Telegraph, April 12, 1893.

Master Lovett has recently sung with great success: "Messiah" and Bach's "Passion" Music (Christ Church, Lancaster Gate); "Hear my Prayer" (Paddington and Barnsbury), "Mors et Vita" (St. Leonards-on-Sea), "Hymn of Praise" (Bayswater, King's Lynn, and Islington), "Last Judgment" (Paddington, Hampstead, and St. Leonards), "Ancient Mariner" (Kensington), and "Gallia" (Hampstead), &c.

MASTER LEONARD TUDGAY

(Appointed Solo Boy, St. Mary's Church, Stoke Newington)

And other thoroughly trained and reliable vocalists can be seen by appointment.

Letters and applications for testimonials, criticisms, terms, &c., to be addressed:

Messrs. KEMPTON and BATES, 60, Moorgate Street, E.C.

Provincial Clergy, Organists, Musical Directors, and others, will find this address easily accessible from all the London termini.

CHOIR BOYS.

Carefully trained SOLO and LEADING BOYS for permanent Appointments, Festivals, &c.

MR. GEORGE BUDD,
10, Hafer Road, Clapham Junction.

THE

ENGLISH CONCERT PARTY

MADAME LESLIE ARNOTT.

MADAME JULIA HUTCHINGS.

MR. A. BOWYER BRISTOL.

MR. EDMUND EDWARDS.

Solo Pianoforte—
MRS. A. L. RICHARDSON, L.R.A.M.

Solo Violin—
MR. W. H. HENLEY.

Solo Harp—
J. H. COCKERILL
(Sir CHARLES HALLÉ'S BAND).

Conductor and Accompanist—
MR. WALTER J. EVANS.

The above Party are prepared to accept Engagements for the forthcoming season for Sacred, Chamber, or Ballad Concerts; also,

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS WITH

SIR AUGUSTUS HARRIS,

FOR

CONCERT RECITALS OF GOUNOD'S OPERA

PHILEMON AND BAUCIS.

Applications for vacant dates to be made to Manager,
P. Henry Jones, Hampden House, Phœnix Street, London, N.W.
Special arrangements for Charity Concerts.

THE HORSE-SHOE GLEE SINGERS.

ALTO: Mr. PERCY COWARD (St. George's Chapel Royal, Windsor Castle); TENOR: Mr. ARTHUR S. COWARD; BARITONE: Mr. RANDULPH L. COWARD; BASS: Mr. W. BELL KEMPTON (St. George's Chapel Royal, Windsor Castle).

For Concerts, &c. Terms on application to W. Bell Kempton, 16, Horse-Shoe Cloisters, Windsor Castle.

MR. JOSEF CANTOR'S

"GEMS OF THE OPERAS"

CONCERT COMPANY.

All communications, Church Street, Liverpool.

Telegrams—"Cantor, Liverpool."

MESSRS. BARTH & BLACK

CONCERT AGENTS

A MUSICAL AGENCY UNDER PROFESSIONAL DIRECTION.

Messrs. BARTH and BLACK are Agents for—

THE LADY VOCAL QUARTET,
THE WALENN STRING QUARTET, THE CELIA MALE VOICE QUARTET,

AND

THE ENGLISH OPERA SINGERS

(Operatic Concert Party under the direction of Mr. BROUGHTON BLACK).

Concerts arranged. Tours booked. Vocal and Instrumental Soloists of the highest class provided for every description of Concerts and Musical Performances. A Full Orchestra furnished at short notice. Special Parties for Oratorios, Operas, and Costume Recitals. Artists carefully selected for At Homes, Garden Parties, &c.

BARTH and BLACK, 2, Oxford Mansions, Oxford Street, W.

CONCERT AGENTS.—Messrs. BINGHAM and MORICE, Trafalgar Chambers, 36, St. Martin's Lane, W.C., arrange all kinds of Concerts, At Homes, &c. Every kind of Artist provided. Special terms for Charities.

THE

London College of Music,

LTD.

FOUNDED 1887. INCORPORATED 1892.

GREAT MARLBOROUGH STREET,

LONDON, W.

PATRONS.

The Most Noble THE MARQUIS OF CARMARTHEN, M.P.

SIR FRANCIS W. BRADY, Bart, Q.C.

The Honourable SIR WILLIAM GRANTHAM.

BOARD OF EXAMINATION.

W. J. WESTBROOK, Esq., Mus. Doc., Cantab.

HORTON ALLISON, Esq., Mus. D., Dublin; Mus. B., Cantab.

C. G. VERRINDER, Esq., Mus. D., Cantuar; Mus. B., Oxon.

ALFRED J. CALDICOTT, Esq., Mus. Bac., Cantab. (Principal, Educational Department).

F. J. KARN, Esq., Mus. Doc.; Mus. Bac., Cantab. (Vice-Principal).

G. AUGUSTUS HOLMES, Esq. (Director, Examination Department).

EXAMINATIONS in PIANOFORTE PLAYING, SINGING, THEORY, and all branches of Music will be held in London and at 300 Provincial Centres in July next, when certificates will be granted to all successful candidates.

SYLLABUS and FORMS of ENTRY can be obtained of the Secretary, who will supply all particulars. The last day of entry is June 15.

SILVER and BRONZE MEDALS and BOOK PRIZES are offered for competition in accordance with the regulations.

APPLICATION for the formation of NEW CENTRES should be made to the Secretary, who will furnish all necessary information.

The DIPLOMAS granted by the College are Associate (A.L.C.M.), Associate in Music (A.Mus.L.C.M.), Licentiate (L.L.C.M.), and Licentiate in Music (L.Mus.L.C.M.). Regulations and list of Diplomées on application.

The "Annual Register" of the College is now ready. Price 2s. 6d.

In the EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT Students are received and thoroughly trained under eminent Professors.

The HALF-TERM began May 29.

An OPERATIC CLASS for Ladies and Gentlemen is held every Wednesday evening from 6 to 9 p.m. Thorough instruction in Elocution, Musical Declamation, and Stage Deportment is given to Members of this Class. Conductor: Herr ALBERT HENNING. Fee for the Term, £1 1s.

T. WEEKES HOLMES, Secretary.

MUSICAL PROFESSION.—MR. W. DE M. SERGISON, Organist and Director of the Choir of St. Peter's, Eaton Square, S.W., trains Youths as Musicians, especially as CHOIR-TRAINERS and ORGANISTS. Mr. Sergison's course affords advantages not attainable at any London Academies. Many past pupils are now holding Cathedral and important Church appointments in England, America, and the Colonies. Applications should be addressed to Mr. Sergison, at the Vestry of the Church.

METHVEN, SIMPSON & CO.'S

COMPETITION

FOR THE

ENCOURAGEMENT OF BRITISH MUSICAL ART.

JUDGES.

Dr. A. C. MACKENZIE. Mr. FRED. CORDER, Mr. BATTISON HAYNES
Mr. OTTO SCHWEIZER, Mr. CARL DRESCHLER-HAMILTON, and Mr. JAMES A. MOONIE.

The Prize of £100 offered for the best Cantata has been awarded to "ORPHEUS," Dramatic Cantata for Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra, submitted under the motto, "RES SEVERA EST VERUM GAUDIUM."
Composed by Mr. F. J. SAWYER, Mus. Doc., Brighton.

The Prize of £25 offered for the best set of Twelve Two-part Songs, for equal voices, has been awarded to "SYLVAN WHISPERS."
Submitted under the nom de plume, "QUOMODO."
Composed by Mr. HENRY C. NIXON, London.

The Prize of £10 offered for the best Song has been awarded to "MY LOVED ONE, SLEEP SECURE,
Submitted under the nom de plume, "PRISCA FIDES."
Composed by Mr. J. CHRISTOPHER MARKS, Cork.

Unsuccessful Works have all been returned by post to the Competitors.

METHVEN, SIMPSON and Co., 83, Princes Street, Edinburgh.

CHURCH CHOIR GUILD

(Guild of Church Musicians).

35, WELLINGTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

President: The Very Rev. FRANCIS PIGOU, D.D., Dean of Bristol.
Warden and Licensed Lay Chaplain: J. H. LEWIS, Mus. Doc., D.C.L.

June 7, at 8 p.m.—Lecture, "A Church Kaleidoscope," by Dr. W. J. WESTBROOK, Mus. Doc., Cantab.
July 5 and 6.—A.C.C.G. and F.C.C.G. Diploma Examinations.
July 26.—Choral Festival at St. John Baptist, Spalding.
For further particulars see the new Calendar and Church Musician; or, apply to the Warden.

By Order of the Council.

VICTORIA COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Instituted by the Victoria College Corporation, Ltd.
Incorporated 1891.

Patrons:
The Right Hon. THE MARQUIS OF LORNE, K.T.
The Right Hon. THE EARL OF DARTMOUTH.

Local Theoretical Examination, July 1. Last day of entry, June 20.
Local Practical Examinations during June and July.
Diploma Examinations: A.Mus., V.C.M., L.Mus., V.C.M., &c., in London, July 4. Last day of entry, June 20.
Local Secretaries required for towns not already represented.
Further particulars on application.

GEO. A. STANTON, Secretary.
11, Burleigh Street, Strand, W.C.

MR. W. C. AINLEY, Mus. Bac., Cantab. (1884), teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c., by Correspondence. Terms moderate. New House, Mirfield, Yorkshire.

DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who passed the following EXAMINATIONS:—MUS. DOC., OXON. and DUBLIN; MUS. BAC. Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, and Durham (1892); L.R.A.M., 1893; L.L.C.M., 1893; F.C.O., 1893. FOUR HUNDRED Certificates, "Diplomas," and Degrees have been gained by Dr. ALLISON'S Pupils at Musical Examinations, and they won SIX GOLD MEDALS and Three Silver Medals. Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Revision of Compositions, by Post, to Correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, Organ, and Piano. 68, Nelson St., Manchester.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, A.R.A.M., teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c., by post. Personal Lessons in Pianoforte or Theory at own or pupil's residence; or at 84, New Bond Street, W. Schools attended. Address, Willersley House, Old Charlton.

EMIL BEHNKE'S System of VOICE TRAINING is carried on by Mrs. and Miss Behnke and assistant. Also Emil Behnke's method of treating STAMMERING. References to doctors whose patients have been cured. Pamphlet, 1s., post-free, of Mrs. Emil Behnke, 18, Earl's Court Square, S.W.

MR. GEORGE J. BENNETT is prepared to receive PUPILS in HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c. Address, 25, Vincent Square, Westminster, S.W.; or, 1, Berners St., W.

MR. T. HEMMINGS, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.C.O., L.Mus., T.C.L., prepares Candidates for ARTS and MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS by Post. Stoke-on-Trent.

VOICE-TRAINING AND SOLO SINGING.

MR. E. DAVIDSON PALMER, Mus. Bac., Oxon., gives LESSONS at his residence, 2, Highwood Road, Upper Holloway, N. Mr. Palmer's Method is of the utmost importance to Tenors, and to all whose voices have been misused or wrongly trained.

DR. F. J. KARN, Mus. Bac., Cantab.; Mus. Doc., Trinity College, Toronto; L.Mus., T.C.L., gives LESSONS Personally or by post in HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, FUGUE, ORCHESTRATION, ACOUSTICS, &c.; and prepares for Musical Examinations. Latest successes: DURHAM MUS. BAC. and First Exam., Sept. 1892; CAMBRIDGE MUS. BAC., 1892; MUS. BAC., LONDON, 1891; MUS. BAC., DUBLIN, 1891 and 1892; F.C.O., and A.C.O., 1892; L.R.A.M. (Composition), 1891; Mus. Doc. and Mus. Bac., Toronto, 1891, Gold Medalist, 1890; L.T.C.L. and A.T.C.L., 1892; F.T.S.C.; Senior Local, R.A.M. and R.C.M., and T.C.L., Theory and Pianoforte; A.R.C.M.; L.Mus., L.C.M. Upwards of 260 Diplomas and Degrees gained by pupils, and several Medals. Terms very moderate. Address, 70, Park Road, Haverstock Hill, N.W.

DR. W. JOHN REYNOLDS, D.Mus., Lond., L.Mus., T.C.L., gives LESSONS, personally or by post, in the Theory of Music (including acoustics). Recent successes, 48, Highbury Grove, N.

HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, COMPOSITION, by Post. Pupils in all parts of the kingdom. Prospectus free. "Comparison of English and German Methods of Teaching Harmony." Mr. F. Sommer, A.L.A.M., 14, Mardale Street, London, W.

MR. R. STOKOE, Mus. Bac., Cantab., F.C.O., gives ORGAN LESSONS at Christ Church, Down Street, Piccadilly. Harmony, Counterpoint, &c., taught personally or by post. 82, Rossiter Road, Balham, S.W.

DR. TAYLOR, Mus.D., Oxon., F.C.O., L.Mus. (Author of "Vocal Score Reading Exercises for F.C.O. Students"), prepares CANDIDATES for MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS by Post. Address, Wolverhampton Road, Stafford.

MR. A. W. TOMLYN, Mus.B., Dunelm, L.T.C.L., Berwick-on-Tweed, COACHES CANDIDATES for University and all other Exams. by post. Every possible attention and assistance guaranteed. Many past successes.

MR. W. H. TUTT, Mus. Bac., Cantab., L.R.A.M., teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, ACOUSTICS, &c., by Correspondence. Ashburn, Derbyshire.

DR. J. WARRINER prepares Candidates successfully for all MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS, and receives Resident and Professional Students, on advantageous terms, if talented. De Crespigny Lodge, Denmark Hill, S.E.

SOLO BOY WANTED, for All Saints', Norfolk Square, W.; must be a good leader. Salary, £10. Apply to John Curran, 29, Camden Grove, Peckham.

SOLO BOY WANTED, for St. John's, Hampstead. £20 per annum. Apply, James Shaw, 140, Fellows Road, Hampstead.

WANTED, GOOD BOYS' VOICES, for West-End Church. Apply, Precentor, 47, Park Street, W.

LEADING BOY WANTED, for All Saints', Tufnell Park. £10. Apply, J. W. Scott, 18, Albany Road, Stroud Green, N.

OXFORD NEW COLLEGE.—CHORISTERS WANTED.—Trial of BOYS' VOICES, on Friday, June 23. Apply to the Precentor.

ALTO REQUIRED for St. John's, Kilburn, N.W. Must be a good reader. £10 to £12. Apply, by letter, to J. Harraway Slape, 22, Camden Road, N.W.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL.—There is a VACANCY for an ALTO voice. Candidates must be bonâ fide Churchmen, under thirty years of age, and able to furnish satisfactory testimonials as to character as well as voice and musical experience. There will also shortly be a Vacancy for a BASS. Apply, by letter (before June 10), to the Succentor, Rev. W. Russell, Choir House, Dean's Court, E.C.

WANTED, for St. James's Church, Paddington, an ALTO, a TENOR, and a BASS. Communicants. Apply, by letter, to Choirmaster, 57, Clifton Hill, St. John's Wood, N.W.; or, personally, at St. James's Lecture Hall, Gloucester Place, on any Friday evening, at 7.45.

TENOR WANTED, Wandsworth Parish Church. Salary, £15. Apply to the Organist, Mr. J. E. Andrews, Melrose, Melrose Road, Southfields, S.W.

VOLUNTARY TENORS WANTED, for the Choir of All Saints', Norfolk Square, W. Full Choral Services. Apply to the Organist, on Sundays, at the Church, or by letter.

TENOR WANTED, for voluntary Evening Choir (surpliced). Travelling expenses. Apply, by letter, to Mr. George Cooper, Christ Church, Newgate Street, E.C.

BASS and ALTO WANTED, for the Choir of St. Paul's, Camden Square. Good readers; strong voices. Stipends: Bass, £15; Alto, £10. Address, The Vicar, 37, Camden Sq., N.W.

KING'S COLLEGE, Cambridge.—There will be a COMPETITION for a BASS CHORAL SCHOLARSHIP, on June 7, 1893, value £80, for three years. For further information apply to the Dean.

TENOR, sight reader, desires PROFESSIONAL ENGAGEMENT, Sundays only, in London Protestant Church Choir. Address, A. H. L., 6, Church Road, Shortlands, Kent.

TENOR, accustomed to Church Music, desires ENGAGEMENT (Choir or otherwise). Address, T., 10, Bernard Street, Russell Square.

WANTED, ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER, for Stepney Parish Church. Communicant; age over 25. Able to attend early services. Salary, £50. Apply, by letter, to Rev. E. Hoskyns, Rectory, Stepney, E.

WANTED, ORGANIST, for Parish Church of North Berwick. Salary, £45 per annum. Apply to Wm. Calder, Session Clerk.

ORGANIST (Lady) WANTED, in a Convent. Small 2-manual Organ. For further particulars, address, C. B., care of Messrs. Burns and Oates, 28, Orchard Street, Portman Square, London, W.

SOUTH HACKNEY CHURCH.—SUB-ORGANIST WANTED, immediately. Good accompanist, able to take fully Choral Service if required. Practice on three-manual Organ, and preparation for C.O. Exams. in return for services. Apply, John E. West, 1, Berners Street, W.

ASSISTANT-ORGANIST REQUIRED, for St. John's, Waterloo Road, S.E. Excellent opportunity for the study of Cathedral Service and Oratorio Accompaniment, the Art of Choir Training, &c. Organ, 4 manuals. Might reside with Organist. No salary. For terms, apply, with particulars, to H. D., 53, St. John's Park, N.

TO SEASIDE ORGANISTS.—London ORGANIST (holding prominent appointment) will take DUTIES during August in return for rooms. Manuale, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

ORGANIST desires a POST in a Nonconformist Church, in or near London. Excellent testimonials. Moderate salary. Would deputise. T. W. W., 11, Hyde Side Terrace, Lower Edmonton.

THE ORGANIST of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, is free to DEPUTISE during July, August, and September. Arnold D. Culley, F.C.O., A.R.C.M., Emmanuel College, Cambridge.

GENTLEMAN will act as DEPUTY-ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER, during month of August, in exchange for rooms. London or Seaside. Highest references. Address, Deputy, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

EXPERIENCED Country ORGANIST will be in London, August 4 to September 20, and would take DUTY. Accustomed to Choral Services and Anthems. F. S. I. P., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

GOOD Organist and Choirmaster would DEPUTISE for ORGANISTS, or is open to take a permanent appointment. Address, J. B., 93, Effra Road, Brixton, S.W.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER seeks APPOINTMENT. Can Tune. Excellent testimonials. Twelve years present post. A. Burton, Organist, Egerton, Kent.

ORGANIST (Nonconformist), A.C.O., desires ENGAGEMENT. W. H. J., Novello and Co., 1, Berners St., W.

ORGANIST, &c. (disengaged), desires POST in or near London. Moderate salary. Excellent testimonials. Would deputise. Anglican. E., 51, Cumberland Street, Pimlico, S.W.

WELL-KNOWN LONDON ORGANIST will DEPUTISE during August in return for rooms, or might exchange duties. Mus. Doc., Novello and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

AN Undergraduate, Member of Emman. Coll., Cambridge, would like to DEPUTISE for Gentlemen during the LONG VACATION. Has had experience in both Anglican and Gregorian music. Address, P. M., 9, New Square, Cambridge.

MR. C. HUGH ROWCLIFFE, F.C.O., is open to DEPUTISE during the summer. Address, 76, Brighton Road, Stoke Newington, N.

RESIDENT PUPIL REQUIRED.—Thorough training for profession. Preparation for Univ. degree. Three-manual organ. W. E. Thomas, Mus. Bac., Oxon., All Saints', Bloxham, Banbury.

AN ARTICLED PUPIL WANTED. Apply to J. M. W. Young, Organist of Lincoln Cathedral.

ARTICLED PUPIL.—MR. W. S. HOYTE, Organist and Director of the Choir, All Saints', Margaret Street, has a VACANCY for a RESIDENT ARTICLED PUPIL. Exceptional advantages offered. 68, Boundary Road, N.W.

TO HIGH-CLASS LADY PROFESSIONALS.—WANTED, ENGAGEMENT as PERMANENT ACCOMPANIST, for daily practice, public appointments; live with family. Exceptional reader. Vocalist (Soprano), Medalist, L.A.M. Ida, Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

THE Author of "A Manual of Class Singing," &c., is open to accept an ENGAGEMENT as MUSIC TEACHER in a Training College or large School. Experienced Teacher, Conductor, Theorist, &c. Box, Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners St., W.

MRS. WEBSTER, L.R.A.M., is open to an ENGAGEMENT as PIANOFORTE and HARMONY MISTRESS, one or two days a week, in or near London. Mrs. Webster has been exceptionally successful in preparing Candidates for the Associated Board of the R.A.M. and R.C.M. and other Examinations. 90, Angell Road, Brixton, S.W.

TO LONDON ORGANISTS.—Lady Professional wishes PRACTICE on excellent ORGAN. Insight into Choir-Training and Harmony Lessons. July and August. Would take occasional service. Not object to board or take room, or, perhaps, exchange houses. References. Apply, W. E. T., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

WANTED, by a Gentleman holding Honours for Piano and Organ, a POSITION as MUSIC MASTER in a School. Lloyd P. Jenkins, 3, Vyvyan Terrace, Clifton Park, Clifton, Bristol.

TUNER.—WANTED, a YOUNG MAN, about 25, for in and out-door work. Must be thoroughly proficient. Address, stating previous experience, salary required, and references, to Messrs. Rogers and Priestley, Music Warehouse, Colmore Row, Birmingham.

SECOND PIANO TUNER WANTED. One preferred who understands Organs. Work principally indoors. Must play a little. State wages required to live in, including board and lodging. Also Apprentice wanted. Apply, Stanton, Owen St., Tipton.

WANTED, thoroughly good fine TUNER and REGULATOR for first class connection. Send photo and fullest particulars to Duck, Son and Pinker, Bath.

PIANOFORTE TUNER.—A permanent SITUATION for a steady, careful Young Man, aged about 22 to 24. Must have good credentials; salary commencing 25s. per week, with a rise in three months. C. P., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners St., W.

TO TRAVELLERS.—Required, REPRESENTATIVE for STRONG SHEET MUSIC CATALOGUE. Also Instruments. Salary and commission. Must have other houses. Address, Traveller, Chas. Pool's Advertising Offices, Bouverie St., E.C.

MUSIC TRADE.—WANTED, a smart, intelligent ASSISTANT. One who could undertake the entire charge of the Counter Department. Holder Bros., Ltd., Whitefriargate, Hull.

SHOP ASSISTANT, of good address, possessing a good knowledge of English and Foreign Catalogues, WANTED, in a Provincial House. Apply, with references and photo, to C. S. M., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

EXPERIENCED ASSISTANT REQUIRED, for Pianoforte and Music Warehouse. Must be good salesman, energetic, and willing. Apply, Salesman, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

ORGAN BUILDERS.—Good INSIDE HANDS WANTED; those who can also tune preferred. Apply, stating references and wages, to Nicholson and Co., Palace Yard, Worcester.

FIRST-CLASS TUNER seeks APPOINTMENT. American Organs, Harmoniums, ordinary Repairs. Practical experience. P. L., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

TUNER and REGULATOR, out of apprenticeship (Factory) last year, desires SITUATION. H. M., 200, Old Street, E.C.

TUNER.—A Young Man, aged 22, is open to an ENGAGEMENT. Highest references as to character and ability. Address, A. B., 54, Havelock Road, Hastings.

FIRST-CLASS TUNER desires RE-ENGAGEMENT. Understands Organs and Harmoniums. Wilson, 249, Queen's Road, N.E.

WANTED, by a thorough practical Pianoforte, American Organ, and Harmonium TUNER, REPAIRER, and REGULATOR, SITUATION in the country, for a permanency. Highest references Aged 33; married. Address, Tuner, 28, Albemarle Road, Taunton, Somerset.

TRAVELLER seeks RE-ENGAGEMENT. Has represented one firm for eleven years. Address, A. H. Bishop, 20, Johnson Street, Cheetham, Manchester.

YOUNG MAN wishes to get SITUATION in a MUSIC SHOP or WAREHOUSE. Plays Violin and Piano. Knowledge of Violin Music, Strings, and Fittings. Willing to make himself generally useful. Good references. Address, W., 9, Essex Street, Reading.

ADVERTISER requires SITUATION in Music Publisher's as SALESMAN or similar position. Ten years' experience, good references; aged 25. T., 3, Buckingham Rd., Leyton, E.

PERMANENT SITUATION WANTED, by Young Man, as FRENCH POLISHER in Pianoforte Warerooms. Total abstainer (aged 28). Priestly, 60, Clarence Road, Kentish Town.

MANAGER or ASSISTANT in MUSIC WAREHOUSE.—Gentleman seeks APPOINTMENT. Good pianist, accountant, correspondent, and music reviser. A. C., 32, Store St., W.C.

ORGAN PRACTICE (near City), 1s. per hour. Three manuals, C.O. pedals. Willis (from Minories), 45, Leman St., E.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—Three manuals; independent pedals. Terms, One Shilling per hour. Specification post-free. Blennerhasset's Studio, 1A, Vernon Street, King's Cross, W.C.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—Three manuals and pedals. One Shilling per hour. The South London Organ Studio, 343, Coldharbour Lane, close to Brixton Station.

NEW ORGAN STUDIO, with Three-manual PIPE ORGAN, blown by water. Terms for Practice, 1s. per hour. At Smyth's Music Depôt, 54, London Road, Forest Hill, S.E.

ORGANS, Church, Chapel, and College, with every modern improvement. Established 1845. W. E. Richardson and Sons, to Her Majesty, Central Organ Works, Hulme, Manchester. Specification and Estimates.

STUDIO ORGAN, with three Manuals and Pedals, for SALE, nearly new. Price £55, or five guineas per quarter for three years. W. White, Grantham.

ORGAN.—Two manuals, 19 stops, CC to G, 56 notes and pedals, in Emmanuel Church, Bolton, to be SOLD immediately. W. E. Richardson, Central Organ Works, Hulme, Manchester.

A SMALL TWO-MANUAL ORGAN for SALE, very cheap; suitable for small Church or Chapel. Three stops on great and three ditto on swell, with separate Bourdon pedals. To be seen at A. Hunter and Son's, 65A, High Street, Clapham, S.W.

FOR SALE.—A magnificent double-touch CONCERT ORGAN, by G. L. BAUER and Co. 20 stops, 2 knee swells, with Harpe Æolienne and Forte Pneumatic, in handsome ebonised and gold case. Maker's list price, when new, 125 guineas. The instrument is in perfect order, and can be had at the low cash price of £55. Apply to Wm. Slade, 22, Grand Parade, St. Leonards-on-Sea.

SECOND-HAND ORGANS.—

No. 1.—One-manual and pedals, 9 stops, by ROBSON.

No. 2.—Two-manual and pedals, full compass, 13 stops. To make room for larger organ.

No. 3.—Three-Manual Organ, by W. HILL and SON.

No. 4.—Three-Manual Practice Organ, by NORMAN BROS. and BEARD, built in 1888.

No. 5.—Large Two-Manual Organ, with pneumatic action.

Full particulars of any of these Instruments can be had free, on application to NORMAN BROS. & BEARD, Organ Works, Norwich.

SEVERAL New and Second-hand ORGANS in Stock up to £500. Also small Organs returned from Hire. 6 stops, 144 speaking pipes. £30 to clear. Suitable for small Churches, Chancels, &c. W. Beales & Co., Steam Works, Limes Road, East Croydon.

FOR SALE.—Two-Manual and Pedal REED ORGAN, in Beddington Corner Church, Surrey. 23 stops, 2 16-ft. on pedals, couplers, C.O. pedal-board, by RUMMENS. Nearly new. Price £45. W. Froude, Bedford Cottage, Carshalton.

ORGAN for SALE (Second-hand). 5 stops. In handsome carved walnut case. R. Cope, 21, Jardin Street, Camberwell, S.E.

ORGAN.—A fine-toned modern TWO-MANUAL ORGAN, containing 13 stops and all the latest improvements and desirable appliances. Price £200. Printed particulars on application. Warranted for five years. Fincham's Organ Factory, 150, Euston Road, London.

ALFRED MONK, Organ Builder; Works, 550, Holloway Road, London.—Organs built to any specification and constructed on the most improved principles of high-class workmanship and materials at the most reasonable prices. Improved construction to suit foreign climates. Extensive stock of thoroughly well-seasoned materials. A variety of new and second-hand Organs (which have been taken in exchange) for Sale or Hire, or payable in three years. Tuners sent to all parts of the kingdom. Alterations and repairs. Price list and estimates sent free. A. Monk's Patent improved Tubular Pneumatic Actions.

A FINE-TONED CABINET PIANO, fitted by an Organ Builder with organ pedals, CC to E, 29 notes. Price £15; worth double. Klitz, 26, Hanway Street, W.

BROADWOOD GRAND PIANO for SALE. Splendid tone. Good condition. Inspection. £36. X., Mr. Adcock's, 43, Earl's Court Road, W.

FOR SALE.—GRAND PIANOFORTE, by COLLARD; equal to new. Miss Carwithen, Ashprington, Totnes, Devon.

ORGAN PEDALS TO PIANO.—For Sale, cheap, a Second-Hand Set of Radiating and Concave PEDALS, with a roller-board action, by BRINDLEY and FOSTER. In good condition. Apply to L., 60, Burlington Road, Bayswater, W.

HYDRAULIC ENGINES for Organ Blowing. Blennerhasset's Patent "Perfect" Prize Medal Engines are the best. 1B, Vernon Street, King's Cross Road, London, W.C.

CC ORGAN for SALE and HIRE, on easy terms of payment. Price very low. 3 manuals, 30 stops, 2 on pedals, 3 reeds. Apply, G. T., 23, Brunswick Street, Poplar.

BROADWOOD Short Drawing-room iron GRAND PIANO, in elegant walnut case. 7 octaves; full trichord. Tone, touch, and condition as new. A bargain, 60 guineas; cost 165 guineas. View at Mr. Fieldwick's, Organist, St. John's, Cromer House, Putney (near Railway Station).

"TOWER" ORGAN WORKS.—Specifications, Rebuilding, Repairs, Voicing and Tuning by experienced Artists. Pipes and Fittings. Second-hand Organs and Materials. T. R. Willis (from Minories), 45, Leman Street, London, E.

ORGAN PEDALS to PIANOS.—New method of Attachment by TUBULAR PNEUMATIC. This action surpasses all mechanical actions for prompt and Organ-like Touch. It is less expensive, easier to attach, and does not injure the most delicate Pianoforte. Prospectus, with full description and price lists, on application to Norman Bros. and Beard, Organ Works, Norwich.

TUNERS, REPAIRERS, &c., requiring Tuning Hammers, Kits (guaranteed), or TOOLS of any description. Reeds, Fittings, Materials. Please send for my complete Price List. Karl Wagenhaus, 2, City Road, Hulme, Manchester.

VIOLIN STRINGS. Finest imported. Twenty years' reputation. Sixpence each; sample packet of three, 1s. 1d., post-free. Alphonse Cary, 87, Oxford Street, London, W.

T. R. WILLIS (from Minories, est. 1827), Maker and Importer of Brass and Wood Instruments, Harmonium Reeds, Strings, Wire, Violins, Concertinas, &c. 45, Leman Street, E.

IMPORTANT TO MUSICSELLERS.—Having the largest and most varied stock in Europe, orders received in the morning are executed the same day. Terms and Catalogues on application.

AUTHORS' WORKS CORRECTED, REVISED, and PRINTED without delay, on exceptionally low terms. Estimates given on receipt of MSS.
London: B. WILLIAMS, 19, Paternoster Row, E.C.

ARE YOU THINKING of PUBLISHING? If so, send MS. to us for estimate—Revising, Engraving, &c., in best style at half the usual rates. Lyric Music Publishing Company, 25, Kenninghall Road, Clapton, N.E.

TO ORGANISTS, CHOIRMASTERS, and others. Messrs. DENHAM and CO., by their Method, print Anthems, Services, and every description of Music, from twelve copies and upwards, at a trifling cost. Specimens and scale of charges free. Denham and Co., 28, Fenchurch Street, London. Est. 1872.

MUSIC COPIED and DRAWN from the Full Score, with proper cues for the Engraver; also Songs or other Pieces transposed, by J. Peck, 36, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS. Dr. Horton Allison, 68, Nelson Street, Manchester.

MUSIC ENGRAVING.—Messrs. AKERMAN and ATTWOOD, Music Engravers and Printers, 7, Upper John Street, Golden Square, London, W. Estimates and terms Post-free.

Auction Rooms specially for the Sale of Musical Property.

MESSRS. PUTTICK and SIMPSON, Auctioneers, 7, Leicester Square, London, W.C., hold SPECIAL SALES of MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS on or about the 20th of every month. Sales of Musical Libraries, Music Plates, and Copyrights. Trade Stocks, Manufacturers' Plant, &c., are held as occasion may require. Valuations for Probate or Legacy Duty, or for Public or Private Sale. Terms on application.

PIANOFORTE and MUSIC BUSINESS for SALE. Large Tuning and Hiring connection. Handsome, well furnished premises. W. S., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

PIANOFORTE TUNING CONNECTION, in or near London. A purchaser may be found by addressing W. P., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

FOR SALE, an old-established MUSIC and PIANO BUSINESS, with a good Tuning connection amongst the nobility and county families. References to any London house. Midlands, Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

ORGANISTS and PROFESSORS of MUSIC.—Gentleman, married (43), would PURCHASE a PRACTICE, with Organist's Appointment. Would take Public School. Large experience. Highest testimonials. North preferred. Replies confidential. Music, Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

MUSIC BUSINESS for DISPOSAL, five miles from City. Established twenty-five years (present proprietor retiring). Valuable connection; selling, hiring, and tuning. Room for great development by energetic man. Large modern healthy house and shop in main thoroughfare, close to railway station. Good opening for professional engagements and teaching. With or without stock. Moderate premium. Apply to Kelly and Co., Musical Instrument Auctioneers and Valuers, 16, Mortimer Street, London, W.

MUSIC BUSINESS for SALE, in Midland Town. High-class, well-established, good connection. Price, about £900, most of which can remain at ordinary interest. Present Owner retiring. H. P. H., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

PARTNER WANTED, for well-established high-class PIANO and ORGAN BUSINESS in prosperous Midland Town. Present Partner obliged to go abroad. Strictest investigation. Address, C. B. A., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

D'ALMAINE'S
PIANOS AND ORGANS

CLEARANCE SALE.

EXTENSION OF PREMISES, 89, FINSBURY PAVEMENT.

Dealers specially invited.

D'ALMAINE and Co. (Established 108 years), 89 and 91, Finsbury Pavement, E.C.

KELLY and CO., PIANOFORTE, AMERICAN ORGAN, and HARMONIUM MAKERS (to Her Majesty), 14 and 16, Mortimer Street, London, W.

Kelly and Co.'s Instruments are the only ones of English manufacture that gained any award at the DUBLIN and PARIS EXHIBITIONS; also PRIZE MEDAL, INVENTIONS EXHIBITION, 1885; GOLD MEDAL and DIPLOMA of HONOUR, YORK EXHIBITION, 1889.

A LIBERAL DISCOUNT for SCHOOLS, CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS, and the PROFESSION.

500 SECOND-HAND PIANOFORTES by the leading Makers, at all times, very cheap. NEW PIANOS (warranted) in elegant Walnut or Rosewood cases, from 19 Guineas.

The Trade, Merchants, and Shippers supplied.

Sole Importers of the celebrated HERMANN PIANOS, CHEAPEST and BEST IN THE TRADE, as recommended by Signor Tito Mattei, the late Sir Julius Benedict, the Abbé Liszt, and others.

A SUCCESSFUL INVENTION.

RUMMENS'
Organ Pedal Attachment for Pianofortes

No Organ Student should be without them.

Equal to Organ practice. Adopted by the College of Organists.

Awarded Medal of Honour at the Inventions Exhibition.

NUMEROUS TESTIMONIALS.

Write for particulars to H. J. RUMMENS, 47, Church Rd., Brixton, S.W.

JOH. KUHSE'S
DRESDEN PIANOFORTES

(UPRIGHTS AND HORIZONTAL GRANDS),

54, GREAT MARLBOROUGH STREET, LONDON, W.

Fitted with all modern improvements.

Full Iron Frame Overstrung, Trichord throughout, Check Action, &c.

Brilliant and perfect in Tone and Touch.

Solid construction and beautifully finished.

A great variety of different designs always on view at above address.

INSPECTION RESPECTFULLY INVITED.

Illustrated Price List Post-free on application.

Moderate prices. Liberal discount.

Silver Medal, Antwerp, 1885.

Silver Medal, Amsterdam, 1883.

SOLE AGENTS:

BREITKOPF AND HAERTEL,

54, GREAT MARLBOROUGH STREET,

LONDON, W.

TRINITY COLLEGE LONDON.

FOR MUSICAL EDUCATION AND EXAMINATION.—INST. 1872.

President: The Right Hon. LORD ST. LEVAN.
Warden: Professor E. H. TURPIN, Mus.D.
Director of Examinations: Professor JAS. HIGGS, Mus.B.

HIGHER EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC.

The LAST DAY of ENTRY is JUNE 17 for the Fortieth Half-Yearly Higher Examinations, which will take place during the week commencing July 17.

LOCAL EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC.

SEVENTEENTH ANNUAL SERIES.

Local Examinations in INSTRUMENTAL and VOCAL MUSIC will take place, in June and July, at the following centres: Aberystwith, Ayr, Banbury, Barrow, Bath, Bedford, Birmingham, Blackburn, Blackpool, Bodmin, Bradford, Brentwood, Brighton, Bristol, Bury St. Edmunds, Cambridge, Carnarvon, Chatham, Cheltenham, Chesterfield, Chichester, Colchester, Crieff, Croydon, Edinburgh, Exeter, Falkirk, Folkestone, Glasgow, Gloucester, Goole, Great Yarmouth, Guildford, Halifax, Harrogate, Hereford, Hull, Ipswich, Keighley, Keswick, King's Lynn, Lancaster, Leamington, Leeds, Leicester, Liverpool, Llandudno, London, Lowestoft, Macclesfield, Manchester, Margate, Newcastle, Newport, Northampton, Norwich, Nottingham, Oldham, Perth, Preston, Ramsgate, Reading, Shrewsbury, Sleaford, Southampton, Southend-on-Sea, Southport, Stockport, Stockton, Stroud, Surbiton, Swindon, Taunton, Torquay, Tunbridge Wells, Walsall, Walthamstow, Ware, Wellington (Salop), West Hartlepool, Weymouth, Whitby, Wisbech, Wolverhampton, Worcester, Worthing.

Any or all of the following printed papers may be had on application to the undersigned: (a) Regulations and list of music to be performed for the Local Examinations in Instrumental and Vocal Music; (b) List of Local Centres; (c) Regulations for the (Theoretical) Local Examinations in Musical Knowledge; (d) Regulations for the Higher Examinations for Diplomas and Certificates; (e) List of Music to be performed for the Higher Certificates in Vocal and Instrumental Subjects; (f) Prospectus of the Classes and Lectures Department; (g) General Prospectus containing List of Honorary Officers, &c.

By Order of the Academical Board,
SHELLEY FISHER, Secretary.

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, W.

PERFORMED BY THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

Ballet Music and Rustic March

FROM THE OPERA "COLOMBA"

COMPOSED BY

A. C. MACKENZIE

(Op. 28).

	s.	d.
Full score	10	6
String parts	4	0
Wind parts	9	3

Pianoforte Arrangement for Four Hands, by E. SILAS, price 4s.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PERFORMED BY THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

SYMPHONY IN F MINOR

THE IRISH

COMPOSED BY

C. VILLIERS STANFORD.

	s.	d.
Full score	30	0
String parts	11	0
Winds parts	22	6

Pianoforte Arrangement (Four Hands), 7s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

MASS IN G MAJOR

FOR SOLI, CHORUS, ORCHESTRA, AND ORGAN

COMPOSED BY

C. VILLIERS STANFORD

(Op. 46).

Pianoforte Arrangement by the Composer.
Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

NEW MODELS;
IRON FRAMES;
Recent IMPROVEMENTS;
TONE—Pure, Equal, Carrying;
TOUCH—Facile; Responsive;
DURABILITY—Unrivalled.

John Broadwood & Sons

(ESTABLISHED 1732)

PIANOFORTE MAKERS

BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT TO

HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

THEIR ROYAL HIGHNESSES THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH

AND THE REST OF THE ROYAL FAMILY.

Gold Medals, London, Paris, Society of Arts, &c. (last—that of the Tasmanian Exhibition, 1892).

Names of a few of the GREAT MUSICIANS and EXECUTANTS who have used and preferred the "BROADWOOD" Pianos:—

BEETHOVEN	HAYDN	MDME. SCHUMANN
WEBER	CHOPIN	WAGNER
MENDELSSOHN	JANOTHA	VON BÜLOW
DVOŘÁK	LISZT	DE PACHMANN
CRAMER	HELLER	HALLÉ
BENNETT	HENSELT	SULLIVAN

33, GREAT PULTENEY STREET (near Regent Street), LONDON, W.

GERMAN OPERA, COVENT GARDEN, & MUNICH FESTIVAL PERFORMANCES.

THE MASTER-SINGERS OF NUREMBERG

BY

RICHARD WAGNER

A Musical Explanation with Eighty-four Musical Examples, by ALBERT HEINTZ

Translated into English by CONSTANCE BACHE.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TRISTAN UND ISOLDE

BY

RICHARD WAGNER

Explained according to the Musical Development of its Motives by ALBERT HEINTZ

With Sixty-six Musical Examples.

Translated into English by CONSTANCE BACHE.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PARSIFAL

A FESTIVAL DRAMA

BY

RICHARD WAGNER

Its Origin in the old Legends, and its Musical Motives explained in the order of their Development, by ALBERT HEINTZ

With Sixty-seven copious Musical Examples.

Translated into English by CONSTANCE BACHE.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE MUSICAL TIMES
AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR.
JUNE 1, 1893.

MUSIC AT THE CHICAGO EXHIBITION.

THE World's Fair, on the shore of Lake Michigan, is as yet young and not full grown; but, whatever it may become—whether it realise the intentions of its promoters or disappoint their hopes; whether it turn out to be a financial success or a monetary failure, one thing is assured—namely, that the Exhibition will stand in history as the first which paid proper attention to music. Throughout the long series from the Hyde Park show in 1851 to that of New Orleans in 1885, music has been to each merely an adjunct, a kind of ceremonial item; but at Chicago it is raised to the rank of an "exhibit," systematically and amply displayed, not merely to entertain but to instruct. We congratulate the promoters upon the course they have taken and the precedent they have established, and we shall be prepared to do the same by Theodore Thomas, Musical Director; W. L. Tomlins, Choral Director; and G. H. Wilson, Secretary, when we hear, at the close of the enterprise, that they are alive and well. The task to which these gentlemen have addressed themselves is a tremendous one—vast in its scope, infinite in its details, and not to be estimated without concern for those upon whom it presses. Our wish is that they may have a safe deliverance.

The Directors take care to supply European journals with full information as to prospective doings, and before us now lie a number of sheets of type-written programmes issued by them. From these we propose to extract particulars which will give English readers a fair idea of what visitors to the Show have enjoyed, and may expect to enjoy, in the way of music. Let us premise that there are three concert-rooms in the Exhibition—Music Hall, for orchestral performances; Festival Hall, for choral concerts; and Recital Hall, for chamber music. The first accommodates 2,000 people, the second 4,500 auditors and 2,000 performers, the third can seat an audience of 600. All places are numbered, and there is a uniform charge of one dollar for admission.

Passing over the "Inaugural" Concert, about which enough has been said, we find that, during the month of May, three series of performances were entered upon—the Orchestral on the 3rd ult., the Chamber Music on the 22nd ult., and the Choral on the 24th ult. Let us look at what has been done in each department.

The Orchestral Concerts were of two kinds—first, those having miscellaneous selections; second, those devoted to the works of particular composers. At the head of the former class stood a programme thus made up: "Eroica" Symphony (first Allegro and slow movement), Beethoven; Schumann's Pianoforte Concerto (Mr. Paderewski); Symphonic Variations, Dvorák; Overture, "Romeo and Juliet," Tschaikowsky; pianoforte solos. The foregoing may be taken as a sample "scheme" of its kind. Following it came Concerts respectively devoted to Schubert, Brahms, and Beethoven. At all the foregoing, we understand, Theodore Thomas's "Exposition Festival Orchestra" (150 strong) appeared. On the 15th ult. the Boston Symphony Orchestra (Conductor, Frank Kneisel) took up the running, and gave two performances, the selection in each case being miscellaneous. These artists were relieved, on the 19th ult., by the New York Symphony Orchestra (Conductor, Walter Damrosch), who also performed twice, with "assorted" programmes. Only three other Concerts of this class were given during the rest of the month. Festival Hall was "inaugurated" on the 22nd ult., when Theodore Thomas took his orchestra through a Wagnerian programme; American music ruled on the following day; and, on the 26th ult., there was a Raff selection.

The Choral Concerts, beginning, as already stated, on the 24th ult., included the following works: "Elijah" (Chicago Apollo Club), "Creation" (Chicago Columbian Chorus), and some Wagner selections, with Amalia Materna as soloist.

Four performances took place in Recital Hall, the artists in each case being the Kneisel Quartet of Boston. Works by some of the great masters of chamber music, together with others by native composers—Mr. Chadwick and Mr. Foote—were performed. In all we count nineteen Concerts—by no means a bad beginning under the conditions of an incomplete show, and resultant scanty attendances of the public. Before dismissing the May proceedings, let us make a remark of a character saving to ourselves. We have assumed that all the arrangements for the entire month were duly carried out. There may, of course, have been changes.

Turning to arrangements for the present month, we find a long array of choral concerts. On the 9th inst. the orchestra will perform a Schumann selection, and, next in order, the Max Bendix String Quartet will twice appear. Then the choral displays begin with the following works: "Messiah" and Bach's "Passion" (Chicago Apollo Club); the St. Paul and Minneapolis Choral Associations have a miscellaneous programme, and after them comes the "first section of representative choral societies of the Western States," numbering 1,500 voices and 200 instruments. These hold the field for three days, during which time they will perform Handel's "Utrecht" Jubilate, the first part of "St. Paul," Bach's "A stronghold sure," selections from "Lohengrin," "Judas Maccabæus," and Berlioz's "Requiem." The Cincinnnatti Festival Association comes next with the "German Requiem" of Brahms, and four days are given to representatives of "Women Amateur Musical Clubs." A Concert by the Arion Society of Brooklyn, and repetitions of "The Messiah" and Bach's "Passion" end the June music.

Proceedings in July will be as varied and important as those just detailed. Two Concerts by the New York Liederkranz head the list, after which the second section of Western Choral Societies will, in three consecutive days, go through the programme executed in June by the first section. It should be said here that each section will have the advantage of Edward Lloyd's co-operation. Provision has been made for the remainder of July in the shape of Symphony Concerts (with Beethoven's No. 9), a Concert by the Junger Männerchor of Philadelphia, and a Festival performance by the American Union of Swedish Societies and United Scandinavian Societies.

Concerning the arrangements for August no information is at present to hand, and it may be that the musical department will "stand easy," or, at any rate, show less activity during that month of fierce heats. The indications for September we will quote in full:—

"Mr. Camille Saint-Saëns, of Paris, and Dr. A. C. Mackenzie, of London, will be the guests of the Exposition during this month. Concerts under the direction of Dr. Mackenzie will be given during a period of two weeks from Monday, September 11. The programmes will include a first performance of his new Oratorio "Bethlehem." Soloists already engaged for this event are Madame Nordica (soprano) and Mr. Ben Davies (tenor). Concerts under the direction of Mr. Saint-Saëns will continue during three weeks from Monday, September 25. The programmes will include choral and orchestral works. Mr. Saint-Saëns will also take part in Chamber Music Concerts, and will also give Organ Recitals."

As addenda to the foregoing the Directors announce the engagement of a Russian Choir, to appear during the present month, and of the band of the Paris Garde Républicaine, which will play during August. Lastly, we have the following postscript:—

"NOTE.—The above list represents that portion of the special musical demonstrations for which dates are absolutely fixed. Regular musical features of the entire Exposition period include semi-weekly Orchestral Concerts in Music Hall, daily popular Orchestral Concerts in Festival Hall, and Organ Recitals. The daily popular Orchestral Concerts, free to the public, will begin Tuesday, May 2."

The foregoing details may be dry reading to many, but not to those who, looking through them, see the immense activity, the wide scope, and the all-embracing eclecticism of the Directors' labours. May success be proportionate to deserts.

DR. MACKENZIE ON "FALSTAFF."

THE first of a series of three Lectures, which the learned Principal of the Royal Academy of Music has undertaken to deliver at the Royal Institution on "'Falstaff,' a Lyric Comedy by Boïto and Verdi"—the prominence given to the librettist is significant—was announced to take place on the 27th ult., too late for actual notice in our present issue. By the courtesy of Dr. Mackenzie, however, we are enabled to present our readers with copious extracts from his Lecture. It is unnecessary to vindicate the appropriateness of its subject: "Falstaff," beyond all question, has proved the great musical sensation of the year in the domain of opera, and, according to the deliberately expressed opinion of a multitude of accomplished critics, is an even more beautiful fruit of the wonderful Indian summer of Verdi's genius than its predecessor "Otello." The production of "Falstaff" on the English boards is only a matter of time. It is still within the bounds of possibility that the Scala troupe may pay us a visit in the course of the summer, and these lectures are calculated at once to stimulate the anticipations and heighten the appreciation of those who have not yet seen it on the boards. Verdi's music does not call for the same amount of preparation and education as Wagner's; but in the case of "Falstaff," the rapidity and complexity of the opera render such preliminary assistance, as will be afforded by Dr. Mackenzie, of the highest value. If the choice of the subject be appropriate, not less so is the choice of the lecturer. By his residence in Italy, as well as by his intimate sympathy with, and exhaustive knowledge of dramatic music, Dr. Mackenzie is peculiarly well-fitted for such a task. His clear and incisive delivery never leaves his hearers in doubt as to his meaning, while, thanks to his sense of humour—an indispensable essential in dealing with such a work as "Falstaff"—he never fails to enliven his discourse, should occasion arise, with fanciful or playful touches. Before proceeding to give extracts from the introductory passages of the Lecture, we may notice that the musical illustrations with which it is freely enriched were to be provided by a number of distinguished artists, including Miss Medora Henson, Mr. William Nicholl, Mr. Herbert Thorndike, Mr. Watkin Mills, and Mr. David Bispham, under the direction of Signor Randegger.

After dwelling on Verdi's extraordinary elasticity, and the difficulty of attempting any satisfactory classification of his works, Dr. Mackenzie continues:

Verdi's last four works have been somewhat of a puzzle, as well as a surprise, especially to those who avowedly feel little or no sympathy with the operas which gained him the undoubted popularity which he enjoys; not only because of the remarkable development of his own early method, but also on account of the qualities which distinguished them one from another. I say development, because I am unable to share the opinion that his latest manner presents any sudden or radical change whatever, or that there is even the slightest relationship between Verdi and his great German colleague, Wagner.

At the time when "Aïda" and "The Requiem" saw the light Wagner's music-dramas and operas were considered (as they to a waning extent still are), by a proportion of conoscenti, to constitute the only standard of measurement; and the most prominent composers had to suffer not only the "measuring" process, but the seemingly inevitable comparisons which were as freely, as I am bound to say unjustly, made. Both the necessity and the value of such comparisons are decidedly questionable. As a matter of fact, Verdi has lived long enough to prove clearly that while he, like most intelligent musicians, has been a keen student and observer of the gradually altering tendencies and methods of the end of this century, he could remain absolutely true to himself—preserve his own musical entity without allowing even a trace of the individuality of another to attach itself to him. The perfectly unique stream (if we regard the quantity alone) of original melody which has never failed him for over fifty years is flowing still. His harmonies are richer, his accompaniments (if the term is admissible at all now-a-days) are much more polyphonic and exhibit greater variety; moreover, he has become a master in the art of modern instrumentation. But he is his own pupil, and remains Verdi to the last; only like Byron's Astarte, "softened all and tempered into beauty."

Without touching on "Aïda" or "Otello," but solely in connection with the present opera, let me say that it is very evident that both the composer and his librettist have studied the works of their great sometime-contemporary, Wagner, and to some purpose. And I will frankly say why I think so, for a definite conclusion on that head has forced itself upon me after a tolerably exhaustive study of "Falstaff." Of course, no one ever expected to find the Italian Maëstro adopting the system of Leitmotive, for instance; indeed "Otello," and more particularly "Falstaff," read like very direct protests against its use. Here (in "Falstaff") we find certain recurring points, such as Anne Page and Fenton's little love-phrase, Falstaff's ludicrously expansive and effusive greeting "Caro Signor Fontana" (Master Brook), Mrs. Quickly's hypocritically polite "Reverenza," for instance. But these phrases re-appear on each needful occasion almost unchanged, almost as they came originally from the egg.

Little suggestive points, such as the hour of meeting, "Dalle due alle tre," or say the very opening group of semiquavers, are developed and extended as orchestral figures while the particular phase of the dramatic situation lasts—not to re-appear again in any shape or form. But no one can fail to be struck with the evident application of a wisely-adopted system of compression and concentration, which is one of the pointed lessons of the opera. If ever there was a manifesto issued by a composer of music against "linked sweetness too long drawn out," or against the stoppage, even for a second, of the action on the stage, we have it in these pages. The stage manager or conductor who attempts to apply the scissors to either libretto or music must make up his mind to face a difficulty, for not a single brick may be displaced or removed without real damage to the entire structure. Let the "wish" be ever so much "father to the thought," the desire to prove Verdi's indebtedness will be found, on dispassionate inspection, to take a purely negative form.

"Falstaff" has been, by this time, subjected to the critical microscope, and, as a natural result, widely differing opinions have been expressed. Some see reflections of Mozart, some even of Beethoven, and others, of course, Wagner.

If melodic charm and an occasional dip into positive simplicity means Mozart, then, certainly, we meet him here. If the logical developments of, perhaps, insignificant looking groups of notes—without which, by the way, any serious composition is impossible—means Beethoven, why, yes, we have him here. If the absence of detached pieces, or cohesion between words, action, and music, mean Wagner, we have him, certainly, here. In my own opinion, this opera is nothing more than a compendium of the accumulated experience of one of the most gifted musical dramatists of this or any other time.

Those who are unable to listen to "Ernani," "Rigoletto," or "Il Ballo," without deploring that the "superabundance" of melody detracts from their pre-conceived notions of dramatic truth, should remember that Verdi is the possessor of a gift which seems to be bestowed by Mother Nature upon musical composers more rarely now than ever. The productions of Bellini and Donizetti, threadbare though they may be, will ever remain grapes which many foxes will continue to eye with envy.

Melody is the one musical factor which ages least. Melody has always been the mode of expression natural to the Southern, and I venture to think that, compared even with Rossini, Bellini, and Donizetti, Verdi's purely melodic period (if I may so distinguish it from his present attitude), shows more variety, vigour, and breadth than do any of the works of his then contemporaries, Donizetti, perhaps, alone excepted. Donizetti's "Lucrezia Borgia" is, perhaps, the most Italian of Italian operas, and its dramatic expression is a purely melodic one. The same composer proved the adaptability, the elasticity of his race when he wrote "La Figlia del' Reggimento," which opera, written for the French stage, is almost as different in style from the first-mentioned one as "Il Ballo" is from "Falstaff." It seems as absurd as it is aggressive to attempt to lay down canons, to endeavour to impose laws as to what really shall constitute dramatic expression in music; and such attempts argue that the would-be law-givers are devoid of the essential quality which makes music what it is—viz., sympathy.

The futility of these continued and obtrusive efforts to compel the Wagnerian system upon the nations has never been proved so effectively as just at the present moment. It might be reasonably expected that thirty years of steady pamphleteering and sermonising on every available opportunity would have produced some fruit, some practical effect upon an opera-loving public. Yet what is the result of it all even—I might say chiefly—in the land from whence the reformatory principles originally proceeded? Not long since the theatres of all its cities were filled by some of the weakest comic operas ever written, such as the "Rattentänger von Hameln" or the "Trompeter von Säkkingen," and at the present hour these theatres are now filled to overflowing whenever the operas of Mascagni or Leoncavallo are given—precisely in the same manner in which Verdi filled them thirty-five years ago with his "Trovatore." In fact, we have returned precisely to the same point.

After some judicious remarks on the advisability of accepting the music of nations "as it comes," Dr. Mackenzie proceeds to observe of the opera under consideration:

So far from casting a single inch of his skin, the chord progressions and the melodies remain purely Verdian. He has not even made the slightest attempt to shake off, or modify, a certain abruptness, a characteristic roughness of modulation and chord-succession which is observable more or less in every "period" into which his life-work is divisible. Indeed, in none of the operas belonging to his latest period has he given us so much of the familiar and popular Verdi.

An unexpected turn to the right or left, a certain lately-acquired trick of playing in, out, and between major and minor, may perhaps alter the complexion, but not the face of our old familiar friends. And further, a positive fondness for what musicians term "false relation" (which made its début in "Aïda" and was forcibly accentuated in "The Requiem") is in full vigour here.

In making these preliminary remarks I have not been dealing with Verdi's past position. It is his present place in the world of art, with special reference to the newer dramatic methods which have appeared during his lifetime, which has occupied me. It is difficult to attach much importance to the somewhat obsequious, if tardy, acknowledgments of his genius which are now being freely bestowed upon him. For it must be remembered that when "Rigoletto" and "Il Ballo," &c., were making their triumphant round of Europe, the adherents of the strictly classical, as well as the "Neu Deutsche Schule," uttered the name Verdi with something like a tolerably good imitation of a sneer. And for a long time the critical attitude remained unchanged. Came "Aïda" and "The Requiem," and an elevation of the eyebrows indicated attention and surprise. With "Otello" and "Falstaff" came recognition.

As regards Verdi's indebtedness to others, Dr. Mackenzie goes on to say:

It is very unsafe to assume that Verdi owes his crowning successes to anyone but himself. The last shaft levelled, takes the shape of a mild suggestion that his "complete" reformation is due to the influence of his present collaborateur, Signor Boïto. The collaboration of the two men is most certainly a happy one, for Boïto is one of Italy's most cultured sons. One who presents in himself the rare spectacle of a highly polished poet, gifted with a pronounced dramatic instinct. He is, moreover, a musician who has written a successful opera. Judging from the fact, however, that his own opera, written on the very newest lines, had to be compressed and re-written into reasonable limits before it found acceptance; and further that in his subsequent libretti (particularly in that of "Falstaff") he has departed from most of the very features which distinguish the new method, one is naturally driven to the conclusion that his more experienced partner may have influenced him. Be this as it may; whether we view this libretto in the light of a clever opera book, or whether we study it for the sake of its elegant and poetic language (for it is "written in very choice Italian" indeed), we can only give it the greatest praise. Clearly Boïto understands what is required on the modern operatic stage, and this is perhaps the best-arranged book ever presented to a composer. Apart altogether from its literary merits (which are not few), we have an abnormally rapid action on the stage; directness carried to the utmost limit; a remarkable knowledge of stagecraft and effect, and, in spite of a few trifling defects, the whole is thoroughly Shakespearian.

FROM MY STUDY.

THE late John Addington Symonds's "Walt Whitman: a Study," comes to us sad of aspect. Its accomplished author, having written the last word, laid down his pen to die—to pass from a life of struggle against physical weakness into the "sure-enwinding arms of cool-enfolding death." Our regrets follow the writer; our admiration gathers around his book, and we rejoice in a clear and lucid exposition of the great theses which the voice of the "good grey poet" propounded in the name of the New World, and of much else that was and is new. There are yet people who deny that Walt Whitman was a poet at all. I well remember how, when Villiers Stanford's "Elegiac Ode" was produced, some musical critics received the glorious, glowing words with ridicule. This was, perhaps, to be expected, for a judge of music is not necessarily competent to give an authoritative opinion in matters concerning the sister art. But even poets differ about Whitman, and there is one who differs with himself. Some time ago, the voice of Swinburne was heard, saying—

> O strong-winged soul, with prophetic
> Lips hot with the blood-beats of song
> With tremor of heart-strings magnetic,
> With thoughts as thunders in throng,
> With consonant ardours of chords
> That pierce men's souls as with swords
> And hale them hearing along.

At another time came, from the same source, a comparison of Whitman's muse with a drunken apple-woman reeling in a gutter. What shall I say in the controversy? This, first: That if poetry be metre and rhyme, then, certainly, Whitman was no poet, seeing that, apart from one or two exceptional cases, he never used either. "But," asks Mr. Symonds, "is there no poetry outside the region of rhyme and verse? Was Sir Philip Sidney, the first accomplished critic in our language, so far wrong in his contention that 'apparelled verse is but an ornament, and no cause to poetry; since there have been many most excellent poets that have never versified, and now swarm many versifiers who need never answer to the name of poets'? Are we all wrong in thinking that when we read Job, the Psalms, the Song of Solomon in our English version, we are reading the sublimest, the sweetest, the strongest, the most sensuous poetry that was ever written?" Whitman would have none of metre and rhyme. He, the new voice of a young nation, prophesying of times yet to come, put aside old rules, as David put off from his youthful, agile form the hindering armour of Saul. He must be judged by results, and let those who would know what, under these conditions, he could achieve, turn to the infinitely touching "When Lilacs last in the Dooryard bloomed," and feel, as they must, the contact of a true poet.

Whitman's poems contain numerous passing references to music; but there is one, "Proud Music of the Storm," which masses in one tremendous chorus all the voices of the universe. It is night; the poet sleeps and dreams, and, in his dream, sees the great singers of Nature and Art enter his chamber. He apostrophises them—

You undertone of rivers, roar of pouring cataracts,
You sounds from distant guns, with galloping cavalry,
Echoes of camps, with all the different bugle calls,
Trooping tumultuous, filling the midnight late, bending me powerless,
Entering my lonesome slumber-chamber, why have you seized me?

The poet calls upon his soul to heed—

Listen, lose not, it is toward thee they tend,
Parting the midnight, entering my slumber-chamber,
For thee they sing and dance, O soul.

Now the mighty concert begins; the performers pass in long procession, and, first, the duet of the bridegroom and the bride—

. . . . a marriage march
. . . . .
To flutes' clear notes and sounding harps' cantabile.

Now "loud approaching drums," at the head of a conquering army; now "airs antique and mediæval"—

I hear the minnesingers singing their lays of love,
I hear the minstrels, glee-men, troubadours of the middle ages.

and now the organ, which inspires a glowing and splendid passage—

Now the great organ sounds,
Tremulous, while underneath (as the hid footholds of the earth,
On which, arising, rest, and, leaping forth, depend
All shapes of beauty, grace and strength, all hues we know,
Green blades of grass and warbling birds, children that gambol and play, the clouds of heaven above)
The strong base stands, and its pulsations intermits not,
Bathing, supporting, merging all the rest, maternity of all the rest,
And with it every instrument in multitudes;
The players playing, all the world's musicians,
The solemn hymns and masses rousing adoration,
All passionate heart-chants, sorrowful appeals,
The measureless sweet vocalists of ages,
And for their solvent setting earth's own diapason
Of winds and woods and mighty ocean waves, new composite orchestra, binder of years and climes, ten-fold renewer,
As of the far-back days the poets tell, the Paradiso;
The straying thence, the separation long, but now the wandering done,
The journey done, the journeyman come home,
And man and art with Nature fused again.

After this sonorous crescendo, inspired by a thought almost too great for utterance, the poet reminds his soul that, from a little child, all sounds had been to him as music—

My mother's voice in lullaby or hymn,
(The voice, O tender voices, memory's loving voices, Lost miracle of all, O dearest mother's, sister's, voices)
The rain, the growing corn, the breeze among the long-leaved corn,
The measured sea-surf beating on the sand,
The twittering bird, the hawk's sharp scream,
The wild-fowl's notes at night as flying low, migrating north or south,
The psalm in the country church, or 'mid the clustering trees, the open air camp meeting,
The fiddler in the tavern, the glee, the long-strung sailor-song,
The lowing cattle, bleating sheep, the crowing cock at dawn.

Now come sounding round the poet "all songs of current lands." Across the stage stalks Norma brandishing her dagger.

I see where Ernani walking the bridal garden,
Amid the scent of night roses, radiant, holding his bride by the hand,
Hears the infernal call, the death-pledge of the horn.

The "Puritani," Fernando's "wailing song"; Amina—"copious as stars and glad as morning light the torrents of her joy"; odes, symphonies, operas; the music of Roman festivals, and of Corybantian dances; the strong stern hymns of Luther, the sensuous strains of the Rossinian "Stabat Mater"—all flow in upon the poet's soul, till he exclaims exultant—

Give me to hold all sounds . . . .
Fill me with all the voices of the universe,
Endow me with their throbbings, Nature's also,
The tempests, waters, winds, operas and chants, marches and dances,
Utter, pour in, for I would take them all.

The dream passes, and the dreamer wakes to recall his vision—

I said to my silent curious soul out of the bed of the slumber-chamber,
Come, for I have found the clue that I sought so long;
Let us go forth refreshed amid the day,
Cheerfully tallying life, walking the world, the real,
Nourished henceforth by our celestial dream.

Another American poet (Willis) learned the same lesson, and found the secret of human satisfaction in the "broad book of nature"—the manifest, multiform God. With him 'twas happiness—

To love the voice of waters and the sheen
Of silver fountains leaping to the sea;
To thrill with the rich melody of birds
Living their life of music; to be glad
In the gay sunshine, reverent in the storm;
To see a beauty in the stirring leaf,
And find calm thoughts beneath the whispering tree.

Walt Whitman's poem ends with a subtle thought giving us a glimpse of those things beyond which only the poet's eye can see in fulness. Again speaking to his soul, he questions if the music of the dream was really what it seemed and not something else of infinitely greater moment—

Haply what thou hast heard, O soul, was not the sound of winds,
. . . . . .
But, to a new rhythmus fitted for thee,
Poems bridging the way from Life to Death, vaguely wafted in night-air, uncaught, unwritten,
Which let us go forth in the bold day and write.

This the grey poet did, proclaiming the beauty of the world and of life, putting to open shame the feeble carping of puny pessimists, and looking forward even to old age and death as to a crown and consummation—

Youth, large, lusty, loving—youth full of grace, force, fascination,
Do you know that Old Age may come after you with equal grace, force, fascination?
Day full blown and splendid—day of the immense sun, action, ambition, laughter,
The Night follows close with millions of suns, and sleep, and restoring darkness.

Between this day and this night is a space which the poet saw bridged by the sound-poems of music.

Not long ago I gave some interesting extracts from the famous "Northumberland Household Book," showing the provision made for music in a great nobleman's establishment when the eighth Harry was King. Since then I have whiled away a few leisure hours in examining the privy purse expenses of Elizabeth, wife of Edward IV.* The accounts, as published, cover a period of somewhat less than a year—that is to say, from March 24, 1502, to the Queen's death in February, 1503. They are very carefully kept, and were regularly examined and signed by her Grace. As a matter of course, they are full of curious information; but here I must confine myself to such entries as possess an interest for musicians.

One of the first items shows how the Court composers of the day were paid. It runs thus—

"Item the same day to Robert Fayrfax for setting an Anthem of oure lady and Saint Elizabeth—20s."

The remuneration was by no means contemptible. From various entries I find that the highest salary paid to the Queen's ladies was £33 6s. 8d. a year; that 13s. 4d. weekly was allowed for the support of the Queen's two nephews and niece; that a priest doing vicarious pilgrimage for her Grace had 10d. a day; and that a London surgeon's fee for attending the Queen at Richmond amounted to no more than 13s. 4d. For his 20s. Master Robert Fayrfax could have bought eight barrels of beer, or hired a horse from Easthampstead to London fifteen times, or gone down to Greenwich by boat from London no fewer than sixty times.

Another entry is much to the same effect:

"Item to Cornishe for setting of a caralle upon Christmas-day in reward—13s. 4d."

Particulars are extant with regard to both Fairfax and Cornish. Fuller states that the first-named was "a Doctor of Music of Cambridge and incorporated of Oxford in 1511." He is mentioned by Bishop Tanner, Hawkins, and Wood ("Fasti Oxonienses"). According to Tanner, Fairfax died at St. Albans—a statement considered by Hawkins as very probable, "for he was either organist or chanter of the Abbey Church there, and lies buried therein." Burney (Vol. 3, p. 539 et seq.) mentions the preservation of a very curious and valuable MS., "which once appertained to Dr. Robert Fayrfax, an eminent English composer during the reigns of Henry VII. and Henry VIII.; it was afterwards in the possession of General Fayrfax, and upon his demise made part of the Thoresby Collection. It consists of a number of the most ancient English songs to which the music has been preserved." Of these Burney reprints three, one of them is the composition of Fairfax himself. For other particulars see Grove's Dictionary. The earliest reference to this old English master appears to be that quoted from the "Privy Purse Expenses."

Cornish, a less eminent man than his contemporary, was attached to Henry the Seventh's Chapel. To biographers he is best known by a poem (much of it reprinted by Hawkins) having as its full title the following: "In the Flete made by me, William Cornishe, otherwise called Nyshewete, chapelman with the most famous and noble King Henry the VII., his reign the XIX. year the moneth of July. A Treatise between Trouth and Informacion." In his valuable "Musical Bibliography," Mr. Andrew Deakin says: "Were the substance of the whole rendered into modern prose, it would furnish an instructive essay on early sixteenth century music."

Under date August 19, the following entry appears:

"Item the same day to Hugh Denys for money by him delivered to a straungier that gave the Quene a pair of clavycordes in crowns for his reward—£4." The "straungier" was presumably a foreigner also, and in that character particularly well treated, or it may be that the instrument he brought had some special qualities. For an instrument of the same class, purchased by Henry VII., only 10s. was paid. But the royal Welshman was not a liberal man.

On July 5, 10s. was paid to "Giles lewter for stringes for the Queen of Scottes lewte." Master Giles is by no means free from suspicion of overcharge in this transaction. A complete lute, bought for the Princess Mary in 1504, cost but 13s. 4d., and in the "Hengrave Household Expenses" (1573) there is an entry: "For stringing, tuning, and fretting my mistresses lute—2s. 6d." Fie, Master Giles, so to treat your sovereign lady. The particular Queen of Scots referred to was, of course, the Princess Margaret, wife of James IV., through whom the Stuarts derived their title to the English throne.

In January, 1503, the Queen's New Year's gifts were presented and duly set down in the expense account. Some of these are interesting. Her Majesty gave "to the Kinges mynstrelles with the shalmewes (shawms)—40s." "To the Quenes mynstrells—26s. 8d." In the wages list are entries of 66s. 8d. paid to Marques Loryden, mynstrelle," and the same sum to each of his fellow artists, Janyn Marcazin and Richard Denouse. These gentlemen were bravely decked out at the Court "disguisings" and the like, and it seems that on special occasions their number was increased by borrowing from the musical strength of other great households. The subjoined entry goes to show this:

"Item the same day to Robert Machene taillour for making of four coots of white and green sarcenet for four of the Kinges mynstrelles against the dysguysing in the yere last passed at two shillings the cote—8s. Item for making of four cootes of white and green sarcenet for four of the Kinges trumpettes at two shillings the cote—8s. And for making of three cotes of sarcenet for three mynstrelles oon of my Lord Princes, an othere of my Lord of Yorkes and the third of the Duke of Bukkingham at two shillings the cote—6s. In all—22s."

The "Privy Purse Expenses" of Henry VIII., as edited by Harris Nicolas and published by Pickering, begins in 1529, ending in 1532. This record does not contain so many musical entries as might be expected considering the monarch's love for and proficiency in the art. There are, however, some worth pointing out. On November 9, 1531, 8s. 4d. was "paied to Antony the Sagbut for his costs going to Southampton with the new sagbutts." Mention is elsewhere made of the sackbut. Thus, under date November 5, 1530:

"Item, paied to Phillip of the pryvat chambre for 2 sagbutts, 2 tenor shalmes and 2 trebull shalmesse—£10 10s." John Bolenger was one of the sackbut players, and he, on April 24, 1531, received 15s. "in rewarde" of service not specified; perhaps for an exceptionally good performance. In November, same year, there was a break up of the King's band as regards the sackbut part thereof. Two consecutive entries run thus:—

"Item, the 8th day, paied to Barba John and Peter Maria shackbutts at ther departing into ther contreys—£20."

"Item, the same daye paied to an other of the sagbutts at his lyke departing—£6 13s. 4d."

Two days later, as shown above, "Antony the Sagbut" went to Southampton "with the new sagbutts." It is not, I imagine, that Antony took new instruments with him to the seaport town, but that he journeyed there to meet the performers engaged on the Continent to fill the places of those who left on November 8. At this time the French Queen appears to have had some distinguished sackbutists in her service. There is an entry concerning them:—

* "Privy Purse Expenses of Elizabeth of York: Wardrobe Accounts of Edward the Fourth. With a Memoir of Elizabeth of York, and Notes. By Nicolas Harris Nicolas, Esq. London: William Pickering. 1830."

"Item, paied to the frenche quene sacbutts in Rewarde by the king's commaundement—28s."

At the date of this entry Henry was in England; hence it may be that the French artists came over specially to perform before the King's Grace.

In March, 1530, three other members of the Royal band packed up and went home—these also being foreigners. John Droyt, John Blanche, and Ipolite received £10 "in rewarde going into ther country." There is evidence to show that the King had some sort of drum and fife band in his service—

"Item (May 13, 1532) paied to hans pyper and Bartholomew his ffellawe Dromslades for their lyverayes—45s."

A like amount was expended in September of the same year, when it was the turn of "Christopher Drombeslade and his fellawe" to have new uniforms. According to Dr. Burney a dromslade was a species of drum. It is mentioned in one of the Cotton MSS.: "And there they were set forth be five in a ray with standards born afore them and drounslats playing afore them alle the way." In October, 1531, the sum of 7s. 6d. was given by the King's command "to a blynde woman being a harper." Somewhat earlier, one Caundisshe received 40s. for "bringing Instruments to the King's grace," and "Phillip of the pryvay chambre" received 26s. 8d. for a "shalme." In April, 1532, Henry commanded payment of 40s. "to one that gave the Kings grace an Instrument."

From an entry dated October, 1532, it appears that among the attendants of the French King, when he and Henry met at Calais, was Cardinal de Larena (the Cardinal of Lorraine), who took with him not only the capacity of winning money at tennis and dice from the English Sovereign, but also a company of singers who, there is reason to fear, did not perform church music only. Henry treated these artists handsomely, giving them "20 corons," or, in English money, £4 13s. 4d. By the way, he gave twice as much to the French King's Jester. Twenty shillings was the price of a lute in those days, and "Arthur the luter" received that sum for an instrument given by Henry to the Duke of Richmond. In July, 1532, the King had quite a large deal with the same maker. Particulars are not given, but Master Arthur received £3 6s. 2d. There is an entry, about the same time, of 20s. paid to "Sir John, the organ maker," who was, no doubt, a priest. A subsequent item shows that 40s. was paid to him "in rewarde." The King had in his employ a fiddler, mentioned as "great guilliam," not on account of special talent, but to distinguish him from "litle guilliam," who served, perhaps, in the same capacity. For great William a "rebecke" was bought in 1531, at the cost of 20s. Several entries refer to viols and virginals or to the performers upon those instruments. The King bought several virginals in one day, and note is thus made of it:—

"Item, paied to William lewis for 2 payer of virginalls in one coffer with 4 stoppes brought to Grenewiche, £3. And for 2 payer of virginalls in one coffer brought to the More other £3. And for a little payer of virginalls brought to the more 20s."

In October, 1532, the King was at Canterbury, on his journey to Calais, and paid 7s. 6d. to the "waytes" there. This is supposed to be the oldest use of the word to describe nocturnal musicians, but the entry does not state that the Canterbury waits performed at night, and it is just as probable that, in their capacity as city minstrels, they regaled the King in the daytime.

I have yet to deal with the "Privy Purse Expenses" of Queen Mary, but, as the entries there are numerous, that task must be reserved.

X.

FURTHER ON MUSIC AND MANNERS.

We regret that Musical News has not recognised the almost paternal spirit of the counsel we tendered to that paper last month. Had it done so, our contemporary would have shown the meekness which is the best promise of amendment, and we, on our part, should have dismissed all fear of seeing Musical News again opening its columns to insulting and calumnious remarks upon the Editor of this or any other journal. But instead of decent submission to a chastening yet benevolent rod, our contemporary tries to defend itself, and, in the process, executes a wriggling movement which is not only ungraceful but futile. We regret the necessity of again putting Musical News on the punishment block.

"Following the custom in America, Mr. Wysham addressed the editor by name; this seems to have given offence to the proprietors of our monthly contemporary." Thus does Musical News put the original grievance. It says nothing about the insults heaped upon our Editor.

"Still, on reflection it (that is, addressing the Editor by name) seemed a breach of journalistic etiquette." Musical News has to reflect before it can distinguish a breach of elementary Press law, and, even then, can only make out a semblance of fact.

"Of late, the new editor of The Musical Times . . . . has shown a tendency toward what is known as 'smart writing.'" This is carrying the war into the enemy's country. We are not concerned to defend ourselves, but, whatever the sins of this journal, no one can say that its orthography is at fault, or that its English is flagrantly offensive to men of taste.

"The Musical Times now affects indignation because (without making any comments of our own) we reprinted a letter in which the writer is angry at its 'offensive editorship' and tells its Editor 'You are simply mean and malicious,'" &c. No; we do not affect indignation, having just cause of offence. The parenthetical words in the foregoing extract are delicious in their childish simplicity. Musical News does not seem to know that when an editor reprints calumny he makes it in effect his own. There was no need for our contemporary to add any comments. The Californian "professor" is sufficient unto himself in the matter of abuse. Musical News had only to act as a conduit pipe—which duty it is quite capable of discharging.

"We are indifferent to the quarrel between an American writer and a writer on the staff of our English contemporary." If that be so, why does Musical News act as "bottle-holder" to the Californian combatant? An odd kind of neutrality, indeed!

"'A quadruped known as Old Abraham,' anglice an ass!" No, no, dear contemporary. Old Abraham is Far Western for the grizzly bear, which quadruped is not an ass by any means.

We come now to the pith and marrow of our contemporary's defence of its wholly indefensible behaviour. Readers of The Musical Times do not need telling that, recognising the utter absurdity and folly of the Californian professor's abuse of ourselves, we quoted the choicest samples of his vituperative insolence and exposed them to merited ridicule. The editor of Musical News, not doing us the honour of perusing these columns attentively, missed the paragraphs in which we dealt with our far-off assailant; he may therefore have thought that in the professor's letter he possessed some new "copy," and was thus tempted, perhaps, to the indiscreet act of which we complain. The point is not of much consequence now; the really important matter being that, having discovered our paragraphs at a late period of the controversy, Musical News tries to shelter itself behind them, on the principle, we suppose, of "any port in a storm." "It is surely unreasoning childishness," we are told, "to complain of a reprint of words which they have themselves already given to the world." Here we have a crowning example of the fatuous simplicity which seems to guide our contemporary's action. Unless Musical News entrusted its defence to the office boy, we now see a man—or should we say a syndicate?—gravely propounding that because a person against whom insult is directed chooses to repeat and ridicule the words used, another may also repeat them without a syllable of censure or contemptuous deprecation—may, in fact, seriously adopt them and give them currency. The argument is so extraordinary that we should be astounded to hear it from the lips of one wholly destitute of mental training. It only shows the desperate shifts to which offenders are sometimes driven when they would "make the worse appear the better reason." We now leave our disingenuous contemporary in the predicament of one who, instead of abandoning a false position, manfully admitting its untenableness, holds on and finds his last state worse than his first.

M. LEGOUVÉ'S REMINISCENCES OF MALIBRAN.

NOT the least interesting chapter in the attractive "Sixty Years of Recollections," recently published by the venerable M. Ernest Legouvé, is that devoted to Malibran. M. Legouvé, who was born in 1807, was eighty years of age when he wrote these Reminiscences, and in view of the facts that Malibran died in 1836, and that M. Legouvé is a man distinguished for his imaginative writings, it is advisable to check his anecdotes where possible by referring to unimpeachable contemporary authorities. Much of what he has to tell us is at second-hand, and here the application of the test indicated above proves his contributions to the Malibran literature to be absolutely valueless. For example, his version of her last appearance, her collapse, and her death is singularly inaccurate and incomplete at every point. To take only one detail, he states that she died thirty-six hours after the breakdown at the Manchester Festival, whereas her illness lasted for more than a week. More interesting and valuable, however, are M. Legouvé's personal recollections of the great prima donna in Paris and Italy, where he met and heard her frequently. Finally, and most important of all, he gives us several extracts from a number of most characteristic letters which she wrote to him in the last few years of her life—letters illustrating in the most striking way the energy, the versatility, and the courage of this extraordinary woman.

His picture of her personal appearance when she first sang in Paris is worth quoting: "In her small, mauve bonnet, which nevertheless hid half of her features, she gave one the impression of an English girl who had not long left boarding-school." M. Legouvé is apparently ignorant that before visiting America she spent more than two years in England, and was educated in a convent school at Hammersmith. According to M. Legouvé, her chief attraction resided in her wonderful eyes. "The like of them had not been seen since the days of Talma; they had 'an atmosphere of their own.' Virgil said, natantia lumina somno. Well, Maria had eyes like Talma's, floating in some indescribable electrical fluid, the glance of which was both luminous and veiled at the same time, like a sunbeam piercing a cloud." Through his guardian, who was on intimate terms with the Garcias, M. Legouvé was soon introduced to the new star, and enjoyed the privilege of her friendship to the close of her short life. She came to Paris, as he notes, at a moment when the revolution in art, literature, the drama and music was at its height. It was the epoch of Hernani, the "Freischütz," and of Beethoven's Symphonies, and she was in her way one of the hierophants of the romantic movement. As an attempt to solve her artistic equation the following passage is well worth quoting:—

"Her genius owed everything to its spontaneity, to inspiration, to its effervescence, though at the same time, and this is one of the most characteristic aspects of that very complex organisation, nature condemned her to incessantly renewed attempts, to strenuous and assiduous labour. The mysterious fairy that had presided at her birth had granted her all the gifts of a great dramatic songstress save one—a complete vocal instrument. Alfred de Musset said—

Ainsi nous consolait sa voix fraîche et sonore, and further on—

Où sont ils, ces accents
Qui voltigeaient le soir sur la lèvre inspirée,
Comme un parfum léger sur l'aubépine en fleur?

Well, with all deference, Malibran's voice did not flutter or skip; Malibran's voice was not at all like a subtle perfume; Malibran's voice was not at all a fresh and ringing voice. Her vocal organ, pathetic and powerful, without a doubt, was hard and rebellious. When Sontag sang, her notes were so limpid and brilliant that one might have compared them to a sudden flood of pure light. Malibran's voice was like that most precious of all metals; it was like gold, but, like gold, it had to be dug from the bowels of the earth; it had to be separated from the ore; it had to be forged and beaten, and made pliable like metal under the hammer."

In evidence of this M. Legouvé tells us how he once heard her, while practising a difficult air, stopping every now and again to angrily apostrophise her voice: "I'll see whether I cannot make you obey me." And he contends, not without justice, that this perpetual struggle "invested her talent with a much more powerful and original character than the poet has described." At the same time, in her acting, some of her finest effects were absolutely unpremeditated. She was not one of those actresses who die night after night on exactly the same spot. "Often, when on the stage, she carried out the strangest inspirations with a boldness which stood her in the stead of skill. For instance: One day, in the second act of 'Otello,' in that grand scene so full of anguish, where Desdemona is awaiting the issue of the duel, she suddenly bethought herself to single out from the group of 'supers' a poor wretch whom she had not warned of her intention, and dragged him to the footlights, where, in a burst of despair and passion which narrowly missed arousing the laughter of the audience, she asked him for news of the encounter. Well, the spontaneity of the thing and her evident sincerity carried everything before them. The poor 'super' felt so utterly terror-stricken as to be perfectly motionless, and his immobility served him admirably under the circumstances. What would have been ridiculous with anyone else became sublime in her case." The word "impossible" did not exist in her vocabulary. If her voice was out of order, or her throat relaxed, instead of yielding to the inevitable, she preferred to triumph over physical weakness by sheer force of will. "The word 'limit' was unbearable to her; she found it impossible to grasp the fact that she could not do what anybody else in her profession did. . . . One day, to our great astonishment, she executed a shake on the top note [sic] of the soprano register. 'You seem astonished,' she said, laughing, 'that brute of a note has given me no end of trouble, I can tell you. I have been trying to get at it for the last month; I tried while dressing, while doing my hair, I tried while taking my walks, and when out riding. At last I got hold of it this morning while tying my shoe-strings.' 'And where did you find it, Madame?' 'There,' she answered, laughing, putting her finger to her forehead with a charming gesture, for one of the characteristic traits of that strange creature was to refer to her boldest attempts with a light, airy, and natural grace."

In illustration of her contempt for, or rather love of danger, M. Legouvé tells us that the first day she ever went out on horseback, he being her companion, she put her horse at a ditch and got over without mishap. And he tells an even more extraordinary story of her plunging into the sea in the Bay of Naples, although she could not swim, in the serene confidence that her friends would not let her drown. Of her readiness in retort he gives the following sample. Lamartine had been complimenting her on her gift of languages—she spoke four with equal facility. "'Yes,' she replied, 'it's very convenient. It enables me to clothe my ideas in my own way. When I am at a loss for a word in one language, I take it from another; I borrow a sleeve from the English, a collar from the German, a bodice from the Spanish'—'Which makes, in all, a charming harlequin's dress'—'A harlequin's dress, if you like, but the harlequin never wears a mask.'" On another occasion when someone was praising a poet whose poverty of ideas was only surpassed by his magnificent style, "Don't talk to me of his talent," said Malibran, "he produces a vapour bath with a drop of water." It is interesting to learn on the authority of M. Legouvé that Malibran shared her father's belief in the genius of her younger sister. "That little girl," she said once to M. Legouvé, "will simply eclipse all of us."

As for her letters to M. Legouvé, they prove in the main the truth of his assertion that both her glory and her art sat lightly on her. In illustration of her characteristic fondness for whimsical expression, we may quote a sentence from a letter written at Naples in 1834: "My voice is stentoresque, my body falstaffique, my appetite cannibalian." She regretted bitterly that she was not in Paris in the revolution of July, 1830. "I, a woman, am regretting every hour of the day that I had not a leg broken in the fray for that cause which belongs to the golden age." But perhaps the most characteristic, though the saddest, letter of all is that which bears date April, 1831: "There are, no doubt, many women who envy me. I fail to see what there is to arouse their envy. I suppose it is that unfortunate happiness of mine. Do you know what my happiness is like? It is like Juliet, and like Juliet stark dead; while I—well, I am Romeo, and weeping like him. My heart is filled to overflowing with tears, the source of which is pure; they shall water the flowers on my grave when I shall have departed this world. The next, perhaps, will give me my reward above. Away with these lugubrious, I might say cadaverous ideas, for just now they are cadaverous. Death stalks at their head; it will soon strike at mine." These gloomy forebodings seem constantly to have obtruded themselves on her imagination. And, on the whole, we cannot help thinking that M. Legouvé is right in his view that, in the interests of poetic justice, her early death was the best thing that could have befallen her. Her voice could never have endured the strain to which she habitually subjected it, and without her voice she would have been the mere ghost of that radiant and incomparable artist whose immortality was secured by her premature death.

We seem likely to be afflicted with a recurrence of the plague of prodigies. Raoul Koczalski, the redoubtable Polish infant virtuoso who, at the age of eight, has already reached his Op. 46, has been giving recitals, and young Miss Simonson's début is fixed for the 6th inst. Whatever may be the responsibility of the public, at least it cannot be said that the Metropolitan press have extended an unqualified welcome to these exhibitions. While recognising the great ability of young Koczalski, for example, they have, in the main, done their best to discourage the forcing system of which he is so conspicuous an example. And in taking this line they have been fully backed up by the leading medical paper. In a remarkable article on "The Pathology of the Prodigy," the Lancet, after admitting that the boy's parents and guardians treat him with every indulgence, points out that the real question is, "Can any indulgence or any amount of applause render such an exhibition reasonable or even humane?" This question it answers at considerable length, but in the negative. To begin with, the writer shows that if a brain is forced to a greater size than belongs to its age the condition is pathological, not physiological, and thwarts the designs of nature. Finally, the article concludes with the following weighty words: "It is a canon in animal physics that no single organ of the body can be forced without causing undue vibration and pathological change in other organs essential to life. We have, therefore, the physical health of the child before us as a subject for consideration. The strain to which the brain of a child under exhibit is subjected tells upon the heart, the respiration, the digestion, and the nutrition generally. With the increased vibration through the nervous system all the active organs of the body are driven sensitively into quickened pace, and the additional vibration produced by encouraging applause is a further cause of danger. Thus, on the purest grounds of humanity, to say nothing of utility, it is the falsest of false systems to magnify the prodigy at the expense of the developed man or woman. We believe there is not an instance on record in which true greatness has been attained by the forcing system now brought so strikingly before our eyes, and we should be altogether failing in our duty if we did not implore the sensible members of the community to make themselves conspicuous by their absence at all performances leading to the production of the pathological prodigy. At the best, the gifts that make the prodigy are exceptional in the highest degree. They indicate the existence of a hypersensitive organisation, an organisation that requires special protection from all the natural shocks 'flesh is heir to.'" We wish that this article could be distributed in leaflet form outside the door at every Concert given by a prodigy. The Lancet is, however, mistaken in one particular. There is no need to implore sensible people to stay away. The real difficulty is to bring the inhumanity of these exhibitions home to the foolish women who are their chief patrons.

Wagner's "Walküre" has met, on the whole, with such unanimous appreciation from the Parisian press and public that even the most austere devotees of the Master can afford to look leniently on the amusing squib perpetrated by "Frimousse," of the Gaulois, on the recent production at the Opéra of the masterpiece in question. It is headed "Opening of the Walhalla," and runs as follows :—"The Walhalla, which was opened last night, is an establishment full of special features and attractions, suggested partly by the London Alhambra or the Olympia of the Boulevard des Capucines, without, however, resembling either. Imagine a sort of palace, constructed in accordance with the rules of Scandinavian architecture. A long passage painted with the colours of the rainbow leads down to the body of the house, which is exceedingly comfortable and brilliantly lighted. A select audience had assembled to witness the performance, and we noticed in the stalls MM. Siegmund, Wotan, and Hunding; and in the boxes Mesdames Sieglinde, Brünnhilde, Fricka, Ortlinde, Waltraute, Schwertleite, &c., all members of the world of la haute finance. The Director of the Walhalla has evidently thought that it was not enough merely to offer the Parisian public a sumptuously appointed hall, but that it was advisable to retain them by an attractive programme. Of the numerous 'turns' which especially attracted our notice we must specially mention the Strong Man Van Dyck, who, with bare arms and making splendid play with his superb biceps, carried off without the slightest effort a charming blonde answering to the name of Rose Caron. We subsequently witnessed the comic contests between the dwarfs, or Niblungs, imported from Germany, where they have met with the greatest success. The exhibition of giants, also, was much admired. Then the Walkyrie family, composed of eight handsome young women, singing the airs of their country, met with deserved applause. However, the great feature of the entertainment was the Incombustible Woman, Mdlle. Bréval. This accomplished young lady walks, sings, and goes to sleep in the midst of the flames with a truly astonishing facility. Throughout the performance an excellent orchestra never ceased playing a series of excellent leading motives, which caused the public the liveliest satisfaction, and were hummed by every one on going out. A new pastime, which is destined to become the rage, is that of the Sword. The weapon is planted in the trunk of a large tree, and the object of the game is to pull it out, by no means an easy task. Only very strong persons succeed. This ingenious and healthy exercise forms an excellent substitute for the old Turk's Head, which was becoming rather played out."

The contempt with which most men of letters treat musical subjects is so well known that it is gratifying to note that the pages of two of the leading monthlies have recently contained articles on Verdi's "Falstaff." In the Fortnightly Review for April Professor Stanford leads the way, and in the Nineteenth Century for last month Mr. Fuller-Maitland, at greater length, deals with the new work and with certain recent developments of Italian Opera. A comparison of the two articles shows a curious divergence of opinion in approaching the subject, though both writers are unanimous in their admiration of the merits of "Falstaff," and both do not hesitate to prophesy its enduring success. Mr. Fuller-Maitland sees in the Verdi of "Il Trovatore" and "La Traviata" "the man who had brought things to their lowest," while Professor Stanford finds that even the worst passages in his operas of this period "possess in the very outspokenness of their vulgarity a certain genuine ring, a spontaneity of expression which cannot fail to bring home to the listener that the composer is an honest man doing his best according to his lights." Similarly the critic of The Times adopts the prevalent idea that Boïto's "Mefistofele" "is indisputably the channel by which the Wagnerian reforms were conveyed to Italy," and that "Aïda" was strongly influenced by the Bayreuth master's work; whereas the Cambridge Professor declares that the styles of Verdi and Wagner differ so completely "that it seems impossible to assert that the Italian learnt from the German. It would be fairer to say, as perhaps posterity will say, that the immense development of opera in the latter half of the nineteenth century was rather the result of a natural process than the work of any one man; that 'Tristan,' 'Carmen,' and 'Otello' are only so many landmarks on the road of progress which each country was making in its own way." It is rather curious that both writers, differing so much as they do in their estimate of the origin of the new Italian school, should have overlooked the influence of the late Franco Faccio, whose "Amleto," produced so far back as 1865, is really the earliest work which shows a decided tendency to change from the old to the new methods. How much Faccio owed to his librettist, Arrigo Boïto, is difficult to decide; but it is certain that it was this work which set the composer of "Mefistofele" upon the series of Shakespearian libretti of which his "Falstaff" is the latest example. Writing under the influence of the excitement of the first performance of Verdi's new "lyrical drama" at Milan, both writers, as was to be expected, are enthusiastic over its merits. To one who only knows "Falstaff" from the pianoforte score, one of its most striking and curious features is the subservience of the music to the libretto. The mere number of words set is so great that the effect is almost that of a play with orchestral accompaniment. This apparent subordination of the composer to the librettist is a point which neither Professor Stanford nor Mr. Fuller-Maitland fully deals with, though it is one which touches a vital point in the whole structure of the lyric drama. If the book of "Falstaff" is to be accepted as a model to be imitated in the opera of the future, it must have an even stronger effect in changing accepted operatic forms than has been the case with the music-dramas of Wagner. This is a subject which either Professor Stanford or Mr. Fuller-Maitland might profitably discuss on a future occasion; both of their articles are so interesting that further contributions from them should be welcomed by either Mr. Harris or Mr. Knowles.

An interesting work has recently been published by Doctor Paul Blocq, a distinguished pathological anatomist at the Salpétrière, entitled "Voix parlée et chantée," in which he gives the results of long researches in the domain of those disorders of the musical faculty known as amusia. The conclusion to which he is brought is summed up in the following sentence: "The autonomy of the musical faculty cannot be contested, any more than the reality of the existence of different forms of amusia." Some of the cases mentioned by M. Blocq may be recorded. For example, the sufferer may lose the faculty of singing or humming airs, or may become incapable of playing them on an instrument. In one case, a man suffering from aphasia, and unable to speak, could yet sing the "Marseillaise" with the aid of the only monosyllable which he could articulate. Per contra, instances are recorded of persons who have lost the faculty of understanding the music performed in their presence, although they are able to answer correctly questions put to them. Thus a tenor, in the middle of a performance, suddenly lost all consciousness of what his colleagues were singing, and could not utter a note himself, although he perfectly understood what was said to him and was able to reply coherently. Similarly, a pianist, in the course of a concert, found himself unable to read a note of music or to understand what the orchestra was playing, or to play himself, although he was not affected by verbal aphasia. In a word, these performers were reduced in a moment to the condition of those persons to whom all music is mere "sound and fury signifying nothing." On this point, however, there is some difference of opinion. Anyhow, cases of persons suffering from congenital amusia are very rare. It is more probable that the condition is the result of atrophy or lack of cultivation. This is often the case with men of letters, or persons entirely absorbed in industrial or commercial occupations. As a writer in the Temps remarks, commenting upon M. Blocq's book: "The mathematician who, on leaving a theatre, asked 'What on earth does all that prove?' showed that in him the artistic sense was absolutely obliterated."

THE Directors of the Philharmonic Society, being mortal, have not always found themselves able to achieve the difficult feat of pleasing everybody; but we fancy they have seldom made a nearer approach to that enviable result than by the revival, at their fourth Concert, of Professor Stanford's "Irish" Symphony. There be some, indeed, who have even asked why a work of such power and beauty—one, too, which met with such marked and instant success on its production in 1887, should have had to wait six years for the honour of a place in the Philharmonic Society's répertoire; but these persons betray an unholy desire for esoteric knowledge which is by no means to be encouraged, and, moreover, forget that when justice is done to a native composer with which, we need hardly say, the practice of propounding inconvenient questions is quite incompatible. Gratitude—that of the audience more especially—by no means exhausted itself on the directors, however; Dr. Mackenzie, by reason of a magnificent performance of his confrère's genial work, came in for a very large share. The Scottish composer's admiration for the "Irish" Symphony has never been concealed, and its adequate presentment had evidently been undertaken as a labour of love, which, no doubt, racial affinities helped considerably to lighten. Had Mr. Pepys been present, his diary would have assuredly contained some such entry as "It was pretty to see the greatest composer of Scotland conduct the finest instrumental work ever written by an Irishman, and I wished in my heart it might bind the nations still closer together."

The proper attitude
Is that of gratitude

IT is the privilege of greatness to protect the interests of art, and right nobly did Lord Chief Justice Coleridge perform this onerous duty in proposing the toast of the evening at the recent annual dinner of the Finsbury Choral Association and Metropolitan College of Music. Lord Coleridge claimed for music a unique position amongst the arts, inasmuch as only by extreme ingenuity could it be made detrimental to mankind. "Who had ever had a bad thought suggested by Mozart's music or had been depraved by listening to Beethoven's writings?" Music, too, was peculiar in that it only spoke to its votaries, and that the works of its greatest masters would be unknown were it not for the loving care and efforts of their interpreters. The responsibility devolving on executants was thus happily impressed, and graceful reference made to the good work done by the Choral Association and the Metropolitan School. Referring to the present flourishing condition of these Institutions, Lord Coleridge said they afforded another example of how all great works had arisen from small beginnings and owed their development to conscientious work. They also afforded another proof of the fact that although in such matters success was attained by the devotion of many, the chief cause was always found to be the energy of one person—in this instance, Mr. C. J. Dale. Some suggestive remarks were also made by Mr. Hoddinott, who proposed the somewhat novel toast at a musical dinner of "The legislature of our land," which, however, he justified by commenting on the great influence which the present inclination for local government would have on all such Institutions as their own. The time may be distant when politicians will consider musicians worthy of political consideration, but the period would seem to be fast approaching when musicians will find it advantageous to give some attention to politics.

FACTS, RUMOURS, AND REMARKS

AN interesting libel case was decided at Clerkenwell County Court recently. It appears that Miss Edith McAlpine took part in a Concert at Leamington Spa on February 7, the advertisements describing her as "late prima donna of Mr. D'Oyly Carte's Opera Company." The performance was attended, on behalf of the Leamington Spa Courier, by the wife of the proprietor— Mrs. Glover, better known to London musical society as Miss Ethel Harraden. In the course of her criticism, Mrs. Glover referred to Miss McAlpine and said: "We would recommend this lady not to permit herself to be advertised as late prima donna of Mr. D'Oyly Carte's Opera Company, for reasons which must have been too obvious to her last Tuesday. Such advertisements are often misleading and disappointing." There was the usual conflict of evidence. Plaintiff admitted that she did not sing well, being hoarse and suffering from cold; but Mr. Cellier testified that she had satisfactorily discharged her duties in the Opera Company. Other witnesses gave evidence in favour of her capacity, while rebutting statements were made on behalf of the defendant. In such cases juries rarely favour the press, and Miss McAlpine obtained £50 as damages. Perhaps the jury thought that the words quoted above were adapted to throw discredit upon the asserted position of the plaintiff, and we are bound to say that no experienced critic would have used them.

THE following is taken from the Leeds Mercury, with reference to the Musical Festival of 1895: "Sir Arthur Sullivan has shown himself very willing again to undertake the conductorship, and has likewise consented, if required, to give the Committee the benefit of his advice in the selection of new works, and the whole conception of the musical programme. It will also be a matter of gratification to all who may compose the chorus to know that he has volunteered a desire to attend some of the sectional chorus rehearsals which usually take place at the different towns during the earlier part of the year of the Festival. With regard to the novelties of 1895, Sir Arthur strongly hopes to write a work which shall be produced at the next Festival; but, so far, he has had great difficulty in meeting with a libretto with which he can find himself in sympathy. He has examined a considerable number of poems and other writings in the hope of coming across the needed subject, but, as yet, has not satisfied himself. Mr. Spark also mentioned that Sir Arthur was much pleased to know that Dr. C. Hubert Parry had promised to write a secular cantata for the Festival, and agreed with the suggestion that two new orchestral works should be provided as well as two new choral works."

IN anticipating the musical Festivals of the present year, we read of that to be given in Cheltenham on October 16 and the three following days: "The engagements already made by the Musical Director, Mr. J. A. Matthews, show that the Festival will reach a level of artistic excellence quite equal to that of many Festivals of older establishment and pretensions. They include, for the Oratorios, irrespective of some artists who will be added for the miscellaneous selections, Madame Nordica, Miss Maggie Davies, Miss Medora Henson, Miss Hilda Wilson, Miss Jessie King, Madame Hope Glenn, Mr. Edward Lloyd, Mr. Edwin Houghton, Mr. Henry Piercy, Mr. W. H. Brereton, Mr. Bantock Pierpoint, and Mr. Watkin Mills. The chorus and orchestra will number five hundred performers, and a special festival organ will be erected for the occasion. New choral works will be contributed by Mr. C. Lee Williams, of Gloucester Cathedral, and Dr. F. Iliffe, of Oxford; and orchestral music, by Sir Herbert Oakeley and other composers, will be given for the first time."

AT the annual general meeting of the Nottingham Sacred Harmonic Society it was announced that the reserve fund now amounts to over £600. Congratulations. The scheme of next season's Concerts was also made known, and the statements put forward that the Society would commence with "Cavalleria Rusticana," by Mascagni, which was so popular, and would, it was thought, be looked forward to with very considerable interest in Nottingham; that the opera would be followed by a miscellaneous second part; and that "The Messiah" would be performed at Christmas, with Miss Lucille Hill, Madame Marian McKenzie, Mr. Houghton, and Mr. Brereton, who had not sung in Nottingham for some years. On January 25 what might be called a Beethoven night would be given. The season would finish with Mendelssohn's "St. Paul," March 15, and the artists on that occasion would be Madame Fanny Moody, Mr. Ben Davies, and Mr. Charles Manners.

IN his speech on taking the chair at a meeting of Festival Stewards, the Mayor of Worcester said:—"He thought it was a great pity in Festivals of that kind so much money should have to be spent in the payment of the principal singers. (Hear, hear.) He hoped the time was not far distant when they would emerge from that chaotic confusion of mind wherein it seemed to be necessary to have some stars, whose voices were going, to head the list of singers. (Laughter.)" The last sentence is hardly in the best taste. His Worship, proceeding, came very near reviving, and certainly recalled, an old and, we had hoped, forgotten controversy: "With regard to the proposed platform, it might be presumption on his part, but he hoped that the time was not far distant when a little less secular arrangement might be possible. (Applause.)" "The platform," no doubt, means the orchestra, which we never heard described as a "secular arrangement" before. Worcester once tried a magnified choir in stalls, that being, we presume, a sacred arrangement. Does the Mayor wish to repeat the experiment?

THERE is a stupendous critic on the Grimsby News. In the course of half-a-column or so about a Concert of chamber music, he contrived to mention Hazlitt, Cavanagh (champion fives player), Wordsworth, Coleridge, Brougham, Canning, the Quarterly Review, Edinburgh Review, Borrow and his "Bible in Spain," the King of Saxony, Shelley, the Rhine, Dante's Hell, Joachim, Apollo's lute, Lewis Morris and his "Epic of Hades," the Fatherland, the Frank, the Moslem, the Leipsic Conservatorium, and football. Never was the extraneous so heavily laid under contribution in a criticism. Speaking of a lady violinist, the writer goes off at score: "She has perfected her favourite art as few do, and has a wonderful freedom with her skill few cultivate. Her violin is made to do what she wills, there is neither sparing of instrument nor self. It is coaxed, it is scolded, it is thrashed, and from it issue sounds as different as those made by the still flowing of the sleepy Rhine and the awful brook that ran its way through the seventh circle of Dante's Hell. We know not how to describe such music, but we have faith that soon our town will boast a violin player equal to the celebrated Dr. Joachim of Presburg." Wonderful!

A CORRESPONDENT sends us a copy of the Surrey Gazette in which appears a notice of a Concert recently given at Redhill. The critic on this occasion showed some promising qualities, and bids fair to rank high among those who supply us with curious examples of workmanship in his department. We are told that the programme opened with a "seystet from Dancla," and that the "soft harmony of the rendition" (blessed word, rendition!) "was in keeping with the small dimensions of the hall." The critic is at his best in noticing a violin solo by a lady: "Her manipulation of the almost human instrument captivated one and all of her hearers. Her touch was delicate, and her movements rapid and accurate, though her frequent oblique lowing somewhat militated the beauty of her play." The critic doubtless wrote bowing, not lowing, but he is responsible for the statement that frequent oblique bowing somewhat militated the beauty of her play.

NOT long ago we mentioned the case of Mr. Chuter, Organist and Choirmaster of Andover Parish Church, and also Mayor of that borough. Our attention has since been called to a yet more striking example of success in the winning, by musicians, of municipal honours. Mr. A. G. Leigh, a well-known and eminent professor, resident in Chorley, Lancashire, began serving his town thirteen years ago as commissioner. Since then he has risen through the grades of councillor and alderman to the mayoral chair, which has been twice occupied by him. At a meeting of the Town Council held for the purpose of installing a successor, it was said, in discussing a vote of thanks to the retiring Mayor: "Mr. Leigh has been a Mayor such as has not been excelled, or even equalled, since the town of Chorley was incorporated."

THE Conductor of a recent Concert in Rugby gave late-comers a severe lesson. "Punctually at eight o'clock," says a local paper, "he took up his position as Conductor, and signalled to the door-keepers to close the doors. The orchestra being ready, away they went into the celebrated Concerto of Beethoven, and the doors were not opened again till the first movement of about twenty minutes' duration had been completed. Upwards of forty persons then streamed in, and probably they were not a little annoyed at being kept waiting outside; indeed, we learn that some ticket-holders went away feeling that they had been insulted." This seems to us an extreme measure and we do not wonder if the unpunctual were angry. A short overture would have taught the same lesson at less expense of temper.

NEWS of the retirement of Sir William Cusins from the post of "Master of the Musick to her Majesty the Queen" came suddenly, and the secret of his purpose was very well kept. Sooner or later all work has to be laid down, and our hope is that Sir William—by no means an old man—will enjoy many years of repose. It is reported, we know not how truly, that Sir Arthur Sullivan succeeds to the direction of the State Concerts, and Sir Walter Parratt to the conductorship of the Queen's private band.

ANY stick seems good enough to beat the London County Council with. We see that the Globe assails our metropolitan parliament for stopping a brass band from playing hymn-tunes in Victoria Park on Sundays, and suggests, by way of explanation, that the L.C.C. can bear the sound of no trumpets but their own. The Globe does not state that the band in question had been complained of as drowning the voices of persons conducting open-air services in the Park. There are times when, and places where, even music is out of season.

FAITHFUL service of fifty years had due recognition (which sometimes is the best reward) when the jubilee of Dr. Hopkins as Temple Organist was solemnly kept in the ancient church, and when, some days later, various "testimonials" were given to him by the Benchers, the choirboys, and others. We desire to join in the congratulations, and trust that Dr. Hopkins will long live to enjoy happy memories of an interesting occasion.

A CORRESPONDENT writes from Canonbury: "A card reached me the other day setting forth that at a certain establishment instruction in pianoforte playing could be obtained at the following moderate charges: 'Terms, 9d. weekly (two lessons), or 9s. per quarter.' Surely the bottom has now been reached!! Perhaps this may interest some of your professional readers." They would certainly like to know how it is done.

THE first number of the New Quarterly Musical Review has seen the light since our last issue. The aim which the directors have set before them is defined in their introductory remarks as the attempt "to judge sympathetically, looking more eagerly for beauty than for faults." We are always glad to welcome new musical periodicals which, if judiciously carried out, can but advance the interests of our art.

ACCORDING to a report of his speech at the Finsbury Choral Society's dinner, Lord Coleridge said that "as an old man he craved for tune" in musical compositions. This may be because old men's memories go back to an era of melody, cherishing which they distrust modern developments?

> But cautious age suspects the flattering form,
> And only credits what experience tells.

JOHANNES BRAHMS celebrated his sixtieth birthday on the 7th ult., or rather fled to Sicily to avoid its celebration, as he has an inherent dislike to public notice of any kind. A congratulatory telegram, which was dispatched to Palermo, returned the next day undelivered, with the official remark "Brahms inconno!"

RUSSIAN policy being intensely national, it is now proposed to establish a chair of national popular music in each University. Precisely the right thing to do. Countries farther West would do well to imitate the empire which they persist in denouncing as semi-barbarous.

ANOTHER case of English music on the Continent! Mackenzie's "La Belle Dame sans Merci" will be performed in the course of the present month at Cologne, under the direction of Franz Wüllner.

THE St. James's Gazette tripped the other day in an article on the Duke of Edinburgh as a musician. It credited Dr. Parry with the "Dream of Jubal."

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.

SIR AUGUSTUS HARRIS's "grand" season began on the 15th ult., under prosperous conditions—that is to say, with a large company of good artists and a proportionately big subscription list. Whatever may be this manager's best claim to remembrance when his stage knows him no more, it will stand on record, to his credit, that he succeeded in making the lyric stage fashionable, and revived therewith the glories of a past time.

The first work performed (15th ult.) was "Lohengrin," which attracted a large, though not crowded, audience, and also a box full of royalty, including the Princess May and the Duke of York, who, it is needless to mention, were formidable rivals of the stage for the attention of the house. There is not much to say about the performance, the characters being, for the most part, in familiar hands—Melba, Dufriche, Castelmary, &c. The title-rôle, however, was entrusted to Mr. Vignas, the tenor who made so great an effect at the first performance of "Cavalleria" in this country. He scarcely came up to expectation. In the larger house his voice made less effect than before, and he appeared somewhat ill at ease amid his new surroundings. Nevertheless, this singer will do when he has had time to settle down. He is an artist, which means not only something, but a great deal. Mr. Mancinelli, who conducted, was not, we should say, quite content with his orchestra, and the large infusion into it of imported Germans, more or less cheap, for whom tried and capable Englishmen had to make way. Indifferent attack and other forms of raggedness should not be found at Covent Garden.

"Orfeo" and the "Cavalleria" were in the bill of the second night. The Ravogli sisters played in Gluck's opera in the now familiar manner. They were welcomed back. Vignas, of course, had the rôle of Turiddu in Mascagni's work, doing better with it than with Lohengrin, though not creating the enthusiasm so easily raised in Mr. Lalo's smaller house. The chief attraction of the performance was due to Madame Calvé, who acted and sang as Santuzza with the greatest possible effect. Of all the representatives of the Sicilian heroine known to us, Madame Calvé is far and away the best. She has a stage genius in alliance with the skill and feeling of a vocalist, and in her hands Santuzza became what the Americans would call a "live woman," with all the passion of the South throbbing at her heart. The audience acclaimed Madame Calvé. They could do no less and be just. On this occasion the Conductor's duties were shared by Mr. Bevignani and Mr. Mancinelli.

The French lady was to have appeared in "Carmen" on the 18th ult., but illness prevented her, and the part was handed over to Miss Arnoldson, who could make little of it, but sang prettily enough. Miss Arnoldson is a prima donna for light opera, to which, in her own interest, she should limit her efforts. We had a new Don Jose in Mr. Alvarez, a tenor of Continental, especially of Parisian fame. He was somewhat of a disappointment—that is to say, he failed in making the expected sensation. We have since discovered that the part is by no means his best. He should have made his début in "Roméo et Juliette."

With regard to "I Pagliacci," produced on the 19th ult. with very great success, we shall here simply record the fact, basing an examination of the work—which is one of much significance as respects the present condition of opera—till our next number appears. There is no doubt that in "Pagliacci" and "Cavalleria" we see the opera of the immediate and, perhaps, of a long extended future. For this reason it is worth while to study the less known of the two. Much curiosity was felt about the work, the strength of which, aided by a good performance, with Melba, De Lucia, Richard Green, Ancona, and Bonnard as principals, commanded a brilliant result. Rarely has an opera audience been more enthusiastic. The composer was present and was cheered to the echo.

"Roméo et Juliette" had a hearing on the 25th ult., when Alvarez made his deferred mark, and justified to a considerable extent his Continental fame. He sang expressively and acted with entire propriety. Madame Melba, the Juliette, was better vocally than dramatically.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY.

THE performance of "Elijah," with which the season closed on the 10th ult., was preceded by Professor Villiers Stanford's setting of Mr. A. C. Swinburne's American Ode "East to West." It cannot be said that the words of this poem directly invite musical treatment. Such lines as: "But America, daughter and sister of England, is praised of them, far as they flow: Atlantic responds to Pacific the praise of her days that have been and shall be," are scarcely euphonious, whatever may be their poetic significance. It says much therefore for the talent and skill of the composer that he has produced a little work at once bright, broad, and dignified, the music increasing in interest until the impressive climax, where the voices are divided into eight parts at the words: "And the sons of the lords of the world-wide seas be one till the world's life die." The work is choral throughout, but there is no sense of monotony, the composer frequently changing the key and the rhythm; and though the music cannot be said to err on the side of complexity and difficulty, the voice parts are treated independently, the interest being fairly distributed between the several sections. Sung with admirable precision and spirit by Sir Joseph Barnby's choir, the Ode was very favourably received and Professor Stanford had to bow his acknowledgments from the platform. In the rendering of "Elijah," Mr. Andrew Black sustained the principal part with marked success, singing throughout with fine expression and emphasis, and enunciating his words with commendable clearness. Miss Esther Palliser was praiseworthy if not impressive in the soprano solos, and Madame Belle Cole and Mr. Edward Lloyd sustained their respective reputations. The subsidiary parts all received justice from Miss Annie Swinfen, Mr. and Madame Emlyn Jones, and Mr. John Woodley.

PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

SINCE our last notice of this Society's doings two Concerts have been given—4th and 18th ult. The first derived its special interest from a revival of Stanford's "Irish" Symphony, which is not so often heard as, with advantage to both composer and public, it might be. Nevertheless, we cannot here treat the Symphony as though it were an unfamiliar and faintly remembered thing. Whatever may be the case with others, musical readers, at any rate, know the work, and regard it as among the finest examples of a class in which popular music is treated in classic forms. A re-hearing of the "Irish" confirmed this view, greatly impressing the audience with cleverness of treatment, and, hardly less, with beauty of theme. By the way, should not the national melodies introduced be identified by the names of the original songs, and not by those of Tom Moore's effusions. It is true that the tunes are best known in connection with Moore's lyrics, but as this Symphony is, in some sort, a national work, the ancient titles would be, we think, in better keeping. Dr. Mackenzie conducted a very good performance and, at its close, the composer was twice "called" to receive the plaudits of his admirers. The Concerto on this occasion was one rarely heard at present, though familiar years ago. A dozen seasons have passed since "Hiller in F sharp minor" last challenged attention, and, as the work belongs to an order now out of fashion, Miss Kleeberg should be credited with considerable boldness in reviving it. We wish other pianists had equal courage, instead of being, as they mostly are, a timid and unenterprising race, who go round and round in their own footsteps like the water-drawing donkey at Carisbrooke Castle. The solo part of the Concerto is brilliant, and grateful to the performer. Taking advantage of the fact, Miss Kleeberg achieved an executive success of marked distinction. The orchestral work, moreover, was admirably done; yet we question whether the undeniable merit of the Concerto obtained much recognition, so well have the public learned from their teachers that music not of the day is worthy only to be received with half contemptuous tolerance at best. For some reason or other, Mr. Willy Hess was not greatly successful in his performance of Beethoven's Violin Concerto, and the distinction of the second part in the programme lay wholly with the Prelude and Ballet Music from Dr. Mackenzie's "Colomba"—an opera in which so much good music suffers suspended animation. The thoughtful, well-written, and effective pieces made their mark, and probably suggested a question whether something cannot be done with "Colomba" so as to give it another and better chance of active life.

At the second of the Concerts under review, the chief object of interest was Mr. Erskine Allon's setting, for solo, chorus, and orchestra, of the Scottish traditional Ballad "Annie of Lochroyan." The composer, who is a young man, should esteem himself fortunate in being thus taken up by the most famous of our musical societies—the more because, while his Ballad is a meritorious achievement and full of promise, it hardly reaches the high level on which the Philharmonic directors usually find works for performance. It is well sometimes to stoop a little in order to give aspiring merit a helping hand, only we must always be sure that the climber has merit. In Mr. Allon's case there is no doubt that the qualification exists. The Scottish musical idiom is largely used in this case, and the composer shows judgment beyond his years in making a certain simplicity combined with warm expression the leading characteristic. Music and words thus happily accord, and as "Annie of Lochroyan" is a moving tale, Mr. Allon had no difficulty in scoring a success, which, we trust, will stimulate him to further and better efforts. Mr. Otto Hegner, the ex-prodigy, played an uninteresting Concerto by his master, Huber, who gives to virtuosity what was meant for art. Mr. Julius Klengel was heard to advantage in a Violoncello Concerto by Piatti, and Rheinberger's "Demetrius" Overture, with Beethoven's Second Symphony, made up the balance of a programme which presented by no means the greatest conceivable attraction.

THE BACH CHOIR.

IT has become a praiseworthy custom of this Association to form one of the programmes of its Concerts each season of unaccompanied part-music, chiefly of an antiquarian nature. The performance this year took place on the 16th ult., and was full of interest. The principal piece was a Mass, "O admirabile commercium," by Palestrina, which has been recently edited by Mr. W. S. Rockstro. Originally in the Mixo-Lydian mode (G without F sharp), the editor has lowered the pitch a tone, has allotted certain portions to solo voices, and has added marks of expression. No artistic wrong is done by emendations of this nature, for those who do not like them need not observe them. The Mass is based on four subjects, the most important being derived from the canto fermo of the Antiphon. It is a remarkably fine example of the great reformer of ecclesiastical music, and by some will be placed above the celebrated "Missa Papæ Marcelli." In order to study the traditional method of rendering Palestrina's music, it is necessary to visit Rome; but in a general sense, the Bach Choir acquitted itself creditably, though, in spite of the transposition, there was a constant tendency to sink in pitch. The programme likewise contained Marenzio's Magnificat for double chorus, Eccard's six-part Motet "When to the Temple Mary went," and a quaint dialogue in seven parts, "Phyllis, I fain would die now," by Thomas Morley. To these were added two of Professor Villiers Stanford's delightful Elizabethan Pastorals, recently reviewed in THE MUSICAL TIMES, the examples selected being "Corydon, arise," and "Diaphenia." They were capitally sung, and the audience would gladly have heard both a second time. Mr. Leonard Borwick gave a beautifully finished performance of Bach's Suite Anglaise in G minor, and also played Brahms's Ballade in D (Op. 10, No. 2) and Variations on a Theme by Paganini (Op. 35, No. 2) in his best manner. Professor Stanford conducted the Concert in his usual able manner.

MIDDLESEX CHORAL UNION.

THE appearance of a new large choral society in central London should be warmly welcomed by all lovers of Oratorio, and when the above-named Society is able to give its performances in the new Victoria Hall they should prove successful in a substantial as well as an artistic sense. Although we regret that so far the working has resulted in loss there is no cause for discouragement, as experience has shown that Oratorio performances cannot be made to pay in St. James's Hall. The more thanks are due to the Middlesex Choral Union for affording amateurs a hearing of Dr. Hubert Parry's masterpiece, "Job," and they responded in large numbers on April 26, just one day too late for notice in our last issue. Not a word need be added to what has been already said concerning one of the most remarkable Oratorios of modern times, and we are glad to be able to speak in favourable terms concerning the performance. The composer conducted, and the occasional hesitation in the attack was probably due to a feeling of uncertainty concerning his beat. But the rendering of the difficult choruses was, on the whole, characterised by abundant spirit and the voices were excellent in quality. If the list of soloists was not the strongest imaginable, all the parts had capable representatives. Mr. Robert Newman sang the extraordinary monologue in the leading rôle with much earnestness and expression, and, save for one unfortunate slip, was wholly commendable. Miss Esther Palliser was agreeable in the song of the Shepherd lad, and Mr. Henry Piercy and Mr. Bantock Pierpoint were fully competent as Satan and the Narrator respectively. Mendelssohn's ever-welcome "Hymn of Praise," conducted by Mr. James Shaw, formed the second part of the Concert.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—MR. MANNS'S BENEFIT CONCERT.

THE veteran Conductor of the Crystal Palace Concerts took his benefit on April 29, on which occasion a long and interesting programme was executed in the presence of a large and appreciative audience. The list of performers included one new-comer, Mdlle. Frida Scotta, a young Danish violinist, who met with a very hearty reception for her clever performance of Mendelssohn's Concerto. She plays with great dexterity and neatness, the coldness of her style and the occasional uncertainty of her intonation being, perhaps, attributable to nervousness. Mdlle. Kleeberg gave a brilliant rendering of Beethoven's Pianoforte Concerto in G (No. 4); while the band distinguished themselves by masterly performances of the "Tannhäuser" and "Zauberflöte" Overtures, and, above all, of the "Unfinished" Symphony of Schubert. Mr. Santley contributed "O Ruddier than the Cherry" in his incomparable style, and joined Miss Macintyre in "La ci darem." The last-named artist also gave a vigorous rendering of the air "Plus grand dans son obscurité," from Gounod's "Reine de Saba." The programme was completed by Mr. Hamish MacCunn's Ballad for chorus and orchestra "Lord Ullin's Daughter." Mr. Manns, who conducted with unfailing animation and skill throughout, was loudly applauded and presented with several imposing floral tributes by his admirers.

AMATEUR ORCHESTRAL SOCIETIES.

SEVERAL of these industrious bodies have given their final performances for the season during the last month. On the 6th ult. the Society known as the Royal gave a Concert at St. James's Hall before an exceptionally crowded audience. A programme that included Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream" Overture, Dvorák's Slavonic Rhapsody (No. 2), Wagner's Overture to "Die Meistersinger," and the Prelude to Moszkowski's opera "Boabdil" cannot be regarded as wanting in variety; but the playing of Mr. George Mount's large force was rather dull and spiritless, and lacking in homogeneity. The audience seemed to care more for the violin playing of Miss Mary Cardew and the songs contributed by Miss Alice Schidrowetz and Miss Estréla Belinfonte.

The Strolling Players for once shifted their quarters from St. James's to the Princes' Hall, for their Concert on the 15th ult. An excellent programme was provided, including Gade's concise and genial Symphony in B flat (No. 4), Grieg's second "Peer Gynt" Suite, Mendelssohn's Overture to "Athalie," a new and pleasantly-written Scherzetto by Mr. Edward Cutler, and pieces by Mr. Edward German and Max Bruch. Madame Valda being unable to appear, Madame Emily Spada took her place; and songs were also rendered with acceptance by Miss Anna Gutjahr. The Concert was skilfully conducted by Mr. Norfolk Megone.

The Concert of the Westminster Orchestral Society at the Westminster Town Hall, on the 3rd ult., may be passed over, as nothing was done of a nature to command interest; but on the 17th ult. an extra performance was given at St. James's Hall as a compliment to the Society's accomplished Conductor, Mr. Stewart Macpherson, at which an interesting programme was presented—the Streatham Choral Society, of which Mr. Macpherson is also Conductor, taking part in the performance. Since its foundation, eight years ago, the Westminster Society has rendered excellent service to English music, and on the present occasion two of the principal pieces were new compositions by native writers. The first was Dr. A. C. Mackenzie's Highland Ballad for violin, the first of a set of pieces recently published as Op. 47. It is less elaborate than the composer's Pibroch, and no use is made of traditional Scottish airs; but it may be regarded as a companion to that work. It is in the form of a romance, or rather a scena, the several sections being well contrasted and full of poetic feeling and rich harmony. New violin music of so high a stamp does not frequently appear. Mr. Hans Wessely played the solo part capitally, and with the composer, who conducted, was warmly recalled to the platform. The other novelty was a Concertstück in A for pianoforte and orchestra, by Mr. Macpherson, composed expressly for the occasion. It consists of an Andante in A, leading to an Allegro appassionata, the Andante recurring later on, though the climax is brisk and animated. Though not, perhaps, remarkable for individuality, the piece is written with musicianly feeling and the solo part is even brilliant. Mr. Macpherson, at the keyboard, proved himself as much at home as he is at the conductor's desk. His technique and execution were admirable. The rest of the programme may be lightly passed over. It included Sir George Macfarren's bright and vigorous Overture to "Don Quixote," an opera produced in 1846; Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony in B minor, Mr. Macpherson's charming Nocturne in E flat, and Professor Bridge's picturesque cantata "The Inchcape Rock." This last-named work was conducted by the composer, and it enabled the Streatham Choral Society to prove itself a very capable body of singers. Some well chosen songs, effectively rendered by Mrs. Helen Trust and Mr. Santley, gave further variety to the programme. The orchestra was increased for this occasion, but the Society has no intention of giving its Concerts in future at St. James's Hall. It will resume its labours next season at its old quarters in the Westminster Town Hall.

The newly formed Irving Amateur Orchestral Society commenced its rehearsals at the College of Organists on the 25th ult., under the direction of Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch. A large number of members have been already enrolled.

MR. MOBERLY'S STRING ORCHESTRA.

THE annual visit to London of the Rev. E. H. Moberly's string orchestra of ladies is now awaited with interest and pleasure, and since last year the force has undergone a further increase in numbers and efficiency. For the first time, therefore, the Concert was given at St. James's Hall, nearly 100 ladies facing the audience on the 12th ult., five out of the eight double-basses, however, being male performers. A highly interesting programme had been prepared, and it is not too much to say that even to musicians present most of the pieces were new. The Introduction and Fugue from Handel's Concerto Grosso in B flat (No. 7) was followed by Robert Volkmann's Serenade in C (Op. 62), a work of less pretentions than the more familiar Serenade in G (Op. 63), all the brief movements blending together without break. The music is straightforward and genial, without elaboration of any sort. The same cannot be said of Dvorák's Serenade in E (Op. 22), though from its opus number this must be an early work. It consists of five movements, all light and cheerful, but full of masterly touches in the constructive details, though not so full of Slavonic characteristics as usual. It is curious that the Suite appears to have been generally overlooked until now. At the end of the programme were placed an Introduction, Fugue, and Waltz, from a Suite in C, by Alexandre Glazounow (Op. 35). The composer is Russian by birth and is about thirty years old. He devotes himself entirely to composition, and does not hold a post of any kind. The example of his ability presented on this occasion is full of interesting points and vigour. The purely orchestral portion of the programme was completed by Saint-Saëns's sombre Prelude to "Le Déluge." The second and third movements of Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto were excellently played by Miss Mary Cardew, and Mrs. Hutchinson contributed some well-selected songs. Throughout the evening the orchestra played with abundant spirit, the tone being first-rate and the attack and phrasing beyond reproach. Mr. Moberly conducted with the utmost care and judgment.

THE NEW OPERA AT THE SAVOY.

LIGHTNESS seems to have been the primary consideration in the score of "Jane Annie; or, The Good Conduct Prize," produced by Mr. D'Oyly Carte on the 13th ult. With what success Mr. Ernest Ford can grapple with really dramatic incidents remains to be seen, inasmuch as no scope for the musical illustration of passion attending highly-wrought situation was provided him by Messrs. J. M. Barrie and Conan Doyle. The work is not deficient in bright, fluent melody, and the instrumentation is entirely free from vulgarity; but evidence of the possession of more elevated gifts are, in "Jane Annie," looked for in vain. What, indeed, could be expected from a schoolgirl elopement, the romantic features of which are altogether subordinated to the humorous element? The chief comedian must apparently have his comic airs with catching burthens, and there must be the usual provision for supplementary dances. With such hindrances to imagination few composers could combat, and Mr. Ernest Ford does not attempt to do so. The point on which he may be congratulated is the justice done to his music by Miss Rosina Brandram, as an elderly schoolmistress, with the one genuinely sentimental song in the piece; by the Misses Dorothy Vane and Decima Moore, as juvenile heroines; and by Messrs. C. Kenningham and Scott Fishe, as persevering swains, the latter having a quaint military ditty "An officer I." The trouble taken with his words by Mr. Rutland Barrington as an eccentric Proctor might be advantageously copied by one or two of his companions, and the cast can scarcely be dismissed without reference to the clever drollery of Master Harry Rignold as an officious Page.

TWO GERMAN MUSICAL FESTIVALS.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

THOUGH it has always been a well ascertained fact that Beethoven was born at Bonn, the particular roof under which he saw the light was at one time a matter of serious dispute. The rival claims of the houses in the Bonngasse and the Rheingasse, amusingly commemorated in an old picture in the Beethoven House, have now been finally settled in favour of the former, and a mendacious tablet on the latter has been exchanged for one preferring the more modest inscription: "Beethoven lived here." There was room for some doubt, however, whether the good people of Bonn thoroughly appreciated the value of the shrine to which the Beethoven-worshipper made his pilgrimage. Four years back it was chiefly devoted to the vending of stale biscuits and highly-flavoured cheese, which even the most fervent Beethoven-worshipper found difficult of digestion, and the most diligent search from shop to shop for a photograph of so world-famed a building was fruitless. Since that date, however, things have altered. The whole house is now in the possession of the "Beethoven-Verein," who have turned it into a Museum of Beethoveniana, very much after the fashion of the Mozart House in Salzburg. To accomplish this funds were required, and to procure them, as well as to inaugurate the Museum, a series of Concerts of Beethoven's Chamber Music were given in 1890, the result of which was satisfactory enough to induce the committee to repeat the experiment this year and to contemplate the periodical recurrence of the Festival. A suitable Concert-room was at hand in the "Beethoven-Halle," which was built for the centenary performances of 1870, when, as may be easily understood, money was not easily procurable, a fact which may account for the temporary and somewhat cheap appearance of the building. Whatever may be said of its outward aspect, it is practically well suited for performances of chamber music, and accommodates about 1,800 people very comfortably. Its most peculiar feature is the "Podium," corresponding to our orchestra, but sloping very gradually. As it extends over more than a third of the area, the performers are in the midst of their audience, very much as was the case at Mr. Ella's Musical Union Concerts. The Beethoven-Verein has in Dr. Joachim an ideal President. No living musician has shown himself in more complete sympathy with the Bonn master—to mention Beethoven's Violin Concerto is to at once conjure up the image of the great Hungarian violinist; but beyond this there is a consideration of a more practical character, and it is in all probability not rash to assume that one reason why so many musicians of the highest eminence have given their services at these Festivals is that an artist of such repute as Dr. Joachim is at the head of affairs. It may soothe our national pride that of the four pianists who appeared at the Festival last month two were English. Though Mr. Eugen d'Albert may have cut off the last letter of his Christian name and added a cubit unto his locks as a sign of his voluntary expatriation, he cannot alter the awkward fact that "in spite of inclinations he remains an Englishman" by parentage and birth. Miss Fanny Davies was to have played but once, and that in concerted music; but the indisposition of Madame Carreño (now Mrs. d'Albert, by the way), who was to have played two of the Sonatas, proved Miss Davies's opportunity, and she availed herself of it by playing the Sonata in A flat (Op. 110) in a manner which won for her the warm approval of the audience—an audience, it may be added, of exceptionally critical powers. Instead of describing the five Concerts seriatim, it may be more interesting if, on the principle of ex uno disce omnes, one be taken with greater detail than would otherwise be possible. That which took place on the third of the five days (10th to 14th ult.) may serve, as being one of the most generally interesting programmes. Having strolled through the gaily decorated streets, through the Münsterplatz, where Beethoven's bronze counterfeit is surrounded by flowers and wreaths, jealously guarded by a policeman of more than average fierceness, we arrive at the Beethoven Hall in good time, and experience a mild excitement in watching the audience arrive. English people are hardly as numerous as might have been expected, probably because this is the height of the London season; but our bosoms swell with pride as we notice that with characteristic assertiveness a party of British amateurs have secured the most prominent position on the before-described Podium. The Concert is to begin at 6.30, by which wholesome hour a goodly audience is assembled. The appearance of Herr d'Albert (a profane person suggests "Hair d'Albert" as the more correct reading) reduces the chatterers to silence, and he plays the "Waldstein" in a way which delights all, and surprises not a few who were under the impression that he had gone over to the thumping league. His reading is indeed most thoughtful and refined, and there are moments of genuine inspiration in it. In front of the orchestra stands a bust of Beethoven, and it requires no exceptionally vivid imagination to fancy that it takes an intelligent interest in the proceedings. It seems satisfied with the "Waldstein" performance, and would no doubt say, had it the gift of speech: "Though it is now nearly a century since I wrote that little work, I don't see any signs that pianoforte music will go much farther!" Next comes the third of the Rasoumoffsky Quartets (in C), and now we are to learn why, independently of the "Stimmung" which permeates the event, it is worth while to undergo the perils of the sea to assist at a Beethoven-Feier in Bonn. The performers are the Viennese quartet party led by Herr Rosé, and their superb ensemble and perfect balance of parts show what can be done by artists who are in the habit of constantly playing in company. They are recalled with enthusiasm, Joachim leading the applause, and the bust is triumphant. After this we are allowed a "pause" of thirty minutes, during which most of the company promenade and refresh in the garden of a restaurant adjoining the hall. After the manner of Bayreuth, we are called back from this interlude by a trumpet call, the celebrated fanfare from "Fidelio" serving the purpose admirably. The Clarinet Trio in B flat (Op. 11) is next played with perfect finish and sympathy by Miss Fanny Davies and Messrs. Mühlfeld and Klengel. As the former of these gentlemen is now well known to the frequenters of St. James's Hall, his marvellously artistic and pure style need not be insisted on. The bust is most complacent, but rather deprecatory: "Not one of my best things, by any means; but I'm glad it pleases you." Last in this short but rich programme comes the brilliant and popular "Kreutzer" Sonata, in which Joachim and D'Albert take part. No sooner do we hear the silvery tone of the preliminary flourish behind the scenes in which the veteran is wont to indulge than we are inclined to exclaim, "There is but one Beethoven, and Joachim is his prophet!" It must be admitted, however, that both performers have been heard to greater advantage than on this particular occasion; still, the shout of applause which greets this favourite work is well deserved, and we come away, well satisfied, at an hour at which London audiences are just settling down for their evening's amusement. Among the other features of the Festival which deserve mention is the programme of the fourth day, which consisted of three of the Quartets—Rasoumoffsky, No. 2, and Op. 131 and 135, superbly played by Dr. Joachim's "own" Berlin quartet. The appearance of the veteran pianist Carl Reinecke, whose face, by the way, reminds one of a "blend" of Sir George Grove with the Bishop of Durham, was another matter of interest, as was the charming singing by Fräulein Leisinger of several little known songs, including Beethoven's arrangement of "Sally in our Alley," which is, singularly enough, among his Scottish (!) songs. The Festival was brought to a close with a very fine performance of the evergreen Septet, which attracted an enormous audience. It did not, however, seem to please the bust as much as the stronger meat of the "posthumous" Quartets the day before.

If the Beethoven Festival at Bonn be novel in style and young in years, the Lower Rhine Festival is, on the other hand, much more akin to our own English musical celebrations. With the Festival which took place at Düsseldorf last Whitsuntide the Institution has achieved its threescore years and ten, and, to judge by the interest the event excites, seems likely to emulate Tennyson's brook, and "go on for ever." Though our best provincial Festivals, those of Birmingham and Leeds, for instance, have little or nothing to fear from a comparison with the Düsseldorf meeting, in one respect, at least, the last affords a wholesome example. In England the amount of full rehearsal is notoriously insufficient. In Düsseldorf not only were two days given over to full rehearsals, but the morning of each of the three Festival days was occupied with going through the whole of the evening's programme. This is characteristic of German thoroughness, and if the result did not always attain the perfection which might fairly have been anticipated, this may be accounted for in more than one way. In the first place, the choral material was by no means satisfactory. The male-voice sections of the chorus were sadly wanting in sonority and precision. This is perhaps hardly to be wondered at when it is considered that, out of a chorus numbering altogether 566 voices, there were but 126 basses and seventy-four tenors, these latter of a quality which would have made Birmingham weep. Again, the Conductor, Herr Julius Buths, though evidently a musician of ability and undoubted energy, seemed unaccustomed to deal with such large forces as were, nominally at least, under his control, and his fidgetty beat proved frequently very difficult of comprehension. The fine band of 132 performers, on the other hand, left nothing to be desired, save perhaps a little more reticence on the part of the energetic gentleman who manipulated the kettle-drums. The twelve double basses, all, be it observed, four-stringed instruments, and one at least with five strings, were remarkable for their splendid sonority, and the strings generally, though not equal in refinement of tone to the better equipped players of a first-rate English orchestra, had a vigour and "go" not always to be found in our own bands. One respect in which Düsseldorf has an unquestionable advantage over any English festival town is the building where the Concerts take place. The "Tonhalle" belonging to the municipality is not only an excellent concert-room, both as regards appearance and acoustics, but it is not as cramped as are nearly all English buildings of the kind. Under the same roof are ample foyers, cloak-rooms, and the like. On one side of the concert-room a courtyard removes it from the noise of the street; on the other is a large and leafy garden in which the audience can refresh mind and body during the interval, while an open-air orchestra indicates that music al fresco is indulged in by the people of Düsseldorf during the summer months. The programme of the Festival contained but one work of importance not familiar to London audiences, a Te Deum by the Austrian composer Anton Bruckner, first performed in Berlin in the spring of 1891. Herr Bruckner, whose music has been brought under the notice of an English audience at the Richter Concerts, is undoubtedly a musician of great ability, and distinguished by a noble ambition; but whether he is in fact the genius his admirers believe him to be is a debatable point which the Te Deum, fine as it is in many parts, leaves unsolved. If the grandeur of the first movement were sustained, it would not be difficult to regard the work as an effort of genius, as distinguished from merely good taste and clever musicianship. As it is, it was impossible for an Englishman to restrain a patriotic desire that such a work as, let us say, the "De Profundis" of Dr. Parry could be introduced to the audience of a Lower Rhine Festival as an example of what our English School of to-day can do in the way of sacred music. Herr Bruckner's Te Deum opened the Festival, and was followed by Handel's "Israel in Egypt," the performance of which left a good deal to be desired. To begin with, Handel's score had obviously been tampered with by a succession of conductors until the original was disguised and vulgarised by what might be termed a brazen superstructure. There seemed to be some mystery as to the perpetrators of this enormity, but it was surmised by some musicians who were in a position to be acquainted with the facts of the case that Lindpaintner and Rietz were among the culprits, their additions being made on the basis of Mendelssohn's organ part. Moreover, the tempi adopted by Herr Buths were frequently so quick as to destroy the sense of dignity which is so characteristic of nearly all Handel's choruses. This, and the want of balance in the choir, deprived the "Hailstone" chorus of much of the effect it should have had. The adoption of a short Introduction in G minor, stated to have been composed by Handel expressly for the Oratorio, was a notable feature of the performance, as was the interpolation of a soprano air from Handel's 27th Psalm, the appropriateness of which, as regards both words and music, cannot be denied, though the principle of such importations may be questionable, even if Handel himself set the example. The second day's Concert left no room for unpleasant reflections. Berlioz's "Faust" was admirably done, the choruses of soldiers and students being the only weak feature of the performance; while the band was excellent from beginning to end, though it was even better in Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, the vigorous and masculine rendering of which did honour to all concerned. The third day's Concert afforded, according to the custom prevalent here, an opportunity for the soloists, whose names may here appropriately be mentioned. Frau Sucher, whose name has been familiar to the musical public of London ever since her memorable performances at Drury Lane in 1882, appeared at this Concert solely for the purpose of taking part in the last scene from Wagner's "Siegfried," the Waking of Brünnhilde. As the great Wagnerian artist was in splendid voice, it need not be added that her performance was worthy of this truly inspired creation. Had she been seconded by a more experienced tenor, the result would not have been far from perfection; but certainly Herr Birrenkoven did his best, and his best was very far from bad. Fräulein Leisinger, of the Berlin opera, who was the principal soprano of the Festival, showed that her strength lay in the rendering of Lieder, her polished performance of songs by Brahms, Schubert, Schumann, and Weber being of the very first order, and such as should commend her to the notice of Concert-givers in England.

The other principal vocalists were Fräulein Huhn, an excellent mezzo-soprano; Herr Messchaert (of Amsterdam), a thoroughly artistic and "safe" baritone; and Herr Staudigl, a Berlin bass not unworthy of the distinguished name he bears. The performance of Beethoven's Violin Concerto by Herr Heermann (who is not unknown in London) was a notable feature of this Concert, and his vigorous style and technical ability were displayed to advantage in Beethoven's music, and in the difficult cadenza he introduced into the first movement. The programme had distinction given it by the fine performance of Brahms's Fourth Symphony, with which it opened, and the event was brought to a brilliant conclusion with Schumann's "Rheinweinlied" Overture and Chorus, written for the Düsseldorf Festival of 1853.

THE LAISTNER CHOIR.

Choral societies are ever on the increase, and the more the better, provided the aim be to advance the interests of true art, and provided conductors of ability be selected. On Tuesday evening, the 16th ult., a new choir, under the direction of Herr Max Laistner, made its first public appearance at the Princes' Hall. The programme opened with Cherubini's "Medea" Overture. This was followed by Hermann Goetz's setting of Schiller's "Nœnia," a short cantata full of soul and beauty. It is difficult to single out any portion for special mention, for every page presents some feature of interest. It was performed a good many years ago at one of the Hackney Choral Association Concerts, under Mr. E. Prout's direction; but we cannot recall any subsequent performance of the work in London. And yet it ought not to be thus neglected. It is, we believe, the laudable intention of this new Society to introduce novelties, or works seldom heard. The performance of the cantata was commendable. The choir contains about seventy members, who all sang with vigour—in fact, at times, with too much vigour. This, however, is a fault which practice and experience will remove; one may even say that, at first, it is a good fault. The programme included Schumann's "Pilgrimage of the Rose," with Miss Marie Fillunger, Miss Helene Mearns, Miss A. Wheelwright, and Messrs. R. Hensler and Bispham. The orchestra, under the intelligent direction of Herr Max Laistner, gave a very fair rendering of Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

PIANOFORTE RECITALS.

There has been such a profusion of pianists, male and female, during the past month that it is impossible to give more than summary notes on their various performances; and that indeed is all that is required, as, with one exception, to be noted presently, the exhibition of talent has not been phenomenal. Taking the Recitals as nearly as may be chronologically, the first to be mentioned is that of Mr. Ralph Stuart at the Steinway Hall, on April 29. This very young executant has unquestionable ability, and it is giving him special praise to say that he was at his best in some excerpts of Chopin, including the Fantasia in F minor and the Ballade in G minor. He was joined by Miss Clara Fisher, an equally young and equally talented violinist, in Grieg's favourite Sonata in F, of which an excellent performance was secured, and Mr. W. H. Webb contributed some songs, unnamed in the programme.

Madame Essipoff has been a favourite with amateurs for nearly twenty years, and they mustered in considerable numbers at St. James's Hall at the first of three Recitals on the 3rd ult. The principal piece in the programme was Schumann's vigorous Sonata in G minor (Op. 22), a work exactly suited to the Russian pianist's style, and an exceptionally brilliant rendering was secured. Very fine execution was also displayed in Brahms's elaborate Variations and Fugue on a theme by Handel, and there was much to admire in Madame Essipoff's treatment of a selection of Chopin's minor pieces, which concluded the programme. At the second Recital, on the 9th ult., she brought forward a Sonata by L. Schytté, a Danish composer as yet but little known in this country. The work is in three movements, of which the first, which is decidedly Chopinesque, is the best. The second is virtually a song without words, and the third is trivial. On the whole, it cannot be said that Schytté's music is marked by much individuality. The remainder of the programme consisted of more or less trifling pieces, a few of which, and notably Tausig's derangement of a Toccata by Bach, might well have been spared. The third Recital, on the 15th ult., opened with Beethoven's so-called Sonata Appassionata, of which a very forcible rendering was given, and other noteworthy pieces were Mendelssohn's Prelude and Fugue in E minor and Schumann's "Papillons," the latter being played with much spirit. Of the remainder of the programme it is unnecessary to speak.

On the 3rd ult., at the Steinway Hall, Mr. Lennart Lundberg, a new-comer, gave the first of two Recitals, and proved himself a very neat, refined executant in various minor pieces by Handel, Mendelssohn, Grieg, and Chopin; but his style is too delicate—we had almost said ladylike—for Beethoven's "Waldstein" Sonata. The second Recital, which must pass with merely formal record, took place on the 12th ult., the principal pieces in the programme being Beethoven's Thirty-two Variations in C minor and Chopin's Sonata in B flat minor, with the Funeral March, both of which might be accorded a well-earned rest.

On the 4th ult., at the Princes' Hall, a Recital was given by Miss Madeline Payne, described as a "child pianiste." The little girl, who might perhaps number ten summers, is a pupil of Mr. J. Baptiste Calkin at the Guildhall School of Music, and the object of her public appearance was, we understand, that she might be enabled to continue her studies at that Institution. That object having been gained, she will be withdrawn from the public platform. This is wise, for Miss Payne is not in any sense a wonder-child; she has unmistakable ability, as evinced by her execution of a lengthy selection of pieces by various composers, perhaps her best effort being in Bach's Prelude and Fugue in D, from the first set of "Das wohltemperirte Clavier." There was a too strongly marked tendency to indulge in the tempo rubato; and wrong notes, chiefly in the left hand, were unpleasantly frequent. Miss Payne, however, has the making of a good pianist.

On the same afternoon Mr. Isidor Cohn, who made one or two appearances last year, gave a Recital before a sparse audience at St. James's Hall. He played Beethoven's Sonata in A (Op. 101) and Schumann's Fantasia in C (Op. 17) in a somewhat hard and unsympathetic manner, but he displayed welcome delicacy of touch and accuracy of mechanism in some sketches by Hiller, Mendelssohn, Moszkowski, and Dvorák.

On the next afternoon, at the Princes' Hall, a Recital was given by Miss Margarethe Eussert, a young German aspirant, at present little more than a child. It is understood that she comes of humble parentage and has undergone almost incredible privations in order that she might have the advantage of instruction from Mr. Klindworth at Berlin, from whom, however, together with his amiable wife, she has since received substantial assistance. She is certainly a gifted girl and her rendering of an arduous programme, more particularly of Mendelssohn's Variations Sérieuses, a Nocturne by Chopin, Rubinstein's Staccato Study, and minor pieces by Liszt, Raff, and Grieg was noteworthy for true artistic feeling and intelligence. Miss Eussert's future will be watched with interest.

Concerning the Recital of Madame Grimaldi at the Princes' Hall, on the evening of the 9th ult., it will be advisable to say but little. The lady attempted Schumann's Carnaval, and various pieces by Chopin, Schubert, Brahms, and Liszt, with more or less indifferent results. The songs contributed by Miss Elena Leila gave some variety to the programme.

On every ground the exhibition of musical "prodigies" is to be deprecated, but when a genuine "wonder-child" calls for notice there is a strong temptation to exchange the terms of judicial condemnation for those of astonishment and admiration. Such a child is Raoul Koczalski, who made his bow before a London audience at the Princes' Hall on the 10th ult. Born at Warsaw in January, 1885, this heaven-endowed infant commenced his public career at the age of four, and it is said that within the last three years he has given five hundred Recitals. This sounds like abominable cruelty, but the appearance and manner of the little fellow are calculated to disarm adverse criticism of this sort. He is chubby-faced and bright-looking, and he plays with as much absence of effort as if he were merely engaging in a game of tops or marbles. Indeed it is said that he is only happy when he has a pianoforte in front of him. His first programme was admirably selected, among the pieces being Mozart's Fantasia in D minor, which he played with exquisite sensibility; an arrangement of the middle movement of Chopin's Concerto in F minor, Liszt's Rhapsody (No. 13), a Mazurka by B. Godard, and two little pieces from his own pen. In everything he attempted there was the evidence of genius; even his principal fault, that of lingering over phrases as if he loved them, showing that he played from the heart rather than the head. His touch is delightfully pure and crisp, and not once in the course of the Recital was there the slightest suspicion of undue effort or forcing. The second Recital, on the 19th ult., was not so artistically successful, though it was evident that the fame of Koczalski had been already noised abroad, for there was a greatly increased attendance. It was a mistake, however, to perform Beethoven's Concerto in G and Liszt's Hungarian Fantasia in E with the accompaniments on a second pianoforte, and, moreover, Mr. Martinus Sieveking was not particularly happy in his execution of an ungrateful task. However, the manner in which both works were rendered by the infant artist was nothing short of prodigious; he was heard to even greater advantage in Chopin's Prelude in D flat and the Waltz in E minor. Koczalski is a phenomenon, and those responsible for his guardianship should exercise the utmost care over their precious charge.

The last Recital we can notice this month is that of Miss Muriel Elliot, at St. James's Hall, on the 24th ult. This was a marked success, the young artist playing Bach's Suite in A minor and the Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue with singular purity and taste. She was scarcely less successful in Beethoven's Sonata in E flat (Op. 27, No. 1) and some pieces by Chopin. Miss Elliot is a pianist of exceptional promise, and, unlike many others who have appeared this season, she will be heard again with pleasure.

THE GUILDHALL SCHOOL OPERATIC STUDENTS.

THE operatic aspirants at the School on the Embankment are determined not to be left in the rear by their rivals in Tenterden Street and at South Kensington, lately seen in Lortzing's "Czar und Zimmermann" and Gluck's "Orfeo" respectively. In view of the frequency with which Gounod's "Faust" is sustained in London by eminent artists, it certainly savoured of rashness for the Guildhall authorities to select this work for performance at the Lyceum, on the 3rd ult. The issue, however, demonstrated that the qualifications of the students for the work undertaken had not been over-rated. Except for occasional weakness and hesitation—quite pardonable under the circumstances—in histrionic details, not much fault could be found with the representation. Sir Joseph Barnby had his band—for the most part amateurs—well in hand, and the chorus were equally regardful of their Principal's clear and decisive beat. Even to those who had already heard her on the platform, the able manner in which Miss Jessie Hudleston sang the music of Marguerite must have been a surprise. This young lady's sympathetic voice and excellent style were set off by a reading of the character that combined tenderness and spirit. Mr. Edward Epstein, as Mephistopheles, sang with judgment, keeping well within his means throughout, and Miss Jessie Browning was an agreeable Siebel. The Faust of Mr. Bates Maddison and the Valentine of Mr. F. Stuart Hyatt were also praiseworthy. Altogether, the performance of the well-known work was highly creditable to the students.

THE MUSICAL ARTISTS' SOCIETY.

THE interest of the Concert given by the above excellent Society at St. Martin's Hall, Trafalgar Square, on the 8th ult., centred in a Violin and Pianoforte Sonata in E (Op. 38), by Mr. Algernon Ashton, for both as regards aim and achievement it towered head and shoulders above the other novelties in the programme. Of the various chamber works from Mr. Ashton's pen with which we are acquainted, none can boast of a finer first movement than the Sonata under notice. The subjects are excellent, melodious, clear-cut, and rhythmical; and their treatment, as is generally the case with this earnest and gifted musician, ingenious and effective. The slow movement, Larghetto con gran espressione, though full of interesting, and even original points, suffers through over-elaboration; but a tuneful, genial Allegro commodo winds up the work in a thoroughly satisfactory and enjoyable manner. It was splendidly played by Mr. Gompertz and the composer. Mr. Herbert Thorndike sang in his usual finished style a very melodious and expressive song by Mr. Gerard F. Cobb, entitled "Song and silence." It has an accompaniment for pianoforte and horn obbligato, an unusual, but exceedingly effective combination, which we should be glad to see more frequently employed. Mr. Walter Blandford played the horn part with much beauty of tone. Two very elegant and artistic songs by Mr. Walter Macfarren, "The Linnet Song" and "Awake, my heart," were so charmingly sung by Miss Kate Cove, that she had to repeat the first-named for an encore. Messrs. Buziau, Harry Lee, Wright, and B. Albert played two movements for String Quartet by Mr. Alfred Gilbert—viz., a pensive Pastorale and a bustling Scherzo, entitled "La Sera" and "Il Mattino" respectively. The remaining novelties were a pretty Chanson for violoncello and pianoforte, by Ernest Harcourt, and two love songs with violoncello obbligato, by Noel Johnson. Beethoven's Trio in B flat (Op. 11) for pianoforte, clarinet, and violoncello, and Mozart's Clarinet Quintet completed the programme. In these two works the clarinet part was played by a lady, Miss Frances Thomas, in a thoroughly competent manner.

MUSICAL GUILD.

THE ninth season of these enjoyable Concerts began on the 3rd ult., at the Kensington Town Hall, with an admirable programme, which, we were pleased to observe, attracted a numerous audience. No more appropriate work could have been chosen to inaugurate the season than Brahms's wonderful Clarinet Quintet, for the more frequently it is heard the higher it appears to tower above all other chamber music compositions produced since Beethoven's last Quartets. The performance, by Messrs. W. H. Hall, Bent, Stephenson, Kreuz, and Paul Ludwig, was most creditable. Mr. Hall, the clarinettist, was equal to all the difficulties of his part except those of the più lento in the indescribably beautiful slow movement. It would seem as if none of our native players had the requisite mastery over their instruments to render this portion of the work with the dash and finish of Herr Mühlfeld. Miss Annie Grimson played Chopin's Polonaise in A flat, but without displaying the breadth and power which this titanic piece so imperatively demands. Mr. Peter Musson sang Mendelssohn's "It is enough" and Brahms's "Verrath," in the curious English version by Mrs. Morgan, "of New York." His voice is of good quality, but it is not yet under perfect control, and he lacks the dramatic accents required for the interpretation of Brahms's splendid song, which in consequence fell quite flat. Beethoven's E minor Quartet completed the programme.

At the second Concert Brahms's Pianoforte Quartet in G minor (Op. 25) and Schumann's String Quartet in A (Op. 41, No. 3) received exceptionally good renderings. In fact, that of Brahms's work, by Miss Ethel Sharpe (who has returned from Vienna with ripened technical and intellectual powers), Miss Isabella Donkersley, Mr. Alfred Hobday, and Miss Maud Fletcher, was, on the whole, the one most nearly approaching perfection which we have heard at these Concerts. Mr. Hobday played an Elégie for viola by Vieuxtemps with quite exceptional beauty of tone and artistic finish. Mr. Magrath, whose fine bass voice seems to be developing into something almost phenomenal as regards resonance and power, sang Brahms's pathetic "Klage" (Op. 105, No. 3) very expressively; while for vigorous declamation and impulse nothing could have been better than his singing of an appropriately spirited, virile, and exhilarating setting, by S. P. Waddington, of Browning's Cavalier tune, "Kentish Sir Byng." For an encore he gave a very dramatic but, as regards the pronunciation of the German text, somewhat unsatisfactory rendering of Brahms's "Verrath."

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

The Students' Concerts were resumed on the 25th ult., at the Concert Hall, Alexandra House. Miss Lilian Wright and Mr. Claude Hunter gave a finished rendering of the first of Joseph Rheinberger's Six Pieces for violin and organ (Op. 150), an effective set of variations on a charming theme. The young lady also took part, with Messrs. L. Fowles and Thos. Hill, in a capital performance of Beethoven's delightful Serenade Trio (Op. 8). Two promising singers, Mr. E. G. Cleather, a sonorous baritone, and Mr. J. Willey, whose voice is of genuine tenor quality, were heard in songs by Gounod and Ambroise Thomas respectively, and Miss Fanny Goldhill displayed a flexible light soprano in Handel's "Lusinghe più care." Liszt's pianoforte arrangement of Bach's great G minor Fugue was played with fluency and considerable freedom by Miss Louisa E. Parker; Miss Ada Walter and Mr. Thomas Hill gave a commendable performance of Beethoven's Pianoforte and Violoncello Sonata (Op. 69), and Mr. W. Ackroyd of two Hungarian Dances (Brahms-Joachim).

WOODSIDE PARK MUSICAL SOCIETY.

When the above Society decided on performing a work of the calibre of Dr. Mackenzie's "Rose of Sharon," there may have been those who doubted the wisdom of attempting the task, or the possibility of succeeding in the face of such undoubted drawbacks as the absence of a full orchestra, and the heavy demands which the music makes on the chorus. The performance at Woodside Hall, on April 27, proved, however, that even with a small choir, and an accompaniment of only a pianoforte and a quintet of strings, a great measure of justice can be done to this greatest of English oratorios, and most of the manifold beauties and subtleties of Dr. Mackenzie's splendid score can be revealed. If the Conductor, Mr. Alfred J. Dye, had availed himself of Mr. King Hall's arrangement of the accompaniments for harmonium and pianoforte, the "colour" thus supplied would have greatly added to the effect of the performance. Nor might it then have been considered necessary to cut the most inspired portion of the work—viz., the Sulamite's Dream, because the delicious effects produced by the wind instruments in this scene can be very well suggested, if they cannot be actually realised, by a good harmonium. The choir, numbering about eighty voices, sang with considerable intelligence and care, and evidently appreciated the great qualities of the work. A few more rehearsals would no doubt have supplied the confidence and the precision of attack which were occasionally wanting. The delightful opening chorus, so redolent of the very breath of a fresh Spring morning; the magnificent chain of wonderfully contrasted choruses in the Procession of the Ark, and the massive Finale all made a great effect and were much applauded. Of the soloists, Miss Teresa Blamy deserves unqualified praise for her very artistic rendering of the beautiful part of the Sulamite. Her voice, a fresh soprano of extensive range and excellent quality, was equal to every demand of the music, and the fervour which she threw into the passionate utterances and touching appeals of the Sulamite maiden was remarkable in so young a singer. Mr. E. Branscombe was thoroughly efficient as The Beloved, and Miss Bessie Dore was commendable in the alto music. Mr. Dye's enterprise and pluck, and the artistic discrimination which prompted him to give a hearing to one of the finest specimens of modern oratorio music, are worthy of all praise, and to those conductors of efficient, albeit small choral societies, with whom admiration of the classics does not imply depreciation of what is new, we would say—Go ye and do likewise. No similar work of modern times more fully repays careful and patient study, and if the task be not an easy one, remember Liszt's words to Wagner: "Difficulties there must be, that they may be overcome."

GRESHAM COLLEGE.

Owing to the inadequacy of accommodation at Gresham College during Professor Bridge's musical lectures, the authorities obtained for the Easter-term series the use of the Great Hall belonging to the City of London School, an arrangement of which the public testified its appreciation by attending in still larger numbers than hitherto. The first Lecture had for its subject "The music of the pageant and the play," and contained much that was instructive and interesting. The origin of all dramatic entertainments was traced to religious observances. "Mysteries" were shown to be dramatised Biblical incidents, "Miracles" to be based on legends of the Saints, and "Moralities" the allegorical personification of virtues and vices. The following passage, written by an eye-witness of one of these performances at Chester, proved the word pageant to have been derived from the vehicle in which the company of players were wont to travel: "The manner of these players weare, every company had his pageant, which pageants weare a high scaffold with two roomes, a higher and a lower, upon four wheels. In the lower they apparelled themselves, and in the higher roome they played, being all open on the tope, that all behouldes might heare and see them." There was more dramatic perception displayed in "Moralities," which contained some attempt at a plot. Miracle plays were performed in this country in the twelfth century. In 1391 the Parish Clerks had a play at Skinners' Well, Smithfield, which lasted three days; and in 1407 they represented the Creation of the World, which occupied them eight days, a day more than stated in the Bible. York, Chester, and Coventry were famous for such performances. The pageant, as we now regarded it, was the peaceful outcome of the tournament. A notable pageant was enacted on the occasion of Henry V. and the city returning thanks after the battle of Agincourt; and one of the most elaborate was exhibited at the coronation of Queen Anne Boleyn. Music, although of a rude kind, evidently played an important part in the pageant. In an account of a Coventry pageant were found charges "for mendying the trumpet" and "fechying a peare of horgens and the carrege of them home"; also for playing on the "Rygalls."

The musical examples of this Lecture, interpreted by Mr. W. Fell, Mr. Dan Price, and Westminster choristerboys, included three charming songs written for three voices for a Coventry pageant in the fourteenth century, entitled "The Birth of Christ"; a spirited song on the victory of Agincourt; and a dramatically-conceived duet dating from the time of James I., by R. Johnson, for Middleton's tragi-comedy "The Witch"—the last-named being of special interest as having apparently formed the basis of Locke's "Witch" music in Shakespeare's "Macbeth."

At the second Lecture Professor Bridge treated of the "Masque," the first historical mention of which in England, the Professor said, was in 1512, when a masque was acted which Shakespeare subsequently introduced in his "Henry VIII." The gradual development of the masque, which originally came from Italy, was traced until it attained its perfection in Milton's "Comus." Ben Jonson invented the "Anti-Masque," an introductory interlude played before the more serious portions of the masque proper. The harlequinade at the modern pantomime might be regarded as the remains of the anti-masque.

The illustrations on this occasion, drawn from the music performed at celebrated masques, were supplied by Mr. Avalon Collard and some Westminster boys.

The third Lecture was entitled "Some elements of musical form." Professor Bridge is never more happy as a lecturer than when he has to explain the intricacies of a technical matter, and on this occasion the subject was dealt with in a most lucid and genial manner. Musical notes and rests were compared to words of a language, which, placed in proper succession, formed an intelligible sentence; and musical phrases, sections, and cadences were aptly likened to the use of commas, semicolons, and full stops in literature. The more complex peculiarities of form were explained with similar helpful similes, the whole tendency of the Lecture inculcating the valuable lesson of the coherency and reasonableness permeating all truly great music.

The educational value of this discourse was much enhanced by the clever pianoforte playing of the Misses Annie and Jessie Grimson.

On the last evening the Professor concluded his "Talks about the orchestra," attention on this occasion being devoted to the strings. The information given was far-reaching, extending from the early types of viols to their latest developments found in the modern orchestra. The important influence exercised by the improvements effected in the bow was also commented upon, and an admirable series of illustrations played by Miss Lilian Wright, Messrs. E. Hopkinson, A. and C. Hobday, and T. E. Hill, under the direction of Mr. J. E. Borland.

MUSICAL ASSOCIATION.

Dr. Charles Vincent, on the 9th ult., brought forward "A suggested method for teaching elementary harmony," the result, he said, of his endeavours to facilitate and make of greater practical benefit the early studies of students of harmony. Dr. Vincent maintained that, although we now possessed many valuable text-books on harmony, the systems pursued with young pupils was not altogether satisfactory to either teacher or learner; and that too frequently the chief result of a twelvemonth's study was to excite a distaste for the subject. He attributed this, in great measure, to the students being unduly hurried into the treatment of discords before they had mastered the use of triads, and to their not being taught to make their own basses before being introduced to the harmonisation of melodies and the laws of part-writing. Dr. Vincent then submitted and explained his new method, which consisted of a highly ingenious table, by reference to which the student saw at a glance what triads could, with good effect, follow each other. It was claimed that by this means the interest of the pupil was aroused, that he was prevented from writing crude progressions, and that a foundation was laid for the subsequent rational harmonisation of melodies.

In the somewhat lengthy discussion which followed the reading of the paper, Mr. E. Prout, who occupied the chair, favourably reviewed the scheme, which he considered would facilitate the progress of beginners. Mr. Banister and Mr. Wesché, however, criticised the method adversely, as tending to induce mechanical work.

COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS.

Sir George Grove, in fulfilment of the duties of Chairman, at the Annual Dinner of the College of Organists, which took place on the 8th ult., at the Holborn Restaurant, called attention to the fact of how greatly the musical profession was at the present moment indebted to the sympathy of the Queen and Royal Family with the art of music, and specially dwelt upon the value of the Prince of Wales's favourable countenance of the Associated Board of the R.A.M. and R.C.M., through which channel those two Institutions had acquired the invaluable opportunity of working together and practically showing the unity of purpose by which they were animated. Referring to musical examinations, Sir George Grove said they were as characteristic of this generation as madrigals were of the seventeenth century or glees of the beginning of this. He thought the cause was to be found in that peculiarity which, of all others, characterised the English temperament—viz., the extraordinary energy with which they pursued whatever they took up. Of late years our attention had been attracted to the art of music, with the result of another display of our remarkable vigour and earnestness of purpose, and an immense increase in the number of pupils under musical tuition and examination. With the creative branch of music all this activity had, however, little or nothing to do; but it formed intelligent performers and listeners, and so far prepared the ground for the great genius when he should appear.

After eulogistically referring to the College of Organists' examinations, which, he said, had always excited his admiration from their business-like character, high standard, and great practical value, Sir George remarked that while some of the examinations concerned in all this teaching were honest and efficient, others could hardly be so styled. He feared that the term "bogus examination," which they had recently heard so often, too truly described the nature of many of these experiments—experiments conducted in such cases by ignorant pretenders on unsatisfactory and ill-considered systems. The rise of a movement, however, in any art or science was always accompanied by a crop of charlatanism—by crowds of ignorant pretenders endeavouring to use the popular taste for their own pecuniary benefit. But the real workers pursued their path; the common-sense which lay at the root of humanity exercised its influence surely, though it might be slowly; and in the end quackery failed and accuracy prevailed. Other speakers were Sir John Stainer, Drs. King, Pole, Bridge, Turpin, Warriner, Warwick Jordan, and Messrs. Percy Baker, Gaffe, Johnstone, and Foster.

THE WAGNER SOCIETY.

Mr. Louis N. Parker read, on the 9th ult., before the members of the Wagner Society, a paper entitled "Wagner as a Playwright." After some preliminary remarks concerning the attributes of an ideal playwright, which were maintained to be the same as those of the true poet—viz., knowledge of and sympathy with all the joys and griefs, virtues and vices of mankind, the lecturer said one accusation which was brought against Wagner with nauseating persistency was that he did not treat of men and women, but of abstractions. As Dickens was accused of never having drawn a gentleman, so Wagner was accused of never having drawn a man or woman. If so, why was it that we were absorbed, thrilled, lifted out of ourselves when we witnessed Wagner's masterpieces? It was not the music, for non-musical people were as interested as musical people in Wagnerian drama. The secret lay in Wagner's power as a playwright; and the fundamental bases of that power were three—viz., directness, simplicity, and repose. The dramatic action was never interrupted, there were no superfluous characters. As regards simplicity, there were no side issues whatever; there never was an underplot. There was in each work one great motive, which was worked out until it was thoroughly elaborated and all its possibilities brought to light. The opening of "Parsifal" was a remarkable example of Wagner's repose, which so largely contributed to the realism in his works. He felt therefore justified in claiming for Wagner the foremost place among practical playwrights, next to and on a level with Shakespeare.

In moving a vote of thanks to the lecturer, Mr. Ashton Ellis contrasted the paper with the so-called modern scientific criticism, which he said might be described as picking holes and calling them orifices. It should be added that Miss E. Holme, a pupil of Mr. Parker, gave excellent renderings of Wagner's "Träume" and "Waltraute's Appeal."

PLAINSONG AND MEDIÆVAL SOCIETY.

Mr. H. B. Briggs gave the first of a series of four Lectures on Plainsong before the members of the Mediæval Society, at the Chapter House, St. Paul's. Mr. Briggs lucidly traced the development of plainsong, from the monotone with its early inflections up to the elaborate species which were only capable of being sung by highly-trained choirs; and laid special emphasis on the preservation throughout of the essential principle—i.e., the preservation of the intonation, reciting, and ending, which enabled prose to be set to Gregorian music with perfect accentuation of the words. The illustrations included the chanting, by the Rev. O. W. Wilde, of an Epistle and Gospel with the Sarum inflections, given as an example of the simplest form of plainsong; an Introit dating from the fourth century; a Kyrie composed by St. Dunstan; and the Gradual "Requiem eternam," the last-named being effectively sung by the recently-formed choir, conducted by Mr. Abdy Williams.

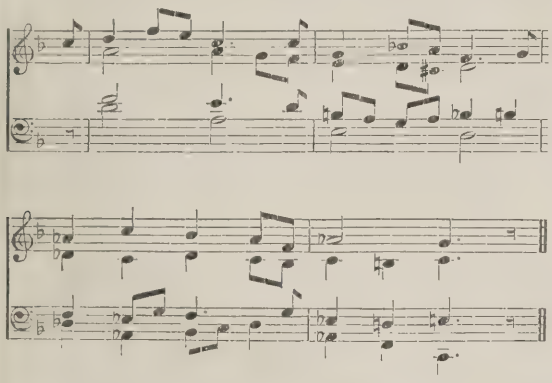
GRIEG'S HARMONY.

One of the most interesting and exhaustive Lectures recently given at the College of Organists, took place on the 2nd ult., when Dr. F. J. Sawyer read a paper on "Grieg's Harmony." From the earliest times of music as an art the harmonist had always, the lecturer said, been ahead of the theorist. Consequently the most advanced use of harmony must be sought for, not in text-books, but in the works of contemporary composers. The young student must of course begin with the text-book and must master the methods employed by the great composers of the past, but diligent study and analysis of modern scores were of equal necessity and importance. Grieg was the Meissonier of music. His compositions were full of delicate harmonic detail and originality. Since the time of Purcell the tendency of composers had been to extend the harmonic limits of the scale, and no man had done more in this direction than Grieg. His works abounded in daring departures from traditional treatment. In Op. 35, No. 1, we were presented with a minor triad on A followed directly by a minor triad on C. The Romance for two pianofortes contained the following remarkable succession of triads, &c.—



The harmonic series employed by Grieg seemed to follow to the fullest extent the modern view, that no modulation was effected by the introduction of any chord if it were resolved into the key of the section. Grieg also seemed to sympathise with the modern proclivity to reduce the number of roots from which chords were said to be derived. He made large use of chords of the eleventh and thirteenth, with apparent keen sense of their being part of the dominant harmony. Remarkable use was made of passing notes and appoggiature. Probably the first use of a major seventh as an appoggiatura to the minor seventh was found in No. 7 of Op. 47. But perhaps Grieg's originality was most shown in his cadences. After studying them the lecturer thought our definition of a cadence should be "a progression of any chords which gave to the ear a sense of conclusion." An extremely fine example of a cadence occurred at the termination of the Sonata in E minor (Op. 7) and another in No. 3 of Book 6 of his "Lyrische Stücke."

The educational value of the Lecture was greatly increased by the audience being supplied with fifty printed excerpts from Grieg's works and by the examples admirably played and sung by Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Robinson, Miss Bruckshaw, and Mr. Mervyn Dene.

OBITUARY.

William T. Bickerstaff, one of the most familiar personages in choral Liverpool, died on the 4th ult., at the age of sixty-three. The deceased was for many years one of the altos of the Philharmonic chorus and had been happily identified with many other musical organisations.

We record with deep regret the death, at Newcastle, on the 5th ult., of Mr. Honorato Vert, brother and business associate of Mr. N. Vert. His loss is widely felt in musical circles.

France has lost one of her most popular writers of songs (chansons) by the death of Gustave Nadaud, which took place on April 28. He wrote both words and music of an immense number, which not so many years ago were heard from one end of his country to the other. He was always considered the legitimate successor of Béranger, the chansonnier par excellence. During the last few years the taste of the Parisians, and we suppose of Frenchmen generally, has delighted in songs of a different description, and the deceased frequently expressed his sorrow at the degradation of the Café-concerts at which his charming muse used to be heard. He was born at Roubaix on February 20, 1820. He also wrote several operettas, and a novel, entitled "Une Idylle."

At Brussels there died, on the 1st ult., at the age of seventy-six, Edouard Kalls, a merchant and an enthusiastic music-lover, whose hospitable house the most distinguished artists who visited Brussels frequented. Joachim, Madame Schumann, Rubinstein, Leonard, Vieuxtemps, Servais, and De Beriot were amongst his friends. He was an excellent pianist and one of the best known figures in musical circles in the Belgian capital.

We have also to record the following deaths:—

On April 20, at Vienna, in his seventy-first year, Andreas Schubert, the last surviving step-brother of the great composer.

At Berlin, on April 15, Rudolf Radecke, composer and conductor of a choral society. He was in his sixty-fourth year, having been born on September 6, 1829, at Dittmannsdorf, in Silesia.

Josef Giehrl, a pupil of Liszt's, Professor at the Royal Academy of Music in Munich, a highly gifted musician and excellent pianist. He died on April 24, aged thirty-six.

On April 30, at Budapest, where he was Professor at the Academy of Music, Julius von Beliczay de Belic, composer of numerous songs, pianoforte, chamber, and orchestral pieces. He was born at Komorn, in Hungary, on August 10, 1835.

On the 9th ult., at Brünn, in Moravia, in his fifty-eighth year, Ferdinand Debois, composer of songs and part-songs, and late Conductor of the Brünn Männergesangverein.

The last surviving half-sister of Richard Wagner, Madame Cæcilia Avenarius (née Geyer), died at Leipzig, on the 14th ult., aged seventy-nine. She was married to the Bookseller, Eduard Avenarius, to whom we are indebted for some interesting details about the infancy and youth of Wagner.

At Brussels, on the 17th ult., of consumption, George Weiler, a talented and promising composer of some very charming pianoforte pieces. He was barely thirty.

MUSIC IN BRISTOL.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The annual Ladies' Night, on April 27, of the famous Bristol Madrigal Society drew together, at the Victoria Rooms, a large assemblage. The programme was as interesting as ever, and proved very delightful to the audience. The pieces were happily arranged to afford the visitors an opportunity of marking the contrast between elaborate and more simple compositions, an idea that seemed to be highly appreciated. Such time-honoured favourites as Benet's "All creatures now" and Linley's "Let me, careless," led off the list. By way of contrast to these older pieces came Walter Macfarren's "Up! up! ye dames." It was followed by Wilbye's "Sweet honey-sucking bees," to which succeeded the simple and melodious "Since first I saw your face," of Ford. Lassus was represented by his "Matona, lovely maiden," Reay by "The dawn of day," Weelkes by "Like two proud armies," and Pearsall by "It was upon a Springtide day." In the second part of the programme were Pearsall's "In dulci jubilo," Mendelssohn's "Remembrance" and "The Victor's Return," the elaborate "As Vesta was" of Weelkes, "Unkind, O stay," of Wilbye, and "Our bonny boots," of Morley, which latter was now brought forward for the first time in Bristol. Evidently the compositions had been studied with great care, for they were rendered with a degree of perfection that won general praise. Never did the Madrigalians sing better, and they and their indefatigable Conductor, Mr. D. W. Rootham, are to be congratulated on the result.

The Choral Societies of Bristol North, Bristol East, and Kingswood, each directed by Mr. J. F. Nash, jointly gave a Concert in Colston Hall, on April 26. Sir G. A. Macfarren's Cantata "May Day" was the chief work essayed, and this the singers gave with precision, excellence of tone, and marked intelligence—qualities which showed that they had been well trained. Miss F. Cromey was the soloist. Vincent's Choral Fantasia on National Airs proved particularly captivating, the clever production and the admirable way it was sung deserving the applause bestowed. Beale's glee "Come let us join," and Garrett's part-song "Good-night, farewell," were also praiseworthy examples of singing. The members of the children's class creditably rendered the part-songs "Soldiers on the march," "Rest, my baby, rest" (Taubert), "The joy of the hunter," and "An angel form." Songs were contributed by Miss Cromey, Miss Maud Bryant, Miss Grimmett, Mr. J. Marsh, and Mr. H. A. Godwin; Mr. Harold Bernard played a couple of violin solos, and the band performed a Minuet for muted strings of Boccherini.

Bishopston Choral Society, a flourishing body, closed the season with a Concert on the 4th ult. Bennett's "May Queen" was essayed, and, under the guidance of Mr. Cedric Bucknall, it was capitally sung. The characters were sustained by Miss Jessie Sweet, Miss Amy Broadribb, Mr. A. M. Warren, and Mr. Alban Young. Subsequently the choir contributed an effective part-song "The Linden Tree," from the pen of the Conductor. Members of the Society also gave songs.

On the 9th ult. the Fishponds Choral Society gave a performance of Cowen's "The Rose Maiden," under the direction of Mr. T. K. Yalland, and it was interpreted with praiseworthy efficiency. Miss Gath, Miss Hodge, Mr. A. E. Edgar, and Mr. W. Purnall were the soloists. The presentation of a silver-mounted bâton to the Conductor was an agreeable feature of the evening's proceedings.

The Welsh National Eisteddfod Choir of 500 voices visited Bristol on the 13th ult., to assist at two Concerts given in aid of a fund for the relief of sufferers by the Great Western Colliery accident. The Bristol Orpheus Glee Society added its services. Under the direction of Caradog the visitors in the afternoon sang several Welsh pieces in the vernacular; also "All men, all things," from Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise"; "The heavens are telling," from the "Creation"; and Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus," Mr. Riseley conducting the latter. These were all performed in a manner that charmed the audience. The Orpheus Glee Society sang with much finish several well-known compositions—Tom Cooke's "Strike the lyre," Cruickshank's "Stars of the summer night," "O sanctissima," and Dr. Hiles's "Hushed in death." Songs were contributed by Madame Williams-Penn, Miss Cromey, and Miss P. Rowland, and Mr. Carrington played violin solos. The evening Concert was somewhat similar to that in the afternoon. The Welsh folk repeated most of the pieces they sang in the afternoon, and the Orpheus Glee Society, besides interpreting "Strike the lyre," added Sullivan's "The long day closes," Viotti's "The dying child," and "Hohenlinden." Mr. Carrington played some violin pieces, and Mr. Riseley performed a couple of organ pieces, the second being in response to an encore.

Macfarren's "May Day" was brought forward by the Stapleton Choral Society at the closing Concert of the season, on the 8th ult., Miss Jessie Sweet being the soloist. The delightful cantata was creditably rendered, as were several songs and instrumental pieces. Mr. J. Burn conducted.

The Bristol Society of Instrumentalists closed its season, on the 3rd ult., by a Concert in Colston Hall. About 140 members took part and excellently performed Beethoven's Eighth Symphony, Mendelssohn's "Athalie" Overture, Auber's "Masaniello" Overture, and other works, under the direction of Mr. George Riseley. Mr. Carrington, Miss Amy Lavington, and Mr. Fulford performed Handel's Largo, arranged for violin, harp, and organ. Miss Verne played pianoforte solos and Miss Fillunger sang.

The short series of Subscription Orchestral Concerts closed on the 17th ult., when a Sinfonietta of Schumann was performed for the first time in Bristol, together with Beethoven's "Emperor" Symphony, Mr. Leonard Borwick being the soloist. Miss Agnes Janson was the vocalist. Artistically the Concert was a great success.

MUSIC IN EDINBURGH.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Two important musical events marked last month as an epoch in the musical history of Edinburgh. A Concert was given on Sunday, April 30, in the Music Hall, by the Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company artists, in aid of the Catholic Boys' Home, and the attendance overcrowded the hall. True, the object was a charity and the songs, &c., were all "sacred," but it was an unheard-of innovation. When the directors learned that the hall had been let for such a purpose they proposed a compensation on condition that the Concert be abandoned; but the management of the Boys' Home stuck to their guns, and when Father Haydon in his speech to the audience began a sentence with "This is the first attempt of the kind in Edinburgh; but I hope—" the rest was drowned in deafening and prolonged applause. The artists travelled specially from Glasgow in order to oblige the Boys' Home and to do what was really a great service to public feeling in this city.

The other event was the first performance in Edinburgh of "Tannhäuser"—in the fiftieth year of its life. At each of the four performances, the Lyceum Theatre was crowded to suffocation, and the tickets were sold out many days in advance of each representation. Miss Ella Russell and Mr. Hedmondt divided the honours fairly, and Mr. Alec Marsh, as Wolfram, secured as legitimate, if not as prominent, an artistic success. "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "L'Amico Fritz" were second favourites; and "Carmen," "Faust," and "Trovatore" attracted a good share of friendly patronage. The orchestra and staging (except in the two last-mentioned) were greatly in advance of anything we have seen here for many a long day.

A private choir, organised by Mr. Stephen Richardson, Organist of St. Ninian's Cathedral, Perth, met with a hearty reception at its first Recital last month. The Concert was given in the Cathedral, and the chief numbers in the programme were Gounod's "Gallia" and Mendelssohn's "Hear my Prayer," in the solos of which Miss Grace Richardson was eminently successful.

MUSIC IN GLASGOW.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

THE accounts submitted at the meeting of guarantors to the Choral and Orchestral Concert scheme show a loss on the past season of £752 7s. 5d., necessitating a call of 2s. 10d. per pound. This charge has been cheerfully met, and it only remains to be said that the arrangements in connection with next winter's Concerts are in a wonderfully forward state of completion. Activity also marks the operations of the Scottish Orchestra Company, whose Conductor is, of course, Mr. George Henschel. Mr. Weingartner, of Berlin, had actually signed a contract with the Company, but he ultimately withdrew from it, as he could not get released from his present engagements except at a considerable sacrifice.

The annual Concert by the Glasgow Academy Choir drew to the Queen's Rooms, on the evening of the 5th ult., the customary large and brilliant audience. Mr. John McLaren, the experienced Conductor of this popular organisation, has always something good in store for his Wanderer's Night-song.

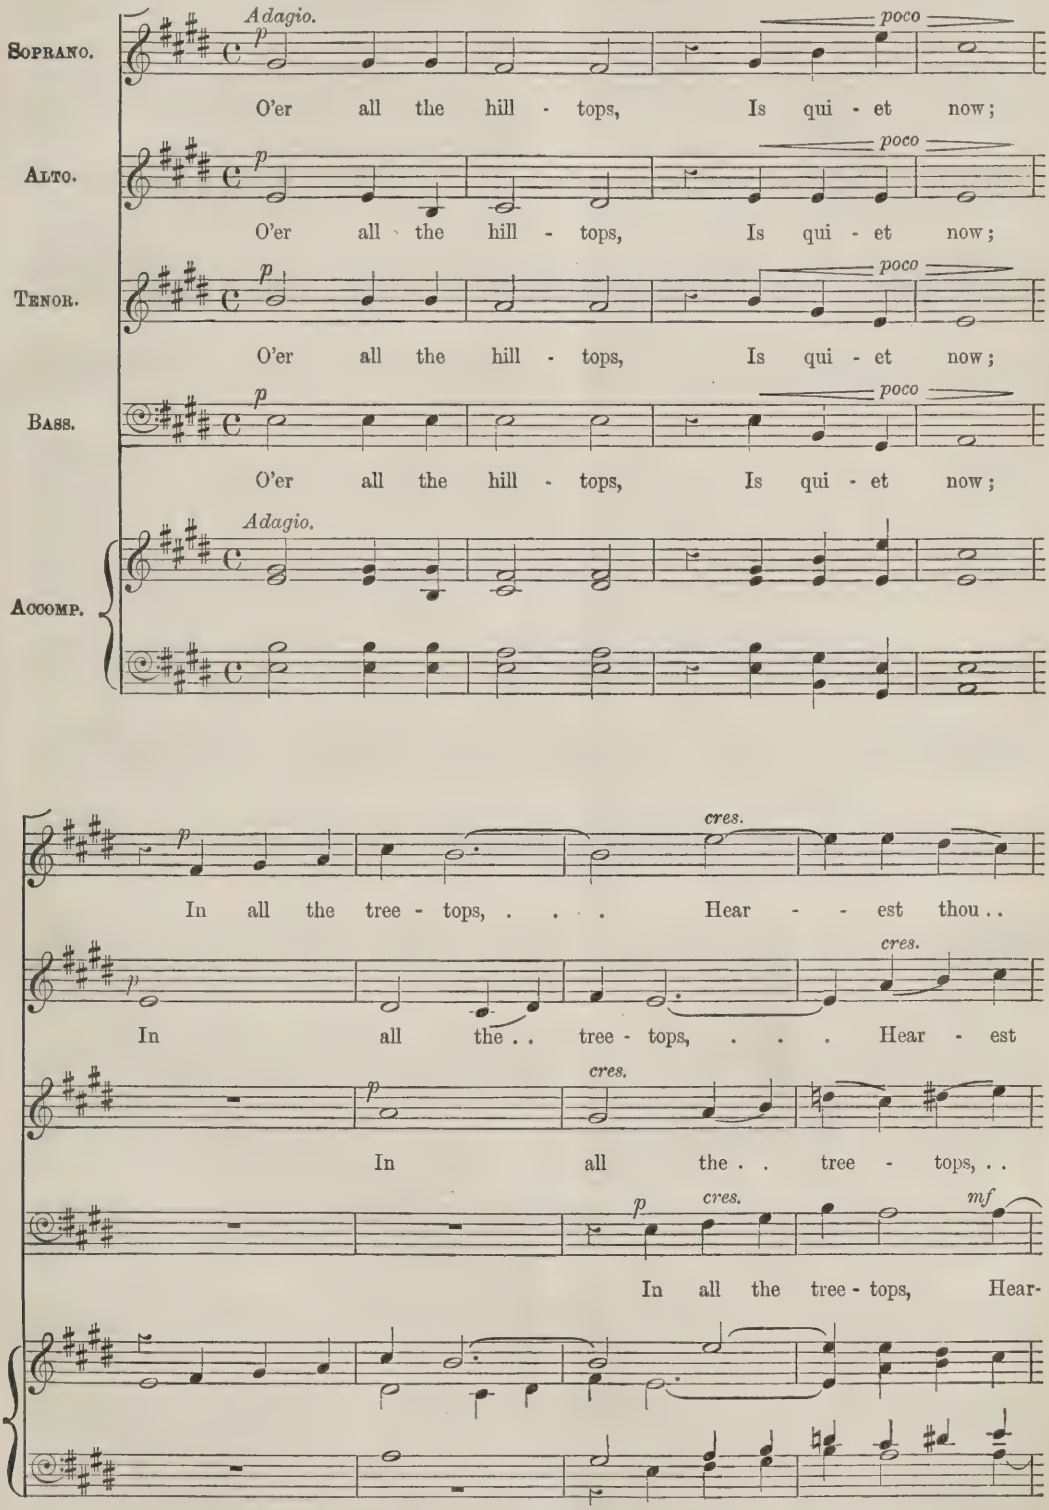
FOUR-PART SONG.

Words by Goethe (translated by Longfellow). Composed by Charles Wood.

London: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO., 1, Berners Street (W.), and 80 & 81, Queen Street (E.C.); also in New York.



Soprano.
Alto.
Tenor.
Bass.
Accomp.
Adagio.
p poco
O'er all the hill - tops, Is qui - et now;
cres.
In all the tree - tops, . . . Hear - - est thou . .
In all the . . tree - tops, . . . Hear - est
In all the . . tree - tops, . .
mf
In all the tree - tops, Hear-

Copyright, 1893, by Novello, Ewer and Co.

mf dim. poco rit. a tempo. pp
Hard - - - ly a breath. O'er all the hill - tops, thou . . . . Hard - ly a breath. O'er all the hill - tops, Hear - est thou . . . Hard - ly a breath. O'er all the hill - tops,
- - est thou Hard - ly a breath. O'er all the hill - tops, mf dim. poco rit. pp a tempo.
cres.
Is qui - et now; In all the tree - tops, ... Hear -
Is qui - et now; In all the . . tree - tops, ...
Is qui - et now; In all the . .
Is qui - et now; In all the mp dim. poco rit. pp
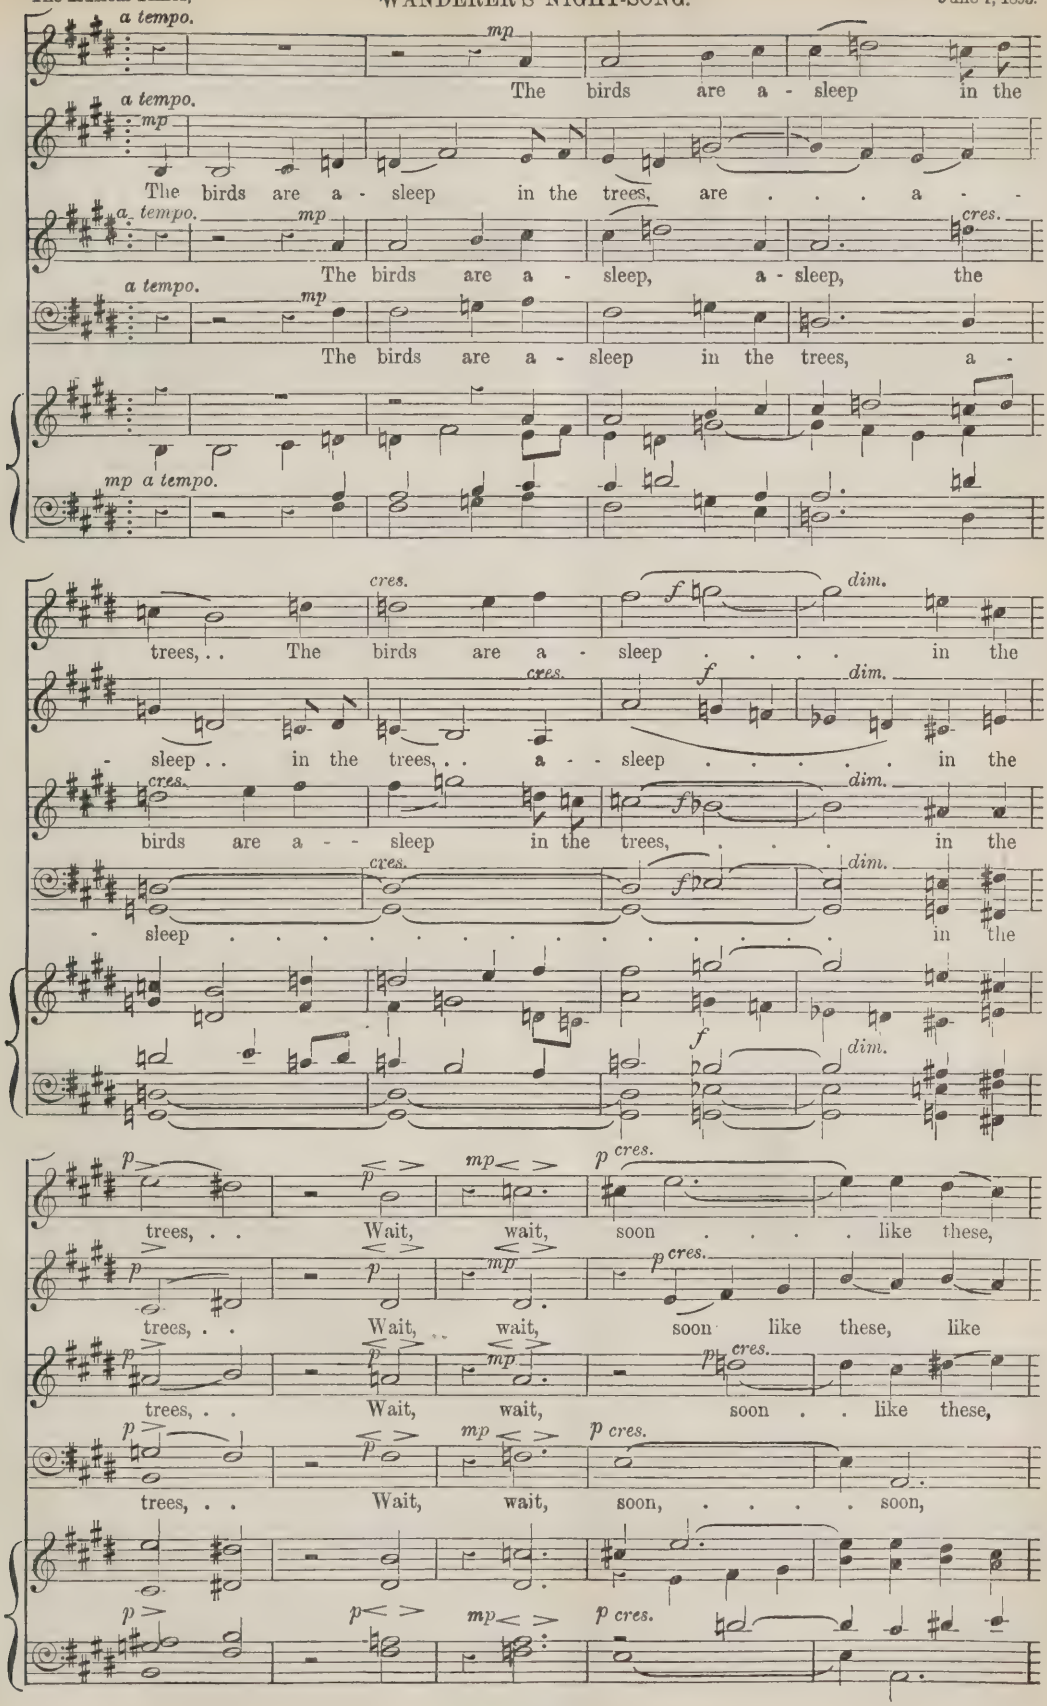
- - est thou . . Hard - - - - ly a breath.
. . . Hear - est thou . . . . . Hard - - ly a breath.
tree - tops, . . Hear - est thou . . . Hard - ly a breath.
tree - tops, Hear - est thou Hard - ly a breath.



a tempo.
mp
The birds are a - sleep in the
The birds are a - sleep in the trees, are . . . a -
The birds are a - sleep, a - sleep, the
The birds are a - sleep in the trees, a - mp a tempo.
cres.
f
dim.
trees, . . The birds are a - sleep . . . . in the
- sleep . . in the trees, . . a - - sleep . . . . . in the birds are a - - sleep in the trees, . . . in the
- sleep . . . . . in the p mp
p cres.
trees, . . Wait, wait, soon . . . . like these, trees, . . Wait, wait, soon like these, like trees, . . Wait, wait, soon . . like these, trees, . . Wait, wait, soon, ... soon,

1st time.
2nd time.
f
pp
Thou too shalt rest. like these, Thou too . . shalt these, Thou . . shalt rest. these, Thou . . . shalt Thou . . too shalt rest. like these, Thou too . . shalt Thou too shalt rest. soon, Thou too . . shalt 1st time.
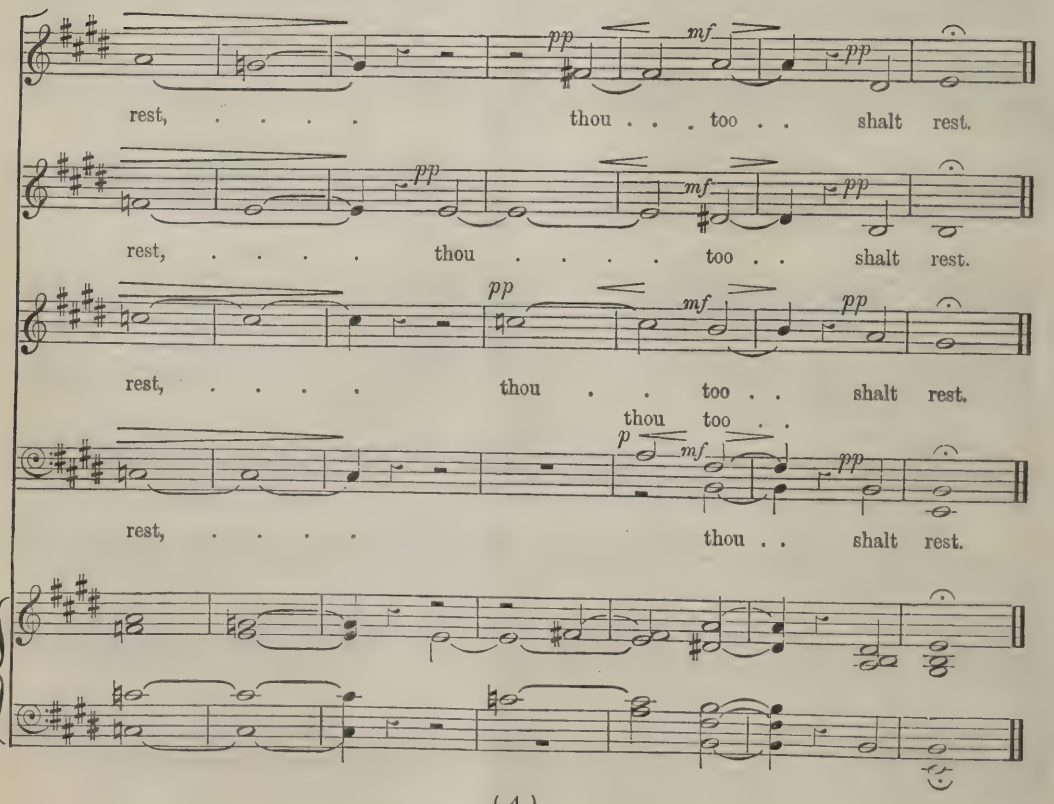
2nd time.



pp
mf
rest, ... thou . . . too . . shalt rest.
rest, ... thou . . . . too . . shalt rest.
rest, ... thou . . too . . shalt rest.
thou too . .
p
rest, ... thou . . shalt rest.

patrons, and on this occasion he introduced Gade's "The Erl-King's Daughter" as the principal work of the evening. The choice was a singularly happy one, inasmuch as the Cantata is well within the powers of the choir, and it may at once be said that to the tuneful and characteristic strains of the Danish composer the choristers and soloists did ample justice. An excellent selection of part-songs, &c., completed the programme, and Mrs. McLaren again showed musicianlike skill in her pianoforte accompaniments. There was another successful gathering at the Athenæum on the 11th ult., when the students and professors at the School of Music gave their fourth Concert for the season. Progress of no mean importance was promptly apparent, and as the programme contained Haydn's "Surprise" Symphony and examples of Boieldieu, Boccherini, and Sullivan, it will be seen that Mr. Allan Macbeth, the Principal of the School, had devised his programme on popular lines.

The spring season of the Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company was brought to a close on the 6th ult., when Goring Thomas's "The Golden Web" attracted only a fairly good house. In Glasgow, as indeed in other cities, the work has, unfortunately, failed to make an impression. On the other hand, the Mascagni nights, when "L'Amico Fritz" and "Rustic Chivalry" were billed for the same evening, filled the Theatre Royal to overflowing. An enormous success also attended the representations of "Tannhäuser," and the reason was not far to seek, for on no previous occasion has opera been mounted in Glasgow on such a scale of splendour. The cast included Misses Ella Russell and Meisslinger, Mr. E. C. Hedmondt, and Mr. Alec Marsh, and the band and chorus were very considerably augmented for the occasion.

MUSIC IN LIVERPOOL.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The closing Concert of the Liverpool Orchestral Society, given on April 29, and therefore too late for notice prior to the present date, claims special attention. The organisation concerned has grown to such large proportions and is so unique in its character and composition as to form a distinct landmark in the musical world of this district. Its seventy or eighty amateur members on the date named—conducted too by an amateur whose enthusiasm is only equalled by his high attainments, Mr. A. E. Rodewald—gave what was termed a Ladies' Concert at the Philharmonic Hall, the title being used as a contradistinction to the four smoking evenings previously enjoyed at the City Hall. The programme comprised MacCunn's "Land of the Mountain and the Flood" Overture, movements from the C major Symphony of Schubert and the "Lenore" Symphony of Raff, as well as a selection from Wagner's "Meistersinger." All these numbers were well played, variety being given to the whole by Mr. Lebon's oboe solos, Mr. Welsing's pianoforte playing, and Miss Palliser's singing.

In Birkenhead, the Rock Ferry Opera Society has been giving Sullivan's "Gondoliers," under Mr. W. R. Pemberton. These amateurs invariably present good performances, everything in the way not only of music, but of scenic effect, and so forth, being well looked after. The occasion in question proved no exception to the general rule, the latest Gilbert-Sullivan effort having been reproduced with the same intelligence and liberality as surrounded the performances of "The Sorcerer," "Patience," "Iolanthe," "The Mikado," and many more works from the same series in previous years.

On the 2nd ult. the Rock Ferry Amateur Musical Society gave the third open Rehearsal of the season in the Highfield Lecture Hall. The principal feature in the programme was Dr. A. C. Mackenzie's cantata "Jason," the solo parts being sung by Madame Florence Fulton, Mr. Wharfe King, and Mr. H. S. Jenkins. Madame Fulton sang very finely and created quite a furore in the scena for Medeia, at the conclusion of which she was heartily applauded and compelled to bow her acknowledgments. Mr. H. S. Jenkins, in the invocation solo and in the duet with Madame Fulton, "Bright was the day," sang with taste and refinement. There are many splendid orchestral passages and spirited choruses in the work, and both orchestra and chorus were very efficient. It is to be hoped "Jason" will be given us again before very long. Mr. W. R. Pemberton conducted, and Mr. H. E. Bleakarn presided at the Mustel organ.

The Waterloo Musical Society closed its season on the 8th ult. with what was termed a "Social," but which was really a highly interesting musical gathering. Gade's "Crusaders" and a goodly number of independent pieces formed the programme. Mr. A. E. Workman conducted. On the same evening the ten district churches of this part of the Lancashire Presbytery held their second Festival of Congregational Music, under the direction of Mr. D. Jenkins. Stainer's "Crucifixion" was given with augmented choir at St. George's Church, Myrtle Street, under Mr. Martin Schneider. The last of a series of musical performances at Hope Street Unitarian Church took place on Sunday, the 7th ult., when Beethoven's "Septuor" was played in the chancel. The annual Choral Festival of Calminster choirs has been held at Conway, and at Rhyl there has been a local Eisteddfod, and elsewhere in Wales, competitions, &c., each of interest in its own locality, took place at Whitsuntide.

An exceptionally good touring company took possession of the Court Theatre for a short engagement on the 22nd ult. and rung the changes in regard to the Gilbert-Sullivan répertoire, half-a-dozen or so of different operas following each other in succession. The mention of the above Theatre, which is the headquarters of the Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company, is a reminder that congratulations as sincere as countless have gone forth to Mr. Henry Bruce, the managing director, on his recovery from a sharp attack of illness.

MUSIC IN SHEFFIELD AND DISTRICT.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The Pitsmoor Musical Society gave the second Concert of the season in the Burngreave Vestry Hall on the 1st ult. Sterndale Bennett's "May Queen" was the work selected for performance, and the Cantata was excellently rendered. The singing of the choruses gave evidence of careful training at the hands of Mr. Renshaw, who conducted. A capable quartet of soloists did full justice to Bennett's melodious numbers. Mr. J. A. Currie accompanied, and Mr. J. H. Parkes led the band, the latter also contributing solos in the second part of the programme.

On the 2nd ult. the Ranmoor Vocal Society performed Cowen's "St. John's Eve," under the direction of Mr. J. C. V. Stacey. The principals were Miss Tasker, Miss Pennington, Mr. Lees, and Mr. Garland. The Society has not been in existence long, but its performances are always characterised by accuracy and finish, and the one alluded to was no exception to the rule.

The fifty-ninth Concert of the Sheffield Amateur Musical Society was given in the Albert Hall on the 12th ult. Under the able direction of Mr. Schollhammer, the Concerts of this, the oldest established musical society in the district, have attained a high degree of excellence, and the most gratifying support is consequently accorded both in subscriptions and attendances. The wise policy adopted by the committee—of performing a successful novelty every season—has resulted in a large working membership and a full subscription list. At the Concert under notice, two short new works were given. Hofman's cantata "Melusina" and Jensen's "Feast of Adonis" respectively opened and closed the programme, a few miscellaneous chamber and vocal pieces completing it. The choral works were admirably rendered. The parts were well balanced, the tone was exceedingly good, and the crisp attack and due attention of the choristers to the shading and phrasing showed the result of careful and frequent rehearsals. Mr. J. W. Phillips was Organist and Mr. J. Peck led the orchestra.

On the 7th ult. Mendelssohn's "As the hart pants" (42nd Psalm) was performed with orchestral accompaniment in St. Barnabas Church, the occasion being the Annual Choral Festival. Miss A. Norledge sang the soprano solos with devotion and expression; Mr. J. A. Rodgers, the Organist and Choirmaster, presided at the organ; and Mr. H. Coward conducted.

The Ashbourne Orchestral Society gave a successful Concert on the 9th ult., playing Mendelssohn's "Son and Stranger" Overture and operatic selections. Mr. W. H. Tutt conducted.

MUSIC IN WILTS AND HANTS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

On Ascension Day the usual selection from "Elijah" was given in Salisbury Cathedral to a very large congregation. The choruses were extremely well sung by the Cathedral choir, augmented by members of the Sarum Choral Society; the tenor and bass solos being entrusted to Messrs. Hayden, Noyce, and Tyack. The rendering of the soprano and contralto solos by boys of the choir was not quite satisfactory. The selection was performed without conductor, Mr. South presiding at the organ with his accustomed ability.

The Southampton Philharmonic Society, under the conductorship of Mr. H. M. Pike, gave a performance of Handel's "Judas Maccabæus," in the Victoria Hall, on the 17th ult. The Society has, since its last appearance, suffered from a diminution of numbers, the result being a loss of balance between the parts. Mr. Pike, however, made the most of his material, and the choruses in the Oratorio went fairly well. The solo vocalists were Miss Atwater, Miss Marie Hooton, Mr. Iver McKay, and Mr. Dan Price, the first-named gentleman creating a marked effect in the air "Sound an alarm." Mr. E. Jones led the band.

An interesting Festival in connection with the Bournemouth Church Choral Union was announced to take place in the Parish Church, Lyndhurst, on the 30th ult., too late for detailed notice here. The music to be performed by the choirs, numbering in all about 400 voices, included Boyce's Te Deum and Jubilate and Ouseley's Anthem "It came even to pass," and the orchestra were to play Scharwenka's "Andante Religioso" and Ouseley's March from "St. Polycarp." The Festival was under the direction of Dr. Lemare.

MUSIC IN AMERICA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

New York, May 5, 1893.

The initial performance of Mr. H. W. Parker's "Hora Novissima," by the Church Choral Society, took place on Wednesday, the 3rd inst., at the Church of the Holy Trinity, and the character of the work, the excellence of the performance, and the representative audience, all combined to render this event one of the most notable of the musical season, and to justify a more extended notice than would otherwise be possible.

This work, expressly composed for the Church Choral Society, has been an interesting theme of talk and writing among musicians of the highest rank in this city and elsewhere. Many of the preliminary conditions were distinctly unfavourable, and this fact serves to emphasize the triumph of Mr. Parker, concerning which there are not two opinions held among the competent judges in every class; choral directors, organists, choirmasters, and critics at once united to render the meed of enthusiastic praise to the young musician, whose brilliant work as composer, and admirable results as director alike proclaimed him one of the most distinguished of our native composers. As has been justly remarked by Mr. Henderson of The New York Times, "the work at once took rank among the best works written on this side of the Atlantic." The weather on the evening of the performance was of the most depressing description, but the unusually large church was full in every part of people representing the musical and artistic culture of the Metropolis. Through the courtesy of Mr. R. H. Warren, the work was directed by Mr. Parker, who won as much praise for his direct, intelligent, and sympathetic control of the forces engaged as for the pre-eminent beauty of the work. It is best to say here that the performance was inadequate, not for want of care or lack of intelligent study, but from the fact that the work imperatively demands greater forces—solo, orchestral, and choral—than are at the disposal of the Church Choral Society. Of the soloists, the success of the evening was achieved by Mrs. Theo. J. Lordt, the accomplished soprano of St. Bartholomew's. Miss Ruth Thompson was hastily engaged at a late date to fill an enforced vacancy. The same remark applies to the tenor, and these singers are necessarily exempt from criticism. As a matter of record it is necessary to state in the interest of truth that Mr. Erickson F. Bushnell (whose improved work during the winter led us to hope for better things) was a distinct disappointment, especially in the noble bass aria (No. 3, "Spe modo vivitur"), with its very striking changes of tempo and imposing sequences, than which nothing more pleasing has been heard this winter in New York. Of the choral work nothing but praise can be written, notably as to the performance of the beautiful and skilfully written Fugue in No. 4 ("Pars mea, Rex Meus"). The chorus, à capella, No. 10, "Urbs Syon unica," with its smooth flowing melody and reverent harmonies in strict ecclesiastical form, was profoundly impressive. And the final chorus, with its massive tone and rich orchestration, brought the work to a most fitting conclusion. The orchestra, under Mr. Parker's firm bâton, did excellent work, duly subordinated to the attendant conditions, and the result as a whole created the liveliest satisfaction: a sense of gratitude to Mr. Warren and the Church Choral Society for giving us such a rare treat, of pleasure and pride in the brilliant young composer from whom we may hope so much, and an earnest wish that we may soon hear the work again, under the condition which it demands—soloists of the highest rank, a trained body of 400 or 500 singers, and a proportionate orchestral force.

At the morning Concert given by Mrs. Heseltine Owen and Miss Sasse, at Princes' Hall, on the 6th ult., the first-named lady appeared in the triple capacity of singer, composer (under the nom de plume of Mary Howell), and accompanist, and in all three with signal success. Her rich, sympathetic, and well trained voice was heard to great advantage in Mozart's "Quando miro" and several songs from her own pen. These show an agreeable melodic vein, and they are conspicuous for refinement and artistic finish. As favourable specimens we may mention a charmingly simple but expressive setting of some pretty lines by Frank Macey, entitled "My little one," and a tender love-song, "Are we not one?" Miss Sasse played some Studies and a Waltz by Chopin with irreproachable technique, and she took part also in some movements from Schumann's D minor Trio and Rubinstein's Violoncello and Pianoforte Sonata in D. To Miss Esther Palliser belongs the credit of introducing, for the first time to a London audience, Nedda's elaborate and highly-effective Ballatella "Hui! Hui!" from Leoncavallo's opera "I Pagliacci," which suited her beautiful voice and dramatic style to perfection. That excellent artist Mr. David Bispham sang two remarkably fine seventeenth century Italian songs, "Come raggio di sol," by Caldara, and "Che fiero costume," by Legrenzi. The former most stately and impressive piece of music was declaimed by Mr. Bispham in quite a masterly manner. Miss Wraith was the violinist, Mr. W. E. Whitehouse the violoncellist, and Miss Ethel Thomson gave a recitation.

On the 9th ult., at Barnard's Inn, Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch gave another of his delightful Concerts of ancient music—the first of a series of three. The programme was selected entirely from the works of Italian composers of the sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries, those represented being Caroso, Picci, Frescobaldi, Carissimi, Corelli, Marcello, Scarlatti, Bononcini, and Vivaldi. There were dance tunes for the lute, pieces for harpsichord, for viol da Gamba, and for string quartet with and without contrabasso and with harpsichord, and vocal pieces, sung very prettily by Miss Florence Monk, and accompanied in one case by the harpsichord, in another by the lute. The last-named instrument was played by Mr. Dolmetsch himself, who also supplied a running commentary of amusing and instructive remarks on the works performed, thereby much increasing the pleasure of his audience. Mr. Fuller-Maitland, who was to have played the harpsichord, being indisposed, his place was filled, at a few hours' notice, and with great efficiency, by Mr. C. H. Kempling, Organist of St. John's, Kennington. His performance of three Sonatas by Scarlatti was quite one of the successes of the evening. Another was Marcello's Sonata for viol da Gamba (No. 5, Op. 2), played with perfect taste by Miss Hélène Dolmetsch. The second Concert, on the 6th inst., will be devoted to French composers of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries—Chambonnières, Marais, Couperin, Rameau, and others; the third will be entirely made up of works by J. S. Bach.

THE Jubilee Festival of the Church of England Sunday School Institute took place on the 13th ult., at the Crystal Palace, and comprised among its principal features a Concert on the Handel Orchestra by 5,000 voices, drawn from the Church Sunday School Choir and Church Choral Unions. About a hundred schools were represented, and the programme, as usual, comprised sacred and secular pieces, each of which was rendered with great heartiness and generally with a fair amount of attention to light and shade, the Conductors doing their best to secure the latter result. The choruses from "St. Paul," "Now we are ambassadors" and "How lovely are the messengers," were very creditably sung; and among the other worthily executed pieces in this section were the "Credo" from Haydn's First Mass, "They shall hunger no more" (Gaul's "The Holy City"), "Sing to Jehovah" (Graun's "Der Tod Jesu"), and Dr. William Hayes's "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem." The youthful vocalists still further warmed to their work in the second part, and gave with notable effect H. A. Donald's "A sailor's life is bold and free," G. Merritt's "Hurrah for the fields and flowers," and a batch of old English songs. Mr. W. Roston Bourke was Honorary Conductor for the Church Choral Union and Mr. George Hare for the Sunday School Choir, with Mr. H. A. McLaren as Assistant Conductor; whilst Mr. F. W. Belchamber officiated as Organist.

WE have on previous occasions commented on the great improvement in the singing of the members of the Catford Choral Society since Mr. Alfred Furse has occupied the post of Hon. Conductor. The performance of "Elijah," which they gave at St. James's Hall, Forest Hill, on April 25, went still farther to prove that they are entitled to be considered one of the best trained and most efficient body of singers to be found in the suburbs. For firmness of attack, volume of tone, intonation, and finish and intelligence of interpretation generally, they could not easily have been surpassed; and their performance redounds greatly to the credit of their indefatigable and enthusiastic Conductor. Of the soloists, Miss Kate Cove, Miss Meredith Elliott, and Mr. David Hughes were excellent; but Mr. Harper Kearton sang the tenor music in a very lackadaisical manner. Mrs. Toft lent valuable and thoroughly competent aid in the trio "Lift thine eyes," which had to be repeated; Miss Ethel M. Brissenden and Mr. A. Davidson Arnott were the accompanists on the pianoforte and harmonium respectively, and a small string band greatly added to the effect of a fine performance. We hope that with such a competent and intelligent choir at his disposal Mr. Furse will, ere long, consider himself justified in giving a hearing to one or the other of the fine oratorios by our living British masters.

AT the last two Concerts of the Wind Instrument Chamber Music Society for the season, held at St. James's Hall, there was much to interest the subscribers. The first programme began with Brahms's Trio (Op. 114), exceedingly well played by Messrs. Draper, Hann, and Hawley. Other pieces evoking some curiosity were a Sonata for clarinet and pianoforte, by Theodor Gouvy, and two movements (played by Mr. Griffith) from a Flute Concerto by Ferdinand Langer. Mr. Arthur Thompson as vocalist selected a couple of morceaux by Scarlatti. At the final Concert a large number of executants appeared, the works performed comprising a Septet by Fritz Steinbach for oboe, clarinet, horn, strings, and pianoforte; E. Lalo's Aubade for five wind and five stringed instruments; and Onslow's Nonet (Op. 77). Though occasionally reminiscent in character the Septet exhibits a constructive talent that will secure notice for further works by Steinbach that may be submitted in the Metropolis. This composition, like the two others mentioned, was excellently given, and the instrumental pieces were diversified by songs from Mr. Arthur Barlow.

AT Portman Rooms, on the 2nd ult., took place the first Concert of Miss Trask's Choir. Few ladies have a choir, fewer a good one, and fewest one which they can control; Miss Trask is a notable exception. She conducts with much skill a compact and well-balanced body of singers, whose ready attack, unanimity of expression, purity of intonation, and steady tone give ample evidence of the confidence established between Choir and Conductor. The programme was an ambitious one, but under the circumstances ambition was justifiable. It consisted of Gluck's "Orpheus" (arranged for concert use by L. N. Parker) and Spohr's "God, Thou art great," with Schumann's "Phantasiestücke" for pianoforte, violin, and violoncello thrown in as an entr'acte. This last served to show that Miss Trask is also an excellent pianist. Her associates were Miss Eldina Bligh (pupil of Joachim) and Mr. W. E. Whitehouse. The solo parts in Spohr's work were taken by Miss Ethel Cain, Miss Cicely R. Trask, Mr. Turner, and Mr. Vincent; those in Gluck's by Miss Elsie Holme, Miss M. Robinson, and Miss Ethel Cain.

ON the 13th ult., at Portman Rooms, the pupils of Miss C. A. Brousil, assisted by their teacher and Mr. J. H. Bonawitz, and other artists, gave a Concert, consisting chiefly of solo and concerted music for strings. A number of ladies played, with an ensemble that did them great credit, David's Etude in G minor, Fauconier's "Resignation," the Finale of Haydn's "Farewell" Symphony, the candle effects of which were carried out in scrupulous accordance with the "composer's intention," and the very pretty Ballet music from Mr. Bonawitz's opera "Ostrolenka." Violin solos were also contributed by two ladies in a manner that revealed excellence of training and intelligence in no small degree, and songs were sung by Mrs. Bartholomew and Mr. Conway Dixon. The lady sang with much taste and charm; the gentleman as though he were assisting at a funeral—which was a pity, as he has an excellent voice. Mr. Bonawitz conducted the Symphony and presided at the pianoforte in most of the other numbers. The audience was generous in encouragement, and recalled Miss Brousil at the close of the CONCERT.

THE Highbury Philharmonic Society concluded a most successful season, on the 8th ult., by a performance of Berlioz's "Faust," which was admittedly one of the best ever given by the Society. The orchestra, consisting mainly of amateurs, dealt most successfully with the difficulties of Berlioz's score, and the choir sang with a precision and attention to nuance worthy of the highest praise. The soloists were Mrs. Helen Trust, Mr. Edward Lloyd, Mr. Andrew Black, and Mr. Kempton. The lady was apparently overweighted—at any rate, some of her usual charm was lacking; but Mr. Lloyd made his usual success in the music of Faust, and Mr. Andrew Black's Mephistopheles was, perhaps, the finest performance yet given of the part by this constantly improving artist. Mr. Kempton's Brander was praiseworthy, and would have been more so had his words been as distinctly pronounced as those of his colleagues. There was a crowded room, and at the close of the Concert Mr. Betjemann, the Conductor, received a richly deserved ovation from audience and performers alike.

A VERY successful Concert was given on the 1st ult., at the Drill Hall, Woolwich, in aid of St. Peter's Restoration Fund, when the Concert-givers were fortunate in securing the valuable assistance of Mr. Santley. Appropriately to the occasion, Bennett's "May Queen" was performed, the solo parts being sung by Madame Agnes Larkcom, Miss Flora Edwards, Mr. Bernard Lane, and Mr. Santley, whose rendering of the solo "'Tis jolly to hunt" met with great applause. The choruses were excellently sung, under the direction of Mr. Whornes, but the orchestra was only fairly efficient. Apart from Mr. Santley's solos in the second part, which, it need hardly be said, aroused much enthusiasm, the chief feature was the remarkable violin playing of Miss Beatrice Langley. It is but justice to say that the young lady showed most exceptional skill, and both in tone and technique gave promise of a brilliant future.

MR. H. WALFORD DAVIES, on the 6th ult., at the second of three Saturday Afternoon Recitals of Chamber Music at the Drill Hall, Hampstead, introduced, with the assistance of Mr. Hubert Hunt, a Sonata for violin and pianoforte in A of his own composition. It is a neatly written work showing sound musicianship, together with the power of holding the attention of the listener from the opening Allegro semplice, through the Largo solennelle and the Scherzo, to the Allegro molto which forms a spirited termination. The Sonata was excellently rendered and warmly applauded. Mr. Davies's executive skill was subsequently manifested in Beethoven's Pianoforte Sonata in D (Op. 10) and that of Mr. Hunt in the Adagio and Fuga in G minor, from Bach's first Violin Sonata. Mr. Paul Ludwig contributed an Andante by Molique for violoncello, and the three players ended an agreeable programme with Beethoven's Trio in G (Op. 1, No. 2). Midway in the proceedings Mr. Magrath sang, with the requisite sentiment, three Irish folk-songs—namely, "The Lament," "Awake, awake, Fianna," and "The Foggy Dew."

THERE is no reason why Operatic Concerts should not be made interesting and even instructive, but the programmes in that case must not consist of scraps from all kinds of works mingled together without order or method. Entire scenes or acts, especially from operas not often heard on the regular stage, might be placed side by side with excerpts from others of a popular nature, and these, interpreted by first-rate artists, would form an enjoyable entertainment. It is hoped that something of this sort will be done during the current series given by Sir Augustus Harris at St. James's Hall, but the first Concert, on the 18th ult., afforded an illustration of the way how not to do it. Apologies were made for several of the artists, and although one of them, Madame Calvé, eventually arrived, she did not sing the pieces set down for her. The printed programme was more or less a delusion and a snare, and the sparse audience did not seem too well pleased with their entertainment. Sir Augustus Harris has carried out several valuable reforms; he will now do well to reform the Operatic Concert.

THE Anglo-German School of Music, West Norwood, gave a most successful Students' Concert on the 2nd ult., in the Lecture Hall, Streatham Hill. The programme included some very creditable compositions by pupils. Two songs by Miss Mary Watt, sung in good style by Miss Ella Flower, were enthusiastically received, and another song by the same composer was given as an encore. Miss Lottie Timmins played a short pianoforte solo of her own, and was also heard to advantage in solos by Chopin and Godard. A promising young lady, Miss Eileen McDonnell, was much applauded for her rendering of W. Ken Have's "Allegro Brillant" for violin. Further successful features of the Concert were Rossini's "La Carita" and Sterndale Bennett's "With a laugh as we go round," from the "May Queen," admirably sung by a choir of ladies conducted by Mr. Lawrence Fryer, and two orchestral pieces given by a small band conducted by Mr. G. J. Webb.

THE Post Office Musical Society's Concert, on April 28, at St. James's Hall, brought to public performance a cantata entitled "The Bridal Day," composed by Mr. Leonard Barnes, who studied under the late Sir G. A. Macfarren. An unassuming pastoral story, penned by Mr. Frederick B. Needham, is set forth in graceful and engaging strains, the vocal portion embracing much smooth melody, whilst the instrumentation is telling without being so elaborate as to place the work beyond the reach of the majority of amateur associations. It was effectively rendered by a band and chorus of over 300, under the careful conductorship of Mr. Sydney Beckley; and in the solo pieces Miss Annie Lawrie, Miss Clara Butt, and Mr. Bantock Pierpoint specially distinguished themselves. The satisfaction of the audience with the work was demonstrated by a couple of encores and by the composer being summoned at the close. The miscellaneous second part included Bridge's impressive setting of "Crossing the Bar," which was well received.

MR. CHARLES PHILLIPS'S Concert at Steinway Hall, on the 5th ult., was chiefly remarkable for its vocal novelties, including a Japanese Love Song, arranged by Mr. Paul Bevan, and a set of five Spanish Songs treated as quartets, by Mr. William Wallace. The first-named, "Yosakoi," is a taking piece, the refinement of which is not restricted to the words, and it was ably rendered by Mr. Phillips, a bass of marked ability. The Spanish Songs are respectively entitled "Mi Nino," "Serenada" (in which the tenor is conspicuous), "Drinking Song" (a vigorous air for bass and chorus), "Lamentation" (a telling contrast to its predecessors), and "The Fête" (replete with unaffected gaiety). The varying spirit of these compositions was accurately caught by Mrs. Helen Trust, Miss Grace Damian, Mr. Braxton Smith, and Mr. Phillips, and the Finale was encored. Of the solo essays, to which Miss Marie Brema also contributed, Mrs. Helen Trust's delivery of Boyce's "Tell me, shepherd," and the ancient "Sweet Robin" was particularly commendable.

AN attractive musical service was held in All Saints' Church, Rosendale Road, West Dulwich, on the 18th ult., when a very creditable rendering of Mendelssohn's 42nd Psalm was given, under the bâton of the Hon. Precentor, Mr. Cecil B. Palmer. The solos, quartet, and choruses might have been better; but, everything considered, one does not often hear a finer church performance in suburban neighbourhoods. A complete orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. T. E. Gatehouse, in addition to playing the accompaniments to the Psalm, performed Schubert's "Ave Maria," Gounod's "Marche Solennelle," Massenet's "Le Dernier Sommeil de la Vierge," and the March from Costa's "Eli," in which they were assisted by Captain Hullett at the organ. The church, which was only completed last year, is a splendid edifice, and appears, in its acoustical properties, to be specially adapted for these excellent musical services instituted by the Rev. Mr. Beeby, who is an enthusiastic supporter of good music.

THE Great Hall of Merchant Taylors' School was crowded to the doors on the evening of the 2nd ult., the occasion of the annual Concert of the School Choral Society. The pièce de resistance was Birch's pastoral operetta "The Merrie Men of Sherwood Forest," which was given with much spirit. The music allotted to Maid Marian was sung with great clearness and precision by P. St. P. Bunbury, and that of Robin Hood fell to Mr. F. Given-Wilson. The other parts were efficiently filled by Mr. H. Russell, Mr. S. Pollard, Mr. G. H. Wells, and Mr. J. Clapp. Later in the evening Mr. W. H. Johnson and Mr. C. R. Selfe sang; a violin solo was excellently given by Mr. F. W. Ries, Mr. B. L. Johnstone performed on the violoncello, and Mr. A. H. Solomon played a piece by Chopin on the pianoforte. Mr. E. G. Croager was at the pianoforte, and Mr. D. Bradfield at the harmonium. Mr. Edmund Rogers conducted, and to his efforts was greatly due the success of the evening.

MADAME BERTHE MARX, who has hitherto been associated with Mr. Sarasate in his Concerts of violin and pianoforte music, gave the first of a series of performances on her own account on the 13th ult. The programme was virtually a Pianoforte Recital with orchestra, and one of an arduous nature. Somewhat unwisely, the agreeable French pianist played three Concertos in succession—namely, that of Saint-Säens in C minor (No. 4), a very effective work, but irregular in form, and perhaps better described as a Symphonic Poem; Schumann's solitary work of this nature, and Mendelssohn's in G minor. Throughout, the efforts of Madame Marx were characterised by a pearly touch and beautifully finished manipulation generally. To the Concertos was added Liszt's familiar Hungarian Fantasia, and Sir William Cusins's orchestra, which was efficient throughout the Concert, gave a good performance of Mozart's Overture to "The Magic Flute."

A VERY enjoyable Concert was given at Gresham Hall, Brixton, on the 3rd ult., by Miss Winifred Williams, a pupil of Mr. Henry Gadsby at the Guildhall School. She was associated with Mr. Arthur Payne and Mr. E. Woolhouse in an excellent performance of a Trio by Hummel, and also played, with much brilliancy and taste, the G minor Ballade of Chopin and other pieces. The excellent violin playing of Mr. Payne met with hearty acknowledgment; and much gratification was afforded to the large and appreciative audience by the vocal pieces contributed by Miss Annie Swinfen, Madame A. Buckland, Mr. H. Yates, Mr. W. Ives, Mr. James Budd, and the Luscinian Glee Club. Mr. G. S. Minson accompanied with skill and tact.

THE St. George's Glee Union gave its 291st Concert on the 5th ult., the first part consisting of songs by Misses Maud Bond and Ada Tomlinson and Messrs. S. G. Millen and Fred. Bevan; a violin solo by Miss Ada Nicholson, very ably accompanied by Miss E. Percival; pianoforte solos by Mr. C. F. Reddie, who won hearty applause by his powerful rendering of Liszt's arrangement of Schubert's "Erl-King"; and part-songs by the choir, which scored a vociferous encore for "Thor's War Song." Sir Sterndale Bennett's "May Queen" occupied the second part of the programme, the above-named vocalists being responsible for the solos. Miss Bond was a charming May Queen and Mr. Bevan a fine, robust, rollicking Robin Hood. The rendering of the choruses gave evidence of the care which the Conductor, Mr. J. Monday, had bestowed on the work. Mr. Turle Lee presided at the pianoforte and Mr. Reddie at the harmonium.

THE second season of the Hornsey and Crouch End Orchestral Society concluded on April 24, with a brilliant Concert and an excellent programme. The chief pieces were Schubert's Overture to "Rosamunde" and Beethoven's Symphony (No. 1) in C, in both of which the orchestra showed careful training and marked intelligence. The full power of the orchestra, numbering about sixty performers, was also heard to advantage in Meyerbeer's "Coronation" March and the Overture to "Tancredi." Mr. Réné Payne, who led, was recalled for his admirable rendering of Wieniawski's Concerto in D (No. 2). The solo vocalists were Mr. Alexander Tucker, who in sonorous tones sang Mozart's air "Qui Sdegno," and Miss Emily Davies, who gave artistic renderings of "Dove Sono" and the "Ave Maria" arrangement of the Intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana." Mr. Henry J. Baker, Organist of the Parish Church, Hornsey, conducted, as usual.

THE second Concert of the Royal Artillery Band, at St. James's Hall, on April 28, was no less successful than the first, a week previously. The most interesting piece in the programme was a Symphony, presumably new, by the talented Conductor, Cavaliere Zavertal. The work, which is in D minor, did not involve any strained attention on the part of its hearers, being throughout clearly written, genial, and unpretending. The subjects are all tuneful and are not subjected to any complex treatment. Admirably played, the Symphony was warmly applauded by the crowded audience. The band likewise sustained its reputation in the remainder of the programme, which included Saint-Säens's weird Danse Macabre, one of Svendsen's Norwegian Rhapsodies, and the rarely-played Overture to Gomez's Opera "Il Guarany."

MR. SIMONETTI'S Violin Recital, postponed from the previous Wednesday, took place on Saturday afternoon, April 29. The programme opened with the Concert-giver's second Sonata in C, for pianoforte and violin, in which he was associated with Madame Frickenhaus. The work cannot be regarded as very original or impressive, but it is on the whole fairly pleasing. The composer, however, is entitled to higher commendation for his smaller pieces, one of which pleased so much that it was asked for a second time. Mr. Simonetti's principal solo was Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, which he rendered with refinement if not with power, the composer's pianoforte accompaniment being played by Mr. Henry Bird. Songs were contributed by Miss Liza Lehmann and Mr. Eugène Oudin.

MR. E. H. THORNE'S Concert at Princes' Hall, on the 13th ult., was the reverse of common-place. Between Bach's Concerto in C major for two pianofortes, with string accompaniment, and Beethoven's grand Trio in B flat major for pianoforte, violin, and violoncello (Op. 97), were compositions by Mendelssohn, Brahms, Chopin, Algernon Ashton, and the Concert-giver. From the last-named came a pleasing Cavatina for violin and pianoforte (played by Mr. Hubert Hunt and Miss Beatrice Thorne), with grateful work for both instruments, and a tasteful Romance for violoncello and pianoforte (entrusted to Signor Pezze and Mr. Herbert Thorne). Mr. Ashton's name was bracketed with his spirited Sonata in D major for pianoforte and violin (Op. 3), with Messrs. E. H. Thorne and Hubert Hunt as conscientious executants.

THE programme of Miss Dora Bright's third and last Chamber Concert, given at Princes' Hall, on April 26, consisted entirely of works by British composers. Among these were a new Quartet for pianoforte and strings by Miss Bright herself, and a new Suite for pianoforte alone by Erskine Allon. Both works were well received, and, being vigorous, melodious, and interesting, thoroughly deserved the applause which was so liberally bestowed on them. The programme also included Dr. A. C. Mackenzie's fine Quartet for pianoforte and strings, E. German's Suite for the flute, perfectly played by Mr. Frederic Griffith, and Old English songs sung with much taste and charm by Miss Clara Samuell. The stringed instruments were respectively in the hands of Messrs. Willy Hess, E. Kreuz, and Whitehouse.

ON April 26 an excellent performance of Sir Arthur Sullivan's "Light of the World" was given at Union Chapel, Islington, with organ accompaniment. The members of the Psalmody Class had evidently bestowed much pains upon the preparation of the choruses, which were, upon the whole, well sung, under the careful conductorship of Mr. R. Williamson. The soloists were Miss Ada Patterson, Miss Rose Dafforne, Mr. Charles Chilley, and Mr. Lucas Williams, all of whom sang the work for the first time and did exceedingly well; Miss Dafforne, who replaced Miss Eleanor Rees (absent through illness) at a few hours' notice, deserving special praise for her admirable rendering of the contralto solos. Mr. Fountain Meen presided at the organ.

A SHORT course of three Lectures on "Wagner and Verdi" was given at Toynbee Hall, on April 24 and two following Mondays, by Mr. E. W. Naylor. The subject attracted excellent audiences, who appeared to take as much interest in recent opera as they did in Piccini and Gluck on a former occasion. The lecturer gave special attention to Wagner's "Parsifal," as representing the master at his latest development, particularly with regard to the systematic use of the Leitmotif. Verdi's late wonderful alteration in style was shown from "Aïda" and "Otello," and attention was drawn to the fact that Verdi has not adopted the Leitmotif, in the Wagnerian sense, and that he remains truly "Italian," although modified by the German influences.

WE have received "The Year Book of Australia," which deals with politics, commerce, finance, education, and other matters, including music. Promising accounts are given of Miss Bessie Doyle, a young Australian violinist, now nineteen years of age; and there is a reference to Mr. Marshall Hall, the Professor of Music at the University of Melbourne, by no means enthusiastic; but to judge of its value, one would have to know something about its author. M. A. Wiegand, the Belgian organist, appears to have given great satisfaction by his playing; but, from private sources, we learn that some of the Sydney organists are rather aggrieved at the practical difficulties which stand in the way of their use of the Town Hall organ.

MR. HANS WESSELY'S Orchestral Concert took place on the 25th ult., at St. James's Hall, too late for an extended notice in our present issue. Suffice that the clever violinist was in his best form, and played the Concertos of Brahms and Mendelssohn with an intensity of expression and brilliancy of execution which made his renderings of exceptional merit and most enjoyable. Mr. Isidor Cohn was the solo pianist in Beethoven's Concerto in E flat, and Miss Alice Schidrowitz sang several songs with her usual refinement and charm. An efficient orchestra, conducted by Dr. A. C. Mackenzie, opened the Concert with an admirable performance of the Overture to "Le Nozze di Figaro."

A LONG selection from Mendelssohn's "Elijah" was given at the Royal Military (Guards) Chapel, St. James's Park, on Sunday evening, the 14th ult., under the direction of Mr. Richard Lemaire, the Precentor of the Chapel. There was a complete orchestra, composed of many of the leading instrumentalists in London. The solos were rendered by members of the Chapel choir and of St. Paul's Cathedral. The choruses were heard to particular advantage in the beautiful Chapel, the acoustic properties of which are perfect. There was a crowded congregation.

MR. SINCLAIR DUNN gave his annual Concert on April 26, at the Cavendish Rooms, when he was assisted by Miss Susetta Fenn, Madame San Carolo, Mr. Joseph Shaw, and Mr. Wandesforde; Miss Ella Armstrong and Miss Ethel Frogley (violin), and Mr. Malcolm Douglas (pianoforte). Mr. Dunn's efforts were very favourably received, especially in Beethoven's "Adelaide," which he sang with much charm of voice and style; he was warmly encored. Miss Susetta Fenn was also heard to great advantage in "It was a dream" and "Cherry ripe." Variety was imparted to the programme by the humorous recitations given by Mr. Charles Fry.

CONSIDERABLE promise as a pianist was displayed by Miss Annie Burghes at her Concert in the Princes' Hall, on the 11th ult. Her principal solo was Beethoven's "Waldstein" Sonata, which she played with intelligence, though her efforts were somewhat marred by nervousness. She was heard to more advantage in two little pieces by Searelle and Moszkowski, which came later in the programme, and she also took part with Mr. Willy Hess and Mr. W. H. Squire in an excellent performance of Schubert's Trio in B flat (Op. 99). Both the artists last-named played solos and additional attractiveness was given to the Concert by the vocal contributions of Mr. and Mrs. Henschel.

MR. CECIL J. SHARP began, on the 18th ult., at his Studio, 5, Langham Chambers, a series of Lectures on Wagner and his works. Mr. Sharp has evidently studied his subject with the zeal of an enthusiast, and his discourses promise to be of much interest and educational value. The first Lecture chiefly consisted of a comprehensive resumé of the master's life and artistic principles. It is proposed in subsequent papers to give analytical descriptions of Wagner's works and the circumstances which led to and influenced their composition.

AN excellent Concert of Chamber Music was given by Miss Emily Shinner (Mrs. F. Liddell), at the Princes' Hall, on the 1st ult., when there was a large audience. The talented violinist was associated with Mr. Leonard Borwick in Brahms's concise and genial Sonata in A (Op. 100), the slow movement in which is one of the composer's most inspired efforts. The performance was admirable, and both artists were likewise successful in their solos. Songs by Schubert, Schumann, and Brahms were rendered in her customary artistic manner by Miss Fillunger.

THE third and last of the London Chamber Concerts took place at the Princes' Hall, on the 11th ult., with an interesting programme. One of the pieces was an Octet in B flat by Reinecke (Op. 216), a genial, melodious, and of course musicianly work; and another was a Nonet in F minor by Mr. E. Silas, well written but, on the whole, rather dry. Brahms's fine Trio for pianoforte, violin, and horn in E flat (Op. 40) was splendidly played by Messrs. Leonard Borwick, Gibson, and Borsdorf. Mrs. Hutchinson was the vocalist.

THE Putney School of Music Orchestral and Choral Society gave a performance of Romberg's "The Lay of the Bell" at its second Concert, under the conductorship of Mr. Frank Barnard, on the 9th ult. The first part was miscellaneous, in which Miss Kate Barnard proved her skill as a pianist in Liszt's "Ungarische Fantasie," with full orchestral accompaniment. The vocalists were Miss Bessie Spells, Mr. Harper Kearton, and Mr. T. Powley. The whole of the programme was very successfully rendered.

ON Whit Sunday, after the Evening Service, a selection from "St. Paul" was sung at St. Mary's, Kilburn, by the choir. The solos were sung by Mr. Ben Grove and Mr. Edwin Houghton, who has recently been appointed to the church. The choruses were rendered with much precision without a conductor, and the accompaniment on the new organ was remarkable for orchestral effect. This instrument now ranks amongst the finest in the country, having been recently rebuilt by Messrs. Bishop and Son. The organist and director of the choir is Mr. Edgar Pettman.

A PLEASANT Concert, in aid of the Matthew's Girls' Club, Westminster, was given at Steinway Hall, on the 2nd ult., by Miss Kathleen Walton, who, in songs by Handel, Grieg, Kjerulf, Rossi, Franz, and others, gave evidence of cultivated taste, refinement, and feeling. She was assisted in the performance of a varied programme by Miss Agnes Wilson, an excellent contralto; Miss Beatrice Gough, Mr. John Thomas, Mr. Lawrence Kellie, Mr. Trefelyn David, Miss Nora Hastings, and Miss Winnie Watkis, a child pianist, aged 9.

THE Kyrle Choir, under the direction of Mr. F. A. W. Docker, gave a performance of "The Messiah," on April 26, at St. Saviour's Church, Fitzroy Square. The soloists were Miss Ada Loaring, Miss Ellen Cooper, Mr. Herbert Clinch, and Mr. Arthur Wills. A performance of the "Creation" was given by the Choir, on the 3rd ult., in Holy Trinity Church, Hoxton, the soloists being Mrs. Edwards, Mr. Herbert Clinch, and Mr. James Blackney. Dr. E. H. Turpin accompanied on the organ.

ON Sunday afternoon, April 30, the Oratorio choir of St. John's, Waterloo Road, gave a performance of Sir Julius Benedict's Oratorio "St. Peter." The beautiful solos with which the work abounds were admirably rendered by Miss G. Izard, Miss Florence Hoare, Mr. Gilbert Denis, and Mr. Frederick Winton. An unfortunate accident with the organ brought the performance to a premature close. Mr. Henry J. B. Dart presided at the organ, and Mr. S. S. Martyn conducted.

ON April 26, at Grand Lodge, Freemasons' Hall the Earl of Mount-Edgcumbe, acting for the Prince of Wales, conferred on Mr. de Manby Sergison the appointment of Grand Organist of England. After the banquet a Concert was given in the Temple by Bro. E. Cutler, Q.C., the retiring Grand Organist. Among former holders of the office may be named Samuel Wesley, Sir G. Smart, Sir M. Costa, and Sir Arthur Sullivan. Mr. Sergison is the fifteenth.

A CONCERT was given at Steinway Hall, on the 2nd ult., by Miss Lily Heale, who was assisted by Miss Carlotta Elliot, Mr. Hirwen Jones, Mr. Charles Copland, the Fraser Quintet, Mr. John Thomas (harp), and Mr. D. J. Thomas (organ). The concert-giver sang "In questa tomba," "Genevieve" (S. Adams), and a Welsh song arranged by and accompanied on the harp by Mr. John Thomas; he was rewarded with encores for each song.

AT the Dedication Festival at St. Mary Newington, on the 4th ult., under the direction of the author, selections from Dr. Bradford's Oratorio of "Judith" were given by a large choir, with Master Sinclair, Mr. Lawrence Fryer, and Mr. H. Head as principal soloists. Dr. E. H. Turpin presided at the organ and Miss Mary Chatterton played the harp accompaniments.

A LARGE audience attended the Violin Recital given by Mr. Nachèz, assisted by Mr. Lawrence Kellie, at St. James's Hall, on the 6th ult. The principal solo for violin was Mendelssohn's Concerto, which was given with the composer's pianoforte accompaniment, but Mr. Nachèz was more successful in Bazzini's "Scherzo Fantastique" and Paganini's "Moto Perpetuum."

A MISCELLANEOUS Concert was given by Miss Nellie Kauffmann at St. James's Hall, on the 11th ult. With careful study Miss Kauffmann may become a competent pianist, but at present she must be regarded as in a state of pupillage. Her principal solos were a Prelude and Fugue of Bach and Beethoven's "Moonlight" Sonata. There was nothing else in the programme to call for remark.

AT Steinway Hall, on the 8th ult., Mr. Charles Loder gave his annual Concert, with the assistance of Miss Teresa Blamy, Madame Schultzer, Madame Denza, Messrs. Gilbert Denis, Harry Williams, and George Taylor. Special features of the Concert were the playing of Miss Alice M. Liebmann and Signor Tito Mattei. Signor L. Denza accompanied with his usual ability.

A CONCERT was given, on the 9th ult., at Portman Rooms, by Mr. George Gear, assisted by Madame Belle Cole, Misses José Sherrington, E. Ruthven, H. Killick, and Amy Hickling; and Messrs. H. Sims Reeves, Oberthür, David Wilson, W. Ganz, Romili, and A. Allen. Mr. Gear appeared as vocalist and solo pianist, winning much applause in both capacities.

MR. BURNHAM HORNER read a paper on the "Life and work of Dr. Arne" at the Sette of Odd Volumes, on the 5th ult. Dr. A. C. Mackenzie and Dr. C. Harford Lloyd were present, and the former spoke in terms of high praise concerning the contents of the paper; it is to be included amongst the privately printed opuscula of the Society.

AT the Royal Academy of Music, on the 13th ult., the Charles Mortimer Prize for a composition for violin and pianoforte was awarded to Frank Idle. The examiners, Messrs. M. Birket Foster and Edward German, highly commended Marie Mildred Ames. There were fourteen entries.

MR. HENRY CROSS, of St. Andrew's, Wells Street, and Westminster Abbey choirs, was installed into the Chair of the Orpheus Chapter Rose Croix at the Masonic Hall, Golden Square, on the 17th ult., by Bro. Edwin Moss.

REVIEWS.

Essays and Addresses. By the Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, M.P. [Edinburgh: David Douglas.]

COMMENT on those chapters of Mr. Balfour's interesting volume which deal with purely literary, political, and speculative questions would be obviously out of place in these columns. But one of the essays—the longest of the whole collection—is devoted to the life and works of Handel, and it is to this that we would call the attention of such of our readers as have not fallen a prey to the modern heresy of sneering down the great Saxon master. Mr. Balfour in his preface describes the essay as critical and æsthetic, and the contents justify his description. Mr. Balfour is a great admirer of Handel, but his attitude is by no means that of the indiscriminate eulogist. He asserts, for example, that he contributed but little to the evolution of modern music as we know it, that he left behind him some humble imitators, but left no school. "His works," says Mr. Balfour, "form, as it were, a monument, solitary and colossal, raised at the end of some blind avenue from which the true path of advance has already branched; a monument which, stately and splendid though it be, is not the vestibule through which art has passed to the discovery and exploration of new regions of beauty." In illustration of this assertion, the writer points out that as regards form he rather exhausted the possibilities of those already in use than added to their number, while in most of his operas he carefully observed the rules which had grown out of the domination of the great singers, and made no effort to emancipate himself from the tyranny of circumstance. For this, he continues, it would be unfair to blame the composer. "The greatest works which the world has seen have not been dedicated to an unknown posterity, but have been produced to satisfy the daily needs of their age, and have, therefore, conformed to the tastes and usually to the fashion and the prejudices of the period which gave them birth." We find it somewhat difficult to reconcile this, first with the passage quoted above, and secondly with the attitude of such composers as Bach, Beethoven, Schubert, and Berlioz, to mention no others, the greatest works of each and all of whom were never properly appreciated—indeed, in the case of some of them, never performed at all—in the lifetime of their composers. With regard to Handel's Oratorios, Mr. Balfour speaks in terms of what he himself calls an "affectionate devotion" for the great composer, adding, curiously enough, that it is not possible, perhaps even desirable for the majority of his readers to share his devotion. In dealing with the burning question of Handel's plagiarisms, he formulates a test which is at once plausible and audacious: "If the borrowed fragment shows like the marble capital of a Corinthian column, built into the brickwork of a mediæval wall, the theft is a mistake, and mistakes are crimes—indeed, the only crimes recognised in the jurisprudence of art. But if it not only fits harmoniously into the new structure, but shows there for the first time its latent capabilities of beauty or grandeur, then, whatever judgment we may pass on the morality of the plagiarist, the plagiarism, as I conceive, stands justified at the bar of criticism." Mr. Balfour, in fine, declares that Urio and Erba were immortalised by Handel's loans. "The truth is that Handel has not cheated them out of their due meed of fame, he has cheated them into it." In his estimate of the nature and extent of our debt to Handel, Mr. Balfour is at his best. "No man," he declares, "has equalled him, scarcely any man has tried to equal him, in the free application of chorus to every dramatic purpose, and to the delineation of every human emotion which language is capable of describing." He dwells with enthusiasm on his copious, fluent, and delightful gift of melody, and lays due stress on the "astonishing fact" that in the age of Voltaire and Hume, Pope and Swift, Handel produced the most profoundly religious music which the world has yet known. Here we must take leave of an essay which, for felicity of expression, acuteness of insight, and breadth of sympathy, constitutes a real addition to the critical literature of music.

Albums for Violin and Pianoforte. No. 30, Six Pieces, Ernst; No. 31, Five Pieces, David; No. 32, Four Pieces, Vieuxtemps; No. 33, Six Valses, Schubert.

[Novello, Ewer and Co.]

THE great violinist whose pieces fill the first Album was something more than a virtuoso—he was a musician of refined feeling. Some of Ernst's music is very light and showy; but there are other pieces of his which reveal higher qualities. This Album contains the famous "Elégie"; the brilliant "Carnaval" Variations, rendered more brilliant by the violin being tuned up a semitone; the "Otello" Fantasie; and other pieces, including "La Romanesca," a celebrated dance tune of the sixteenth century; this last piece is quaint and simple. Album No. 31 is devoted to Ferdinand David, the pupil of Spohr, the friend of Mendelssohn, and the teacher of Joachim. In the three "Caprices" the player will find pleasant tune, but plenty of solid work; the "Petit Tambour" is a brilliant, showy piece. Everything in this Album shows that David was a thorough master of his instrument. But everyone knows too how eagerly Mendelssohn, who knew something about the violin himself, sought—and what is more, took—his advice with regard to the technique in the solo part of his Violin Concerto. The third Album, No. 32, contains four pieces by Vieuxtemps, another name famous in the annals of the literature of the violin. But his music is so well known that it will suffice to say that the pieces are "Yankee Doodle," "Air Varié," "Rêverie," and "Tarantelle." Album No. 33 contains some of the most fascinating of Schubert's Valses. The arrangements by Siegfried Jacoby are simple and effective.

Sonate No. 1, in D, für Pianoforte. Componirt von W. H. Speer (Op. 2).

Sonate für Violoncell und Pianoforte. Von J. Weingärtner.

Chromatische Etüden für Pianoforte. Von Graham P. Moore. Heft. 1, Nos. 1-3; Heft. 2, Nos. 4-6.

[Breitkopf und Härtel.]

THE writing of Sonatas is becoming somewhat rare. We live in an age of freedom, and few composers are willing to go forth to battle clad in the close-fitting armour of the past. Mr. Speer does not seem at his ease in the Sonata form, and yet his courage must be duly recognised. The opening movement of his Sonata—in which, by the way, the influence of Weber makes itself felt both in the matter and the manner—has outward vigour, but lacks inward strength. The Intermezzo is pleasing, but the writing is not well suited for the pianoforte. The Finale has good points, but lacks homogeneity. M. J. Weingärtner's Sonata for violoncello and pianoforte, again, is a work that suffers from the form in which it is cast. It contains melodious thematic material; but the movements are scarcely filled with such "stuff" as sonatas ought to be made of. The Romance is very light in character; at the same time, it is the most successful of the three movements. Mr. Graham Moore's clever Chromatic Studies are excellent practice; they are both difficult to read and to play. In some of the numbers—as, for instance, No. 6—sharps and double sharps are quite dazzling. Some of the musical thoughts are good; but the composer's chief aim in writing them was a technical one.

Edition populaire française, M. Clementi, Gradus ad Parnassum. Résumé, choix de 36 Etudes. Par I. Philipp.

Recueil de douze Etudes de Virtuosité. Par I. Philipp.

[Paris: Richault et Cie.]

THERE are certain educational works which, like certain instruments, improve with age. Of such are the Studies of Muzio Clementi and J. B. Cramer. The great service rendered by these two composers is universally acknowledged; and, indeed, without these earlier guides, Chopin and Liszt, the two lofty peaks of the Parnassus of modern pianoforte playing, could never be scaled. M. Philipp, in his excellent selection of studies from the "Gradus" has not only given useful phrase and finger marks, but has added practical hints for practice; some studies, for instance, are to be transposed, retaining the original fingering; another in octaves is to be played in three different ways. The "Etudes de Virtuosité" cannot fail to interest pianists who wish to be up to date; there are, among others, three by the great French pianist, V. Albran, and two by Liszt, including the famous transcription of Schubert's "Erl-König." Alexander the Great, it is said, wept when he found no more worlds to conquer; and a pianist who masters this "Recueil" would also probably shed tears, but of joy, on finding that he had no more technical difficulties to conquer. These Etudes form the ne plus ultra of pianoforte virtuosity.

Eight Songs from Poems by Heine. The music by Frances Allitsen. [R. Cocks and Co.]

THESE compositions have been justifiably placed by the publishers in their "Series of Artistic Songs." They belong to the now large class of vocal works of all kinds by native composers which aim at supplying words of real poetic merit with music that shall intensify their force and help in bringing out the feeling which pervades them—which, in short, are poems in word and tone, and not simply verses to which a more or less good tune has been fitted. Heine's words are here accompanied by English translations, which have been supplied by Sir Theodore Martin, James Thomson, Dr. G. Macdonald, and others. In No. 1, "A pine-tree standeth lonely," the music ably suggests the dreariness of the poetic picture; but a finer song than this is No. 2, a setting of "Sapphires are those eyes of thine." In No. 3, "Diamonds hast thou and pearls," the charm and delicate irony of the words have been admirably caught by the composer. No. 4 is a dramatic setting of "Die Botschaft," here called "King Duncan's Daughters." The remaining four—"Since my love," "Fathoms deep may drift the snow," "Oh, Death, it is the cold, cold night," and "Katherine"—have each their merits, but space forbids further detail.

Romance for Violin and Pianoforte. By Eugen Philips.

Cavatine for Violoncello and Pianoforte. By Eugen Philips.

Lamento pour Violin, Violoncello, and Pianoforte. Par J. Th. Radoux.

Romance for Violin and Pianoforte. By Leo Schrattenholz.

The Song of the Egyptian Girl. By Walter Alcock.

[Charles Woolhouse.]

THE Violin Romance by Mr. Philips is a thoughtful, well-designed piece, and effectively written for the solo instrument. His Cavatine also deserves praise. The composer studies effect, but without descending to the commonplace. The pianoforte parts are good; in the first piece, there is a successful canonic imitation in the seventh of the opening of the principal theme. The "Lamento," by Mr. J. Th. Radoux, Director of the Liège Conservatoire, is a pleasing piece, and is drawing-room music in the best sense of the word. The introductory symphony is somewhat curious in the matter of tonality; it opens in the key of E minor, but closes at the eighth bar on the dominant of G minor, the real key of the piece. The mixture of French and English on the title-page is unfortunate. Mr. Schrattenholz's Romance is a clever and interesting piece; the Romance is evidently of a serious nature. Mr. Alcock's song is simple and graceful; the opening notes of the melody, however, sound familiar.

Seven Songs. By J. Stainer.

[Novello, Ewer and Co.]

THESE short songs are simple in form and refined in feeling. In aiming at simplicity many composers fall into the commonplace, but of this there is here no trace. Rich use is made of chromatic notes and chromatic chords in the accompaniments, but the tonality always remains clear. The songs are German in character, and Sir J. Stainer has followed the excellent example set by Schubert and Schumann, and made his accompaniments both interesting and grateful to the player. All the numbers are good, but the "Rose-bush," with its tender grace, and "An Leukon," with its fresh, Volkslied character, seem to us specially worthy of mention. Six of the songs have both German and English words; one is a setting of Jules Bué's French translation of Heine's "Du bist wie eine Blume." At a time when so much vocal music of little value is published, these songs of Sir J. Stainer, pure in form and delicate in workmanship, deserve full recognition.

Nine Transcriptions from Sullivan's "Golden Legend." For violin and pianoforte. By Berthold Tours.

[Novello, Ewer and Co.]

AMONG modern works Sir Arthur Sullivan's "Golden Legend" occupies a high place in public estimation; and, by common consent, ranks among the composer's highest achievements. To dilate on the merits and beauties of so well known a composition is unnecessary; it will be more profitable to name some of the contents of this album. There are the two solos, "My Redeemer and my Lord" and "It is the sea"; the duets, "Onward and onward" and "We are alone"; the beautiful Evening Hymn, "O gladsome light"; and the spirited concluding chorus, "God sent His messenger the rain." The name of Mr. Berthold Tours is a sufficient guarantee that the transcriptions are good. The violin parts are not difficult; the writing for the pianoforte is very effective. This selection will serve both as a reminiscence of the "Golden Legend" and as an introduction to those still unacquainted with the work.

Summer on the River. Cantata for Female Voices. Words by Shapcott Wensley. Music by F. H. Cowen.

[Novello, Ewer and Co.]

THE subject of this cantata is merely a cheerful song of maidens enjoying a summer holiday on the river, anything like a connected story or plot being carefully avoided. The music is written for soprano and contralto soli and for two-part chorus; one number, however, having an alternative setting for three solo voices, or chorus. Though Mr. Cowen has studiously avoided difficulties of every sort, especially in the voice parts, his music is not written in commonplace thirds and sixths, with accompaniment in common chords and arpeggios. Bright, dainty, and piquant from the first to the closing bar, the cantata would be certain to please at the "breaking-up" entertainments which will be general towards the close of next month.

Twelve Songs. Set 2 (Stimmungsbilder), with pianoforte accompaniment. By Karel Bendl (Op. 101).

[Novello, Ewer and Co.]

THIS is a pleasing collection of songs, all of which have both German and English words. The high opus number shows that the composer is no novice in the art of composition; the music, indeed, shows a practised hand. In some of the numbers the inspiration may not be very strong, but they all have merit of some kind. No. 4, "Night," is particularly neat in form and successful in chromatic colouring. Nos. 6, 8, and 9 are taking. The last one, "Her Grave," has well-selected plaintive harmonies.

King and Slave. Song. Words by Adelaide Procter. Music by Frances Allitsen. [R. Cocks and Co.]

THIS is an example of the passionate love song, and undoubtedly shows power. Among its merits may be mentioned bold modulations and a rich, full, and effective accompaniment. To our thinking, however, the pianistic manifestation of passion is here so extravagant as to occasionally approach vulgarity.

(1) Infinite Love. Song. Words by Dante Gabriel Rossetti. Music by Maud Valérie White.

(2) Ich bin dein. Volkslied. Music by Maud Valérie White.

[R. Cocks and Co.]

IT would be difficult to imagine songs by the same composer showing a stronger contrast than these two. Both are love songs, but the first is highly-coloured, passionate, sensuous, mystic, making considerable demands on both singer and accompanist; while the second is simple, tuneful, and well within the means of those whose "sentiment" is greater than their "technique." Each, however, is a very favourable specimen of the class to which it belongs, though the artistic morality may be questioned of setting a portion only of so perfect a sonnet as this of Rossetti.

Four Vocal Duets. By Halfdan Kjerulf.

Popular Songs. By Halfdan Kjerulf. Arranged for Voice and Guitar, by F. M. Harrison.

[Stanley Lucas, Weber and Co.]

THE gifted Scandinavian song-composer, Halfdan Kjerulf, has not yet obtained his due meed of recognition in this country, and the present albums should therefore be welcomed. The duets are charming little sketches for two sopranos, and the songs are mostly of the serenade order and therefore gain rather than lose by guitar accompaniment. In both books there are German and English words, the latter by Mr. Theo. Marzials.

On the River. Five Sketches for pianoforte. By Arthur Somervell. [Stanley Lucas, Weber and Co.]

THERE is something in a name, and the titles of these little sketches sound tempting enough at this summer season. The music is smooth and graceful. The influence of Schumann may be traced here and there, but especially in No. 2.

Four Songs. By John Pointer (Op. 8).

[Laudy and Co.]

THESE songs do not perhaps reach a very high level, and yet the composer expresses himself with praiseworthy naturalness. Of the four numbers, the first, with its well-contrasted middle section, and the last, with its dreamy accompaniment, seem the most successful.

FOREIGN NOTES.

IN the absence of any Festspiele at Bayreuth, the Wagner performances which will take place at Munich in August and September next will no doubt be largely patronised by Wagner lovers from all parts of Europe. They seem to be planned on a sufficiently liberal scale to justify great expectations, at any rate as regards the principal singers. Between August 11 and September 29 there will be twenty-five performances, twelve of which will be devoted to three cycles of "The Nibelung's Ring"—viz., on August 20, 21, 23, and 25; September 3, 4, 6, 8, and 24, 25, 27, 29. "Die Feen" will be given on August 13, 27, and September 10; the "Flying Dutchman" on August 15 and September 12; "Tannhäuser" on August 11 and September 1, 14, 19; "Die Meistersinger" on August 17 and September 21; and "Tristan" on August 29 and September 17. The following casts have been decided on—viz., "Tristan," with Frau Sucher (Isolde), Herr Vogl (Tristan), Herr Gura (Marke), Herr Brucks (Kurwenal). "Tannhäuser," with new scenery, dresses, &c., and Frl. Ternina (Elizabeth), Frau Sucher (Venus), Herr Grüning (Tannhäuser), Herr Reichmann (Wolfram). "The Nibelung's Ring," with Frau Sucher (Brünnhilde), Frau Wekerlin (Sieglinde), Herr Alvary (Siegfried), Herr Vogl (Loge and Siegmund), Herr Wiegand (Hagen), Herr Brucks (Wotan), Herr Fuchs (Alberich), and Herr Lieban (Mime). Herren Levi, Franz Fischer, and Felix Weingartner will be the conductors.

Professor Ed. Hanslick, the famous Vienna critic, heard Verdi's "Falstaff" at Rome, and in the Neue Freie Presse, of April 30, he expresses his conviction that the popularity of Nicolai's charming "Merry Wives" may make it difficult for Verdi's work to become a great favourite in Germany, especially as Mosenthal's libretto follows Shakespeare more closely than does Boïto's, and, from a purely musical point of view, the best numbers in Nicolai's score are, in his opinion, decidedly superior to the corresponding scenes in "Falstaff." He believes that the latter opera will be everywhere performed, admired, and praised as it should be, but that afterwards the Germans, at any rate, will return to their favourite "Lustigen Weiber." Hanslick gives also an interesting account of an interview which he had with the veteran composer, in which the latter denied that he had begun the composition of "King Lear."

Rubinstein's one-act opera "Unter Räubern" ("Amongst Brigands") and the two-act ballet "Die Rebe" ("The Vine") were produced at the Royal Opera, at Berlin, on April 24. Neither of the works is of recent composition. The opera was performed at Hamburg about ten years ago; but the ballet is new at least to the stage.

The one-act opera "Der Hochzeitsmorgen," by Karl von Kaskel, which achieved such a great success on its first performance at Hamburg some time since, met with an equally favourable reception at the Dresden Hof-Oper, where it was produced on April 29. The work is pronounced a decided acquisition to the stage, as it shows not only exceptional talent, but considerable individuality and gifts of characterisation. The performance, in which Mesdames Malten and Chavanne and Herren Anthes and Scheidemantel took part, was an excellent one.

In Germany Mascagni's "I Rantzau" seems to be little more than a succès d'estime. At Dresden and Hamburg it made hardly any impression, while its reception at Weimar was cold to a degree. Only at Frankfurt, where it was condensed into three acts, was its reception, on the 7th ult., a good one.

The Hamburg Philharmonic Society, which, as announced in our last number, intended to dissolve, will, after all, continue its existence. A long list of subscribers and a considerable guarantee fund enable the Society to make a fresh start.

A hitherto neglected Orchestral Suite, entitled "Thuringia," by the late Joachim Raff, was performed by the Grand-ducal Orchestra at Weimar on April 17. It consists of five movements—viz., Overture: "Salus intrantibus," St. Elizabeth's Hymn, Variations on the Thuringian Volkslied "Ach wie ist's möglich dann," Dance of Gnomes and Sylphs, and Finale "Zum Schützenfest."

The well-known Wagner singer, Theodor Reichmann, who left the Vienna Hof-Oper a year or two ago, has been re-engaged, no doubt in compliance with the very pronounced wish of opera-goers in the merry Kaiserstadt, and perhaps more especially of the female portion thereof. The contract is for only two years at present.

At a Concert which the Leipzig Liszt-Verein gave on April 13 two famous pianists appeared, each in a dual capacity—Madame Sophie Menter, as composer of a piece for pianoforte and orchestra entitled "Zigeunerweisen," and her pupil, M. Sapellnikoff, as Conductor. We believe M. Sapellnikoff has confessed to some of his intimate friends that his ambition is to distinguish himself as an orchestral conductor rather than as a pianist.

Some of the Scandinavians living at Leipzig have formed a Grieg Society, their object being, of course, to make the works of this already fully appreciated master still better known, and to introduce some of the younger composers of Scandinavia to the musical public of Germany.

A new three-act opera, with the curious title of "Die Teufelsglocke" ("The Devil's Bell"), was brought out at the Leipzig Stadt-Theater on April 15. The music, by Robert Fuchs, is, on the whole, well spoken of; the libretto, however, seems to be dramatically very weak.

Berlioz's "Te Deum" was produced at Munich on April 20, under Herr Heinrich Porges, an ardent admirer of the great Frenchman. The work had an extraordinary success.

The Conductor of the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra, Herr Rud. Herfurth, has been appointed Conductor of the Court Orchestra at Rudolstadt. He will begin his new duties on October 1.

Signor Sonzogno intends to take his specially organised operatic company on tour through Germany after the performances at the Theater an der Wien, in Vienna, between the 2nd and 30th inst., have taken place. The following works will be given: "L'Amico Fritz" and "Cavalleria" (Mascagni), "Pagliacci" (Leoncavallo), "Festa a marina" and "Sagra al Villaggie" (Coronaro), "Il piccolo Haydn" (Soffredini), "Mala Vita" (Giordano), "Flora Mirabilis" (Samara), and "Teresa Raquin" (Coop).

Chabrier's opera "Gwendoline" has been very successfully given at Düsseldorf.

The one-act opera "Sonntagmorgen," by a young Norwegian composer, Gerhard Schjelderup, met with a reception in which the loud applause of one section of the public was mingled with unmistakable sounds of a very dissatisfied opposition. The composer is his own poet, and, like Mascagni, he seems to illustrate a simple idyl with most unsuitably elaborate and heavy music. The event took place at Munich on the 9th ult.

A Mass for soli, chorus, and orchestra, by young Otto Hegner, was performed for the first time on Easter Sunday at Bâsle. It is very favourably spoken of.

Stuttgart as well as Munich will have its "model" operatic performances this summer. Between the 14th and 18th inst. the following operas will be given:—"Don Giovanni," "Fidelio," "Euryanthe," "Huguenots," "Tannhäuser," "Walküre," and "Götterdämmerung." Amongst the specially engaged artists are Frau Klafsky, Fräulein Meilhac, Herren Grüning, Scheidemantel, Grengg, Lang, and Schott.

Professor F. M. Böhme, of Dresden, who had been asked by the Prussian Government to edit and complete the late Ludwig Erk's posthumous work on the German Volkslied, has just finished his task, and the elaborate work will, in due course, be published by Messrs. Breitkopf and Härtel.

A new opera, "Der Trentajäger," by A. Thierfelder, was favourably received on its recent first production at Rostock.

August Enna's successful opera "Die Hexe" has been prohibited in Finland and Russia.

Eugène d'Albert's new Pianoforte Concerto, No. 2, in E (Op. 12), which his wife, Madame Carreño, has been playing in Berlin and other German towns, is, according to the well known critic, Herr Wilhelm Tappert, "a ridiculous product of impotency"; but in the opinion of the redoubtable Otto Lessmann, "it would be difficult to find amongst modern pianoforte concertos a work which can compare with D'Albert's for wealth of invention, warmth, 'Geist,' and excellent workmanship." Which is right?

On July 1 next the Director of the Brünn (Moravia) Stadt-Theater, Herr Baumann, will commence a cycle of performances of Smetana's operas at the Theater Unter den Linden, at Berlin. The works to be performed will be "Der Kuss" (The Kiss), "Die verkaufte Braut" (The Sold Bride), and "Dalibor." For these performances a special company has been engaged, which will afterwards be taken to Chicago.

Herr Arthur Nikisch, late Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has been appointed first Conductor and Director of the Opera House at Budapest.

A new opera, by Georg Rauchenecker, and entitled "Ingo," was performed for the first time at Elberfeld and was well received. It is founded on Gustav Freytag's celebrated novel "Die Ahnen."

Herr Peter Ludwig Hertel, of the Royal Opera, Berlin, has retired from his posts of "Balletcomponist" and "Musikdirektor," after forty years' artistic activity. He is the composer of numerous ballets, and some of his music has achieved wide popularity.

On the 1st ult. Herr Georg Goltermann, well known in this country as a composer of music for the violoncello, celebrated the fortieth anniversary of his engagement at the Frankfurt-on-Main Stadt-Theater. As a mark of the high esteem in which he is held, gold and silver laurel wreaths, and numerous other valuables, were presented to him by the members of the theatre, &c. Herr Goltermann will shortly retire from the post he has held for so many years.

Owing to ill-health, Professor Carl Klindworth is about to relinquish the direction of his Conservatorium at Berlin, which will, in consequence, be amalgamated with the Scharwenka Conservatorium.

Herr Felix Mottl, of Bayreuth fame, conducted, on the 14th ult., a Concert at Brussels, at which Brahms's Third Symphony and several Wagner selections were played. He had an enthusiastic reception.

The ninth Anhalt Musical Festival took place at Zerbst on the 6th and 7th ult. Haydn's "Seasons," Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto (played by Fräulein Betty Schwabe), Wagner's "Meistersinger" Vorspiel, and Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture, No. 3, were among the works which were performed in a thoroughly artistic manner, under the conductorship of Herr Klughardt, of Dessau. The choir numbered 350, and the soloists were Fräulein Gleiss, Herren Fenge, Gerhartz, and Reichmann.

The twenty-ninth meeting of the General German Musical Society was held at Munich during the last days of May. We shall give further details in our next number.

Rubinstein's sacred Opera "Moses" will be given by the Berlin Philharmonic Choir during next autumn.

The great event of the Paris Opéra season has at last taken place—Wagner's "Walküre" was successfully produced on the 19th ult. The characters were taken by M. Van Dyck (Sigmund), Madame Caron (Sieglinde), Mdlle. Bréval (Brünnhilde), Madame Deschamps-Jehin (Fricka), M. Gresse (Hunding), and M. Delmas (Wotan). Of these, the last-named seems to have been by far the most satisfactory. The staging is said to be excellent, but some of the costumes are taken exception to. To the "old" Wagnerians the performance has, however, given but little pleasure, their recognised head, M. E. Dujardin, having hardly a good word for it. Several repetitions of the performance have already been given.

M. Saint-Saëns's new two-act comic opera "Phryne" was produced at the Paris Opéra Comique, on the 24th ult., and seems to have been very successful. The libretto, by M. Angé de Lassus, is said to be of the slightest texture, while the music is alternately frivolous and solemn, droll and expressive, but always clever and interesting, as goes without saying in the case of this versatile composer. Of the performers, Mdlle. Sybil Sanderson, in the title-rôle, was excellent, both vocally and histrionically, while her fine physique made a somewhat risky plot at any rate plausible.

Delibes's posthumous opera "Kassya," the orchestration of which was completed by M. Massenet, does not seem to have been the great success with the public which it was expected to be. The critic of the Temps, M. J. Weber, expresses his disappointment at the result, and adds: "I have an idea that, like 'Carmen,' which was not a real success until after its return from Germany (and England, he might have added), it would be also a good thing for 'Kassya' to travel a little." "C'est absolument notre avis," remarks Le Ménestrel to this.

Weber's "Oberon" is to be performed next season at the Paris Opéra Comique. MM. Jules Barbier and Phillipe Gille are translating the libretto, whether from the original English or the German translation of the latter seems doubtful.

It is said that Madame Cosima Wagner wishes "Tannhäuser" to be the next opera of her husband's which shall be performed in Paris. For more than one reason, this would seem to be an unwise and even dangerous course to propose.

The violinist Franz Ondricek, who has been giving Concerts in Italy, has had a peculiar privilege extended to him—viz., that of viewing the body of Paganini. While staying at Parma, he obtained the necessary permission from the son of the great Genoese violinist, the Baron Achille Paganini, and the civil authorities of the town. It is said that a similar privilege has never before been granted. The body, which is, of course, embalmed, and especially the characteristic head, could be distinctly seen through the crystal window in the coffin, and were found to be quite intact.

Franchetti's "Asrael" has been accepted for performance at the Leipzig Stadt-Theater.

Berlioz's "Faust" has been given with immense success at the Theatre Dal Verme, at Milan. It has already been repeated seven or eight times. The same work has been similarly successful at Strassburg, in Alsace, where it was given in the original French.

The Orchestral Concerts, under the conductorship of Herr Felix Weingartner, at Milan, were very much appreciated by large audiences. Strange as it may appear to us, the only works which did not make any particular impression were Liszt's "Tasso" and the "Unfinished" Symphony of Schubert.

Signor Leoncavallo, of "Pagliacci" fame, is engaged on another opera, entitled "I Medici," which is to form the first part of a Trilogy, the remaining portions of which are to be called "Savonarola" (a subject already treated by Professor Stanford) and "Borgia."

The subject of Professor Stanford's first opera—viz., "The Veiled Prophet"—has also been used again, this time by Signor Daniele Napoletano, whose setting was produced, under the title of "Il Profeta velato," at the San Carlo Theatre, at Naples, on April 1, without, however, achieving more than a succès d'estime.

Signor Puccini is said to be engaged on an opera, the plot of which is taken from Murger's "Scènes de la Vie de Bohème," from which Signor Leoncavallo has also borrowed, as announced in our last number.

Verdi's "Falstaff" continues its triumphant career, Venice and Trieste being the latest additions to the list of towns in which it has been received with enthusiasm. The first performance in Vienna, with the original cast, took place on the 21st ult., and seems also to have been a great success, if we may judge from the reports in our daily papers.

Beethoven's Choral Symphony was performed some weeks ago at Kieff, in Russia, for the first time, and with such extraordinary success that two repetitions had to be given, all to crowded audiences. M. N. Winogradsky was the Conductor.

The Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde, in Vienna, has had a gold medal struck to commemorate the sixtieth birthday of Johannes Brahms. On its obverse it bears the likeness of the great master in profile, while the reverse displays palm and laurel wreaths and other emblems, as well as a suitable inscription.

The prize which the Duke of Saxe-Coburg has offered for the best one-act German opera has not yet been awarded, but the judges are engaged on the delightful task of going through the 121 scores which have been sent in.

On the 5th ult. a new comic opera, entitled "Das Sanct-Wernerfest," by Julius Mannheimer, was successfully produced at Breslau.

A Scandinavian Song Tournament will be held in Stockholm next season.

In commemoration of Professor I. P. E. Hartmann's fifty years' Jubilee as the Musical Director of the Copenhagen University Students' Vocal Society, a grand Festival Concert was given on the 3rd ult., in the Danish metropolis, in the presence of all the members of the Royal family and a large audience. A festival cantata composed by Professor Otto Malling was performed, and after the Concert a large torchlight procession took place, in which more than one thousand of Hartmann's friends and admirers took part.

Cowen's cantata the "Sleeping Beauty," in Danish entitled "Tornerose," met with a very favourable reception when recently performed in Copenhagen, under the direction of Professor Otto Malling.

Report speaks very highly of a new Pianoforte Concerto with orchestral accompaniment which was heard for the first time at the last Concert given by Concertföreningen in Copenhagen. The pianoforte part was well played by the composer, Mr. Holger Hamann, who is only nineteen years of age.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MR. WINGHAM'S MSS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

SIR,—In reply to the admirable article of Mr. L. N. Parker in your May issue, it will please your readers, I am sure, to know that the whole of the late Mr. Thomas Wingham's manuscripts are in the hands of his executors, and the publication of many of them, it is hoped, will only be a matter of time and opportunity.

I am, Sir, yours sincerely,
J. ROBINSON.

4, Stratford Road, Marloes Road, Kensington, W.,
May 19, 1893.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 Notices of concerts, and other information supplied by our friends in the country, must be forwarded as early as possible after the occurrence; otherwise they cannot be inserted. Our correspondents must specifically denote the date of each concert, for without such date no notice can be taken of the performance.

Our correspondents will oblige by writing all names as clearly as possible, as we cannot be responsible for any mistakes that may occur.

Correspondents are informed that their names and addresses must accompany all communications.

We cannot undertake to return offered contributions; the authors, therefore, will do well to retain copies.

Notice is sent to all subscribers whose payment (in advance) is exhausted. The paper will be discontinued where the Subscription is not renewed. We again remind those who are disappointed in obtaining back numbers that, although the music is always kept in stock, only a sufficient quantity of the rest of the paper is printed to supply the current sale.

INQUIRER (Rotherhithe).—It seems to us that the question must be decided by individual preference. There is no right or wrong in such matters—that is best which most conveniently allows the player to produce the effect intended by the composer.

T. PRIOR.—Kistler's music is published by F. Kistner, Leipzig; E. W. Fritzsch, Leipzig; C. Werner, München; Joh. Aibl, München; and Böhm and Sohn, Augsburg.

SUITE.—Bach's and Handel's Suites are printed both in Full Score and Orchestral Parts, and can be obtained of Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co.

BRIEF SUMMARY OF COUNTRY NEWS.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for any opinions expressed in this summary, as all the notices are either collated from the local papers or supplied to us by correspondents.

ASHBURNE, DERBYSHIRE.—The Orchestral Society gave the second Concert of its seventh season on Tuesday, the 9th ult., to an overflowing audience, which had been attracted largely, no doubt, by the appearance of Mr. John Thomas and Mr. Frederic Griffith. The principal piece in the programme was Mozart's Concerto for harp and flute, with orchestra, which was performed for the third time by this Society, but which is not, we imagine, very generally known. With the solo parts in such excellent hands the work met with very warm appreciation. The rest of the programme comprised Overtures Son and Stranger (Mendelssohn), Bohemian Girl (Balfe), two movements from Haydn's Symphony "The Surprise," Intermezzo from Cavalleria Rusticana, and a selection from Maritana. Mr. Thomas contributed a harp solo, two duets for harp and violin, with Mr. H. T. Abbott (all of his own composition), and a duet for flute and harp, with Mr. F. Griffith. It goes without saying that these admirable artists met with the reception due to their great talents. Miss Florence Howle, of Birmingham, was an acceptable vocalist, and Mr. W. H. Tutt conducted, as usual.

BRIGHOUSE.—At the Parish Church, on the 2nd ult., a very successful Organ Recital was given by Mr. J. H. Pearson, the composers represented being Salomé, Merkel, Lemaigre, Handel, Lux, Morandi, and others. Anthems were sung by Miss Marsden and Messrs. Mitchell, Sladdin, and Hirst.

BRIGHTON.—Under the auspices of the School of Music, Mr. Sandor Merei delivered a most interesting Lecture-Recital on "Serenades and Nocturnes" (with vocal and instrumental illustrations), at the Pavilion, on the 6th ult. He was assisted by Herr Meuges (violin), Mr. C. H. Gill (violoncello), and Mr. F. Davy (pianoforte).

BURTON-ON-TRENT.—A very successful Concert took place on the 4th ult., when the members of the Musical Society gave an excellent performance of Judas Maccabæus. The principal soloists were Miss Thudichum, Miss Frances Turner, Mr. Braxton Smith, and Mr. Arthur Appleby. Mr. H. T. Abbott was leader of the orchestra, and Mr. L. F. Day conducted with much ability.

CAMBRIDGE.—The members of the Church of England Young Men's Society Musical Union gave a successful Concert in the Guildhall on the 2nd ult., when J. F. Barnett's cantata The Ancient Mariner was performed. The soloists were Miss Florence Monk, Miss Woodhead, Mr. Walter Driver, and Mr. P. C. Hague Ingram. Miss Monk was in splendid voice and won golden opinions. Her most successful effort was in the recitative and air "And a good south wind," but she also was heard to very great advantage in the recitative, solo, and chorus "And the bay was white with silent light," wherein the members of the Union shared the honours. Mr. Driver sang the tenor parts with taste and Mr. Ingram satisfactorily rendered the bass solos. The chorus had been most carefully trained and acquitted themselves well. The small orchestra, led by Mr. R. Hague Ingram, was also efficient. Mr. W. T. See conducted, Mr. H. Pain was at the pianoforte, and Mr. F. Bowman at the organ.

CHELTENHAM.—Herr Lortzing's Choir's "At Home" took place at the Rotunda on Saturday, the 6th ult. A large audience attended, and the programme, which was successfully performed throughout, included The Lady of Shalott, a cantata for female voices by Wilfred Bendall; Gounod's "Au bruit des lourds marteaux," Mr. Macgowan; "The Cotter's Saturday Night" Chorus, by A. C. Mackenzie; and Cavatina, "O tu Palermo," Verdi, admirably sung by Mr. R. E. Prior. Dr. A. E. Dyer, Mrs. Darby, and Miss Williams accompanied the various pieces of the programme.

CHIGWELL.—A large portion of Handel's Messiah was very well rendered in the Parish Church on the evening of Ascension Day. The church choir was augmented to seventy voices, by the addition of the ladies' choir. Mr. Henry Riding conducted, and the soloists were Masters W. Scott and Aubrey Jennings, and Messrs Herbert Clinch and E. D. Jordan.

CLEETHORPES.—The Choral Society gave its last Concert for this season on April 27, when G. A. Macfarren's May Day was performed, followed by a miscellaneous selection. The principal vocalists were Miss Annie Norledge, Miss Florence Chapman, Mr. C. H. Dawson, and Mr. E. Anderson. Mr. J. W. Browne was the leader of the band and Mr. C. W. Godson again the Conductor, whilst Mr. C. D. Morton ably officiated as pianoforte accompanist.

CORK.—The St. Luke's Choral Society gave an excellent Concert, at the Assembly Rooms, on the 15th ult., under the conductorship of Mr. J. C. Marks. The programme opened with Sterndale Bennett's May Queen, which was splendidly rendered by a chorus of over 100 voices and large orchestra. Miss Hilda Marks sang the part of the May Queen admirably; as the Queen, Miss Phillips created an excellent impression; Mr. W. S. North, a Dublin tenor, was the Lover; and Mr. T. J. Good, Robin Hood. Solos were contributed by Mrs. Longfield, Miss Hall, Miss Marks, Mr. Palmer, and Mr. North. The orchestra performed Dr. Marks's Triumphal March from Gideon, and the principal concerted pieces were Cowen's "Wedding Chorus" (Rose Maiden), an Orpheus Glee, and a part-song, "Blow, ye balmy breezes" (specially written for the Concert by Mr. J. C. Marks), which was very well received.

DEAL.—The Deal and Walmer Choral Society brought its second season to a close on the 9th ult., with a most successful performance of Handel's Messiah. Of the soloists Miss Marjorie Eaton was especially good, particularly in "I know that my Redeemer liveth." The other principals were Miss Bessie Doré, Mr. J. Pearson, and Mr. Arthur D'Oyley. The Concert reflected great credit upon Mr. Troman, the Conductor.

DRIFFIELD.—The Choral Society gave an extra Concert, in the Temperance Hall, on April 24, the first part of which consisted of Gade's Erl-King's Daughter, Miss Marjorie Eaton, Miss Annie Marshall, and Mr. Chilver Wilson being the principals. Later in the evening Miss Alice Simpkin played violin solos. The Concert was under the direction of Mr. C. J. Harold Shaw, Organist of the Parish Church.

DUNDALK.—An Organ Recital was given by Mr. J. W. Dry, on the 12th ult., at the Parish Church. Works by Mendelssohn, Wesley, Gounod, Bach, Handel, Capocci, Wagner, and R. P. Stewart were played.

EXETER.—On April 30, at St. James's Church, a Musical Service was held, consisting of sacred songs, organ solos, and Easter carols. The Rev. H. Gibbon sang with much taste Gounod's "There is a green hill" and Rodney's "Calvary." Mr. Edwin N. Tayler, the Organist, played Mendelssohn's Second Sonata, the Andante from Haydn's "Surprise" Symphony, Offertoire in A (Salomé), and "Cornelius" March (Mendelssohn). The congregation was a large one.—The Orchestral Society's first Concert of the season, given on the 18th ult., in the Public Room, was a great success. The programme included Schubert's Rosamunde Overture; the three dances from Henry VIII., by German, which pleased immensely, and were interpreted with great spirit and taste; the Overture to Oberon, the inevitable Intermezzo from Cavalleria, Weber's Concertstück, and Mendelssohn's Capriccio (Op. 22), the pianoforte parts of which were admirably played by Dr. H. J. Edwards. The Rev. N. M. Morgan Brown sang and Mr. Moore conducted with great firmness and intelligence.

FENNY STRATFORD.—Performances of The Messiah were given in the Town Hall by the Musical Society on the 3rd and 4th ult., under the conductorship of W. J. Leir, Esq. The soloists were Miss Down, Miss Daniel, Mr. F. Hamlyn Crimp, and Mr. S. Heath. The band and chorus, numbering upwards of sixty, discharged their duties in a very efficient manner, as did also the organist, Master W. E. Kirby. The appreciation shown by the large audiences proved that the efforts of those concerned had not been thrown away.

HAYLE, CORNWALL.—The Choral Society gave its third Concert on April 26, in the Public Hall. Handel's Acis and Galatea formed the first part of the programme. The soloists were Mrs. Williams (Truro), Mr. Thomas (Truro Cathedral), Mr. Rowe (Camborne), all of whom sang most artistically. Mr. Thomas kindly undertook the part of Acis at very short notice. The choruses were sung with plenty of spirit. The accompanists were Mrs. Collings, pianoforte, and Mr. H. V. Pearce, American organ. The Rev. W. M. D. La Touche conducted. The second part of the programme consisted of a miscellaneous selection.

HERTFORD.—The East Herts School of Music gave a highly creditable performance of Parts 1 and 2 of the Creation, on the 2nd ult., in the Corn Exchange. The chorus and orchestra were supplemented by members of the Ware Musical Society and by professional assistance from London, and under the direction of Mr. Gregory gave one of the best performances yet heard in Hertford. The solo parts were sung by Miss Florence Monk, Mr. G. H. Gregory (who replaced Mr. Trelawny Cobham), and Mr. R. E. Miles. Miss Monk won special favour by her charming rendering of "With verdure clad" and "On mighty pens," both of which she sang with admirable taste and expression. There was a short miscellaneous second part.

KINGSTON-ON-THAMES.—An Organ Recital was given by Mr. A. Percy Alderson, at All Saints' Church, on the 18th ult. The programme included works by J. S. Bach, Bennett, Guilmant, Mendelssohn, Silas, Salomé, and Liszt.

LOUGHTON.—The Choral Society gave its final Concert of the season on the 24th ult., when Mendelssohn's Athalie was well performed. Miss Edythe Kemp, Miss Florence Rawe, and Mrs. Jay sang the solos. The verses were read by Mr. H. W. Elphinstone, and the accompaniments were played by Miss Kate Mead and Mr. J. H. Lauer. The first part contained part-songs by Alice Mary Smith, Dr. Reynolds ("Crossing the Bar"), Mendelssohn, Cowen, &c., and the Concert was conducted by Mr. Henry Riding.

MIDDLESBROUGH.—A Pianoforte Recital was given with great success on the 4th ult., at the Cleveland Society's Hall, by Miss Louie Heath, who played pieces by Beethoven, Schumann, Chopin, Edward German, Lachner, and others. Songs by Handel, Liszt, and Cornelius were contributed by Miss Bessie Kilburn.

MADELEY, SALOP.—The Choral Society gave its last Concert on the 8th ult., when the pièce de resistance was Dr. C. H. Lloyd's beautiful work The Song of Balder, the soprano solo being taken by one of the members, Mrs. Stubbs. Another feature was the excellent quartet (A.T.T.B.), who gave in good style five or six pieces which were highly appreciated. A violoncello solo of Goltermann's, by the Conductor, with two choruses by the Society and a few songs by members, helped to make up the programme. There was an unusually large audience for the time of year.

ST. AUSTELL.—A successful performance of The Messiah was given at a Festival Service in the Parish Church, on the 16th ult., by an augmented choir of sixty voices, under the conductorship of Mr. James Griffin, the church Organist. The soloists were Mrs. Herring Mason, Misses Griffin and Hicks, Mr. Gilbert W. Ball, and the Rev. A. V. Thornton. The choruses were rendered with great precision, especially "Let us break," "All we like sheep," and "Hallelujah." Mr. F. J. Mountford very ably presided at the organ. The fine old Parish Church was crowded by a very large congregation.

TUNBRIDGE.—On the 16th ult. a successful Concert was given by the Amateur Musical Society in the Public Hall. The soloists were Miss Julia Jones, Mr. Bernard Lane, Mr. Arthur Barlow, Miss Caro Clifford; Miss Jackson was the accompanist; Mr. G. Dawes was the leader of the band; Mr. M. O. Hodgson presided at the harmonium, and Mr. B. S. J. Waghorne conducted. The first part of the programme consisted of E. Prout's cantata Alfred, which was well rendered throughout, the triumphal march being exceedingly well played by the band. The second part was miscellaneous, and included Mr. A. Herbert Brewer's unaccompanied part-song, conducted by the author, and entitled "Song and Summer," which was beautifully rendered.

WASHFORD.—A Concert in Memoriam of Sterndale Bennett was given by the Roadwater Musical Society, at the Railway Hotel, on the 18th ult., when the programme consisted entirely of compositions by that musician, and included his cantata the May Queen. The solos in this work were sung by Miss Marsland, Miss E. Davis, Mr. T. Taylor, and Mr. Loveday. The other vocalists who took part in the miscellaneous portion of the programme were Miss Davis, Miss C. Risden, Miss Gooding, Miss Ayres, Miss B. Brewer, and Miss M. Hole; Messrs. J. R. Davis, J. H. Davis, Gooding, and H. Brewer. Miss A. M. Green and Mr. T. J. Dudeney (who also conducted) played the Three Diversions (Op. 17) for pianoforte duet. The Concert was highly successful.

WOODHOUSE, LEEDS.—Mr. Herbert Walton, Organist of St. Mark's Church, gave a Recital on the organ in that Church on the 15th ult. The programme included Bach's Passacaglia, an Adagio by A. Guilmant, Liszt's Prelude and Fugue on "B. A. C. H.," Mozart's Grande Fantaisie in F, Andante con Variazioni by Rea, and Widor's Grande Symphonie (No. 6). Miss Beecroft was the vocalist. The offertory was to be devoted to the Renovation Fund.

ORGAN APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. Alfred Borwell, Organist and Choirmaster to St. Luke's, Hackney.—Mr. J. M. Ennis, Organist and Choirmaster to the Church of St. Mary, Brookfield, Dartmouth Park Hill.—Mr. Geo. H. Lawrence, Organist and Choirmaster to Kentish Town Congregational Church.—Mr. Ernest Lindop, Organist and Choirmaster to the Parish Church, Wigton, Cumberland.—Mr. Henry Long, Organist and Choirmaster to St. John the Evangelist, Walworth Road.—Mr. J. A. Rodgers, Organist and Choirmaster to St. Mary's Church, Sheffield.—Mr. Walter J. Searls, Organist and Director of the Choir to St. Mark's, Regent's Park.—Mr. J. Harraway Slape, Organist and Choirmaster to St. John's, Kilburn.—Mr. John H. E. Ashworth, to St. Andrew's, Plaistow.—Mr. Burnham Horner, to St. Luke's, South Kensington.

CHOIR APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. Fred. R. H. Ashton (Alto), to St. Anne's, Soho.—Mr. Harry Challenger (Alto), to St. Michael's, Paddington.—Mr. F. Bryett (Leading Tenor), to St. Paul's Church, Tottenham.

MR. HARRISON BROCKBANK (Baritone, Royal Italian Opera). For Festivals, Operatic Recitals, Concerts, &c. ("Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Faust"—special study of these works.) For terms and dates, address, 4, Lloyd Street, W.C.

REQUIRED, 2ND TENOR, at once. For first-class established Quartet. Professional, and South London resident preferred. Quartet, Novello and Co., 80 & 81, Queen St., E.C.

MR. ALFRED GREENWOOD (Tenor Vocalist and Teacher of Singing and Violin) receives PUPILS at his residence, 61, Talgarth Road, West Kensington.

MR. MALDWYN HUMPHREYS, A.R.A.M. (Tenor), begs to notify his CHANGE of ADDRESS to 5, Bartholomew Road, London, N.W.

WANTED, DEPUTY-ORGANIST, for July Services. Choral. Anglican. Organist, St. Teath, Camelford, Cornwall.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO, EWER & CO.

GERMAN, EDWARD.—Three Dances from the Music to Henry VIII. Arranged for Military Band by DAN GODFREY, Jun. 15s.

—— Three Dances. Pianoforte Arrangement for Four Hands. Paper cover, 3s.

COWEN, F. H.—"Summer on the river." Cantata. For Female Voices. The words written by SHAPCOTT WENSLEY. Paper cover, 2s.

STANFORD, C. VILLIERS.—Mass in G major, Op. 46. For Soli, Chorus, Orchestra, and Organ (Pianoforte arrangement by the COMPOSER). Paper cover, 2s. 6d.

SAUNDERS, GORDON.—Examples in Strict Counterpoint (Old and New). (No. 41. Novello, Ewer and Co.'s Music Primers. Edited by Sir JOHN STAINER.) Paper cover, 3s.; paper boards, 3s. 6d.

WILLIAMS, C. LEE.—"Gethsemane." A Church Cantata. 1st Violin, 2s. 6d.; 2nd Violin, 2s. 6d.; Viola, 3s.; Violoncello and Bass, 2s. 6d.

SCHUBERT, FRANZ.—Six Valses. Arranged for Violin and Pianoforte by SIEGFRIED JACOBY. (No. 33. Novello, Ewer and Co.'s Albums for Violin and Pianoforte.) Paper cover, 2s. 6d.

TAYLOR, FRANKLIN.—Progressive Studies for the Pianoforte. Book 4o. "Repetition," Part I. Paper cover, 1s.

TALLIS.—Preces and Responses, with harmonized Confession (Ely Use). Arranged for Four Voices by JOSEPH BARNBY. 1½d.

BROOK, JOHN.—Te Deum laudamus. In Chant form. 2d.

CARNALL, ARTHUR—(in F). Magnificat and Nunc dimittis. 4d.

FROST, CHARLES JOSEPH—(in A flat). Te Deum laudamus. For Choir and Congregation. 3d.

GOSS, JOHN—(in C). Te Deum and Benedictus (with Welsh words). 4d.

HOLLOWAY, F. W.—(in B flat). Magnificat and Nunc dimittis. 4d.

LAING, P. M. T.—(in F). Benedictus qui venit and Agnus Dei. 3d.

DUNSTAN, R.—"Lead, kindly Light." Hymn-Anthem. For Four Voices. (No. 425. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 3d.

—— "Sun of my soul." Hymn-Anthem. For Four Voices. (No. 426. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 3d.

GILL, W. H.—"Sweet Saviour, bless us." Short Anthem. To be sung at the close of Public Worship. 3d.

METCALFE, JOHN A.—"Prevent us, O Lord." A short Anthem, for Special and General Use. 3d.

MILLER, C. E.—"When Israel came out of Egypt." Anthem. For Four Voices. 6d.

COULDREY, H. R.—Vesper Hymn, and Final Amen. 1d.

FEARNLEY, JOHN.—Festival Hymn. For the Wakefield Diocese. 1d.; or 9d. per dozen.

LAING, P. M. T.—Two Three-fold Amens, on card. 9d. per doz.

LAMB, DENNIS.—Four Hymns. The words selected from "Hymns, Ancient and Modern." 2d.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. Edited by W. G. MCNAUGHT:—

No. 81. Ariel's Song (Two-part Song) .. H. W. SCHARTAU 1½d.
„ 82. Gentle Moon (Two-part Song) .. H. W. SCHARTAU 1½d.
„ 83. A wish for the mountains (Two-part Song) F. ABT 1½d.
„ 84. Merry time for boys and girls (Two-part Song) GUSTAV ERNEST 1½d.
„ 85. Fairies' Lullaby (Two-part Song) FLORENCE A. MARSHALL 1½d.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW. No. 12. "Swing Song." Two-part Song. By GUSTAV ERNEST. "Humpty Dumpty." Round. By E. T. SWEETING. Studies in Time and Tune combined. By W. G. MCNAUGHT. 1½d.

NOVELLO'S OCTAVO EDITION of TWO-PART SONGS for FEMALE VOICES:—

No. 65. The song of the gale .. ..MYLES B. FOSTER 2d.
„ 66. Cradle Song .. .. „ „ 3d.
„ 67. The Butterfly's Ball .. .. .. „ „ 3d.
„ 68. The Moon .. .. „ „ 3d.
„ 69. The music of the woods .. .. .. „ „ 2d.
„ 70. Spring Song .. .. „ „ 3d.

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

ANGER, J. HUMFREY.—"All on a summer's morning." Madrigal. For S.S.A.T.B.B. The words written by E. OXENFORD. 6d.

BARCLAY, E. W.—"Sons of England." The words written by LUCY R. HARDY. 6d.

BENNETT, GEORGE J.—"The Trysting Tree." A Four-part Song. (No. 665. Novello's Part-Song Book.) 2d.

GOODHART, ARTHUR.—"Song of the wall." Words written by ARTHUR BENSON. (Eton School Songs, No. 4.) 6d.

SCHUBERT, FRANZ.—"Fair Olivia" ("Who is Sylvia?"). Serenade in "Twelfth Night," as sung at Daly's Theatre. Arranged for Mixed Voices by HENRY WIDMER. 4d.

WEST, JOHN E.—"Song of the silent land." A Four-part Song. The words written by LONGFELLOW. (No. 669. Novello's Part-Song Book.) 3d.

BROWNE, J. LEWIS.—"I am not old." Song. For Bass or Baritone. 2s.

FRY, HORACE B.—"Braemar." Song. For Mezzo-Soprano or Baryton. 2s.

HOWELL, MARY.—"My little one." Song. The words written by FRANK MACEY. 2s.

TOMLYN, ALFRED W.—"De Profundis." Sacred Song. The words written by W. CARTWRIGHT NEWSAM. 2s.

BUNNETT, EDWARD.—Minuetto. For the Organ. 1s. 6d.

—— Three Short Pieces. For the Organ. (No. 1. Larghetto, in A flat major; No. 2. Allegretto Pastorale, in A major; No. 3. Andante con moto, in F major.) 2s.

NOVELLO'S PUBLICATIONS in the TONIC SOL-FA NOTATION. Translated by W. G. MCNAUGHT.

No. 789. Te Deum and Benedictus (Welsh words) JOHN GOSS 2d.
„ 785. Thou wilt keep Him in perfect peace C. L. WILLIAMS 1d.

BOOTH, JOSIAH.—"The day of rest." 1s.

FANING, EATON.—"Buttercups and Daisies." 1s.

MAUNDER, J. H.—Te Deum (No. 1.). 2d.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S New and Standard Publications.

NEW SERIES OF MODERN METHODS.

NO. 1.—WALTER MACFARREN'S PIANOFORTE METHOD. Paper cover, 3s. net; cloth, 4s. 6d. net; post-free.

NO. 2.—OTTO PEINIGER'S VIOLIN METHOD. Paper cover, 3s. 6d. net; cloth, 5s. net; post-free.

NO. 5.—DR. H. KEETON'S CHURCH and CATHEDRAL CHORISTERS' SINGING METHOD. Paper cover, 2s. net; cloth, 3s. net; post-free.

NO. 6.—CHARLES WEBB'S TONIC SOL-FA CLASS-SINGING METHOD. Limp cloth, 2s. net; post-free.

Other Methods in preparation.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S LIST of GLEES, &c., containing a choice Selection, by the most eminent Composers, of Two and Three-part Songs for equal voices and Songs for Classes in unison; many numbers in Tonic Sol-fa Notation. Just Published, arranged by JAS. BATCHELDER for Alto, two Tenors, and Bass, "The Anchor's Weighed," "The Men of Harlech," "Ye Banks and Braes."

IMPORTANT TO CHORAL SOCIETIES.

F. H. COWEN'S favourite CANTATA for FEMALE VOICES, "THE FAIRIES' SPRING" (An Elfin Legend). Price 2s. 6d. net; Tonic Sol-fa Edition, 1s. net.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S new Edition of STANDARD CLASSICAL PIECES. List on application.

ALSO

CLASSICAL MUSIC (new Series) selected, fingered, and edited by ADOLPHE SCHLOESSER, Professor at the Royal Academy of Music. List on application.

ORGAN MUSIC.—BEST'S HANDEL'S CHORUSES. BEST'S COLLECTION of ORGAN COMPOSITIONS. New Compositions and Arrangements. Detailed Lists on application.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S New and Standard Publications.

—CONTINUED.

THE CANDIDATES' PRACTICAL SCALE and ARPEGGIO HANDBOOKS. Specially arranged for the use of Students preparing for the Examinations (Pianoforte) of the Associated Board of the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music.

BY GRAHAM P. MOORE

Compiled in strict accordance with the Syllabus of the Associated Board, and each Book containing full directions as to the requirements of the Examiners. Issued in four Books, each Book being complete in itself, and containing only those scales required by Candidates for their respective Examinations.

Book 1. For the Local School Examinations, lower division. 1s. net.
„ 2. Higher division. 1s. 6d. net.
„ 3. For the Local Centre Examinations, junior grade. 1s. 6d. net.
„ 4. Senior grade: Part 1, Scales; Part 2, Arpeggi. Each 2s. net.

COMPLETE SCALE and ARPEGGIO TUTOR. By ADOLPHE SCHLOESSER. Containing all the Scales and Arpeggi required by Pupils preparing for the Metropolitan, Local, and other Examinations, including the Associated Board of the R.A.M. and R.C.M. Engraved in bold style, and printed on best paper, giving clear directions how to practise.

Part 1. Scales. 33 pages .. .. 5s.
„ 2. Arpeggios. 45 pages .. .. 5s.
Complete .. .. 8s.

THE HISTORY and CONSTRUCTION of the ORGAN. By Dr. E. J. HOPKINS and Dr. E. F. RIMBAULT. This famous Work, complete, 1 Vol., 636 pp., reduced to 21s. net. Also, in five parts, 5s. each.

VIOLIN and VIOLONCELLO MUSIC.—New Compositions by MAUDE VALÉRIE WHITE, TIVADAR NACHÈZ, DAVID POPPER, LEO STERN, and other well-known Authors. Lists on application.

SPOHR'S GREAT VIOLIN SCHOOL. Translated by JOHN BISHOP. The only version approved by SPOHR. Handsomely bound, cloth, gilt, 15s. net. Patronized and adopted by the Royal Academy of Music. Note.—In ordering, specify R. C. and Co.'s Edition.

NEW SONGS by MAUDE VALÉRIE WHITE.

Infinite Love .. .. Words by DANTE G. ROSSETTI.
Dedicated to and sung by Mr. PLUNKET GREENE.
Douleurs Divines .. .. Words by EMILE AUGIER.
(English version by EUGÈNE OUDIN.)
Si j'étais Dieu .. .. Words by SULLY PRUDHOMME.
Ton Nom .. .. Words by SULLY PRUDHOMME.
(English version by EUGÈNE OUDIN.)

Six Volkslieder (German and English Words). Folio size.:—
No. 1. "Lebewohl." | No. 4. "In dem Garten."
„ 2. "Wanderlied." | „ 5. "Mailüfterl."
„ 3. "Ich bin Dein." | „ 6. "Sonnenuntergang."
Each Song in two or more keys. Each 2s. net.

CROSSING THE BAR. LAWRENCE KELLIE'S Popular Setting of TENNYSON'S Words. ARRANGED AS AN ANTHEM by EDWIN H. LEMARE. Price 6d.

THE BENEDICITE. Set to music by EDWIN H. LEMARE (in B flat), price 3d. net; also by ARTHUR E. GODFREY (in C), price 3d. net. THE PATER NOSTER. Composed for the celebration of the Holy Communion, by EDWIN H. LEMARE. Price 3d. net. THREE KYRIES, and A SEVENFOLD AMEN. By ARTHUR E. GODFREY. Price 3d. net. TE DEUM and BENEDICTUS, from Festival Service in F, by EDWIN H. LEMARE. Price 4d. each net.

6, NEW BURLINGTON ST., LONDON, W.

GRATIS.—"Comparison of English and German Methods of Teaching Harmony." Candidates preparing for Exams., and every Pianist, Vocalist, Violinist should obtain a copy. Post-free. SOMMER, A.L.A.M., 14, Mardale Street, London, W.

WANTED, ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER. Salary, £50 to £60. Address, Vicar, St. Mark's, Reigate.

MUSIC and PIANOFORTE BUSINESS to be DISPOSED OF. Busy part of the S.E. of London. Good counter business; also Tuning and Teaching connection. Splendid frontage and showrooms. Excellent opportunity for good Tuner or energetic man with small capital. Price £1,500. Stock at valuation. Satisfactory reason for selling and all particulars. Apply, B. H., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

EXPERIENCED TUNER and REPAIRER, open to ENGAGEMENT. Six years in present situation; three years as Branch Manager. First-class references. Address, Carl, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

TUNER, Good, seeks ENGAGEMENT. Knowledge of American Organs and Harmoniums. Max, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

CONTENTS.

	Page
Music in Chicago	329
Dr. Mackenzie on "Falstaff"	330
From my Study	331
Further on Music and Manners	334
M. Legouvé's Reminiscences of Malibran	335
Occasional Notes	336
Facts, Rumours, and Remarks	338
Royal Opera, Covent Garden	340
Royal Choral Society	341
Philharmonic Society	341
The Bach Choir	341
Middlesex Choral Union	342
Crystal Palace—Mr. Manns's Benefit Concert	342
Amateur Orchestral Societies	342
Mr. Moberly's String Orchestra	342
The New Opera at the Savoy	343
Two German Musical Festivals	343
The Laistner Choir	345
Pianoforte Recitals	345
The Guildhall School Operatic Students	346
The Musical Artists' Society	346
Musical Guild	346
Royal College of Music	347
Woodside Park Musical Society	347
Gresham College	347
Musical Association	348
College of Organists	348
The Wagner Society	348
Plainsong and Mediæval Society	348
Grieg's Harmony	349
Obituary	349
Music in Bristol	349
„ Edinburgh	350
„ Glasgow	350
„ Liverpool	355
„ Sheffield and District	355
„ Wilts and Hants	356
„ America	356
Four-part Song—"Wanderer's Night-Song." Charles Wood	349
General News (London)	356
Reviews	361
Foreign Notes	363
Correspondence	365
Answers to Correspondents	365
General News (Country)	365
List of Music published during the last Month	367

THE MUSICAL TIMES.

SCALE OF TERMS FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

	£	s.	d.
Two Lines	0	3	0
Three Lines	0	3	4
For every additional Line	0	0	10
Half a Column	2	0	0
A Column	4	0	0
A Page	7	10	0

Special Pages (Cover, &c.) by arrangement.
A remittance should be sent with each Advertisement.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To ensure insertion Advertisements should reach the Office NOT LATER THAN THE

TWENTY-SECOND

OF EACH MONTH.

YOUNG MAN.—ASSISTANT in Piano and General MUSIC BUSINESS, in Midlands. Good Pianist, Book-keeper, &c. Say age, experience, salary, &c. Z. A., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

STEDMAN'S MUSICAL AGENCY

(Established 1877, for the transaction of all Musical Business, Professional and General),

12, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W.

CHURCH FESTIVALS of all kinds arranged.
ONE HUNDRED CHOIR BOYS.
CHOIRS of LADIES and GENTLEMEN from 25 to 300 Voices.
ORCHESTRAS of 20 to 100 Performers. All Classes of Artists for Opera, Theatre, Concerts, and for Banquets and Garden Parties.
PERSONAL SUPERVISION.

ESTABLISHED 1843.

GEO. ROGERS & SONS'

PIANOFORTES.

(Makers to the Emperor of Russia.)

NOBLE IN TONE.

HANDSOME IN APPEARANCE.

UNRIVALLED FOR DURABILITY.

THE FINEST PIANOS IN THE WORLD.

PIANOS

FOR INDIA AND THE COLONIES.

ALSO YACHT PIANOS.

GEO. ROGERS & SONS,

60, BERNERS ST., OXFORD ST., LONDON, W.

THE OLD FIRM.

P. CONACHER & CO.,

Organ Builders,

SPRINGWOOD WORKS,

HUDDERSFIELD.

TWO GOLD MEDALS.

NICHOLSON AND CO.,

ORGAN BUILDERS,

PALACE YARD, WORCESTER.

(ESTABLISHED 1841.)

Specifications and Estimates sent free.

Just Published.

NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

No. 41.

EDITED BY SIR JOHN STAINER.

EXAMPLES

IN STRICT COUNTERPOINT

(OLD AND NEW)

BY

GORDON SAUNDERS

D.Mus., Oxon.

Price Three Shillings.

In paper boards, Three Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

IRISH

SONGS AND BALLADS

THE WORDS BY

ALFRED PERCEVAL GRAVES

THE MUSIC ARRANGED BY

C. VILLIERS STANFORD.

Price Four Shillings.

CONTENTS:

The Song of the Turf.
The Exiles.
Arranmore Boat Song.
The Roving Pedlar.
The Zephyrs blest.
Colonel Carty.
The Ploughman's whistle.
Love's hallowed seal.
The March of the Maguire.
Lullaby.
A Lament.
The Song of the Ghost.
Silver and Gold.
Mavourneen Dhu.
The Darling.
O Mary, thy laugh was sweet.
Hush song.
The Kilkenny cats.
Sweet Isle.
The Hero of Limerick.
Loved bride of O'Byrne.
Our Inniskilling boy.
Festival Song (Pleraca).
Johnny Cox.
The Irish Reel.
Molleen Oge.
Last night I dreamt of my own [true love.
Bright love of my heart.
My Colleen rue.
Chieftain of Tyrconnell.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

SONGS

WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

COMPOSED BY

W. A. MOZART.

THE ENGLISH VERSION BY THE REV. J. TROUTBECK, D.D.

CONTENTS

The Enchanter.
The Violet.
Parting and Meeting.
When evening falls.
To Chloe.
Unhappy Love.
Longing for the Spring.
The oncoming of Spring.
Children at play.
Cupid awakened.
Uncertainty.
Happy friendship.
Why climb.
Worldless woe.
To Loneliness.
Arete.
The Little Spinner.
Life's Journey.
Contentment.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S

ALBUMS FOR VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE.

No. 33.

SIX VALSES

COMPOSED BY

FRANZ SCHUBERT

ARRANGED FOR VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE BY

SIEGFRIED JACOBY.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HYMNS FOR SOLDIERS

SUITABLE FOR USE AT ALL

MILITARY SERVICES

SELECTED CHIEFLY FROM "THE HYMNARY"

BY THE

REV. ARTHUR ROBINS, M.A.

PRICE ONE PENNY.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HOFLAND, MARY A.—BUDS OF SONG.

Twelve bright melodies for young voices. 1s.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NOVELLO'S CONCERT EDITION.

HANDEL'S SONGS

FROM THE

ORATORIOS.

TWELVE SONGS

FOR

SOPRANO

Edited, with marks for expression, phrasing, and breathing,

BY

ALBERTO RANDEGGER.

Price Two Shillings.

CONTENTS.

Air—"Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion" (Messiah).
Air—"Come unto Him" (Messiah).
Air—"How beautiful are the feet" (Messiah).
Air—"I know that my Redeemer liveth" (Messiah).
Recit.—"No more in Zion" .. .. } (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"Wise men flatt'ring, may deceive you" }
Recit.—"O grant it, Heaven" .. .. } (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"So shall the lute and harp awake" }
Recit.—"O let eternal honours crown His name" .. .. } (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"From mighty kings he took the spoil" }
Recit.—"To Heaven's Almighty King we kneel" .. .. } (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"O Liberty! thou choicest treasure" .. }
Air—"Pious orgies" (Judas Maccabæus).
Recit.—"Ye sacred Priests" .. } (Jephtha).
Air—"Farewell, ye limpid springs" }
Air—"O! had I Jubal's lyre" (Joshua).
Recit.—"O, worse than death" .. } (Theodora).
Air—"Angels ever bright and fair" }

TWELVE SONGS

FOR

TENOR

Edited, with marks for expression, phrasing, and breathing,

BY

ALBERTO RANDEGGER.

Price Two Shillings.

CONTENTS.

Recit.—"Comfort ye, my people" } (Messiah).
Aria—Ev'ry valley shall be exalted" }
Recit.—"Thy rebuke hath broken his heart" .. } (Messiah).
Arioso—"Behold, and see if there be any sorrow" }
Recit.—"He was cut off out of the land of the living" } (Messiah).
Air—"But Thou didst not leave his soul in hell" .. }
Recit.—"He that dwelleth in Heaven" } (Messiah).
Air—"Thou shalt break them" .. .. }
Recit.—"'Tis well, my friends" } (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"Call forth thy powers" }
Recit.—"Thanks to my brethren" .. .. } (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"How vain is man who boasts in fight" }
Recit.—"My arms! against this Gorgias will I go" } (Judas Maccabæus)
Air—"Sound an alarm!" .. .. }
Recit.—"O loss of sight" } (Samson).
Air—"Total eclipse" .. }
Recit.—"Deeper and deeper still" } (Jephtha).
Air—"Waft her, angels" .. .. }
Air—"The enemy said" (Israel in Egypt).
Recit.—"My grief for this" .. .. } (Samson).
Air—"Why does the God of Israel sleep?" }
Air—"Where'er you walk" (Semele).
Recit.—"O God, who from the suckling's mouth" } (Esther).
Air—"Sing songs of praise" .. .. }

TWELVE SONGS

FOR

CONTRALTO

Edited, with marks for expression, phrasing, and breathing,

BY

ALBERTO RANDEGGER.

Price Two Shillings.

CONTENTS.

Recit.—"Behold! a Virgin shall conceive" .. } (Messiah).
Air—"O thou that tellest good tidings to Zion" }
Recit.—"Then shall the eyes of the blind be opened" } (Messiah).
Air—"He shall feed His flock like a shepherd" .. }
Air—"He was despised and rejected" (Messiah).
Air—"Father of Heav'n" (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"Return, O God of Hosts" (Samson).
Air—"Their land brought forth frogs" (Israel in Egypt).
Air—"Thou shalt bring them in" (Israel in Egypt).
Air—"O Lord, whose mercies" (Saul).
Air—"Lord, to Thee each night and day" (Theodora).
Recit.—"Great prophetess, my soul's on fire" } (Deborah).
Air—"In the battle fame pursuing" .. .. }
Recit.—"'Twill be a painful separation" } (Jephtha).
Air—"In gentle murmurs will I mourn" }
Recit.—"See, she blushing turns her eyes" }
Air—"Hymen, haste! thy torch prepare" } (Semele).

TWELVE SONGS

FOR

BARITONE OR BASS

Edited, with marks for expression, phrasing, and breathing,

BY

ALBERTO RANDEGGER.

Price Two Shillings.

CONTENTS.

Recit.—"Thus saith the Lord" .. .. } (Messiah).
Air—"But who may abide the day of His coming" }
Recit.—"For, behold, darkness shall cover the earth" } (Messiah).
Air—"The people that walked in darkness" .. .. }
Air—"Why do the nations so furiously rage together?" (Messiah).
Recit.—"Behold, I tell you a mystery" } (Messiah).
Air—"The trumpet shall sound" .. }
Recit.—"I feel the Deity within" } (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"Arm, arm, ye brave" .. }
Recit.—"Be comforted" .. .. } (Judas Maccabæus).
Air—"The Lord worketh wonders" }
Recit.—"The good we wish for" .. .. .. } (Samson).
Air—"Thy glorious deeds inspir'd my tongue" }
Air—"Honour and arms" (Samson).
Air—"How willing my paternal love" (Samson).
Recit.—"It must be so" .. .. } (Jephtha).
Air—"Pour forth no more unheeded pray'rs" }
Air—"Revenge, Timotheus cries" (Alexander's Feast).
Recit.—"I'll hear no more" }
Air—"Pluck root and branch" } (Esther).

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

THE BRISTOL TUNE BOOK

EDITION 1891.

Containing 905 Tunes and Chants.

NOW READY.

THIRD SERIES, including Supplement 1881, containing 190 Tunes and 118 varieties of metre.

A COMPANION TO ALL HYMN BOOKS.

EDITION 1881.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 9.	Limp Cloth.. ..	4 0	No. 11.	Small Edition ..	3 0
„ 10.	Cloth Boards, red edges	5 0	„ 12.	Tonic Sol-fa ..	3 0

THIRD SERIES.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 13.	Limp Cloth ..	2 0	No. 16.	Tonic Sol-fa, limp cloth	1 6
„ 15.	Small Edition, limp cloth	1 6

COMPLETE EDITION, 1891.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 17.	Limp Cloth ..	5 0	No. 19.	Small Edition ..	3 6
„ 18.	Cloth Boards, red edges	6 0	„ 20.	Tonic Sol-fa ..	3 6

Communications and enquiries as to copyright, and also as to supplying at reduced prices, may be addressed to the Bristol Publishers.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Bristol: W. AND F. MORGAN, Clare Street.
And all Booksellers and Musicsellers.

Price 3s. 6d., cloth, red edges.

THE TUNE BOOK, with the additional Tunes as used at ST. ALBAN'S, HOLBORN, containing nearly 270 Tunes, for Long, Common, Short, and Peculiar Metres; together with several Gregorian Hymns and Antiphons; the Eight Gregorian Tones; the Music of the Reproaches; the Seven Last Words; and Litany Tunes, &c. London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

FOR MALE VOICE CHOIR.—THE NATIONAL ANTHEM, price 4d.; JUBILEE ODE, price 6d. net. By GEORGE RISELEY.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Twenty-third Edition.

JOULE'S COLLECTION OF 527 CHANTS, 57 RESPONSES, &c. Reduced price, 4s. 6d., paper cover; 6s., limp cloth; separate vocal parts, 2s. each.—Tonic Sol-fa Notation, Score, 1s. 6d.
The Chants are selected with due reference to the position of the Reciting-note.

THE PSALTER, PROPER PSALMS, HYMNS, and CANTICLES. Pointed for Chanting by B. ST. J. B. JOULE. Large type, price 2s. 6d. This Psalter, having been collated with the Sealed Books, is free from the errors contained in all other pointed Psalters, through printing from the incorrect copies commonly sold by the Stationers.

Tenth Edition.

JOULE'S DIRECTORIUM CHORI ANGLICANUM. 18mo, price 1s.; in cloth, 1s. 6d.

Seventh Edition.

JOULE'S DIRECTORIUM CHORI ANGLICANUM. 4to, in cloth, elegant, price 7s. 6d.

Seventh Edition.

THE ORDER FOR THE HOLY COMMUNION. Harmonised on a Monotone in a very simple manner for Parochial use. By B. ST. J. B. JOULE. Price 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

COMPOSED BY EDWYN A. CLARE.

Effective and not difficult.

PRAISE THE LORD, O JERUSALEM. 11th 1,000 .. .. .. 3d.
THE LORD REIGNETH. New (Sol-fa, 2d.) .. .. 3d.
Two easy Anthems, suitable for any special occasion.
MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS in D. 5th 1,000.. .. .. 4d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Third Thousand.

MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in E flat, by WILLIAM S. VINNING, Mus. Bac., Cantab. Price 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Third Thousand.

VESPER HYMN. To be sung after Evensong. Words and music by GEORGE KETT. "A very charming hymn-tune."—Sir John Stainer. On card. Price One Penny.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Words alone, for congregational use, One Shilling per hundred, of the AUTHOR, 100, Gordon Road, Nunhead, S.E.

NEW TUNES (Seven) for Sunday School Festivals and Anniversaries. Music, 7s. per 100; words, 2s Special title-page free for quantities. Send stamp for sample to Sunday School Union, 1, Piccadilly, Manchester.

Just Published.

NEW ANTHEM.

THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD

FOR FOUR VOICES

BY

EDWARD BUNNETT, MUS.D., CANTAB.

Price Threepence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

COMPOSITIONS

BY

T. MEE PATTISON.

CANTATAS.	Staff. s. d.	Sol-fa. s. d.
The Ancient Mariner	2 6	0 6
Do. do. (Choruses only)	1 0
The Lay of the Last Minstrel	2 6
Do. do. (Choruses only)	1 0
May Day	1 0	0 6
The Miracles of Christ (Sacred)	1 0	0 6

ANTHEMS, &c.

All Thy works praise Thee (Harvest)	0 3	0 1½
Thou visitest the earth (Harvest)	0 2
I know that my Redeemer liveth (Easter)	0 3
There were shepherds (Christmas)..	0 2
Thirteen Offertory Sentences	0 4
Six Kyries	0 2
Te Deum laudamus (in F)	0 3

ORIGINAL ORGAN COMPOSITIONS.

Fifteen Introductory and Concluding Voluntaries .. .. 3s. 6d.
Five Concluding Voluntaries .. .. 1s. 6d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

COMPOSITIONS by VINCENT MORGAN.

O LORD, HAVE MERCY—For Baritone Solo and Chorus. Price Sixpence.
"A charming Anthem, with several beautiful climaxes."
PRAISE WAITETH FOR THEE, O GOD. Full Anthem, for Harvest or General use. Price Threepence.
"It is thoroughly singable, devotional, and effective."
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW CHURCH MUSIC

BY

CYRIL BÖWDLER.

SERVICE in E (3rd Ed.): Te Deum, 4d.; Benedictus, 4d.; Complete Communion, 1s.; Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, 4d.
SERVICE in F: Te Deum, 4d.; Benedictus, 4d.; Complete Communion, 1s.; Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, 4d.

ANTHEMS.

LOVE NOT THE WORLD. Four voices, S. and T. Solos, and (ad lib.) 2nd Choir .. .. 6d.
DELIGHT THOU IN THE LORD. S. Solo and four voices 4d.
THE ANGEL OF THE LORD. Four voices .. .. .. 4d.
GIVE EAR, O LORD. Four voices.. .. .. 4d.
THE LORD IS GRACIOUS. S. Solo and four voices .. .. 4d.
I HEARD A VOICE FROM HEAVEN. Four voices ..

London: WEEKES and Co., 14, Hanover Street, W.

PREVENT US, O LORD.—A Short Anthem for Special and General Use. By JOHN A. METCALFE. Price Threepence. Copies from the COMPOSER, Guisborough, Yorkshire; or, London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

In the Press.

CANTATA

SET TO ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON'S POEM

CROSSING THE BAR

FOR FULL ORCHESTRA, CHORUS, AND PIANOFORTE

BY ALFRED HARBOROUGH.

Vocal Score, with the Orchestral Score arranged for two performers on the Pianoforte, 2s. 6d.; String Parts, 5s.; Wind Parts in the Press.

Full Score on application to the Publishers.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

OFFERTORY SENTENCES, RESPONSES, &c.

THE OFFERTORY SENTENCES, with an Appendix for Festal use. Set to music by JOSEPH BARNBY. Price 1s.; or in Numbers at 2d. each. Tonic Sol-fa, 6d.

1. Let your light so shine.
2. Lay not up for yourselves.
3. Whatsoever ye would.
4. Not every one.
5. Zacchæus stood forth.
6. Who goeth a-warfare.
7. If we have sown.
8. Do ye not know.
9. He that soweth little.
10. Let him that is taught.
11. While we have time.
12. Godliness is great riches.
13. Charge them who are rich.
14. God is not unrighteous.
15. To do good.
16. Whoso hath this world's good.
17. Give alms of thy goods.
18. Be merciful after thy power.
19. He that hath pity upon the poor.
20. Blessed be the man.
21. Let your light so shine. Festal setting.

THE OFFERTORY SENTENCES, set to music by J. T. FIELD. Price 1s.

1. Let your light so shine.
2. Lay not up for yourselves.
3. Whatsoever ye would.
4. Not every one.
5. Zacchæus stood forth.
6. Who goeth a-warfare.
7. If we have sown.
8. Do ye not know.
9. He that soweth little.
10. Let him that is taught.
11. While we have time.
12. Godliness is great riches.
13. Charge them who are rich.
14. God is not unrighteous.
15. To do good.
16. Whoso hath this world's good.
17. Give alms of thy goods.
18. Be merciful after thy power.
19. He that hath pity.
20. Blessed be the man.

OFFERTORY SENTENCES.

	s.	d.
JOSEPH BARNBY. "Let your light so shine," "Whoso hath this world's good," and "Blessed is the man," with other movements, from the Service in E	1	0
J. BAPTISTE CALKIN. "Whoso hath this world's good," with other movements, from the Service in B flat	1	0
G. M. GARRETT. "Lay not up for yourselves," with other movements, from the Service in D	1	0
G. M. GARRETT. "Give alms of thy goods," with other movements, from the Service in F	1	0
JOHN STAINER. "Let your light so shine," "Lay not up for yourselves," "Whatsoever ye would," "Not every one," "While we have time," with other movements, from the Service in E flat	1	0
JOHN STAINER. "Whoso hath this world's good," "Be merciful after thy power," "He that hath pity on the poor," "Blessed be the man," with other movements, from the Service in A and D	1	0
FERRIS TOZER. Six Offertory Sentences, with Benedictus	0	6

Octavo, Sixpence.

EASY OFFERTORY SENTENCES

INTENDED CHIEFLY FOR PARISH CHOIRS, BY

GEORGE C. MARTIN, Mus. Doc.

Organist, St. Paul's Cathedral.

1. Let your light so shine.
2. Lay not up for yourselves.
3. Not every one.
4. Zacchæus stood forth.
5. If we have sown. Do ye not know.
6. He that soweth little.
7. To do good.
8. Whoso hath this world's good.
9. Give alms of thy goods.
10. Be merciful after thy power.
11. He that hath pity.
12. Blessed be the man. [ting].
13. Blessed be the man (2nd set-

OFFERTORY SENTENCES

SET TO

TUNES FROM "THE HYMNARY"

BY

J. POWELL METCALFE.

Price Fourpence.

PREFACE.

There is an ever-increasing conviction that decency and order are better promoted by the singing than the saying of the Offertory Sentences—and that not only in our larger, but in our smaller churches as well. In the latter the adoption of the desired use is to a great extent prevented by the anthem character of the music employed in the usual offertory setting.

The following arrangements are more especially intended for the use of those choirs who, not being regularly trained in anthem-singing, are accustomed to rely on the tunefulness, form, and compactness of the hymn-tune for aid in fitly rendering the words they sing.

E. V. HALL.

SEVEN

OFFERTORY SENTENCES.

Price Fourpence.

TALLIS'S PRECES, RESPONSES, and Litany (in 5 parts). Price 6d.

TALLIS'S RESPONSES, for Evening Service. Arranged for Four Voices, by Sir JOHN GOSS. Price 3d.

TALLIS'S PRECES and RESPONSES, with Litany, for Four Voices. Arranged by JOSEPH BARNBY. Price 4d.

THE FERIAL RESPONSES, with Litany, as used at St. Andrew's, Wells Street. By JOSEPH BARNBY. Price 4d.

THE PRECES and RESPONSES, with Litany. Set in Monotone, by JOSEPH BARNBY. Price 4d.

THE NICENE CREED. Set to music by the following composers:—

	s.	d.
Sir JOHN GOSS. Unison, with Organ Accompaniment. Key of D	0	3
Voice Part, 1d.
A. S. COOPER. Unison or in Harmony, with Organ Accompaniment. Key of F	0	6
Unison copy, 1d.
A. S. COOPER. Monotone, with Organ Accompaniment. On G	0	3
R. W. CROWE. Monotone, with Organ Accompaniment. On G	0	3
MERBECKE. With Organ Accompaniment by J. STAINER. Key of F. Folio	0	6
Unison copy, 1d.
MERBECKE. With Organ Accompaniment by J. BARNBY. Key of F	0	1½
MERBECKE. With Organ Accompaniment by H. J. POOLE. Key of F	0	4
J. STAINER. Unison or Harmony, with Organ Accompaniment. Key of G. Folio	0	6
Without Accompaniment, 1½d.; 8vo, 2d.
F. E. GLADSTONE. Set to Eighth Gregorian Tone and Tonus Peregrinus	0	3
S. S. WESLEY. In the Key of E	0	4

THE

VERSICLES & RESPONSES

AS USED IN

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL

(FERIAL USE)

EDITED BY

J. STAINER, Mus. Doc.,

AND

G. C. MARTIN, Mus. Doc.

Price Fourpence.

VERSICLES, RESPONSES, AND LITANY

FOR T.T.B.B.

Arranged from various sources, and partly composed, for use in Keble College Chapel, by

CHARLES H. LLOYD.

Price Sixpence.

THE APOSTLES' CREED.

	s.	d.
E. CRUSE. In Monotone Recitation, with Harmony for the Organ. On G. Folio	1	0
E. G. MONK. In Recitative, Unison with Organ. Key of G	0	3
W. STATON. Monotone, with Organ Accompaniment. On F	0	3
J. H. CORNELL. In Monotonic Recitation, with Organ Accompaniment. On C	0	3

ATHANASIAN CREED.

	s.	d.
A. S. COOPER. With Chants	0	3
E. H. BIRCH	0	4
W. T. BEST. Set to a new Chant. For Chorus and Organ. In F. Organ Score	1	6
Vocal do.	0	3
J. STAINER. The Ancient Plain Song. Arranged for Voices in Unison, with Organ Accompaniment	0	3

THE LORD'S PRAYER (Pater noster).

	s.	d.
BANSON, C. From Communion Service (in D) Four Voices	0	3
J. T. FIELD. In D. Four Voices	0	2
BATTISON HAYNES. In G. Unison and Organ	0	2
W. S. HOYTE. In G. Four Voices	0	4
R. E. PARKER. In G. Four Voices	0	3
T. ROYLAND SMITH. In F. Four Voices	0	4
H. TOWNSEND. Two settings, in Monotone. On G. Folio	1	0

CHURCH MUSIC

BY

EDWARD BUNNETT, Mus.D., CANTAB.

ANTHEMS.

EASTER.—"If we believe." Four voices .. .. 4d.
" " " Tonic Sol-fa .. .. 1½d.
WHITSUNDAY.—"If ye love Me." Four voices .. .. .. 3d.
" "I will magnify Thee" " .. .. .. 3d.
" " " Tonic Sol-fa .. .. 1½d.

SERVICES.

Te Deum laudamus in E. Chant form .. .. 3d.
Benedictus and Jubilate in E " " .. .. 3d.
Tonic Sol-fa.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in F .. .. 1½d.
" " " A .. .. 1½d.
" " " E .. .. 1½d.

HYMNS.

Sing to the Lord. With words .. .. 1d.
Twenty-four Original Hymn Tunes .. .. 6d.
Twelve Original Hymn Tunes .. .. 3d.
Amen (on Card) .. .. 1d.

ORGAN.

Twelve Short and Easy Pieces for the Organ .. net 2s. 0d.
Ave Maria .. .. " 1s. 6d.
Largo in E flat .. .. " 1s. 0d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

FESTIVAL ANTHEMS AND SERVICES

By CALEB SIMPER.

Attractive, melodious, easy, and effective.

*BREAK FORTH INTO JOY. 8th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
*KING OF KINGS. 10th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
*WHAT SHALL I Rrender. 5th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
GIVE GLORY UNTO THE LORD. 12th Edition .. .. .. 3d.
MAKE A JOYFUL NOISE. 19th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
*I WILL FEED MY FLOCK. 23rd 1,000 .. .. 4d.
*HE WATERETH THE HILLS. New Anthem .. .. 4d.
Ready shortly, and will also be scored for Orchestra.
CELEBRATED MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS, in F. 45th edit. 4d.
POPULAR Ditto ditto in E flat. 15th edit. 4d.
NEW Ditto ditto in G. 5th edit. 4d.
CELEBRATED TE DEUM, in F. 21st edit. .. .. 3d.
POPULAR NEW Do. in G. 6th edit. .. .. 4d.
FAVOURITE HOLY COMMUNION SERVICE, in E flat. 8th 1,000 .. 4d.
*NEW Ditto ditto in G. 2nd 1,000 .. 4d.
POPULAR Ditto ditto in F. 6th edit. .. 6d.
Each Holy Communion Service is complete.
Those marked (*) are also published in Tonic Sol-fa.

London: WEEKES and Co., 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.
Chicago, U.S.A.: CLAYTON F. SUMMY, 174-176, Wabash Avenue.

SACRED CANTATA

THE

GREAT DAY OF THE LORD

MUSIC BY W. CLARK AINLEY
Mus. Bac., Cantab.

"For this composition we have nothing but unqualified praise; it is good, honest English work, quite Handelian in style, and we congratulate the composer very heartily. The overture contains an admirable fugue in A minor, which, if arranged in separate form for the organ, would probably be welcomed by many organists. Its subject is original and somewhat unusual. No. 4 is a noble air for a bass voice, which cannot fail to delight all bass singers. This is immediately followed by a delicious little unaccompanied chorale in C minor, beautifully harmonised, its only fault being its brevity. A bright and penetrating chorus in C major, "It is high time to awake," is followed by a capital fugue in the same key, "Let us therefore cast off," with which the first part is concluded. We have not space to notice all the beauties of this work in detail, but will draw attention to the following gems in it: "My soul truly waiteth" (No. 21), a lovely soprano air, and a charming duet and chorus, "Holy, Holy, Holy." Conductors of Choral Societies will do well to give attention to this admirable Cantata, which is eminently adapted for use in churches."—Church Times.

"The composer has entered thoroughly into the spirit of his work, which is filled with original and masterly scoring. . . . An abundance of orchestral music is found."—Yorkshire Post.

"Excellent contrapuntal scoring is evident from first to last."—Mirfield and Ravensthorpe Guardian.

"It is well worthy of being performed by any Society."—Dewsbury and District News.

"The Cantata is a scholarly and agreeable work."—Leeds Daily News.

"This Cantata is written very much after the fashion of old Oratorio. The composer has evidently taken Handel as his model. One also finds an occasional trace of Mendelssohn and Haydn. He shines in Fugues, of which there are several in the work; some of these are very good indeed, and show Mr. Ainley to be a first-rate contrapuntalist. He is a sound, if not an inspired, musician."—Glasgow Herald.

Price, in paper cover, 2s.; in paper boards, 3s.; in scarlet cloth, gilt, 4s.
London: HART and Co., 22, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Will be Ready Shortly. Price 1s. 6d.

SECOND IMPROMPTU for PIANO. By WALTER J. LOCKITT. London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

POPULAR FESTIVAL ANTHEMS

BY

E. A. SYDENHAM.

THE LORD IS MY LIGHT .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) .. .. 3d.
GREAT IS THE LORD.. .. (Ditto 1½d.) .. .. 3d.
O GIVE THANKS .. .. (Ditto 1½d.) .. .. 3d.
SING UNTO THE LORD .. (Ditto 1½d.) .. .. 3d.

The above Anthems are especially suitable for Church Festivals.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

O, HAPPY LAND. Duet and Chorus, with Orchestral Accompaniments. Price 4d. "The bright sunny land." Solo and Chorus. Price 3d. Post-free of the Author, C. WARD Speen, Princes Risboro'.

Just Published.

AN EVENING HYMN. Words by Rev. WM. BRIGHT, D.D. Music by JOHN C. CAMPBELL. On card. 1d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW SACRED SONG.—Composed, by desire, for and dedicated by express permission to H.I.H. PRINCESS VICTORIA MAY OF TECK.
LOVING SHEPHERD OF THY SHEEP.
To be had of all Musicsellers, and of CHARLES D'ACE, The Hill, Bridgwater, Somerset. Post-free, 2s. Professional copies, usual terms.

COUNTERPOINT. By J. H. LEWIS, Mus.D., D.C.L. In the Press; will shortly be ready. In cloth, 3s. 6d. net. First list of subscribers (2s. 6d. Post-free) will be published next month. Address, the AUTHOR, Silvermead, Twickenham, S.W.

BOEKELMAN'S EDITION

OF

BACH'S FUGUES

PRINTED IN COLOURS.

In this Edition the essential parts of each Fugue—viz., Subject, Answer, Counter-subject, Episodes, &c., are each printed in a distinct colour, with a view to helping the Student to a clear understanding of the structure and form of the composition.

Book I. contains—

Vol. 1. Fugue 3, C sharp major. | Vol. 1. Fugue 10, E minor.
" 1. Fugue 4, C sharp minor. | " 2. Fugue 7, E flat.

Book II. contains—

Vol. 1. Fugue 1, in C. | Vol. 1. Fugue 21, in B flat.
" 1. Fugue 7, in E flat. | " 1. Fugue 22, in B flat minor.

Price Two Shillings net each Fugue.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Sole Agents for Great Britain and the Colonies.

Dedicated, by permission, to H.R.H. THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH.

MASTERS

OF ENGLISH MUSIC

SIR ARTHUR SULLIVAN
DR. A. C. MACKENZIE
F. H. COWEN
DR. C. H. H. PARRY
AND
DR. C. V. STANFORD

BY

CHARLES WILLEBY.

With Portraits of the Composers at different periods of their lives, Autograph Fac-similes of Music, &c.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 5s.

London: JAMES R. OSGOOD, MCILVAINE and Co., 45, Albemarle St.

MUSICAL QUESTIONS

(if of general interest) are freely answered in the MUSICAL HERALD. Since this department of the paper was started over

3,000 QUESTIONS have been answered.

Twopence, Monthly, of any Newsagent.

Offices: 8 and 9, Warwick Lane, London, E.C.

PUBLISHED last month by FORSYTH BROS. ROBERT'S MISTAKE. Humorous Trio for Ladies, by J. W. HARTLEY. Price 4d.

Select Compositions from the Great Master

ARRANGED FOR THE ORGAN

BY ARTHUR HENRY BROWN.

No.		No.
1	Wedding March .. .. .. Mendelssohn	2	March from "Tannhäuser" .. .. .. Wagn
3	Marches from "Scipio" and Occasional Overture Handel	4	Coronation March from "Le Prophète" Meyerbe
5	Dead March in "Saul," and See the conquering Handel	6	Andantino from 11th Grand Symphony .. Hay Waft her, angels, from "Jephtha" .. .. Hand
7	As pants the hart, from "The Crucifixion" Louis Spohr Where'er you walk, from "Semele" .. Handel	8	My heart ever faithful ("Mein gläubiges Herze frohlocke") .. .. Ba
9	Andantino from 5th, and Andante from 4th Sonatas Pleyel	10	The Hero's March .. .. .. Mendelsso
11	Quis est homo, from "Stabat Mater" .. Rossini	12	Air et chœur, from "La Dame Blanche" Boieldi
13	Grande Marche héroique, in C .. F. Schubert	14	Grande Marche héroique in D .. F. Schube
15	Overture, "Berenice" .. .. .. Handel	16	Overture, "Sosarmes" .. .. .. Hand
17	Overture, "Alcina" .. .. Handel	18	Gavotte, from Overture "Otho" .. .. Hand
19	La Carità .. .. Rossini	20	Angels ever bright, and Pious orgies .. Hand
21	Ave Maria .. .. Schubert	22	Aria (circa A.D. 1700) .. .. .. Antonio Lo
23	My soul thirsteth for God, Aria from 42nd Psalm Mendelssohn	24	Gloria in excelsis, from Mass in G .. .. Wel
25	Fac ut portem, from "Stabat Mater" .. Rossini	26	Pièta signore, from Oratorio "San Giovanni Battista" .. .. Strade
27	Overture to "Julius Cæsar" .. .. .. Handel	28	Serenade .. .. F. Schube
29	Aria (1765) .. .. Gluck	30	Aria from "Alcina" .. .. Hand
31	Aria from "Artaserse" (1730) .. Leonardo Vinci	32	Cantata .. .. Alessandro Scarla
33	Aria (1769) .. .. Gluck	34	Aria (1784) .. .. .. Domenico Cimaro
35	Diedi il core (Aria) .. .. Handel	36	Siciliana .. .. Lo
37	Andante .. .. Long Adagio .. .. Keeble	38	Aria (1763) .. .. Padre Mart
39	Kyrie eleison, from Mass in G .. .. Schubert	40	Aria (1767) .. .. Glu
41	Sanctus and Hosanna, from Mass, Op. 43 .. André	42	Last Chorus from "Mount of Olives" Beethov
43	He shall feed His flock, from "Messiah" .. Handel	44	Quoniam tu solus (1788) .. Vincenzo Righ
45	Hallelujah Chorus, from "Messiah" .. Handel	46	Turn Thy face, Then shall I teach, I will magnify Thee, from Anthems J. Weld
47	The heavens are telling, from "Creation" .. Haydn	48	Andante and Allegretto from Violin Sonata in A major .. .. Hand
49	Slow movement, from Symphony (36) .. Haydn	50	Andante con Variazioni from the Notturno, Op. 34 Louis Spo
51	Wie nahte mir der Schlummer C. M. von Weber Aria .. .. Comte de St. Germain	52	Marche solennelle, Op. 40 .. .. F. Schube
53	Adagio from the Notturno, Op. 34 .. Louis Spohr	54	Ave Maria, from the Evening Service, Book 7 Cherub
55	Overture to "Samson" and Minuet (1742) .. Handel	56	The arm of the Lord .. .. Hay
57	Deh lascia o core, from "Astianatte" (1727) Giovanni Buononcini	58	Gloria in excelsis, from Mass No. 2, in G .. Schube
59	Il pensier sta negli oggetti, Aria (1792) .. Haydn	60	Gloria in excelsis, from Twelfth Mass .. Moza
61	How lovely are the messengers .. Mendelssohn	62	Notturno .. .. F. Kalkbrenr
63	Che farò senza Euridice .. .. .. Gluck	64	Aria in A flat .. .. Louis Spo
65	Cujus animam .. .. Rossini	66	Air and Gavotte from Orchestral Suite J. S. Ba
67	Aria .. .. Antonio Sacchini	68	Aria in B flat, and Adagio in B minor Louis Spo
69	Valli profonde .. .. .. Marco da Gagliano	70	Mia speranza .. .. Giuseppe Sa
71	Aria .. .. Baldassero Galuppi	72	Duetto .. .. Mendelsso Padre perdona (Aria) .. .. Adolfo Has
73	Adagio patetico .. .. .. J. B. Cramer Cavatina in G minor .. .. .. Louis Spohr	74	Gloria in excelsis, from First Mass .. .. Hay
75	Aria .. .. Marcantonio Cesti	76	Agnus Dei, from First Mass .. .. .. Moza
77	Kyrie eleison, from Twelfth Mass .. .. Mozart	78	Vivace from Symphony in B flat .. .. Hay
79	He was despised, and Comfort ye, My people Handel	80	I know that my Redeemer liveth .. .. Hand
81	Aria .. .. Antonio Sacchini	82	Neapolitan Air .. .. .. Author unkno
83	Mi restano le lagrime, from "Alcina" .. Handel	84	Andante from Sonatina .. .. .. Clemer Piangerò la sorte, "Giulio Cesare" .. Hand
85	With verdure clad .. .. Haydn	86	The marvellous work .. .. Hay
87	O lovely peace .. .. Handel	88	Rentrée de la procession .. Alexandre Leprév
89	Offertoire in C .. .. .. Alexandre Leprévost	90	Larghetto in A flat .. .. Alexandre Leprév
91	Communion in B flat .. .. Alexandre Leprévost	92	Offertoire, or Sortie, in E flat Alexandre Leprév
93	Voluntary in G major .. .. .. John Stanley	94	Voluntary in G minor .. .. .. John Stanl
95	Voluntary in D minor .. .. .. John Stanley	96	O Lord, remember, "Last Judgment" Louis Spo
97	Andante (grand septuor) .. .. J. N. Hummel	98	On song's bright pinions .. .. Mendelsso
99	Ja es soll mir Wonne schaffen .. Louis Spohr	100	Lang mögen die Theuren leben .. Louis Spo
101	Marche Funèbre, from Sonata, Op. 35 .. Chopin	102	O rest in the Lord (Aria), and For the mountains shall depart, "Elijah" .. Mendelsso
103	Adagio, from the Quartet, Op. 125, No. 1 F. Schubert	104	Thou shalt bring them in, "Israel in Egypt" Hand
105	Ja, hoffe, from "Faust" .. .. Louis Spohr	106	Stille noch dies Wuth verlangen .. Louis Spo
107	March in "Samson" .. .. Handel	108	Barcarolle, Op. 135 .. .. .. Louis Spo
109	I waited for the Lord, from "Hymn of Praise" Mendelssohn

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS EACH.

EDWIN ASHDOWN, LIMITED,

NEW YORK: 1 AND 3, UNION SQUARE.

LONDON: HANOVER SQUARE.

TORONTO: 68, KING STREET WEST.

NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S
ALBUMS
FOR
VIOLONCELLO AND PIANOFORTE.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH.

*FOUR MARCHES
COMPOSED BY
F. MENDELSSOHN BARTHOLDY.
TRANSCRIBED BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.

*THIRTY MELODIES
COMPOSED BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.

*TEN TRANSCRIPTIONS
FROM MENDELSSOHN'S "ELIJAH"
BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.
Price One Shilling.

*TEN TRANSCRIPTIONS
FROM
GOUNOD'S "MORS ET VITA"
BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.

*TWELVE SKETCHES
COMPOSED BY
BATTISON HAYNES.

*HUNGARIAN DANCES
TRANSCRIBED BY
SIEGFRIED JACOBY.

*NINE TRANSCRIPTIONS
FROM SULLIVAN'S "GOLDEN LEGEND"
BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.

*SIX MORCEAUX DE SALON
COMPOSED BY JOACHIM RAFF.

*SIX SONATAS
COMPOSED BY
ARCANGELO CORELLI.
EDITED BY
ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.
Price Three Shillings and Sixpence.

*EIGHT
NATIONAL MELODIES
ARRANGED BY
SIEGFRIED JACOBY.

*NINE TRANSCRIPTIONS
FROM GOUNOD'S "REDEMPTION"
BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.

*TWELVE EASY PIECES
COMPOSED BY
ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.

*TWELVE
CHARACTERISTIC PIECES
COMPOSED BY
J. JACQUES HAAKMAN.

TEN PIECES
COMPOSED BY
ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.

*Albums marked * may also be had arranged for Violin and Pianoforte.*

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

THREE DANCES

FROM THE MUSIC TO HENRY VIII.

COMPOSED BY

EDWARD GERMAN.

Arranged for the Pianoforte by the Composer.

Price Two Shillings.
String Parts, 4s. Wind Parts, 7s. 6d.

ARRANGEMENT FOR VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE, 3s.
DITTO FOR PIANOFORTE DUET, 3s.

Just Published.

MILITARY BAND PARTS, 15s.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

SUITE

FROM THE MUSIC TO SHAKESPEARE'S

HENRY VIII.

Composed for the production of the Play at the Lyceum Theatre, January, 1892,

BY EDWARD GERMAN.

PIANOFORTE DUET.
PRICE FIVE SHILLINGS.

CONTENTS.

1. Overture.
2. Prelude to Act II. Intermezzo funèbre.
3. Prelude to Act III. Allegretto in G minor.
4. Prelude to Act IV. March in D.
5. Prelude to Act V. Thanksgiving Hymn.
6. Three Dances:—

I. Morris Dance. II. Shepherds' Dance. III. Torch Dance.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

JUST PUBLISHED.

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES

FOR THE VOICE

WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

COMPOSED BY

G. HENSCHEL.

IN TWO PARTS.

PART I.—STUDIES IN SUSTAINED SINGING (LOW VOICE).
PART II.—STUDIES IN FLORID SINGING (LOW VOICE).

PART I.—STUDIES IN SUSTAINED SINGING (HIGH VOICE).
PART II.—STUDIES IN FLORID SINGING (HIGH VOICE).

PART I.—STUDIES IN SUSTAINED SINGING (MEDIUM VOICE).
PART II.—STUDIES IN FLORID SINGING (MEDIUM VOICE).

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS EACH PART.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

Just Published.

FIFTEEN VOCALISES

A SEQUEL TO THE

TWENTY-FIVE LESSONS FOR THE MEDIUM PART OF THE VOICE

BY

J. CONCONE.

Edited, with Marks of Expression and Phrasing, by ALBERTO RANDEGGER.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just out. Price 6d.

THE FIRST PRINCIPLES OF VOICE PR
DUCTION IN SONG AND SPEECH. By Rev. THOM
KELLY. An Exposition of the method of the old Italian School
Singing, as advocated by Mr. CHARLES LUNN.

Sir MORELL MACKENZIE says: "A worthy representative of wha believe not only to be the best, but the only method of training singing voice."

"Mr. Lunn is one of the most earnest and conscientious thinkers the day."—Musical Times.

London: BURNS and OATES, Ltd., 63, Paternoster Row, E.C.
MARRIOTT and Co., 295, Oxford Street, W.

Just Published. Price 1s.

THE ELEMENTS OF MUSIC SIMPLY E
PLAINED. By C. TREW, Prof. at the London Acad. of Mus
London: SCHOTT and Co., 159, Regent Street, W.

PRACTICAL HINTS ON BOY CHOI
TRAINING. By G. EDWARD STUBBS, M.A., Organist a Choirmaster of St. Agnes Chapel, Trinity Parish, New York.

Sixth Edition.

A useful treatise on the vocal training of Chorister Boys embodyi the views of standard writers on the voice.

Although strictly scientific the book deals with the subject in a pl and practical way, and will be found of value to all who are entrust with the training of boys' voices. It is highly endorsed by leadi Clergymen and Choirmasters both in England and America. Pr
3s. 6d. net.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TIME.—A Short Treatise on TIME, by FRA
MANLY, I.S.M. Dedicated to Sir JOSEPH BARNBY. Patronis by the leading Members of the Musical Profession. Testimoni from Sir William Cusins, Professor Bridge, Mr. Sims Reeves, Price 6d. London: F. PITMAN, 20, Paternoster Row, E.C.

THE TRAINING OF MEN'S VOICES, and t
Secret of Voice-Production. By E. DAVIDSON PALM
Mus. Bac., Oxon. Third Edition. Price 6d. Post-free from t
AUTHOR, 2, Highwood Road, Upper Holloway, N.; or, from t
Publisher, JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 24, Berners Street, W.

IMMENSE SUCCESS.

HOME SCENES

BY

JOHN FRANCIS BARNETT.

NINE NEW ORIGINAL PIECES FOR THE PIANO.

CONTENTS:

WELCOME HOME
GRANDFATHER'S LEGEND
THE OLD VIOLIN
CHILDREN'S DANCE
CRICKET ON THE HEARTH
FIRESIDE TALE
FALLING SHADOWS
CRADLE SONG
MERRY MAKIN

Review—"Some of the most melodious and pleasing pieces we ha seen." May be obtained of all musicsellers. Price 3s.

PATEY AND WILLIS, 44, Great Marlborough Street, London, W.

NEW ORGAN MUSIC.

Just Published.

THREE SHORT PIECES:—

No. 1. Larghetto in A flat major.
„ 2. Allegretto Pastorale in A major.
„ 3. Andante con moto in F major.
Price Two Shillings net.

ALSO

"MINUETTO."

One Shilling and Sixpence net.

COMPOSED BY

EDWARD BUNNETT, MUS.D., CANTAB.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

CROSSING THE BAR. Song. Compass, D fl to E flat. Composed by VYVYAN WALLIS POPHAM. Price 2s. n
REID BROS., 436, Oxford Street, W.

NEW MUSIC by T. E. SPINNEY. Words b
AMY THORN. THE SINGER, NOT THE SONG. Price
net. (One of the prettiest songs of the day.)
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HUMOROUS PART-SONGS, by ALFRED ALLE
Dickory, dickory, dock .. .. 4d.
Tom, Tom, the Piper's son .. .. .. 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

GILL'S EASY VOLUNTARIES.—"Messiah
"Judas," "Elijah," "Creation," "St. Paul." 1s. each set twenty Voluntaries.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Original Compositions for the Organ.

		s.	d.
Two Introductory Voluntaries ..	George J. Bennett	1	0
Three Andantes	Hamilton Clarke	2	0
Postlude (Christmas)	G. M. Garrett	1	6
Andante con moto	G. M. Garrett	1	0
Interlude for Advent	.. Oliver King	1	0
Prelude for Lent, Op. 10, No. 2 .. / Fantasia on a Theme by Hermann Goetz, Op. 20	.. Oliver King	1	0
Three Pieces: (a) Baptism, (b) Wedding, (c) Burial	A. C. Mackenzie (each)	1	0
Voluntary for Christmas	F. A. G. Ouseley	1	0
Voluntary	F. A. G. Ouseley	1	0
Short Voluntary for a Time of Sorrow ..	Ridley Prentice	0	6
Short Voluntary for Lent	B. Luard Selby	1	0
Postlude in C minor	.. C. Steggall	1	0
Concluding Voluntary or Fantasia (Lent)	C. E. Stephens	1	0
Three Canons	W. G. Wood	2	0
Allegretto	C. H. Lloyd	1	0
Allegretto in D	B. Luard Selby	1	0
Three Pieces: No. 1, Allegretto moderato; No. 2, Andante con moto; No. 3, Processional March	H. M. Higgs	2	6
Andante in G	Herbert W. Wareing	1	0
Andante in A and Minuet in A ..	.. C. Harford Lloyd	1	6
Allegro ma non troppo	Oscar Wagner	1	0
Processional Wedding March	Henry R. Bird	1	0
Rêverie	B. Luard Selby	1	0
Three Pieces in F, D, and G	B. Luard Selby	1	6
Marche Sérieuse	B. Luard Selby	1	0
Six Miniatures	Oscar Wagner	2	6
Three Preludes	John E. West	1	0
Communion in D flat / Preludium e Fughetta	B. Luard Selby	1	0
Introduction and Fugue	F. E. Gladstone	1	0
Allegretto	F. E. Gladstone	1	0
Andante and Fugue	B. Luard Selby	1	6
Pastorale and Melody in A flat	B. Luard Selby	1	6
Orchestral March	B. Luard Selby	1	0
Sonate	Oscar Wagner	1	6
Sketch in C minor	John E. West	1	0
Fugue in E minor	John E. West	1	0
Minuet and Trio	B. Luard Selby	1	0
Andante in B flat, and Short Postlude ..	B. Luard Selby	1	0
Sarabande	B. Luard Selby	1	0
Postlude in D	B. Luard Selby	1	0
Andante Grazioso	.. C. S. Heap	1	0
Fantasia in C	Berthold Tours	1	6
Allegretto Grazioso	Berthold Tours	1	0
Menuetto	Berthold Tours	1	0
Postlude	Berthold Tours	1	0
Fantasia in C minor	W. S. Hoyte	1	6
Four Short Voluntaries	Kate Westrop	1	6
Concert-Fantasia and Fugue	W. G. Wood	2	0
Sonata in D minor	Charles H. Lloyd	2	6
Andante in E, Minuet and Trio, No. 2, in A minor	B. Luard Selby	1	6
Postlude in D	W. G. Wood	1	0
Allegro in C	W. G. Wood	1	0
Melody in B flat	Arthur Carnall	1	0
Three Andantes	Hamilton Clarke	1	6
Postlude, in B flat	John E. West	1	0
Allegro in form of a Minuet	W. G. Wood	1	6
Allegro ma non troppo	H. M. Higgs	1	6
Prelude and Fugue	H. M. Higgs	1	6
Mélodie, Prière, Pastorale	H. M. Higgs	1	6
Offertoire in D minor	H. M. Higgs	1	6
Andantino in D	.. J. Barnby	0	6
Communion and Larghetto	Edouard Batiste	1	0
Prelude and Postlude	Edouard Batiste	1	6
Andante in A flat and Pastorale in F ..	Hamilton Clarke	1	0
Grand Offertorio in A	Hamilton Clarke	1	0
Minuet in B flat	Hamilton Clarke	1	0
Larghetto in C	.. C. J. Frost	1	0
Fantasia in B flat	.. C. J. Frost	1	0
Sonatina in C	.. C. J. Frost	1	6
Andante Moderato in A	G. M. Garrett	1.	6
Prelude in C minor	F. E. Gladstone	1	0
Allegro Marziale	F. E. Gladstone	1	0
Prelude and Fugue in A minor	Ch. Grædener	1	0
Andante in F	J. W. Gritton	0	6
Marche Triomphale in E flat and Postlude in F	Alex. Guilmant	1	6
Fantaisie sur Deux Mélodies Anglaises	Alex. Guilmant	1	6
Festal March in E flat	.. C. S. Heap	1	6
Fantasia on Mendelssohn's Volkslied ..	Geo. Hepworth	1	6
Prelude in G	W. Macfarren	0	6
Religious March in E flat	G. A. Macfarren	1	0
Andante in G and March	G. A. Macfarren	1	0
Variations on the Psalm-tune "Windsor"	G. A. Macfarren	1	0
Andante in D	H. S. Oakeley	1	0
Præludium et Fuga	F. A. G. Ouseley	1	0
Prelude in C sharp minor	.. W. Parratt	0	6
Postlude in C minor	.. E. Prout	1	0
Andante in E flat and Postlude in C ..	.. F. J. Read	1	0
Andante Serioso in D minor	.. C. Reinecke	0	6
Allegro vivace in D	.. C. T. Speer	1	0

No.		s.	d.
89. Prelude and Fugue in E minor	C. V. Stanford	1	6
90. Postlude in C	.. H. J. Stark	1	0
91. Allegretto Pastorale in A and Fugue in D minor	C. Steggall	1	6
92. Offertoire in F	C. E. Stephens	1	0
93. Concert-Fantasia in D minor	R. P. Stewart	1	6
94. Fugato in C	.. Ph. Tietz	1	0
95. Pastorale in E flat and Concluding Voluntary, Fugato in G minor	.. Ph. Tietz	1	0
96. March in F	.. J. H. Wallis	1	0
97. Voluntary (Grave and Andante)	S. S. Wesley	1	0
98. Concert-Fantasia, D minor	Johann Worping	1	6
99. Theme in A	.. F. W. Hird	1	0
100. Maestoso alla marcia	.. F. W. Hird	1	0
101. Postludium in F	Algernon Ashton	1	6
102. Postlude in C minor	.. C. S. Heap	2	0
103. Offertoire	J. F. Barnett	1	6
104. Scherzo Symphonique	Albert Renaud	1	0
105. Marche Solennelle (from Leavy)	Albert Renaud	1	0
106. Meditation (from Nicou-Choron)	Albert Renaud	1	0
107. Andante Religioso (from Nicou-Choron)	Albert Renaud	1	0
108. Toccata in D minor	W. G. Wood	1	6
109. Introduction and Variations	.. B. Haynes	2	0
110. Three Offertories	Hamilton Clarke	2	0
111. Pastorale	B. Luard Selby	1	0
112. Six Easy Voluntaries	Kate Loder	2	0
113. Twelve Characteristic Pieces. Book I.	Rheinberger	1	6
114. " " " " II.	Rheinberger	1	6
115. " " " " III.	Rheinberger	1	6
116. " " " " IV.	Rheinberger	2	0
117. Festal March	.. G. Calkin	1	0
118. Romance	Battison Haynes	1	0
119. Larghetto	F. E. Gladstone	1	0
120. Solemn March	B. Luard Selby	1	6
121. Elegy	B. Luard Selby	1	0
122. Festival Præludium	.. Otto Dienel	1	6
123. Concert Fantasia (No. 1)	.. Otto Dienel	2	0
124. Concert Fantasia (No. 2)	.. Otto Dienel	1	6
125. Adagio	.. Otto Dienel	1	0
126. Andante Pastorale	Algernon Ashton	1	6
127. Concert Overture in C minor	W. G. Wood	1	6
128. Minuetto	George Calkin	1	0
129. Postlude	George Calkin	1	0
130. Nuptial March	B. Luard Selby	1	0
131. Six Short Pieces (Nos. 1, 2, 3)	W. G. Wood	1	6
132. Six Short Pieces (Nos. 4, 5, 6)	W. G. Wood	1	0
133. Monologues (Nos. 1 to 3)	J. Rheinberger	1	0
134. Monologues (Nos. 4 to 6)	J. Rheinberger	1	6
135. Monologues (Nos. 7 to 9)	J. Rheinberger	1	6
136. Monologues (Nos. 10 to 12)	J. Rheinberger	1	6
137. Andante Grazioso	Percy W. Pilcher	1	0
138. Andante con moto	.. A. H. Allen	0	6
139. Introduction and Air, with Variations ..	W. G. Wood	2	0
140. Six Easy Voluntaries (second set) ..	.. Kate Loder	2	0
141. Fantasia Sonata on the Ancient Melody for "Dies Iræ"	B. Luard Selby	2	6
142. Sonata on a German Chorale	.. Oliver King	2	0
143. Fantasia	.. E. Silas	2	0
144. Allegretto Pastorale	H. W. Wareing	1	0
145. Sonata in D minor	Alfred Alexander	3	0
146. March in C	H. Elliot Button	1	0
147. Festival March	H. W. Wareing	1	6
148. Short Offertory in F	Hamilton Clarke	1	0
149. Andante	Arthur Henry Brown	1	0
150. Meditation	Hamilton Clarke	1	0
151. Andante in D minor	Hamilton Clarke	1	0
152. Idyl	Hamilton Clarke	1	0
153. Meditation	E. Townshend Driffield	1	0
154. Pastorale	E. Townshend Driffield	1	0
155. Offertoire	E. Townshend Driffield	1	6
156. March (For a Church Festival)	E. Townshend Driffield	1	0
157. Tempo di Minuetto	E. Townshend Driffield	1	0
158. Andante (Ave Maria) .. .. / Fugue	E. Townshend Driffield / E. Townshend Driffield	1	6
159. Tempo di Minuetto	W. A. C. Cruickshank	1	6
160. Adagio in A	.. Otto Dienel	1	0
161. Scherzando in A minor	.. Otto Dienel	1	0
162. Adagio in D	.. Otto Dienel	1	0
163. Concert Fugue in E minor	.. Otto Dienel	1	6
164. Two Preludes	Percy W. Pilcher	1	6
165. Offertory in F	G. F. Blatch	1	0
166. Church Preludes (Nos. 1, 2)	R. Ernest Bryson	1	0
167. Church Preludes (Nos. 3, 4)	R. Ernest Bryson	1	0
168. Church Preludes (Nos. 5, 6)	R. Ernest Bryson	1	0
169. Postlude in G	H. Elliot Button	1	0
170. Five Sketches, No. 1, Prelude	H. W. Parker	1	0
171. Five Sketches, No. 2, Vision	H. W. Parker	1	0
172. Five Sketches, No. 3, Scherzo	H. W. Parker	1	0
173. Five Sketches, No. 4, Pastoral Interlude	H. W. Parker	1	0
174. Five Sketches, No. 5, Nocturne	H. W. Parker	1	0
175. Fourth Grand Sonata (Christmas Sonata)	.. Otto Dienel	3	6
176. Fantasia in F minor (Op. 118)	E. Silas	2	6
177. Two Sketches	G. F. Wesley Martin	1	0
178. Tempo di Minuetto	H. A. Wheeldon	1	0
179. Meditation	B. Luard Selby	1	0
180. Prelude and Postlude	B. Luard Selby	1	0

(To be continued.)

Nos. 41 to 45, and 60 to 100, from "The Organist's Quarterly Journal."

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES.

ORATORIOS, CANTATAS, &C.

RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

	Paper Cover.	Paper Boards.	Cloth Gilt.
P. ARMES.
ST. BARNABAS	2/0	—	—
G. J. BETJEMANN.
THE SONG OF THE WESTERN MEN	1/0	—	—
ETHEL M. BOYCE.
THE LAY OF THE BROWN ROSARY	1/6	—	—
YOUNG LOCHINVAR	1/6	—	—
J. F. BRIDGE.
THE LORD'S PRAYER .. .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 6d.)	1/0	—	—
ROCK OF AGES (Latin & English words) (Tonic Sol-fa, 4d.)	1/0	—	—
CALLIRHOË .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/6)	2/6	3/0	4/0
THE REPENTANCE OF NINEVEH..	2/6	3/0	4/0
DUDLEY BUCK.
THE LIGHT OF ASIA	3/0	3/6	5/0
F. CORDER.
THE BRIDAL OF TRIERMAIN .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/-)	2/6	—	—
H. COWARD.
THE STORY OF BETHANY .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/6)	2/6	3/0	—
F. H. COWEN.
SLEEPING BEAUTY .. .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/6)	2/6	3/0	4/0
ST. JOHN'S EVE .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/6)	2/6	3/0	4/0
RUTH .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/6)	4/0	4/6	6/0
A SONG OF THANKSGIVING ..	1/0	—	—
ANTONÍN DVOŘÁK.
MASS IN D	2/6	—	—
REQUIEM MASS	5/0	6/0	7/6
THE SPECTRE'S BRIDE	3/0	3/6	5/0
A PATRIOTIC HYMN	1/6	—	—
H. J. EDWARDS.
PRAISE TO THE HOLIEST	1/6	—	—
E. ELGAR.
THE BLACK KNIGHT	2/0	—	—
ROSALIND FRANCES ELLICOTT.
THE BIRTH OF SONG	1/6	—	—
ELYSIUM	1/0	—	—
G. GARRETT.
HARVEST CANTATA .. .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 6d.)	1/0	—	—
CH. GOUNOD.
THE REDEMPTION .. .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 2/-)	5/0	6/0	7/6
DITTO (French words) ..	8/4	—	—
DITTO (German words) ..	10/0	—	—
TROISIÈME MESSE SOLENNELLE	2/6	—	—
MORS ET VITA .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, Latin and English Words, 2/-)	6/0	6/6	7/6
ALAN GRAY.
ARETHUSA	1/6	—	—
OLIVER KING.
BY THE WATERS OF BABYLON (PSALM 137)	1/6	—	—

	Paper Cover.	Paper Boards.
C. H. LLOYD.
ALCESTIS	3/0	—
ANDROMEDA	3/0	3/6
HERO AND LEANDER	1/6	—
SONG OF BALDER	1/0	—
THE LONGBEARD'S SAGA (Male Voices)	1/6	—
A SONG OF JUDGMENT	2/6	3/0
HAMISH MACCUNN.
LORD ULLIN'S DAUGHTER .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 8d.)	1/0	—
THE LAY OF THE LAST MINSTREL (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/6)	2/6	3/0
A. C. MACKENZIE.
VENI, CREATOR SPIRITUS	2/0	—
ROSE OF SHARON .. .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 2/-)	5/0	6/0
THE STORY OF SAYID	3/0	3/6
THE DREAM OF JUBAL	2/6	3/0
THE NEW COVENANT	1/6	—
THE COTTER'S SATURDAY NIGHT (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/-)	2/0	—
HORATIO W. PARKER.
HORA NOVISSIMA	3/6	—
C. HUBERT H. PARRY.
JOB	2/6	—
BLEST PAIR OF SIRENS .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 8d.)	1/0	—
JUDITH or, THE REGENERATION OF MANASSEH	5/0	6/0
ODE ON ST. CECLIA'S DAY .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/-)	2/0	—
L'ALLEGRO .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/6)	2/6	—
DE PROFUNDIS	2/0	—
E. PROUT.
THE RED CROSS KNIGHT .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 2/-)	4/0	4/6
DAMON AND PHINTIAS (Male Voices)	2/6	—
CHARLES B. RUTENBER.
DIVINE LOVE	2/6	—
E. M. SMYTH.
MASS IN D	2/6	—
A. SOMERVELL.
MASS (in C minor)	2/6	—
C. VILLIERS STANFORD.
EAST TO WEST	2/6	—
EDEN	5/0	6/0
CARMEN SÆCULARE	1/6	—
THE REVENGE .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 9d.)	1/6	—
THE VOYAGE OF MAELDUNE ..	2/6	3/0
THE BATTLE OF THE BALTIC ..	1/6	—
J. STAINER.
THE CRUCIFIXION .. .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 9d.)	1/6	—
ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
THE GOLDEN LEGEND .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 2/-)	3/6	4/0
R. H. WALTHEW.
THE PIED PIPER OF HAMELIN ..	2/0	—
C. LEE WILLIAMS.
GETHSEMANE	2/0	2/6
THE LAST NIGHT AT BETHANY .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/-)	2/0	2/6
CHARLES WOOD.
ODE TO THE WEST WIND	1/0	—

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

W FOREIGN PUBLICATIONS.

	s.	d.
IPOW, C.—Three Studies. For Pianoforte. Op. 1:—
No. 1.	3	0
„ 2.	3	0
„ 3	2	0
MENFELD, F.—Preludes. For Pianoforte. Op. 17:—
Book I., Nos. 1 to 6	6	0
„ II., „ 7 to 12	6	0
YER, A. DE.—Prelude et Étude. For Pianoforte. Op. 4	3	0
USSMANN, A.—Communion (D major). For Organ net	1	6
Pastorale (D major). For Organ .. .. .. „	2	6
BERT, E.—Cadenzas to Beethoven's 4th Concerto, Op. 58	4	0
Bach's Prelude and Fugue (D major), for Organ. Arranged for Pianoforte	5	0
Sonata (F sharp minor). For Pianoforte. Op. 10	10	0
Quartet, No. 2. For Strings. Op. 11:—
Full Score.. .. .. net	7	0
Parts .. .. „	20	0
Concerto, No. 2 (E major). For Pianoforte. Op. 12:—
Pianoforte Part	20	0
OIS, TH.—Poèmes Sylvestres. For Pianoforte:—
No. 1. L'Allée solitaire	4	0
„ 2. Les Myrtilles	5	0
„ 3. Les Bucherons	4	0
„ 4. Le banc de mousse	3	0
„ 5. La source enchantée	6	0
„ 6. Danse rustique..	4	0
RIEL-MARIE.—Pièces pittoresques. No. 1. "An Old Fairy Tale." For Pianoforte Solo	3	0
ARD, B.—Légende Pastorale. For Oboe and Pianoforte	5	0
Marche des Highlanders. For Oboe and Pianoforte ..	6	0
ZOUNOW, A.—Petite Valse. For Pianoforte. Op 36 ..	2	0
Nocturne. For Pianoforte. Op. 37	2	0
LER, C.—Prayer. For Harmonium (or Organ) and Strings. Op. 59, No. 3:—
Score and Parts	4	0
The same. For Harmonium (or Organ) Solo	2	0
TE, A.—Three Compositions for the Organ. Op. 29:—
No. 1. Festival March	2	0
„ 2. Allegretto	2	0
„ 3. Pastorale	2	0
CAGNI, P.—"I Rantzau":—
Selection. For Clarinet and Pianoforte .. .. net	3	0
„ For Flute and Pianoforte .. .. „	3	0
„ For Violin and Pianoforte .. .. „	2	0
„ For Mandoline and Pianoforte .. „	2	0
Fantasia. For Violin and Pianoforte, by PREMOLI „	3	0
JE, J. K.—Two Preludes. For Organ:—
No. 1	2	0
„ 2	3	0
TTI, C.—Five Chorals. For Organ. Op. 19	5	0
Festival Hymns. For Organ	4	0
NITZ, F.—Italian Romance. For Harp. Op. 27	3	0
Two Pieces. For Violin and Harp (or Pianoforte). Op. 26:—
No. 1. Venezianisches Gondellied	4	0
„ 2. Springtime	3	0
Siciliano (C minor), from J. S. Bach's 4th Sonata. Arranged for Violin and Harp (or Pianoforte)	2	0
P, W.—Twelve Trios. For Pianoforte, Harmonium, and Violin (or Oboe or Flute):—
No. 1. KREUTZER. Sonntagslied	3	0
„ 2. „ "A Night at Granada" (1st selection)	3	0
„ 3. BEETHOVEN. "Creation's Hymn"	3	0
„ 4. HANDEL. "Rinaldo." Aria	3	0
„ 5. MENDELSSOHN. Aria from "St. Paul"	3	0
„ 6. MOZART. "The Violet"	3	0
„ 7. KREUTZER. "A Night at Granada" (2nd selection)	4	0
„ 8. GLUCK. "Orfeo." Selection	4	0
„ 9. SPOHR. "Zemire and Azor." Romance ..	4	0
„ 10. SCHUMANN, R. "Gipsy Life"	4	0
„ 11. WEBER. "Mermaid's Song"	3	0
„ 12. SCHUBERT, F. Scherzo from "Rosamunde" ..	4	0
NHARD, A.—"Immortellen." For Harmonium and Pianoforte. Op. 15:—
No. 15. BACH. Prelude, Sarabande, and Gavotte, from Suite for the Violoncello (E flat)	5	0
„ 16. BACH. Preludium. From Suite for Violoncello (C minor)	4	0
"Melodien Sammlung" (Selection of short melodies). For Harmonium	6	0
IARWENKA, PH.—"Frühlingswogen." Symphony, for Orchestra. Arranged as Pianoforte Duet	16	0
ITOL, J.—Mazurka and Valse. For Pianoforte. Op. 9 ..	4	0

Sold at half-price, if not marked net.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

OMPOSITIONS for the PIANOFORTE, by RALPH H. BELLAIRS, Organist of Bradfield College. Five Lyrical Sketches. Two books. 2s. each. ROBT. COCKS & Co.

Strelinka, Capriccio. J. WILLIAMS.

NGLISH ORGANISTS in the UNITED STATES.—See June Musical Opinion and Music Trade Review. 200 columns of Musical Literature and Advertisements. Price 2d. er at Book or Musicsellers; at Smith and Son's Railway Stalls; by post, 3½d.) at 150, Holborn Bars, London, E.C.

BISHOP'S GLEES, &c.

THE ORCHESTRAL PARTS

REPRINTED FROM THE ORIGINAL FULL SCORES.

	s.	d.
ALLEGIANCE WE SWEAR	6	6
BLOW, GENTLE GALES. Quintet	2	9
CHOUGH AND CROW. Trio and Chorus	5	0
COME O'ER THE BROOK. Glee	2	6
DAUGHTER OF ERROR	2	6
FISHERMAN'S GOOD-NIGHT. Glee	2	0
GOOD-NIGHT, GOOD REST. Glee	2	0
HARK! 'TIS THE INDIAN DRUM. Round for four Voices	3	9
HART AND HIND ARE IN THEIR LAIR	4	9
MERRY BOYS, AWAY	5	0
MYNHEER VANDUNCK	4	9
NOW BY DAY'S RETIRING LAMP. Quintet	3	6
NOW TRAMP O'ER MOSS AND FELL. Chorus	4	3
O BY RIVERS. Serenade	3	3
SLEEP, GENTLE LADY. S.A.T.B.	2	3
Ditto. A.T.T.B.	2	3
SPIRITS, ADVANCE	3	3
STAY, PR'YTHEE, STAY. Sestet	3	9
THE TIGER COUCHES IN THE WOOD	4	3
TO SEE HIS FACE. Round	3	0
WHAT HO! CLANSMAN. Chorus	6	0
WHAT SHALL HE HAVE THAT KILLED THE DEER. Glee, with Chorus ad lib.	4	0
WHEN THE WIND BLOWS. Round for three Voices ..	3	9
WHO IS SYLVIA? Glee	2	0
WINDS WHISTLE COLD. Glee..	3	3

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PERFORMED AT THE ROYAL ALBERT HALL.

EAST TO WEST

AN ODE

BY

ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE

Set to music for Chorus and Orchestra

BY

CHARLES VILLIERS STANFORD.

(Op. 52.)

(The Pianoforte Arrangement by the Composer.)

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE

ART OF TRAINING CHOIR BOYS

BY

G. C. MARTIN

Organist and Master of the Choristers of St. Paul's Cathedral.

Price Three Shillings; in paper boards, 3s. 6d.

(No. 39. NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S MUSIC PRIMERS, Edited by Sir JOHN STAINER.)

The Exercises for the use of Boys also published separately. Price One Shilling; in paper boards, 1s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

UNISON CHANTS

FOR THE PSALTER

A COLLECTION OF SINGLE ANGLICAN CHANTS

EDITED BY

THE REV. CANON SIR F. A. G. OUSELEY

AND

EDWIN GEORGE MONK.

THE VOICE PART—Price One Shilling. ORGAN HARMONIES—Price Five Shillings.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

IN furtherance of a more general chanting of the Psalter in Churches, this Book of Unison Chants is an attempt to supply a plan sufficie easy to secure extensive adoption, yet varied enough to be attractive, upon the one and only basis regarded by the Editors as b universally practicable—viz., the employment of Single Chant Melodies, to be sung "in Unison."

The present Work, projected (and even announced) some score of years ago, is intended to meet the need indicated, by providing a S of easy and suitable Chants, for Unison Singing only, for the monthly course of the Psalter in the Book of Common Prayer. Not only small and moderately qualified Choirs been kept in view, but also particularly the Voice of the great Congregation. In order to secure this p to be desired end—Chanting of the Daily Psalms by Choir and Congregation combined—the following means are proposed:—

I. Singing in Unison (strictly speaking, Octave-Singing).

II. Employment of Chants of Restricted Compass only; especially as to all Reciting-Notes.

III. Provision for Change of Chant at every fresh Psalm; and also, whenever in the course of any of the longer Psalms change could be made to follow the significance of the Sacred Text, conduce to its clearer understanding, or enforce its teachi

IV. Suggestion for occasional Change of Instrumental Harmony as a further mode (often of much value and potency) of heighte the desired expression; or of calling attention to important divisions, and changes of subject or utterance, in cases when a change of the voice-part seemed undesirable.

DAILY GRAPHIC.

Opinions may differ as to the superiority of single over double chants, and as to the general attractiveness of octave singing, but there can be no doubt that if it is to be widely adopted no better collection can be found than that which two such experienced choirmasters as the editors of this work have brought together.

THE QUEEN.

This work is a thoroughly practical solution of the problem, "How is the Psalter to be chanted in that vast majority of churches which have only small choirs, with rugged voices and little training?" and the editor's reply, "Let it be sung in vocal unison, supported, emphasised, and coloured by instrumental harmony," is, to our mind, conclusive, their publication providing the means by which so healthy a practice may be followed easily and satisfactorily. . . . With what loving care, mature judgment, and perfect good taste Dr. E. G. Monk has fulfilled this duty is evident upon every page of the book, which will undoubtedly find its way into very general use, and prove the means of effecting a much needed reform in our parochial and especially rural parochial Anglican Service.

THE ROCK.

This is a work of much importance. That it has taken twenty years to complete, and not without the melancholy interest attaching to it in the death of the first of these two editors; and that such distinguished talent has been employed to complete the work is, à priori, a great deal in its praise. . . . There are some very good suggestions for choir and congregation singing, which forms no invaluable part of the work.

THE FAMILY CHURCHMAN.

A remarkably desirable addition to Church Music. . . . Well bound and printed clearly on firm paper, it is most decidedly worth its price (5s.). The publishers are Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., who have also issued the voice part alone, price 1s.

THE RELIGIOUS REVIEW OF REVIEWS.

This work marks a further step towards simplifying facilitating our Church music as regards the Psalter. . The collection provides a series of over 300 easy and s able chants for the monthly course of the Psalter in Book of Common Prayer. The chants themselves the best known of Anglican Single Chants, admir selected, adapted, and collected. The type of the nota in this edition is singularly clear, and the size of the V Part a convenient one for the pocket. . . . Especiall organists we commend this work of laborious industry, highly talented ability and musical understanding. But less helpful and instructive will it be to all of those are interested in making this part of the Church Ser hearty and impressive by a plan sufficiently easy to se adoption, yet varied enough to be attractive.

CHURCH BELLS.

Not only will it be found useful in village choirs, wh part-singing is not always available, but well-trained ch might with advantage use it occasionally as a contrast the singing of the full harmonies.

THE NATIONAL CHURCH.

The Preface and the Explanations and Suggestions well repay the earnest attention of the clergy and ch masters, and testify to the devout and loving care w which each step of the work has been taken.

THE MODERN CHURCH.

The volumes are beautifully printed; it is a pleasure handle them and read them, and as that containing voice part costs only one shilling, the price ought not stand in the way of their adoption.

THE INDEPENDENT.

It is a useful book, even for Nonconformist organi and is a convincing demonstration of the value of uni singing for the congregation, and the beauty of chang harmonies.

METHODIST TIMES.

There is a varied and abundant provision of chants, a the organ accompaniments, as might be expected from names of the editors, are specially rich in changing harmo and illustrative beauty.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

FULL ORCHESTRAL SCORES

PUBLISHED BY

NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

	£	s.	d.
J. BARNBY.
THE LORD IS KING (PSALM 97) ...	1	1	0
J. FRANCIS BARNETT.
THE ANCIENT MARINER (English and German words)	2	2	0
JULIUS BENEDICT.
ST. PETER	3	3	0
THE LEGEND OF ST. CECILIA ...	2	2	0
W. STERNDALE BENNETT.
THE MAY QUEEN	2	2	0
F. CORDER.
PROSPERO. Concert-Overture	0	12	0
MICHAEL COSTA.
GOD SAVE THE QUEEN	0	2	6
F. H. COWEN.
RUTH	3	3	0
SLEEPING BEAUTY	2	2	0
SYMPHONY, No. 4 (THE WELSH) ...	0	15	0
ANTON DVOŘÁK.
ST. LUDMILA (English, German, and Bohemian Words)	4	0	0
THE SPECTRE'S BRIDE. Op. 69. (English, Bohemian, and German words)	3	3	0
A PATRIOTIC HYMN. Op. 30. (English, Bohemian, and German words)	1	1	0
STABAT MATER	2	5	0
REQUIEM MASS	3	3	0
SYMPHONY (No. 4) IN G MAJOR ...	1	10	0
H. GADSBY.
THE FOREST OF ARDEN. Orchestral Scene	0	7	6
CH. GOUNOD.
TROISIÈME MESSE SOLENNELLE ...	2	0	0
BY BABYLON'S WAVE	0	5	0
MORS ET VITA	3	3	0
THE REDEMPTION	3	3	0
HANDEL.
THE MESSIAH, with Mozart's Accompaniments. Cloth, gilt edges	1	1	0
ACIS AND GALATEA (English and German words), with Mozart's Accompaniments	1	11	6
SAMSON, with E. Prout's Additional Accompaniments	3	3	0
HAYDN.
THE CREATION. Cloth, gilt edges ...	1	1	0
G. HENSCHEL.
THE MUSIC TO SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET	1	10	0
ADOLF JENSEN.
THE FEAST OF ADONIS (English and German words)	0	15	0
OLIVER KING.
AMONG THE PINES. Concert-Overture. Op. 36	0	4	0
NIGHT. A Symphony in F. Op. 22 ...	0	10	6
C. HARFORD LLOYD.
HERO AND LEANDER	1	1	0
HAMISH MACCUNN.
THE LAND OF THE MOUNTAIN AND THE FLOOD. Concert-Overture ...	0	10	6
G. A. MACFARREN.
MAY-DAY. A Cantata	1	1	0

	£	s.	d.
A. C. MACKENZIE.
ROSE OF SHARON. Op. 30	3	3	0
CONCERTO FOR THE VIOLIN. Op. 32	1	1	0
TWELFTH NIGHT. Overture	0	12	0
BENEDICTUS. From Six Pieces for Violin. Op. 37	0	5	0
THE STORY OF SAYID. Op. 34 ...	2	12	6
JASON. Op. 26	2	2	0
INTERMEZZO from ditto	0	7	6
THE BRIDE. Op. 25	1	1	0
PRELUDE to the Opera COLOMBA. Op. 28	0	4	0
BALLET MUSIC and RUSTIC MARCH (COLOMBA). Op. 28	0	10	6
LA BELLE DAME SANS MERCI. Ballad for Orchestra. Op. 29	0	7	6
RHAPSODIE ECOSSAISE. Op. 21 ...	0	5	0
BURNS' SECOND SCOTCH RHAPSODY. Op. 24	0	5	0
MENDELSSOHN.
ATHALIE. Op. 74. (English words) ...	1	0	0
,, The Overture	0	4	0
,, Priests' March...	0	2	0
A HYMN OF PRAISE. Op. 52. (English words)	1	1	0
Ditto The Symphony ...	0	7	6
ELIJAH. Op. 70. (English and German words)	1	5	0
ST. PAUL. Op. 36 ,, ,,	1	5	0
HEAR MY PRAYER ,, ,,	0	6	0
M. MOODY.
DER STERBENDE KRIEGER CONCERT OUVERTÜRE FÜR GROSSES ORCHESTER	0	4	0
OUVERTÜRE IN A DUR FÜR GROSSES ORCHESTER	0	5	0
THEMISTOKLES OUVERTÜRE FÜR MILITAR MUSIK	0	5	0
MOZART.
TWELFTH MASS	0	15	0
E. MUNDELLA.
VICTORY OF SONG (Female Voices) ...	0	5	0
C. H. H. PARRY.
BLEST PAIR OF SIRENS	0	7	6
E. PROUT.
SYMPHONY IN F (No. 3, Op. 22) ...	1	5	0
C. SAINT-SAËNS.
THE HEAVENS DECLARE (Latin and English words)	1	5	0
SPOHR.
THE LAST JUDGMENT (English and German words)	1	11	6
Ditto The Overture	0	5	0
Ditto The Second Overture ...	0	5	0
GOD, THOU ART GREAT (English and German words)	0	10	6
CALVARY (English and German words) .	2	2	0
C. V. STANFORD.
THE REVENGE. Op. 24	1	1	0
IRISH SYMPHONY IN F MINOR. Op. 28	1	10	0
PRELUDE TO THE ŒDIPUS REX OF SOPHOCLES	0	6	0
SUITE FOR VIOLIN SOLO AND ORCHESTRA	1	1	0
SYMPHONY (No. 4) IN F. Op. 31 ...	1	10	0
A. SULLIVAN.
OVERTURE DI BALLO	0	12	0
IN MEMORIAM. Overture	0	15	0
TE DEUM. Composed in celebration of the recovery of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales	1	5	0
THE GOLDEN LEGEND	2	12	6
MUSIC TO "THE TEMPEST"	1	10	0

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

NOVELLO'S SHORT ANTHEMS.

A SERIES OF SHORT AND EASY ANTHEMS

ADAPTED TO THE

Seasons of the Church, and Suitable for Introits

EDITED BY

THE REV. W. RUSSELL, M.A., MUS. BAC.,

Succentor of St. Paul's Cathedral,

AND

SIR JOHN STAINER, M.A., MUS. DOC.

The following Numbers are now ready :—

20. AND I SAW ANOTHER ANGEL C. V. Stanford 2d.
24. ARISE, O JERUSALEM .. Oliver King 1½d.
36. ARISE, O LORD, INTO THY RESTING PLACE .. .. .. G. F. Cobb 1½d.
30. BELOVED, IF GOD SO LOVED US J. Barnby 1½d.
35. BELOVED, LET US LOVE ONE ANOTHER .. .. .. G. F. Cobb 1½d.
10. BELOVED, NOW ARE WE THE SONS OF GOD .. .. E. H. Thorne 1½d.
9. BLESSED IS HE .. .. B. Luard Selby 1½d.
26. BLESSED IS THE MAN .. Oliver King 1½d.
17. CHRIST IS NOT ENTERED Eaton Faning 1½d.
40. COME UNTO ME .. Matthew Kingston 1½d.
25. FOR IT BECAME HIM .. Oliver King 1½d.
38. GOD SO LOVED THE WORLD Matthew Kingston 1½d.
1. GOD, WHO IS RICH IN MERCY G. M. Garrett 1½d.
11. GRANT, WE BESEECH THEE J. Booth 1½d.
21. IF THOU SHALT CONFESS C. V. Stanford 2d.
18. IN THIS WAS MANIFESTED C. H. Lloyd 3d.
22. IT IS OF THE LORD'S MERCIES E. Thorne 1½d.
42. I WILL GO FORTH IN THE STRENGTH .. .. .. H. Blair 1½d.
8. I WILL MAGNIFY THEE .. B. Luard Selby 1½d.
37. I WILL WASH MY HANDS A. D. Culley 2d.
46. JESU, WHO FROM THY FATHER'S THRONE .. .. .. F. C. Woods 3d.
32. LET THE WORDS OF MY MOUTH Hugh Blair 1½d.
19. LO, THE WINTER IS PAST Henry Gadsby 3d.
23. O GOD, WHOSE NATURE .. Alan Gray 1½d.
13. O LORD, MY TRUST IS IN THY MERCY .. .. .. King Hall 1½d.
15. O LORD, REBUKE ME NOT H. Lahee 1½d.
33. O MOST MERCIFUL .. J. W. Elliott 1½d.
43. O PRAISE GOD .. .. H. Blair 1½d.
7. OUR SOUL ON GOD WITH PATIENCE WAITS .. G. M. Garrett 1½d.
39. O YE THAT LOVE THE LORD J. W. Elliott 1½d.
44. O YE THAT LOVE THE LORD S. Coleridge-Taylor 1½d.
45. PONDER MY WORDS, O LORD Arnold D. Culley 1½d.
3. PRAISED BE THE LORD DAILY J. Baptiste Calkin 1½d.
14. REJOICE GREATLY Rev. H. H. Woodward 1½d.
5. TEACH ME THY WAY, O LORD W. H. Gladstone 1½d.
4. THE GREAT DAY OF THE LORD IS NEAR .. .. George C. Martin 1½d.
27. THE LORD IS IN HIS HOLY TEMPLE .. .. .. J. W. Elliott 1½d.
31. THE LORD IS THE TRUE GOD J. Barnby 3d.
12. THE PILLARS OF THE EARTH ARE THE LORD'S .. Berthold Tours 1½d.
41. THE SACRIFICES OF GOD H. Blair 1½d.
34. THE SALVATION OF THE RIGHTEOUS C. Vincent 1½d.
28. THOU SHALT SHEW ME THE PATH OF LIFE .. .. Alan Gray 1½d.
29. TO THEE DO I LIFT UP MY SOUL King Hall 1½d.
16. TRY ME, O GOD .. .. Charles Wood 1½d.
2. WHEN MY SOUL FAINTED WITHIN ME .. .. J. F. Bridge 1½d.
6. WHO ARE WE, O LORD .. C. H. Lloyd 1½d.

To be continued.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES

FOR THE PIANOFORTE

EDITED, ARRANGED IN GROUPS, AND THE FINGERING REVISED AND SUPPLEMENTED

BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

THIS Collection of Studies is intended to illustrate the various elements of a complete course of pianoforte technique, and to provide students with the means of attacking and overcoming the different special difficulties which have to be encountered. With this view, the Studies have been arranged in groups, those in each group being placed in progressive order, and having reference to some one particular difficulty. The greater part of the Studies themselves have been selected from the standard works of the most eminent Study-writers, and with these are included numerous others, which, though of equally great practical utility, have hitherto been less generally accessible.

1.	FIVE-FINGER STUDIES	Part 1*
2.	„ „	„ 2*
3.	SCALES	Part 1*
4.	„	„ 2*
5.	BROKEN CHORDS	Part 1*
6.	„ „	„ 2*
7.	„ „	„ 3*
8.	„ „	„ 4
9.	„ „	„ 5
10.	LEFT HAND	Part 1*
11.	„ „	„ 2*
12.	„ „	„ 3
13.	„ „	„ 4
14.	ARPEGGIO	Part 1*
15.	„	„ 2*
16.	„	„ 3
17.	VELOCITY	Part 1*
18.	„	„ 2*
19.	„	„ 3
20.	„	„ 4
21.	„	„ 5
22.	„	„ 6
23.	„	„ 7
24.	FIGURES IN SEQUENCE	Part 1
25.	„ „	„ 2
26.	BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES	Part 1
27.	BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES	Part 2
28.	SHAKES	Part 1*
29.	„	„ 2*
30.	„	„ 3
31.	DOUBLE NOTES	Part 1*
32.	„ „	„ 2*
33.	„ „	„ 3
34.	„ „	„ 4
35.	OCTAVES	Part 1*
36.	„	„ 2*
37.	CHORDS	Part 1*
38.	„	„ 2
39.	STACCATO
40.	REPETITION	Part 1*
41.	REPETITION AND TREMOLO	„ 2
42.	„ „	„ 3
43.	PART-PLAYING	Part 1
44.	„ „	„ 2
45.	ORNAMENTS	Part 1
46.	„	„ 2
47.	ACCOMPANIED MELODY	Part 1
48.	„ „	„ 2
49.	EXTENSIONS AND SKIPS	Part 1
50.	„ „	„ 2
51.	RHYTHM	Part 1
52.	„	„ 2

* These Parts are already published.

FIFTY-TWO BOOKS, PRICE ONE SHILLING EACH.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

THE BEHNKE VOICE-TRAINING METHOD.

JUST PUBLISHED. PRICE, IN PAPER COVERS, TWO SHILLINGS; IN CLOTH, THREE SHILLINGS.

VOICE-TRAINING PRIMER

BY

MRS. EMIL BEHNKE AND DR. CHARLES W. PEARCE.

An easy Catechism of Vocal Physiology and Musical Theory, for the use of Vocal Students generally. This work is also intended as a Text-book for preparing Candidates for Vocal Examinations, particularly those of the Associated Board of the R.C.M. and R.A.M., the Incorporated Society of Musicians, and Trinity College, London. It contains in one volume all the information required for answering the vivâ voce questions of Examiners.

SIXTIETH THOUSAND. PRICE, IN PAPER COVERS, ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE; IN CLOTH, THREE SHILLINGS.

VOICE-TRAINING EXERCISES

In Six separate Books, for Soprano, Mezzo-Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, Baritone, and Bass.

BY

EMIL BEHNKE AND DR. CHARLES W. PEARCE.

"Admirable, and doubtless will prove of great utility."—Rev. Sir F. A. Gore Ouseley.
"Far more precise in plan than anything I have seen."—Sir R. P. Stewart.
"Scientific, systematic, and ingenious."—Sir John Stainer.

THIRD AND IMPROVED EDITION. PRICE, IN PAPER COVERS, ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE; IN CLOTH, THREE SHILLINGS.

VOICE-TRAINING STUDIES

In Six separate Books, for Soprano, Mezzo-Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, Baritone, and Bass.

BY

EMIL BEHNKE AND DR. CHARLES W. PEARCE.

"This work contains 24 Progressive Studies in different styles, and is intended as a companion or supplementary volume to 'Voice-Training Exercises.' Those of a more cantabile character are to be used as Solfeggi, the others are to be sung as Vocalises. In this Second Edition the accompaniments have been simplified. Highly favourable opinions of these Studies have been expressed by Sir John Stainer, Sir Robert Stewart, Mr. W. H. Cummings, and other eminent authorities.

"There can be little doubt that these 'Studies,' which are published in separate keys for all voices, will share the popularity of the 'Exercises.'"—Sunday Times.
"We have no doubt that the second volume will equal the first in popularity."—Morning Post.
"I am glad to find you are still going ahead in your valuable sphere of work. The 'Voice-Training Studies' are a solid and sound contribution to the repertory of teachers and students."—Sir John Stainer.
"Your new book of 'Voice-Training Studies' is admirable, and will prove of very great value to students and teachers. I like it much."—C. Vincent, Mus. Doc.

CHAPPELL'S VOCAL LIBRARY OF PART-SONGS.

A COLLECTION OF

GLEES, MADRIGALS, PART-SONGS, &c., FOR ALL VOICES.

CONTAINING WORKS BY

GOUNOD, ARTHUR SULLIVAN, HENRY SMART, J. L. HATTON, &c.

LIST OF CONTENTS ON APPLICATION.

NEW WORKS FOR TONIC SOL-FA.

FAUST

A Dramatic Legend by HECTOR BERLIOZ. Price 3s. 6d. net.

A Tonic Sol-fa Edition of this celebrated Work. Just Published. Price 2s. 6d. net.

JACKDAW OF RHEIMS

Cantata written by THOMAS INGOLDSBY. Music by GEORGE FOX. Price 2s. 6d. net.

Edition for Tonic Sol-fa. Just Published. 1s. 6d. net.

Orchestral and Chorus Parts of the above may be had on Hire of—

CHAPPELL AND CO., 50, NEW BOND ST., LONDON.

Printed by NOVELLO, EWER and Co., at 69 & 70, Dean Street (W.), and published at 1, Berners Street (W.), and 80 & 81, Queen Street (E.C.) Sold also by KENT and Co., Paternoster Row (E.C.)—Thursday, June 1, 1893.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR.

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH.

No. 605.—Vol. 34. JULY 1, 1893. Price 4d.; Post-free, 5d.

Registered for transmission abroad. Annual Subscription, Postage-free, 5s.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY,

ROYAL ALBERT HALL.

Patron: HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH, K.G.
Conductor: Sir JOSEPH BARNBY.

There are now VACANCIES in the Choir for SOPRANOS, ALTOS, TENORS, and BASSES (especially Tenors). Only those who have good powerful voices, and who can read music at first sight, will be accepted. Address, Assistant-Secretary, Royal Choral Society, Royal Albert Hall, S.W.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC,

TENTERDEN STREET, W.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.
Patrons: HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN AND THE ROYAL FAMILY
Principal: Dr. A. C. MACKENZIE.

Fortnightly Concerts, July 8 and 22, at 8.
Midsummer Term ends, July 26.
Orchestral Concert, at St. James's Hall, July 25, at 3.
Distribution of Prizes at St. James's Hall, July 26, at 3.
Entry Forms and all information may be obtained from the Secretary.
F. W. RENAUT, Secretary.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC,

KENSINGTON GORE, LONDON.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
Director: Sir GEORGE GROVE, D.C.L., LL.D.
Hon. Secretary: CHARLES MORLEY, Esq.

The Christmas Term will commence on Thursday, September 28.
Entrance Examination on September 26.
Regulations and all information may be obtained from
GEORGE WATSON, Registrar.

THE GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Established by the Corporation of London, 1880.

Principal: Sir JOSEPH BARNBY.

The next Term commences Monday, September 25.
For prospectuses and all further particulars apply to the Secretary.
By order of the Committee,
CHARLES P. SMITH, Secretary.
Victoria Embankment, E.C.

THE TONIC SOL-FA ASSOCIATION.

NINTH GREAT CHORAL FESTIVAL,

CRYSTAL PALACE, SATURDAY, JULY 15, 1893.

TWO GRAND CHORAL CONCERTS.

At 1.30, by 5,000 CERTIFICATED JUVENILE SINGERS.
Conductor, Mr. GEO. MERRITT, G.T.S.C.
Organist, Mr. J. FRANK PROUDMAN, F.C.O.
An Exhibition of Singing from Hand Signs will be given.
At 4, by 3,000 CERTIFICATED ADULT SINGERS from London and Provinces. Full Orchestral Accompaniment.
PART I.—SELECTION from Mendelssohn's ELIJAH.
PART II.—MISCELLANEOUS, including the Singing of an Anthem at First Sight.
Soloists:
Mr. ROBERT GRICE and Master W. A. GOUGH (Solo Treble, St. Alban's, Holborn).
Conductor, Mr. L. C. VENABLES.
Organist, Mr. H. W. WESTON, Mus. Bac., F.C.O.
At 7, EVENING CONCERT by the Peckham Tonic Sol-fa Choir.
Soloists:
Miss HELEN ROZE, Madame ANNIE MORLEY.
Mr. A. W. WHIPPEY, Mr. J. H. WHIPPEY.
Conductor, Mr. T. R. RAYMENT.
ORGAN RECITALS BY Messrs. J. F. PROUDMAN, H. W. WESTON, and ALBERT WOOD.

Tickets, Rail and Admission, from London Bridge, Ludgate Hill, Victoria, Kensington, and Intermediate Stations, 1s. 6d.; Moorgate Street, 1s. 9d. Children, Half-price.

May be obtained from Conductors or Members of Choirs; from J. Curwen and Sons, 8 and 9, Warwick Lane, E.C.; Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W., and 80, Queen Street, Cheapside; Keith, Prowse and Co., 48, Cheapside, Fenchurch Street, Charing Cross, and Holborn; Marratt and Ellis, 63, King William Street, E.C.; or from CHAS. NIXON, Ticket Manager, 48, Calvert Rd., East Greenwich. CHAS. H. SIEBERT, Hon. Secretary, 27, Lausanne Rd., Hornsey.

Reserved Seat Tickets also for either Concert may be had of the Ticket Manager or Hon. Secretary.

MUSIC

FOR

THE MARRIAGE SERVICE

OF

H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.

AND

H.S.H. THE PRINCESS VICTORIA MARY OF TECK

AT THE

CHAPEL ROYAL, ST. JAMES'S PALACE,

JULY 6, 1893.

FATHER OF LIFE

MARRIAGE HYMN

Words by the Rev. S. FLOOD JONES, M.A.

MUSIC BY

WILLIAM CRESER

Composer to Her Majesty's Chapels Royal.

Price 1s. 6d. net.

O PERFECT LOVE

WEDDING ANTHEM

Words by D. F. BLOMFIELD

MUSIC BY

SIR JOSEPH BARNBY.

Price Threepence.

Tonic Sol-fa, price One Penny.

Also arranged as a Two-part Chorus. Staff Notation and Tonic Sol-fa combined, price Three Half-pence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

ORGAN VOLUNTARIES

TO BE PLAYED PRIOR TO

THE ROYAL MARRIAGE SERVICE

ON JULY 6, 1893.

		NET.
MARCH IN ATHALIE (MENDELSSOHN)	[Arranged by CHARLES STEGGALL	1 6
" " " " ..	W. T. BEST	2 0
LARGO (HANDEL)	G. C. MARTIN	1 6
BENEDICTUS (A. C. MACKENZIE) ..	CHARLTON PALMER and J. B. LOTT	1 6
GRAND MARCH ("Lohengrin," Act III., WAGNER)	W. CRESER	1 0
BRIDAL CHORUS ("Lohengrin," WAGNER)	W. CRESER	1 0
WEDDING MARCH	Composed by W. CRESER	1 6

At the conclusion of the Service,

WEDDING MARCH (MENDELSSOHN)	Arr. by C. E. WILLING	1 0
	Arr. by W. T. BEST	2 0

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES.

MISS FLORENCE ARMRIDING (Soprano)
(Pupil of Mr. Shakespeare and Medalist, R.A.M.).
For Oratorios, Concerts, Lessons, &c., at 20, Conduit Street. Address, Leicester Villa, Ealing, W.

MADAME BARTER (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., Westbury Road, Wood Green, N.

MADAME CARRIE BLACKWELL (Soprano)
(Pupil of the late Madame Sainton-Dolby).
Orchestral, Oratorio, Ballad Concerts, &c., 4A, Sloane Square, S.W.

MISS EMILY DAVIES (Soprano)
Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., address, Severn House, Seven Sisters' Road, Finsbury Park, N.

MADAME ELEANOR DAY (Soprano)
Concerts, Private Lessons, &c. Strathaven, Hendon, N.W.

MISS MARJORIE EATON (Soprano)
(Pupil of W. Shakespeare, Esq., London).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c. 237, Katherine Street, Ashton-under-Lyne.

MADAME MADELINE HARDY (Soprano)
27, Loughborough Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS FLORENCE MONK (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., Glebe Field, Stoke Newington, N.

MADAME POWELL (Soprano or Mezzo)
Diplomée (Honours) Singing and Theory, Society of Arts, &c. Concerts, Lessons, terms, and Press notices. 8, Frederick Road, Edgbaston.

MISS FANNIE SELLERS (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, Recitals, &c., Crag Cottage, Knaresbro'.

MISS SIMPSON (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c.
For terms apply, Miss Simpson, Todmorden.

MISS KATIE THOMAS (Soprano)
Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, Pupils. 47A, Welbeck Street, W.

MISS ETHEL WEBB (Soprano)
Concerts, &c. 14, Balmoral Road, Nottingham.

MISS GERTRUDE WESLEY (Soprano & Harpist)
(Great-granddaughter of Samuel Wesley).
For Oratorio or Ballad Concerts. Testimonials and Critiques from 53, High Street, Doncaster.

MISS LILY HOWARD (Mezzo-Soprano)
(Pupil of Madame Bella Monti).
Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., address, 1, Arundel Rd., Croydon.

MADAME HILDA READING (Mezzo-Soprano)
(Pupil of the late Theodore Distin, Esq.)
Masonic Banquets, Dinners, Concerts, &c., 27, Addington Square, Camberwell.

MISS MARY WILLIS (Mezzo-Soprano)
For Oratorios, Operas, Concerts, or Private Lessons, address, 9, Rochester Terrace, Camden Road, N.W.

MISS M. L. BOOKER, L.R.A.M. (Contralto)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, care of Mr. Wm. Marriott, 295, Oxford Street, W.; or, Shirebrook Villa, Heeley, Sheffield.

MISS EMMIE FINNEY (Contralto)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c.
42, Pembridge Road, Notting Hill Gate, W.

MISS LILIAN HOVEY (Contralto)
(Medalist, R.A.M.; Pupil of Mr. Richard Cummings, A.R.A.M.)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 32, Norfolk Road, Sheffield.
"'ELIJAH.'—Miss Hovey's finished style was manifested in 'Woe unto them,' and 'O, rest in the Lord,' which she rendered very beautifully and with rare devotional expression and pathos."—Sheffield Daily Telegraph, April 15, 1893.
"'ST. PETER.'—Of the principals, Miss Hovey takes the chief place for her sympathetic and reverent singing of the numerous recits., and for her consolatory rendering of the air 'O Thou afflicted."—Sheffield and Rotherham Independent, April 27, 1892.

MISS RINA ROBINSON (Contralto)
For Oratorio and Ballad Concerts. 67, Carleton Rd., Tufnell Park, N.
References kindly permitted to Dr. A. H. Mann, Dr. E. H. Turpin, and Mr. F. A. W. Docker.

MADAME and MR. SUTTON SHEPLEY
(Contralto and Baritone).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 97, Dalberg Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS LOTTIE SWEENEY (Contralto)
(Pupil of Madame Sainton-Dolby).
For Concerts, Oratorios, &c., address, Miss Sweeney, Vocalist, Armley, near Leeds.

MR. HERBERT CLINCH (Tenor)
Oratorio, Ballads, &c., address, 41, Frederick St., St. John's Wood, N.W.

MR. HARRY STUBBS, R.C.M. (Tenor)
(Of St. George's Chapel, Windsor).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 18, The Cloisters.

MR. GORDON HELLER (Baritone)
(Of St. James's Hall Concerts, London; late Pupil of Hy. Blower, Esq.)
For Oratorios, &c., address, 20, Blenheim Terrace, Leeds.

MR. GILBERT THORNE (Baritone)
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., address, 11, Penryn Street, Oakley Square, N.W.

MR. JNO. W. GREENWOOD (Bass)
For Concerts, Ballads, &c. 140, Queen's Road, Halifax

MADAME MARY OWEN (Soprano), returned from abroad. For Oratorio, Concerts, At Homes, and Private Lessons. 68, Southampton Row, Russell Square.

MADAME LAURA SMART (Soprano) requests that all communications respecting Oratorio, Operatic Recital, or Ballad Concerts be addressed, 29, Burton Road, Kilburn, N.W.; or, 50, Church Street, Liverpool.

MR. W. CARTLEDGE-WHITE (Tenor) begs to announce his CHANGE OF ADDRESS to 7, Guildford Road, South Lambeth, S.W., where all communications respecting Concert, Opera, Oratorio Engagements should be addressed.

CHANGE of ADDRESS.—MR. DAN PRICE (Baritone, of Westminster Abbey) begs to announce his CHANGE of ADDRESS to 9, Clarendon Road, Holland Park, W., where all communications respecting Concert, Masonic, Oratorio Engagements, and Private Lessons should be addressed.

MR. EGBERT ROBERTS (Bass) requests that all communications respecting Oratorios, Opera, or Concerts be addressed, 45, Pentonville Road, N.

MISS LANE (Accompanist) can undertake to play from manuscript. References: Miss Zippora Monteith and Mr. Isidore de Solla. 38, Beckenham Road, S.E.

MISS CARRIE LEWIS (L.R.A.M.), Performer and Teacher, Accompanist (good reader), and Solo Pianist, accepts ENGAGEMENTS for Concerts, At Homes, Private Practice, &c. 218, Upper Richmond Road, Putney, S.W.

MISS CLARA TITTERTON, Associate and Silver Medalist, R.A.M., First Class Certificate Society of Arts, &c., &c., receives PUPILS for the VIOLIN and PIANOFORTE on moderate terms. Lessons given at pupils' own residences. Schools attended. Miss Titterton also accepts Engagements for Concerts and At Homes. 38, Agate Road, The Grove, Hammersmith, W.

MR. AUGUSTUS BINGHAM (Professor of Singing) will be shortly willing to take three or four VOCALISTS on special terms for finishing lessons in town. Mr. Bingham being a high-class Concert and Dramatic Agent, the advantages offered are great. Write particulars to Mr. Augustus Bingham, care of Bingham and Morice, Trafalgar Chambers, 36, St. Martin's Lane, W.C.

MR. FRANK FREWER, L.R.A.M., A.C.O. (Organist, St. James's, Garlickhithe, E.C.), teaches the PIANOFORTE, ORGAN, &c. For terms for Concerts, Organ Recitals, Pianoforte or Organ Lessons, address, 6, Wilmot Place, Rochester Road, Camden Road, N.W.

METROPOLITAN EXAMINATIONS, R.A.M.—A Licentiate (Pianoforte) PREPARES for the above. Syllabus now out. Single lessons given. Studio in Regent Street. Theory by correspondence. Licentiate, 22, Howard Road, Cricklewood.

MISS

MARIE HOOTON

(CONTRALTO)

(Late Westmoreland Scholar and Parepa-Rosa Gold Medalist of the Royal Academy of Music)

AND

MR.

EDWARD BRANSCOMBE

(TENOR)

(LAY-VICAR OF WESTMINSTER ABBEY)

Are now booking Engagements for the present and ensuing seasons.
Please address, 37, Torrington Square, Bloomsbury; or,
Mr. W. B. HEALEY,
17, Great Marlborough Street, W.

MR.

SMALLWOOD METCALFE

(BASS)

For Oratorios, Concerts, &c.
"Special praise must be given to Mr. Smallwood Metcalfe for his admirable singing. He is the possessor of a fine bass voice of considerable compass and sonority."—The Times, December 6, 1892.
Terms, &c., address, 142, Belsize Road, London, N.W.

MR. BINGLEY SHAW,
CONCERT AGENT AND MANAGER,
Music Warehouse, Market Place, Nottingham.

MISS

FANNY BOUFFLEUR

(PRINCIPAL SOPRANO, St. Peter's Church (Catholic), Seel Street, Liverpool).

For Oratorios, Cantatas, Operas, Concerts, &c.

Répertoire includes "Messiah," "Elijah," "Samson," "St. Paul," "Creation," "Acis and Galatea," "Alexander's Feast," "May Queen," "Rose Maiden," "Bride of Dunkerron," &c.; also "Stabat Mater" (Rossini), "Imperial Mass" (Haydn), "Twelfth Mass" (Mozart), "Requiem" (Mozart); Haydn's, Hummel's, Mozart's, and Beethoven's Masses and Motets, Cherubini's Mass in C, "O fons amoris," "Alma Virgo," "Ave Maria," &c.

For complete répertoire, Press opinions, photo, &c., address, 239, Upper Parliament Street, Liverpool; or, Agent, N. VERT, Esq., 6, Cork Street, London, W.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS.

MR. DUTTON (St. Paul's Cathedral) provides SOLO BOYS for Church Festivals, Organ Recitals, Concerts, At Homes, &c.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Have made a great reputation.
MASTER ALBERT LEE.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Are specially experienced in Sacred Music.
MASTER W. A. GOUGH.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Have received splendid testimonials.
MASTER EDWARD WOOD.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Are trained entirely by himself.
MASTER FRANK CAMPBELL.

Address, 19, Alpha Road, New Cross, S.E.

MR. THOMAS KEMPTON

(Bass, Vicar Choral, St. Paul's Cathedral)

AND

MR. JAMES BATES

(Director of Choir, Christ Church, Lancaster Gate, W.),

PROVIDE:

SOLO BOYS and LEADING BOYS
For Oratorios, Church Festivals, Concerts, &c.

MASTER SYDNEY LOVETT

"Master Sydney Lovett is possessed of a singularly sweet soprano voice and a most refined style."—Daily Telegraph, April 12, 1893.

Master Lovett has recently sung with great success: "Messiah" and Bach's "Passion" Music (Christ Church, Lancaster Gate), "Hear my Prayer" (Paddington and Barnsbury), "Mors et Vita" (St. Leonards-on-Sea), "Hymn of Praise" (Bayswater, King's Lynn, and Islington), "Last Judgment" (Paddington, Hampstead, and St. Leonards), "Ancient Mariner" (Kensington), and "Gallia" (Hampstead), &c.

MASTER LEONARD TUDGAY
(Appointed Solo Boy, St. Mary's Church, Stoke Newington)

And other thoroughly trained and reliable vocalists can be seen by appointment.

Letters and applications for testimonials, criticisms, terms, &c., to be addressed:

Messrs. KEMPTON and BATES, 60, Moorgate Street, E.C.

Provincial Clergy, Organists, Musical Directors, and others will find this address easily accessible from all the London termini.

CHOIR BOYS.

Carefully trained SOLO and LEADING BOYS for permanent Appointments, Festivals, &c.

MR. GEORGE BUDD,
10, Hafer Road, Clapham Junction.

MR. JOSEF CANTOR'S

"GEMS OF THE OPERAS"

CONCERT COMPANY.

All communications, Church Street, Liverpool.

Telegrams—"Cantor, Liverpool."

THE GLASGOW GLEE and CATCH CLUB

hereby offer a PRIZE of £15 for the best Original Composition for Male Voices, in the recognised English Glee form. Full particulars may be had from the subscriber, A. W. Young, 76, Hill Street, Garnethill, Glasgow.

THE

ENGLISH CONCERT PARTY

MADAME LESLIE ARNOTT.

MADAME JULIA HUTCHINGS.

MR. A. BOWYER BRISTOL.

MR. EDMUND EDWARDS.

Solo Pianoforte—
MRS. A. L. RICHARDSON, L.R.A.M.

Solo Violin—
MR. W. H. HENLEY.

Solo Harp—
J. H. COCKERILL
(Sir CHARLES HALLÉ'S BAND).

Conductor and Accompanist—
MR. WALTER J. EVANS.

The above Party are prepared to accept Engagements for the forthcoming season for Sacred, Chamber, or Ballad Concerts; also,

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS WITH

SIR AUGUSTUS HARRIS,

FOR

CONCERT RECITALS OF GOUNOD'S OPERA

PHILEMON AND BAUCIS.

Applications for vacant dates to be made to Manager,
P. Henry Jones, Hampden House, Phœnix Street, London, N.W.
Special arrangements for Charity Concerts.

MUSICAL INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE,

LIMITED.

Founded 1878. Incorporated 1893.

Central Office:
113, GREAT PORTLAND STREET, OXFORD STREET, W.

Principal: Professor EDWIN M. LOTT, Mus. Doc.
Vice-Principal: J. H. LEWIS, Mus. Doc., D.C.L.

PRACTICAL EXAMINATIONS may take place at any time (excepting in the months of August and September), at the various centres throughout the United Kingdom.

Next LOCAL THEORETICAL EXAMINATION, November 29.

The HIGHER EXAMINATIONS for the Diplomas of A.Mus. M.I.C. and L.Mus. M.I.C., also for the Certificates of Associate-Pianist, Associate-Vocalist, Associate-Violinist, Associate-Organist, will be held on July 28.

Certificate Holders and others wishing to further the objects of the College may be admitted as Members. Annual Subscription, 10s. 6d.; Life, £10 10s.

W. A. PHILPOTT, Mus. Bac., Secretary.

VICTORIA COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Instituted by the Victoria College Corporation, Ltd.
Incorporated 1891.

Patrons:
The Right Hon. THE MARQUIS OF LORNE, K.T.
The Right Hon. THE EARL OF DARTMOUTH.

Local Secretaries required for towns not already represented.
Regulations as to Diploma and Local Examinations on application
GEO. A. STANTON, Secretary.
11, Burleigh Street, Strand, W.C.

CHURCH CHOIR GUILD

(Guild of Church Musicians).

35, WELLINGTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

President: The Very Rev. FRANCIS PIGOU, D.D., Dean of Bristol.
Warden and Licensed Lay Chaplain: J. H. LEWIS, Mus. Doc., D.C.L

July 5 and 6.—A.C.C.G. and F.C.C.G. Diploma Examinations.
For further particulars see the new Calendar and Church Musician; or, apply to the Warden.

By Order of the Council.

THE

London College of Music,

LTD.

FOUNDED 1887. INCORPORATED 1892.

GREAT MARLBOROUGH STREET,

LONDON, W.

PATRONS.

The Most Noble THE MARQUIS OF CARMARTHEN, M.P.

SIR FRANCIS W. BRADY, Bart, Q.C.

The Honourable SIR WILLIAM GRANTHAM.

BOARD OF EXAMINATION.

W. J. WESTBROOK, Esq., Mus. Doc., Cantab.

HORTON ALLISON, Esq., Mus. D., Dublin; Mus. B., Cantab.

C. G. VERRINDER, Esq., Mus. D., Cantuar; Mus. B., Oxon.

ALFRED J. CALDICOTT, Esq., Mus. Bac., Cantab. (Principal, Educational Department).

F. J. KARN, Esq., Mus. Doc.; Mus. Bac., Cantab. (Vice-Principal).

G. AUGUSTUS HOLMES, Esq. (Director, Examination Department).

EXAMINATIONS in PIANOFORTE PLAYING, SINGING, THEORY, and all branches of Music will be held in London and at 300 Provincial Centres in July next, when certificates will be granted to all successful candidates.

SYLLABUS and FORMS of ENTRY can be obtained of the Secretary, who will supply all particulars. The last day of entry is June 15.

SILVER and BRONZE MEDALS and BOOK PRIZES are offered for competition in accordance with the regulations.

APPLICATION for the formation of NEW CENTRES should be made to the Secretary, who will furnish all necessary information.

The DIPLOMAS granted by the College are Associate (A.L.C.M.), Associate in Music (A.Mus.L.C.M.), Licentiate (L.L.C.M.), and Licentiate in Music (L.Mus.L.C.M.). Regulations and list of Diplomées on application.

The "Annual Register" of the College is now ready. Price 2s. 6d.

In the EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT Students are received and thoroughly trained under eminent Professors.

The HALF-TERM began May 29.

An OPERATIC CLASS for Ladies and Gentlemen is held every Wednesday evening from 6 to 9 p.m. Thorough instruction in Elocution, Musical Declamation, and Stage Deportment is given to Members of this Class. Conductor: Herr ALBERT HENNING. Fee for the Term, £1 1s.

T. WEEKES HOLMES, Secretary.

MR. W. C. AINLEY, Mus. Bac., Cantab. (1884), teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c., by Correspondence. Terms moderate. New House, Mirfield, Yorkshire.

DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who passed the following EXAMINATIONS:—MUS. DOC., OXON. and DUBLIN; MUS. BAC. Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, and Durham (1892); L.R.A.M., 1893; L.L.C.M., 1893; F.C.O., 1893. FOUR HUNDRED Certificates, "Diplomas," and Degrees have been gained by Dr. ALLISON'S Pupils at Musical Examinations, and they won SIX GOLD MEDALS and Three Silver Medals. Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Revision of Compositions, by Post, to Correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, Organ, and Piano. 68, Nelson St., Manchester.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, A.R.A.M., teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c., by post. Personal Lessons in Pianoforte or Theory at own or pupil's residence; or at 84, New Bond Street, W. Schools attended. Address, Willersley House, Old Charlton.

EMIL BEHNKE'S System of VOICE TRAINING is carried on by Mrs. and Miss Behnke and assistant. Also Emil Behnke's method of treating STAMMERING. References to doctors whose patients have been cured. Pamphlet, 1s., post-free, of Mrs. Emil Behnke, 18, Earl's Court Square, S.W.

MR. GEORGE J. BENNETT is prepared to receive PUPILS in HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c. Address, 25, Vincent Square, Westminster, S.W.; or, 1, Berners St., W.

MISS GAUL, Daughter of ALFRED GAUL (Composer) and pupil of Herren Brodsky, Hilf, Herrmann, &c., Leipsic Conservatorium, takes PUPILS for VIOLIN and THEORY. 227, Monument Road, Birmingham.

MR. T. HEMMINGS, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.C.O., L.Mus., T.C.L., prepares Candidates for ARTS and MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS by Post. Stoke-on-Trent.

PREPARATION by CORRESPONDENCE for DURHAM UNIVERSITY ARTS EXAM. for FIRST MUS. BAC. (CERTIFICATE OF PROFICIENCY EXAM.). Thirty-four pupils of these Classes have passed this Exam. since June, 1891. For successes, terms, &c., apply, Secretary, London and Durham Correspondence Classes, Durham.

DR. HOCH'S CONSERVATOIRE for all branches of Music, in Frankfort-on-the-Maine. The Winter Term commences September 1. Director, Professor Dr. B. SCHOLZ. Tuition is given by Frau F. Bassermann, and by Messrs. Director Dr. B. Scholz, I. Kwast, L. Uzielli, I. Meyer, E. Engesser, A. Glück, G. Trautmann, and K. Friedberg (in Pianoforte); Mr. H. Gelhaar (in Organ); Professor H. Heermann, Professor Naret-Koning, and F. Bassermann (in Violin and Viola); Professor B. Cossmann (in Violoncello); W. Seltrecht (in Contra-Bass); M. Kretzschmar (in Flute); R. Müns (in Oboe); L. Mohler (in Clarinet); F. Thiele (Fagott); C. Preusse (in Horn); I. Wohllebe (in Trumpet); Kammersänger Dr. G. Gunz, C. Schubart, and H. Herborn (in Singing); Director Dr. Scholz and Messrs. I. Knorr and E. Humperdinck (in Theory and Composition); E. Humperdinck (Partiturspiel and Instrumentation); Dr. G. Veith (in German Literature); Mr. K. Hermann (in Declamation and Mimics); Frl. del Lungo (in Italian Language). The Fee for the Special Branch and necessary accessories is 360 marks; for the Finishing Classes, 450 marks per annum. Applications to be made to the Direction of Dr. Hoch's Conservatoire.

DR. F. J. KARN, Mus. Bac., Cantab.; Mus. Doc., Trinity College, Toronto; L.Mus., T.C.L., gives LESSONS Personally or by post in HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, FUGUE, ORCHESTRATION, ACOUSTICS, &c.; and prepares for Musical Examinations. Latest successes: DURHAM MUS. BAC. and First Exam., Sept. 1892; CAMBRIDGE MUS. BAC., 1892; MUS. BAC., LONDON, 1891; MUS. BAC., DUBLIN, 1891 and 1892; F.C.O., and A.C.O., 1892; L.R.A.M. (Composition), 1891; Mus. Doc. and Mus. Bac., Toronto, 1891, Gold Medalist, 1890; L.T.C.L. and A.T.C.L., 1892; F.T.S.C.; Senior Local, R.A.M. and R.C.M., and T.C.L., Theory and Pianoforte; A.R.C.M.; L.Mus., L.C.M. Upwards of 260 Diplomas and Degrees gained by pupils, and several Medals. Terms very moderate. Address, 70, Park Road, Haverstock Hill, N.W.

DR. W. JOHN REYNOLDS, D.Mus., Lond., L.Mus., T.C.L., gives LESSONS, personally or by post, in the Theory of Music (including acoustics). Recent successes. 48, Highbury Grove, N.

HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, COMPOSITION, by Post. Pupils in all parts of the kingdom. Prospectus free. "Comparison of English and German Methods of Teaching Harmony." Mr. F. Sommer, A.L.A.M., 14, Mardale Street, London, W.

MR. R. STOKOE, Mus. Bac., Cantab., F.C.O., gives ORGAN LESSONS at Christ Church, Down Street, Piccadilly. Harmony, Counterpoint, &c., taught personally or by post. 82, Rossiter Road, Balham, S.W.

DR. TAYLOR, Mus.D., Oxon., F.C.O., L.Mus. (Author of "Vocal Score Reading Exercises for F.C. Students"), prepares CANDIDATES for MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS by Post. Address, Wolverhampton Road, Stafford.

MR. A. W. TOMLYN, Mus.B., Dunelm, L.T.C.L., Berwick-on-Tweed, COACHES CANDIDATES for University and all other Exams. by post. Every possible attention and assistance guaranteed. Many past successes.

MR. W. H. TUTT, Mus. Bac., Cantab., L.R.A.M., teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, ACOUSTICS, &c., by Correspondence. Ashburn, Derbyshire.

DR. J. WARRINER prepares Candidates successfully for all MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS, and receives Resident and Professional Students, on advantageous terms, if talented. De Crespigny Lodge, Denmark Hill, S.E.

MRS. WEBSTER, L.R.A.M., is open to an ENGAGEMENT as PIANOFORTE and HARMONY MISTRESS, one or two days a week, in or near London. Mrs. Webster has been exceptionally successful in preparing Candidates for the Associated Board of the R.A.M. and R.C.M. and other Examinations. 90, Angell Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS FLORENCE MARSHALL (Licentiate of the Royal Academy of Music (Teacher), 1890, Pupil of Mr. Emil Behnke and Mr. Walter Mackway) is open to an ENGAGEMENT as SINGING MISTRESS one or two days a week in London. Pupils have passed the Local Examinations of: The Associated Board, R.A.M. and R.C.M.; Incorporated Society of Musicians; and Trinity College, London. For terms, &c., apply to Miss Florence Marshall, Dromore, Ashby Road, Loughborough.

A LICENTIATE of the Royal Academy of Music (Pianoforte), for many years principal of a School of Music, wishes an INTRODUCTION to a TEACHING CONNECTION in or near London, or would be willing to co-operate with another musician. Send terms and particulars to A. W., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

MUSICAL PROFESSION.—MR. W. DE M. SERGISON, Organist and Director of the Choir of St. Peter's, Eaton Square, S.W., trains Youths as Musicians, especially as CHOIR-TRAINERS and ORGANISTS. Mr. Sergison's course affords advantages not attainable at any London Academies. Many past pupils are now holding Cathedral and important Church appointments in England, America, and the Colonies. Applications should be addressed to Mr. Sergison, at the Vestry of the Church.

LADY seeks BLIND MUSIC PUPILS. N. Neeves, 47, South Park Hill Road, Croydon.

THE ORGANIST of the Parish Church, Cuckfield, Sussex, has a VACANCY for a RESIDENT PUPIL. Comfortable home. Apply to Mr. T. E. P. Attewell, as above.

SALISBURY CATHEDRAL.—There will be a COMPETITION for two CHORISTERSHIPS on Tuesday, July 11, 1893, at 12 noon, at the Organist's House. Candidates must as a rule be between the ages of 8 and 10, but exceptions may be made. Apply, as soon as possible, for information as to references required, payments, &c., to Rev. E. E. Dorling, The Close, Salisbury.

WANTED, a SOLO BOY, for St. Peter's Church, Ealing. Salary, from £8 to £10 per annum. Two Services on Sunday and one choir practice during the week. Also, an Alto wanted for the above choir. Salary, £10 per annum. Services, &c., as above. Apply, by letter, stating experience, &c., to Mr. J. Cliffe Forrester, F.C.O., 3, Mount Park Road, Ealing.

SOLO BOY WANTED. Must be able to read, and a knowledge of Catholic Church music is desirable. Apply, in first instance, by letter, to Rector, Italian Church, Hatton Garden.

ARMAGH CATHEDRAL.—There is a VACANCY for an ALTO voice. Salary, £100. Candidates must be under 30 years of age. Testimonials as to character and musical ability are to be sent to the Chapter Clerk, Cathedral Close, Armagh.

ALTO and BASS WANTED, at once. Communicants. Stipend, £10. Apply, Tuesdays or Fridays, at 8. Grosvenor Chapel, South Audley Street, W.

VOLUNTARY TENORS and Basses Wanted, for Choir of Church of The Good Shepherd, Mansfield Road, Gospel Oak, N.W. Communicants. Full choral services. Apply at the Church, or by letter to H. Franklin Smith, 20, Thurlow Rd., Hampstead, N.W.

REQUIRED, for West-End Church (vicinity of Regent Street), two BASS VOCALISTS. Must be good readers. Services: Sunday morning and evening. Stipend, £20 per annum. Apply, by letter, to Cantor, care of Messrs. Weekes and Co., 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.

WANTED, by the Chesterfield Harmonic Society, for Christmas Day next, four PRINCIPALS for THE MESSIAH. Apply, stating lowest terms, to Harry Taylor, 33, Salter Gate, Chesterfield.

MR. CLIFFORD-CONSTABLE (late Choirmaster, Parish Church, Bromley, London) at liberty in September for similar APPOINTMENT, or as Solo Tenor. Few vacant Sundays this month for Solo work. Address, care of S. R. Hurst, Esq., 55, Chancery Lane, W.C.

BARITONE.—Advertiser, an Undergraduate of Oxford, who possesses a good Baritone voice, VOLUNTEERS his SERVICES for four months (July to Oct., incl.) in a good London or Provincial Choir; daily services preferred. Object, to gain experience of Church Music. Address, Baritone, 1, Nottingham Road, Croydon.

BASS, experienced in both English Church and Catholic music, desires ENGAGEMENT. Address, S. G. Yerbury, 25, Parade, Acton, W.

BASS SOLOIST.—WANTED, a CHURCH APPOINTMENT in the United States, Concert Engagements, or Vocal Teaching, by a pupil of Sig. Manuel Garcia. Highest professional and other testimonials. Medalist, R.A.M. Address, Bertrams, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

ORGANIST WANTED. Watering-place. Large Church and Choir. Good connection. Vicar, 20, Compton Terrace, Highbury.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED, for Congregational Church, Basingstoke. Salary, £20 per annum. Apply to Mr. Gage, Fairfields, Basingstoke.

REQUIRED, ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER for St. John's, Bradford, Yorkshire. £60 a year stipend. Applications to be sent to Rev. A. Z. G. Nash, Vicar.

ASSISTANT-ORGANIST WANTED, for a Church at Kilburn. Good Organ. Practice in return for services. Address, B., 14, Beacon Hill, Camden Road, N.

WANTED, a DEPUTY-ORGANIST, competent to take the duties at St. Peter's, Belsize Square, N.W., during August. For further particulars, apply to Stanley Hawley, 18, Alma Square, N.W.

WANTED, in return for Rooms, DEPUTY during August, for St. James's Episcopal Church, Leith, Edinburgh. Two Sunday services. One accustomed to Choral Service. Convenient centre for Highland and Border tours. For particulars, apply, Samuel Warren, 40, Restalrig Terrace, Leith, Edinburgh.

THE ORGANIST of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, is free to DEPUTISE during July, August, and September. Arnold D. Culley, F.C.O., A.R.C.M., Emmanuel College, Cambridge.

ORGANIST, &c., desires POST in or near London. Moderate salary. Excellent testimonials. Would deputise. Anglican. E., 51, Cumberland Street, Pimlico, S.W.

EXPERIENCED ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER desires ENGAGEMENT in or near London. Communicant, Church of England. Excellent testimonials from clergy and musicians. Address, care of E. F., 12, Bedford Gardens, Holland Pk., W.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER (Professional) desires RE-ENGAGEMENT. Excellent testimonials. Eight years' experience. Address, Organist, care of Beeching's Library, Upper Baker Street, N.W.

ORGANIST can DEPUTISE Aug. 1 to Sept. 15, or part of time, in return for rooms. Quiet village near river preferred. Euterpe, 2, Balmoral Villas, Newtown, Margate.

ORGANIST and MUSIC MASTERSHIP WANTED, in School, in Sept. Non-res. pref. Can assist in form work. Exp. Exc. refs. & tests. R. E. C., Magdalen Coll. Sch., Brackley.

GOOD Organist and Choirmaster would DEPUTISE for ORGANISTS, or is open to take a permanent appointment. Address, J. B., 93, Effra Road, Brixton, S.W.

MR. C. HUGH ROWCLIFFE, F.C.O., Organist and Choirmaster, is open to DEPUTISE or PERMANENT APPOINTMENT. 76, Brighton Road, Stoke Newington, N.

MR. G. R. EGERTON (for thirteen years Assistant-Organist of H.M.'s late Chapel Royal, Whitehall) will be at liberty to take Sunday duties during July, August, and September, and Sunday mornings permanently. Address, 53, Gloucester Crescent, Regent's Park, N.W.

ACCOMPANIST (Lady) desires ENGAGEMENTS. Experienced; good reader. Concerts, At Homes, private practice, &c. A. T., 2, Penn Road Villas, Camden Road, N.

WANTED, a good reliable OUT-DOOR TUNER. Aged about 30. Permanency. Hutchinson, Clarence Place, Newport, Mon.

WANTED, a Young Man who can Tune and make himself generally useful in MUSIC BUSINESS. Must play. State wages, experience, reference, to E. Fisher, Arcade, Bournemouth.

TUNER.—WANTED, a YOUNG MAN for in and out-door work. Must be thoroughly proficient, steady, and reliable. State age, references, and salary required, R. A. H., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

EXPERIENCED PIANOFORTE REPAIRER WANTED. Permanent job for good man. Apply, Crane and Sons, Scotland Road, Liverpool.

TUNER, TONER, and REGULATOR.—British and Continental experience. Proficiency in Pianoforte Making and Repairing of Reed and Stringed instruments. Holding foreman's position. Seeks RE-ENGAGEMENT. Address, A. M., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

WANTED, SITUATION as TUNER, REGULATOR, and REPAIRER of Pianos, Organs, and Harmoniums. Eighteen years' factory and out-door experience. Aged 31. Town or country. N., 12, Geere Road, West Ham, E.

PIANOFORTE TUNER desires RE-ENGAGEMENT. Knowledge of Harmoniums, American Organs, and Repairing. Address, H. G., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

WANTED, experienced and gentlemanly ASSISTANT in a high-class MUSIC WAREHOUSE in suburbs. Under 30 preferred. Must have thorough acquaintance with publishers' lists; also able to play well at sight, and possess a knowledge of tuning, which may be required occasionally. A permanent situation to a qualified person. Address, with full particulars, giving personal references, and stating salary required (without board), Trichord, Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

ADVERTISER (30), with twelve years' experience of piano trade, book-keeping, and supervision of large tuning staff, seeks ENGAGEMENT, England or abroad. Vigilant, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

WANTED, ASSISTANT for Sheet Music and Small Goods counter. Must have a good knowledge of Catalogues. X. Z., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners St., W.

TO MUSICSELLERS.—REQUIRED, a POSITION in a Music Shop near London. Qualifications: Good penman and accountant; brilliant pianist and sight-reader. Knows trade thoroughly. Could assist in management and live on premises. Address, Energy, 26, Hatfield Street, New Cross, S.E.

A GENTLEMAN (27), superior address and energetic, desires ENGAGEMENT in Pianoforte or Organ Showroom, &c. Good musician. Organist, 75, Westfield Rd., Hornsey, N.

TRAVELLER (Sheet or Piano).—Advertiser seeks RE-ENGAGEMENT. Aged 29. 14 years' experience in the trade. Address, K., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

MANAGER or ASSISTANT requires permanent SITUATION. Aged 25. Married. 8½ years' experience in sheet, small goods, pianos, &c. Book-keeping, exceptional references. G. Z., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

YOUNG MAN wishes SITUATION in MUSIC BUSINESS. Knowledge of Violin Music, Strings, and Fittings. Plays Violin and Mandolin. J. L. A., 41, Curzon Street, Maryport.

SITUATION REQUIRED, in Music Publisher's. Ten years' experience in Sheet Music and Small Goods. Good London references. Aged 25. J., 3, Buckingham Road, Leyton, E.

ORGAN PRACTICE (near City), 1s. per hour. Three manuals, C.O. pedals. Willis (from Minories), 45, Leman St., E.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—Three manuals; independent pedals. Terms, One Shilling per hour. Specification post-free. Blennerhasset's Studio, 1A, Vernon Street, King's Cross, W.C.

NEW ORGAN STUDIO, with Three-manual PIPE ORGAN, blown by water. Terms for Practice, 1s. per hour. At Smyth's Music Depôt, 54, London Road, Forest Hill, S.E.

ORGANS, Church, Chapel, and College, with every modern improvement. Established 1845. W. E. Richardson and Sons, to Her Majesty, Central Organ Works, Hulme, Manchester. Specification and Estimates.

STUDIO ORGAN, with three Manuals and Pedals, for SALE, nearly new. Price £55, or five guineas per quarter for three years. W. White, Grantham.

ORGAN.—Two manuals, 19 stops, CC to G, 56 notes and pedals, in Emmanuel Church, Bolton, to be SOLD immediately. W. E. Richardson, Central Organ Works, Hulme, Manchester.

ORGAN.—A fine-toned modern TWO-MANUAL ORGAN, containing 13 stops and all the latest improvements and desirable appliances. Price £200. Printed particulars on application. Warranted for five years. Fincham's Organ Factory, 150, Euston Road, London. Established 1837.

ORGAN for SALE.—10 ft. high and 7 ft. wide. Handsome rosewood case. Suitable for Chapel or Private. Excellent condition. 8 stops, manual, and 2 reeds. Makers, BATES and SON. Cost 200 guineas; take 40, or offer, having no further use for it. Seen at Stafford House, Cuckfield, Sussex.

ORGAN, CC, Two-manual, for Sale, cheap. 5 great, 5 swell, Bourdon ped., 4 couplers. Apply, E. O. Yorston, Organ Builder, Victoria Works, Durham Street, Kennington Oval, S.E.

GRAND ORGAN for SALE. Specially constructed for, and now in use at the National Workmen's Exhibition, Agricultural Hall, Islington. A bargain if purchased before August 12, close of Exhibition. Particulars from Eustace Ingram, Organ Builder, Burnard Place, Holloway, N.

FOR SALE, a very fine LEWIS ORGAN. Three manuals and pedals; 40 sounding stops. Suitable for a Church. Apply, Joshua Byers, Paradise Row, Stockton-on-Tees.

ORGAN for SALE.—Now in use at Oxted Church, Surrey. Also our New Model Chancel Organs. Specifications for new Organs, &c., on application. Henry Speechly and Sons, St. Mark's Road, Dalston, N.E.

CC ORGAN for SALE and HIRE, on easy terms of payment. Price very low. 3 manuals, 30 stops, 2 or. pedals, 3 reeds. Apply, G. T., 23, Brunswick Street, Poplar.

SECOND-HAND CHURCH ORGANS.—NORMAN BROS. and BEARD have several good second-hand Organs for SALE, from £35 to £500.
Full particulars will be sent on application.
NORMAN BROS. and BEARD, The Organ Works, Norwich.

ALFRED MONK, Organ Builder; Works, 550, Holloway Road, London.—Organs built to any specification and constructed on the most improved principles of high-class workmanship and materials at the most reasonable prices. Improved construction to suit foreign climates. Extensive stock of thoroughly well-seasoned materials. A variety of new and second-hand Organs (which have been taken in exchange) for Sale or Hire, or payable in three years. Tuners sent to all parts of the kingdom. Alterations and repairs. Price list and estimates sent free. A. Monk's Patent Improved Tubular Pneumatic Actions.

HYDRAULIC ENGINES for Organ Blowing. Blennerhasset's Patent "Perfect" Prize Medal Engines are the best. 1B, Vernon Street, King's Cross Road, London, W.C.

"TOWER" ORGAN WORKS.—Specifications, Rebuilding, Repairs, Voicing and Tuning by experienced Artists. Pipes and Fittings. Second-hand Organs and Materials. T. R. Willis (from Minories), 45, Leman Street, London, E.

ORGAN PEDALS to PIANOS.—New method of Attachment by TUBULAR PNEUMATIC. This action surpasses all mechanical actions for prompt and Organ-like Touch. It is less expensive, easier to attach, and does not injure the most delicate Pianoforte. Prospectus, with full description and price lists, on application to Norman Bros. and Beard, Organ Works, Norwich.

TUNERS, REPAIRERS, &c., requiring Tuning Hammers, Kits (guaranteed), or TOOLS of any description. Reeds, Fittings, Materials. Please send for my complete Price List. Karl Wagenhaus, 2, City Road, Hulme, Manchester.

PIANOFORTE TUNERS.—A Set of beautiful CHORDS. Every tuner knows the value of pretty chords in showing off a Pianoforte or American Organ. Complete set, 1s. 6d. Easy to learn; it will pay you to use them; you cannot afford to be without them. Tools and fittings supplied. Action repairs cheap and good. Lumley, Pianoforte Maker, 178, Kettering Road, Northampton.

HARP WANTED (ERARD).—Gothic, full compass, second-hand, but not much used. Address, stating number, price, and all particulars, A. B., care of Messrs. Harrison, Music Warehouse, Birmingham.

VIOLIN STRINGS. Finest imported. Twenty years' reputation. Sixpence each; sample packet of three, 1s. 1d., post-free. Alphonse Cary, 87, Oxford Street, London, W.

T. R. WILLIS (from Minories, est. 1827), Maker and Importer of Brass and Wood Instruments, Harmonium Reeds, Strings, Wire, Violins, Concertinas, &c. 45, Leman Street, E.

IMPORTANT TO MUSICSELLERS.—Having the largest and most varied stock in Europe, orders received in the morning are executed the same day. Terms and Catalogues on application.

AUTHORS' WORKS CORRECTED, REVISED, and PRINTED without delay, on exceptionally low terms. Estimates given on receipt of MSS.
London: B. WILLIAMS, 19, Paternoster Row, E.C.

MUSIC COPIED and DRAWN from the Full Score, with proper cues for the Engraver; also Songs or other Pieces transposed, by J. Peck, 36, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS. Dr. Horton Allison, 68, Nelson Street, Manchester.

TO COMPOSERS and CONDUCTORS.—Works scored for large or small Orchestras by an experienced Musician. Address, Conductor, 26, Hatfield Street, New Cross, S.E.

Auction Rooms specially for the Sale of Musical Property.

MESSRS. PUTTICK and SIMPSON, Auctioneers, 7, Leicester Square, London, W.C., hold SPECIAL SALES of MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS on or about the 20th of every month. Sales of Musical Libraries, Music Plates, and Copyrights. Trade Stocks, Manufacturers' Plant, &c., are held as occasion may require. Valuations for Probate or Legacy Duty, or for Public or Private Sale. Terms on application.

PIANOFORTE and MUSIC BUSINESS for SALE. Large Tuning and Hiring connection. Handsome, well furnished premises. W. S., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co. 1, Berners Street, W.

MUSIC BUSINESS for EXCHANGE or SALE.—Carried on by present proprietor eleven years. Doing a large and profitable paper music trade. Good Tuning Connection, also Pianoforte Business (which may be greatly increased with capital). Premises spacious and commanding, at corner of important main road, about the best in South London. House accommodation good. Rent moderate—£70 on lease. The advertiser wishes to meet with an established business in pleasantly situated county town or seaside, where net profits are about £300. Address, Musicus, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

CRYSTAL PALACE DISTRICT.—For DISPOSAL, TEACHING CONNECTION, PIANO, &c., of twenty years' standing About three days a week. Fees over £100 a year. Advertiser removed from locality. Address, Professor, 32, West Hill, St. Leonards-on-Sea.

WORCESTER FESTIVAL.—Small, well-furnished HOUSE, close to Cathedral. Three bedrooms, bathroom, or two bedrooms, with board. Apply, Everill, House Agent, Worcester.

D'ALMAINE'S
PIANOS AND ORGANS
CLEARANCE SALE.
EXTENSION OF PREMISES, 89, FINSBURY PAVEMENT.
Dealers specially invited.
D'ALMAINE and Co. (Established 108 years), 89 and 91, Finsbury Pavement, E.C.

KELLY and CO., PIANOFORTE, AMERICAN ORGAN, and HARMONIUM MAKERS (to Her Majesty), 14 and 16, Mortimer Street, London, W.

Kelly and Co.'s Instruments are the only ones of English manufacture that gained any award at the DUBLIN and PARIS EXHIBITIONS; also PRIZE MEDAL, INVENTIONS EXHIBITION, 1885; GOLD MEDAL and DIPLOMA of HONOUR, YORK EXHIBITION, 1889.

A LIBERAL DISCOUNT for SCHOOLS, CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS, and the PROFESSION.

500 SECOND-HAND PIANOFORTES by the leading Makers, at all times, very cheap. NEW PIANOS (warranted) in elegant Walnut or Rosewood cases, from 19 Guineas.

The Trade, Merchants, and Shippers supplied.

Sole Importers of the celebrated HERMANN PIANOS, CHEAPEST and BEST IN THE TRADE, as recommended by Signor Tito Mattei, the late Sir Julius Benedict, the Abbé Liszt, and others.

ESTABLISHED 1843.

GEO. ROGERS & SONS'

PIANOFORTES.

(Makers to the Emperor of Russia.)

NOBLE IN TONE.

HANDSOME IN APPEARANCE.

UNRIVALLED FOR DURABILITY.

THE FINEST PIANOS IN THE WORLD.

PIANOS

FOR INDIA AND THE COLONIES.

ALSO YACHT PIANOS.

GEO. ROGERS & SONS,

60, BERNERS ST., OXFORD ST., LONDON, W.

THE OLD FIRM.

P. CONACHER & CO.,

Organ Builders,

SPRINGWOOD WORKS,

HUDDERSFIELD.

TWO GOLD MEDALS.

NICHOLSON AND CO.,

ORGAN BUILDERS,

PALACE YARD, WORCESTER.

(ESTABLISHED 1841.)

Specifications and Estimates sent free.

VIOLIN BRIDGES.—AMERICAN CHURCH MUSIC.—See July Musical Opinion and Music Trade Review. Also 200 cols. of Musical Literature and Advertisements. Price 2d. Order at all book and musicsellers; at Smith's Railway Stalls; or (by post, 3½d.), at 150, Holborn Bars, London, E.C.

Just Published.

NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

No. 41.

EDITED BY SIR JOHN STAINER.

EXAMPLES

IN STRICT COUNTERPOINT

(OLD AND NEW)

BY

GORDON SAUNDERS

D.Mus., Oxon.

Price Three Shillings.
In paper boards, Three Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

IRISH

SONGS AND BALLADS

THE WORDS BY

ALFRED PERCEVAL GRAVES

THE MUSIC ARRANGED BY

C. VILLIERS STANFORD.

Price Four Shillings.

CONTENTS:

The Song of the Turf.
The Exiles.
Arranmore Boat Song.
The Roving Pedlar.
The Zephyrs blest.
Colonel Carty.
The Ploughman's whistle.
Love's hallowed seal.
The March of the Maguire.
Lullaby.
A Lament.
The Song of the Ghost.
Silver and Gold.
Mavourneen Dhu.
The Darling.
O Mary, thy laugh was sweet.
Hush song.
The Kilkenny cats.
Sweet Isle.
The Hero of Limerick.
Loved bride of O'Byrne.
Our Inniskilling boy.
Festival Song (Pleraca).
Johnny Cox.
The Irish Reel.
Molleen Oge. [true love.
Last night I dreamt of my own
Bright love of my heart.
My Colleen rue.
Chieftain of Tyrconnell.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S
ALBUMS FOR VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE.

No. 33.

SIX VALSES

COMPOSED BY

FRANZ SCHUBERT

ARRANGED FOR VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE BY

SIEGFRIED JACOBY.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HYMNS FOR SOLDIERS

SUITABLE FOR USE AT ALL

MILITARY SERVICES

SELECTED CHIEFLY FROM "THE HYMNARY"

BY THE

REV. ARTHUR ROBINS, M.A.

PRICE ONE PENNY.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PRIZES FOR FESTIVAL HYMN TUNES.

THREE PRIZES of £3 EACH (Manchester Sunday School Union). For conditions send stamp to Mr. A. P. Smith, 1, Piccadilly, Manchester.

TRINITY COLLEGE LONDON

FOR MUSICAL EDUCATION AND EXAMINATION.—INST. 1872.

PRESIDENT:
The Right Hon. LORD ST. LEVAN.

WARDEN:
Professor E. H. TURPIN, Mus.D.

DIRECTOR OF STUDIES:
Professor BRADBURY TURNER, Mus.B.

DIRECTOR OF EXAMINATIONS:
Professor JAS. HIGGS, Mus.B.

The next ORCHESTRAL CONCERT will take place at Princes' Hall, Piccadilly, on SATURDAY, July 15, at 8 o'clock. Conductor, Mr. F. CORDER. The programme will include: Suite for Orchestra, "Italian" (Raff); Concertstück for Pianoforte and Orchestra (Schumann); Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, No. 6 (De Beriot); Concertos for Pianoforte and Orchestra in F minor, No. 4 (Sterndale Bennett), and in E flat, No. 5 (Beethoven); Saltarello for Orchestra (Gounod); Rhapsodie for Pianoforte (Liszt); and Song, "The Reaper and the Flowers" (Cowen); MS. Song (Ketelbey); and Aria, "Softly sighs" ("Der Freischütz") (Weber).

Tickets (price 5s. and 2s. 6d.) may be had from the undersigned. Past Students and Diplomés of the College are granted the usual privileges as to tickets.

The DISTRIBUTION of DIPLOMAS and CERTIFICATES by the Warden (Prof. E. H. TURPIN, Mus.D.) will take place on TUESDAY, July 25, at four o'clock.

MICHAELMAS TERM begins September 25.

THE SIR MICHAEL COSTA PRIZE.

The last day of entry is November 30 for the Prize of Ten Guineas and the Gold Medal of the College for the best String Quartet, of the usual four movements. Only Students and Members of the College (not being Members of the Council) are eligible for the Competition, and no Competitor shall be considered eligible who has previously taken this Prize.

Particulars of the Prize Competition, Prospectus of the Classes, &c., may be had from the undersigned.

By Order of the Academical Board,
SHELLEY FISHER, Secretary.

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, W.

THE

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW

FOR JULY

CONTAINS:—

General Notes.
Leeds School Singing.
The Evening School Code and Vocal Music.
The Tonic Sol-fa College Annual Meeting.
The Queen's Scholarship Examination.
The London Sunday School Choir.
London School Board News.
News from all parts.
Correspondence.

THE

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW

FOR JULY

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING MUSIC IN BOTH NOTATIONS:—

"O perfect love." Anthem. By Sir J. Barnby. Specially arranged as Two-part Chorus for Schools.

Exercises in Time and Tune Combined. By W. G. McNaught.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Office: 1, Berners Street, W.

John Broadwood & Sons

(ESTABLISHED 1732)

PIANOFORTE MAKERS

BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT TO

HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES

HER ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCESS OF WALES

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH

AND FOR

HER SERENE HIGHNESS

THE PRINCESS VICTORIA MARY OF TECK

have had the honour of supplying the following Wedding Presents:

AN UPRIGHT GRAND FOR YORK COTTAGE, SANDRINGHAM,

AND

A CONCERT GRAND FOR YORK HOUSE, ST. JAMES'S.

33, GREAT PULTENEY STREET (near Regent Street),
LONDON, W.

GERMAN OPERA, COVENT GARDEN, & MUNICH FESTIVAL PERFORMANCES.

THE MASTER-SINGERS OF NUREMBERG

BY

RICHARD WAGNER

A Musical Explanation with Eighty-four Musical Examples by ALBERT HEINTZ

Translated into English by CONSTANCE BACHE.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TRISTAN UND ISOLDE

BY

RICHARD WAGNER

Explained according to the Musical Development of its Motives by ALBERT HEINTZ

With Sixty-six Musical Examples.

Translated into English by CONSTANCE BACHE.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PARSIFAL

A FESTIVAL DRAMA

BY

RICHARD WAGNER

Its Origin in the old Legends, and its Musical Motives explained in the order of their Development, by ALBERT HEINTZ

With Sixty-seven copious Musical Examples.

Translated into English by CONSTANCE BACHE.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE MUSICAL TIMES
AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR.
JULY 1, 1893.

MUSIC IN A FRENCH CATHEDRAL.

THE city of Reims is within an easy distance of London—that is to say, it may be reached in eight or nine hours of comfortable travelling from Victoria or Charing Cross viâ Dover and Calais. In the case of Swiss tourists, the lengthy journey to Bâle may be most pleasantly interrupted by a halt at Reims; but the traveller must be careful to change his carriage at a roadside station or box called Béthény, as the express trains for Switzerland do not pass through Reims itself.

Several passing visits to Reims—the name may be easily mis-pronounced—have made the town and its renowned Cathedral familiar to me; but I desire to explain, in limine, that I have not the pleasure of acquaintance with any of the members, clerical or lay, of the Cathedral staff: hence it follows that any remarks which I may permit myself to make upon their musical doings will be entirely untinged by prepossession or prejudice. A few words more of preliminary matter may tend to establish a good understanding between my readers and myself. An Anglican churchman by birth, education, and conviction, I trust I may be allowed to entertain and express a profound respect and reverence for forms of worship in which the devotions of many millions of faithful souls are enshrined: unable to accept their teachings on some few points of controversy, I am willing and happy to be a learner at the feet of those between whom and myself the association of Art with Religion is common ground of agreement. And now to my subject.

The magnificent Cathedral, Notre Dame de Reims, contains two organs, both of which are used at the Grand'-Messe and at Vespers on all Sundays and Feast-days. The chief organ, in an imposing case of Renaissance design and workmanship, with the choir organ in front, is boldly bracketted-out against the North wall of the transept, a position in which the player can well hear the voices of the priests at the altar and of the singers in the choir. He has nothing, however, to do with the accompaniment of these voices, as I shall just now explain. The present instrument is by Messrs. Abbey of Versailles, and, like all modern French organs, abounds with excellent reed stops. The tone of the full organ (if I have heard it really full) is very noble and majestic, but the fine reeds are predominant, and I miss the brilliancy of mixtures. But I may mention, in passing, that as our "Concluding Voluntary" has no place in a church like this, and Organ Recitals are equally unknown within those sacred walls, it is very possible that the full power of the instrument may be rarely heard. In my humble opinion, which must be taken for what it is worth, the present organist is a very able and accomplished performer. The numerous short interludes which occur in the service are marked by great refinement of taste and wealth of invention; no doubt, the occasional use of the Voix Humaine, with tremulant, is inevitable, but it is not carried to excess. Many of our own young players might, indeed, learn a most useful lesson by listening, in a teachable mood, to the extemporization of this gentleman.

The second organ, a two-manual instrument with some twelve or fifteen stops, including an effective trumpet, enclosed in a beautiful case, designed, I believe, by Viollet le Duc, stands under the first southern arch of the choir; the console is reversed, and thus the player has an uninterrupted view of all the vocal choir and of the conductor, whom I shall mention directly. The very competent person who sits at this instrument is responsible for the accompaniment of all the vocal music, whether the plainsong of the Psalms and of the venerable hymns of the Church or the very high-class compositions sung at the Grand'-Messe and at Vespers. He has nothing to do with the tuition or discipline of the choral body. This is entirely in the hands of a choirmaster, at present a very young man, who is responsible for the performance of all the harmonised music, and who conducts it with a bâton. The accompanist is certainly under his orders, though greatly his senior in age. Do I hear some reader exclaim "This would never work in an English Cathedral?" Perhaps not. But let us proceed. The rank and file of the choir consists of about twelve lay-clerks, one of whom plays an ophicleide, two others the contra-bassi, which reinforce the bass part in all considerable French churches; of the other nine, six are basses, mostly big burly fellows, endowed with those surprising voices of rough quality which are never heard in our moist and misty climate. Of two of the tenors I must speak in terms of warm admiration. It is the custom to assign every alternate verse of the Psalms to a single tenor voice, the intermediate verses being sounded-out with immense force an octave lower by all the men. This necessarily gives a superabundance of high notes, F's and G's, to the solo singer. The way in which the Reims tenors seem to revel in these high notes is refreshing to witness; and be it well remembered that this hearty and honest exertion of vocal power is not bestowed on a show-off solo in an anthem before a listening audience. The plainsong, venerable and often majestic as it is, affords no field for ostentatious display. It is a matter of every-day routine, and the heartiness with which it is rendered at Reims (and elsewhere) speaks volumes for the true artistic honesty of French lay-clerks. The Amens, I am bound to add, are often or generally out of tune in French churches, and Reims is no exception. The chorister-boys, in their pretty dress of short cotta and scarlet cassock, are in number about eighteen, say twelve soprani and six contralti. (I do not pretend to strict accuracy in giving the numbers of either the men or the boys.) The little fellows appear to me to be well cared-for and cheerful: I believe they are lodged in a school-house near the Cathedral—a maîtrise, the French call it—whence they are brought to church by their master, an elderly priest, or his young assistant. Like the lay-clerks, the boys sing "as if they meant it." In all the harmonised music, the men and boys leave their places, Decani and Cantoris, and cluster round the conductor at music desks placed in the middle of the choir. A most picturesque group they form, with the bright scarlet tints relieving the uniformity of black and white: and a most favourable formation it is for the production of the best musical effects, as all musicians must readily allow. The leading boys are close to the conductor, on his right and left; the leading tenors and basses behind them; the rest of the chorus complete the circle; the accompanist at the small organ is not two yards distant. No wonder that the most elaborate compositions, alla Palestrina, can be, and are constantly sung with perfect accuracy and precision. No wonder that hymns, with endless variety of treatment, and with an indescribable charm of unworldly beauty, thrill the soul of the listener and haunt his memory after he has left the church. Again, perhaps, the question may be asked: "Would this work in an English Cathedral?" In the name of common sense, why not? But once more, let us proceed. I do not know with whom rests the responsibility of choosing the music. But I suspect that the clergy give general directions as to length or brevity of the service, and that the choirmaster submits to them his scheme of music for the coming Sundays and festivals. The choice—to whomsoever it belongs—ranges over a wide field. I recall a service on the Ascension Day of last year, when all the music of the Mass and of Vespers was of the school of Haydn and Mozart, full of exquisite melody, each movement worked out fully, solo passages for soprano, rendered by a boy with a voice of rare quality. On a more recent occasion, this boy's voice had gone the way of all boys' voices, and he had no successor; the order for brevity had apparently gone forth, and all the movements were short, but very interesting and clever, full of canons and other contrapuntal intricacies, admirably sung. Again, I have been present when one lovely and tender piece of modern harmony has given relief to a service otherwise rather severe and colourless. In this eclecticism Reims is on a par with our English Cathedrals. But our English Cathedrals are not and cannot be on a par with Reims while we lack the grand old hymns which have come down through the centuries—some of them rugged and unlovely, some of them strangely beautiful, all of them utterly removed above and beyond mere secular associations. It is these which give its chief charm to the service at Reims. The removal of these from the English Prayer Book by the Reformers of the sixteenth century was one of those errors which can now never be repaired. Let us be thankful, however, for what we still possess.

I have thus far attempted to convey to my readers the general impression made upon me by the church music at Reims. Its great characteristic is power, energy, heartiness. Other choirs may surpass it in careful observation of les nuances; it cannot be compared with that of Cologne, for instance, in the attempt to attain the impressive effect of the pianissimo. But for honest, resolute singing it would not be easy to find its superior. That any boy could be dreamy and inattentive, that any man could be lazy and negligent, seems a sheer impossibility as you listen to the singing at Reims.

But my purpose in writing this letter would be only half accomplished if I here threw down my pen. Twice in the course of it I have hinted at the possibility of comparison between English and French Cathedrals. In briefly pursuing this line of thought, I exclude from view the well-known choirs of the capitals of both countries, which enjoy exceptional advantages, and possess the command of exceptional pecuniary resources. Leaving London and Paris out of the question, let us ask ourselves whether a parallel may be instructively drawn between any one of our provincial Cathedrals and the provincial Cathedral of Reims. Take, first, the pleasant duty of noting the family likeness between the two. Both keep up daily services; both adorn their services with the best music which they can obtain or manage; in both a few men, professedly vocalists, but mostly tradesmen or even artisans, appear in an ecclesiastical dress twice in the day to sing their parts; in both, a small battalion of boys, now-a-days well taught and kindly treated, form a cheerful feature in the picture. And in the services themselves, note the strong resemblances. Both English and French sing the Psalms and Canticles, and many hymns, antiphonally; in both the voice of a clerical chanter is answered by choral responses and versicles; our English Communion Service is but a translation of the Latin Ordinal, though the grand hymns, Gloria in Excelsis, Credo, and Sanctus, occur in a different order; and happily the same music can be used for it, and is so used in many churches on both sides of the Channel. All this, and more, we possess in common with our neighbours. But when we come to practical details of management and organization, divergencies at once appear. I have sketched the French portrait; let me use a soft brush and mild colours in sketching the English features. With us an organist, generally—perhaps always—an accomplished and intelligent musician, sometimes a composer, "presides" (as the phrase goes) at the organ, and is responsible for the due performance of the music by the choir. If he resents interference, especially by any of the clergy, I do not know that we have any right to blame him. But I think he may well envy the position of his brother organist at Reims, who, unlike himself, has no anxieties about accompaniment. Our lay-clerks, when once "sworn-in" to their offices, are irremovable during good behaviour. A man's voice may be utterly worn out; his health may be indifferent; his contribution towards the general effect of the service may be absolutely nil, or, worse still, may be a minus quantity; yet there he is, year after year, more and more useless as old age creeps over him. His stipend is greatly in excess of that of the French lay-clerk; he is better paid (all things considered) than the minor canons; yet he is generally a grumbler. I regret that I cannot soften these expressions. In most of the English provincial Cathedrals the lay-clerks are a very weak point. The boys, obedient and docile, are they so arranged, with us, as to give them the best chance of using their pretty voices with effect? Our Reims friends would be astonished, I think, if, on a visit to us in England, they noted our strange adherence to the antiphonal arrangement of two choirs at times when every musical instinct would suggest the massing of the two choirs into one. What valid argument can be urged against the adoption by us of their plan? The Psalms and Canticles (if these last are antiphonally written) being over, the Creed recited, and the Collects said, what serious or patent objection can be reasonably held to exist against grouping the united choirs in a circular formation? In these days of cheap octavo editions, the placing of music desks might not be necessary, as the copies could be held in the hands of the singers. But the conductor and his bâton!—and the accompanist obeying his beat! Well, we may not be ripe for these novelties. I frankly declare that I should give them a hearty welcome.

The last great difference between French and English provincial Cathedrals remains to be noticed, and may well form the conclusion of this letter. At Reims the clergy, from His Eminence the Cardinal-Archbishop down to the youngest Abbé, say all their devotional forms with the inflections and cadences of the ecclesiastical tones; and it is perfectly evident that the musical services, from beginning to end, are carried on and sustained with their entire approval and powerful support. I am on delicate ground, but truth compels me to assert that in England the superior or capitular clergy, with some few exceptions, have no love for the Cathedral type of Divine service. Many of them—a majority, I verily believe—would hold up both hands in support of a motion for substituting metrical hymns for anthems, and chants for "services." In more than one English Cathedral this change has been made on two or three days in each week. In the same, and in others, the proposal to read the whole service on one day in the week, parson-and-clerk fashion, has been carried with joyful unanimity, the minor canons (one of them Precentor!) ineffectually but earnestly protesting. Each canon comes into residence, according to our wretched English system, rivetted on us by Acts of Parliament, for his two or three months in each year. He endures his bondage—I have heard him use the word—with as much patience as he can muster, and gladly hastens back to his permanent home, perhaps in a distant county; and when he is in residence, and for the moment monarch of all he surveys as he is ushered in by the verger, he is far more likely to listen to the silly remarks of his daughters, or the flippant criticisms of his sons, than to the sober counsels of the permanent members of the clerical staff, resident all the year round, and quietly doing the real work of the Cathedral with slender remuneration and small share of thanks. And there are many true sons of the Church who hold that the English Cathedrals, in their present condition, are the weakest and most vulnerable point in her system, and that even a further surrender of revenue might be salutary if it left each of our grand churches under the government of one responsible head, aided, as at Reims, by a staff of clerical and lay musicians, well versed in their duties and heartily loving them.

W. E. D.

FROM MY STUDY.

THE volume of "Privy Purse Expenses of the Princess Mary" begins in December, 1536, and continues, with the omission of certain days in February and the whole of March, 1539, to May in the year just named. It resumes in December, 1542, and finally closes in December, 1544; the space of time covered being four years and seven months. The original MS. of the accounts is in the British Museum (17B xxviii.). "It is a moderate sized quarto volume, written on paper, in a fair, distinct hand, and is authenticated in many places by the signature of the Princess Mary, who has also made several corrections, and, in a few instances, added marginal observations."

Frequent entries of gifts made to the Children of the King's Chapel show that Mary had a soft spot in her heart for the singing boy. The editor, Mr. Madden, gives an interesting note with regard to this part of the Royal Household. He says: "In the Liber Niger of Ed. IV. we find very particular rules relative to its government. The number of Children (or, as we should now term them, choristers) was then eight, who were found in apparel by the King's Cofferer, and had a 'Master of Song' appointed by the Dean to teach them music. 'These Children eate in the Hall dayly, at the Chapel board, nexte the Yeomane of Vestry; taking amongeste them for lyverye daylye for brekefaste and all nighte, two loves, one mess of greate meate, II. galones ale, and for wintere seasone, IIII. candles p'iche, III. talsheids, and lyttere for their pallets, of the Sarjante Usher, and carryadge of the King's coste for the competante beddynge, by the oversight of the Comptroller.'" They were allowed one servant amongst them all, whose business it was to "truss" their "harnesse and lyverye" in Court, and, on the removal of the Chapel, each of the Children received 3d. daily for horse-hire as long as they were en route. This practice of taking the Children on a progress explains the payments made to them at Beddington, Dunstable, &c. "And when any of these Children come to XVIII. yeares of age and their voyces change, and he cannot be preferred in this Chapelle, the nombere being full, then yf they will assente, the King assynethe them to a College of Oxeford or Cambridge of his foundation, there to be at fynding and studye both suffycyently, tylle the King may otherwise aduance them." In 1538 the monthly sum allowed for the board wages of the Children of the Chapel was 26s. 8d. It would seem that they sometimes had musical duties outside the Chapel walls, the King's Book of Payments containing the following entry: "Mr. Crane, for playing with the Children before ye King—£6 13s. 4d."

The Princess Mary had a virginal which was very frequently out of order, much to the profit and satisfaction of one Cotes, or Cootes, or Cowtes, or Cowts (the name is written anyhow), who went down from London to mend it. Mr. Cotes received 5s. for this service in January, 1537; the same sum in March; in April, 3s. 4d. (when also Mr. Paston was paid 7s. 6d. for giving the Princess a lesson on the instrument, and "Philip of the p'vy Chambre" had 5s. for teaching her the lute); in September, 7s. 6d.; in November for looking to the virginal "at soundry times," 7s. 6d.; 5s. was also paid to the same expert in May, 1538. I do not quite understand the distinction between "mending" and "setting," unless the second term means tuning, but, in May, 1537, "the man that sett the virginalls" (not Mr. Cotes apparently) was paid 5s. for the exercise of his craft. With reference to this instrument, Mr. Madden points out that "in a letter addressed to the Princess by her mother, soon after her separation from Henry, she bids her 'sometimes for your recreation use your virginals and lute, if you have any.'" He adds: "The above-named musical instrument does not seem to have been wholly laid aside so late as the commencement of the eighteenth century, for in the London Post of July 20, 1701, it is mentioned, 'This week a most curious pair of Virginals, reckoned the finest in England, were shipped off for the Grand Seignor's Seraglio.'"

In January, 1544, Princess Mary made presents to the musicians of the King's Court:—To the Trumpets, 10s., and the same sum to the King's Players, the new Sackbuts, the Flutes, and the Recorders. More the Harper had 5s.; Haunce the Luter, 2s. 6d.; the Welsh Minstrels, 3s. 9d.; the Dromslads (drummers), 5s.; a musician described as the North's Luter, 2s. 6d.; and the Viols, 20s.

In April, 1537, quite a concert was enjoyed by the Princess, who gave 5s. to the performers. These were not only Mary's minstrels, but those attached to the household of her sister, Elizabeth. The entry reads thus: "Item, given to my ladys grace mynstrells and my lady elysabeths the III Daye of this mounth playeng bifore hir grace, 5s." It is interesting that the words in italics were added by Mary herself. The Princess appears to have been more than a little punctilious in stating the precise facts.

In March, 1538, there is an entry of 40s. given to Heywood for "playeng an enterlude with his Children before my ladys grace." From the terms of the entry it is clear that Heywood had trained children to perform interludes—short musico-dramatic pieces sometimes introduced between the parts of entertainments. Queen Elizabeth kept four interlude performers in her household, each receiving £3 6s. 8d. annually, with 22s. 6d. for liveries. Mr. Madden has an interesting note concerning Heywood, which I give without apology:—

"This can be no other than the facetious John Heywood, of proverbial, epigrammatic, and dramatic celebrity! His ready wit and skill in vocal and instrumental music rendered him a great favourite with Henry VIII. and Sir Thomas More, and by the latter he was specially patronised, rather, says Puttenham, 'for the mirth and quickness of conceit than good learning that was in him.' In the Book of Payments of Henry VIII., 1538-44, is a quarterly allowance of 50s. to 'John Heywood, pleyer on the virginals,' and in the Household Book of Princess Elizabeth, 1553, a gratuity of 30s. to him. 'He enlivened,' writes Jones, 'the hours of that gloomy bigot, Queen Mary.' This is an inference drawn from a passage in Warton, who writes that, when Mary came to the throne, Heywood was in higher favour than ever, and admitted to the most intimate conversation, on account of his talent of telling diverting stories, which served to amuse her painful hours, even when languishing on her death-bed. A great proof this, certainly, both of gloominess and bigotry! It was the same person who, according to Stowe, on the coronation of Mary 'in Paul's churchyard, sate in a Pageant under a vine and made to her an oration in Latine and English.' Most of the Interludes written by him had appeared in print in 1533, and we may conjecture that the one played by himself and children (who were probably his scholars) before the Princess, was selected from them. . . . A full length wood-cut of him is prefixed to his work called 'The Parable of the Spider and the Fly,' by which the curious may be gratified. On the accession of Elizabeth, he left England and retired to Mechlin, in Brabant, where he died in 1565, leaving several children, of whom Jasper Heywood subsequently distinguished himself as an author."

Thus far Mr. Madden, but much more is found concerning Heywood in other authors, as, for example, Collier's "Annals of the Stage," where was first published a curious poem signed by him (Cotton MS., Vespasian, A. xxv.). It illustrates the play upon words then a special feature of English poetry, but the reader will probably be content with very few stanzas:

Longe have I been a singinge man,
And sondrie partes ofte I have songe,
Yit one parte since I first began
I cold nor can sing, olde or yonge;
The meane, I meane, which parte showthe weil
Above all partes most to excell.

The base and treble are extremes,
The tenor standeth sturdilie,
The counter reignethe then one seemes;
The meane must make our melodie.
This is the mean, who meanthe it well,
The parte of partes that doth excell.

. . . . . .

The meane in losse, the meane in gaine,
In welthe or in adversitie,
The meane in healthe, the meane in paine,
The meane meanethe alwaies equitie.
The meane thus ment may meane full well,
Of all other partes most to excell.

To me and myne with all the reste,
Good Lorde, graunte grace, with heartie voice
To sing the meane that meanethe best,
All partes in the best for to rejoice:
Which meane in meaninge meanethe well,
The meane of meanes that doth excell.

Collier assigns to Heywood the credit of inventing the Interlude. He says: "It was about this period (1530) that John Heywood, 'the singer' and 'player on the Virginals,' began to write his Interludes: these productions form an epoch in the history of our drama, as they are neither Miracle-Plays nor Morals, but entirely different from both; several of them come properly within the definition of 'Interludes'—pieces played in the intervals of entertainments, and have frequently both broad humour and strong character to recommend them. They were, as far as we can now judge, an entire novelty, and gained the author an extraordinary reputation. He is not supposed to have begun to write them until 1529 or 1530, but there is nothing to fix the date beyond the publication of several of his pieces in 1533."

J. A. Symonds agrees with Payne Collier as to Heywood's invention of the Interlude. After some biographical details, which make it appear that Queen Mary's entertainer was once a chorister of the Chapel Royal, this author continues: "Though he suffered disgrace and exile for the Catholic faith, he showed himself a merciless satirist of Catholic corruption . . . He remained an Englishman to the backbone, loyal to his party and his religious convictions, outspoken in his condemnation of the superstitions which disgraced the Church of his adoption." In one of his Interludes he represents a Palmer and a Pardoner as telling lies one against another, with a Pedlar as awarder of the prize. The Palmer wins with these lines—

And this I would ye should understand,
I have seen women five hundred thousand;
And oft with them have long time tarried,
Yet in all places where I have been,
Of all the women that I have seen,
I never saw or knew in my conscience
Any one woman out of patience.

There is only one other mention of John Heywood in Mary's Privy Purse Expenses, and that simply records the payment of xxd. to his servant "for bringing of my ladys grace Regalles from London to grenewiche."

A person of some importance at Court was Philip, described sometimes as the Luter, sometimes as of the Privy Chamber. There are no fewer than thirteen entries with regard to him, the majority referring to sums of money paid as gratuities. Mary made him a handsome present on his marriage (he was her lute master), and at the christening of his first child she bestowed xs. upon the nurse and viis. vid. upon the midwife. It further appears from a marginal note in the inventory of the Princess's jewels that she gave "a little Chayne black enamyled" to Mr. Philip's wife. The real name of this musical favourite was Philip Van Wilder, under which he is frequently mentioned in Court records of the period. According to Henry the Eighth's "Book of Payments" he received 66s. 8d. per quarter as salary, and the Inventory of the King's Furniture, preserved among the Harleian MSS., shows that he had charge of the King's instruments at Westminster. These included double and single regals, double and single virginals, claricords, vials, gitterons, cornets, lutes, flutes, crumhorn, recorders, bass recorders, shawms, and a bagpipe with pipes of ivory. Van Wilder, or Philip, in 1550, received a commission from Edward VI. "to take to the King's use such and so many singing children and choristers as he and his deputy thought good" within any churches or chapels in England. This is mentioned by Burney, who adds: "Philippe de Viuldre was a Flemish musician who settled in England; there is a 'Pater Noster' of his composition, Libro quarto Ecclesiasticarum cantionum, published at Antwerp, 1554. See the Museum collection." Hawkins is silent about him.

There is an entry of viis. vid. paid to the servants of one Betyne for mending the Princess's Regals. This person has been identified with William Betton, or Betone, who was in the service of Henry VIII. as organ-maker, and received £5 per quarter. When Mary became Queen he remained on the establishment at the same salary. His name is found in a MS. belonging to the Society of Antiquaries, and containing a detailed account of the officers composing the Royal Household. The following extract therefrom gives a clear and accurate idea of the consideration bestowed on music and musicians at a Tudor Court:—

Musitians and Players.

		£	s.	d.
Sergeant—Benedict Browne, fee		24	6	8
Trompeters—In nombre 16, every one of them having by the yeare £24 6s. 8d.		389	6	8
Lutars—Philip Van Welder, Peter Van Welder		138	5	0
Harpers	William More, fee £18 5 0 Bernard Depont, fee 20 0 0	38	5	0
Singers	Thomas Kent, fee 9 2 6 Thomas Bowde, fee 9 2 6	18	5	0

		£	s.	d.
Rebeck—John Severnake, fee		24	6	8
Sagbutto—In nombre 6, whereof 5 have £18 4s. 8d. by the yere, and one, £36 5s. ..		127	8	4
Vialles—In nombre 8, whereof 6 at £30 8s. 4d., one at £20, another at £18 5s.		220	15	0
Baggpiper—Richard Woodward, fee		16	13	4
Mynstrelles—In nombre 9		155	8	4
Drumslades—In nombre 3		54	15	0
Players on the fluyt	Oliver Rampons, fee £18 5 0 Pier Guye, fee .. 30 8 4	48	13	4
Players on the Virginalls	John Heywood, fee 50 0 0 Antony Chounter, fee 30 8 4 Robert Bowman, fee 12 3 4	92	11	8
Musitions Straungers, fees		296	6	8
Players of Interludes—In nombre 8. Everie of them at 66s. 8d. by the yere		26	13	4
Makers of Instruments	Wm. Baton, Organmaker, £20 Wm. Tresorer, Regallmaker, £10	30	0	0
The Chapell—Thomas Bird, Thomas Tallis, George Edwards, William Hynnus, Tho. Palfreyman, Richard Farrant, John Singer, and thirty others		469	3	4
Singers	Robert Atkinson £6 13 4 John Temple 6 13 4	13	6	8

From this it appears that the Queen's musical establishment numbered 104 persons, and its cost was £2,184 10s.—a very large sum in those days.

Mention has been made above of liberty granted to impress singing-boys and choristers into the Royal service. Among the Harleian MSS. is preserved a Royal warrant granted to John Melyonek, one of the Gentlemen of the Chapel Royal, for this purpose by Richard III. It runs thus:—

"To all and every our subjects, as well spirituell as temporell, thise letters hering or seeing, greeting. We let you wite, that for the confidence and trust we have in our trusty and well-beloved servaunt, John Melyonek, oon of the gentilmon of our chapell, and knowing also his expert habilitie and connyng in the science of musique, have licensed him, and by these presents licence and give him auctoritie, that within all places in this our reame, as well cathedral churches, coliges, chappells, houses of religion, and all other franchised and exempt places, as elliswhere, our colege roiall at Wyndesor reserved and exept, may take and sease for us and in our name al such singing men and children, being expart in the said science of musique, as he can finde, and think sufficient and able to do us service. Wherfore, &c. Yeven, &c., at Notingham the XVI day of September, A° secundo."

Yet for all this royal patronage, minstrels and players were of very little account. Payne Collier quotes, in proof, some lines from a tract, "Cocke Lorrell's Bote," printed in the reign of Henry VII. by Wynkyn de Worde. Cocke Lorrell, calling upon various persons to enter his ship of fools, exclaims:—

> Fruyters, chese-mongers and mynstrelles
> Talowe chandlers, hostelers and glovers.

Again—

> Chymney swepers and costerde mongers,
> Lode men and bere brewers,
> Fyshers of the see and muskel takers,
> Schovyle chepers, gardeners and rake fetters,
> Players, purse-cutters, money batterers,
> Golde washers, tomblers and jogelers,
> Pardoners, Kyng's bench gatherers, &c.

The association of players with purse-cutters seems a little too bad, and Collier suggests that gamblers were meant. Let us hope so.

Sometimes the musical and dramatic artists of Mary's day were set in the pillory for meddling with the high matters of religion. Ballads and rhymes concerning doctrine were forbidden by proclamation, and interlude players had to be careful how they gagged. On May 30, 1554, one unhappy fellow had his ears nailed to the pillory for uttering lies, rumours, and seditious words in the course of a performance. A year later, the Government felt compelled to stop public performances altogether. The performers would, it seems, talk "naughty and seditious matter." Private revels went on unchecked, and so great was the demand for singing men and boys to take part in them that the service of the Royal Chapels suffered therefrom. On Elizabeth's accession to the throne this matter came up for consideration, and the Queen issued a proclamation to protect the choir at Windsor, upon which raids had been made: "Whereas our castle of Windsor hath of old been well furnished with singing men and children. We, willing it should not be of less reputation in our days but rather augmented and increased, declare that no singing men or boys shall be taken out of the said chapel by virtue of any commission, not even for our household chapel; and we give power to the bearer of this to take any singing men or boys from any chapel, our own household and St. Paul's only excepted." It may be added that the "children of Paul's" were much in request for the performance of interludes, the music of pageants, and so on. Those of the Queen's Chapel, twelve in number, were of course employed at the Court festivities, receiving £9 13s. 4d. as largesse, in addition to the regular emoluments. Under Elizabeth, the boys were put on board wages, at the rate of 6d. per day.

X.

DR. MACKENZIE ON "FALSTAFF."

II.

AFTER concluding his preliminary remarks on the evolution of Verdi's genius, Dr. Mackenzie proceeded, at the close of his first lecture, to touch on some of the modifications and condensations observable in the libretto. Most of these changes the lecturer cordially approved, but expressed regret at the omission of Master Slender, adding that "the neutral tinted Dr. Caius, who takes his place as suitor for the hand of Anne Page, is but a poor substitute for the delightfully silly lover whom we all know." All the ladies are retained in the cast, Mistress Ford being, of course, the most prominent, while Mistress Page is little more than a voice in the ensemble. The part of Mrs. Quickly, however, has been written up with much skill, while Anne Page, re-christened Nannetta, is assigned greater prominence, and Fenton becomes a much bolder lover than in the play. As for the changes made and liberties taken with the original text, Dr. Mackenzie did not scruple to declare that they invariably gave proofs of Boïto's high ability as a constructor of librettos. Passing to the opera itself, Dr. Mackenzie outlined the plot of the first Act, pausing from time to time for the musical illustrations generously contributed by his excellent company of artists. He began by calling attention to the absence of any prelude or overture. Verdi rushes in medias res at once. The impetuous semiquaver figure which accompanies the angry Dr. Caius while he is on the stage being in admirable contrast to the calm tone of Sir John's replies. Apropos of the vivacious chatter of the four women at the opening of the second scene, Dr. Mackenzie pointed out that this perpetual chirping as of crickets is continued incessantly throughout the scene, either by the voices or in the orchestra, and added that the musical phrase connected with the letters enabled one "to realize the affected gestures of the would-be lover while his letter is being read." The final broad cantabile phrase just before the outburst of laughter, repeated by all the women at the end of the Act, was, in the lecturer's opinion, a delightful specimen of Verdi's personal melodic gift. Apropos of the interlude for the lovers, attention was called in the music to the lovely vocal writing and the constantly moving harmonies in the orchestra; in the text to Boïto's happy interpolation—

> Bocca bacciata non perde ventura,
> Anzi rinova come fa la luna—wedded to a happy phrase, which re-appears in the last Act. The Finale, in which the chattering of the women and the muttered conversation of the men is knit together, provoked the lecturer's warm eulogium—

> The tenor, Fenton, is seemingly the only one of the company who is oblivious of everything save his passion for Anne. At the conclusion of the movement the male characters leave the stage to the ladies, who must have the last word, which in this case is an exaggerated version of Sir John's declaration of love, repeated with a mock enthusiasm, which is one of the most happy inspirations of comic opera.

Resuming his lectures on the following Saturday before a large audience, Dr. Mackenzie invited the attention of his hearers, before proceeding to discuss the second Act, to the rare and admirable merits of Boïto's libretto. "There was a time," said the lecturer, "when the 'book and words of the opera' were a synonym for witlessness and silliness. It is a curious fact that the melodists of almost every country have been singled out by Fate and condemned to 'set' the most sublime nonsense to their music." Weber, great genius that he was, succumbed beneath the incubus of Wilhelmine von Chezy's unutterable ineptitudes. Mozart's "Flauto Magico" kept the stage by virtue of its music alone. The record of English opera, continued Dr. Mackenzie, was truly terrible in this respect. "Arne, Bishop, Wallace, Balfe, and some others nearer to our own time, would have been sometimes quite within their rights if they had 'torn their poets for their bad verses.'" Of all the sufferers Bishop's case was the most pitiable, and Dr. Mackenzie excited loud laughter by the following reference to "The Maniac's Curse":—

> The scene is laid in Switzerland, but the characters are all fishermen! In one chorus the mariners exclaim, when about to brave the dangers of the deep in a storm, "where the porpoise rolls his clumsy form":—
>
> Oh, let us be happy together
> In spite of the changes of weather.

Dr. Mackenzie will excuse us for describing this as the ne plus ultra of the "art of sinking."

Ridicule and a finer sense of the fitness of things, however, had happily dethroned the doggerel bard. Dr. Mackenzie touched on the services rendered in this connection by Scribe and, above all, by Wagner, who "finally established the undoubted necessity of what he himself calls the 'poetical necessities.'" Verdi's earlier librettos were stilted and conventional in their diction, but they were always chosen by the composer instead of being imposed on him, and were rarely bad from the playwright's point of view. Apropos of his abandonment for the nonce of tragedy, Dr. Mackenzie spoke as follows:—

> It has been a cause for much wonder that the veteran has suddenly shown such an unlooked for sense of humour. I think I am in a position to throw some light on this point, for lately, while speaking to an intimate friend of mine not now present, he remarked in the course of a general conversation that, having failed (from the deplorable circumstances we all know so well) in his first attempt, and having been so successful in his serious works, he never had the chance in later life of returning to comic opera. So far from receiving any offer to write one, he found that it was not wanted from him. "It is only now," he added, "that I can afford the luxury." This is the gist of his explanation, and it is not without some humour.

Turning to "Falstaff," Dr. Mackenzie pointed out that modern experience taught us that in opera the importance of the words and the music were equal. A fine story, finely played by singers and orchestra, may even blind us to the weaknesses of the music. But in "Falstaff" we are confronted by two poets. And then Boïto, besides being a poet, is also a remarkable musician, who, whatever may be thought of his music, has in all his connection with the operatic stage exerted a most powerful influence for good in Italy. There opera is the national and popular amusement par excellence, and the glamour which Boïto throws upon all he touches has never failed to produce a striking effect. The essence of his influence is that he makes people think, a power not to be lightly rated in this connection. A notable merit in his libretto, which Dr. Mackenzie illustrated in a variety of ways, is its faithful reproduction of the true Shakespearean flavour. "It is dotted all over with dexterous adaptations of lines and thoughts taken from entirely different sources than the 'Merry Wives.'" To take only one instance out of the many quoted by the lecturer, the charming little verse "Quand' ero paggio del Duca di Norfolck" is culled from no fewer than three sources: Justice Shallow's allusion to Jack Falstaff in "Henry IV.," a phrase used by "Mine Host of the Garter," and Sir John's own reply to Prince Hal. Boïto's book may occasionally puzzle the groundlings, but it will probably end by materially contributing to the better appreciation of, and fuller sympathy with our great poet in Italy. "One wishes," added Dr. Mackenzie, "for the speedy appearance of a French Boïto who will do the like for 'the Divine Williams.'" As for the words which Boïto has revived or coined to render Shakespeare's rich vocabulary of invectives, the lecturer held that he had been amply justified by results. "In fine," added Dr. Mackenzie, "if I may be allowed to parody the well-known saying, he has not occupied himself so much with placing 'la lingua Toscana in bocca Romana' as with putting 'la linguaccia Inglese in bocca Milanese.'" As an instance of the librettist's skill in dealing with the contrasted interests of the various characters, Dr. Mackenzie pointed to the Finale of the second Act, where, between the suppressed excitement of the search party and the garrulous chatter of the women, the soft speeches of the lovers run like a silken thread.

Proceeding to his analysis of the second Act, Dr. Mackenzie called attention to the overflowing musical humour of the scene between Sir John and Mrs. Quickly, in which the minutest points are felicitously hit off in the music, and pointed out in particular what happy use was made of the little group of notes associated with the phrase "dalle due alle tre" in this scene and the interview with Brook. Ford's soliloquy, dramatic and earnest, showed Verdi in his "Otello" vein; while with the return of Falstaff we lapse again into the humorous mood attuned to the situation. As for the subsequent condensation practised by the librettist in omitting the Old Woman of Brentford episode, Dr. Mackenzie had no fault to find with Boïto. "One visit and one punishment are quite sufficient for operatic purposes." The interpolated love episode, the active part taken by Bardolph and Pistol in the pursuit of their master, and the introduction of the screen, are further additions or amplifications of Shakespeare fully justified by the telling results produced.

After an interesting sketch of the remainder of the Act, Dr. Mackenzie concluded his second Lecture with the following remarks on the methods of the joint authors, as illustrated by the final scene:—

> The keen eyes of both author and composer (who have already endeavoured to tell their story in as rapid a manner as possible) noted a blot, and gained further experience during the first performances at the Scala. The very point which I held up to your admiration—viz., the melodious thread representing the sentiments of the lovers—has been, to a considerable extent, sacrificed to the paramount desire to be graphic. They consider that the situation where the men are grouped around the screen, however picturesque and musically interesting it may be, must be curtailed, and for the simple reason that it seems unnatural for the angry men to delay the enjoyment of their expected triumph. In fact, it stops the quick action which is natural to the moment. Therefore a cut has been made amounting to fourteen bars of the vocal score. The desire for compression can no farther go.

Before treating of the music of the third Act, Dr. Mackenzie took occasion to illustrate Boïto's skill in working up hints and suggestions by reference to the famous "trillo." Here the material is to be found in Falstaff's praise of a "good sherris-sack" in "Henry IV.," Part II.

"The Italian verse," remarked the lecturer, "is brilliant; the very chime of the words grillo, trillo, helps to heighten the effect of the little tone-picture, and it is difficult to conceive anyone but a musician himself turning the idea to such excellent musical account before handing it over to his friend the composer. . . . It has been most cunningly worked up by both authors. Commencing pianissimo with the flutes, the 'little cricket' increases in size and strength as it is taken up by every one of the orchestral instruments, not even excepting the trombones. The English dramatist's idea has been considerably expanded. The 'little kingdom, man,' becomes 'the world.' There is no, or at best only the faintest, suggestion of a 'trill' in the original; perhaps the 'nimble, fiery, delectable shapes' convey something approaching to it, and were I not in a seriously analytical mood, I would permit myself to suggest that the quick-witted author had been inspired by the very name *Shake*speare."

Of the fine sonnet with which Fenton opens the second scene, Dr. Mackenzie remarked that it is so charming in itself and so beautifully set to music that "one feels almost angry at the abrupt entrance of Mrs. Page with her matter-of-fact remarks." In fine, the lecturer hesitated not to describe Boïto's work as a unique libretto, full of deliciously poetical lines, and worthy of attentive study as a piece of literature pure and simple. Turning to Verdi, Dr. Mackenzie said: "The musician has seized upon every available point offered to him by the poet, and illustrated each one with an unerring touch." He dwelt upon the consistent honesty of the master throughout all his career. In "Falstaff," as in "Ernani," we find music born not made, only that the powers of the composer have developed, and his brush is bolder.

"I am struck," said Dr. Mackenzie, "amongst other things, by the light and gentle hand which just touches in the love element, for instance. The impression of contrast is just strong enough to give relief, but it is all within the frame and does not jar upon, or disturb, the intention of the whole picture by unnecessary force or seriousness. Again the terseness of musical expression, the shortness of the melodic phrases (for frequently they are little else), which almost trip one another up throughout the opera, is quite a remarkable feature. There are moments, indeed, when directness has been carried to such a pitch as to make one wish that Boïto and Verdi had dwelt just a little longer on the points before passing on. This curtness, however, is markedly observed in Verdi's latest manner. He seems to think, with Shakespeare, that 'brevity is the soul of wit.'"

At the conclusion of the Lecture, after commenting upon the happy audacity of the final fugue, "Verdi's practical joke upon the learned Doctors in Music," and pointing out that the root idea of the words of the final chorus were to be found in "All the world's a stage" and "Who laughs last, laughs longest," Dr. Mackenzie continued as follows:—

Yes, who laughs last, laughs best; and I will conclude by imparting to you an idea which has ever been present in my mind while I was occupied with "Falstaff." The musical world has long since recognised Verdi's genius, but it is by no means so well acquainted with his personal character. How should it be, when we consider his habitual reserve, his quiet and retiring modesty? He was nearly eighty years of age when he set the last words you have just heard to music. Besides the recognition and the admiration which is his due, the poor peasant of Busseto has received something more. He has been fortunate in other respects. He is a rich man now. This good humour, which pervades every page of this opera, is it real? or is it an exhibition of a mere power of adaptation, of mere stage-craft? No, it is very real indeed; and I will tell you why I think so. Not recently, but a good while back, he built a hospital for the poor of his native village containing thirty beds maintained now and hereafter by himself. At the present moment he is building at Milan (I had almost said with his own hands, for he loves to be among his workmen) a "Hospice" for the entertainment of the less fortunate members of his own profession. On the mere fabric of this building he is spending twenty thousand pounds, and I am credibly informed that he has already endowed the Institution in his will to the pleasant melody of eighty thousand more.*

You are aware that centuries ago the mediæval theologians used to discuss the most abstruse questions, and break off, I presume, when the discussion became heated, to listen to a little music before resuming. One subject which we know did on one occasion undoubtedly occupy them was: "How many angels can dance on the point of a needle?" Well, unimaginative Scotsman though I am, I feel inclined to throw down a similar theme for your consideration and ask: "How many angels are now joining in with this, the very latest laugh of Verdi?"

In conclusion, Dr. Mackenzie paid a very cordial tribute to the enthusiasm, ability, and assiduity of the artists who had generously assisted him in the musical illustrations.

We have already mentioned the names of those who took part at the first Lecture. At the second Mr. David Bispham, who had enjoyed the advantage of witnessing the performances at the Scala, again proved an admirable representative of Sir John, while Miss Marian Mackenzie greatly distinguished herself by her humorous rendering of the rôle of Mrs. Quickly. Miss Medora Henson was the Mrs. Ford, Miss Mary Harris, Nannetta, Miss Robiolio, Mrs. Page, while the parts of Ford, Fenton, Dr. Caius, Bardolph, and Pistol were sustained by Messrs. Oswald, Maldwyn Humphreys, William Nicholl, Charles Rose, and Watkin Mills. At the third and concluding Lecture Mr. Brophy was the Fenton and Miss Minnie Chamberlain took the part of Mrs. Quickly; the other rôles were filled as on the previous occasion, and Mr. Bispham gave a very fine rendering of the famous "trillo." Mr. Septimus Webbe proved a most efficient and energetic accompanist throughout, while Mr. Randegger, under whose direction the musical illustrations had been rehearsed, conducted with unobtrusive ability.

WEBER IN LONDON.

SIXTY-SEVEN years ago — during the night of June 4, 1826—Carl Maria von Weber drew his last breath in the house now numbered 103, Great Portland Street. The recent proposal to affix a memorial tablet upon this historic musical house suggests a retrospect of the closing scenes of the musician's brief life. Weber came to England for the production of his opera of "Oberon" and—to die. He first touched our shores, at Dover, in the opening days of March, 1826. His earliest impressions of this country were highly favourable. He was equally pleased with the simple beauty of the meadows and the bright-flowered gardens as with the well appointed four-in-hand which sped him "like lightning through a country beyond all description charming." Arrived in this "smoky nest"—as Mendelssohn was pleased to designate London—on Sunday, March 5, Weber received a warm welcome from Sir George Smart, in whose house the composer found his English home. "Here, in Smart's house," he wrote to his wife, "I am excellently well taken care of. Every possible comfort is provided—a bath-room in the house. We dined at six, and by ten o'clock I was in my good bed, where I slept well till seven. . . . People are too good to me with their anxious care. No king is served with greater love and affection in all things than I am. Indeed, in every way I am cosseted; they literally carry me in their arms." The day after his arrival Weber, with his host, went to Covent Garden to survey the scene where his new opera was about to be produced. He occupied Kemble's box. The theatre was crowded, a report having been circulated that Weber would be present. Without wishing to be observed, he advanced to the front of the stage-box to survey the house. Immediately there arose a cry of "There's Weber! there's Weber!" followed by a remarkable demonstration of applause. The bewildered composer at last discovered that the ovation was meant for him, and that the shouts were an English way of pronouncing his name. He was overwhelmed with gratitude, and timidly acknowledged this spontaneous welcome. The Overture to "Der Freyschütz" was then demanded and played amidst great enthusiasm; and the opera of "Rob Roy," performed on that evening, took a very secondary place. Although the seeds of his fatal illness were fast fructifying, Weber at once plunged into the vortex of exhausting work. On the Wednesday following his arrival (March 8) he appeared as Conductor at a "Grand Performance of Antient and Modern Music," given at Covent Garden. This was Weber's first public appearance in England, and not at the Philharmonic Society, as is so often stated. He was engaged for five of these performances, at one of which his "Jubilee" Overture was first performed in England; he received a fee of £25 for conducting each concert. The programmes were very hotch-potch affairs—e.g., a selection from "Der Freyschütz" (conducted by Weber), followed by a part of "Judas Maccabæus," and terminating with a medley of ballads, all under the general direction of Smart. The play-bills stated that Weber "will preside on the stage." Our composer had most gratifying receptions. The house rose en masse and cheered vociferously when "the pale little man" first appeared, and nearly every piece of his was encored. His distressing cough attracted the notice of many admirers, who, on the day after the concert, showed their practical sympathy with the disease-stricken man by sending him presents of jellies, lozenges, and all sorts of cough remedies. The London gas did not suit his delicate chest, but English fare proved quite acceptable to the distinguished visitor. "The excellence of flesh and fowl is indescribable," he wrote to his wife. "I have had set before me chickens which, without exaggeration, are as large as middle-sized geese with us. And the meat is so tender and juicy—ah! and the oysters! If I could but conjure you over here. We have no idea of such oysters!"

* Doubt having been expressed as to the accuracy of these figures by a writer in Truth, who accused Dr. Mackenzie of confusing lire (francs) with pounds, it is worth recording that in Ricordi's official publication, "Falstaff," it is precisely stated that Verdi has left two million francs to the Institution in question.

On April 3 Weber conducted the Philharmonic Concert, when his Overtures to "Euryanthe" and "Der Freyschütz" were performed, and the former was encored. "He seemed much affected by his reception," records the Harmonicon, "and indicated by gesture his gratitude for the powerful manifestation of feeling towards him." "It [the Philharmonic] is an excellent Institution," he wrote; "the orchestra is admirable; I was delighted." His fee of fifteen guineas for conducting at this concert cannot be considered excessive. Meanwhile, the rehearsals for "Oberon" were being held. The Overture was finished, at Great Portland Street, only three days before the first representation. The original MS. bears the inscription: "Vollendet d. 9 Aprill, 1826. Vormittags 3/4 auf 12 uhr und somit die ganze Oper Oberon. Soli Deo Gloria!!! C. M. v. Weber." The well-known Mermaid's Song was sung at the first performance by Miss Goward (now Mrs. Keeley), though it was not originally assigned to her. In a recent conversation with the present writer, Mrs. Keeley (hale and hearty in her eighty-eighth year) related that the song was successively declined by two other vocalists, when Sir George Smart said, "Little Goward will sing it," and she did. The Mermaid had to sing at the back of the stage, where it was very difficult to hear the extremely soft accompaniment. At the first general rehearsal the effect was not quite satisfactory, and Fawcett (the stage-manager) impatiently exclaimed: "That must come out—it won't go." Weber, very feeble, was standing in the pit leaning on the back of the orchestra, and he shouted, "Wherefore shall it not go?" and, leaping over the partition like a boy, took the bâton from Smart, who was temporarily conducting, and thus he saved the excision of this favourite song. After the first performance, Weber came to the young singer, and, placing his "beautiful hand" on her shoulder, said: "My little girl, you sang that very nicely, but what for did you put in that note?"—the reference being to an appoggiatura she had added.

"Oberon" was first performed at Covent Garden Theatre, under the composer's direction, on April 12, 1826. As compared with "Der Freyschütz," with its strong romantic interest and more popular music, "Oberon" only achieved a moderate success. It ran thirty-two nights during the season, the first twelve being conducted by the composer himself. Weber had the usual difficulties with some of the leading singers. Braham was not satisfied with the beautiful scena written for him, and Weber reluctantly wrote another to please the popular tenor of the day. After the first performance Weber wrote to his wife: "By God's grace and help, I have to-night had such a perfect success as perhaps never before. It is quite impossible to describe the dazzling and touching effect of such a complete and cloudless triumph." The MS. score (in a copyist's hand, but with additions by Weber) which was used at these initial performances is now preserved in the British Museum, having very properly been bequeathed to the nation by Sir George Smart. Weber little thought that the opening chorus in his "Oberon," when the fairies sing "Light as fairy foot can fall," would be boiled down into a popular hymn-tune; yet "Weber," or "Shore" (named after the adapter), is frequently sung by some congregations in anything but a fairy-like manner.

Brief reference can only be made to the benefit concerts and aristocratic functions at which Weber assisted. Although the poor man was in the last stages of a distressing disease, he ungrudgingly spent his fast-ebbing strength in appearing at several of his fellow-artists' concerts, including those given by Braham, Moscheles, and Miss Paton—the last only six days before his death. Unlike Rossini—who two years previously had visited London and carried away with him £7,000 in five months—Weber was not the darling of the "hupper suckles." The hollow-cheeked, emaciated German, with his reserved manner, could not compete with the good-looking, well-conditioned, and vivacious Italian. Weber bitterly complained of the back-stairs treatment he received when engaged to play at the great houses of the so-called nobility of the day. In pleasant contrast was his reception in the Royal circle, "where," he says, "artists sat with princes round the tea-table in unreserved and enlightened conversation." On two occasions he visited the Duchess of Kent and accompanied her in some of his own songs. A charming child, seven years old, "laughed and played with the royal personages"; she was the Princess Victoria, now our gracious Queen.

Weber's benefit concert was arranged to take place at the Argyll Rooms, Regent Street, on May 21. The day was badly chosen. It was the "Oaks" day, and Fashion had arranged to be at Epsom; and those who stayed in town found that the rain came down in torrents all day. The room was less than half full, and when Weber tottered in, supported by Smart, "a bitter, painful smile" crossed his placid features. For his concert, and at the request of Mr. Ward, M.P. for the City, who accompanied it with a present of twenty-five guineas, Weber specially set for Miss Stephens (afterwards the Dowager Countess of Essex) Moore's lines from "Lalla Rookh" beginning "From Chindara's warbling fount I come." With characteristic thoroughness he would not write a note of the music till he had read the whole poem, and then, after repeated attempts, he had only strength enough to write down the melody. The accompaniment he never put upon paper, he extemporised it at the concert, and this was the last time Weber touched an instrument. His "Jubilee Cantata" was also sung. (Why is this interesting work so neglected by our choral societies?) At the rehearsal Weber sat in a great chair, and when the chorus were singing the prayer too loudly, he stopped them and said: "Stop, stop! not so; would you scream like that in the presence of the Almighty?" After the concert he had scarcely strength enough to reach the ante-room, and was led almost exhausted to a sofa. The net proceeds were £96 11s., while Bergrez's fashionably-attended benefit, given on the same day at the mansion of the Duke of St. Albans, realized, it is said, 400 guineas! According to custom, Weber signed and numbered all his concert tickets himself. As that in the possession of the present writer is numbered "558," the dying man must have signed his name at least that number of times.

The end soon came. Weber grew weaker and weaker. With an optimism characteristic of his disease, he quite thought that he should soon return to his wife and children. He arranged all his affairs so as to leave for home on June 6, and employed his friends in purchasing presents for his family and friends in Dresden. On the evening of Sunday, June 4, he lay exhausted in an armchair, surrounded by Sir George Smart, Fürstenau, Göschen (father of the late Chancellor of the Exchequer), and Moscheles. His friends insisted that he should retire to rest early. He refused the offer of Fürstenau to watch by his bedside. "No, no," replied Weber; "I am not nearly so ill as you want to make out." He wound up his watch, shook hands with his faithful companion, and his last words were, "Now let me sleep." He had promised not to fasten his door, but on the following morning it was found locked, and no response came to the repeated knockings. Heinke, the German ironmonger down the street, and afterwards Mendelssohn's landlord, was sent for, and when he broke open the door, the sad sight that presented itself was Weber lying with his head on his arm, calmly asleep in death. A post-mortem examination revealed that the cause of death was consumption of a very aggravated form. Thus, in the stillness of that Sunday night, and in his fortieth year, the master passed peacefully away.

Arrangements were at once made for a funeral worthy of the departed genius. Permission was asked of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's to allow a Requiem service in the Cathedral; but, as might be expected, the request was not granted, Weber being a member of the Roman Catholic Church. After repeated delays, the body found a resting-place at Moorfields Catholic Chapel, in the vaults of which it was interred on June 21. The hearse was drawn by six horses, and the funeral procession attracted great crowds. Mozart's "Requiem" was sung with full orchestral accompaniment, Caradori-Allan, Braham, and Lablache taking the solo parts. This, however, was only a temporary receptacle for Weber's remains. Eighteen years afterwards, in 1844, and mainly through the exertions of Richard Wagner—who spoke of Weber as his "adored idol"—the body was conveyed to his native land, and re-interred in the Cemetery at Dresden, when Wagner delivered an oration over the grave. "He was again at home," says Benedict, "and the flowers on his grave were tended by his beloved Lina."

The old house in Great Portland Street will, in course of time, be no more; and the passer-by, who, in looking up at those second-floor windows, gives a kindly thought of poor Weber, will miss his familiar landmark. But a great musician's best memorial is his music. Of this Weber has left us a goodly heritage; and, therefore, may we not say: "He being dead yet speaketh"?

ON the first and second days of June a couple of operas by two distinguished living composers were introduced to the Berlin public, with a result which seemed to many who were present to be in singularly ill accord with the comparative deserts of the works. Verdi's "Falstaff," though admirably performed by the original cast, was nevertheless subject to a distinct disadvantage in more than one respect. In the first place, the Germans, not regarding opera in the light of an exotic, are accustomed to hear it in their own language, and "Falstaff" depends to an unusual extent on its sparkling dialogue—it is, in very truth, a "comedy set to music." Then, again, the Berlin Opera-House is much too large a theatre for this refined comedy, which would be heard to far greater advantage on a smaller stage; and, lastly, the composer was not present to rouse the somewhat spurious enthusiasm which a "first performance" generally inspires. It may seem unfair if it is to this last incentive to applause that the warm reception of Anton Rubinstein's "Die Kinder der Haide," on the following day, at Kroll's Theatre, may be in large measure attributed. Granting that but few of the principal vocalists could sing, it is more than doubtful whether the most finished artists could raise this opera above the level of respectable mediocrity or deprive it of its dulness and decorous monotony. Probably Rubinstein is too astute not to distinguish between genuine enthusiasm and mere curiosity; at any rate, he refused to be "drawn," and remained in ambush behind the scenes during the performance. For the sake of accuracy it should be recorded that one important change in the original "Falstaff" cast was made at Berlin. Mr. Maurel, as is well known, is hindered by what he terms patriotism from performing before an audience of Teutons; so the title-rôle was filled—a word, by the way, having much significance in this connection—by Mr. Ramon Blanchart. It may be doubted, however, whether the performance suffered materially by the change. If the attitude of the public was cool towards Verdi's masterwork, the musicians present were well nigh unanimous in expressing the warmest admiration for the work.

Students of Darwin will not need to be reminded of the fact that evolution is often attended by the curious phenomenon of "reversion" to the original parent type. For instance, after about half-a-century we have arrived at a practically unanimous recognition of the genius of Richard Wagner. This result at last achieved, it has been rather startling to observe, in one or two recent cases, a cropping up of the old Adam—the old spirit of ignorant prejudice and intolerance. In a useful little treatise on "Form and Design in Music," intended for the use of amateurs, the author, Mr. Heathcote Statham, has occasion to attempt a definition of melody. That he fails conspicuously is no blame to him; no one has ever yet succeeded. Unluckily he tries to give examples of good and bad melody, a matter in which personal taste is apt to warp the judgment. After quotations from Bach, Mozart, and Beethoven, he says: "As an instructive contrast the reader may take the cacophonous string of notes given in Ex. 9, which is put forth as a melody, but has no analogy in structure with those above quoted except in the mere fact that it consists in a succession of notes; these, however, have neither a common law of rhythm nor of tonal relation, nor any definite form or balance as a whole; the passage has, so to speak, neither beginning, middle, nor ending in any organic sense, and there seems no reason why it should not wriggle on in the same fashion indefinitely: it is a formless thing." The italics are our own; the phrase alluded to is not, as one might think, the cor Anglais solo from "Tristan" or the violin passage which prefaces the last scene of "Siegfried," but the pathetic "Herzeleide" motive from "Parsifal":—

Is Mr. Statham really unable to see that this is a 6-bar phrase completely in the key of A major, beautifully illustrating the chord known as the "Neapolitan Sixth" and making a cadence on the dominant? If so, the less he writes about music the better.

A translation of the letters sent by Wagner from Paris to the Dresden Abendzeitung is now being published in the Meister. The first letter (February 23, 1841) deals chiefly with the Opéra, which, says Wagner, "is at its last gasp." "Auber," he tells us, "has become prematurely old," and Halévy is keeping silence. The Opéra "is awaiting its salvation from the German Messiah—from Meyerbeer." The hand of time has since moved on more than half-a-century: the Opéra is not yet dead; and recent news from Paris shows us that though "Robert" may, as Wagner prophesied, "be blessed with an immortal life," Meyerbeer is no longer the one and only salvation. The reference to Halévy as "the gifted creator of 'La Juive'" is interesting in connection with the late revival of that opera. Sir A. Harris, always in search of a good "novelty," will certainly not fail to notice that Wagner speaks of "Guitarrero," a later opera of Halévy's, as "worthy of the best period and the best masters." In a second letter, dated April 6, 1841, Wagner describes, and with almost French humour, the process by which deserving journalists were transformed into directors of the Grand Opéra, a transformation, however, of greater advantage to the men themselves than to art. Again, the correspondent relates how he "fell asleep" during a performance of "Don Giovanni" at the Opéra, and how, when he awoke, a change had come over the scene; an act of "William Tell" was being played, for the singer of the title-rôle of Mozart's opera had sung himself hoarse. Truly may it be said that necessity is the mother of invention. The letter contains further praise of Halévy. Auber is referred to as one "to whom opera-composing has become as much a habit as lathering to a barber." The current number of the Meister contains the fourth and concluding part of the thoughtful articles on "The Tristan Drama," by the able editor, Mr. W. Ashton Ellis.

An American contemporary invites the opinions of its readers upon the subject of pianoforte playing being an effectual means of warding off paralysis. It asserts that the medical profession is gradually being brought to entertain this belief. Our contemporary observes that "One seldom hears of paralyzed pianists"; but this is nothing. Paralysis is not a very common disease, and one is not likely to hear much of or from any paralyzed person, especially a pianist. We confess that the idea is an entirely new one to us. The converse—that immoderate pianism may induce paralysis—we know, alas! to be only too true; is it usual for the same cause to produce opposite effects? Pianist's cramp, though only affecting one particular set of nerves, has, in common with all kindred disorders, a tendency to develop into complete paralysis; indeed, we know of a sad case in point, the sufferer having been a few years ago a distinguished student at the Royal College of Music. Pianists cannot be too frequently or solemnly warned that any monotonous exercise, such as telegraphing, nail making, or practising pianoforte technics, after awhile becomes automatic, whereupon the nerves controlling the particular muscles used commence to waste until all control over them is lost. This is "cramp," whether writer's, telegrapher's, or pianist's, and a disease the cure for which is very difficult, often impossible. Moral: Don't be automatic in your playing.

Apropos of the Jubilee of the Cambridge University Musical Society, the following extract from a criticism of its first Concert, May 1, 1844, may be of interest; but we must add that the Society was evolved from a more private one started at Peterhouse in the previous year, 1843. "Callcott's glee, 'When Arthur first,' was then sung by Mr. Dykes, of Catherine Hall, Mr. Byers, of Queen's, and another gentleman, the music of which, although good in style and ably sustained, is, we think, more suited for a convivial party than a concert-room. Mr. Dykes, who also presided during the evening at the pianoforte, sang a pretty little ballad which, we believe, was his own composition. Most deservedly was he encored, when he threw the whole room into fits of laughter by an imitation of [John] Parry in his songs of 'The nice young man' and 'Berlin wool'; the whole style of this gentleman's performances stamps him at once as a thorough musician." The "Mr. Dykes" here referred to became the Rev. J. B. Dykes, Mus. Doc., the composer of many favourite hymn-tunes and of "Dykes in F."

We conclude in another column our summary of Dr. Mackenzie's Lectures on "Falstaff," at the Royal Institution. But we may be permitted to add, by way of a postscript, a few remarks on the signal success which attended their delivery. They were attended on every occasion by large, representative, and appreciative audiences, including distinguished composers, conductors, connoisseurs, and critics, who followed Dr. Mackenzie's interesting and acute observations with the utmost attention, never missing any of his points, and applauding the well-chosen and well-executed illustrations with the utmost cordiality. At the last Lecture, in particular, the enthusiasm of Dr. Mackenzie's auditors took a demonstrative form which is rare indeed within the sober precincts of the Royal Institution.

In this much-examined age, it may be interesting to look at the financial side of the musical-examination epidemic. The following figures represent the amounts paid in fees to the various examining bodies within one year. As the information is supplied from official sources, its accuracy may be relied upon.

Trinity College (1892-93), £8,995.
The Associated Board (1891-92), £4,889.
Incorporated Society of Musicians (1892), £1,789.
Licentiate, Royal Academy of Music (1893), £1,328.
College of Organists (1891-92), £685.
Associate, Royal College of Music (1893), £451.
Total for one year, £18,137.

FACTS, RUMOURS, AND REMARKS.

The directors of the unfortunate Gentlemen's Concerts (Manchester) had nothing very cheering to tell their subscribers when they met the other day. It was stated by the chairman that the list of supporters was gradually diminishing, and that nothing had been done in view of another season. Nevertheless the directors felt "there would be no difficulty in carrying on the Concerts if only a strong feeling were manifested that they should be carried on." Just so, but the feeling in question does not seem to be forthcoming. Mr. E. J. Broadfield, earnest as ever in his advocacy of the "oldest musical society in the North of England," tried to evoke enthusiasm from recollections of the past, and especially from the fact that the Young Pretender became a subscriber during his stay in Manchester. But it seems to us that little can be gained in this manner. The real question is whether the Society can adapt itself to modern needs. Can it dispense with the dress coat, which is not a modern need? One speaker urged this course, claiming that "part of the hall should be thrown open at every Concert to people not in evening dress." For himself, this gentleman would be "willing when in morning dress to touch his hat or pull his forelock to those in evening dress as a mark of their superiority," but, in his opinion, the obligation to be superior should go. Something will have to be done, since it appears that the receipts from sale of tickets to the public last season amounted to no more than £10. We quite appreciate the feeling of those who cling to the old institution, but, in our day, sentiment is a poor source of vitality. Cannot the friends of the Gentlemen's Concerts adapt them to present conditions and give them real life?

At a meeting vaguely described as "an official convocation in the University of Ireland," the following proposition was, it is said, brought forward by Mr. O'Byrne Croke, M.A., and gravely discussed:—"That music, especially in its modern elaborate developments, is a study that makes for darkness, and that, so far as its psychological and physiological effects are concerned, can be regarded in its essence as but a soothing, irritating, and imbecilizing agent; and that, as such, it has been given a wrong place, and an undue prominence among the studies fostered by the Royal University. That the tremendous weight of this impeachment against music can be felt in its intensity only by remembering that music is employed, perhaps ignorantly, in sustaining the gravest human interests, among them that of worship of the Supreme Being in its various forms; ignorantly, through default of apprehending that it is, at best, but an intoxicant, and as such, of the most vulgar intoxicants. That music, as an agent for operating on the human mind, finds its true place among studies within the purview of the medical faculty." There appears to be a joke somewhere.

A Dover correspondent sends us a cutting from the Canterbury Press, as showing "what a reporter can do if he tries." It refers to a performance of selections from "Elijah" in Canterbury Cathedral on Ascension Day. The reporter states that the opening voluntary "brought out the beautiful flute-like notes of the instrument," and then proceeds to characterise Mendelssohn's work as "lovely," adding: "The master-mind of Mendelssohn was fully displayed in some of those dramatic choruses which so completely exhibit that wonderful power he possessed of portraying the fervour of the words, both in the vocal and instrumental portions with which the Oratorio abounds. To mention but two, 'Thanks be to God. He laveth the thirsty land,' full of power and dramatic feeling, with concentration of voices and instruments, making it one of the finest choruses ever written; while the smooth flow of melody and harmonious combination mark 'He watching over Israel' as one of the most thoughtful of choruses." This will suffice, perhaps, to show what the reporter can do if he tries. We will only add that according to this authority "Lift thine eyes" was sung unaccompanied.

Have we before met with the musical critic of the Mid-Surrey Gazette? Probably not, because contact with him would certainly make its mark on the memory. Reporting a performance of "The Messiah" some time ago, this guide of musical opinion said: "The turn for Miss Ethel Barnard had now arrived, and not a few were a little bit puzzled to see Madame Edwardes rise to sing the recitatives bracketed to the name of the former artist. Oh! those recitatives! to the choirmaster! they seem a necessity, as they keep up the connection of the argument, to the singer they are a difficult and thankless performance, while to the man in the audience they are an inexpressible bore. No one ever gets an 'encore' for a recitative; and we hope the time may soon come when in the interest of both audience and artist these uninteresting problems may be omitted. When Madame Edwardes sat down the majority of the audience were evidently not quite sure whether they liked her or not." We are in no such doubtful position with regard to the critic. It is impossible not to like him very much indeed, and when he next discourseth on matters of art may some kind friend send us a copy of the paper.

AMERICA is still an easy first in the matter of high-falutin' concert reports. After the Boston Symphony Orchestra had given a Sunday performance in the Chicago Exhibition, a critic from the Wild West spread himself thus: "Herr Kneisel gave a final shiver and rapped for eyes front. The rows of violinists stopped their discordant tuning, the horners ceased their tootings and the giant assembly of the world's best sat silent for the opening. . . . Down came the stick, and the overture was on. Gentle and mild at the first, the theme grew and widened, and spread from violins to violoncellos and basses and horns and drums, until the funnel dome was bursting under the deluges of tone. The great melodies chased each other out into the sepulchral silence of the empty corridors. They swept in troops down the great basin, until the lifeless Neptunes seemed to turn at the awful desecration of the puritanic Sunday, and the steadfast Franklin to drop his strong eyes from where the lightning lives. The solitary guards awoke from their slumbers, and as far away as the administration building the din of the music could be heard. There was not a sound in all this end of the grounds save it and the 'cronk' of the geese."

SALFORD Hundred Court.—Rowley v. Bolger.—Judgment.—"Plaintiff, a music teacher; defendant, aged nineteen, a fustian cutter, took lessons from plaintiff, view of becoming public singer. For cost of lessons action brought. Defendant pleads infancy, to which replied that lessons were necessary. I took time to consider. Same rule which applies to purchase of goods applies to tuition; it must be suitable to condition of infant at time of contract. This defendant was a fustian cutter; and although these lessons improved his station in life this event does not determine necessity for lessons when given, nor does object of defendant alter rule of law framed to enable infants to enter life free from debts not necessary. I think matter must be treated as if defendant had bought pianoforte or violin, articles not necessaries for person in defendant's condition. I give judgment for defendant with costs, on lowest scale." Teachers of music perpend.

ACCORDING to the New York Times, Mr. Paderewski has been living beyond his natural means in America. We read: "Mr. Paderewski, for the sake of his physical well-being, should never have gone to Chicago. He was in no fit condition for the undertaking. Previous to his final Recital at Music Hall, his forearms showed symptoms of the temporary nervous paralysis which confined him to his bed last autumn. He was enabled to go on the stage and play his programme only by the employment of the most energetic massage treatment. His performance at times showed evidences of his condition, and at the close of the Recital he was plainly in a highly overstrung state. He was, in the common phrase, living on his nerve." Living on the nerves is, we fancy, the course which artistic life in the States makes inevitable.

IT is not the fault of the person most concerned if the world remains ignorant that a great composer lives at Harlesden. Mr. W. H. Palmer writes to the local Chronicle urging that it "would be good to have a nice hall to develop the sound principle of harmonious chords (whatever that may precisely mean), and where all true lovers of music would amalgamate and promote a happy issue." To encourage efforts in this direction Mr. Palmer adds: "I would be only too pleased to give more works from my pen providing a nice hall was erected—works which would not only surprise the musical talent of Harlesden, but most of our greatest English composers." We sincerely trust that the nice hall will soon be built.

A LOOSE New York journalist says: "After all the biographical notices obtained from the American press, he (Richter) changes his mind and declines the fascinations of Chicago," &c. What is there in biographical notices per se that should prevent a man from changing his mind? Again, we read: "He (Richter) really wanted to come very much, but family influence and the fear of losing a future pension from the Austrian Government dissuaded him." The writer ought to know that Richter had a contract with the Austrian authorities, who declined to annul it. Let us prepare the materials for future historians with at least some regard for facts.

THE State of Gondal, India, wants a national anthem, and is willing to pay £100 for it. The prize is not likely to tempt our English composers, but should it succeed in doing so, a "committee of experts"—experts in what?—will sit upon their productions and adjudge accordingly. The "Anthem," scored for a military band, must be sent to H. L. Dave, private secretary to his Highness the Shakor Saheb, not later than October next. What does the native talent of Gondal think of this appeal to the West for the musical service of the hoary East?—the fons et origo of art.

WE take the following from the Western Daily Mail: "An American organ in a Welsh chapel was so sadly out of tune that the organist complained to the deacons. A tuner was called in, but the complaint of the instrument was beyond safe cures. Then someone, who wanted to see the thing thoroughly done, suggested that the organ should be painted anew; another seconded, and, though the organist raved, the motion was carried and duly executed." Shakespeare has a motto for these deacons: "We'll 'mock the time with fairest show.'"

AGAIN and again, of late, we have had to read that "there cannot be nationality in art." This is a very loose assertion. If it be meant that national animosities should not enter the domain of art, we agree most thoroughly and would have the fact stated with greater precision. But to say that there is no nationality in art, taking those words in their natural sense, is to state the absolute reverse of truth. There is as much nationality in music, for example, as in language or any other form of human expression. Well for music that this is so.

WE congratulate the Gloucester Festival stewards upon having secured a worthy successor to their late Secretary, Mr. E. T. Gardom, now Clerk of the Peace for the county. Mr. P. Barrett Cooke, who, like Mr. Gardom, is a solicitor, has for some years acted as honorary secretary of the Gloucester Choral Society, discharging his duties with that tact and zeal which should be equally successful in a larger field. That he will serve the Festival well we do not doubt.

WE wish to call the attention of our readers to an important change just made in the Oxford regulations for musical degrees. In future there will be two First Examinations and two Second Examinations for the Mus. Bac. degree in each year (instead of one as heretofore). They will be held simultaneously on the first Tuesday in November and the first Tuesday in May every year. The next Preliminary Examination will be held on September 18. Candidates for this examination must communicate with the Dean of their college.

WE are sorry to learn from the report of the committee that the accounts of the Middlesbrough Musical Union for the past season show an adverse balance. This has never happened before and should never occur again. The committee observe that the result, "in that it calls for greater efforts and more active loyalty on the part of those who have the true interests of music at heart, is not altogether a misfortune." The right spirit animates these words. Advance, musical Middlesbrough!

THE fame of Mr. Dolmetsch's interesting Concerts of Ancient Music has naturally travelled Northward, and the Manchester Guardian has now lent its powerful advocacy to a proposition put forward by Dr. Hiles that a fund should be raised to defray the cost of conveying Mr. Dolmetsch, his party and their instruments, to Lancashire, and of organising a series of Concerts there. Dr. Hiles has our best wishes for the success of his scheme.

THE Dean of Westminster has granted leave to place a medallion of Jenny Lind under the statue of Handel in Poets' Corner—a site peculiarly appropriate for an artist so successful in the interpretation of the works of Handel and other oratorio writers. A committee, presided over by Princess Christian, has been formed to carry out the memorial, which will be erected at a cost not exceeding £500.

AN American writer tells us that the fact that the Boston Women's Orchestra numbers seventy "pieces" "illustrates the legitimate progress of woman's rights." He probably means woman's progress towards the attainment of her rights. It is funny, however, to see playing upon fiddles counted among the natural and inherent privileges of the sex. Did tyrant Man ever assert the contrary?

AN American musical correspondent in Berlin holds that it is better for Nikisch to be Conductor of the Pesth Opera "than to be chef d'orchestre at Boston and be harassed by the Hub's voracious musical critics, who howl like wolves in the teeth of every artist who dares to please the public longer than two seasons." Perhaps so, but these are impatient days, and the motto is "Anything for a change."

A CORRESPONDENT writes: "Your Canonbury correspondent has not reached 'the lowest depth' at '9d. weekly (two lessons).' Until recently an advertisement appeared regularly in a local paper in this district stating that the advertiser gave lessons on the pianoforte at fourpence per lesson! The advertiser was a woman."

AN American journalist on Marie Tempest: "Her music is not shut up in her larynx; it circulates to her toes. She doesn't sing with her mouth so much as with her whole organisation. Her little finely modelled head is cocked on like a bobolink's and looks, at the first glance, very much as a cadenza sounds. The very set of it is ad lib., and it peeps over the top of conventionality with a saucy promise."

THE story that the violinist, Ondricek, was lately permitted to look upon the embalmed body of Paganini has been received with expressions of incredulity. Yet it seems to be true. A London friend of Ondricek had particulars sent to him at the time, and the fact was reported to us, but not mentioned in these columns.

SIR JOHN STAINER received a very flattering invitation from the Committee of Awards to become judge of the music exhibit at the Chicago Exhibition; but he was compelled to decline the honour, as the shortness of the notice rendered it impossible for him to make due arrangements for leaving England for such a lengthened period.

REQUESTS for the address of the lady whose verses were quoted by the writer of "From my Study" a while ago continue to be received. We, therefore, make it public. The name of the young lyrist is A. Maude Hicks and she lives at 34, Highbury Grove.

"BARRY," says a Welsh etymologist, "is a corruption of Parry, and Parry is Ap Harry, and Ap Harry is one of the cognomens for the Old Harry." This will interest some musical people should they be genealogically disposed.

WE hear that the members of the Norwich Festival chorus are much pleased with Mr. Cowen's music in the "Water Lily," and have taken to the study of it with genuine relish. The composer, who has attended one rehearsal, is much gratified by the progress made.

It seems doubtful whether the Eastern choral societies will go to Chicago. The Bureau of Music will pay no part of the expenses, and the visit of the New York Oratorio Society would cost from 25,000 to 30,000 dollars.

A SINGER of phenomenal powers has recently been heard in Wales—Miss Fanny Sellers, described by the Rhyl journal as "a taking, brilliant, and cultured exponent of vocal harmonisation." Evidently a two-(perhaps three) headed nightingale!

IN one and same paragraph of an American paper Paderewski is described as "pianist-in-ordinary to the entire female sex" and as the "pianist of the filamented aureole." The second attempt is good.

ACCORDING to Walter Damrosch, Theodore Thomas has been "worried sick by his troubles (at the Chicago Exhibition) and is only a shadow of what he was a year ago." We wonder that he is alive.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.

THIS chapter in the story of Sir Augustus Harris's opera season must begin with a note that Madame Calvé appeared in "Carmen," on May 30, and made a great sensation, not only by her fine singing, but by her bold and uncompromising embodiment of the gipsy charmer, whose power over men was never before so fully explained. In this French lady we have an actress as well as a singer—a combination rare enough on the lyric stage to account for the general interest which Madame Calvé's various appearances excite. The Carmen who follows her will have a hard task. Mr. Alvarez played Don José with more success than his previous efforts had led connoisseurs to expect. He has, in fact, made steady progress since the night of his début, when, for some reason or other, as we now know, he failed to do himself justice.

"La Juive" was tried on the 1st ult., but the result was not encouraging, the attendance being small and the sympathy of those who were present not very manifest. Halevy's opera demands a first-class dramatic artist for the rôle of the heroine, and that condition Miss Vasquez did not satisfy. She was more adequate to the task than the lady who appeared at Drury Lane during the spring season, and she exhibited qualities which might have proved adequate to a less exacting part. But Miss Vasquez was not strong enough either as actress or singer; the representation, therefore, though supported by Miss Arnoldson, Mr. Giannini, and Mr. Plançon, fell flat, and has not since been repeated.

On the 3rd ult. "Pagliacci" was preceded by two acts of Bizet's "Pêcheurs de Perles," as a change from "Philémon et Baucis." This change proved no more successful than the introduction of "La Juive," although Madame Calvé appeared as Leila and did all she could to invest that unsatisfactory character with dramatic distinction. No one could have accomplished more, but there are some feats which even the French prima donna cannot achieve, and she left Leila pretty much as she found the part. Nothing, we fear, will lift "Les Pêcheurs" into abiding favour. The drama is weak and the music not strong. In such a case there can only be one result. Madame Calvé had good supporters in Ancona, De Vaschetti, and De Lucia, but "Philémon et Baucis" has taken its old place as a curtain-raiser for the "Pagliacci."

Edouard de Reszke made his re-entry on the 6th ult. as Mephistopheles in "Faust," the part of the heroine being taken by Miss Palisser in lieu of Madame Melba, said to be "indisposed." Mr. de Reszke's fine voice made all its old effect, but the exaggerated style of his acting was felt to be a drawback. An artist may be confident of power to please, but should never cease to guard against presuming upon the fact. A new tenor, Mr. Salvaterra, appeared as Faust. His voice was too weak for so large a theatre, and he has not been tried again.

A few words will suffice for the revival of "La Favorita" on the 10th ult., Donizetti's opera being staged less on its own account, perhaps, than for the sake of Madame Armand, a mezzo-soprano, whose repertory is necessarily limited. The lady, to a considerable extent, justified her Brussels reputation, singing and acting with considerable power and making a decided hit in "O mio Fernando." She was, however, handicapped by the indifference of the public to works of the class in which "La Favorita" stands. For good or ill, these operas have gone out of favour, and it is very hard indeed for an artist to do anything with them. Mr. Alvarez was a good Fernando, Mr. Dufriche an excellent King, and Mr. Plançon an irreproachable Balthazar.

The 13th ult. witnessed the production of Bizet's "Djamileh," for the first time in London, the metropolis thus coming after our great provincial towns, to which the Carl Rosa Company played it in the course of last winter. "Djamileh" has, we imagine, been adopted at Covent Garden more for its usefulness as a companion to "Cavalleria" and "Pagliacci" than for its own sake. It has a poor and, sooth to say, not very pleasant story of slave life in Egypt, the principal male character being a gentleman who buys a new favourite every month, but is at last caught in the toils of love. A musician can do little with such a drama, and Bizet's music, pretty though it be, is affected by the weakness of the libretto. That "Djamileh" is interesting for the sake of its music we do not deny, but there is no chance of its survival on the active list. It is now serving a temporary purpose merely.

"L'Amico Fritz," on the 19th ult., was conducted by the composer, Mascagni, whom all London did not rush to see, the house being half empty when he stepped into the conductor's seat. He was, nevertheless, greeted very cordially and, later on, when the empty places were filled, had a fitting recognition. The young Maëstro conducted his work with much decision, and secured a performance of more than average excellence. Madame Calvé again showed how charming she can be in idyllic opera, and was the most prominent feature in the representation, next in merit being the very admirable Rabbi of Mr. Dufriche. On this occasion the part of Beppo was played—and very well played—by Miss Joran, who herself took the violin solo, which was consequently performed on the stage instead of at the wings. Mr. Jean de Reszke appeared as Romeo on the 20th ult., and on the 23rd ult. an exceptionally fine performance of "Lohengrin" was given with Mr. Jean de Reszke as the Knight of the Grail, Madame Nordica as Elsa, Mdlle. Giulia Ravogli, and Messrs. Ancona and Plançon.

WAGNER CYCLE AT COVENT GARDEN.

IT is a generally accepted axiom that operatic works are most effective when rendered in the language in which they were originally written, and admirers of the Bayreuth master have perhaps had some ground of complaint in the fact that three of the seven Wednesday evening performances have been given in the Italian tongue. A graver accusation must, however, be brought against the management; the works have so far been put on the stage in the most shambling and slipshod fashion, and to those who recognise that in Wagnerian music-drama we have, or ought to have, a combination of the arts, this constitutes a serious fault. There was much to praise and little to blame in the vocal efforts of those who took part in "Tannhäuser," on the 7th ult. Madame Albani can still sing the music of Elizabeth in a manner almost unsurpassable, Mr. Vignas was quite efficient, vocally speaking, in the titular rôle, and Mr. Ancona was admirable in every respect as Wolfram. Miss Gherlsen as Venus was rather weak, and Mr. Wiegand as the Landgrave too ponderous; but these shortcomings might have been forgiven. What could not be forgiven was the miserable stage management in the first and third acts. The half-hearted attempts to produce some of the effects in the Paris version, which has never yet been performed in London, were ludicrous; there was no endeavour to carry out the composer's directions even in the small matter of the lighting of the stage, and the chorus of younger pilgrims was wholly excised, so that the climax was dramatically absurd. "Lohengrin" was given on the 14th ult., with Madame Albani, who resumed her admirable impersonation of Elsa, supported by Mdlle. Giulia Ravogli and Messrs. Ancona and Edouard de Reszke. On the 21st ult. the "Flying Dutchman" was given with a very strong cast, Mr. Lassalle as the fatestricken Vanderdecken, Madame Albani as Senta, and Mr. Edouard de Reszke being vocally unimpeachable. But the staging was again absurd, and the chorus showed unmistakable signs of over-work. Therein, we suspect, lies the secret of most of the defects to which we have alluded. The remedy is not easy, and it cannot be otherwise than costly; but it must be applied, or Sir Augustus Harris will suffer in reputation as a caterer for the admirers of the lyric drama.

PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

DURING the month just ended this Society gave two Concerts and brought its eighty-first season to a successful close. At the first of the performances referred to, a personal attraction helped to fill the hall—the presence, that is to say, of Tschaikowsky and Saint-Saëns, those distinguished composers being in this country for the purpose of receiving an honorary degree at Cambridge. It was not the first appearance of either at a Philharmonic Concert, but their visits are not frequent, and a general desire to see and welcome them was both natural and right. The Russian master stood forward as, perhaps, the more significant figure of the two, not only because representing the newest influence upon European music—that of the Sclavonic race, but also because he brought with him a Symphony previously unheard in this country, and exemplifying much that is national in the composer's art. The work in question (key, F minor) might with entire propriety be known as the Russian Symphony, since three of its four movements are intensely characteristic in that sense, and idiomatic to a remarkable degree. The exception is, however, the movement which will everywhere meet with the greatest measure of popular favour. A delightfully sportive pizzicato, with short episodes for the wind, it went straight to the heart of the audience, who, applauding long and loudly, would have heard it again with pleasure. For the rest, the half-melancholy, half-bizarre features of Eastern art made an interesting study, and came with agreeable freshness to Western ears, although comprehended, it may be, but in part. Bustling, strenuous, at times extravagant, the first and last movements were more an appeal to the judgment than the emotions; but the Andantino came as an expression of pure feeling, and with this the Russian master may fairly be allowed to have best vindicated his country's music. The Symphony met with a very cordial reception—more so than any other work from the same pen, and at its close the composer stood higher than before in English estimation.

Saint-Saëns came as an executive rather than as a creative musician. He played his own Pianoforte Concerto in G minor, and conducted his symphonic piece, the "Rouet d'Omphale." Both works were known to the audience, who had no duty cast upon them but that of recognising the French musician's masterfulness in a double capacity, and of paying him all due tribute. This was done in the heartiest manner. Other works in the programme were Bennett's Overture "The Naiades," and a selection from "Tristan," the vocal part by Miss Macintyre. These were, of course, conducted by Dr. Mackenzie.

The final Concert of the season (15th ult.) had a personal interest likewise, for not only was Mr. Paderewski one of its heroes, but also Max Bruch, who conducted his favourite Violin Concerto in G minor, with Mr. Gorski as soloist, and introduced from his so-called secular Oratorio "Achilleus" three short orchestral pieces descriptive of the funeral games in honour of Patroclus. These pieces do not provoke much comment. They fulfil their purpose in the scheme of the work to which they belong, but, apart from it, are insignificant, and it was a pity that the German master could produce no novelty more important. The Concerto was finely rendered, Mr. Gorski playing exceedingly well, and it was in this familiar example of his art that the composer triumphed. Mr. Paderewski performed his own Concerto in A minor very brilliantly, receiving the kind of "ovation" to which he is now accustomed, and at which, if he have any sense of humour, he must often be amused. Haydn's beautiful Symphony in E flat opened the Concert and Sullivan's Imperial March closed it.

At the end of Dr. Mackenzie's first season with the Philharmonic bâton, it is an obvious duty to congratulate him upon the success of his labours. He has shown rapid improvement in the art of conducting purely orchestral music, and the outlook of the Society with him as musical chief is entirely bright.

CRYSTAL PALACE.

THE torrid heat having abated, there was nothing in the way of a large audience for the "Golden Legend" on the 24th ult., and the hopes of the managers, together with the wishes of those who admire Sir Arthur Sullivan's most successful production, were consequently gratified. Figures were not necessary to show that the audience was one of Festival dimensions, the appearance of the central transept and galleries giving proof sufficient on that score. It may be supposed that the huge orchestra was well occupied. The "London Contingent of the Handel Festival Choir" cannot, of course, fill it, or where would be the room for their provincial comrades? But it is possible to make an imposing show, and this was done, the "3,000" men and women in serried masses (many of the superior sex being in the orchestra) appealing to the eye almost as much as their singing did to the ear. Mr. Manns occupied his old place, and the entire machinery worked to perfection.

Compared with the performance of the "Golden Legend" in the same place six years ago, that of which we now speak was a decided improvement; but advance was naturally expected. The work is better known, and practice in its execution has given confidence. As a result of this, the occasions were very few indeed in which opportunity for fault-finding was given. A few unsteady moments occurred in the fugal part of the Epilogue, and there was a little uncertainty in the delivery of the Prologue, the unaccompanied voices, moreover, failed to sustain the pitch in the Evening Hymn. For the rest, all went well, the effect in certain cases being one of imposing grandeur. Even as we write, we seem to hear the sonorous male voices in "Nocte surgentes," and the perfect rendering of the melody in "O pure in heart." The performance generally, in point of fact, was a great choral success, a few drawbacks notwithstanding. With Madame Albani, Miss Marian Mackenzie, Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. Grice, and Mr. Henschel available, the solos were perfectly safe. Description here is unnecessary, and criticism finds little or nothing upon which to descant. It will be taken for granted that Madame Albani went heart and soul into her share of the work. Whenever this artist has a sympathetic task she knows no half-measures. Her habit is to err, if anything, in the opposite direction, and show enthusiasm in excess. This she did at the Crystal Palace, but who has the heart to blame a singer for "letting herself go"? This is, at any rate, better than the perfunctoriness which so largely prevails. The contralto soloist found her opportunity in Ursula's second air, and made good use of it; while Mr. Ben Davies more than ever asserted his value as a concert singer. A better rendering of the Prince's music could not be desired. It was technically finished and, at the same time, instinct with feeling. Mr. Davies fairly held his own with Madame Albani in the duet of the closing scene, and it may be that he was entitled to the chief honours of the occasion. There is no better exponent of the part of Lucifer than Mr. Henschel, while the little Mr. Grice had to do as the Forester was well done. Mr. Manns had no difficulty with his army of executants. He controlled them firmly, and they answered to his touch like the well-disciplined troops they are. The attendance, according to official returns, was 19,545.

RICHTER CONCERTS.

THAT the success of these admirable Concerts shows no sign of waning was made plain by the aspect of St. James's Hall on the evening of the 5th ult., and, more still, by the greeting which Dr. Richter's appearance called forth. We are glad of this, because the most precious qualities of Richter's conducting are precisely those least conspicuous in orchestral conductors generally, and they are qualities which, in the interests of interpreters and listeners alike, cannot too often be placed in evidence. We refer more particularly to the perfect ease with which transitions are effected from any one degree to another between extremes of force; to the wonderful sense of freedom produced by slight and almost imperceptible changes of speed, always so made as to give prominence to the characteristic rhythm and accentuation of each musical phrase, and even, on occasion, of each bar; and finally to the admirable way in which the members of the orchestra have been trained to respond immediately to the least suggestion of their chief. We find less reason for satisfaction in the somewhat limited répertoire from which the programmes of these Concerts are selected, especially as the responsibility for this rests rather with the public than with the Concert-givers. On the occasion in question we had the C minor Symphony of Beethoven, Wagner's "Meistersinger" Overture and "Good Friday" music from "Parsifal," and Liszt's First Hungarian Rhapsody. Smetana's pretty and picturesque Symphonic Poem "Vltava," first heard in England at the Crystal Palace, March 5, 1881, had also a place in the scheme. It was welcome, though perhaps rather on account of comparative novelty than of any great impression produced.

At the second Concert, on the 12th ult., three Wagner Excerpts, Schumann's Symphony in B flat, and Fibich's not very interesting Overture to Vrchlicky's comedy "Une Nuit à Carlstein" made up the programme. The vocalist was Mr. Andrew Black, whose renderings of "Wotan's Abschied" and "Hagen's Wacht" showed much intelligence and sympathetic insight.

Cherubini opened the third Concert, on the 19th ult., with his Overture "Les Abencérrages," and Mozart closed it with his beautiful G minor Symphony. Between came the familiar "Tristan" selection, the closing scene from "Götterdämmerung"—Brunnhilde, Madame Nordica, whose skill and devotion in an arduous part were warmly recognised—and Goldmark's Overture to the "Prometheus Bound" of Æschylus, a piece of considerable power, significance, and melodic beauty, but the merit of which it would be unwise to assess after a single hearing, more especially as the composer has given no clue to his poetic intention further than may be derived from the title.

Notice of the fourth Concert must be reserved for our next issue.

THE NEW DOCTORS AT CAMBRIDGE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Unusual interest attached to the closing ceremonies of the Cambridge summer term from the musical point of view. The Cambridge University Musical Society attains its fiftieth anniversary in the present year, and the University authorities had prepared to celebrate the auspicious event by conferring honorary degrees on a number of representative foreign musicians. In the list as originally drawn up, the names of Verdi and Brahms were included, but the illustrious Italian master felt obliged to decline the proffered honour on the score of the fatigue which a journey to England would entail on an octogenarian; while Brahms's rooted distaste for public functions once more stood in the way of his acceptance. Grieg had signified his intention to attend, but was unfortunately prevented by serious illness from carrying out his resolve. Failing Verdi, an admirable substitute was found in his gifted collaborator, Signor Boïto. Max Bruch worthily upheld the honour of Germany; while MM. Camille Saint-Saëns and Tschaikowsky were admirable representatives of France and Russia.

The degrees were conferred on the 13th ult., but on the afternoon of the previous day a most interesting and brilliant Jubilee Concert was given, under the auspices of the Cambridge University Musical Society, at the Guildhall. The four eminent foreigners were all represented in the programme, and either conducted or, as in the case of M. Saint-Saëns, took part in the execution of their works. The hall was crowded, and many distinguished leaders of the profession were observable in the audience. After the proceedings had been loyally and suitably prefaced by the National Anthem, Herr Max Bruch came forward, amid hearty applause, to direct an important excerpt from his "Odysseus." The "Banquet with the Phæacians" was the scene chosen, and with Mr. and Mrs. Henschel, Miss Brema, and Mr. Plunket Greene as soloists, a fine orchestra, and the excellent choir of the Cambridge University Musical Society at his disposal, it is not to be wondered at that the composer secured an admirable interpretation of his scholarly and interesting music. Then came the turn of M. Saint-Saëns, who introduced his Fantasia for pianoforte and orchestra, "Africa," brilliantly written for the solo instrument, and admirably scored for the orchestra. The composer rendered a masterly account of the pianoforte part, Dr. Stanford conducting with his wonted ability, and the heartiest enthusiasm was manifested at the close of a very fine performance. Signor Boïto followed with the Prologue from his "Mefistofele," the weird romanticism of which loses not a little by the absence of scenic accessories. Still, the impression created was very remarkable. Signor Boïto's modest, yet distinguished bearing commends him to a British audience, and the originality and beauty of his music is undeniable. Mr. Henschel gave a most incisive rendering of the solo, the orchestra and chorus responded loyally to the indications of the composer, and the splendid Finale evoked tumultuous applause, again renewed as Signor Boïto returned to bow his acknowledgments to audience and executants. Fourthly, M. Tschaikowsky conducted his Symphonic Poem "Francesca da Rimini," a very remarkable and masterly attempt to depict in sound the fate of the ill-starred lovers as described in Canto V. of Dante's "Inferno." The resources of the modern orchestra are here displayed in their fullest variety and power, and the "cruel winds" with which Francesca and her lover are perpetually buffeted form the basis of a tone-picture of remarkable power and ingenuity. The Concert concluded with Grieg's "Peer Gynt" Suite, admirably played under Dr. Stanford's guidance, and with the last-named composer's setting for chorus and orchestra of Mr. Swinburne's Chicago Ode "East to West." At the close of the Concert Dr. Stanford, who now resigns the Conductorship of the Cambridge University Musical Society, after twenty years of invaluable services, was most heartily cheered. At the dinner given in the evening in honour of the distinguished guests there was some excellent speaking from Dr. Stanford and M. Saint-Saëns, and at the Conversazione which followed, the esteem in which Dr. Stanford is held was agreeably testified by the presentation of a handsome set of silver candlesticks.

On the morning of the 13th ult. the recitation of the prize poems was preceded by the ceremony of conferring the Honorary Degrees in Law, Letters, and Music. After the Maharajah of Bhownagar, Lords Herschell and Roberts, Professor Zupitza, and Mr. Standish O'Grady had been disposed of, it fell to the lot of Dr. Sandys to introduce the four famous foreign musicians, who met with a very cordial reception, as, all beautiful in their gowns of cream and gold, they advanced in turn before the Vice-Chancellor. M. Saint-Saëns was described as "the son of a neighbouring race, who, endowed with an almost incredible memory, had given striking proof in his own person that the Muses were the daughters of Mnemosyne." The public orator then dwelt on his versatility, his achievements in the domains of sacred music and of opera, his subtlety as a critic, and his passion for travel.

Of Dr. Max Bruch, who was born at Cologne and wrote an early opera on the subject of the "Lorelei," Dr. Sandys remarked that he had admirably celebrated in song the fateful waters of his natal stream. Allusion was also made to his "Song of the Bell," "Arminius," "Frithjofsaga," "Normannenzug," "Salamis," "Achilleus," and "Odysseus."

In introducing M. Tschaikowsky, the public orator laid stress on his having been the pupil of Rubinstein, and referred to his visits to Switzerland and Italy—he might have added America. But wherever he went, M. Tschaikowsky found his chief delight in the popular songs of his native country. His compositions happily reflected the Slavonic temperament with all its fiery exaltation resting on a basis of languid melancholy. Finally, Signor Arrigo Boïto was introduced as one on whom the Muses had bestowed the two-fold gift of poetry and music. His patriotism had been proved in the field when he fought with Garibaldi, while he had repeatedly shown his keen appreciation of the merits of composers of other lands. The expectations formed of his "Nerone" and "Orestiade" were thus happily expressed: "He will, I have no doubt, admit that he has kept his 'Nero' locked up too long in his desk; there is also, if I mistake not, a 'scriptus,' 'necdum finitus Orestes.' The brilliant success of his earlier works affords a happy augury of the fame he is destined one day to win from these unpublished compositions." It only remains to be added that after the ceremony of conferring the degrees, M. Saint-Saëns gave an Organ Recital in Trinity College Chapel. The eminent French musician not only played Bach's Prelude in E flat and his own clever Fantaisie in the same key, but also delighted his hearers with two masterly improvisations, one of which took the form of a fully developed fugue.

PIANOFORTE RECITALS.

The Recital of Madame Berthe Marx, at St. James's Hall, on May 27, may pass with brief record. Beethoven's Sonata in F minor (Op. 57), the "Appassionata," was the principal feature in the programme; but the delicacy and purity of style which characterise the French artist were displayed to greater advantage in some clavecin pieces by Couperin, Daquin, and Rameau, three of Mendelssohn's "Lieder ohne Worte," Bach's Preludes and Fugues in C minor and D major, from the first book of "Das Wohltemperirte Clavier," and minor pieces by Schubert, Schumann, Chopin, Weber, and other composers.

Among the crowd of Recital-givers, M. Diémer was overlooked last month, but as he won very slight favour from London amateurs the omission is not of much consequence. At his first performance, on May 17, he offended the small audience by a ridiculous transcription of Mozart's Overture to "Die Zauberflöte," and his manner of rendering clavecin pieces by Couperin, Daquin, and Rameau was too modern to give satisfaction to those who study antiquarian music for the keyboard. On the other hand, excellent technique was displayed in Beethoven's Variations in C minor and Chopin's Fantasia in F minor (Op. 49). At his second Recital, on May 29, M. Diémer gave a very French performance of Schumann's Etudes Symphoniques, and his interpretation of pieces by Chopin lacked distinction and poetic feeling. As regards technique, however, his playing at both Recitals was well-nigh faultless, and this fact goes far to account for the great esteem in which he is held in Paris as a teacher.

On May 31 Miss Margarethe Eussert gave a second Recital at the Princes' Hall, and was heard to advantage in some minor pieces by Scarlatti and D'Albert, but was unsatisfactory in her Chopin selections, and seemed nervous in Beethoven's Variations in C minor and Bach's Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue, both of which have been heard too frequently this season.

On Friday, the 2nd ult., little Raoul Koczalski made his appearance in St. James's Hall, and his playing more than confirmed the striking impression he made at his first, and to a less extent at his second Recital at Princes' Hall. He gave a highly finished rendering of Beethoven's early Sonata in C minor (Op. 10, No. 1), his playing of the slow movement being marked by extraordinary poetic feeling. Equally, if not more impressive was his interpretation of Chopin's Nocturne in D flat, and the Marche Funèbre, though the latter was taken at an unusually slow pace. Other pieces by Mendelssohn, Schubert, Tschaikowsky, Moszkowski, Paderewski, and himself were also played with consummate excellence, leaving out of account the tender age of the executant.

Four days later, that is to say on the 6th ult., the platform of St. James's Hall was occupied by another infant prodigy, but this time a little girl named Frida Simonson, concerning whom there had been much of the puff preliminary. Having amused the audience by her curious little bow, which was repeated at frequent intervals, she seated herself at her instrument and went through a number of selections, on the whole well adapted to her present physical means; and especially in some harpsichord pieces by Bach, Handel, Scarlatti, and other composers she displayed a remarkably pure singing touch and wonderful neatness in execution. Obviously, however, she has not yet grasped the spirit of modern music, and she should be promptly withdrawn from public life and her unquestionable talents permitted to develop in a natural and healthy manner.

A performance of a more legitimate character was given by Miss Fanny Davies on the following afternoon. It is always a treat to hear the young English pianist in Schumann's music, for with the exception, perhaps, of Mr. Leonard Borwick, she more thoroughly enters into the spirit of the German master than any other executant now before the public. Her interpretation of the beautiful "Kreisleriana" on this occasion was remarkable at once for intellectual strength and poetic feeling. Six of Chopin's Preludes, including some numbers not frequently heard, were rendered with equal finish but less expression. Mendelssohn's Prelude and Fugue in B minor from Op. 35 and several smaller pieces by other composers were included in the programme, among them being a very charming little sketch called "La Gondola," by L. Heritte Viardot. Miss Marguerite Hall contributed songs by Beethoven, Max Bruch, Goring Thomas, and Brahms with much artistic effect.

Miss Emma Barnett's annual Recital took place on the following afternoon, at the Princes' Hall. Her rendering of Beethoven's Sonata in A (Op. 101) and Schumann's "Papillons" (Op. 2) was not remarkable; but special mention should be made of a new series of "Characteristic Studies," with appropriate titles, by her brother, Mr. J. F. Barnett. These are agreeable little sketches, useful for practice, and piquant and melodious. Madame Clara Samuell was happy in her choice of English songs and in their execution.

On the 9th ult. the Princes' Hall was occupied by Mr. Edgar Hulland, a sound and conscientious, if not specially brilliant executant. He displayed excellent technique in Beethoven's difficult Variations and Fugue in E flat, and also in Rubinstein's pretentious but not very satisfactory Sonata for violin and pianoforte in B minor (Op. 98), in which he was associated with Mr. Emile Sauret. Smaller pieces by various composers were included in the programme.

Mr. Buonamici, the well-known Florentine pianist, who has been heard here on several previous occasions, gave a Recital at Princes' Hall on the 13th ult. Mr. Buonamici, it will be remembered, is a pupil of Liszt and bears the impress of the master in a remarkably delicate touch. This was exhibited in Beethoven's "Waldstein" Sonata, the Rondo in G from Op. 51, and three Minuets; and was shown to still greater advantage in some of Chopin's Studies and pieces by Raff.

Mr. Stojowski, who gave a Recital on the 16th ult., first appeared here two years ago, but then he did not attract much attention. During the interim, however, some of his compositions have won favour and this may account for the unusually large audience that gathered in St. James's Hall. It cannot be said that Mr. Stojowski's playing showed much individuality of style and expression. The touch was light and delicate and the execution on the whole neat and refined, but the manner of performance was somewhat frigid and impassive. The programme was rather peculiarly constituted, prominence being given to Slavonic composers such as Paderewski, Tschaikowsky, Zelenski, and Moszkowski; but it was certainly not less interesting on that account. The only piece of any length, however, was a Sonata in G for pianoforte and violin, from Mr. Stojowski's own pen, in which he was assisted by his compatriot, Mr. Gorski. It is a bright and animated work in three movements, of which the last, a theme with variations, is the cleverest, Slavonic character being perceptible throughout in the phraseology. Some smaller pieces, including three numbers of a set of Danses Humoresques (Op. 12), also pleased greatly.

In respect of public appreciation, the one Recital of Mr. Paderewski, which took place on the 20th ult., ought to command special attention; but there was nothing in the programme to which lengthy criticism would be applicable. The enormous audience which filled St. James's Hall from end to end was drawn together simply by the magic of the Polish artist's name, and it is only fair to add that he never more fully justified the confidence musical amateurs repose in him than on the present occasion. The extravagance which marred his efforts when he first appeared in London is no longer perceptible, and if there was a fault in his playing on the present occasion, it was the accentuated delicacy of his manipulation in Beethoven's Sonata in E flat (Op. 31, No. 3) and other numbers in which more masculine vigour was desirable. Schumann's "Papillons" were delivered with incomparable piquancy of touch and general execution, and there was a charming sense of individuality in the rendering of some small Chopin pieces, including the Study in F (Op. 25) and the Waltz in A flat (Op. 34), the latter being warmly encored. At the close of the Recital there was a prolonged demonstration, which resulted in seven recalls and two or three encores. Mr. Paderewski is certainly the most popular among pianists at present before the public.

A few words of approval may be given to Miss Verne, formerly known as Miss Mathilde Wurm, who gave a Recital at St. James's Hall on the 23rd ult. She played in a sound and conscientious manner, if with insufficient warmth of expression, Schumann's Fantasia in C, various minor pieces by Chopin, Saint-Saëns, Liszt, Weber, L. Heritte Viardot, and Bach's "Italian" Concerto, being at her best in the last-named work.

On Saturday afternoon, May 27, Mr. J. H. Bonawitz gave a successful Recital at the Princes' Hall, the earnest musician being perhaps at his best in Mozart's second Fantasia in C minor, which he played with all the delicacy and finish which the music demands. Beethoven's early and Mozart-like Sonata in E flat (Op. 7) was also played with needful refinement, and the programme included Schumann's Fantasia in C (Op. 17) and works by Chopin, Weber, and Liszt. Variety was afforded by the four musicianly and pleasing new songs and a vocal duet from the pen of Mr. Bonawitz, which received due justice from Miss Sylvia Wardell and Mr. Arthur Oswald.

CHAPEL ROYAL CONCERT.

Another blow has been struck at precedent by the Concert given on the 19th ult., in the presence, amongst others, of the Princess of Wales and her two unmarried daughters, in the Picture Gallery of Bridgewater House, by the Children and Gentlemen of the Chapel Royal, St. James's. This unwonted step proved highly successful, a result in some measure due to the circumstance that the programme was made up of works by composers either in the past or the present connected with the Chapel Royal. For more than one reason there was warrant for commencing with "My bonny lass she smileth," by Thomas Morley, who was a Gentleman of the Chapel Royal so far back as 1592. John Stafford Smith's "Return, blest days," was finely given by Messrs. Taylor, Gawthrop, Guy, and Shepley, and the commanding genius of Henry Purcell was represented by "Arise, ye subterranean winds," sung with dramatic force by Mr. W. H. Brereton, who was vainly asked to repeat this masterly effusion. W. Beale's glee "To a kiss" was sung, and the honoured name of Sir John Goss was bracketed with "There is beauty on the mountain." Examples of living composers were afforded by Sir Arthur Sullivan's "I heard the nightingale" and "Brightly dawns our wedding day" ("The Mikado"), in Mr. Fred. Bevan's ballad "But one," and in two elegant songs by Dr. William Creser (present Organist of the Chapel Royal), "Shall I, wasting in despair?" and "Heart of me, why do you sigh?" The last-named musician officiated at the pianoforte at this exceedingly interesting Concert.

MUSICAL GUILD.

The third Concert, given at Kensington Town Hall, on May 30, drew the largest audience which we have ever seen at these Concerts, and the applause was as frequent and as hearty as could have been wished by all interested in the welfare of this deserving Society. Professor Stanford's splendid Pianoforte Quintet, one of his most masterly and enjoyable efforts, opened the programme, and was played by the composer, Miss Isabella Donkersley, Messrs. Wallace Sutcliffe, Alfred Hobday, and Paul Ludwig with exhilarating vigour and spirit. Of the four movements the strikingly original Scherzo (a remarkable movement) met with the greatest applause, the audience evidently wishing to hear it a second time. Why is such a fine specimen of contemporary chamber music as this Quintet not more frequently performed? Miss Ethel Sharpe played the "Lullaby" and No. 3 from Brahms's recently-published Intermezzi for pianoforte (Op. 117) with exquisite refinement and so as to reveal yet new beauties in these delicious pieces. Mr. Edward Ingham, an able flautist, was heard in Saint-Saëns's Romance, a charming trifle, and a finished performance of Mozart's String Quintet, led by Miss Winifred Holiday, brought the Concert to a close. Mr. Henschel's beautiful new Vocal Quartets (Op. 51) were sung by Miss Nancy McIntosh, Mrs. Lee, Messrs. H. McKinley and Kennerley Rumford, of whom the first-named lady especially distinguished herself by the intense expression she put into the music.

At the fourth and last Concert, on the 13th ult., Spohr's melodious Septet for pianoforte, strings, and wind, received a very fair interpretation, Miss Annie Fry being excellent at the pianoforte. Dvorák's Terzetto for two violins and viola, a trio in miniature, has an interesting Larghetto and Scherzo; the other two movements are less striking. Messrs. A. Bent, Stephenson, and Hobday did much justice to the piece. Miss Annie Grimson, Miss Winifred Holiday, and Mr. Paul Ludwig played Schumann's Pianoforte Trio in D minor in very good style, and Miss Nancy McIntosh sang songs by Handel, Massenet, and Henschel very agreeably. There was a very good attendance, and we are pleased to find that the Guild will resume its Concerts in the winter.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

We have to chronicle only two Students' Concerts this month, and at each we heard performances of quite exceptional interest. The Chamber Concert, on the 8th ult., opened with Beethoven's "Storm" Quintet for strings (Op. 29), very artistically played by Misses Jessie Grimson, Lilian Wright, Messrs. Leonard Fowles, William Ackroyd, and Thomas Hill. Miss Marie Motto distinguished herself greatly by her rendering, alternately spirited and expressive, of the second book of Max Bruch's charming Swedish Dances for the violin, and Miss Blanche Wyatt sang Schubert's song "Der Hirt auf dem Felsen" tunefully and fluently, though somewhat coldly. The chief interest of the Concert, however, lay in the first appearance of Mr. Albert Archdeacon, a young singer of the very highest promise. We speak advisedly when we say that we have never heard a more remarkable performance at any Concert than his singing of Wolfram's "Address to the Evening Star," from "Tannhäuser." His voice is of most beautiful quality, his intonation absolutely perfect, and he sings with an ease and a finish and a masterful expression which are quite astonishing in a student. Mr. Archdeacon should have a brilliant future before him.

On the 16th ult. an Orchestral Concert was given in St. James's Hall, when the programme included Schumann's "Manfred" Overture (perhaps the most striking proof of how nearly its author in his most inspired mood approached Beethoven), Bach's Clavier Concerto in E, neatly played by Miss Katharine M. Ramsay, Bruch's Third Violin Concerto (Op. 58), Berlioz's exquisitely orchestrated song "The Spectre of the Rose," from his "Nuits d'été," and Beethoven's Romantic Symphony (No. 7). Although not quite equal to the best which we have heard at the College, the performances of the orchestra, and more especially of the strings, were distinguished by precision of attack, careful phrasing, and admirable spirit. The second violins, although numerically stronger than the firsts, were much inferior to them in tone, which fact became very noticeable in the imitative passages in the Finale of the Symphony. This should be remedied on future occasions. Of Miss Grimson's performance of Bruch's Concerto we have spoken on a former occasion; it is in every respect deserving of very high commendation; her technique especially is excellent. Miss Clara Butt's singing of Berlioz's lovely song was worthy of her rapidly-grown and well-deserved reputation. It could hardly have been improved upon. Professor Holmes conducted.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

The summer Orchestral and Choral Concert of the Royal Academy of Music took place at St. James's Hall, on the 19th ult., under the direction of Dr. A. C. Mackenzie. The principal piece in the programme was Dvorák's beautiful and original Mass in D, which was given for the first time in London. We spoke of the work at some length when it was produced at the Crystal Palace in March last, and need only add that a second hearing more than confirms the impression then made of its merits, and the masterly way in which the composer has gained effects with rigid economy of means. That this last quality will be fully appreciated by choral societies goes without saying. The solo parts were taken by a semi-chorus of sixteen voices in accordance with Dvorák's directions, and the general performance showed that the Mass had been carefully rehearsed. A miscellaneous selection followed, the most conspicuous feature being a Serenade for strings by Volckmann, which was admirably played by the ensemble class. Two movements from Goetz's fine Quintet in C minor (Op. 16) brought the Concert to an effective conclusion.

PROFESSOR VILLIERS STANFORD'S NEW MASS.

THE Festival of St. Philip Neri, at the Brompton Oratory, was made the occasion of the first performance of Professor Villiers Stanford's Mass in G (Op. 46), written in December last, and dedicated "To Thomas Wingham, in sincere regard." Excellently performed by a large choir and a full orchestra, supplemented by the fine organ, at which Mr. d'Evry, the recently-appointed organist, presided with admirable skill; and associated with the gorgeous and impressive ritual of the Church of Rome, the devotional spirit of the music, which is its chief characteristic, was most happily accentuated. The expressive settings of the Kyrie and Gloria, although naturally differing in character, are alike remarkable for repose of tonality, which imparts a solidity and restfulness to the music admirably in accordance with the spirit of the text. The Credo, the most elaborate portion of the Mass, contains much clever contrapuntal writing. At the words "Et incarnatus" the vocal parts are taken up by solo voices; the passage "Passus et sepultus est" is set with due solemnity, and a dignified fugal subject is introduced with the words "Et vitam." The Sanctus might serve as a model for modern church music, and the Benedictus includes an effective quartet. The scoring not only reveals the hand of a master, but also that of one who knows how to support and help the vocal parts. The soloists were Master Folkhard and Messrs. Russon, Pearson, and Tabb. Mr. Barclay Jones, the musical director of the Oratory, conducted.

PLAINSONG AND MEDIÆVAL SOCIETY.

THE two most recent Lectures delivered before the Members of the above Society were of considerable interest. At the first, on May 25, Mr. Abdy Williams discoursed upon the rhythm of plainsong; and at the second the Rev. Howard Frere read a paper on plainsong hymnody. Mr. Abdy Williams said that in the earliest days of plainsong, rhythm was as important a factor as it was now in mensural music. When, however, men began to sing in parts, the delicate accentuation of the words, which formed the rhythm, became less regarded, and ultimately, with the development of counterpoint, the cantus firmus was so slowly sung that all rhythm in it disappeared. There were two classes of rhythm—viz., strict, as used in poetry and mensural music; and free, as used in prose or prose-poetry, like the Psalms. In all rhythm it was of the first importance to secure a correct pronunciation of the words allied to plainsong. There were two kinds of plainsong—viz., syllabic, in which each syllable was sung to a single note, and which entirely depended on the accent of the words for its rhythm; and melismatic, in which groups of notes were sung to single syllables. The rhythm of the latter greatly depended on the music, the notation of which was intended to be a kind of pictorial representation of how each group of notes was to be sung.

The Rev. Howard Frere began his Lecture, delivered on the 22nd ult., by some pertinent remarks upon the difference between mediæval and modern ideas concerning the subject of hymns. Metrical hymnody in the West entered under the authority of St. Ambrose, who, we were told, adopted it as a means of supporting the failing courage of his followers against the persecutions at Milan by the Arians. Subsequently St. Benet incorporated "Ambrosiani" into the course of services which he planned for his monks; but the conservatism of the city of Rome refused to admit them into the church service until the end of the twelfth century. When admitted, each Breviary had its fixed set of hymns, which recurred every year. The earliest melodies would seem to have been very simple in character, but later they became more elaborate and contained groups of notes sung to one syllable. They seemed to have been written on a different principle to that of the Gregorian chant—i.e., with more regard to the terminal note, which most frequently recurred; while in the Gregorian chant the dominant note was the most dwelt upon.

At both Lectures an interesting series of musical illustrations were well sung by the Plainsong Choir, under the direction of Mr. Abdy Williams.

MUSICAL ASSOCIATION.

AT the final Meeting this season of the members of the Musical Association, at which Sir John Stainer presided, the Rev. Francis L. Cohen read an exceptionally interesting paper on the "Ancient musical traditions of the Synagogue." Mr. Cohen is a Jewish Priest, and consequently has been trained in the traditional method of cantillation, which he said had been accurately transmitted from father to son since the time it was originally introduced into Hebrew worship. Since the days when the Temple stood pre-eminent for its elaborate and highly organised musical service, there had been ingrained in the Jewish nature an affection for melody; and continuous contemporary testimony in Hebrew literature bore witness to the extent to which the Jew had delighted to associate his daily worship, and even his literary exercises, with some form of vocal tunefulness. As tradition required the celebrant of the services to utter every word with the singing voice, it was found expedient from an early date to employ a professional reader or precentor. Thus, down to the present time, there had been a sequence of specialists in Hebrew melody. This implied a faithful preservation of the older chants, which had always been melodiously definite. For the object of the paper the lecturer rejected all four-part choral music which belonged to the present generation. He also set aside all melodic passages which were obviously but echoes of modern tonality; also tunes set to texts of measured rhythm, since Hebrew verses measurable by rhythmic alternation of stress and non-stress were, at the very earliest, the product of mediæval Arab influence. For a similar reason, almost the whole of the traditional music of that important section of the Jews which long dwelt in Spain was set aside, its Moorish origin being apparent. There, however, still remained a large quantity of ancient Jewish music of fascinating interest. The oldest vocal traditions of the Synagogue were enshrined in the Neginoth, or accentual cantillations of Scripture. These Jewish systems of declamation were far brighter and more expressive than any other ancient cantillation. There was little doubt but that the Jewish cantillation existed in a highly developed form long before any notation for it was invented. The accents themselves—the mere dots and strokes—were probably evolved by the Massoretic school of Tiberias, about the seventh century. To a certain extent they resembled the signs of the ancient Gregorian Ritual books, but their functions were more complex. They marked the tone-syllable of each word, indicated a most delicately-shaded syntactical punctuation, and denoted a chant which, with scrupulous fidelity, showed the mutual relation of the words of the text. The signs were some thirty in number. In all essentials Hebrew music, in the days of the second Temple, was founded on the same Asiatic systems as was the Greek music of the same period; and there was good reason for the assumption that the Psalms were chanted in the Temple in a form tonally parallel to the Plainsong of the Western Church, and more so to the Antiphons of the Byzantine Greeks. It by no means followed, however, that these churches had inherited the authentic Temple traditions. Gevaert had proved that the Christian chant first came into existence in Asia Minor and passed to the West by way of Antioch, Byzantium, and Rome; and it was important to remember that the Plainsong was originated and developed by men avowedly hostile to any form of Judaising.

The interest of the Lecture was very greatly enhanced by the numerous musical illustrations of the ancient traditional cantillations which were admirably sung by Mrs. Cohen, herself the daughter of one of the most eminent Hazanim or Precentors of the day. The music, which largely partook of the nature of recitative, was remarkable for its florid Oriental character and the fidelity and peculiar expressiveness with which it followed the varying sentiment of the text.

LONDON GREGORIAN CHORAL ASSOCIATION.

THE twenty-third anniversary Festival of this Society was held in St. Paul's Cathedral, on the 8th ult. According to the printed statement, the objects for which it was formed are to circulate information on the subject of the Ancient Plainsong, to amend the actual performance of the authorised music of the Church, and, by well-conducted services, to exemplify the various portions of the Plainsong, as set to our English Book of Common Prayer. It is further said that the restoration of Plainsong is to be regarded as an addition to the resources of musical art as applied to public worship, and by no means opposed to its true development. All this is perfectly laudable, and the service book on the occasion of the recent Festival gave sufficient evidence of the liberal views held by the Association. The first processional hymn was "Come, love and might," the melody from "Les Principaux Chants Liturgiques," and the second, "Let God arise," words by the Rev. Dr. Littledale and music by Mr. A. H. Browne. The Psalms and Canticles, with their several antiphons, were, of course, sung to Gregorian Tones; but the Anthem was Sir George Elvey's bright and distinctly Anglican composition "Praise the Lord and call upon His Name." Two more Gregorian hymns and one more Anglican completed the music of the service. The effect of the choir of 1,000 voices, reinforced by wind instruments and supported by the vast congregation, was very impressive, and the general precision of the large force testified to the musicianly care exercised by the Organist, Dr. Warwick Jordan.

THE "GOLDEN LEGEND" AND "THE REVENGE" AT SALISBURY.

Of the many important Concerts arranged and carried out by the Rev. E. H. Moberly, that which took place in Salisbury, on the 16th ult., was the most important. Encouraged by the success of the great "Elijah" Concert in that city in 1891, Mr. Moberly decided to repeat the experiment and give this year a performance of Sir Arthur Sullivan's "Golden Legend" and Professor Stanford's "Revenge" on festival lines. The Corn Exchange, the only sufficiently large building available, was once more turned into a concert-room and an organ specially erected for the occasion. The services of a complete and thoroughly efficient orchestra, numbering nearly ninety players, with Mr. A. Burnett as leader, were secured, and, together with a chorus 350 strong, consisting of the Test Valley and Avon Vale Musical Societies (organisations established and directed by Mr. Moberly), the Sarum Choral Society, and a few members of the Bristol Festival Choir, formed a force capable, under skilful direction, of great things. That Mr. Moberly had made the most of his material was evident from the performance, the "Golden Legend" being given in a manner worthy of the work. The performance of the Prologue was realistic in the extreme, the difficult orchestral passages being played to perfection, and the singing of the chorus highly effective. Throughout the cantata this excellence was maintained. The band was in every way equal to the demands made upon it, playing with refinement and confidence. The choral work was deserving of the warmest praise, and it is safe to assert that nothing so fine has been heard in Salisbury before. The tone of the voices was excellent, and the clear enunciation of the words a feature worthy of high commendation. Admirable, too, were the solo vocalists, Miss Margaret Macintyre, Madame Belle Cole, Mr. Ben Davies, and Mr. Watkin Mills. It would be difficult to imagine anything more beautiful than the rendering of the music allotted to Elsie and Prince Henry by Miss Macintyre and Mr. Davies. Madame Cole's noble voice told well in the part of Ursula, and Mr. Mills gave a thoroughly characteristic reading of Lucifer's music.

The performance of "The Revenge" was of an equally high order. The declamatory choral parts were given with fine effect, and the important orchestral writing could not have had a better rendering. There was great enthusiasm at the close, and the Conductor (Mr. Moberly) received a well-deserved ovation from the immense audience which crowded the spacious building.

It should be added that the Rev. H. W. Carpenter played the specially-built organ, which, unfortunately, proved to be an instrument wholly unworthy of the occasion.

ENGLISH MUSIC IN LEIPZIG.

(From a Correspondent.)

On Friday, May 26, took place the first Concert of the newly-founded Sterndale Bennett Society. Only works of English composers were given, the performers being of British or Colonial nationality. The Concert opened with Sterndale Bennett's Trio in A major (Op. 26) for pianoforte, violin, and violoncello, and ended with a Sonata in G major for pianoforte and violin, composed for the occasion by Mr. E. Hutcheson. Between these two works several songs—viz., "Let me dream again" and "The Lost Chord" by Sullivan, and "Absent, yet present" by Maud V. White, as well as the following pianoforte soli: No. 1 of Three Musical Sketches, "The Lake" (Op. 10), by Sterndale Bennett, and a Nocturne in A major by J. Field—were performed. The Trio has a fresh and healthy tone throughout, and, in spite of its brevity, shows remarkable completeness and fulness. The second movement and the Finale (Allegro fermo) especially took the attention of the audience. The performance, which was most praiseworthy throughout, was in the hands of Miss Jessie Middleton (pianoforte), Mr. E. Jenkinson (violin), and Mr. T. Jackson (violoncello). The pianoforte solos were rendered by Miss Middleton, who proved herself possessor of a well grounded technique; but the Nocturne was played in rather too dry a style; this otherwise talented young lady evidently did not enter quite deeply enough into the spirit of this beautiful composition. The Sonata was a highly interesting work, boldly constructed, and worked out in a most complete manner, though the pianoforte part in certain places was somewhat overburdened. The young and gifted composer played the pianoforte part, which bristles with technical difficulties, with great finish. Mr. Jenkinson (violin) efficiently seconded him. The songs were rendered by Miss E. Walker of Dresden, who possesses a very sympathethic voice and whose soulful delivery was a real and undisturbed enjoyment. Mr. Hutcheson accompanied most discreetly. The whole Concert was received by the large audience with well deserved applause, which was at times most enthusiastic. The fast growing Society may look back upon its first Concert with pride. May it have many such successes in the future!

OBITUARY.

We regret to announce the death of Major George Arthur Crawford, on the 9th ult., at his residence, Arpley Lodge, Sevenoaks, aged sixty-five years. The deceased was well known in the musical world, especially in connection with sacred music and hymnology. He was the author of several articles in The Musical Times, notably of a review of "Clement Marot et Le Psautier Huguenot," by M. Douen. He did good work both in Sir George Grove's "Dictionary of Music" and in Mr. Julian's "Dictionary of Hymnology," in which, in addition to several articles and general help in revision, he compiled the elaborate cross-reference index. He also compiled the biographical index in the "Irish Church Hymnal," which was the first and most perfect of its kind. He was a prominent member of the Musical Association. His wide knowledge and experience, combined with extreme thoroughness and accuracy, made his work especially valuable.

France has lost a distinguished singer in the baritone Jean Vital Ismaël Jammes—better known by his stage name Ismaël—who died recently at his villa, near Marseilles, in his sixty-seventh year. He was born at Agen on April 28, 1827. His parents being unable to pay for his musical education, he tramped to Bordeaux and thence to Nantes, earning his means of existence on the way as a "wandering minstrel." He became a member of the choir at the Grand Théâtre at Nantes, and there made his first appearance as a soloist. After singing in various towns, he was engaged by M. Carvalho for the Paris Théâtre Lyrique in 1863, where he created the part of Zurga in Bizet's "Pêcheurs de Perles." In 1871 he joined the Opéra Comique, of which he became a favourite and highly esteemed member. He retired some years ago.

At Budapest there has just died, in his eighty-fourth year, General Musikdirektor Franz Erkel, the Nestor of Hungarian musicians, and, after Liszt, the most distinguished and also one of the most popular composers of his country. He was the founder and, until a few years ago, the most successful writer of Hungarian National Opera, his principal works being "Hunyady Laszló," composed exactly fifty Seek ye the Lord.

ANTHEM FOR SOLO AND CHORUS.

Isaiah lv. 6, 7.

Composed by CHARLES BRADLEY.

London: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO., 1, Berners Street (W.), and 80 & 81, Queen Street (E.C.); also in New York.

Copyright, 1893, by Novello, Ewer and Co.

rall.
near, . . call ye up - on Him while He is near. . .
add reed.
rall.
pp
a tempo.
Ped.
Soprano.
p
Seek ye the Lord while He may be found, call ye up - on Him while Alto.
p
Seek ye the Lord while He may be . . found, call ye up - on Him while Tenor.
p
Seek ye the Lord while He may be found, call . . ye up - on Him . .
Bass.
p
Seek ye the Lord while He may be found, call ye up - on Him while
p
cres.
He is near, seek ye the Lord while . . He may be found,
cres.
He is near, seek ye the Lord while He . . may be found,
cres.
. . while He is near, seek ye the Lord while He may be found,
cres.
He is near, seek ye the Lord, while He may be found, . .
Gt. Org. mf
Ped. 16-ft. open.

call ye up - on Him while He is near, . . call ye up - on Him while call ye up - on Him while He is near, . . call ye up - on Him while call ye up - on Him while He is near, . . call ye up - on Him while call ye up - on Him while He is near, . . call ye up - on Him while mf
dim.
Andante maestoso.
pp
He is near. . .
Let the wick - ed for - sake . . his
Let the wick - ed for - sake his
Let the wick - ed for - sake his Let the wick - ed for - sake his mf accel.
way, . . and th'un - righ - teous man his thoughts; . .
and let and let him re - ff
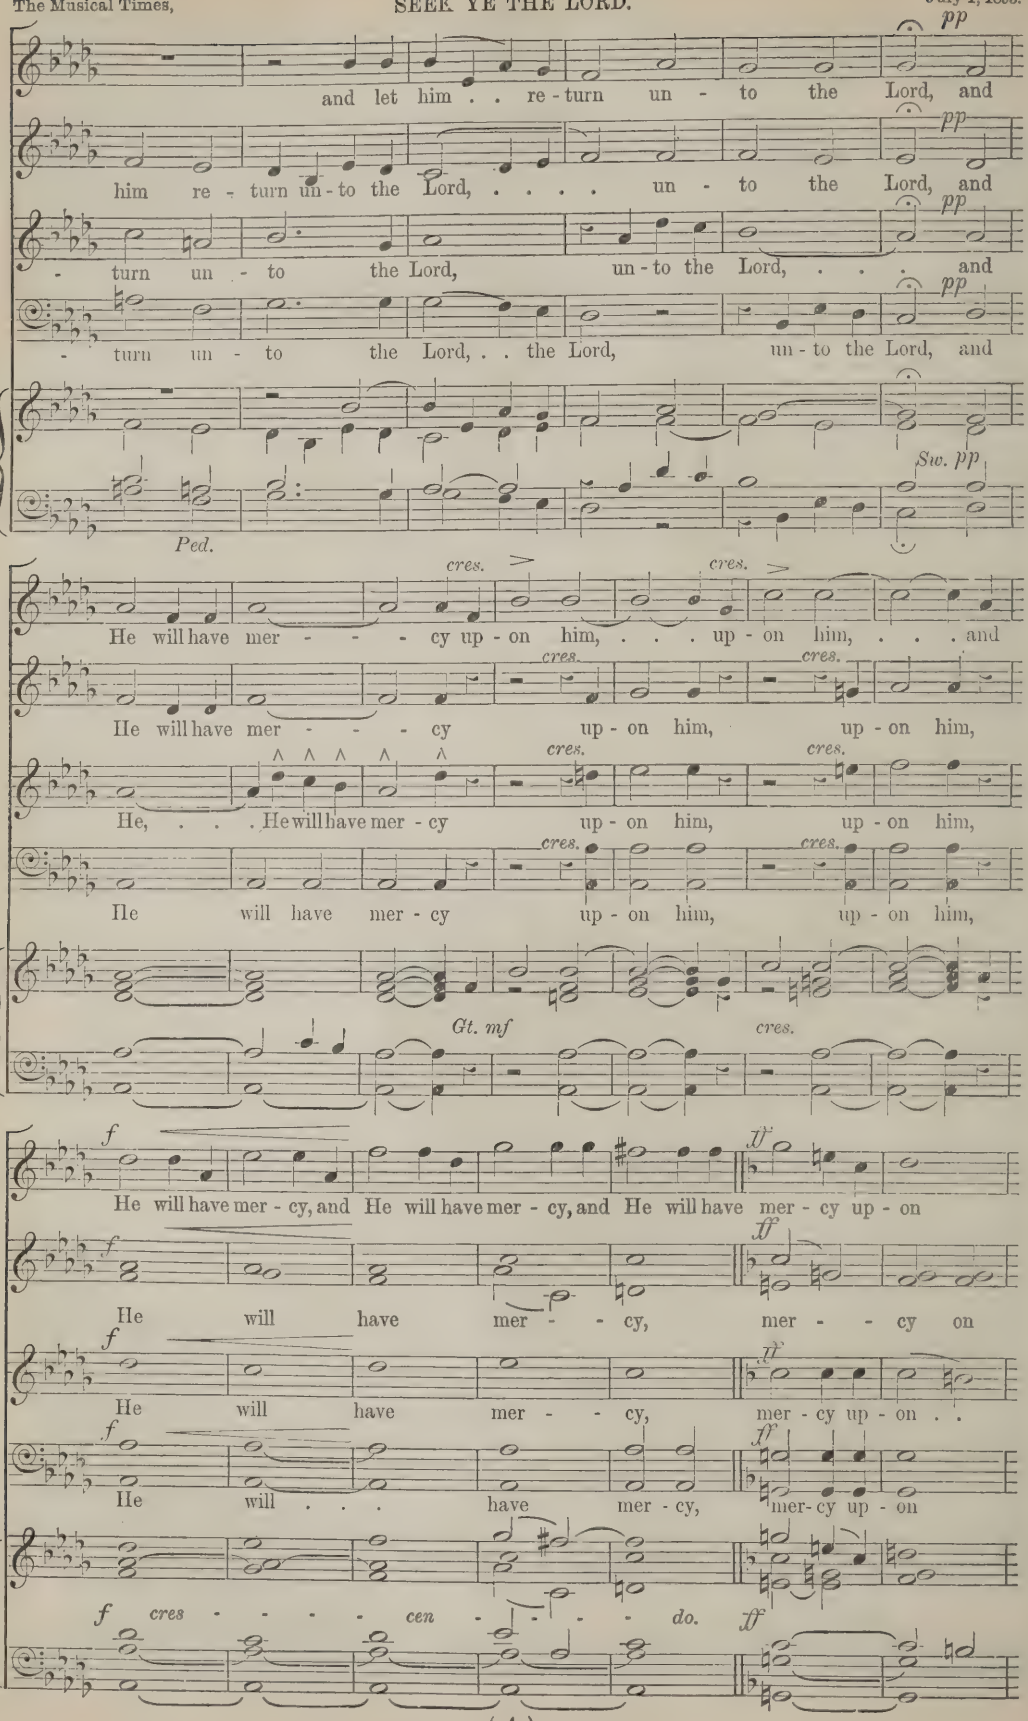
mf
f
8 ft. only.
senza Ped.



and let him . . re - turn un - to the Lord, and him re - turn un - to the Lord, ... un - to the Lord, and
- turn un - to the Lord, un - to the Lord, . . . and
- turn un - to the Lord, . . the Lord, un - to the Lord, and pp
Sw. pp
Ped.
He will have mer - - - - cy up - on him, . . . up - on him, . . . and
He will have mer - - - - cy up - on him, up - on him,
He, . . . He will have mer - cy up - on him, up - on him,
He will have mer - cy up - on him, up - on him,
cres.
Gt. mf
He will have mer - cy, and He will have mer - cy, and He will have mer - cy up - on
He will have mer - - - cy, mer - - - cy on
He will have mer - - - cy, mer - cy up - on . .
He will . . . have mer - cy, mer - cy up - on
f
ff
f cres - - - - - cen - - - - - do. ff

molto rall.
pp him ; for He will a -
rall.
him ; and to our God, . . .
fff
- bun - dant - ly par - don. . . .
Sw. mf
Tempo 1mo.
Ped. coupled to Sw.
Seek ye the Lord while He may be found.
ppp
Sw. to Ped. in.

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES.

ORATORIOS, CANTATAS, &c.,

RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

	Paper Cover.	Paper Boards.	Cloth Gilt.
P. ARMES.
ST. BARNABAS	2/0	—	—
G. J. BETJEMANN.
THE SONG OF THE WESTERN MEN	1/0	—	—
ETHEL M. BOYCE.
THE LAY OF THE BROWN ROSARY	1/6	—	—
YOUNG LOCHINVAR	1/6	—	—
J. F. BRIDGE.
THE LORD'S PRAYER .. .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 6d.)	1/0	—	—
ROCK OF AGES (Latin & English words) (Tonic Sol-fa, 4d.)	1/0	—	—
CALLIRHOË .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/6)	2/6	3/0	4/0
THE REPENTANCE OF NINEVEH..	2/6	3/0	4/0
DUDLEY BUCK.
THE LIGHT OF ASIA	3/0	3/6	5/0
F. CORDER.
THE BRIDAL OF TRIERMAIN .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/-)	2/6	—	—
H. COWARD.
THE STORY OF BETHANY .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/6)	2/6	3/0	—
F. H. COWEN.
SLEEPING BEAUTY .. .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/6)	2/6	3/0	4/0
ST. JOHN'S EVE .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/6)	2/6	3/0	4/0
RUTH .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/6)	4/0	4/6	6/0
A SONG OF THANKSGIVING ..	1/0	—	—
ANTONÍN DVOŘÁK.
MASS IN D	2/6	—	—
REQUIEM MASS	5/0	6/0	7/6
THE SPECTRE'S BRIDE	3/0	3/6	5/0
A PATRIOTIC HYMN	1/6	—	—
H. J. EDWARDS.
PRAISE TO THE HOLIEST	1/6	—	—
E. ELGAR.
THE BLACK KNIGHT	2/0	—	—
ROSALIND FRANCES ELLICOTT.
THE BIRTH OF SONG	1/6	—	—
ELYSIUM	1/0	—	—
G. GARRETT.
HARVEST CANTATA .. .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 6d.)	1/0	—	—
CH. GOUNOD.
THE REDEMPTION .. .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 2/-)	5/0	6/0	7/6
DITTO (French words) ..	8/4	—	—
DITTO (German words) ..	10/0	—	—
TROISIÈME MESSE SOLENNELLE	2/6	—	—
MORS ET VITA .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, Latin and English Words, 2/-)	6/0	6/6	7/6
ALAN GRAY.
ARETHUSA	1/6	—	—
OLIVER KING.
BY THE WATERS OF BABYLON (PSALM 137)	1/6	—	—

	Paper Cover	Paper Boards.	Cloth Gilt.
C. H. LLOYD.
ALCESTIS	3/0	—	—
ANDROMEDA	3/0	3/6	5/0
HERO AND LEANDER	1/6	—	—
SONG OF BALDER	1/0	—	—
THE LONGBEARD'S SAGA (Male Voices)	1/6	—	—
A SONG OF JUDGMENT	2/6	3/0	4/0
HAMISH MACCUNN.
LORD ULLIN'S DAUGHTER .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 8d.)	1/0	—	—
THE LAY OF THE LAST MINSTREL (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/6)	2/6	3/0	4/0
A. C. MACKENZIE.
VENI, CREATOR SPIRITUS	2/0	—	—
ROSE OF SHARON .. .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 2/-)	5/0	6/0	7/6
THE STORY OF SAYID	3/0	3/6	4/6
THE DREAM OF JUBAL	2/6	3/0	4/0
THE NEW COVENANT	1/6	—	—
THE COTTER'S SATURDAY NIGHT (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/-)	2/0	—	—
HORATIO W. PARKER.
HORA NOVISSIMA	3/6	—	—
C. HUBERT H. PARRY.
JOB	2/6	—	—
BLEST PAIR OF SIRENS .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 8d.)	1/0	—	—
JUDITH; or, THE REGENERATION OF MANASSEH	5/0	6/0	7/6
ODE ON ST. CECILIA'S DAY .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/-)	2/0	—	—
L'ALLEGRO .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/6)	2/6	—	—
DE PROFUNDIS	2/0	—	—
E. PROUT.
THE RED CROSS KNIGHT .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 2/-)	4/0	4/6	6/0
DAMON AND PHINTIAS (Male Voices)	2/6	—	—
CHARLES B. RUTENBER.
DIVINE LOVE	2/6	—	—
E. M. SMYTH.
MASS IN D	2/6	—	—
A. SOMERVELL.
MASS (in C minor)	2/6	—	—
C. VILLIERS STANFORD.
EAST TO WEST	1/6	—	—
EDEN	5/0	6/0	7/6
CARMEN SÆCULARE	1/6	—	—
THE REVENGE .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 9d.)	1/6	—	—
THE VOYAGE OF MAELDUNE ..	2/6	3/0	4/0
THE BATTLE OF THE BALTIC ..	1/6	—	—
J. STAINER.
THE CRUCIFIXION .. .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 9d.)	1/6	—	—
ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
THE GOLDEN LEGEND .. .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 2/-)	3/6	4/0	5/0
R. H. WALTHEW.
THE PIED PIPER OF HAMELIN ..	2/0	—	—
C. LEE WILLIAMS.
GETHSEMANE	2/0	2/6	—
THE LAST NIGHT AT BETHANY .. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1/-)	2/0	2/6	—
CHARLES WOOD.
ODE TO THE WEST WIND	1/0	—	—

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

years ago, and since then performed over 300 times, and "Bank Ban." He composed also numerous songs, cantatas, &c. For several decades he was Conductor at the Pesth National Theatre. He was the progenitor of a whole generation of musicians, three of his sons having been conductors at Budapest.

We have also to record the following deaths:—

On the 1st ult., in his seventy-second year, Karl Thierfelder, Musical Director in Oelsnitz.

On the 5th ult., at Augsburg, H. M. Schletterer, Kapellmeister and writer on musical matters, aged sixty-nine.

At Iiein, on May 12, Franz Brodsky, in his eighty-seventh year. The deceased was well known as an excellent musician and very successful teacher. He was the last surviving descendant of an ancient house of Bohemian knights.

On the 17th ult., at Vienna, aged forty-three, Hans Schrammel, founder of a well-known Quartet Society called after him, and one of the most popular singers of Vienna. He was also the composer of numerous songs, dances, &c.

At Stuttgart, on the 9th ult., Josef Schütky, composer and singer, in his seventy-sixth year; sometime one of the most valued baritones on the German stage, and since 1854 engaged at the Stuttgart Court Theatre.

On May 20, at Chatou, Auguste Thurner, well-known composer, pianist, and littérateur, aged fifty-nine. He was director of a Conservatoire of Music, which he founded fifteen years ago. His compositions include pieces for orchestra, pianoforte, and violin, and songs; he published also two books, entitled "Les Transformations de l'Opéra Comique" and "Les Reines de Chant" respectively.

At San Remo, the tenor Oskar Niemann, son of the famous Wagner "Heldentenor," Albert Niemann. He sang in London at several Concerts some years ago. He was only thirty-one.

F. A. Schulz, in his eighty-third year, at Wolfenbüttel. He was the composer of many popular songs, some of which have become Volkslieder.

At Turin, aged sixty-five, Pietro Bertuzzi, professor at the local Liceo musicale. At the age of eight he appeared in public as a violin prodigy; afterwards he became a pupil of Mercadante, and for thirty years he was solo violinist at the Theatre Royal, Turin. He composed about 200 songs, dances, &c.

Antonio Bertolotti, director of the State Archives, and erudite writer on musical subjects, in the Bulgarini Hospital, Mantua. He was the author of several valuable contributions to the history of Italian music from the fifteenth to the eighteenth centuries.

Fortunato Monina, Chapel-Master at the Cathedral, Vigevano, aged fifty-five.

MUSIC IN BRISTOL.

(From our own Correspondent.)

A good performance of Smieton's dramatic cantata "Ariadne" was given by St. John's (Redland) Choral Society on the 1st ult. The principal vocalists were Miss Marion Harris, Miss F. C. Jones, Mr. E. T. Morgan, Mr. V. Barnard, Mr. Gough, Mr. E. C. King, and Mr. T. Albery. Mr. A. E. Hill conducted. The work, which is new to Bristol, made a favourable impression, the good interpretation it received contributing to the appreciation it met with. The cantata was followed by several part-songs, which were spiritedly given, and by songs contributed by some of the principals.

The chief musical event of the month was the Festival of the Bristol Church Choral Union, which took place on the 13th ult., and it is gratifying to be able to record the fact that it was more successful than any which had preceded it. Not only was the number of members (739) taking part in the celebration larger than before, but the singing was much better, and the general excellence displayed was very marked. Mr. John Barrett was the Conductor and Mr. Geo. Riseley presided at the organ, as he has done since the establishment of the Union. The Magnificat and Nunc dimittis were sung to settings of Dr. E. J. Crow, and the anthems were Sullivan's "Who is like unto Thee" and Gounod's "Sing praises unto the Lord." Suitable hymns were also inserted in the Festival book. The Service closed with Stainer's Sevenfold Amen.

A similar Festival of the choirs of the diocese of Bath and Wells took place in Wells Cathedral on the 14th and 15th ult. Following a special musical service, in which the choristers and songmen of Bristol, Exeter, and Wells Cathedrals took part, held in the last-named city twelve months since, a committee was appointed to form a union of the parish choirs in the diocese of Bishop Hervey. Remarkable success attended the scheme, and nearly the whole of the choirs, numbering about 2,600 voices, joined. The body of singers being so large the committee decided to extend the Festival over two days, half of the singers assisting on the first day and the other half on the second day. The music in the Festival book was well chosen to suit the composite character of the choral forces, the Creed and Lord's Prayer being arranged in sentences or clauses, and copious directions being given for the chanting of the Psalms and the singing of the Canticles and Anthem—directions invaluable to country choirs. W. S. Vinning's setting in E flat of the Magnificat and Nunc dimittis was used, the anthem was Sir F. A. G. Ouseley's "It came even to pass," and Henry Smart's setting in F of the Te Deum was sung after the sermon. The hymns and the chants for the Psalms were well chosen. Mr. A. P. Standley, of St. Mary's, Taunton, conducted, and Mr. C. Lavington, of Bridgwater, presided at the organ. At this, the first Festival, a little roughness and unsteadiness were to be expected, but, as a whole, the service went well—remarkably so, considering all circumstances. The Dean of Wells preached a suitable sermon, in which he spoke of music as the handmaid to worship. Stainer's Sevenfold Amen, sung by the Cathedral Choir, brought the service to a conclusion each day.

MUSIC IN DUBLIN.

(From our own Correspondent.)

To overtake arrears in the production in Dublin of musical works of recent composers seems to be the laudable task which the Dublin Musical Society has set itself during the past few years. The performances of Berlioz's "Faust," Verdi's "Manzoni" Requiem, Sullivan's "Golden Legend" and Festival Te Deum, Gounod's "Mors et Vita" and "Gallia," Parry's "St. Cecilia's Day," and portions of Wagner's "Tannhäuser" and "Lohengrin" bear witness to the enterprise of the Society, and to the ability and industry of its choir and conductor. The concluding Concert of the past season, which took place in the Royal University, Earlsfort Terrace, on May 30, gave further evidence of the Society's desire to exhibit at least samples of a variety of schools. No large work was presented in its entirety on this occasion, but the programme included the Prelude to "Parsifal," the Prelude and first Act of "Lohengrin," Zingarelli's setting of the 112th Psalm "Laudate Pueri," and Gounod's "Gallia." Miss Medora Henson, in addition to an unexceptionable rendering of the music of Elsa, sang Gounod's song "Plus grand dans son obscurité"; Mr. Eugène Oudin interpreted the music of Telramund and that of the Herald with consummate art and discretion, and also displayed his dramatic style to much advantage in Verdi's scena "O sommo Carlo" from "Ernani," the Templar's soliloquy from Sullivan's "Ivanhoe," and Gounod's Arabian war song from "Le Tribut de Zamora"; Mr. Iver McKay gave Lohengrin's music with excellent judgment and effect, and sang the showy tenor solo in Zingarelli's showy Psalm with very evident appreciation of its Italian-operatic-church style. Mr. Aylmer Kelly sang the music allotted to the King with good tone and delivery. Although in some of the "Lohengrin" choruses the brass was unduly prominent, the entire performance of such a delicate and difficult selection was a triumph for the premier musical society of Dublin. Mr. Th. Werner led the strings, Mr. John Horan presided at the organ, and Dr. Joseph Smith conducted. The Society is indebted to Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co. for publishing separately for the use of the choir at this Concert Act I. of "Lohengrin" and "O sommo Carlo," from Verdi's "Ernani."

The Dublin University Choral Society, at the final

Concert of the season (the Ladies' Concert), drew exclusively on the works of Handel. The performance was in the Dining Hall, Trinity College, on the 6th ult. "Joshua" and selections from "Judas Maccabæus" and "Deidamia" made up the programme. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Beaumont were the principal soloists, Sir Robert Stewart conducted, and Mr. James Culwich performed the accompaniments on a pianoforte, the services of a band being dispensed with.

The Annual Festival of Choirs in connection with the Dublin Diocesan Choral Association took place in St. Patrick's Cathedral on the 1st ult., and was a very great success. Six hundred voices, representing some thirty-five choirs, took part in the celebration, under the bâton of Mr. Charles G. Marchant, Mr. Raymond Revelle being organist. Dr. Stanford's Service in B flat, a chorus from Haydn's "Creation," and some well-selected hymns from the forthcoming Appendix to the "Church Hymnal" were the staple of the musical portion of the celebration.

The Dublin Diocesan Society of St. Cecilia held its Annual General Meeting on the 14th ult., at St. Saviour's Church, Dominic Street, under the presidency of the Bishop of Canea. Klein's Mass in D was sung by a specially trained choir, under the direction of Mr. W. J. Monypeny. It is to be regretted that this Society, which during fifteen years has been most active in the revival of Palestrina's and other classical Masses and church music, finds itself in financial straits; and it is to be hoped that means may be found to enable it to continue its useful work.

Considerable interest is felt in the competition for School Choirs promoted by the Royal Irish Academy of Music on the lines of the London School Board competitions. The display was announced to take place at the Academy on the 29th ult., Mr. and Mrs. J. Spencer Curwen, Sir Robert Stewart, and Mr. Thomas Mayne having promised to act as judges.

MUSIC IN EDINBURGH.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The Edinburgh Bach Society brought its fifth season to a successful close by a double Concert, in the Queen Street Hall. The first evening was devoted to instrumental music, and an excellent performance of the D minor Clavier Concerto by Miss Lichtenstein was the most satisfactory number. Miss Rorie's reading of the "Italian" Concerto won a well deserved recall, and the D minor Concerto for two violins (Messrs. Dambmann and McKenzie), and that in A minor for violin (Mr. Dambmann) were also well received. The accompaniments were played by a string orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Franklin Peterson. The second part of the programme was given on May 7, when Mr. Waddell's Choir performed the "Christmas" Oratorio in a very careful and successful way. The choruses and the chorales in the work received every justice, and no less conscientious were the readings given by Mrs. Millar Craig ("Slumber, beloved," and "Keep, O my spirit"), Miss Gray ("Ah, my Saviour"), and Mr. Galloway ("Mighty King"). Mr. Stronach's efforts were scarcely so successful. A small but efficient orchestra rendered excellent assistance. Mr. Millar Craig conducted. The Society will begin next session under an entirely new régime, rendered necessary by its rapid growth. The membership has increased this year by no fewer than forty-four names, and the members have resolved to form a choir for the performance of the church cantatas. Professor Niecks continues to hold the post of honorary president, and Mr. Franklin Peterson the founder, and hitherto the hon. secretary of the Society, has been elected president. Several well known musicians have testified to their interest in the work of the Society by accepting honorary membership, among them Professor Sir John Stainer, Professor Villiers Stanford, Emeritus Professor Sir H. S. Oakeley, Professor Spitta (Berlin), Dr. A. C. Mackenzie, Mr. Georg Henschel, and others.

Mr. B. Luard Selby opened a new organ (built by Messrs. Gray and Davison) in All Saints' Church. Mr. Selby gave two highly successful Recitals, which were well attended.

MUSIC IN LIVERPOOL.

(From our own Correspondent.)

With the thermometer among the nineties everything in the form of indoor music has been at a discount during the past month. Two Concerts, however, claim attention, one of these being that on the 17th ult. of the pupils of Mr. J. J. Monk, which is now come to be reckoned as a "hardy annual" and an event which stimulates the interest of the student while it exhibits to the best advantage the skill of the teacher. To single out individual performers or numbers in a programme of exceptional scope would be invidious, but upon the result of the whole all the participants are to be congratulated. The other event was the first public performance of the present term at the Music School, on the 15th ult., for which an excellent selection of music had been prepared. In addition to some capable solo work by the students the orchestra was placed more strongly in evidence than on any former occasion, and in every respect the Concert proved the best yet given at the Music School. The latter, it will be remembered, some time ago received civic recognition at the hands of the Lord Mayor of the city, and negotiations are now on foot which it is hoped will lead to the extending of a grant from the funds of the Technical Education Committee for the furtherance of the musical education of clever pupils of elementary schools.

The Philharmonic Society has taken initial steps in regard to mapping out a programme for next season. There are to be twelve Concerts as usual, and the greater number will, according to long established custom, be of a miscellaneous character. Two works which are novelties to people hereabouts are, however, decided upon—namely, Rubinstein's "Tower of Babel" and Liszt's "St. Elizabeth," and these will be gratefully accepted in Liverpool, although, like all other such things, they may have been a longer time than was necessary in finding their way hither. One other choral Concert will be devoted to Handel's "Messiah." Sir Charles Hallé remains Conductor of the Society.

Music would seem to be generally somewhat neglected at the meetings of the Liverpool Teachers' Guild, an organisation which is numerically strong as well as influential. With all the more pleasure, therefore, is an unusual departure to be recorded, this being an admirably prepared paper on Robert Schumann, read by the Rev. T. M. W. Lund at the closing meeting of the most recent season. The matter in question had been prepared and penned by Mr. H. Steudner Welsing, who, at its termination, gave some excerpts from the music of the writer named, these being as cleverly played as they were appropriately selected.

Mr. W. T. Best has written to the Corporation expressing his intention of resuming his Recitals at St. George's Hall, on the 1st inst. During his absence, Messrs. Grimshaw and Branscombe (of Liverpool), Kendrick Pyne (of Manchester), Perkins (of Birmingham), Peace (of Glasgow), Westlake Morgan (of Bangor), and B. Jackson (of the People's Palace, London) have performed on consecutive Saturdays. The Sunday Recitals have been abandoned till October next.

A request recently made by the Liverpool Sunday Society, that the Parks and Gardens Committee would arrange for the performance of music on Sundays in the places under their control, has been met with a negative for the reason that funds are not in hand for such a purpose. The Sunday Society itself now proposes to provide bands in one or more of the parks for a series of Sundays, provided the controlling committee will sanction such a departure, and that this will be the case can hardly be doubted.

MUSIC IN OXFORD.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Handel has been very much to the fore in Oxford during summer term. "Acis and Galatea" was performed at the Keble College Concert on the 15th ult., and the Choral and Philharmonic Society included the Second Organ Concerto, the Overture to "Alexander's Feast," and a very large part of "L'Allegro" in the programme of its Commemoration Concert, in the Sheldonian Theatre, on the 19th ult. This programme was really a model of what music in summer should be, as it also comprised Haydn's genial "Surprise" Symphony and Wesley's beautiful unaccompanied double chorus "The Praise of Music." It was unfortunate that the intense heat kept a great number of people away from the enjoyment of what can only be described as an ideal programme for the occasion. The soloists were Miss Florence, and Messrs. McKay and Mills. The last-named are old-established favourites, while Miss Florence made a most successful first appearance.

There are not many miscellaneous Concerts to record. The Oxford Gleemen gave a Smoking Concert on April 27; the Cowley St. John Society, which is now conducted by Mr. E. J. Day, gave Cowen's "Rose Maiden," on May 30; "Mr. Glynn's Band," an association of undergraduate musicians, held a very successful Concert on May 18; and Madame Albani's Concert-Party filled the Sheldonian Theatre on May 20. The chief feature of Mr. Farmer's Concerts has been the appearance of Otto Hegner and his sister.

There have been the usual College Concerts, but the interest of the programmes has not been very great. The day of miscellaneous programmes ought to be past; as far as raising interest in the audience is concerned it is already past. Yet nothing better was provided at University, Brasenose, Exeter, Worcester, Pembroke, and Magdalen Concerts, though at the last-named College a certain unity was maintained by giving a madrigalian character to the performance. It has been already noticed that Handel's "Acis and Galatea" was given at the Keble College Concert. At Merton (May 25) Cowen's "St. John's Eve" received a very fairly satisfactory rendering. Those who are responsible for the arrangements here seem to have realised that the skeleton band with which they have been content in recent years was a mistake, and a great improvement was to be observed on the present occasion. But there is still plenty of room for amendment in this direction. At the Queen's College Concert (May 26) both band and chorus were excellent, and a capital performance of Markull's "Roland's Horn" was given. But the chief event of this Concert, and indeed the chief musical event of the term, was the production of a new Symphony in F major by Josef Ludwig. This proved to be a work admirable in every respect. From beginning to end it was instinct with vigorous power, rising not unfrequently to a height that was quite Beethovenish in its peculiar force and directness. At a first hearing the slow movement, which has a magnificent climax, and the Scherzo seemed the best movements; but as the effect of the last movement was damaged by an unlucky slip in the wind, this judgment may require revision. Considering the circumstances, the rendering was good on the whole, and the composer, who conducted, was most enthusiastically applauded at the close. The Symphony deserves and will probably secure wide acceptance.

MUSIC IN CHICAGO.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The centre of musical activity has been transferred to the World's Fair, and the practice there of the divine art, under the able direction of Mr. Theodore Thomas, has become a distinct feature of exceptional value in the midst of so much that is elevating and inspiring in the "White City."

It is impossible in the brief limits of a letter to take even a cursory review of the varied elements which go to make up the noteworthy programmes prepared. One or two notable occurrences at most may be discussed. May 24 was signalized by the initial choral performance of the Apollo Club, which, under the direction of Mr. W. L. Tomlins, assisted by Madame Lilian Nordica, Madame Christine Nielson Dreier, Mr. Whitney Mockridge, and Mr. R. Plunket Greene gave a worthy and intelligent interpretation of Mendelssohn's "Elijah." The orchestral parts were played by the superb Exposition Orchestra, than which no finer body of musicians has ever been brought together in this country; and all the choral numbers of the immortal work were given with a precision of attack, pure volume of tone, and clearness of enunciation worthy the highest praise.

The next day, May 25, the same artists and Conductor, with the enlarged Columbian Chorus (1,200 voices) and the Exposition Orchestra gave, under most depressing climatic conditions, a careful and sympathetic interpretation of Haydn's "Creation" (first and second parts). The day was wretchedly cold and gloomy, the hall inadequately heated, and, as a necessary result, the audience somewhat restless. The artists, however, heroically ignored the state of things, and sang with excellent effect the several numbers allotted to them; while the chorus revealed in its work the exceptional competence of Mr. Tomlins as a choral director; this was more fully displayed yesterday, the 3rd ult., at a Concert which, in the midst of so much that is interesting, was quite unique alike in the work performed, the forces engaged, and the admirable results achieved. Twelve hundred of the school children of Chicago, whose musical training has been in the care of Mr. Tomlins, united in a Concert, of which the leading numbers were selected from the Children's Souvenir Song Book, compiled by Mr. Tomlins. The audience was not very large, for the day was singularly unpropitious, but this in no wise damped the ardour of the young folks who sang, inter alia, "Freedom, our Queen" (John K. Paine), "Columbus saw across the main" (Clayton W. Johns), and several other selections, with that wonderful purity of tone so hard to get from children, but which, when secured, is so beautiful and touching. Your correspondent sat with Mr. J. Phillip Sousa (the leader of our most famous military band), who doubtless voiced what others felt when, at the conclusion of a lovely chorus, beautifully sung, he murmured: "Children's voices—the most beautiful music in the world." It is a pleasure to note in this connection the admirable work accomplished by Mr Tomlins, of which the latest, though by no means the least, is the enlisting of some of the most noted poets and musicians in behalf of the Children's Song Book just mentioned.

Later choral works promised during the Exhibition are "The Messiah," Bach's St. Matthew Passion, Handel's "Utrecht" Jubilate, Mendelssohn's "St. Paul," Bach's "A stronghold sure," Handel's "Judas Maccabæus," Berlioz's "Requiem," &c., so we can promise to our English friends—who will visit us, we hope, in large numbers—a "feast of good things." For certain of these Concerts your famous tenor, Edward Lloyd, has been engaged, and his coming is as usual looked for with pleasurable anticipations; the prospective visits of Dr. Dvorák, Dr. Mackenzie, and M. Camille Saint-Saëns are also elements of pleasure in store.

For the sake of musicians, artists, and art students not usually overburdened with this world's gear, who may be looking with some degree of longing, perhaps of planning, toward the World's Fair, it may not be amiss, even in a letter on musical matters, to state that all published statements about exorbitant charges, high rates of living, &c., are grossly exaggerated. Once landed in Chicago, the visitor finds it possible to secure excellent quarters at reasonable rates, and sees none of the evidences of greedy acquisitiveness with which the natives have been charged. Your correspondent can only add that after an Exposition experience which embraced Paris, London, Edinburgh, and Glasgow, he is glad to bear testimony to the fact that in some respects this is the greatest of them all, especially in its musical features, which include daily Orchestral Concerts under Mr. Thomas, Organ Recitals by the most distinguished resident and visiting organists, Choral performances on a vast scale, daily Concerts by noted military bands, also Chamber and Orchestral Concerts by visiting organisations—e.g., the Boston Symphony (Mr. Franz Kneizel, Conductor, pro tem.) and the New York Symphony (Mr. Walter Damrosch). Opportunity is also offered to hear distinguished virtuosi in their respective lines—notably, Mesdames Materna, Nordica, Blavelt among soloists (vocal), Messrs. Brodsky, Hekking, Sherwood, and other instrumentalists. A brief residence here will convince the most sceptical of the superb facilities afforded, and of the pre-eminent fitness of Mr. Thomas for the position to which he has been elected and from which certain "lewd fellows of the baser sort" have endeavoured to eject him vainly, fortunately indeed for sound art, but none the less meanly.

The three Pianoforte and Violin Concerts given by Mr. Edgar Haddock at the Steinway Hall on Mondays, the 5th, 12th, and 19th ult., would certainly have attracted more attention if they had occurred during a less busy month than that which we have just passed through, for each performance had some special features of interest. On the first occasion the programme was wholly made up of the music of Schubert and Schumann, and included the first-named master's Rondo Brillant in B minor (Op. 70) and the latter's two Sonatas in A minor (Op. 105) and D minor (Op. 121). The pianist was Miss Pauline Sant Angelo, a young executant of more than ordinary promise. At the next Concert the clever and zealous young Leeds violinist brought forward Brahms's three Sonatas for pianoforte and violin, in G (Op. 78), in A (Op. 100), and in D minor (Op. 108), his associate on this occasion being Miss Verne. Songs by the greatest of living German composers were contributed by Mr. H. Chilver Wilson. Of greater significance was the last Concert, which consisted entirely of compositions by English musicians, none of which had previously been heard in public. The list was fairly representative of recognised and unrecognised composers, as a mere recital of the principal pieces will testify. They included Sonatas for pianoforte and violin by Mr. F. K. Hattersley and Dr. Alan Gray; pianoforte solos by Mr. J. F. Barnett, Mr. Algernon Ashton, Mr. G. Percy Haddock, Mr. Edward German, and Mr. Clement Harris; and songs by Professor Stanford, Dr. A. C. Mackenzie, Dr. W. Creser, Sir Walter Parratt, and Mr. G. P. Haddock.

THE annual assemblage at the Crystal Palace of the Nonconformist Choir Union, on the 17th ult., possessed several features of interest. There were, for instance, two choral contests besides the Concert on the Handel Orchestra by 3,500 singers, some of whom had expressly journeyed from such distant districts as Yorkshire, Lancashire, Derbyshire, Nottinghamshire, Cheshire, and Wales. In class A three large choirs competed for the possession of a challenge banner presented by Mrs. Minshall (wife of the chairman of the executive committee), and for a cheque of five guineas, the victors being the East Dulwich Emmanuel Congregational Choir. The Conductor, Mr. James W. Lewis, received a silver-mounted bâton. Seven small choirs contested in class B, and the Tonbridge Wesleyan Choir won. Messrs. Josiah Booth, F. G. Edwards, and L. C. Venables were the adjudicators, and each choir was required to sing a set anthem as well as a secular piece of its own selection. Mr. Minshall presided at the afternoon Concert, and commendable performances were given of several anthems, part-songs, &c. Among those calling for special remark were "The Lord is loving" (Garrett), "Like silver lamps" (Barnby), "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem" (E. V. Hall), "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace" (Lee Williams), and Smart's "The Sea-King." It is gratifying to note this choir's constant progress in efficiency. Organ solos by Mr. Fountain Meen and instrumental pieces by the Crystal Palace Orchestra also secured close attention.

THE London Sunday School Choir celebrated its coming-of-age Festival on the 21st ult., at the Crystal Palace, under very favourable conditions. The growth of an organisation that has been imitated on the other side of the Atlantic was proved by nearly 9,000 choralists—about 5,000 juveniles in the morning and almost 4,000 adults in the afternoon—taking possession of the Handel Orchestra, whilst the steady delivery of the majority of the pieces chosen for the occasion testified to careful rehearsal. Musically, the "majority" gathering of the choir was eminently satisfactory. The youthful contingent of the vocal army was conducted by Mr. J. Rowley, who, in Cowen's "The Children's Home," and other works, generally contrived to secure something like the effect he desired. In the subsequent programme, gone through by adults under the bâton of Mr. Luther Hinton, the meritorious rendering of Gounod's "Come unto Him," of Sir Joseph Barnby's specially-written hymn "The sower went forth sowing" (a tuneful composition that will find a welcome in many schools), of "To Thee, Cherubim" ("Dettingen" Te Deum), of Mr. Gaul's pretty new part-song, "Morning," and of "Calm is the glassy ocean" ("Idomeneo") was duly recognised. Miss Kate Cove assisted as soprano soloist, and besides presiding at the organ for the sacred pieces at the second Concert, Mr. David Davies conducted two pieces played by the orchestra associated with the Choir.

MR. ERNEST KIVER always presents some novelties of interest at his annual Concerts, and the one which he gave on May 31, at Princes' Hall, was no exception to the rule. It opened with a Trio for pianoforte and strings by Dr. Geo. J. Bennett, which, although performed for the first time, is evidently not of recent composition and hence cannot be considered a fair specimen of this clever young musician's talent. Our reason for supposing that the work is an early one is the comparatively uninteresting nature of the subject-matter, the coining of striking melodies being generally the one thing which does not go hand-in-hand with the acquisition of the arts of harmony, counterpoint, fugue, &c. The workmanship is of good quality and betrays careful study of the best models, but the work cannot be called effective or in any way remarkable. Mr. Kiver played some pieces by Chopin and Liszt in his well-known conscientious and finished manner, and proved himself quite equal to the difficulties of that wonderful compound of romantic beauty and downright eccentricity, Grieg's so-called Ballade (Op. 24). Mr. Gompertz gave an impassioned reading of Bruch's fine Romance in A minor; Miss Eleanor Rees sang several songs very charmingly; and a somewhat dull Pianoforte Trio by Eduard Schlütt completed the programme.

EXETER HALL was well filled on May 29, when the annual meeting of the Tonic Sol-fa College was held, under the chairmanship of the Right Hon. Lord Carrington (Lord Chamberlain). Sir Joseph Barnby, who was heartily received, said he was proud to be a member of the Tonic Sol-fa College, whose history had been one of long, arduous, energetic, and manful struggle. He hoped that the Legislature would assist the Tonic Sol-faists in spreading their method, a far greater and better method than that of Hullah, which had formerly official assistance. Other speakers were Mr. J. Williams Benn, M.P., Mr. Curwen, Mr. L. C. Venables, and Dr. Dunstan. The children of Fleet Road Board School, Hampstead, who hold the challenge trophy of the London School Board for singing, proved an attraction, their educational tests and rich tone being much admired. The South London Choral Association and Mr. J. A. Birch's Temperance Choral Society sang part-songs and an anthem at sight, securing frequent encores. Miss Edith Hands sang songs by Sir Joseph Barnby and Mr. Walter Macfarren, accompanied by the composers, with much taste and power. Mr. R. D. Metcalfe occupied the first half-hour with an Organ Recital.

THE Finsbury Choral Association may be congratulated upon the establishment of the new Metropolitan College of Music at Holloway. This Association has for some time been among the most enterprising of its kind, and its labours have now culminated in the formation of an Institution calculated to be of genuine advantage to the art. The increase in the number of students in four years from about 160 to considerably over 500 rendered necessary larger premises than those originally occupied by the teaching branch of the Association, and accordingly, as soon as possible, removal has been effected to more satisfactory quarters. Mr. G. W. Dale is the Principal of the new College, which the Lord Mayor declared open on the 23rd ult. In the course of the preliminary proceedings Dr. E. H. Turpin spoke of the immense strides made in music of late years as the result of tuition in great schools, and Sir Joseph Barnby stated that at the Institution in the City over which he presides there are no less than 3,500 students—an astounding fact, considering that the Guildhall School is situated in the midst of the busy haunts of men.

THERE was an interesting Orchestral Concert at St. James's Hall on May 30, the giver of the performance being Mr. Schönberger, whose sound and forcible performance of Beethoven's Pianoforte Concerto in G (No. 4) and Mr. Saint-Saëns's favourite work in G minor (No. 2) showed that the young executant is still making steady progress. The principal feature of interest, however, was the first performance of a Symphony in E minor, by Mr. Emanuel Moor, a young musician who first came under notice a few years ago as a pianist of a somewhat sensational type. The Symphony is noteworthy rather for the pleasing character of its themes than for excellence of workmanship, the construction of the first and last movements being rather unsatisfactory. The two middle sections, however, show considerable talent, and the Symphony obtained a favourable reception. The Concert was conducted with much ability by Mr. Henschel, and four numbers of this esteemed musician's song-cycle, "Der Trompeter von Säkkingen," rendered by Hugo Heinz, gave relief to the instrumental programme.

The sixty-fifth Concert of the Musical Artists' Society, which took place at St. Martin's Hall, on the 12th ult., contained the usual number of new or unfamiliar works, none of which, however, were of an important character. Mr. Walter Wesché's Sonata for pianoforte and violoncello, though melodious and concise, is too much in the style of a byegone day. Mr. Erskine Allon's Suite for pianoforte, brilliantly played by Miss Dora Bright, is, on the contrary, almost too obtrusively modern. Mr. G. Gear and Miss Amy Hickling played an agreeable Romanza for violin and pianoforte, composed by the former. Two very charming songs by Dr. Creser were well sung by Mrs. Creser, and Mr. Arthur Appleby gave an excellent rendering of a baritone air from Massenet's "Roi de Lahore." Mendelssohn's Trio in D minor, which should have concluded the Concert, was not played.

The Concert given by the clever French pianist and composer, Miss Chaminade, on the 1st ult., in which she was assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Oudin, drew a very large audience to St. James's Hall. The programme consisted entirely of Miss Chaminade's songs, vocal duets, and pianoforte pieces of light calibre, and it was, therefore, open to the charge of monotony, though it is only fair to say that the listeners betrayed no sense of weariness, the applause being enthusiastic from first to last. There is no occasion to particularise, but it may be admitted that the Concert-giver displays a very graceful pen and a fund of piquant, if not very original melody, alike in vocal and instrumental sketches; and in the latter she evinces a pure and pearly touch and irreproachable execution. Within the limits she imposes upon herself Miss Chaminade is entirely successful.

Mr. Braxton Smith had several popular artists upon whom he could rely at his Concert, on the 20th ult., at St. Martin's Town Hall. Among his own essays were the Romance "Spirto Gentil," from "La Favorita," which he gave with the fervour appropriate to the situation of the air in the opera. Madame Duma afforded a telling example of the flexibility of her voice in the Jewel Song from "Faust," and the exertions of Madame Belle Cole were received with favour. The expressive style of Miss Dews was turned to good account in Gounod's "Entreat me not to leave thee," and other vocal pieces came from Miss Claudine O'Brien and Mr. Charles Copland. That rapidly-improving young violinist, Miss Angela Vanbrugh, distinguished herself in the Prelude and Theme Varié of Vieuxtemps's "Fantasia Appassionata," played with notable breadth and freedom.

Fröken Martha Möller, the Norwegian singer, who gave a Concert at Princes' Hall on May 25, not unnaturally seemed to have a preference for Grieg's airs as a means of bringing her rather singular methode before the London musical public. It cannot be said, however, that her vocalisation made any very strong impression upon the listeners. Fortunately the Concert-giver had invaluable assistants in Mdlle. Yrrac and Mr. Jules Hollander, who, besides joining in a Sonata by Handel for violin and pianoforte, contributed solos. The familiar "Trillo del Diavolo," of Tartini, was played with much point and dexterity by the lady, and Mr. Hollander was quite equal to Chopin's "Berceuse." To a powerful voice Mr. Charles Karlyle added discretion in the rendering of Mendelssohn's "Frühlingslied" and a Spanish Serenade by Martin Roder.

The annual Concert given by Sir William Cusins took place on the 14th ult., at St. James's Hall, and was well attended. The esteemed musician commenced the programme with three movements of his Pianoforte Trio in C minor, in which he was associated with M. Emile Sauret and Signor Piatti. A Sonata in A minor, for pianoforte and violin, further served to display the talent of Sir William Cusins as a musician, though not as an original composer, and the work, which at present remains in manuscript, can scarcely be recommended for publication. Some pieces for the semi-obsolete viola d'amore were artistically interpreted by Mr. Van Waefelghem, and agreeable relief was afforded in the vocal selections by Miss Antoinette Trebelli, Miss Elena Leila, Miss Gwladys Wood, and Mr. W. Shakespeare.

A very large audience attended Mr. Henry R. A. Robinson's Vocal and Instrumental Concert at the Rink Hall, Blackheath, on the 15th ult. The artists were Madame Isabel George, Miss Clara Myers, Mr. Henry Lindsey, Mr. John Peachey, Mr. Henry Ward, Miss Eldina Bligh, M. Charles Lesimple, and the Concert-giver. Great enthusiasm was shown by the audience, and encores were numerous. Mr. Robinson played Chopin's Ballade in A flat, the pianoforte part of Mendelssohn's D minor Trio, and the accompaniments throughout the evening. The performance of the Scherzo in the Trio was so much appreciated that an attempt was made to have it repeated. Altogether the entertainment was most enjoyable, and Mr. Robinson is to be congratulated on a great success.

Mr. Louis D. Strelitskie's Orchestral Concert at Portman Rooms, on the 19th ult., was not deficient in variety. A body of instrumentalists, with Mr. V. Buziau as leader, gave with very fair effect the Overture to "Oberon," three characteristic "Mythological Pieces," by Mr. E. Silas, and other compositions. As a flute soloist Mr. Strelitskie was heard in a couple of sketches imposing some strain upon the executive skill of the player as well as calling for taste, whilst as a violin teacher he was enabled to present an exceedingly promising pupil in Master Sydney Freedman. Mr. Bantock Pierpoint sang "O ruddier than the cherry" with adequate spirit, and Madame Marie Duma was particularly successful in her interpretation of Mascheroni's "Ave Maria."

A highly successful Concert was given by the professional students of the London Academy of Music at St. James's Hall, on the 9th ult., under the direction of Mr. Henry Holmes. Two movements of Mendelssohn's "Scotch" Symphony and Overtures by Weber and Auber were very creditably rendered, and Gounod's fine Motet "Gallia" went smoothly, though, as usual, the male voices were outnumbered by the female. Of the soloists, the most promising was Miss Teresa Blamy, a young soprano whose future ought to be secure; Miss May Rosslyn (contralto), Miss Alice Maud Liebmann and Miss Stella Fraser (violinists), and Miss Kate Bruckshaw and Miss Alice Hayman (pianists) may be encouraged to persevere with their studies.

The second of Mr. Dolmetsch's Concerts at Barnard's Inn, on the 6th ult., was devoted to French composers of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The lion's share of the work on this occasion fell to the harpsichord, which figured in seven of the eight numbers of the programme, two of these consisting of solos by Chambonnières and Couperin. The instrument was in the safe hands of Mr. J. A. Fuller Maitland, who dealt most sympathetically with the old-world strains he was called upon to bring once more to life. Miss Florence Monk sang three songs, and the stringed instruments were played by various members of the Dolmetsch family and Mr. J. A. Milne. The next Concert, of music by J. S. Bach, is announced for the 4th inst.

Lovers of vocal music had abundant reason for being grateful to Mrs. Henschel on the 23rd ult., when that admirable artist gave a Recital of Song at St. James's Hall, assisted by Mr. Henschel and his new choir. The programme included Old English, Irish, Welsh, and Scottish songs, Schubert's setting (in the original Hebrew) of the 92nd Psalm, and part-songs by Wilbye, Pearsall, Brahms, and Mr. Henschel himself. The solos in Schubert's work were sung by Mrs. Henschel, Miss H. Carver, Messrs. Dan Price, C. Karlyle, and Hayden Bailey. Mr. Henschel accompanied, and joined his wife in a duet, besides singing a song and conducting. Altogether the Concert was one of the most enjoyable of the season so far.

On Sunday, the 11th ult., after Evensong, Rossini's "Stabat Mater" was performed at St. Alban's Church for the third time since Lent by the choir, with the assistance of a small but excellent band, ably led by Mr. Alexander Symons, and an organ accompaniment played by Mr. H.

D. Wetton. The vocal quartet consisted of Masters W. Gough and A. Lee, Mr. Probert and Mr. Blackney, who, in solo, duet, or quartet, gained golden opinions from an attentive and critical audience. The united forces were conducted by Mr. Thomas Adams, the accomplished Organist of the Church and indefatigable trainer of the boys—rough diamonds picked up in the regions of Leather Lane and Baldwin's Gardens.

The South Hampstead Orchestra held its eighth annual Concert on the 6th ult., at the Hampstead Conservatoire, under the able conductorship of Mrs. Julian Marshall, whose complete control over her forces was manifested in Brahms's Symphony in D (No. 2), Beethoven's "Leonora" Overture, a portion of Schubert's "Rosamunde" ballet music, and Mr. Hamish MacCunn's Overture "Land of the Mountain and the Flood." The performance of each of these was marked by precision and conscientious regard for minute shades of expression. The leader of the orchestra was Madame Charlotte Wilkes (Mrs. Stanley). Beethoven's Romance in F for violin was rendered with neatness and judgment by Miss Susan Lushington, and Miss Evangeline Florence varied the instrumental pieces by her refined singing of Weber's Romance "Und ob die Wolke," Handel's "Lusinghe più care," and Henschel's charming "Spring Song," in the latter being specially complimented by the large audience.

The musical arrangements for the Royal wedding, on the 6th inst., are as follows: The service, which is fixed for half-past twelve o'clock, will commence with a marriage chorale, "Father of Life," specially composed by Dr. Creser for the occasion, and which will be sung by the gentlemen and choristers of the Chapel Royal. Sir Joseph Barnby's "O perfect love," a chorale sung at the marriage of the Duke and Duchess of Fife in Buckingham Palace Chapel, will be given in the middle of the service, which will conclude with the hymn "Now thank we all our God." Mendelssohn's Wedding March will be played while the Queen and Royal Family are leaving the chapel on their return to Buckingham Palace.

Mr. Tivadar Nachèz secured a large audience at his second Violin Recital on the 5th ult., at St. James's Hall. His rendering of Tartini's Sonata "Il Trillo del Diavolo," Bach's Chaconne, and other pieces of lesser note was, generally speaking, brilliant, though at times there was a tendency to make effects at the composer's cost. Three bright and piquant new pieces from the Concert-giver's own pen were introduced and warmly received. Two effective songs, "Thoughts of you" and "Unforgotten," also by Mr. Nachèz, were admirably sung by Mr. Oudin, who also contributed vocal numbers by Gounod in an equally impressive manner.

Mendelssohn's 95th Psalm was sung, with orchestral accompaniment, at Holy Trinity Church, Upper Tooting, on Sunday afternoon, the 4th ult. Mr. D. C. Attwater, a member of the Church choir, sustained the tenor solo portions, and Master Frank Barnes was the solo treble. Mr. Warren Tear ably supplied the organ accompaniments, and Mr. Alfred Physick, the Organist of the Church, conducted. At the same Church, on the 2nd ult., Mr. Alfred Physick gave an Organ Recital of music by Bach, Spohr, Sterndale Bennett, Best, &c. Mr. D. C. Attwater sang "If with all your hearts," from "Elijah."

On the 17th ult. a performance of Cowen's "Rose Maiden" was given in the Goldsmiths' Institute, New Cross. The soloists were Miss Agnes Walker, Miss Bertha Ball, Mr. Edward Dalzell, and Mr. Henry Warwick. The solo "Bloom on, my roses," was sung with much taste by Miss Agnes Walker, and the duet "I know a rosebud shining," with Mr. Edward Dalzell, called forth much applause. Miss Ball and Mr. Warwick both sang with taste, and the Institute choir and orchestra were excellent, under the skilful conductorship of Dr. Churchill Sibley.

At St. Mary's, Kilburn, on the 18th ult., after the evening service, an excellent rendering of Mendelssohn's Ninety-fifth Psalm was given by the choir of the church, the solos being sung by Mr. E. Houghton. The choruses went with great precision, notably the very effective canon "For the Lord" and the fughetta "For His is the sea." The Canticles were sung to a Festal setting in E flat, written by the Organist of the Church, Mr. Edgar Pettman. The Service concluded with the "St. Mary" Amen, which was sung without accompaniment.

Concerts devoted solely to the works of one composer rarely evade the risk of monotony, and it cannot be said that the Brahms Concert given by Mr. Ernest Fowles at Princes' Hall, on the 13th ult., was an exception. Apart from this, however, the entertainment was a decided success. The artists who interpreted the various works were Miss Liza Lehmann, Messrs. Ernest Fowles, J. Ludwig, W. G. Collins, L. Fowles, and W. Whitehouse, whose efforts were much applauded by a fairly large audience.

On the 10th ult., in the quaint old Hall of Barnard's Inn, Holborn, a most enjoyable Concert was given, under the direction of Signor Angelo Mascheroni. Signor Mascheroni played the pianoforte, and vocal art was exemplified by Mdlle. Biancoli (who made a great hit in Mascheroni's "For all Eternity"), Miss Grace Damian (who sang with her accustomed taste and clear enunciation), Signori Aramis and Ugo Chilveni, and Mr. Francis Lloyd (who contributed a ballad of Coenen's with much success).

On the 7th ult., at St. George's Hall, Catford, Mr. George Budd gave an evening Concert. Barnby's "Rebekah" was sung by a small select choir, the soloists being Mrs. Maunder, Mr. John Bartlett, and Mr. Albert Fairbairn; and a miscellaneous selection was contributed by the above artists and Master E. Howland, Mr. C. Radburn, and Mr. John Wigginton. The entire performance was excellent, that of the choir especially.

The St. George's Glee Union gave its 292nd Concert on Friday evening, the 2nd ult. The artists were Miss Edith Percival, Miss Ida F. Price, Miss Annie Kearton, Miss Helen Kearton, Miss Maud Agnes Winter, Mr. W. H. Webb, and Mr. Harper Kearton. The choir sang Leslie's "Lullaby of life," Cowen's "Bridal Chorus" ("Rose Maiden"), and several other part-songs. Mr. Joseph Monday conducted as usual.

The competition for the Parepa-Rosa Gold Medal took place on the 17th ult., at the Royal Academy of Music. There were seven competitors, and the medal was awarded to Reginald Brophy. The competition for the Leslie Crotty Prize took place on the 19th ult. There were eleven candidates, and the prize was awarded to Arthur Walenn. The Examiners highly commended Tom James.

It will be seen from our advertising columns that the Glasgow Glee and Catch Club offers a prize of £15 for an original composition in glee form. The competition is an open one, and care will be taken to preserve the incognito of all but the successful competitor. It should be stated that the "top" part must be laid out for tenors—not altos, as in most old glees.

Mr. Edward German's "Three Dances from the Music to 'Henry VIII.'" have just been arranged for military band by Mr. Dan Godfrey, Jun. Their popularity, already great, will thus be widely extended, for pieces as light and at the same time as good as these are too rare in every army bandmaster's répertoire not to be heartily welcome.

Messrs. Brinsmead have made a boudoir Grand for Princess May. The instrument is designed to imitate a harpsichord, the ordinary legs being superseded by a framework in early English style, and it is supplied with a patent tuning apparatus. Its tone is highly spoken of.

The Corporation of Bournemouth are providing excellent music in the Winter Gardens, the latest attraction being a fine concert organ, erected by Messrs. Norman Bros. and Beard, of Norwich, in the Pavilion.

An Organ Recital was given, on the 18th ult., at St. Mary's, Greenwich Park, by Mr. W. J. Kipps. The programme included works by Bach, Haydn, Batiste, and others.

The names of Messrs. Carlo Albanesi and Ernest Kiver have been added to the list of professors of the pianoforte at the Royal Academy of Music.

The Gazette announces that Sir Walter Parratt has been appointed Master of the Music in Ordinary to the Queen.

REVIEWS.

Masters of English Music. By Charles Willeby. [London: Osgood, McIlvaine and Co.]

MR. CHARLES WILLEBY has already claimed the attention of the musical world by a short but painstaking memoir of Chopin. He now comes before us as editor of a series entitled "Masters of Contemporary Music," to which he contributes the opening volume. According to the scheme it is proposed to devote the succeeding volumes "to the musicians of each country, and, so far as practicable, to obtain all biographical data from the composers themselves," a plan which Mr. Willeby informs us has been exclusively followed in the present case. The volume is very nicely got up, well printed, with a broad margin, and is illustrated with portraits and fac-similes. There, unfortunately, praise must end. The book is so thoroughly unsatisfactory in tone and in execution that it is our painful but imperative duty to make an example of it, with the assistance of Mr. Willeby himself. It is utterly unrepresentative of cultivated musical opinion in this country, and it is as well that foreigners should understand this clearly.

It will, we think, be freely conceded that for the adequate discharge of a task of this description the qualifications of independence, sympathy, and intelligence are of vital importance. And it will be further conceded that in an editor the possession of accurate knowledge and a fluent and accurate style is also desirable. At any rate, he should be able to write grammatically and coherently and with some regard for orthography. We propose, therefore, to apply these tests to Mr. Willeby, and our readers shall judge for themselves. As instances of his method of dealing with the vernacular we may mention such forms as "omniverous" [sic], "supremity," "enshelvement," "unvocalness." When he deviates into foreign tongues the results are even more disastrous. He talks of "savoire faire," and rarely misses a chance of misspelling a proper name. Thus we get "Reinicke" three times and "Merrimé" five times; Bizet's Christian name was Georges, not George; Giuglini, Renan, Saint-Saëns, and not Giuligni, Rénan, and Saint-Saën, are the right forms. "Guillem de Cabestanh" is perverted into "Guillem de Castenbah," while Mr. Willeby is apparently a prey to the hallucination that Cipriani and Potter were two distinct persons. Mr. Willeby, we may also observe, apparently uses the word "robustiousness" seriously instead of robustness. Let us now proceed to illustrate the literary quality of his work. "One would never be justified," he remarks on page 96, "in saying of the composer of the 'Golden Legend' that he wilfully condescended to indulge in such a process as 'doing the big bow-wow,' yet so much has be been forced to rely upon his musical artisanship, that in comparison to the spontaneity of such a work as the 'Legend,' much of the music of 'Ivanhoe' seems out of joint." On another page he observes: "The day may come when even Brahms will awake to the fact that Germany is no longer the hub of the musical universe, and himself its 'bearings.'" Here, in good sooth, and in more senses than one, is the "literary bicyclist" of Sir Charles Bowen! Apropos of the human element in opera he writes: "Latency is no unfamiliar feature of it, and by musicians who have afterwards proved themselves to possess it in the highest degree, it has not been found for the seeking." Mr. Cowen's "vocal knack is quite happy," while Dr. Hubert Parry's "Prometheus" is defined as "a series of kaleidoscopic effects which are more valuable as an earnest of the sober residue bound to remain than of themselves."

Mr. Willeby's inaccuracy in detail and his slipshod style might, however, be freely condoned if he showed any critical acumen or grasp of his subject. Here again there is no lack of material to form an estimate of Mr. Willeby's capacity. For example, he tells us—at least, so we understand him—that there is no beauty in Shelley's "Prometheus." Then, again, we learn that "in his almighty horror of the commonplace in music, Dr. Parry is almost bourgeois." Perhaps the most remarkable statement in the book is that in connection with Sir Arthur Sullivan's conducting: "He may at times lack breadth in his renderings, but that, at all events, is an error on the right side." This will certainly be news to most of our readers. We should like, in pursuance of our method, to quote examples of Mr. Willeby's impartiality and independence, were it not that they have baffled our most careful scrutiny. His sketch of Sir Arthur Sullivan is one long fulsome serenade on the trumpet. He tells us that his hero wrote "pot-boilers," but in every bar of every "pot-boiler" that he wrote there is "invariably the stamp of true genius." Everything is perfect, or, if it is not, it is declared to be the fault of the subject. Apropos of his conducting, there is one passage so pre-eminently silly that we cannot refrain from quoting it in extenso: "If popularity with the orchestra were the sole criterion, he would without doubt be the English conductor par excellence, for when Arthur Sullivan calls a rehearsal, be it theatre or concert-room, the missing instruments are few indeed." Mr. Willeby's ideas of orchestral discipline are enough to make Costa turn in his grave. And what could be in worse taste than the obvious inuendo contained in the next passage? "Some people theorise that the chief essentials of a good conductor are that he play a variety of instruments, and have a memory like the well nigh proverbial cab horse. But they forget that many military bandmasters are possessed of both acquirements, and are not necessarily good conductors." The sketch of Dr. Mackenzie is almost entirely biographical, and therefore, in the main, unobjectionable, though not free from inaccuracies; that on Mr. Cowen is disfigured by the laborious chronicling of many tedious trivialities. Mr. Willeby religiously records Mr. Cowen's views on the Italian climate, and his description of Italian bread, gondolas, stalactite formations, &c., all of which are, doubtless, correct; but for the life of us we cannot see the need for them in a work of this description. Finally, we have two very short, perfunctory, and, in places, decidedly vulgar, chapters on Dr. Parry and Dr. Stanford, inserted, so far as we can see, for the sole object of enabling Mr. Willeby to indulge in a number of overt and covert sneers at Brahms. In the case of Dr. Parry there is no mention whatsoever of what is generally agreed to be his finest work, while the attitude of the writer towards Dr. Stanford may be gathered from the remark that "he has written more dull music than any of his fellows." Here we may take leave of Mr. Willeby. No sympathy need be expressed for those whom he has endeavoured to belittle; rather do we feel sorry for the victim of his indiscriminate eulogy. Above all, we sympathise in advance with those gentlemen who, as contributors to the series, will be subjected to the editorial supervision of a writer so uncritical, so inaccurate, and so destitute of the saving grace of style.

Examples in Strict Counterpoint, Old and New. Dr. Gordon Saunders. Novello's Primers, No. 41. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

EVERYBODY is ready to repeat the saying "example is better than precept," but few know how to apply it wisely and well. When a student is engaged on Counterpoint, especially when preparing for an examination, he must work out a large amount of original counterpoint if he hopes to obtain the smallest amount of facility. On the other hand, he would, without doubt, produce much better results if, before beginning to write his own specimens, he were to play over carefully, or copy out, good examples of other writers' counterpoint. It is on this ground that the utility of Dr. Gordon Saunders's book is based. He has collected together over 370 specimens of counterpoint of every species, and ranging in construction from two parts to eight parts, all fully worked out so as to make admirable models for the student. But the book is rendered still more valuable by the learned remarks on the special progressions or the particular characteristics of each example. If properly used, this Primer ought to pull many a struggling youngster through the dreaded counterpoint papers of our institutions and universities. The examples are selected from such standard works as Albrechtsberger, Cherubini, Fétis, Fux, Kirnberger, and others, while Dr. Pearce, Dr. Bonavia Hunt, and also the author have contributed good examples where needed. Of course the author himself is the largest contributor of such additional specimens, and we can only say that he has proved himself highly skilful, and deeply imbued with that valuable "spirit of polyphony" which is, alas, becoming rarer every day. Many ultra-modernists affect to despise counterpoint as being antiquated, if not actually obsolete; but it is generally found that this opinion emanates from men who could not write a respectable specimen of counterpoint if their very life depended upon it. Then again, counterpoint will always be despised by that numerous class of persons who have never succeeded in hearing more than the two outside parts of polyphonic music. To such persons the delicate expression and the varying force of inner parts is of no more interest than the rubble which is pitched into the inside of a thick wall. Many modern composers think they can get on very well without a real grasp of the laws of counterpoint. So they can, no doubt; but they must be prepared for the avenging hand of the future, which will assuredly gather into the garner only those compositions which are founded on the immutable laws of the "true and beautiful," and will rudely cast aside the worthless mass of literature which has been turned out to suit the daily altering standard of the "pretty and pleasant." Who can estimate the influence on the art of music which counterpoint has had when manipulated by a Bach, a Mozart, a Mendelssohn? Those who are best capable of judging will perceive in the archaic simplicity and intolerant legislation of counterpoint those primitive and profound principles out of which we know modern music has evolved, and which we feel must always be the true core and living centre of the music of the future, evolve as it may. To the study of these first principles Dr. Gordon Saunders has made a most theoretically valuable and practically useful contribution. A few very trifling slips have occurred in the printing. The last note on p. 219 should be C; the printer has divided the second accolade on p. 227, and also on p. 235, in both cases suggesting four-parts instead of eight. Also, between bars four and five of p. 235 there are octaves between the tenor of the firsf choir and treble of the second. A few other less important slips have, no doubt, already been discovered by the author. Before bringing this review to a close we should like to suggest to young students, organists especially, the great value of Dr. Gordon Saunders's work as a means of learning to read at sight from open score and mixed clefs. It is well known to old examiners that many men are annually plucked at examinations not because they are ignorant of counterpoint, but because they have first to work out the inner parts of their examples in the treble clef, and afterwards transcribe them into the alto and tenor clefs. Not only does this operation cost a lot of time which is very precious, but it opens the door to no end of mistakes in the hurried transcription, mistakes which propagate luxuriantly after the examiner has been heard to say with solemn voice, "Papers, please, gentlemen!" Any student who, beginning on the first page of this book, determined to play every example carefully through until he reached the other end, would not only catch that spirit of pure polyphony which becomes in course of time an instinct which guides the pen, but he would also be able to dive into the vast enjoyable literature of vocal part-writing, which is closed against those who cannot read freely from open score and "proper" clefs.

Octavo Edition of Trios, &c., for Female Voices. Nos. 267-273. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

Here are seven more pieces, mostly of a trifling nature, suitable for the ladies' classes and choirs which have sprung up in such large numbers during the past few years. The first, "Whenever life some joy does bring," by Marie J. A. Wurm, has English and German words, is almost as simple as a hymn tune, and more diatonic than many modern hymn tunes. Consequently it is within the means of elementary singing classes. The next two numbers are also by Miss Wurm. "Under the greenwood tree" is of course a setting of Shakespeare's lines from "As you like it," and is equally unpretending and tuneful. "Good night" is more ambitious and contains some effective florid passages with a touch or two of tone-painting; but the piece is not difficult, and it is certainly piquant and generally pleasing. Different in character to any of the foregoing is "Hohenlinden," by Florence H. Marshall, a setting of lines, for choral recitation, by Campbell. The voices are in unison with an agitated accompaniment until a dozen bars before the close, when they divide into four parts, the final cadence bringing an effective little piece to an impressive close. No. 271, "My true love hath my heart," by W. A. C. Cruickshank, is a light, tripping, and pretty part-song, with an ad lib. accompaniment. The unisonal close, pianissimo, is effective. Another dainty little piece is "Roger and Maggie," by C. Mühlfeld, the words taken from the German. It is in three parts, and is simplicity itself. The last for the present is "Little thoughts that grow," by Charles Harford Lloyd, very elegantly written and melodious, with a bright and charming accompaniment.

Six Pieces for the Violoncello. By G. Libotton. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

All these pieces show the hand of a skilful and experienced violoncellist. No. 1 is a clever study in D major, entitled "Etude Caprice"; it forms a kind of moto perpetuo, interrupted for a moment by a cantabile phrase, più lento. No. 2 is a flowing and graceful Rêverie. The pianoforte accompaniment deserves notice; composers are apt, sometimes, to take the word "accompaniment" in a very limited sense; but here it is to a great extent evolved from the thematic material, and therefore interesting. No. 3 is an effective and not difficult transcription of a well-known "Caprice Hongrois." The lively principal theme, and its calm and well-contrasted middle section, are effectively presented by the solo instrument. No. 4 is a transcription of Chopin's lovely Nocturne in D flat (Op. 27, No. 2). It suits the violoncello so well that no one unacquainted with the fact would suspect that it was an arrangement. The same may be said of No. 5, which is Tschaikowsky's charming "Chant sans Paroles" for pianoforte. No. 6 is a setting of Schubert's "Du bist die Ruh'," a melody as pure as it is beautiful.

Sonata, for Pianoforte and Violin. By Arthur Hinton.

Sonate, No. 1, in D, für Pianoforte und Violine. Componirt von W. H. Speer. Op. 4.

Romance, for Violin and Pianoforte. By J. S. R. Kirtland. [Brietkopf and Härtel.]

Mr. Hinton's Sonata is evidently the work of an earnest and ambitious musician; but so anxious is he to avoid the beaten track that his chromatic notes and modulations are certainly in excess of what one could reasonably desire. Of the three movements, the middle one, Andante e mesto, is the most satisfactory. Mr. Speer's Pianoforte and Violin Sonata presents several points of interest: the thematic material is attractive, and there is some good concertante writing. Moreover, the composer keeps within bounds, and his music may be easily followed. The connection between the principal themes of the first and last movements will not escape the notice of the careful listener. The Romance by Mr. Kirtland is graceful, but in a thoroughly Chopinesque vein.

Sérénade Espagnol. For Violin. By Gilbert R. Betjemann. [Robert Cocks and Co.]

What may be termed drawing-room pieces for violin and pianoforte are now published in vast numbers, but they are mostly written in a style that may be described as elegant commonplace. Mr. Betjemann's composition is rather removed from the ordinary groove, and should therefore be welcome. The principal theme is expressive, and the accompaniment, with its semiquaver triplet at the commencement of each bar, suggests alike the twang of the guitar and the click of the castanets. There is an alternative section of a more agitated though less distinctive nature, after which the original theme returns, duly embellished, and a charming sketch comes to a pianissimo close.

Six Tenor Songs. By Frederick Corder. [Forsyth Brothers.]

In this album of lyrics tenor vocalists who are weary of ordinary sentimental ballads will find something of a higher class, but within the means of fairly well trained amateurs. Of course, inequalities are apparent, the shifting tonality in No. 2, "I ask of thee," giving the sense of labour and unquiet; while No. 1, "Mountain Song," No. 3, "Bright are the tiny billows," and No. 6, "Sing to me," are charmingly fresh and spontaneous. The accompaniment in all of the songs adds greatly to the effect.

FOREIGN NOTES.

THE twenty-ninth meeting of the General German Musical Society took place at Munich between May 26 and 30. Among the new works produced were a Pianoforte Trio, by Robert Kahn (Op. 19); a Violin and Pianoforte Sonata by Edmund Uhl (Op. 5); a similar work by Dr. Ad. Sandberger (Op. 10); A Cycle of Songs, with introductory accompanied recitation, "Eliland," by Hans Sommer; a symphonic poem for orchestra, "Ideal und Leben," by Albert Gorter; a Scherzo from a Symphony in B minor, by Edm. von Mihalovich; and a symphonic waltz, "Olaf's Hochzeitsreigen," for orchestra, by Alexander Ritter. The following rarely-heard compositions were also included in the scheme—viz., Ad. Jensen: song cycle, "Dolorosa"; Tschaikowsky: Violin Concerto, Op. 35, and Fantasia for orchestra, "Francesca da Rimini"; A. Bruckner: Adagio from Seventh Symphony; Liszt: "Die Ideale," symphonic poem for orchestra, and his beautiful setting of the 13th Psalm; Richard Strauss: "Wanderer's Sturmlied," for six-part chorus and orchestra (Op. 14); Berlioz: Cassandra's scena and aria, from "La Prise de Troie"; Eugene d'Albert, Pianoforte Sonata in F sharp minor, Op. 10; String Quartet, in E (Op. 11), and second Pianoforte Concerto in E (Op. 12); F. Smetana: String Quartet, "Aus meinem Leben"; and Wagner: the original version of the "Gralserzählung," from the third act of "Lohengrin." As will be seen from the above list, the programmes did not include one single complete symphony, but several symphonic poems, &c.—a significant sign of the times. Another notable feature is the prominence given to the works of our countryman Eugene d'Albert. To have three new and important works produced at the most distinguished continental musical festival is an honour of which the greatest living masters might well be proud. In the words of Dr. Otto Lessmann, "the chief success of the Festival may be connected with the name of that unique artist Eugene d'Albert, whom, in his dual capacity of pianist and composer, the world of music will gradually have to get accustomed to consider amongst the foremost men of our time." For the special benefit of the visitors to this Festival, the Court Theatre gave performances of several operas—viz., Berlioz's "Les Troyens à Carthage," Wagner's "Tannhäuser" (newly mounted according to the Paris edition), Cornelius's noble "Cid," and the one-act "Sonntagmorgen" ("Sunday Morning") by Gerhard Schelderup, which was received with a volley of hisses!

The extract from "Lohengrin" was conducted by Herr Levi from Wagner's original full score, which is preserved in the royal Bavarian Private Library. The twenty additional lines, sung by Herr Vogel on this occasion, were cut by the composer before the first performance at Weimar, because they delayed the action, while adding but little to our knowledge of the mysterious hero of the opera. They describe how the Knights of the Grail heard of the trials of Elsa, and how the Swan appeared to carry one of their number to the place whence her prayer for help came through the air. The music is said to be fully equal to what goes before, and what we know from the published score as "Lohengrin's Erzählung."

Apropos of the Tonkünstler-Versammlung under notice, some of our German musical contemporaries published interesting special numbers. Dr. Lessmann's Allgemeine Musik Zeitung, besides giving elaborate analyses of several of the works produced, printed the rhymed address (it cannot be called a poem) which Wagner read to the workmen engaged on building the Bayreuth Festspielhaus, on the occasion of the completion of their task. In some eighty lines, which in their quiet humour and earnestness recall that most lovable of his creations, Hans Sachs, and in their jolting metre, quaint rhymes, and puns, the famous "Kapuzinerpredigt" in Schiller's "Wallenstein's Lager," the master expressed his appreciation of their work and his steadfast faith in the German "Geist," which gave him strength for the completion of the gigantic task which he had set himself. The same paper contains also a beautiful prologue to the Festival held in the Beethoven Haus at Bonn in May (which Festival, by the way, resulted in a net profit of 20,000 marks). The author is Ernst von Wildenbruch, the first among living German poets. In the Festival number of the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik Herr Richard Pohl has an article giving a very interesting account of the first performance of Cornelius's "Barber of Bagdad," at Weimar, in 1858, at which he was present, and of the events which led up to and were the cause of the disgraceful scene in the theatre. The article is yet another tribute to the wonderfully noble character of Franz Liszt, against whom the intrigue was chiefly directed.

On May 12 the gold medal struck in honour of Brahms's sixtieth birthday was handed to the master by Baron Bezecny in the name of the Vienna Society of the Friends of Music. In his reply Brahms remarked that he was an old man who could not promise to do much to deserve the honour.

It is said that Baron Zichy, the Intendant of the Budapest Opera House, has discovered a new tenor who is likely to "put into the shade everything that has gone before." The wonderful young man, a cobbler from Arad, is called Franz Deak. His figure is reported to resemble a classical statue for symmetry, and his fine head is surrounded by an abundance of dark curls. Altogether the ideal "Heldentenor," no doubt.

A new romantic opera, "Hertha," by Franz Curti, was produced at the Cassel Court Theatre on May 9, and was enthusiastically received. It will also be produced in October next at Mannheim.

The Vienna Opera has accepted the following works as novelties for the next season—viz., "A Santa Lucia" (Tasca), "I Pagliacci" (Leoncavallo), "Das Maifest" (Richard Heuberger), "Der Kuss" (Smetana), and the ballet "Die fünf Sinne" (E. van Dyck and Roddaz).

Model performances and cycles of operas seem to be becoming more and more popular in Germany. It is now announced that Herr Felix Mottl will, in November next, conduct a cycle of Berlioz's works at the Carlsruhe Court Theatre. "Béatrice et Bénedict," "Benvenuto Cellini," "La Prise de Troie," "Les Troyens à Carthage," and the dramatic symphony "Roméo et Juliette" will be performed.

At the same Theatre Herr Mottl's one-act opera "Fürst und Sänger" ("Prince and Singer") has at last been produced. The event took place, after many delays, on May 24, before a select and critical audience, and the success seems to have been a great and unequivocal one. As was to be expected from such an out-and-out follower of the modern school, the music is in the style of Wagner's later works, but full of individuality. It is said to be very impassioned, highly dramatic, and always noble. The plot was suggested by a little footnote in the appendix to Goethe's "West-Œstlicher Divan," and the composer himself arranged the libretto, which Herr Widmann afterwards put into verse.

Herr von Kaskel's one-act opera "Der Hochzeitsmorgen," of which we spoke in our last issue, has been accepted for performance by the Berlin Royal Opera and La Scala in Milan. For the latter the libretto is being translated into Italian.

On the 7th and 8th ult. the judges in the competition for the prize of 5,000 marks, offered by the Duke of Saxe-Coburg for the best one-act opera, met to decide on the merits of the 124 scores submitted. Two of these seemed so equally deserving of the prize that it was decided to divide it between their composers, who, as it turned out, were also their own librettists. Their names are Paul Umlauft, of Leipzig, and Josef Forster, of Vienna, and the titles of their works "Evanthia" and "Die Rose von Pontevedra" respectively. The fortunate composers will have the satisfaction of seeing their operas performed in excellent style at the Coburg Court Theatre on the 30th and 31st inst., during which time many visitors will be attracted to that town by the model performance of operas, such as Cherubini's "Medea," Boieldieu's "Le petit Chaperon rouge," which have been arranged to take place under the conductorship of Herren Felix Mottl and Levi.

Smareglia's three-act opera "Cornelius Schut" was most warmly received on its first performance at the Bohemian National Theatre, Prague, on May 20; the second act delighted the public, while the last one made a deep impression. The same work had a similarly enthusiastic reception at the Dresden Court Theatre.

A two-act opera by Herr Meyer Helmund, the well known song-writer, and entitled "Liebeskampf," met with but a moderate success on its production on the 9th ult., at the Leipzig Stadt-Theater. Neither the music nor the libretto (of which latter Herr Helmund is also the author) shows any striking features.

Signor Mascagni has finished his opera "Ratcliff" and has delivered the full score to the Berlin Opera. The gruesome subject of Heine's extraordinary play should suit the author of the "Cavalleria" to perfection, for it is nothing if not melodramatic. By the way, a lullaby sung in the play by a crazy old woman has been set to music by Professor Stanford and is included in his Op. 7.

Rubinstein's opera "Kinder der Haide" was performed, for the first time in Berlin, at the Kroll Theatre, on the 2nd ult., and was much applauded. The same composer's "Maccabäer" and "Nero" are expected to be included in the répertoire of the Royal Opera House for next season. Altogether, Rubinstein seems to have been very fortunate of late as regards performances of his more ambitious works.

A new Symphony (No. 4) in D minor, by Professor Emil Hartmann, was lately produced at Copenhagen, and was very favourably received. The father of the composer, Herr J. P. E. Hartmann, who, although in his eighty-second year, is still in excellent health, was present on the occasion.

Frau Ingeborg von Bronsart's grand opera "Hiarne" has been performed at the Court Theatre at Weimar, and met with a very flattering reception.

At Moscow a new one-act opera, "Aleko," by S. Rachmaninow, a pupil at the local Conservatoire, was given for the first time, and was eminently successful. The libretto is founded on Pushkin's "Gipsies."

A Symphony by Prince Henry XXIV. of Reuss was some time since performed at a Philharmonic Concert in the Opera House at Budapest. The composer conducted, and the audience, which included the élite of the Hungarian aristocracy, received the work with great applause.

Signor Barbini, Conductor of the Russian and Italian Opera at the Panaieff Theatre, St. Petersburg, has completed an opera, "Falcoda rupe," which will shortly be heard at the said Theatre.

Beethoven's colossal "Missa Solemnis" was lately performed at Bayreuth, under the conductorship of Herr Julius Kniese. The choruses were sung by the local Singverein, and two military bands supplied the orchestra. When it is remembered that Bayreuth is but a large village of some 20,000 inhabitants, the achievement must be considered a remarkable one.

The great Italian dramatic soprano, Signora Bellincioni, who has created the utmost enthusiasm in some continental towns, and quite recently in Berlin, with her wonderful impersonations of Santuzza in "Cavalleria," Christina in "Mala Vita," &c., has taken the daring step of playing Figaro in Rossini's "Barbiere," and, strange to relate, her assumption of this typical baritone part is on all sides acknowledged to be one of the most enjoyable performances conceivable!

Richard Strauss, who had been spending some time in Egypt for the sake of his health, is at present in Taormina, in Sicily, where he is putting the finishing touches to his grand opera "Guntram" (not a one-act trifle this time!)

A monument to the late Joachim Raff is to be erected at Frankfurt-on-Main by his pupils, who must have been either very numerous or very well to do to be able to afford such an expensive luxury. The town has already granted the site.

The Director of the Leipzig Körner Museum, Dr. E. Peschel, will shortly publish the diary of the young poet whose patriotic songs "Leyer und Schwert" were set by Weber to such stirring music. The book will contain a number of hitherto unknown poems.

Mr. Julius Bechgaard, a popular Danish song composer, has just achieved a brilliant success at the Theatre Royal, Copenhagen, with his new opera "King Frode," in three acts, the libretto of which is founded upon some incidents during the times of the Vikings. It is reported that the opera will soon be produced at the Theatre in Prague.

Miss Elfrida Andrée, the talented composer and Cathedral organist in Gothenburg, Sweden, has written a new Symphony in A minor, entitled "Spillror" (Wrecks), which was recently performed for the first time at a Symphony Concert, given at the Grand Opera House in Gothenburg. The press organs are unanimous in their praise of the work, and it is said that arrangements are being made for its production at the World's Fair.

Bizet's opera "Les Pêcheurs de Perles" was produced, for the first time in Berlin, at Kroll's Theatre, on the 11th ult., and met with a somewhat lukewarm reception, although the performance, under Kapellmeister Ruthardt, was a good one. The work was put on the stage at the request of Madame Sembrich, who, of course, took the part of Leïla.

To celebrate the tercentenary of the death of Orlando di Lasso, which took place in 1594, it has been decided to arrange a two days' international musical Festival and Tournament next year at Mons, the birthplace of the great Flemish musician. Invitations to partake in the Tournament will be sent to all choral societies both in Belgium and abroad, and it is hoped that a great number of them will accept.

On the 2nd and 3rd inst. the Hesse and Palatinate Musical Festival will take place at Worms. Amongst the works to be performed are "The Messiah," the "Choral" Symphony, a "Song of Praise" (by Friedr. Gernsheim), Beethoven's Violin Concerto, selections from Wagner's "Walküre," &c.

Wagner's "Walküre" continues to draw crowded houses at the Paris Grand Opéra; in fact, the receipts are the largest ever known there, as much as 23,000 francs being taken in one evening. To prevent the possibility of a postponement becoming necessary through any of the artists falling ill, three or four understudies have been provided for each part. The intense interest taken in the work is shown by the enormous number of articles upon it which have appeared, and are still appearing, in the French press. Some of these are most appreciative, others very much the reverse, and the latter supply some very amusing reading.

During the next season the Paris Grand Opéra intends to produce the following: Maréchal's Déidamie, Léfèbvre's "Djelma," Chabrier's "Gwendoline," Massenet's "Thaïs," and Mdlle. Augusta Holmès's "La Montagne noir."

At the Dal Verme Theatre, in Milan, a new four-act opera, "Spartaco," by Pietro Plantania, the director of the local Conservatoire, was produced for the first time on May 13 with success.

Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony was recently played in Venice for the first time in public! Fortunate Venetians, to experience the wonderful sensation of listening to such a "novelty."

The Berlin Philharmonic Choir, one of the most enterprising Institutions to be found anywhere, will, as usual, perform a number of new compositions during the next winter season. The most important novelties are Rubinstein's sacred opera "Moses," two cantatas, "Feuerreiter" and "Elfengesang," by Hugo Wolf, and "Heldenklage," for soli, chorus and orchestra, by Wilhelm Berger. Herr Siegfried Ochs is the Conductor of the Society.

The Norwegian Minister of Education and Public Worship, Herr Bang, has prohibited the performance of Cherubini's Requiem Mass in the Cathedral at Bergen on theological grounds. We wonder if the said gentleman would also prohibit such works as the Mass in B minor by the Protestant Bach, or the many similar works written by Protestant composers in modern times.

Rubinstein is said to be engaged upon an opera entitled "Jesus the Christ," which deals with the life of the Saviour on earth. The libretto is by a distinguished German author.

M. Reyer's opera "Salammbo" was lately produced for the first time on any stage at Marseilles and created great enthusiasm.

At a Soirée given recently at Paris, by M. and Madame Edouard Colonne, a new allegorical cantata, "La vision de la reine," by Mdlle. Augusta Holmès, was performed for the first time.

The Italian papers give currency to the statement that unless Signor Boïto's "Nero," on which he has been engaged for over fifteen years, be soon forthcoming Rubinstein's opera of the same name will be produced at La Scala, in Milan, next year. All admirers of the author of "Mefistofele" will hope that this threat may have the effect of hastening the completion of a work which Signor Mazzucato, in Grove's "Dictionary of Music," refers to as "the greatest musical drama of the nineteenth century."

Herr Weingartner having been appointed Conductor at the Munich Opera, the similar post at the Berlin Opera has been offered to Herr Grossmann, of Cologne, who is said to be but twenty-three years old. Germany certainly seems to possess an abundance of young conductors of exceptional ability, and the young Emperor is evidently all in favour of appointing them to the most responsible posts.

The well-known violinist, M. Eugène Ysaÿe, has lately come forward as a conductor, and seems to have displayed striking aptitude for the task. He conducted a Concert of music of the modern French school at Waux-Hall, in Brussels, and will shortly give other Concerts devoted to Belgian and Russian music.

CORRESPONDENCE.

CONGREGATIONAL SINGING.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

SIR,—My attention has been called to a paragraph in the Musical Herald commencing: "THE MUSICAL TIMES changes its tone entirely in its reply to the criticisms of the Musical Herald," &c. Please allow me to say that I never read the criticisms of the Musical Herald. The assumption of the editor of that journal that he has exercised such a remarkable influence on THE MUSICAL TIMES reminds one rather of the small Jew-boy who attributed a violent thunderstorm to the fact that he had a knuckle-bone of ham in his pocket. If this and the following paragraphs in the same column of the Musical Herald are to be taken as samples of the "criticisms" offered, I hope neither THE MUSICAL TIMES nor any other journal will be led by them. For example, the exact words of THE MUSICAL TIMES and their quotation in the Musical Herald shall be given side by side:—

MUSICAL TIMES.	MUSICAL HERALD.
On the whole, it seems desirable that we should have amongst us men who value highly artistic church music and dread to see its existence threatened, as well as those who come forward as champions of congregational singing.	On the whole, however, THE MUSICAL TIMES considers it desirable that there should be champions of congregational church music, as well as of artistic music, &c.

Was ever a sentence so completely twisted round? To put it plainly, THE MUSICAL TIMES, having justified its former article by stating that it is desirable that some one should take up the cudgels for artistic church music, the Musical Herald makes it say that it is desirable there should be champions of congregational music as against artistic music; the editor adds: "This last statement being a somewhat weak abandonment of the position it took up previously." The statement, I admit, would have been a "weak abandonment" if it had been made. It is, however, clearly a waste of time to notice the "criticisms" of one who has such an utter absence of logical sense.

I cannot say good-bye to the Musical Herald without pointing out the real absurdity of the final and evidently would-be crushing argument in favour of congregational singing. At the 800th anniversary of the founding of the Cathedral of Winchester it appears that a complete and large orchestra was employed, and a very fine chorus, the nucleus of which was, I believe, a well-known and highly-trained choral society. The Lute (as quoted in the Musical Herald) says that when the Old Hundredth Psalm was performed by this band and chorus, in the singing of which many of the congregation heartily joined, "nothing during the meeting so moved the soul of the devout listener" (the italics are mine) "as did the harmonies of this imposing hymn."

The difficulties of the question of congregational singing are therefore now solved. The "recipe" recommended by the Musical Herald is so simple that we give it gratis for the benefit of rural outlying places of worship:—Take one of the most efficient amateur orchestras in England (supplement it with professionals where necessary), add a highly-trained choral society (supplemented if necessary), and allow many (not all, only the best singers) of the congregation to join; place everybody in one of the longest Cathedral-naves in England, and the result will be that the devout listener will be deeply moved.

I agree with the editor of the Musical Herald and shake his hand warmly.—I am, &c.,

YOUR HUMBLE CONTRIBUTOR.

PALESTRINA'S MUSIC.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

SIR,—In your report of the Bach Choir Concert of May 16 you remark that "In order to study the traditional method of rendering Palestrina's music, it is necessary to visit Rome."

During a stay of some weeks last year in Rome I had several opportunities of hearing the traditional method at St. Peter's and St. John Lateran, and I am not sure that it would commend itself to an English audience. The choirs, consisting of from twelve to fifteen voices, sang fortissimo throughout, and the organ was played from beginning to end so loudly that the voices were scarcely heard, and no variation of tone was introduced. During Lent, however, the organ was silent, and the choirs sang with excellent precision, attack, and intonation; but the constant fortissimo seemed somewhat monotonous.

At the German Church of Sta Maria dell' Anima, on the other hand, the Palestrina music was sung with light and shade, and the effect was (to me) far more satisfactory. This church draws its choir from the adjoining "Scuola Gregoriana," which makes a special study of Plain-song and the music of Palestrina's period; and it enjoys a wide reputation for the excellence of its musical services.

I give these remarks for what they are worth; perhaps some other correspondents who have been in Rome may be disposed to give their views.—Your obedient Servant,

June 3, 1893. C. F. ABDY WILLIAMS.

SMETANA'S "VLTAVA."

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

SIR,—In the programme book of the first Richter Concert of the present series it is stated that Smetana's work "Vltava" is the second of a cycle of three Symphonic Poems bearing the collective title of "Mein Vaterland," the other two being "Vysehrad" and "Libussa." "G" makes the same statement in Grove's "Dictionary of Music and Musicians." Dr. Eduard Hanslick, writing (apparently with the full score before him) in a Vienna paper some three years ago, says: "The work played by the Philharmonic ['Vltava'] is the second of six Symphonic Poems published by Smetana, under the collective title, 'Mein Vaterland.' Their superscription is: 1. Wyscherod. 2. Vltava. 3. Scharka (the name of an Amazon leader, and also of a valley near Prag). 4. Aus Böhmens Flur und Hain. 5. Tabor. 6. Blanik."—Yours truly,

R. H. L.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 Notices of concerts, and other information supplied by our friends in the country, must be forwarded as early as possible after the occurrence; otherwise they cannot be inserted. Our correspondents must specifically denote the date of each concert, for without such date no notice can be taken of the performance.*

Our correspondents will oblige by writing all names as clearly as possible, as we cannot be responsible for any mistakes that may occur.

Correspondents are informed that their names and addresses must accompany all communications.

We cannot undertake to return offered contributions; the authors, therefore, will do well to retain copies.

Notice is sent to all subscribers whose payment (in advance) is exhausted. The paper will be discontinued where the Subscription is not renewed. We again remind those who are disappointed in obtaining back numbers that, although the music is always kept in stock, only a sufficient quantity of the rest of the paper is printed to supply the current sale.

BRIEF SUMMARY OF COUNTRY NEWS.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for any opinions expressed in this summary, as all the notices are either collated from the local papers or supplied to us by correspondents.

Aberdeen.—It is seldom that sixty pianoforte performers can be heard without tediousness, yet such was the case at the annual Concert of the Aberdeen Music School on the 16th ult., in the Albert Hall. The principal, Mrs. Webster, had massed them in double quartets, in marches, &c., the most brilliant being Wagner's "Tannhäuser," which was led by Miss Blusman, who conducted the Concert. Löhr's cantata "Fairy Music," under the bâton of Mr. Souter, songs, and violin pieces completed a programme which was most highly praised.

Ashton-under-Lyne.—At the anniversary of the Dedication Festival at Christ Church, on the 18th ult., Farmer's Oratorio Christ and His Soldiers was performed, the choir being assisted for the occasion by Miss Marjorie Eaton, who was heard to great effect in the solos. There was a large congregation.

Bangor.—Gaul's new cantata Israel in the Wilderness has been splendidly rendered at St. Mary's Church, under the bâton of Mr. Edward Broome and that of the composer himself.——At the Penrhyn Hall several successful Concerts have taken place, notably that at which Dr. Roland Rogers accompanied.——The Cathedral Organist, Mr. T. Westlake Morgan, has been busy giving Organ Recitals at St. George's Hall, Liverpool, Wexford, New Ross, and Enniscorthy, and adjudicating at Eisteddfodau at Barmouth and Rhyl.——At the Cathedral the Choral Festival schemes are approaching maturity.

Brighton.—The Lecture delivered by Mr. Sandor Merei at the Pavilion, on May 6, was given in connection with the Brighton College of Music—not School, as inadvertently stated in our last issue.

Cape Town.—A Grand Oratorio Concert (the first of the season) was given by the combined Choral and Orchestral Organisation of Cape Town and suburbs, in the Drill Hall, Caledon Square, on Monday, May 15, when Haydn's Creation and Stanford's The Revenge were successfully performed, with chorus and orchestra numbering over 200. Fräulein Helene Schmedes, Dr. Murray, Mr. Stapleton, and Mr. C. H. Carose were the soloists. Although the weather was most violent and unpropitious there were fully 1,200 persons present. The choruses were uniformly well rendered. Mr. J. Barrow Dowling, who has during the last two years successfully organised the Choral Union, conducted as usual. The Messiah and Sir Arthur Sullivan's Golden Legend will follow during the season.

Chelmsford.—The annual Festival Service of the Chelmsford Association of Church Choirs was held at the Parish Church, on the 20th ult. There were between 300 and 400 voices, supported by two cornets and two trombones. The Rev. Baden Powell's "Lift high the Cross" formed an appropriate processional hymn; the recessional being Dr. C. H. Lloyd's tune to "Round the Sacred City." The hymns before and after the sermon were "Crossing the Bar" (Bridge), "Peace, perfect peace" (Goldbeck), and "God of the soul" (Rogers). The Magnificat and Nunc dimittis were Hugh Blair's festal setting of a modified form of the eighth tone. Psalms xlviii. and lxviii. were sung to the eighth tone, first ending, and Battishill's single chant in A respectively. The anthem was Mendelssohn's tenor solo and chorus "O come, let us worship," the Rev. Dr. Rogers, Precentor to the Association, singing the solo. Canon Duckworth preached an admirable sermon; Mr. W. G. Wood ably presided at the organ, and Mr. F. R. Frye (Choirmaster to the Association) conducted with experienced judgment. The vocal quality of the choir was excellent, as were also the enunciation of the words and the expression given to the music.

Chicago.—J. E. Newell's cantata The Christian Pilgrim was performed in this city at St. Peter's, on Wednesday, February 8, and repeated, by desire, at St. Chrysostom's, on Wednesday, May 10. In the former case the choir was assisted by that of St. James's, and in the latter by those of St. Peter's and St. James's aforesaid. The Conductor was Mr. Kilner F. Thomas.

Cirencester.—On Trinity Sunday the restored and enlarged organ built by Bishop and Son was re-opened at Holy Trinity Church. The Morning Service was Stanford in B flat; Introit, "In humble faith," Garrett; Communion Service, Gibbons in G. The Evening Service was Stainer in A; anthem, "It came even to pass," Ouseley. After Evensong the Organist, Mr. A. H. Gibbons, gave a Recital.

Liverpool.—Two Organ Recitals were given on the 17th ult. by Mr. B. Jackson (Organist of the People's Palace, London), whose programmes included pieces by Bach, Rheinberger, Guilmant, Smart, Sullivan, Grison, Hopkins, and others.

Reading.—A Concert was given on May 31 by the Berkshire Amateur Musical Society, the works performed being Gade's Erl-King's Daughter, Schubert's Symphony in B minor, Godard's Concerto Romantique for violin and orchestra. Songs were sung by Miss Blanche Murray, Miss Blanche Powell, and Mr. Chas. Copland. Solo violin, Mr. Chas. Griffiths. Conductors, Mr. J. C. B. Tirbutt and Mr. Charles Griffiths. Accompanist, Mr. E. K. Deacon.

Rochester.—A very successful Festival in aid of the Choir Benevolent Fund was held here on the 7th ult. There was a Service in the Cathedral at 3 o'clock, the choir at which consisted of nearly seventy voices, selected from the Chapels Royal, St. Paul's, Westminster, Windsor, Eton, Canterbury, Norwich, Rochester, and the Temple Church. The hymn "Hark, the sound of holy voices," was sung in procession to Mr. Langran's "Deerhurst," the beauty of which, however, was marred in some of the verses by unison singing, for which the tune is not suited. The Magnificat and Nunc dimittis were sung (unaccompanied) to Dr. Stephen Elvey's setting in A, conducted by Professor Bridge. After the third Collect came Boyce's "I have surely built Thee an house," and at the close of Evening Prayer Professor Bridge's Motet Hymn to the Creator, which the talented composer accompanied, the solo being beautifully sung by Masters Roper and Fraser (of Westminster Abbey). An appropriate sermon was then preached by Dean Hole, and the service closed with "Praise the Lord" (Goss). The accompaniments were shared by Mr. J. Hopkins (Organist of the Cathedral), Professor Bridge, Mr. Harcourt, and Mr. Dale. In the evening a Concert of Glees, Madrigals, Part-Songs and Ballads was given in the Corn Exchange, conducted by Professor Bridge, whose "Bold Turpin" was included in the programme and enthusiastically encored. The soloists were Masters Roper and Fraser and Mr. Bell (Westminster), Messrs. Gawthrop and Shepley (Chapels Royal), Kenningham and Mills (St. Paul's), Pearson (Canterbury), and Oldroyd and Fearnley (Rochester). The accompanists were Professor Bridge, Dr. Longhurst, and Mr. Harcourt; and at the close of the first part Mr. Charles Fry gave his humorous recitation "The Charity Dinner."——On the 8th ult. the service was repeated at All Saints', Maidstone, at 3.30, when Dr. Longhurst conducted, and the whole of the accompaniments were most ably played by Mr. Wilson Parish, the Organist of the Church. On this occasion the Processional Hymn was wisely sung in harmony throughout. The sermon was preached by the Rev. C. J. Ridgeway, Vicar of Christ Church, Lancaster Gate.——A Concert, with a programme nearly identical with that of the previous evening, was given in the Maidstone Corn Exchange, conducted by Dr. Longhurst, who was assisted in the accompaniments by Mr. Parish and Mr. Harcourt. On both evenings encores were numerous and enthusiastic. The labour of organizing these Festivals devolved mainly on the Secretary of the Society, Mr. W. A. Frost (of St. Paul's Cathedral), and the honorary local Secretaries, Mr. T. Oldroyd (of Rochester) and Mr. J. Burgiss-Brown (of Maidstone).

Organ Appointments.—Mr. J. H. Wait, to St. Margaret Pattens, Rood Lane.—Mr. Charles F. Phillips, Organist and Choirmaster to Dalkey Church, Co. Dublin.—Mr. Horace J. Morpuss, to the Old Meeting House, Dudley.—Miss A. L. Poole, Organist and Director of the Choir to St. John's Church, Ipswich.—Mr. Claude Fowles, Organist and Choir-Director to All Saints' Church, Babbacombe, Torquay.—Mr. Alec H. Griffin, Organist and Choirmaster to Dodbrooke Parish Church, Kingsbridge.—Mr. Albert Mellor, Organist and Choirmaster to the Parish Church, Eton.—Mr. James Young, Organist and Choirmaster to St. Philip's Church, Southport.—Mr. John England, Organist and Choirmaster to South Norwood Congregational Church.

Choir Appointments.—Mr. W. M. Wait (Choirmaster), to St. Margaret Pattens, Rood Lane.—Mr. Walter Clay (Alto), to St. George's Chapel Royal.—Mr. F. J. Walker (Choirmaster), to St. John the Baptist, Great Marlborough Street.—Mr. Charles E. Tinney (Professor of Singing), to Trinity College.

MR.
CHARLES FRY'S RECITALS.

DREAM OF JUBAL (Mackenzie).
(Original exponent.)
ATHALIE, ANTIGONE, ŒDIPUS (Mendelssohn).
HAMLET
(Berthold Tours's new music, for Strings and Piano).
MERCHANT OF VENICE
(Sullivan's music, for Full Orchestra; or arranged for Strings and Piano).
AS YOU LIKE IT
(Part-Songs and Orchestral music, Strings and Piano).
Shakespearian and Miscellaneous Recitals, &c.
Address, Belmont, Blenheim Gardens, Willesden Park, N.W.

MR. BEN. BURY, L.R.A.M. (Tenor)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c. Church, Lancs.

MR. LAWRENCE FRYER (Tenor)
(St. Paul's Cathedral).
"Has a magnificent voice."—Macclesfield Chronicle. "A tenor voice of richness and power, which we hope soon to hear again."—Bath Gazette. "Quite electrified the audience with 'Thou shalt break them.'"—Bishop Stortford Mercury. "'Comfort ye' and 'Every valley' were grandly rendered."—Sheffield Chronicle. "In the declamatory passages he reached an enviable point of excellence. 'Sound an alarm' was a remarkable exhibition of power."—Finchley Gazette. "His ringing tones gave conclusive indication of his great capabilities."—Southampton Times. "Nature has endowed Mr. Lawrence Fryer with a magnificent tenor voice, which he uses with true artistic feeling."—Grantham Journal. "A rich and powerful tenor voice, of unusual quality and range."—Nottingham Journal.
Address, 47, Croxted Road, Dulwich; or, St. Paul's Cathedral.

MESSRS. BARTH & BLACK
Concerts arranged. Tours booked. Vocal and Instrumental Soloists of the highest class provided for every description of Concerts and Musical Performances. A Full Orchestra furnished at short notice. Special Parties for Oratorios, Operas, and Costume Recitals. Artists carefully selected for At Homes, Garden Parties, &c.
BARTH and BLACK, 2, Oxford Mansions, Oxford Street, W.

WANTED, ALTO, for St. George's-in-the-East. Good reader. £10. Apply to Organist, Rectory, Cannon Street Road, E.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO, EWER & CO.

ROECKEL, J. L.—Six Pieces for Violin, with Pianoforte Accompaniment. 5s.

SAURET, EMILE.—Elégie et Rondo, pour Violon et Piano. 4s.

SCHLESINGER, S. B.—Five Miniatures. For Pianoforte. 2s. 6d.

SCHÄFER, CHRISTIAN.—"Our beautiful world." An Operetta, written by Miss McNAMARA. Paper cover, 2s. 6d.

CHILDREN'S SOUVENIR SONG-BOOK.—Arranged by WILLIAM L. TOMLINS, Choral Director of the Columbian Exposition, Chicago, 1893. Paper cover, 3s.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW. No. 13. "The Quiet Mind." Unison Song. By HENRY SMART. "Waving Forest, Flowing Stream," and "Slumber, lovely child." Two Unaccompanied Two-part Songs (from Silcher's "Sixty Melodies for Youth," adapted by F. SOPER). Easy Studies in Time and Tune combined. By W. G. McNAUGHT. 1½d.

MACFARREN, WALTER—(in A). Magnificat and Nunc dimittis. 4d.

STEGGALL, CHARLES—(in B flat). Te Deum and Benedictus. For Men's Voices. A.T.T.B. 8d.

—— (in B flat). Magnificat and Nunc dimittis. For Men's Voices. A.T.T.B. 6d.

STURGES, EDWARD J.—Te Deum. Chant Service. 2d.

TRIMNELL, T. TALLIS—(in F). Kyrie Eleison and Nicene Creed. (No. 137. Novello's Parish Choir Book.) 3d.

GIRLING, J. W. G.—Twelve Hymns: 1. "Hark! what mean those holy voices." 2. "Sweet is the work, my God, my King." 3. "Praise, O praise our God and King." 4. "When wounded sore the stricken heart." 5. "Songs of praise the angels sang." 6. "Oh! where shall rest be found." 7. "The voice that breathed o'er Eden." 8. "There is a blessed home." 9. "Praise the Lord! ye heavens, adore Him." 10. "Through the day Thy love has spared us." 11. "Saviour, breathe an evening blessing." 12. "The roseate hues of early dawn." 1s.

STANFORD, C. VILLIERS.—"Fairest scene of all creation." A Hymn to celebrate the Royal Wedding (July 6, 1893). The words written by Canon NEVILLE. 1½d. Words only, 1s. per 100.

CLARE, EDWYN A.—"Fear not, O land." Anthem for Harvest. 3d.

FROST, C. J.—(in A flat). Te Deum laudamus. For Choir and Congregation. Melody only. 1d.

GAFFE, GEORGE.—The Offertory Sentences. 1s.

GRIFFITH, EDWARD—(in D). Te Deum laudamus. For People and Choir. Antiphonally. Melody only. 1d.

MARTIN, GEORGE C.—"O praise God in His holiness." Set to an Ancient Chant. (No. 429. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 2d.

MORRISON, R. T. CLARK.—"The eyes of all wait upon Thee." Anthem. For Four Voices. 4d.

—— "My God and King." Anthem. For Four Voices. 3d.

—— "O magnify the Lord with me." Anthem. For Soprano Solo and Chorus. 3d.

TOLLEMACHE, W. J.—Kyrie eleison. 3d.

WRIGHT, HENRIETTA.—Kyrie. Arranged from Chopin's Nocturne (Op. 15, No. 3). 1d.

INNES-MEO, E. J.—"Jesus calls us; o'er the tumult." 1d.

BENNETT, GEORGE J.—"The oak tree." A Four-part Song. The words written by E. D. MORSHEAD. (No. 684. Novello's Part-Song Book.) 3d.

BOYCE, ETHEL M.—"Garden Fancies." Two Two-part Songs. For Female Voices. No. 1. "In Mary's Garden." No. 2. "Love has come." (Nos. 73, 74. Novello's Octavo Edition of Two-part Songs for Female Voices.) 2d. each.

CHAMPNEYS, F.—"Carmen Sæculare Wiccamicum." For Four Voices, with Organ and Pianoforte obbligati. The words written by G. H. CREMER. 3d.; accompaniment, 1s.

GADE, NIELS W.—"Sorrow not; why art thou weeping?" from "Comala." (No. 287. Novello's Octavo Edition Trios, Quartets, &c., for Female Voices.) 3d.

GOODHART, ARTHUR.—Eton School Songs:—

		s.	d.
No. 3.	The game's the thing		6d.
„ 5.	No triumphs like those		6d

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

RHEINBERGER, J.—"The Clouds." A Four-part Song. (No. 677. Novello's Part-Song Book.) 3d.

WAIT, M. W.—"Lieutenant Luff." Humorous Part-Song, for A.T.T.B. The words written by THOMAS HOOD. 4d.

FITTON, W.—"Thinking of thee." Song. 2s.

HICKS, GEO. J.—"Unknown, Beloved" ("L'inconnue"). Song. The words adapted from a poem by OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES. 2s.

MORGAN, VINCENT.—"Saviour Divine." Sacred Song. The words written by JOSEPH GRIGG. 2s.

WOODS, F. C.—"Kathleen O'Dare." Song. The words written by FLORENCE GERTRUDE ATTENBOROUGH ("Chrystabel"). 2s.

LOCKETT, WALTER J.—Second Impromptu. For the Pianoforte. 1s. 6d.

ORIGINAL COMPOSITIONS for the ORGAN.—

		s.	d.
No. 181.	Melodia .. .. WILLIAM CRESER	1	0
„ 182.	Andante Fughetta .. .. „ „	1	0

NOVELLO'S PUBLICATIONS in the TONIC SOL-FA NOTATION. Translated by W. G. McNAUGHT.

No. 789.*	Te Deum and Benedictus, in C .. JOHN GOSS	2d.
„ 793.	Peacefully slumber, my own darling son OLIVER KING	1d.
„ 794.	Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, in D J. B. CALKIN	1½d.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S New and Standard Publications.

NEW SERIES OF MODERN METHODS.

No. 1.—WALTER MACFARREN'S PIANOFORTE METHOD. Paper cover, 3s. net; cloth, 4s. 6d. net, post-free.

No. 2.—OTTO PEINIGER'S VIOLIN METHOD. Paper cover, 3s. 6d. net; cloth, 5s. net; post-free.

No. 5.—DR. H. KEETON'S CHURCH and CATHEDRAL CHORISTERS' SINGING METHOD. Paper cover, 2s. net; cloth, 3s. net; post-free.

No. 6.—CHARLES WEBB'S TONIC SOL-FA CLASS-SINGING METHOD. Limp cloth, 2s. net; post-free.

Other Methods in preparation.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S LIST of GLEES, &c., containing a choice Selection, by the most eminent Composers, of Two and Three-part Songs for equal voices and Songs for Classes in unison; many numbers in Tonic Sol-fa Notation. Just Published, arranged by JAS. BATCHELDER for Alto, two Tenors, and Bass, "The Anchor's Weighed," "The Men of Harlech," "Ye Banks and Braes."

F. H. COWEN'S favourite CANTATA for FEMALE VOICES, "THE FAIRIES' SPRING" (An Elfin Legend). Price 2s. 6d. net; Tonic Sol-fa Edition, 1s. net.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S new Edition of STANDARD CLASSICAL PIECES. 151 numbers issued.

ALSO

CLASSICAL MUSIC (new Series) selected, fingered, and edited by ADOLPHE SCHLOESSER, Professor at the Royal Academy of Music. 72 numbers issued. Lists on application.

ORGAN MUSIC.—BEST'S HANDEL'S CHORUSES. BEST'S COLLECTION of ORGAN COMPOSITIONS. New Compositions and Arrangements. Detailed Lists on application.

THE CANDIDATES' PRACTICAL SCALE and ARPEGGIO HANDBOOKS. Specially arranged for the use of Students preparing for the Examinations (Pianoforte) of the Associated Board of the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music.

BY GRAHAM P. MOORE.

Compiled in strict accordance with the Syllabus of the Associated Board, and each Book containing full directions as to the requirements of the Examiners. Issued in four Books, each Book being complete in itself, and containing only those scales required by Candidates for their respective Examinations.

Book 1. For the Local School Examinations, lower division. 1s. net.
„ 2. Higher division. 1s. 6d. net.
„ 3. For the Local Centre Examinations, junior grade. 1s. 6d. net.
„ 4. Senior grade: Part 1, Scales; Part 2, Arpeggi. Each 2s. net.

COMPLETE SCALE and ARPEGGIO TUTOR. By ADOLPHE SCHLOESSER. Containing all the Scales and Arpeggi required by Pupils preparing for the Metropolitan, Local, and other Examinations, including the Associated Board of the R.A.M. and R.C.M. Engraved in bold style, and printed on best paper, giving clear directions how to practise.

Part 1.	Scales. 33 pages	5s.
„ 2.	Arpeggios. 45 pages	5s.
	Complete	8s.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S New and Standard Publications.

—CONTINUED.

THE HISTORY and CONSTRUCTION of the ORGAN. By Dr. E. J. HOPKINS and Dr. E. F. RIMBAULT. This famous Work, complete, 1 Vol., 636 pp., reduced to 21s. net. Also, in five parts, 5s. each.

VIOLIN and VIOLONCELLO MUSIC.—New Compositions by MAUDE VALÉRIE WHITE, TIVADAR NACHÈZ, DAVID POPPER, LEO STERN, ANGELO MASCHERONI, and other well-known Authors. Lists on application.

SPOHR'S GREAT VIOLIN SCHOOL. Translated by JOHN BISHOP. The only version approved by SPOHR. Handsomely bound, cloth, gilt, 15s. net. Patronized and adopted by the Royal Academy of Music. Note.—In ordering, specify R. C. and Co.'s Edition.

GOD BLESS THE ROYAL PAIR. Wedding Hymn. Words by Rev. S. CHILDS CLARKE. Music by ARTHUR E. GODFREY. Price 1d. Tonic Sol-fa edition, price 1d. Military Band Accompaniment, 2s. net. Arranged as a March (Piano Solo), 3s.

THE BENEDICITE. Set to music by EDWIN H. LEMARE (in B flat), price 3d. net; also by ARTHUR E. GODFREY (in C), price 3d. net. THE PATER NOSTER. Composed for the celebration of the Holy Communion, by EDWIN H. LEMARE. Price 3d. net. THREE KYRIES, and A SEVENFOLD AMEN. By ARTHUR E. GODFREY. Price 3d. net. TE DEUM and BENEDICTUS, from Festival Service in F, by EDWIN H. LEMARE. Price 4d. each net.

6, NEW BURLINGTON ST., LONDON, W.

GRATIS.—"Comparison of English and German Methods of Teaching Harmony." Post-free. SOMMER, A.L.A.M., 14, Mardale Street, London, W.

ORGANIST (Lady, Bronze Medalist and First-Class Certificate, Society of Arts) requires ENGAGEMENT in London or Suburbs. 2½ years' experience; highest references. Miss F. Wright, 16, High Street, Winchester, Hants.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER of Great Experience and Highest Testimonials, married, desires POST; Good Organ; Coast preferred. Would Purchase a Teaching Connection. Organum, Ashdown's, Hanover Square.

AN ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER of a Church at a fashionable Seaside Town in the North of England would EXCHANGE for a similar Appointment in or near London. Fine organ; good Teaching Connection, and Choral Society. Address, F.C.O., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

ORGANIST would like a SITUATION in any London Music Warehouse as SALESMAN. Would be willing to take any post for a start. Excellent testimonials as to character and ability. Apply, J. Morgan, 61, West Street, Aberkenfig, Bridgend, South Wales.

MR. F. C. BOYES, A.C.O., for past 5½ years Organist and Choirmaster of St. Giles-in-the-Fields, desires RE-ENGAGEMENT. 4, Elm Road, Camden Square, N.W.

YOUNG LADY requires ENGAGEMENT in Music Warehouse. Pianist; can read well at sight, and has a general knowledge of the trade and of book-keeping. Five years' experience. Address, O., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners St., W.

WANTED, by Pianoforte Teacher, A.R.A.M., a good Private Connection or School Visiting ENGAGEMENT. South preferred. Address, A. R. A. M. Z., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

MUSICAL COMPANION.—YOUNG LADY, well educated, good reader and pianist, desires ENGAGEMENT, either in England or to travel. Address, stating salary, to Musique, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

TUNER and REPAIRER, practical man, seeks ENGAGEMENT. First-class references. Address, Cecil, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

PIANOFORTE TUNER WANTED. Apply, Potts and Co., 167, North Street, Brighton.

YOUNG MAN (21) requires SITUATION as IMPROVER. Able to Repair Small Goods, Brasses, &c. Fair Tuner. Six years present situation. F. N., 16, Oriental Place, Brighton.

MUSIC ENGRAVING.—Messrs. AKERMAN and ATTWOOD, Music Engravers and Printers, 7, Upper John Street, Golden Square, London, W. Estimates and terms Post-free.

VIOLIN for SALE.—ARMATTI, 1695, in perfect order; very suitable for a Lady. No dealers. Can be inspected on application by letter to F. A., care of Everett and Son, 17, Royal Exchange, E.C.

CONTENTS.

	Page
Music in a French Cathedral	393
From my Study	395
Dr. Mackenzie on "Falstaff"	397
Weber in London	399
Occasional Notes	401
Facts, Rumours, and Remarks	403
Royal Opera, Covent Garden	406
Wagner Cycle at Covent Garden	406
Philharmonic Society	406
Crystal Palace—"The Golden Legend"	407
Richter Concerts	407
The New Doctors at Cambridge	408
Pianoforte Recitals	408
Chapel Royal Concert	410
Musical Guild	410
Royal College of Music	410
Royal Academy of Music	410
Professor Villiers Stanford's New Mass	411
Plainsong and Mediæval Society	411
Musical Association	411
London Gregorian Choral Association	411
The "Golden Legend" and "The Revenge" at Salisbury	412
English Music in Leipzig	412
Obituary	412
Music in Bristol	419
„ Dublin	419
„ Edinburgh	420
„ Liverpool	420
„ Oxford	420
„ Chicago	421
Anthem—"Seek ye the Lord." Charles Bradley	413
General News (London)	421
Reviews	425
Foreign Notes	427
Correspondence	429
General News (Country)	430
List of Music published during the last Month	431

THE MUSICAL TIMES.

SCALE OF TERMS FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

	£	s.	d.
Two Lines	0	3	0
Three Lines	0	3	4
For every additional Line	0	0	10
Half a Column	2	0	0
A Column	4	0	0
A Page	7	10	0

Special Pages (Cover, &c.) by arrangement.
A remittance should be sent with each Advertisement.

SPECIAL NOTICE.
To ensure insertion Advertisements should reach the Office
NOT LATER THAN THE
TWENTY-THIRD
OF EACH MONTH.

ORGAN for SALE (Second-hand). 5 stops. In handsome carved walnut case. R. Cope, 21, Jardin Street, Camberwell, S.E.

ORGANS.—Two-manual ORGANS, from £150 to £500, for SALE. Full particulars, W. Beales and Co., Organ Builders, Limes Road, Croydon.

BROADWOOD Short Drawing-room iron GRAND PIANO, in elegant walnut case. 7 octaves; full trichord. Tone, touch, and condition as new. A bargain, 55 guineas; cost 165 guineas. View at Mr. Fieldwick's, Organist, St. John's, Cromer House, Putney (near Railway Station).

TO ORGAN STUDENTS.—METZLER Parisian Model Oblique PIANO, with Organ Pedals and Bench. Must be SOLD at once. R. Willshaw, 65, High Street, Bedford.

FOUR HYMNS. By DENNIS LAMB. Price 2d.
"The Voice that breathed o'er Eden."
"As now the sun's declining rays."
"Thine for ever! God of love."
"My God, my Father, while I stray."
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HARVEST ANTHEM.
AND GOD SAID, LET THE EARTH BRING FORTH GRASS. Containing Bass Solo. By RICHARD RICHARDS, A.C.O. Price 3d.

NEW SONG. JUST PUBLISHED.
THE ANGEL'S QUEST. Words by FLORENCE HOARE. With Pianoforte and Organ Accompaniment. By same COMPOSER. Price 2s. 6d. net.
London: WEEKES and Co., 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.; or, COMPOSER, Buxton House, Handsworth, Birmingham

WEDDING MARCH FOR THE ORGAN

Composed and dedicated to H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.

BY

WILLIAM CRESER

Composer to Her Majesty's Chapels Royal.

Price 1s. 6d. net.

Also arranged for Pianoforte, 2s. net.

MILITARY BAND PARTS IN THE PRESS.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

MUSIC

SUITABLE FOR USE AT THE

SERVICE OF HOLY MATRIMONY

ANTHEMS AND HYMNS.	s.	d.
Blessed are all they that fear the Lord .. .. E. G. Monk	1	6
Vocal parts	1	0
Blessed are all they that fear the Lord .. Sidney Naylor	0	9
Except the Lord build the house .. .. F. A. G. Ouseley	0	6
Vocal parts	0	6
Father of Life. Hymn .. .. Jas. Turle	0	3
God, be merciful unto us .. .. .. S. S. Wesley
Octavo	0	3
Vocal parts	1	0
Folio	1	6
O God, Thou art worthy .. .. .. Arthur Sullivan
Vocal parts	1	0
Octavo	0	4
Tonic Sol-fa	0	1½
Folio	1	6
O Perfect Love (Composed for the Wedding of H.R.H. Princess Louise of Wales and the Earl of Fife) .. .. J. Barnby	0	3
Holy Ghost, to earth descending .. .. Antonín Dvořák	0	4
There was a marriage in Cana of Galilee .. .. J. Stainer	0	3
Protect them, Almighty. Chorus .. .. .. J. Barnby	0	3

ORGAN MUSIC.
Wedding March (Gounod), No. 1. Arranged by G. C. Martin	2	0
Wedding March, No. 2. .. .. Charles Gounod	2	0
Wedding March (Mendelssohn) .. Arranged by W. T. Best	2	0
Wedding March „ Arranged by C. E. Willing	1	0
March in "Tannhäuser" .. .. Arranged by F. Archer	2	0
Processional Wedding March .. .. .. Henry R. Bird	1	0
A Wedding Piece .. .. A. C. Mackenzie	1	0
The Bride's March ("Rebekah," J. Barnby) Arr. by James Shaw	1	0
March in B flat .. .. E. Silas	1	0

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE SERVICE

FOR THE

SOLEMNIZATION of HOLY MATRIMONY

AS USED IN

WESTMINSTER ABBEY

WITH A SPECIAL ANTHEM

COMPOSED BY

J. FREDERICK BRIDGE.

Mus. Doc., Oxon., Organist and Master of the Choristers.

Price Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

FAIREST SCENE OF ALL CREATION

A Hymn to celebrate the Royal Wedding (July 6, 1893).

Words by CANON NEVILLE, M.A.

SET TO MUSIC BY

C. VILLIERS STANFORD.

Price Three Half-pence; words only, 1s. per 100.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HANDEL'S LARGO

ARRANGED FOR THE

ORGAN

BY

GEORGE C. MARTIN.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

(No. 2. Organ Arrangements edited by George C. Martin. This number also contains Schubert's Andante, from Pianoforte Sonata (Op. 147), and Spohr's "As pants the hart," from "The Crucifixion.")

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

SIX PIECES FOR VIOLIN

WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

COMPOSED BY

JOSEPH L. ROECKEL.

Price Five Shillings net.

CONTENTS.

No. 1. In Modo Antico.
„ 2. Preghiera.
„ 3. Staccato Étude.
No. 4. Souvenir de Valse.
„ 5. Tempo di Gavotta.
„ 6. Romanza.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

ELEGIE ET RONDO

POUR

VIOLON ET PIANO

PAR

EMILE SAURET.

(Op. 48.)

Price Four Shillings net.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

FIVE MINIATURES FOR PIANO

COMPOSED BY

S. B. SCHLESINGER.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence net.

CONTENTS.

No. 1. Pleasant Dreams.
„ 2. Good Morning.
„ 3. Melody.
No. 4. Meditation.
„ 5. Flirtation.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

BOEKELMAN'S EDITION

OF

BACH'S FUGUES

PRINTED IN COLOURS.

In this Edition the essential parts of each Fugue—viz., Subject, Answer, Counter-subject, Episodes, &c., are each printed in a distinct colour, with a view to helping the Student to a clear understanding of the structure and form of the composition.

Book I. contains—

Vol. 1. Fugue 3, C sharp major.
„ 1. Fugue 4, C sharp minor.
Vol. 1. Fugue 10, E minor.
„ 2. Fugue 7, E flat.

Book II. contains—

Vol. 1. Fugue 1, in C.
„ 1. Fugue 7, in E flat.
Vol. 1. Fugue 21, in B flat.
„ 1. Fugue 22, in B flat minor.

Price Two Shillings net each Fugue.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Sole Agents for Great Britain and the Colonies.

NEW HARVEST ANTHEMS

IN THE PRESS.

MAN GOETH FORTH

COMPOSED BY

ARTHUR CARNALL.

PRICE THREEPENCE.

O WORSHIP THE KING

COMPOSED BY

E. V. HALL.

PRICE FOURPENCE.

O GOD, WHO IS LIKE UNTO THEE!

COMPOSED BY

MYLES B. FOSTER.

PRICE THREE-HALFPENCE.
Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence.

I WILL GREATLY REJOICE IN THE LORD

COMPOSED BY

W. A. C. CRUICKSHANK.

PRICE FOURPENCE.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Will be ready in July.

NEW HARVEST ANTHEM

BY

J. H. MAUNDER

SING TO THE LORD OF HARVEST

Staff Notation, 3d.; Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.

"SHORT, EASY, EFFECTIVE."

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW ANTHEMS FOR HARVEST

By R. T. CLARKE MORRISON.

My God and King .. .. 3d.
O magnify the Lord with me .. .. 3d.
O give thanks .. .. 3d.
The eyes of all wait upon thee .. .. 4d.

These are sure to become favourites at all Harvest Festivals.
Write for specimen copies.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HARVEST CAROLS.—"Father blessing every Seed-time" (F. Peskett), "Seed-time and Harvest," "Gracious Lord, we give Thee thanks" (H. Townsend). Price 2d. each; words only, 2s. 6d. per 100.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

POPULAR HARVEST ANTHEMS

BY

E. A. SYDENHAM.

FULL, EASY, EFFECTIVE.

Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.

O GIVE THANKS (55th 1,000).
SING UNTO THE LORD (9th 1,000).
GREAT IS THE LORD (28th 1,000).

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

HARVEST ANTHEMS

LORD OF THE HARVEST

COMPOSED BY

JOSEPH BARNBY.

Price Fourpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence.

I WILL FEED MY FLOCK

COMPOSED BY

J. F. BRIDGE.

Price Three-halfpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence.

SING WE MERRILY

COMPOSED BY

E. V. HALL.

Price Fourpence.

I WILL MAGNIFY THEE

COMPOSED BY

OLIVER KING.

Price Fourpence.

HARVEST HYMN

COMPOSED BY

FERRIS TOZER.

Price Twopence.

MY MOUTH SHALL SPEAK THE PRAISE

COMPOSED BY

JOHN E. WEST.

Price Fourpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence.

HONOUR THE LORD WITH THY SUBSTANCE

(Words from the American Liturgy)

COMPOSED BY

JOHN STAINER.

Price Fourpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

LORD OF THE HARVEST

A HARVEST ANTHEM

FOR TENOR SOLO AND CHORUS

COMPOSED BY

ETHEL MAY CLAPTON.

Price Fourpence.

"The whole work is of a high standard of excellence."—Musical Standard.

"An effective composition without being overtaxing to the choir."—Musical Age and Journal.

"The Anthem is well written and will be found as effective as it is tuneful."—Musical News.

"A well-written Anthem for tenor solo and choir."—Illustrated London News.

"Possesses a freshness and rhythmic flow which will gain for it a cordial reception at harvest festivals."—Daily Chronicle.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PRAISE WAITETH FOR THEE, O GOD

ANTHEM FOR HARVEST OR GENERAL USE.

Price Threepence.

By VINCENT MORGAN.

"It is thoroughly singable, devotional, and effective."—Daily News, U.S.A.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HARVEST ANTHEMS.

All Thy works praise Thee	E. H. Thorne	3d.
Bless thou the Lord	Oliver King	3d.
*Blessed be the Name of the Lord	H. Gadsby	1½d.
*Blessed be Thou	E. Bunnett	3d.
*Break forth into joy	Oliver King	1½d.
Bring unto the Lord, O ye mighty	F. E. Gladstone	3d.
*Fear not, O land, be glad and rejoice	J. Goss	6d.
*Fear not, O land	C. H. Lloyd	1½d.
*Fear not, O land	C. W. Jordan	6d.
Give unto the Lord the glory	J. F. Bridge	4d.
*God said, Behold I have given you every herb	G. A. Macfarren	6d.
*Great is the Lord	E. A. Sydenham	3d.
*Honour the Lord with Thy substance	J. Stainer	4d.
*I will feed My flock	J. F. Bridge	1½d.
I will give thanks unto Thee	E. J. Hopkins	6d.
*I will give thanks unto Thee	J. Barnby	4d.
*I will magnify Thee, O God	J. Goss	3d.
I will magnify Thee	Oliver King	4d.
I will sing a new song	P. Armes	8d.
*Lo! summer comes again	J. Stainer	6d.
*Lord of the Harvest	J. Barnby	4d.
Lord of the rich and golden grain (Harvest Hymn)	F. Tozer	2d.
Make melody within your hearts	F. A. J. Hervey	3d.
*My mouth shall speak the praise	J. E. West	4d.
*O come, let us sing to the Lord	B. Tours	1½d.
*O give thanks	E. A. Sydenham	3d.
*O how plentiful is Thy goodness	T. M. Pattison	3d.
*O Lord, how manifold are Thy works	J. Barnby	1½d.
*O Lord, how manifold are Thy works	G. A. Macfarren	1½d.
O praise the Lord	Herbert Oakeley	4d.
*O praise the Lord of Heaven	J. Goss	6d.
O sing unto the Lord	T. Palmer	4d.
O that men would praise the Lord	J. C. Bridge	4d.
Our God is Lord of the harvest	Emma Mundella	3d.
*Praise, O praise our God and King	E. V. Hall	1½d.
*Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem	E. V. Hall	4d.
Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem	W. Hayes	4d.
Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem	W. G. Wood	4d.
*Praise the Lord, O my soul	H. Lahee	1½d.
*Praise ye the Lord for His goodness	G. Garrett	1½d.
Praised be the Lord	C. Steggall	1/-
*Rejoice in the Lord	B. Tours	1½d.
*Sing praises to God	H. W. Wareing	1½d.
*Sing unto the Lord	E. A. Sydenham	3d.
Sing we merrily	E. V. Hall	4d.
Sowing and reaping	J. Maude Crament	2d.
The earth is the Lord's	C. S. Heap	4d.
The earth is the Lord's	T. T. Trimnell	4d.
The eyes of all wait upon Thee	O. Gibbons	4d.
The fostering earth, the genial showers	J. L. Hopkins	3d.
*The harvest-tide thanksgiving (Words only, 1s. 6d per 100).	J. Barnby	1½d.
*The Lord hath done great things	H. Smart	4d.
*The Lord is loving unto every man	G. Garrett	3d.
Thou, O God, art praised in Zion	E. V. Hall	3d.
*Thou visitest the earth and blessest it	W. H. Callcott	2d.
*Thou visitest the earth	M. Greene	1½d.
Thou visitest the earth	J. Baptiste Calkin	4d.
To Thee, O Lord	C. L. Williams	3d.
While the earth remaineth	C. Swinnerton Heap	4d.
*While the earth remaineth	B. Tours	1½d.
*Ye shall dwell in the land	J. Stainer	1½d.
*Ye shall go out with joy	J. Barnby	4d.

 These Anthems are also published in Tonic Sol-fa Notation, 1d. to 4d. each.*

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TWELVE HYMNS WITH TUNES

FOR

HARVEST

SELECTED FROM "THE HYMNARY."

PRICE ONE PENNY.

Sing to the Lord a joyful song	J. Barnby.
O Lord, the heaven Thy power displays	F. Ouseley.
Father, blessing every seed-time	J. B. Dykes.
Lord, in Thy Name Thy servants plead	W. Metcalf.
The wintry time hath ended	H. J. Gauntlett.
Come, ye thankful people, come	George Elvey.
God, the Father, whose creation	H. Smart.
Lord of the harvest, Thee we hail	Anonymous.
Lo, summer comes again	E. B. Whyley.
Praise, O praise our Heavenly King	German.
Summer ended, harvest o'er	J. Adcock.
O Lord of heaven, and earth, and sea	S. S. Wesley.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

ALBERT LOWE'S HARVEST ANTHEM

THE EARTH IS THE LORD'S

Price Threepence.

Short, easy, full, and effective. Composed expressly for Parish Choirs.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

POPULAR HARVESTIDE ANTHEMS.

NEW EDITIONS NOW READY.

THE EARTH IS THE LORD'S

FOR TREBLE SOLO (OR TENOR), QUARTET, & CHORUS

BY

W. J. PRESSEY.

Price 3d. net.

"Bright and effective."

O SING UNTO THE LORD

SHORT FULL ANTHEM

BY

PROFESSOR J. FREDERICK BRIDGE, Mus. Doc.

Price 4d. net.

LET THE HEAVENS REJOICE

FOR SOLO, QUARTET, AND CHORUS

BY

GUSTAV ERNEST.

Price 4d. net.

Specimen copies of all the above Anthems sent Post-free on receipt of stamps, 7d.

LONDON: J. & J. HOPKINSON,

34, 35, AND 36, MARGARET STREET, CAVENDISH SQ., W.

EDWYN A. CLARE'S NEW HARVEST ANTHEMS, &c.

These Compositions are very effective and not difficult.

FEAR NOT, O LAND. Just published .. .. 3d.
A very attractive and easy Anthem.

*THOU CROWNEST THE YEAR. New. 4th 1,000 .. .. .. 3d.
SING UNTO GOD WITH THANKSGIVING. 7th 1,000 .. .. .. 4d.
Varied, effective, and pleasing for the Choir.

*THE EYES OF ALL WAIT UPON THEE. 18th 1,000 .. .. .. 3d.
Sung by 1,300 voices at Newcastle-on-Tyne.

O LORD HOW MANIFOLD. 4th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
PRAISE THE LORD, O JERUSALEM. 11th 1,000 .. .. .. 3d.
MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS IN D. 5th 1,000 .. .. .. 4d.
Full of vigour and flowing melody.

Those marked (*) are also published in Tonic Sol-fa.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

ALBERT LOWE'S HARVEST CAROL

HOLY IS THE SEED-TIME

Composed expressly for Harvest Festivals. Octavo, Twopence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PUT YE IN THE SICKLE FOR THE HARVEST IS RIPE. Harvest Anthem. By THOS. SMITH. 3d.
"Effective, and not difficult."

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HARVEST THANKSGIVING MARCH

FOR THE ORGAN

BY

J. BAPTISTE CALKIN.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HARVEST ANTHEMS, by THOS. SMITH. Easy and melodious. "Thou crownest the year," "O sing unto the Lord," "Fear not, O land," "It is a good thing to give thanks," "My heart is fixed," "O worship the Lord." Easy Te Deum in F. Five Easy Kyries. Price 3d. each.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW HARVEST ANTHEMS, &c.

By CALEB SIMPER.

Interesting, attractive, popular, easy, melodious, and effective.

*HE WATERETH THE HILLS. Just published .. .. 4d.
Contains bright Choruses, with Solos for Bass and Soprano (or Tenor). The concluding Chorus is very vigorous, and has some pretty and effective imitation in the parts, without being difficult. Band Parts are also issued. Particulars and prices on title-page of Anthem.

*WHILE THE EARTH REMAINETH. New. 6th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
"A particularly effective Anthem; opens with Solo for Bass or Alto, which leads into a well-written Quartet, followed by a brief but brilliant Chorus, full of life and very catchy."—Music Review.

*ALL THY WORKS PRAISE THEE. New. 7th 1,000 .. .. .. 4d.
"A more ambitious work than the preceding, but characterised by the same dash and vigour. It contains Solos for the different voices interspersed with Quartets or Chorus, not at all difficult, and very pleasing in its general effect."—Music Review.

*LET US THANK THE LORD. 6th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
*I WILL FEED MY FLOCK. 24th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
Sung at a Choral Festival at Woodstock.
*WHAT SHALL I RENDER. 6th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
THE EARTH IS THE LORD'S. 8th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
*FEAR NOT, O LAND. 24th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
*PRAISE THE LORD, O MY SOUL. 20th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
Sung at several Choral Festivals.
*THE LORD IS LOVING. 11th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
MAKE A JOYFUL NOISE. 19th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
Sung at several Choral Festivals.
*O LORD, HOW MANIFOLD. 14th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
THEY THAT SOW IN TEARS. 15th Edition .. .. 3d.
*AND GOD SAID, LET THE EARTH. 57th Edition .. .. .. 3d.
TE DEUM, in G. 7th Edit. 4d. TE DEUM, in F. 22nd Edit. 3d.
CELEBRATED MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS, in F. 45th Edit. 4d.
Sung at Choral Festivals in Lismore, Derry, and Downpatrick Cathedrals; also at Barrow, Skegness, Great Budworth, East Devon, &c.
FAVOURITE MAGNIFICAT AND N. DIM., in E flat. 15th Edition.. 4d.
Sung at a Choral Festival in Llandaff Cathedral.
NEW MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS, in G. 5th Edition .. 4d.
EASY HOLY COMMUNION SERVICE, in E flat. 8th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
*EASY HOLY COMMUNION SERVICE, in G. New .. .. .. 4d.
EASY HOLY COMMUNION SERVICE, in F. 6th Edition .. .. 6d.
Each Service is complete, with Agnus Dei and Benedictus.
FESTAL TE DEUM, in A flat (Chants). 4th 1,000 .. .. .. 2d.
O HOW AMIABLE. Dedication Festivals, &c. 2nd 1,000 .. .. 3d.

Those marked (*) are also published in Tonic Sol-fa.

London: WEEKES and Co., 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.
Chicago, U.S.A.: CLAYTON F. SUMMY, 174-176, Wabash Avenue.

J. F. BARNETT'S

CANTATA

PARADISE AND THE PERI

Vocal score (paper) .. .. 4s.
Do. (cloth) .. .. 6s.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

In the Press.

CANTATA

SET TO ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON'S POEM

CROSSING THE BAR

FOR FULL ORCHESTRA, CHORUS, AND PIANOFORTE

By ALFRED HARBOROUGH.

Vocal Score, with the Orchestral Score arranged for two performers on the Pianoforte, 2s. 6d.; String Parts, 5s.; Wind Parts in the Press.

Full Score on application to the Publishers.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE

GREAT DAY OF THE LORD

SACRED CANTATA

MUSIC BY W. CLARK AINLEY,

Mus. Bac., Cantab.

"I unhesitatingly say that it is a great work of which any musician might be proud."—Mus. Doc., Edinburgh.
Other opinions see Musical Times, June 1, 1893.

Price, in paper cover, 2s.; in paper boards, 3s.; in scarlet cloth, gilt, 4s.
London: HART and Co., 22, Paternoster Row, E.C.

NEW CANTATAS FOR HARVEST.

SEED-TIME AND HARVEST

A SACRED CANTATA

FOR

SOPRANO AND TENOR SOLI AND CHORUS

THE WORDS SELECTED AND ARRANGED FROM HOLY SCRIPTURE, &c. INTERSPERSED WITH SUITABLE HYMNS, AND THE MUSIC

COMPOSED BY

JOHN E. WEST.

Price Two Shillings.
Words only, Five Shillings per hundred.

HARVEST-TIDE

A CANTATA FOR HARVEST

FOR

TENOR AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN, OR SMALL ORCHESTRA

COMPOSED BY

HUGH BLAIR.

Price One Shilling.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

THE GLEANERS' HARVEST

CANTATA FOR FEMALE VOICES

COMPOSED BY

CHARLES HARFORD LLOYD.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE JUBILEE CANTATA

(HARVEST CANTATA)

FOR SOLO VOICES, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

COMPOSED BY

C. M. VON WEBER.

(Op. 58.)

Edited, and the Pianoforte Accompaniment revised, by EBENEZER PROUT. The words translated from the German version of Wendt by the Rev. J. TROUTBECK, D.D.

Octavo, 1s.; Full Score, 21s.; Orchestral Parts, 15s.
Words only, 10s. per 100.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HARVEST CANTATA

FOR

CHORUS, SEMI-CHORUS, AND ORGAN

WORDS SELECTED AND WRITTEN BY

J. FRANCIS WALLER, LL.D.

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

GEORGE GARRETT, M.A., MUS.D.

Price One Shilling. Words only 5s. per 100, or 2d. each with Music to the Hymns.
Tonic Sol-fa Edition, Sixpence.

Intended for the use of Parochial and other Choirs at Harvest Festivals. The music is not difficult, and provision is made for the introduction of well-known Harvest Hymns, in order that the Congregation may take part in the service.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

VOCAL SCORE, OLD NOTATION. 21ST TO 25TH THOUSAND.

RUTH

A HARVEST PASTORAL

SUITABLE FOR USE IN PLACES OF WORSHIP

WORDS BY

EDWARD OXENFORD

MUSIC BY

ALFRED R. GAUL.

SUITABLE FOR

THANKSGIVING SERVICES.

"The Biblical story of which Ruth is the central figure lends itself with remarkable suitability to an illustration of a harvest celebration. The country landscape, the ripened corn, the sturdy reapers, the standing sheaves, the active gleaners, and the busy farmer, all combine to fill the mind's eye with a pleasant scene of excitement. Set to music by a competent composer such as Mr. A. R. Gaul, the narrative of Ruth's eventful episode lends itself to a pathetic, picturesque, and pleasant performance. The bereaved and sorrowful trio of women on whom the calamity of poverty and famine has fallen, as if to give intensity to their greater grief, and the unexpected and happy influence of patriarchal benevolence displayed by the mighty Boaz, who so quickly transforms sorrow into joy, are all introduced and aptly take their allotted place in the melodious music of Gaul's interpretation of the tale."—Gloucester Citizen.

"The work, like the 'Holy City,' is full of beautiful orchestral passages, while the vocal score abounds with charming numbers."—Bucks Herald.

"'Ruth' is a work of sterling power; its musical form is that of perfect tunefulness combined with simplicity and strength. . . . The composer has grasped his theme in a thoroughly sympathetic manner, and has produced a work which is worthy of the subject."—Bradford Observer.

"Bright, tuneful, fresh, and musicianly—this work will be a great favourite, and will add to Mr. Gaul's reputation."—Birmingham Weekly Dart.

"'Ruth' has been set to music by several composers; none, however, has become so worthily popular as the Cantata under notice. . . . It contains some charming music, and is highly characteristic of the story it so vividly illustrates."—South Wilts Express.

"Full of flowing melody."—Salisbury Times.

PERFORMED IN THE TOWN HALL, BIRMINGHAM, ON TWELVE OCCASIONS.

Vocal Score, paper cover, 2s.; ditto, paper boards, 2s. 6d.; cloth, 4s.
The Choruses (only) in Vocal Score, for Musical Societies, paper cover, 1s.
Tonic Sol-fa Edition, 9d. Band Parts on loan.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

NEW ANTHEM.

THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD

FOR FOUR VOICES

BY

EDWARD BUNNETT, MUS.D., CANTAB.

Price Threepence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

COMPOSITIONS

BY

T. MEE PATTISON.

CANTATAS.	Staff. s.	d.	Sol-fa. s.	d.
The Ancient Mariner	2	6	0	6
Do. do. (Choruses only)	1	0
The Lay of the Last Minstrel	2	6
Do. do. (Choruses only)	1	0
May Day	1	0	0	6
The Miracles of Christ (Sacred)	1	0	0	6
ANTHEMS, &c.
All Thy works praise Thee (Harvest)	0	3	0	1½
Thou visitest the earth (Harvest)	0	2
I know that my Redeemer liveth (Easter)	0	3
There were shepherds (Christmas)	0	2
Thirteen Offertory Sentences	0	4
Six Kyries	0	2
Te Deum laudamus (in F)	0	3

ORIGINAL ORGAN COMPOSITIONS.

Fifteen Introductory and Concluding Voluntaries .. .. 3s. 6d.
Five Concluding Voluntaries .. .. 1s. 6d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES.

THIRD EDITION.

KING ARTHUR

A DRAMATIC CANTATA

FOR

THREE SOLO VOICES, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

WORDS BY

JAMES SMIETON, M.A.

MUSIC BY

JOHN MORE SMIETON.

OLD NOTATION, 2s. 6d.; TONIC SOL-FA, 1s.
Full Score and Band Parts on hire. String Parts for sale at 16s.

The attention of Conductors is specially directed to the above Cantata, as affording an unusually interesting work for Chorus and Soloists. It takes about an hour and forty minutes to perform, and has been given with conspicuous success by the Choral Unions of Dundee, Broughty Ferry, Airdrie, Peebles, Helensburgh, and Hamilton, as well as performances by Miss Holland's Choir (2), Byfield (2), Uckfield, Wakefield, Brondesbury, Glasgow Academy Choir, Glasgow E. Choral Society, &c.

SCOTSMAN.

This beautiful work will enhance the reputation won for its composer by his similar composition, "Ariadne." It shows a charming gift of melody and no small musicianly skill in its merely technical qualities. It may be recommended to Choral Societies as well worthy of study.

MUSICAL TIMES (JUNE 1, 1892).

Mr. John More Smieton's dramatic Cantata "King Arthur" was the Pièce de resistance at the annual concert by the Glasgow Academy Choir on April 29. A better choice could hardly have been made, inasmuch as the work has been laid out on lines which cannot fail to prove popular amongst the numerous choral societies ever on the alert for novelty. Mr. James Smieton's admirably written libretto has, indeed, afforded opportunity for effective musical treatment, which is not only graceful and melodious, but eminently graphic in its descriptive power, the work, in short, of a craftsman who is steadily making progress amongst contemporary composers.

DUNDEE EVENING TELEGRAPH (MARCH 30, 1892).

"King Arthur" is called by the composer a cantata, but the name hardly conveys to the mind an idea of the elaborate, lengthy, and powerful character of the work. It is rather a musical epic, and is characterised throughout by a scholarly knowledge of harmony, by a variety and richness of effect, and notably by a melodiousness throughout that are really remarkable. One notable feature which must be mentioned is the effective character of Mr. Smieton's recitatives. The beautiful hymn "There is a land" was a much relished item near the close of the cantata, which ended with a powerful chorus, in which the composer calls up all the resources before him to make a telling and impressive finish to the work.

GLASGOW HERALD (NOVEMBER 30, 1892).

The Eastern Choral Society gave a concert last night in the City Hall. The work chosen for performance was Mr. John More Smieton's "King Arthur." Mr. Smieton has set music to his brother's libretto with very happy results, and the work contains many delightful choruses and solos. Miss Annie Lea was the soprano soloist, impersonating Guinevere; Mr. Probert, the tenor (Arthur); Mr. J. W. Render took the music allotted to Merlin and Sir Bedevere. Mr. Cole's orchestra furnished an excellent accompaniment. . . . The choir consisted of about 150 voices, and Mr. George Taggart, the conductor, may be congratulated on having trained them to a high state of efficiency.

SPECIALLY ADAPTED FOR SMALL CHORAL SOCIETIES, CHURCH CHOIRS, &c.—4TH EDITION.

BY THE SAME AUTHORS

ARIADNE

A DRAMATIC CANTATA

FOR FOUR SOLO VOICES, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA.

OLD NOTATION, 2s.; TONIC SOL-FA, 9d.
Full Score and Band Parts on hire.

This charming Work takes about one hour to perform, and has been given by over thirty different Musical Societies throughout the kingdom.

Copies of either Work will be sent free to Conductors, on application to the COMPOSER, 12, Victoria Chambers, Dundee.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES.

SHORT CANTATAS
RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

PERFORMED BY THE HIGHBURY PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

THE PIED PIPER OF HAMELIN
BY ROBERT BROWNING
SET TO MUSIC
FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
BY
RICHARD H. WALTHEW.

Price Two Shillings.

THE BLACK KNIGHT
CANTATA FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA
The Poem by UHLAND; translated by LONGFELLOW
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY EDWARD ELGAR.

Price Two Shillings.

THE SONG OF THE WESTERN MEN
BALLAD FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA
Words by Rev. S. HAWKER
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY
G. R. BETJEMANN.

Price One Shilling.

ODE TO THE WEST WIND
Poem by SHELLEY
Set to Music for Tenor Solo, Chorus, and Orchestra
BY
CHARLES WOOD.

Price One Shilling.

THE BIRTH OF SONG
CANTATA FOR SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
Poem by LEWIS MORRIS
SET TO MUSIC BY
ROSALIND F. ELLICOTT.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

THE COTTER'S SATURDAY NIGHT
Poem by ROBERT BURNS
SET TO MUSIC BY
A. C. MACKENZIE.

Price Two Shillings. Sol-fa, One Shilling.

SUMMER ON THE RIVER
CANTATA FOR FEMALE VOICES
THE WORDS WRITTEN BY
SHAPCOTT WENSLEY
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY
FREDERIC H. COWEN.

Price Two Shillings.

THE BATTLE OF THE BALTIC
Poem by CAMPBELL
SET TO MUSIC BY
C. V. STANFORD.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

PERFORMED AT THE ORATORY, BROMPTON.

MASS IN G MAJOR
FOR SOLI, CHORUS, ORCHESTRA, AND ORGAN
COMPOSED BY
C. VILLIERS STANFORD.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

PERFORMED AT THE ROYAL ALBERT HALL.

EAST TO WEST
AN ODE
BY
ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE
Set to music for Chorus and Orchestra
BY
CHARLES VILLIERS STANFORD.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

WATER-LILIES
A FAIRY SONG
BY
FELICIA HEMANS
Deutsche Uebertragung von L. KLEIN.
SET TO MUSIC BY
ED. SACHS.

Price One Shilling.

THE
LAY OF THE BROWN ROSARY
CANTATA
FOR SOPRANO AND CONTRALTO SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
Words by
ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY
ETHEL M. BOYCE.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

YOUNG LOCHINVAR
BALLAD
BY SIR WALTER SCOTT
SET TO MUSIC
FOR BARITONE SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
BY
ETHEL M. BOYCE.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

PRAISE TO THE HOLIEST
MOTET
FOR SOPRANO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
The words by Cardinal NEWMAN
SET TO MUSIC BY
H. J. EDWARDS.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

ELYSIUM
CANTATA
FOR SOPRANO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
Poem by Mrs. HEMANS
SET TO MUSIC BY
ROSALIND F. ELLICOTT.

Price One Shilling.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

THE BRISTOL TUNE BOOK

EDITION 1891.

Containing 905 Tunes and Chants.

NOW READY.

THIRD SERIES, including Supplement 1881, containing 190 Tunes and 118 varieties of metre.

A COMPANION TO ALL HYMN BOOKS.

EDITION 1881.

		s.	d.			s.	d.
No. 9.	Limp Cloth.. ..	4	0	No. 11.	Small Edition ..	3	0
„ 10.	Cloth Boards, red edges	5	0	„ 12.	Tonic Sol-fa ..	3	0

THIRD SERIES.

		s.	d.			s.	d.
No. 13.	Limp Cloth ..	2	0	No. 16.	Tonic Sol-fa, limp cloth	1	6
„ 15.	Small Edition, limp cloth	1	6

COMPLETE EDITION, 1891.

		s.	d.			s.	d.
No. 17.	Limp Cloth ..	5	0	No. 19.	Small Edition ..	3	6
„ 18.	Cloth Boards, red edges	6	0	„ 20.	Tonic Sol-fa ..	3	6

Communications and enquiries as to copyright, and also as to supplying at reduced prices, may be addressed to the Bristol Publishers.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Bristol: W. AND F. MORGAN, Clare Street.
And all Booksellers and Musicsellers.

Price 3s. 6d., cloth, red edges.

THE TUNE BOOK, with the additional Tunes as used at ST. ALBAN'S, HOLBORN, containing nearly 270 Tunes, for Long, Common, Short, and Peculiar Metres; together with several Gregorian Hymns and Antiphons; the Eight Gregorian Tones; the Music of the Reproaches; the Seven Last Words; and Litany Tunes, &c. London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

FOR MALE VOICE CHOIR.—THE NATIONAL ANTHEM, price 4d.; JUBILEE ODE, price 6d. net. By GEORGE RISELEY.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Twenty-third Edition.

JOULE'S COLLECTION OF 527 CHANTS, 57 RESPONSES, &c. Reduced price, 4s. 6d., paper cover; 6s., limp cloth; separate vocal parts, 2s. each.—Tonic Sol-fa Notation, Score, 1s. 6d.
The Chants are selected with due reference to the position of the Reciting-note.

THE PSALTER, PROPER PSALMS, HYMNS, and CANTICLES. Pointed for Chanting by B. ST. J. B. JOULE. Large type, price 2s. 6d. This Psalter, having been collated with the Sealed Books, is free from the errors contained in all other pointed Psalters, through printing from the incorrect copies commonly sold by the Stationers.

Tenth Edition.

JOULE'S DIRECTORIUM CHORI ANGLICANUM. 18mo, price 1s.; in cloth, 1s. 6d.

Seventh Edition.

JOULE'S DIRECTORIUM CHORI ANGLICANUM. 4to, in cloth, elegant, price 7s. 6d.

Seventh Edition.

THE ORDER FOR THE HOLY COMMUNION. Harmonised on a Monotone in a very simple manner for Parochial use. By B. ST. J. B. JOULE. Price 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Fourth Thousand.

MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in E flat, by WILLIAM S. VINNING, Mus. Bac., Cantab. Price 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Third Thousand.

VESPER HYMN. To be sung after Evensong. Words and music by GEORGE KETT. "A very charming hymn-tune."—Sir John Stainer. On card. Price One Penny.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Words alone, for congregational use, One Shilling per hundred, of the AUTHOR, 100, Gordon Road, Nunhead, S.E.

NEW TUNES (Seven) for Sunday School Festivals and Anniversaries. Music, 7s. per 100; words, 2s. Special title-page free for quantities. Send stamp for sample to Sunday School Union, 1, Piccadilly, Manchester.

THE ORGANIST'S HANDBOOK of Accompaniments to the Creeds, Lord's Prayer, and Kyrie. Arranged by H. W. JAMES. Price 1s. HART and Co., 22, Paternoster Row, E.C.

THE ELEMENTS OF MUSIC. By C. TREW, Professor at the London Academy of Music. Price 1s.
London: SCHOTT, 159, Regent Street, W.

CHURCH MUSIC

BY

EDWARD BUNNETT, MUS.D., CANTAB.

ANTHEMS.

EASTER.—"If we believe."	Four voices	4d.
„ „ „	Tonic Sol-fa	1½d.
WHITSUNDAY.—"If ye love Me."	Four voices	3d.
„ "I will magnify Thee"	„	3d.
„ „ „	Tonic Sol-fa	1½d.

SERVICES.

Te Deum laudamus in E.	Chant form	3d.
Benedictus and Jubilate in E	„ „	3d.
	Tonic Sol-fa.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in F	.. ..	1½d.
„ „ „ A	.. ..	1½d.
„ „ „ E	.. ..	1½d.

HYMNS.

Sing to the Lord.	With words	1d.
Twenty-four Original Hymn Tunes	.. ..	6d.
Twelve Original Hymn Tunes	.. ..	3d.
Amen (on Card)	.. ..	1d.

ORGAN.

Twelve Short and Easy Pieces for the Organ	.. net	2s. 0d.
Ave Maria	„	1s. 6d.
Largo in E flat	„	1s. 0d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Lately Published.

AN EVENING HYMN. Words by Rev. WM. BRIGHT, D.D. Music by JOHN E. CAMPBELL. On card, 1d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE

OFFICE FOR THE HOLY COMMUNION

(Including Benedictus qui venit and Agnus Dei)

SET TO MUSIC IN THE KEY OF A FLAT

BY

BASIL HARWOOD.

Price One Shilling.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE LORD'S PRAYER, harmonised for four voices. By W. H. DEWEY. 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Enlarged and Cheaper Edition. Price 6s.

PARR'S PSALMODY: 402 Tunes, 321 Chants, &c., with Memoirs of Composers, giving information nowher e else to be found.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

DR. FROST'S TE DEUM in A flat, for Choir and Congregation (composed for the Church Congregational Music Association), is now ready. Organ and Harmony, 3d.; Melody only, 1d. London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.; and of the Editor of C.C.M.A., E. GRIFFITH, F.C.O., Chislehurst.

NEW MUSIC FOR

FLUTE AND PICCOLO.

FLUTE SOLOS.	Solo with Piano acc.	Solo Part alone.
	s. d.	s. d.
1. HOWGILL, J. STEPHEN. — Silvery Sounds. Fantasia	2 0	0 8
2. ELLIOTT, E. J. (London Military Band).— Airs de Ballet	2 0	0 8
3. FORMAN, E.—The Woodland	1 6	0 6
4. —— The Brooklet	1 6	0 6
5. —— Springtide	1 6	0 6

The above three Solos of E. Forman's are simple and taking, and are strongly recommended to amateurs.

PICCOLO SOLOS.	Solo with Piano acc.	Solo Part alone.	Solo with Orch. acc.
6. GODFREY, FRED.—Yankee Doodle. Air with Variations	1 6	0 6	2 0
7. YOUNG, J. HARRINGTON.—Carnival of Venice. Grand Solo	2 0	0 8	2 0
8. WILMER, F.—Le Reveil de la Fauvette. Polacca	1 6	0 6	2 0

Special Terms to any Professional Player who will take the above Eight New Solos at once. Send for price.
HAWKES AND SON, 28, Leicester Square, London.

THE CHILD PIANIST.

MRS. CURWEN'S METHOD of TEACHING BEGINNERS on the PIANOFORTE.

Training Classes for Teachers' Certificates under MISS SCOTT GARDNER, at Dudley Mansions, 29, Abbey Road, N.W. Commence end of September. Send for circular.
Visitor and Examiner: Mrs. CURWEN.
Publishers of the book: J. CURWEN and SONS, 8 and 9, Warwick Lane, London, E.C. Lists gratis.

NOVELLO'S COLLECTION OF

TRIOS, QUARTETS, &c.

FOR FEMALE VOICES.

RECENT NUMBERS.

251. Merry Songsters .. .. John Kinross 3d.
252. Flow'rets fair .. .. " 3d.
353. The Waterfall .. .. " 3d.
254. Shades of Night .. .. " 3d.
255. Four Angels .. .. C. A. Macirone 3d.
256. Mistress Mary .. .. " 2d.
257. Rejoice, for love is Lord .. .. .. A. C. Mackenzie 4d.
258. O thou divine .. .. " 6d.
259. The Wood-Nymphs .. .. Percy C. Buck 2d.
260. A Song .. .. " 2d.
261. Weep you no more .. .. " 2d.
262. Sweet the Angelus is ringing .. .. .. H. Smart 3d.
263. Orpheus with his lute .. .. Edward German 3d.
264. Maidens of Zia .. .. Herbert Bunning 3d.
265. Some strain that once thou heardest .. Marie J. A. Wurm 3d.
266. About the sweet bag of a bee .. .. " 2d.
267. Whenever life some joy does bring .. " 2d.
268. Under the greenwood tree .. .. .. " 3d.
269. Good-Night .. .. " 3d.
270. Hohenlinden .. .. F. A. Marshall 3d.
271. My true love hath my heart .. .. W. A. C. Cruickshank 3d.
272. Roger and Maggie .. .. C. Mühlfeld 2d.
273. Little thoughts that grow .. .. .. Chas. H. Lloyd 2d.
274. Solitude .. .. J. Pointer 3d.
275. May Morning .. .. " 3d.
276. The stars are with the voyager .. .. .. " 2d.
277. Water-Lilies .. .. " 4d.
278. To Sea .. .. Myles B. Foster 2d.
279. If hope were but a fairy .. .. .. " 2d.
280. The willow and its lesson .. .. .. " 2d.
281. The Promised Land .. .. " 2d.
282. Song should breathe of scents and flowers " 2d.
283. March .. .. " 2d.
284. Hail! Star of Eve! .. .. R. Spofforth 2d.
285. Honey-bees love heath'ry heights .. .. Chas. H. Lloyd 3d.
286. Ring out, wild bells .. .. Henry Lahee 3d.
287. { Sorrow not, why art thou weeping? / One day there came from Lochlin } .. Niels W. Gade 3d.
288. Stars of the Summer Night .. .. .. John E. West 3d.

(To be continued.)

NOVELLO'S

PART-SONG BOOK.

RECENT NUMBERS.

647. Sing heigh-ho! .. .. C. V. Stanford 2d.
648. Airly Beacon .. .. " 2d.
649. The Knight's Tomb .. .. " 2d.
650. To his flocks .. .. " 3d.
651. Corydon, arise .. .. " 3d.
652. Diaphenia .. .. " 2d.
653. Sweet love for me .. .. " 3d.
654. Damon's Passion .. .. " 3d.
655. Phœbe .. .. " 3d.
656. This morning, at the dawn of day .. .. From the French 2d.
657. Sad hearts .. .. A. H. Brewer 3d.
658. Advice to lovers .. .. P. W. Pilcher 2d.
659. Peace; come away .. .. C. V. Stanford 2d.
660. Waiting for father .. .. R. Bartholomew 3d.
661. The Blue-bottle's fate .. .. A. H. Ashworth 3d.
662. March like the victors.. .. .. .. Roland Rogers 3d.
663. Hark! the Vesper hymn .. .. Sir John Stevenson 2d.
664. Ye banks and braes .. .. Arr. by W. G. McNaught 1d.
665. The trysting tree .. .. .. George J. Bennett 2d.
666. Jean .. .. Oliver King 3d.
667. Cupid is a wayward boy .. .. .. Ch. H. Lloyd 4d.
668. Come, fairies, trip it .. .. F. Iliffe 3d.
669. Song of the Silent Land .. .. .. John E. West 3d.
670. The time of youth .. .. .. King Henry VIII. 2d.
671. Come o'er the burn, Bessie .. .. Anon. 2d.
672. Enforce yourself as God's own knight .. Edmund Turges 3d.
673. Thus musing .. .. Wm. Newark 3d.
674. Ah, my dear son.. .. .. Anon. 3d.
675. Pastime with good company .. .. King Henry VIII. 3d.
676. Hope .. .. Josef Rheinberger 2d.
677. The clouds .. .. " 3d.
678. The Fountain .. .. " 3d.
679. Evening rest .. .. " 2d.
680. The Nightingale .. .. " 3d.
681. Good advice .. .. " 3d.
682. The Storm .. .. " 3d.
683. Autumn Song .. .. " 2d.
684. The Oak Tree .. .. G. J. Bennett 3d.
685. When Flora decks the mantling bowers .. Noel Johnson 2d.
686. I think on thee in the night .. .. .. Elizabeth Fédarb 3d.
687. The evening wind .. .. F. J. Harper 3d.

(To be continued.)

THE ORPHEUS

(NEW SERIES).

RECENT NUMBERS.

215. The hardy Norseman's house of yore .. R. L. de Pearsall 4d.
216. The Ladies .. .. A. C. Mackenzie 2d.
217. Bacchanalian .. .. Theodore Distin 3d.
218. To a brother artist .. .. A. C. Mackenzie 2d.
219. Sunset (Slowly sinks the sun to rest) .. W. A. Barrett 3d.
220. Shepherds, rise! and shake off sleep .. Henry Lahee 3d.
221. Good-Night .. .. Claude Barton 3d.
222. Like apple-blossom, white and red .. .. Charles H. Lloyd 2d.
223. Peace .. .. C. Lee Williams 2d.
224. Song of the Pedlar .. .. " 3d.
225. There is a garden in her face.. .. .. A Herbert Brewer 3d.
226. Maiden fair, O deign to tell .. .. .. Joseph Haydn 3d.
227. The Cab Catch .. .. A. J. Caldicott 4d.
228. The Hunt is up. A T.T.B. .. .. .. J. L. Hatton 4d.
229. Good-Night .. .. H. Goetz 3d.
230. October Song .. .. " 2d.
231. A Forest Scene .. .. " 3d.
232. Drinking Song .. .. " 3d.
233. Heave the anchor .. .. W. A. Barrett 4d.
234. The Goslings .. .. J. F. Bridge 4d.
235. The Stream .. .. John P. Attwater 2d.
236. Ode to the terrestrial globe .. .. .. J. F. Bridge 3d.
237. An old rat's tale .. .. " 4d.
238. Cupid once upon a bed of roses .. .. J. V. Roberts 3d.
239. I prithee send me back my heart .. .. .. King Hall 4d.
240. The Cryer .. .. " 4d.
241. A wet sheet and a flowing sea .. .. Arnold D. Culley 3d.
242. Salvete cives nostri .. .. A. L. Peace 4d.
243. Echoes .. .. Oliver King 2d.
244. May Morning .. .. Theodore Distin 2d.
245. A Soldiers' Song .. .. Hamilton Clarke 3d.
246. Midnight and Noon .. .. " 2d.
247. Go, happy rose .. .. F. Iliffe 3d.
248. The wintry winds are blowing .. .. .. J. Müller 4d.
249. The three jolly pigeons .. .. .. Harvey Löhr 4d.
250. Where sunless rivers weep .. .. Charles L. Naylor 3d.
251. Come, my dear one .. .. J. V. Roberts 2d.
252. A lover's counsel .. .. F. H. Cowen 3d.
253. The trysting tree .. .. G. J. Bennett 2d.
254. I love my Jean .. .. " 2d.
255. Echoes .. .. J. Baptiste Calkin 2d.
256. It was a Lover .. .. Chas. Wood 3d.
257. When for the world's repose.. .. .. Earl of Mornington 2d.

(To be continued.)

NOVELLO'S

OCTAVO ANTHEMS.

RECENT NUMBERS.

392. Our Father, which art in heaven .. .. .. J. Barnby 2d.
393. Like as the hart .. .. Thomas Adams 3d.
394. I will love Thee, O Lord, my strength Matthew Kingston 4d.
395. O Lord, Thou art my God .. .. .. Ch. H. Lloyd 3d.
396. I heard a voice .. .. Sir John Goss 2d.
397. Jesu, lover of my soul.. .. .. F. Iliffe 2d.
398. The Lord is my strength .. .. S. Coleridge-Taylor 3d.
399. At the Lamb's high feast we sing .. .. Rev. E. V. Hall 3d.
400. Blessed City, heavenly Salem .. .. A. C. Fisher 4d.
401. Have mercy upon me, O God .. .. James Shaw 3d.
402. And when the Day of Pentecost .. .. C. W. Smith 3d.
403. In my Father's house .. .. .. J. Maude Crament 3d.
404. Harvest Hymn .. .. Ferris Tozer 2d.
405. I will magnify Thee .. .. Oliver King 4d.
406. My mouth shall speak the praise .. .. John E. West 4d.
407. The Lord is my light and my salvation .. C. W. Jordan 3d.
408. Lighten our darkness .. .. G. R. Vicars 2d.
409. Lift up your heads .. .. .. S. Coleridge-Taylor 3d.
410. Sing we merrily to God our strength .. Rev. E. V. Hall 4d.
411. Lord of the Harvest .. .. J. Barnby 4d.
412. Honour the Lord with thy substance .. .. J. Stainer 4d.
413. The fost'ring earth, the genial showers .. J. L. Hopkins 3d.
414. There was war in heaven .. .. W. A. C. Cruickshank 3d.
415. Break forth into joy .. .. .. S. Coleridge-Taylor 3d.
416. Prepare ye the way .. .. .. J. Maude Crament 4d.
417. Who is this? .. .. Fred. Rayner 2d.
418. O God, who hast prepared .. .. .. A. S. Baker 2d.
419. Behold, how good and joyful .. .. Hamilton Clarke 4d.
420. I have set God always before me .. .. " 4d.
421. The day is past and over .. .. .. J. C. Marks, Jun. 3d.
422. The Lord is risen .. .. G. M. Garrett 4d.
423. Why seek ye the living .. .. F. Peel 4d.
424. Abide with me .. .. R. Dunstan 3d.
425. Lead, kindly Light .. .. " 3d.
426. Sun of my soul .. .. " 3d.
427. Hail! gladdening Light .. .. J. T. Field 2d.
428. My God, I love Thee .. .. G. J. Bennett 3d.
429. O praise God in His holiness .. .. G. C. Martin 2d.
430. O God, who hast prepared .. .. .. A. W. Batson 3d.
431. Make me a clean heart .. .. .. " 3d.
432. They that sow in tears .. .. .. " 3d.
433. Give ear, O Shepherd of Israel .. .. A. Whiting 3d.
434 Lord, Thou hast searched me .. .. " 3d.

(To be continued.)

GEMME D'ANTICHITÀ

RACCOLTA DI PEZZI VOCALI

COMPOSTI DAI PIÙ

CELEBRI MAESTRI ANTICHI.

No.		Composer	s.	d.
1.	Morir vogl'io. Aria. E minor	Astorga	3	0
2.	Se non torno. Aria. F	Astorga	3	0
3.	Misera che farò. Aria. A	Buononcini	3	0
4.	Se mai vien. Aria. E flat	Buononcini	3	0
5.	Lascia ch'io pianga. Aria. E flat	Handel	3	0
6.	Lascia ch'io pianga. Aria. D	Handel	3	0
7.	Lascia ch'io pianga. Aria. C	Handel	3	0
8.	Lungi dal caro bene. Cavatina. G	Sarti	2	0
9.	Ombra adorata. Aria. D	Zingarelli	3	0
10.	Invano alcun desir. Arietta. B flat	Gluck	3	0
11.	Come consuma. Aria. G	Gluck	3	0
12.	Pietà signore. Aria. C minor	Stradella	3	0
13.	Cor dolente. Aria. A minor	Pergolesi	3	0
14.	Sott' un vago ciel sereno. Aria. C minor	Pergolesi	3	0
15.	Ecco de' miei trascorsi. Aria. A flat	Paer	2	0
16.	Si tra i ceppi. Aria for bass. C	Handel	3	0
17.	Caro mio ben. Aria. D	Giordani	2	0
18.	Caro mio ben. Aria. E flat	Giordani	2	0
19.	Caro mio ben. Aria. F	Giordani	2	0
20.	Dirti ben mio vorrei. Aria. E flat	Leo	3	0
21.	Ho perduto. Rondo. G	Paesiello	3	0
22.	Ah! lo trepiede. Aria. A	Paesiello	3	0
23.	A serpina penserete. Aria. B flat	Pergolesi	3	0
24.	Ogni pena più spietata. Sicilienne. A minor	Pergolesi	3	0
25.	Verdi prati. Aria. E	Handel	2	0
26.	Vado ben spesso. Aria. C	Rosa	3	0
27.	Star vicino. Aria. F	Rosa	3	0
28.	Venni amore. Arietta. B flat	Righini	1	6
29.	Re del cielo. Preghiera. E flat	Haydn	2	0
30.	Anco in cielo. Aria. F minor	Stradella	3	0
31.	Pietà signore. Aria. A minor	Stradella	3	0
32.	Se i miei sospiri. Aria. C minor	Stradella	3	0
33.	Se nel ben sempre incostante. Arietta. G	Stradella	3	0
34.	Il pensier sta negli oggetti. Aria. E	Haydn	3	0
35.	D'amor per umil giovane. Ballata. F	Haydn	3	0
36.	Che farò senza Euridice. Aria. D	Gluck	3	0
37.	Odi d'un uom che muore. Anacreontica. F minor	Perruchini	3	0
38.	Odi d'un uom che muore. Anacreontica. D minor	Perruchini	3	0
39.	La donna ha dolce il core. Polacca. C	Martini	3	0
40.	Amplius lava me. Aria. E flat	Ciampi	2	0
41.	Ave Maria. Aria. F	Cherubini	3	0
42.	O cessate di piagarmi. Romanza. E minor	Scarlatti	2	0
43.	Vaga rosa. Arietta. G minor	Kreutzer	3	0
44	Deh! tu m'assegna. Aria. E	Handel	2	0
45.	Posa alfin (Lamento di Iole). Aria E flat	Handel	3	0
46.	Figlia mia. Aria. D minor	Handel	2	0
47.	Affanni del pensier. Siciliana. D minor	Handel	3	0
48.	Cangio d'aspetto. Aria. D	Handel	3	0
49.	Già risuonar d'intorno. Aria. D	Handel	3	0
50.	Arduo inver, acciar, tu sei. Il fabbro armonioso. F	Handel	3	0
51.	Quel ruscelletto. Aria. G	Paradies	3	0
52.	Così con questo pianto. Aria. G	Leo	3	0
53.	Solitario bosco ombroso. Canzonetta. D	Fesch	2	0
54.	Tu fai la superbetta. Canzonetta. F	Fesch	2	0
55.	Venni amore nel tuo regno. Canzonetta. E flat	Fesch	2	0
56.	Ave Maria. Aria. D	Cherubini	3	0
57.	O giove onnipotente. Preghiera. E flat	Winter	1	0
58.	Rugiadose, odorose. Canzonetta. A	Scarlatti	2	0
59.	Lascia amor e siegui marte va. Aria. B flat	Handel	3	0
60.	Suol dar la vita all' or. Aria. D	Buononcini	3	0
61.	Non puo travarsi un cor. Aria. G minor	Buononcini	3	0
62.	Idol mio. Aria. B flat	Paesiello	3	0
63.	M' ha pressa alla sua ragna. Aria. A	Paradies	3	0
64.	Scorgo il fiume. Aria. A minor	Scarlatti	3	0
65.	Sento nel core. Aria. E minor	Scarlatti	2	0
66.	Nel riposo e nel contento. Aria. B flat	Handel	3	0
67.	Possedro pur fortunato. Canzonetta. F	Scarlatti	1	0
68.	Gratias agimus tibi. Aria. E flat	Guglielmi	3	0
69.	Pur dicesti. Romanza. E	Lotti	3	0
70.	Sommi dei. Aria. D minor	Handel	3	0
71.	Un fior trovar vorrei. Canzonetta. B flat	Scarlatti	3	0
72.	O cessate di piagarmi. Romanza. F minor	Scarlatti	3	0
73.	Sanctum et terribile nomen. Aria. E flat	Pergolesi	3	0
74.	O salutaris hostia. Aria. E flat	Cherubini	3	0
75.	Si, si, mio ben, imparo. Canzonetta. G	Scarlatti	2	0
76.	Moriro, poichè il volete. Canzonetta. G minor	Scarlatti	1	0
77.	Come raggio di sol. Aria. E minor	Caldara	3	0
78.	Quel che mi nega amor. Canzonetta. F minor	Scarlatti	1	0
79.	Ben ti sta traditor. Canzonetta. C	Scarlatti	1	0
80.	Torbido mar che freme. Aria. D	Jomelli	3	0
81.	A che congiuri. Canzonetta. A flat	Dussek	3	0
82.	A che congiuri. Canzonetta. F	Dussek	3	0
83.	Io morirei contento. Aria. D minor	Albinoni	3	0
84.	Sospiro ch' uscite. Aria. G minor	Carissimi	3	0
85.	Vieni, o cara. Aria. D minor	Handel	3	0
86.	L'esperto nocchiero. Aria. G	Buononcini	3	0
87.	L'esperto nocchiero. Aria. E	Buononcini	3	0
88.	Senza un poco di rigor. Aria. B minor	Scarlatti	3	0
89.	Ch' io mai vi possa. Aria. C minor	Handel	3	0
90.	Non vi piacque. Aria. E flat	Handel	3	0
91.	Cara sposa. Aria. E minor	Handel	3	0
92.	Rendi' l sereno al ciglio. Aria A	Handel	2	0
93.	Più benigno par che arrida. Aria. D	Ariosti	2	0
94.	Ombra cara di mia sposa. Aria. F minor	Handel	3	0
95.	Il mio ben. Cavatina. F	Paesiello	2	0
96.	Io son Lindoro. Aria. B flat	Paesiello	3	0
97.	Tu di pieta. Aria. B minor	Handel	3	0
98.	Voi dolci aurette al cor. Aria. G	Handel	3	0
99.	Nube che il sole. Aria. E flat	Handel	3	0
100.	Sparite, o pensieri. Aria. E	Handel	3	0
101.	Al nome tuo temuto. Aria. F	Righini	3	0
102.	Mi lagnero tacendo. Aria. D minor	Handel	3	0
103.	Spiagge amate. Aria. E flat	Gluck	2	0
104.	Del minacciar del vento. Aria for bass. D minor	Handel	3	0
105.	Chi vive amante. Aria. F	Handel	3	0
106.	Se viver non poss' io. Aria. B minor	Handel	3	0
107.	Da casa, il prisco mio signor. Aria. G minor	Cherubini	3	0
108.	Agitato da smania funesta. Aria for Bass. D	Paer	3	0
109.	Piangero mia sorte ria. Aria. D flat	Handel	3	0
110.	Rendi'l sereno al ciglio. Aria. B	Handel	3	0
111.	Io sperai trovar riposo. Aria. E	Handel	3	0
112.	Ercole avvenelato. Scena for bass. C minor	Handel	3	0
113.	Vado ben spesso. Aria. A	Rosa	3	0
114.	Auretta grata. Arietta. A	Crescentini	3	0
115.	Vieni t'affretta all urna. Arietta. G	Crescentini	3	0
116.	Suol dar la vita allor. Aria. B flat	Buononcini	3	0
117.	Amo nel mio penar. Aria. B flat minor	Handel	2	0
118.	La bella pastorella. Aria. D	Handel	3	0
119.	Si, caro, si. Aria. A	Handel	3	0
120.	Infelici affetti miei. Cavatina. D flat	Giardini	3	0
121.	Oh del mio dolce ardor. Aria. D minor	Gluck	3	0
122.	Oh del mio dolce ardor. Aria. G minor	Gluck	3	0
123.	Cupido. Canzone. D minor	Carissimi	3	0
124.	La voce del cuore. Aria. F	Leonardo Leo	3	0
125.	Lusinghe più care. Aria. G	Handel	3	0
126.	Sibillar gli angui d'aletto. Aria for Bass. C	Handel	3	0
127.	Deh se in ozio. Aria. C	Righini	3	0
128.	Con forza ascosa. Aria. F	Ariosti	2	0
129.	Infelice in tanto orrore. Aria. G	Rauzzini	3	0
130.	Lasso ch' io t'ho perduto. Largo. G	Ariosti	2	0
131.	Prima vedrai. Aria. E flat	Ariosti	3	0
132.	Ombra mai fu. Largo. F	Handel	2	0
133.	Io sono oppressa. Aria. E	Ariosti	3	0
134.	Mi credi infedele. L'aria di Siroe. E	Handel	3	0
135.	Vieni che poi sereno. Cavatina. F	Gluck	3	0
136.	Ch'io mai vi possa. Aria. B minor	Handel	3	0
137.	Rendi'l sereno. Aria. G	Handel	2	0
138.	Del minacciar del vento. Aria for bass. C minor	Handel	3	0
139.	Nel cor più non mi sento. Aria (with Catalani's variations). G	Paesiello	2	0
140.	Tre giorni son che nina. Canzonetta. D minor	Pergolesi	3	0
141.	Tre giorni son che nina. Canzonetta. F minor	Pergolesi	3	0
142.	Aure deh, per pietà. Aria. F	Handel	3	0
143.	A morire. Cantata (with violoncello ad lib.). A minor	Carissimi	3	0
144.	Deh! contentatevi. Cantata. A flat	Carissimi	3	0
145.	Filli, non t'amo più. Cantata. A	Carissimi	3	0
146.	No, no mio core. Cantata (violoncello obbligato). G minor	Carissimi	3	0
147.	Ombra mai fu. Largo. E flat	Handel	2	0
148.	Ah! padre degg' io. Aria. D minor	Handel	3	0
149.	In questa tomba. Aria. D minor	Righini	3	0
150.	Ninfe se liete. Cavatina. A	Caldara	3	0
151.	Tutta raccolta. Aria. A minor	Handel	3	0
152.	Nasce al bosco. Aria. F	Handel	3	0
153.	Occhi belli. Aria. C minor	Handel	1	0
154.	Dolce riposo. Aria. E flat	Handel	3	0
155.	Vieni o figlio. Aria. E	Handel	3	0
156.	Dove sei amato bene. Aria. E	Handel	1	0
157.	Ma pria vedrò. Aria. E minor	Handel	3	0
158.	Pensieri voi. Aria. G minor	Handel	3	0
159.	Per questo dolce. Aria. E	Hasse	3	0
160.	Vinto è l'amor. Aria. A	Handel	3	0
161.	Paga fui. Cavatina. F minor	Winter	2	0
162.	Tutta raccolta. Aria. C minor	Handel	1	0

EDWIN ASHDOWN, LIMITED,

NEW YORK: 1 AND 3, UNION SQUARE.

LONDON: HANOVER SQUARE.

TORONTO: 68, KING STREET WEST.

THREE DANCES

FROM THE MUSIC TO HENRY VIII.

COMPOSED BY

EDWARD GERMAN.

Arranged for the Pianoforte by the Composer.

Price Two Shillings.
String Parts, 4s. Wind Parts, 7s. 6d.

ARRANGEMENT FOR VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE, 3s.
DITTO FOR PIANOFORTE DUET, 3s.

Just Published.

MILITARY BAND PARTS, 15s.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

SUITE

FROM THE MUSIC TO SHAKESPEARE'S

HENRY VIII.

Composed for the production of the Play at the Lyceum Theatre, January, 1892,

BY EDWARD GERMAN.

PIANOFORTE DUET.

PRICE FIVE SHILLINGS.

CONTENTS.

1. Overture.
2. Prelude to Act II. Intermezzo funèbre.
3. Prelude to Act III. Allegretto in G minor.
4. Prelude to Act IV. March in D.
5. Prelude to Act V. Thanksgiving Hymn.
6. Three Dances:—

I. Morris Dance. II. Shepherds' Dance. III. Torch Dance.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

JUST PUBLISHED.

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES

FOR THE VOICE

WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

COMPOSED BY

G. HENSCHEL.

IN TWO PARTS.

PART I.—STUDIES IN SUSTAINED SINGING (LOW VOICE).
PART II.—STUDIES IN FLORID SINGING (LOW VOICE).

PART I.—STUDIES IN SUSTAINED SINGING (HIGH VOICE).
PART II.—STUDIES IN FLORID SINGING (HIGH VOICE).

PART I.—STUDIES IN SUSTAINED SINGING (MEDIUM VOICE).
PART II.—STUDIES IN FLORID SINGING (MEDIUM VOICE).

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS EACH PART.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

Just Published. 8vo. Price 12s. 6d.

PRIMITIVE MUSIC

AN INQUIRY INTO THE ORIGIN AND DEVELOPMENT OF MUSIC, SONGS, INSTRUMENTS, DANCES, AND PANTOMIMES OF SAVAGE RACES.

BY RICHARD WALLASCHEK

With Musical Examples.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN and Co.

TIME.—A Short Treatise on TIME, by FRANK MANLY, I.S.M. Dedicated to Sir JOSEPH BARNBY. Patronised by the leading Members of the Musical Profession. Testimonials from Sir William Cusins, Professor Bridge, Mr. Sims Reeves, &c. Price 6d. London: F. PITMAN, 20, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Just out. Price 6d.

THE FIRST PRINCIPLES OF VOICE PRODUCTION IN SONG AND SPEECH. By Rev. THOMAS KELLY. An Exposition of the method of the old Italian School of Singing, as advocated by Mr. CHARLES LUNN.

Sir MORELL MACKENZIE says: "A worthy representative of what I believe not only to be the best, but the only method of training the singing voice."

"Mr. Lunn is one of the most earnest and conscientious thinkers of the day."—Musical Times.

London: BURNS and OATES, Ltd., 63, Paternoster Row, E.C.
MARRIOTT and Co., 295, Oxford Street, W.

PRACTICAL HINTS ON BOY CHOIR TRAINING. By G. EDWARD STUBBS, M.A., Organist and Choirmaster of St. Agnes Chapel, Trinity Parish, New York.

Sixth Edition.

A useful treatise on the vocal training of Chorister Boys embodying the views of standard writers on the voice.

Although strictly scientific the book deals with the subject in a plain and practical way, and will be found of value to all who are entrusted with the training of boys' voices. It is highly endorsed by leading Clergymen and Choirmasters both in England and America. Price 3s. 6d. net.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW ORGAN MUSIC.

Just Published.

THREE SHORT PIECES:—

No. 1. Larghetto in A flat major.
„ 2. Allegretto Pastorale in A major.
„ 3. Andante con moto in F major.

Price Two Shillings net.

ALSO

"MINUETTO."

One Shilling and Sixpence net.

COMPOSED BY

EDWARD BUNNETT, MUS.D., CANTAB.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW MUSIC by T. E. SPINNEY. Words by AMY THORN. THE SINGER, NOT THE SONG. Price 2s. net. (One of the prettiest songs of the day.)

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HUMOROUS PART-SONGS, by ALFRED ALLEN.

Dickory, dickory, dock .. .. 4d.
Tom, Tom, the Piper's son .. .. .. 3d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

GILL'S EASY VOLUNTARIES.—"Messiah," "Judas," "Elijah," "Creation," "St. Paul." 1s. each set of twenty Voluntaries.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

COMPOSITIONS for the PIANOFORTE, by RALPH H. BELLAIRS, Organist of Bradfield College.

Twelve Lyrical Sketches. Two books. 2s. each. ROBT. COCKS & Co.
Strelinka, Capriccio. J. WILLIAMS.

THE

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW

CASES

FOR BINDING NUMBERS 1 TO 12,

VOL. I.,

Are now ready, and may be had of all Musicsellers in Town and Country.

Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Handsome Design,

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE

ART OF TRAINING CHOIR BOYS

BY

G. C. MARTIN

Organist and Master of the Choristers of St. Paul's Cathedral.

Price Three Shillings; in paper boards, 3s. 6d.

(No. 39. NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S MUSIC PRIMERS, Edited by Sir JOHN STAINER.)

The Exercises for the use of Boys also published separately. Price One Shilling; in paper boards, 1s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NOVELLO'S

VIOLIN & PIANOFORTE ALBUMS.

	s.	d.
*1. Mendelssohn.—Four Marches. Transcribed by B. TOURS. No. 1, Wedding March; No. 2, War March of the Priests; No. 3, Cornelius March; No. 4, Funeral March ..	2	6
*2. Berthold Tours.—Thirty Melodies (expressly written to be used in connection with the Author's VIOLIN PRIMER)	2	6
*3. Mendelssohn.—"Elijah." Ten Transcriptions by B. TOURS	1	0
*4. Gounod.—"Mors et Vita." Ten Transcriptions by B. TOURS	2	6
*5. Battison Haynes.—Twelve Sketches.. ..	2	6
*6. Siegfried Jacoby.—Hungarian Dances. (Transcribed)	2	6
7. Ippolito Ragghianti.—Nine Morceaux de Salon	2	6
8. Oliver King.—Twelve Pieces	2	6
*9. Joachim Raff.—Six Morceaux de Salon ..	2	6
10. Siegfried Jacoby.—Six Characteristic Pieces. For Two Violins	2	6
11. Arcangelo Corelli.—Twelve Sonatas. In Two Books. Edited by A. DOLMETSCH. Book I.	3	6
*12. Arcangelo Corelli.—Twelve Sonatas. In Two Books. Edited by A. DOLMETSCH. Book II.	3	6
*13. Siegfried Jacoby.—Eight National Melodies. (Arranged)	2	6
*14. Gounod.—"Redemption." Nine Transcriptions by B. TOURS	2	6
*15. Arnold Dolmetsch.—Twelve Easy Pieces ..	2	6
*16. Haakman.—Twelve Characteristic Pieces ..	2	6
17. Handel.—Six Sonatas. The Pianoforte Accompaniment by A. DOLMETSCH	3	6
18. Arcangelo Corelli.—Six Trios. For Two Violins and Violoncello, or Pianoforte; or as Quartets, with Violoncello and Pianoforte. Edited and the Pianoforte Accompaniment by A. DOLMETSCH	3	6
19. Kate Ralph.—Six Pieces	2	6
20. Various Composers.—Fourteen Pieces ..	2	6
21. Various Composers.—Twelve Pieces.. ..	2	6
22. Various Composers.—Thirteen Pieces ..	2	6
23. Rosalind F. Ellicott.—Six Pieces	2	6
*24. Arthur Sullivan.—"The Golden Legend." Nine Transcriptions by B. TOURS	2	6
25. J. Müller.—Forest Pieces (Op. 9)	2	6
26. Ethel M. Boyce.—Eight Pieces	2	6
27. I. B. Poznanski.—Ten Pieces	2	6
28. Ch. de Bériot.—Eight Pieces	2	6
29. Henry Purcell.—Fourteen Pieces. The Pianoforte Accompaniment, Marks of Expression, Bowing, and Fingering by ARNOLD DOLMETSCH	2	6
30. H. W. Ernst.—Seven Pieces	2	6
31. F. David.—Five Pieces	2	6
32. H. Vieuxtemps.—Four Pieces	2	6
33. F. Schubert.—Six Valses arranged by SIEGFRIED JACOBY	2	6

 These Albums may also be had arranged for Violoncello and Pianoforte.*

	s.	d.
Edward German.—Three Dances from the Music to Shakespeare's "Henry VIII." Arranged for Violin and Pianoforte by the Composer net	3	0
C. Gurlitt.—Six Pieces for Violin. With Pianoforte Accompaniment .. .. .. net	4	0
Romance (from the above) .. .. .. ,,	2	0
A. C. Mackenzie.—Six Pieces for Violin. With Pianoforte Accompaniment. No. 1, Gavotte; No. 2, Berceuse; No. 3, Benedictus; No. 4, Zingaresca; No. 5, Saltarello; No. 6, Tema con Variazioni .. .. net	5	0
Zingaresca (from the above) .. .. ,,	2	0
Benedictus (from the above) .. .. ,,	2	0
,, ,, ... Arranged for Orchestra. Full Score	5	0
Orchestral Parts	3	6
Highland Ballad, Op. 47, No. 1, for Violin with Pianoforte Accompaniment	3	6
Two Pieces (Barcarola and Villanella), Op. 47, No. 2, for Violin with Pianoforte Accompaniment	3	6

	s.	d.
A. C. Mackenzie—continued.
Pibroch.—Suite for Violin Solo. Arrangement for Violin and Pianoforte .. .. net	6	0
Orchestral Parts .. .. .. ,,	18	0
Joseph Nešvera.—Ten Pieces for the Violin. With Pianoforte Accompaniment .. net	6	0
J. L. Roeckel.—Six Pieces for the Violin. With Pianoforte Accompaniment .. .. net	5	0
Emile Sauret.—Elégie et Rondo for Violin and Pianoforte .. .. net	4	0
Herbert W. Wareing.—Six Pieces for the Violin. With Pianoforte Accompaniment:—
No. 1. May Day Festival .. .. net	2	0
,, 2. At Killee .. .. .. ,,	2	0
,, 3. Romance .. .. .. ,,	1	6
,, 4. Pastoral Dance.. .. .. ,,	2	0
,, 5. Legende .. .. .. ,,	1	6
,, 6. Saltarello .. .. .. ,,	2	0

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

NEW FOREIGN PUBLICATIONS.

	s.	d.
BOUERY, A.—Messe des Pélerins. For Three Voices:— Vocal Score ... . net	5	0
D'HARDELOT, GUY.—"Under the trees." Song for Mezzo-Soprano, with Pianoforte Accompaniment and Violin, or Violoncello, ad libitum	5	0
FRANCK, CÉSAR.—Quartet (D major). For Two Violins, Viola, and Violoncello:— Score ... . net	8	0
Parts .. .. „	10	0
GLAZOUNOW, A.—In modo religioso. Quartet for Wind Instruments (Trumpet, Horn, and Two Trombones). Op. 38:— Score and Parts	3	0
GRODZKI, B.—Melodie. For Violoncello and Pianoforte. Op. 20	2	0
—— Romanza. For Violin and Pianoforte. Op. 21	2	0
HERING, C. E.—Organ Music. For Study, Church, and Home	12	0
—— 250 Chorals. For Organ .. .. net	8	0
HASSELMANS, A.—Berceuse. For Harp. Op. 2	5	0
—— Barcarolle. For Harp. Op. 7	5	0
—— Gitana. For Harp. Op. 21	6	0
—— Lamento. For Harp. Op. 23	4	0
—— Confidence. For Harp. Op. 24	4	0
HOLMÈS, A.—Contes divins. Songs, with French words:— No. 1. L'Aubépine de St. Patrick	4	0
„ 2. Les Lys bleus	4	0
„ 3. Le chemin du Ciel	4	0
—— Ludus pro patria. Selection for Pianoforte, Organ, Two Violins, Viola, and Violoncello	8	0
HUBER, HANS.—Walzer. For Pianoforte Duet, Violin, and Violoncello:— First Set. Op. 27	8	0
Second Set. Op. 54	24	0
KOCZALSKY.—Album. For Pianoforte .. .. .. net	2	0
KRUIJS, M. H. VAN'T.—Sonatina. For Harmonium or Organ. Op. 33	2	0
KRZYZANOWSKI, T.—Sérénade. For Pianoforte. Op. 51 ..	3	0
—— Impromptu. For Pianoforte. Op. 52	3	0
—— Dumka. For Pianoforte. Op. 53	3	0
—— Deux Mazurkas. Op. 54, Nos. 1 and 2 .. .. each	3	0
—— Deux Nocturnes. Op. 55, Nos. 1 and 2 .. .. „	3	0
—— Gavotte. Op. 56	3	0
LONGO, A.—Terza Suite Romantica. For Pianoforte. Op. 19 .. .. complete	6	0
No. 1. Preludio	2	0
„ 2. Romanza	2	0
„ 3. Scherzo	3	0
—— Nuptialia. Suite. For Pianoforte. Op. 20 .. complete	6	0
No. 1. L'Augurio	2	0
„ 2. Canto d'amore	2	0
„ 3. Marcia	3	0
PESSARD, E.—Aubade. Quintet. For Flute, Oboe, Clarinet, Horn, and Bassoon:— Parts .. .. net	2	6
—— Prelude and Minuet. Quintet. For Flute, Oboe, Clarinet, Horn, and Bassoon .. .. net	2	6
PIUTTI, C.—Spring Pictures. Four Pianoforte Pieces. Op. 14. complete	6	0
POENITZ, F.—Idylle. For Violoncello and Harmonium, or Pianoforte. Op. 23	2	0
—— For Violin and Harmonium, or Pianoforte	2	0
RENARD, L.—Messe semi-solennelle. For Three Voices (Soprano, Tenor, Bass), Soli, Chorus, and Organ:— Vocal Score .. .. net	4	0
SAINT-SAËNS, C.—"Primavera." Song. For Soprano or Mezzo-Soprano	4	0
—— "Les Fées." Song. For Mezzo-Soprano	4	0
—— The same, with Pianoforte Duet Accompaniment	5	0
—— Sarabande. For Strings. Op. 93, No. 1:— Full Score .. .. net	1	0
Parts .. .. „	1	6
Pianoforte and Violin .. .. „	2	0
Pianoforte Duet .. .. „	2	0
—— Rigaudon. For Orchestra. Op. 93, No. 2:— Full Score .. .. net	4	0
Parts .. .. „	5	0
Pianoforte and Violin .. .. „	2	6
Pianoforte Duet .. .. „	2	6
—— Concert Piece. For Horn, with Pianoforte Accompaniment. Op. 94 .. .. net	3	0
—— Fantasia. For Harp. Op. 95 .. .. „	3	0
SOKOLOW, N.—Elégie et Barcarolle. For Violoncello and Pianoforte. Op. 13	5	0
—— Quartet. For Strings (Two Violins, Viola, and Violoncello). Op. 14:— Score and Parts	20	0
STRAUSS, O.—A la Tarantella. For Pianoforte. Op. 2 ..	3	0
—— Sérénade espagnole. For Pianoforte. Op. 3	3	0
—— Capriccio. For Pianoforte. Op. 4	3	0
STRAUSS, RICHARD.—"Don Juan." Symphonic Poem. For Orchestra. Arranged as Pianoforte Duet	12	0
TAFFANEL, P.—Quintet. For Wind Instruments (Flute, Oboe, Clarinet, Horn, and Bassoon):— Parts .. .. net	5	0

Sold at half-price, if not marked net.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

PRODUCED WITH GREAT SUCCESS AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE CONCERTS AND THE HEREFORD FESTIVAL.

BENEDICTUS

ARRANGED FOR SMALL ORCHESTRA BY THE COMPOSER FROM

SIX PIECES FOR VIOLIN

With Pianoforte Accompaniment

COMPOSED BY

A. C. MACKENZIE.

(OP. 37.)

Full Score, 5s.; Orchestral Parts, 3s. 6d.;
Also, as originally written for Violin Solo with Pianoforte Accompaniment, 2s.

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH.

As an exceptional case, this movement absolutely gains by the change to which it has been subjected, the impassioned religious melody acquiring force by being played in chorus, and added beauty by a rich accompaniment of strings, horns, and wood-wind. The audience at once pronounced the piece a success, and the composer bowed his thanks for sustained applause from his place in the gallery. . . . Dr. Mackenzie's "Benedictus" came between the two new works, where its reposeful beauty brought a sense of rest and relief. The long and eloquent melody of the piece was finely played by the first violins, led by Mr. Carrodus, and the whole performance produced an effect which could only come from a display of the highest art. The "Benedictus" was a third demonstration in one morning of the stuff that is in our native composers. (Hereford Festival.)

STANDARD.

Dr. Mackenzie's "Benedictus" was originally written for violin, with pianoforte accompaniment. Since then the author has appreciated the capabilities of the music in an orchestral sense, and after several attempts—this composer, like Mendelssohn, never being satisfied at the offset—has written his score for a small orchestra. . . . So charming did this piece prove that the applause was unanimous, and was maintained until the composer had appeared at the end gallery and bowed his acknowledgment.

MORNING POST.

There are beautiful harmonies accompanying the phases of melody, and the whole piece, which is replete with dignity and distinguished by originality, forms a most grateful addition to orchestral répertoires.

DAILY CHRONICLE.

The clever musician has since scored it for a small orchestra, assigning the violin solo to the whole of the violins, and providing work for the other strings, flutes, clarinets, bassoons, and horns, in which form it is likely to obtain as much popularity on the platform as the first setting in the salon. It is a beautiful, quietly flowing melody, with such an elegant accompaniment as only a composer of genuine taste and sympathetic nature, having a perfect knowledge of the means of the instruments he introduces, could place upon paper.

THE OBSERVER.

The two leading themes are in themselves beautiful, and their scenic beauty is enhanced by exquisite orchestration, in which the wind instruments above-named, in conjunction with the violas, violoncellos, and double-basses, are happily employed. . . . This "Benedictus" is likely to become popular throughout the musical world.

THE GLOBE.

Dr. A. C. Mackenzie's new "Benedictus" for violin and orchestra (first public performance) is short and comparatively simple, but will add to his fame. . . . The "Benedictus" is a polished gem.

SUNDAY TIMES.

Dr. A. C. Mackenzie's new "Benedictus for Orchestra," a transcription of one of his "Six Pieces for Violin and Pianoforte," Op. 37, is a gem of melody encased in a beautiful instrumental setting.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES

FOR THE PIANOFORTE

EDITED, ARRANGED IN GROUPS, AND THE FINGERING REVISED AND SUPPLEMENTED

BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

THIS Collection of Studies is intended to illustrate the various elements of a complete course of pianoforte technique, and to provide students with the means of attacking and overcoming the different special difficulties which have to be encountered. With this view, the Studies have been arranged in groups, those in each group being placed in progressive order, and having reference to some one particular difficulty. The greater part of the Studies themselves have been selected from the standard works of the most eminent Study-writers, and with these are included numerous others, which, though of equally great practical utility, have hitherto been less generally accessible.

1.	FIVE-FINGER STUDIES	..	..	..	Part 1*
2.	„	„	..	..	„ 2*
3.	SCALES	..	..	..	Part 1*
4.	„	..	..	..	„ 2*
5.	BROKEN CHORDS	..	..	..	Part 1*
6.	„	„	..	..	„ 2*
7.	„	„	..	..	„ 3*
8.	„	„	..	..	„ 4
9.	„	„	..	..	„ 5
10.	LEFT HAND	..	..	..	Part 1*
11.	„	„	..	..	„ 2*
12.	„	„	..	..	„ 3
13.	„	„	..	..	„ 4
14.	ARPEGGIO	..	..	..	Part 1*
15.	„	..	..	..	„ 2*
16.	„	..	..	..	„ 3
17.	VELOCITY	..	..	..	Part 1*
18.	„	..	..	..	„ 2*
19.	„	..	..	..	„ 3
20.	„	..	..	..	„ 4
21.	„	..	..	..	„ 5
22.	„	..	..	..	„ 6
23.	„	..	..	..	„ 7
24.	FIGURES IN SEQUENCE	..	..	Part 1
25.	„	„	..	..	„ 2
26.	BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES	..	..	..	Part 1
27.	BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES	..	..	..	Part 2
28.	SHAKES	..	..	..	Part 1*
29.	„	..	..	..	„ 2*
30.	„	..	..	..	„ 3
31.	DOUBLE NOTES	..	..	..	Part 1*
32.	„	„	..	..	„ 2*
33.	„	„	..	..	„ 3
34.	„	„	..	..	„ 4
35.	OCTAVES	..	..	..	Part 1*
36.	„	..	..	..	„ 2*
37.	CHORDS	..	..	..	Part 1*
38.	„	..	..	..	„ 2
39.	STACCATO	..	..	..
40.	REPETITION	..	..	..	Part 1*
41.	REPETITION AND TREMOLO	..	..	„ 2
42.	„	„	..	..	„ 3
43.	PART-PLAYING	..	..	..	Part 1
44.	„	„	..	..	„ 2
45.	ORNAMENTS	..	..	..	Part 1
46.	„	..	..	..	„ 2
47.	ACCOMPANIED MELODY	..	..	Part 1
48.	„	„	..	..	„ 2
49.	EXTENSIONS AND SKIPS	..	..	Part 1
50.	„	„	..	..	„ 2
51.	RHYTHM	..	..	..	Part 1
52.	„	..	..	..	„ 2

* These Parts are already published.

FIFTY-TWO BOOKS, PRICE ONE SHILLING EACH.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

OFFERTORY SENTENCES, RESPONSES, &c.

THE OFFERTORY SENTENCES, with an Appendix for Festal use. Set to music by JOSEPH BARNBY. Price 1s.; or in Numbers at 2d. each. Tonic Sol-fa, 6d.

1. Let your light so shine.
2. Lay not up for yourselves.
3. Whatsoever ye would.
4. Not every one.
5. Zacchæus stood forth.
6. Who goeth a-warfare.
7. If we have sown.
8. Do ye not know.
9. He that soweth little.
10. Let him that is taught.
11. While we have time.
12. Godliness is great riches.
13. Charge them who are rich.
14. God is not unrighteous.
15. To do good.
16. Whoso hath this world's good.
17. Give alms of thy goods.
18. Be merciful after thy power.
19. He that hath pity upon the poor.
20. Blessed be the man.
21. Let your light so shine. Festal setting.

THE OFFERTORY SENTENCES, set to music by J. T. FIELD. Price 1s.

1. Let your light so shine.
2. Lay not up for yourselves.
3. Whatsoever ye would.
4. Not every one.
5. Zacchæus stood forth.
6. Who goeth a-warfare.
7. If we have sown.
8. Do ye not know.
9. He that soweth little.
10. Let him that is taught.
11. While we have time.
12. Godliness is great riches.
13. Charge them who are rich.
14. God is not unrighteous.
15. To do good.
16. Whoso hath this world's good.
17. Give alms of thy goods.
18. Be merciful after thy power.
19. He that hath pity.
20. Blessed be the man.

OFFERTORY SENTENCES.

	s.	d.
JOSEPH BARNBY. "Let your light so shine," "Whoso hath this world's good," and "Blessed is the man," with other movements, from the Service in E	1	0
J. BAPTISTE CALKIN. "Whoso hath this world's good," with other movements, from the Service in B flat	1	0
G. M. GARRETT. "Lay not up for yourselves," with other movements, from the Service in D	1	0
G. M. GARRETT. "Give alms of thy goods," with other movements, from the Service in F	1	0
JOHN STAINER. "Let your light so shine," "Lay not up for yourselves," "Whatsoever ye would," "Not every one," "While we have time," with other movements, from the Service in E flat	1	0
JOHN STAINER. "Whoso hath this world's good," "Be merciful after thy power," "He that hath pity on the poor," "Blessed be the man," with other movements, from the Service in A and D	1	0
FERRIS TOZER. Six Offertory Sentences, with Benedictus ..	0	6

Octavo, Sixpence.

EASY OFFERTORY SENTENCES

INTENDED CHIEFLY FOR PARISH CHOIRS, BY

GEORGE C. MARTIN, Mus. Doc.

Organist, St. Paul's Cathedral.

1. Let your light so shine.
2. Lay not up for yourselves.
3. Not every one.
4. Zacchæus stood forth.
5. If we have sown. Do ye not know.
6. He that soweth little.
7. To do good.
8. Whoso hath this world's good.
9. Give alms of thy goods.
10. Be merciful after thy power.
11. He that hath pity.
12. Blessed be the man. [ting].
13. Blessed be the man (2nd set-

OFFERTORY SENTENCES

SET TO

TUNES FROM "THE HYMNARY"

BY

J. POWELL METCALFE.

Price Fourpence.

PREFACE.

There is an ever-increasing conviction that decency and order are better promoted by the singing than the saying of the Offertory Sentences—and that not only in our larger, but in our smaller churches as well. In the latter the adoption of the desired use is to a great extent prevented by the anthem character of the music employed in the usual offertory setting.

The following arrangements are more especially intended for the use of those choirs who, not being regularly trained in anthem-singing, are accustomed to rely on the tunefulness, form, and compactness of the hymn-tune for aid in fitly rendering the words they sing.

E. V. HALL.

SEVEN

OFFERTORY SENTENCES.

Price Fourpence.

TALLIS'S PRECES, RESPONSES, and Litany (in 5 parts). Price 6d.

TALLIS'S RESPONSES, for Evening Service. Arranged for Four Voices, by Sir JOHN GOSS. Price 3d.

TALLIS'S PRECES and RESPONSES, with Litany, for Four Voices. Arranged by JOSEPH BARNBY. Price 4d.

THE FERIAL RESPONSES, with Litany, as used at St. Andrew's, Wells Street. By JOSEPH BARNBY. Price 4d.

THE PRECES and RESPONSES, with Litany. Set in Monotone, by JOSEPH BARNBY. Price 4d.

THE NICENE CREED. Set to music by the following composers:—

	s.	d.
Sir JOHN GOSS. Unison, with Organ Accompaniment. Key of D .. .. Voice Part, 1d.	0	3
A. S. COOPER. Unison or in Harmony, with Organ Accompaniment. Key of F .. .. Unison copy, 1d.	0	6
A. S. COOPER. Monotone, with Organ Accompaniment. On G	0	3
R. W. CROWE. Monotone, with Organ Accompaniment. On G	0	3
MERBECKE. With Organ Accompaniment by J. STAINER. Key of F. Folio .. .. Unison copy, 1d.	0	6
MERBECKE. With Organ Accompaniment by J. BARNBY. Key of F	0	1½
MERBECKE. With Organ Accompaniment by H. J. POOLE. Key of F	0	4
J. STAINER. Unison or Harmony, with Organ Accompaniment. Key of G. Folio .. .. Without Accompaniment, 1½d.; 8vo, 2d.	0	6
F. E. GLADSTONE. Set to Eighth Gregorian Tone and Tonus Peregrinus	0	3
S. S. WESLEY. In the Key of E	0	4

THE

VERSICLES & RESPONSES

AS USED IN

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL

(FERIAL USE)

EDITED BY

J. STAINER, Mus. Doc.,

AND

G. C. MARTIN, Mus. Doc.

Price Fourpence.

VERSICLES, RESPONSES, AND LITANY

FOR T.T.B.B.

Arranged from various sources, and partly composed, for use in Keble College Chapel, by

CHARLES H. LLOYD.

Price Sixpence.

THE APOSTLES' CREED.

	s.	d.
E. CRUSE. In Monotone Recitation, with Harmony for the Organ. On G. Folio	1	0
E. G. MONK. In Recitative, Unison with Organ. Key of G ..	0	3
W. STATON. Monotone, with Organ Accompaniment. On F ..	0	3
J. H. CORNELL. In Monotonic Recitation, with Organ Accompaniment. On C	0	3

ATHANASIAN CREED.

	s.	d.
A. S. COOPER. With Chants	0	3
E. H. BIRCH	0	4
W. T. BEST. Set to a new Chant. For Chorus and Organ. In F. Organ Score	1	6
Vocal do.	0	3
J. STAINER. The Ancient Plain Song. Arranged for Voices in Unison, with Organ Accompaniment	0	3

THE LORD'S PRAYER (Pater noster).

	s.	d.
BANSON, C. From Communion Service (in D) Four Voices ..	0	3
J. T. FIELD. In D. Four Voices	0	2
BATTISON HAYNES. In G. Unison and Organ	0	2
W. S. HOYTE. In G. Four Voices	0	4
R. E. PARKER. In G. Four Voices	0	3
T. ROYLAND SMITH. In F. Four Voices	0	4
H. TOWNSEND. Two settings, in Monotone. On G. Folio ..	1	0

MASS IN D

FOR SOLO VOICES (OR SMALL CHORUS), CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

BY

ANTONÍN DVOŘÁK.

The Pianoforte Accompaniment arranged from the Full Score by

BERTHOLD TOURS.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

Full Score and Orchestral Parts, MS.

TIMES.

The most remarkable sections of the Mass in D are the Kyrie, with its well-contrasted "Christe eleison" for solo quartet or small choir; the curiously dogmatic opening of the Credo, in which an alto solo, originally designed for four voices in unison, seems to usurp some of the functions of the priest; and the beautiful Agnus Dei, with its striking close in which a theme of four descending quavers is treated with much success. The effect of this passage is greatly heightened by the division of the soprano choir into three for a short time.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.

There are no serious difficulties for executants to surmount, while the expression of the music is so plain and direct that it can be felt and appreciated by all. For the result last named it may be that we have to thank the conditions under which the work was written. The unfettered Dvorák, as a composer of sacred music, appears in the Birmingham Requiem, with which simplicity is not even on speaking terms. Here, on the other hand, comparative simplicity was essential, and in the result we have that which will rank as an exemplification of high art in a form generally attractive. . . . We welcome this Mass with peculiar pleasure. It is a most useful work, and will be everywhere a pleader, eloquent and intelligible, not only for the solemnities of religion, but for the beauty and sufficiency of pure art.

STANDARD.

Naturally, the Mass is not planned on the same extensive scale as the "Stabat Mater" and the Requiem, being, indeed, studiously non-pretentious throughout, and occupying less than an hour in performance; but it is in no sense unworthy of the gifted Bohemian composer. . . . There are many passages of marked originality and beauty, the composer being invariably at his best when he is concerned with the most mysterious dogmas of the Catholic Church.

DAILY NEWS.

The Mass is perhaps hardly so characteristic of its composer as his larger sacred compositions; but, on the other hand, being written for a comparatively small church, it is more concise, and presents fewer choral difficulties. It is therefore likely to become popular with ordinary choirs, the more especially as, if desirable, the services of expensive soloists may be dispensed with altogether, their parts being sung by a semi-chorus. Some portions of the music are more or less conventional, but this cannot be said of the setting of the Nicene Creed, parts of which are almost secular in character, while frequently—at the "Crucifixus," for example—the master-touch is obvious.

DAILY CHRONICLE.

The Mass in D is concise and free from commonplace motives and effects tending to detract from its religious object. . . . The final Agnus Dei peacefully brings to a close a work that is marked by sincere devotional feeling rather than by power, and as executive difficulties are throughout absent, there is nothing to stand in the way of its adoption by choral associations with limited means. Taken as a whole, the work is certainly worthy of Dvorák.

GLOBE.

The new work was heartily welcomed, and proved worthy of its able composer, by whom it was last year re-written, so far as concerned the instrumentation. It cannot be said that the Mass presents any novel features, but the score contains many passages worthy of praise. The music is always in character with the words to which it is attached, and the Credo (notably the "Incarnatus" section) and the Agnus Dei may rank among the best efforts of the gifted composer.

SUNDAY TIMES.

The Mass, which is its composer's Opus 86, bears evidence throughout of an endeavour to avoid technical difficulties such as might place it beyond the reach of an executive body of limited resources. This is unusual with Dvorák, and it may explain in a measure the absence of certain features that characterise his choral writing as a rule. The progressions are comparatively simple; sudden modulations are rare; the development of the subjects is seldom extended to half Dvorák's usual length, and certain portions of the setting are treated with a brevity which for him is altogether remarkable. Hence a work which a child could follow with ease on first hearing. But it is not on that account less interesting, nor, we may add, is it less charged with the individuality of style and the beauty and appropriateness of sentiment that Dvorák has taught us to look for in all his religious works, from the "Stabat Mater" downwards. . . . The charm of the whole is irresistible, and we think that the latest is destined to be among the most popular of the choral works that have emanated from the pen of the Bohemian genius.

ATHENÆUM.

Having regard to the special object for which it was composed, it is not surprising to find the Mass concise, unpretentious, and far less arduous for the executants than the "Stabat Mater" or the Requiem; but it is not less characteristic of Dvorák, several of the simplest passages being remarkable as displaying alike his musical idiosyncrasies and his religious fervour.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

CHILDREN'S SOUVENIR SONG BOOK

ARRANGED BY

WILLIAM L. TOMLINS,

CHORAL DIRECTOR OF THE COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION, CHICAGO, 1893.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS NET.

CONTENTS.

TITLE.	WORDS BY	MUSIC BY
AT NIGHT	Anon.	Alberto Randegger.
BOAT SONG	M. E. S.	Eaton Faning.
BOAT SONG	M. E. S.	Adolf Weidig.
BROOK, THE	Harriet Monroe	J. W. Chadwick.
CHILD'S AMERICAN HYMN	Julia W. Howe	G. W. Chadwick.
COLUMBUS SAW ACROSS THE MAIN	Robert Grant	Clayton W. Johns.
CRADLE SONG	Thomas Bailey Aldrich	J. Barnby.
EVEN SONG, AN	Celia Thaxter	Horatio W. Parker.
EVERY NIGHT	Elsie J. Cooley	Myles Birket Foster.
FAR OUT AT SEA	Elsie J. Cooley	Ross G. Cole.
FOUNTAIN, THE	James Russell Lowell	Clayton W. Johns.
FREEDOM, OUR QUEEN	Oliver Wendell Holmes	Templeton Strong.
FREEDOM, OUR QUEEN	Oliver Wendell Holmes	John K. Paine.
HAPPY SPRING WALTZ	Mrs. W. Stone	George L. Osgood.
HER LOVERS	Margaret Deland	J. F. Bridge.
IF	Elsie J. Cooley	Rossiter G. Cole.
IF I WERE A FLOWER	Elsie J. Cooley	Geo. J. Huss.
LAND TO THE LEEWARD	Margaret J. Preston	Arthur Foote.
LARK, THE	Edmund C. Steadman	Edward H. House.
LULLABY	Anon.	Myles Birket Foster.
MY SONG	Elsie J. Cooley	R. G. Cole.
OAK AND THE STREAMLET, THE	Rabbi Edw. N. Calisch	G. Henschel.
PILGRIMS, THE (HYMN)	E. C. Steadman	A. Weidig.
RETURN OF THE BIRDS, THE	Abba D. Willard	Ethelbert Nevin.
ROCK-A-BYE	Anon.	W. C. E. Seeboeck.
ROCK-A-BYE	Anon.	C. H. H. Parry.
ROSE SONG, A	Richard H. Stoddard	Horatio W. Parker.
SINGING JOYFULLY	John White Chadwick	Mrs. H. H. A. Beach.
SOFT-SHELL CRAB, THE	Elsie J. Cooley	J. W. Chadwick.
SONG OF THE BROOK	Anon.	Alfred R. Gaul.
STAR, THE	M. E. S.	Berthold Tours.
STAR, THE	Elsie J. Cooley	Rossiter G. Cole.
SUMMER'S RAIN AND WINTER'S SNOW	Richard Watson Gilder	C. V. Stanford.
THERE WERE FOUR LILIES	Elsie J. Cooley	Battison Haynes.
THINGS OF BEAUTY	Anon.	A. C. Mackenzie.
THROUGH LOVE TO LIGHT	Richard Watson Gilder	A. C. Mackenzie.
TO A DAISY	Margaret Deland	Wm. G. Dietrich.
WEST WIND, THE	M. E. S.	J. Barnby.
WHAT CAN YOU DO	Elsie J. Cooley	Rossiter G. Cole.
WOODLAND LULLABY	Florence E. Coats	Wm. G. Dietrich.
WORSHIP	John Greenleaf Whittier	C. V. Stanford.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

Printed by NOVELLO, EWER and Co., at 69 & 70, Dean Street (W.), and published at 1, Berners Street (W.), and 80 & 81, Queen Street (E.C.)
Sold also by KENT and Co., Paternoster Row (E.C.)—Saturday, July 1, 1893.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR.

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH.

No. 606.—Vol. 34. AUGUST 1, 1893. Price 4d.; Post-free, 5d.
Registered for transmission abroad. Annual Subscription, Postage-free, 5s.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY,

ROYAL ALBERT HALL.

Patron: HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH, K.G.

Conductor: Sir JOSEPH BARNBY.

There are now VACANCIES in the Choir or SOPRANOS, ALTOS, TENORS, and BASSES (especially Tenors). Only those who have good powerful voices, and who can read music at first sight, will be accepted. Address, Assistant-Secretary, Royal Choral Society, Royal Albert Hall, S.W.

BRISTOL
8TH TRIENNIAL MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

Patron: HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH, K.G.

WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY, FRIDAY, AND SATURDAY,
October 25, 26, 27, 28, 1893.

Wednesday Morning, "Samson" (Handel); Wednesday Evening, "Faust" (Berlioz); Thursday Morning, "Hymn of Praise" (Mendelssohn) and "Stabat Mater" (Rossini); Friday Morning, "Wilderness," Anthem (Wesley), and "Paradise and the Peri" (Schumann); Friday Evening, Grand Wagner Concert, Acts II. and III. "Flying Dutchman" and Selections, Vocal and Instrumental, from Wagner's Operas; Saturday Morning, "Messiah" (Handel).

Principal Vocalists:—
Madame ALBANI.
Miss ESTHER PALLISER. Mdlle. LANDI.
Miss HILDA WILSON.
Miss CLARA BUTT. Miss NELLIE ROWE.
Mr. EDWARD LLOYD.
Mr. BEN DAVIES. Mr. BANTOCK PIERPOINT.
Mr. SANTLEY.
Mr. ANDREW BLACK. Mr. MONTAGUE WORLOCK.
Chorus: THE BRISTOL MUSICAL FESTIVAL CHOIR.
Sir CHARLES HALLÉ'S FESTIVAL BAND.
Conductor, Sir CHARLES HALLÉ.

Ticket Office, Monday, September 11, 1893. Programmes on application to Henry Cooke, Esq., Hon. Sec., Royal Insurance Buildings, Bristol.

WORCESTER MUSICAL FESTIVAL

SEPTEMBER 10, 12, 13, 14, and 15, 1893.

Sunday Morning, September 10, Grand Opening Service. Tuesday Morning, "Elijah." Tuesday Evening, "Israel in Egypt" and Beethoven's Symphony, No. 7. Wednesday Morning, Bach's Mass in B minor. Wednesday Evening (Public Hall), New Orchestral Work, composed for the occasion, and conducted by Dr. Hubert Parry; Sullivan's Music to "The Tempest," and Miscellaneous Selection. Thursday Morning, Parry's "Job," conducted by the Composer, and Spohr's "Last Judgment." Thursday Evening, Brahms's "German Requiem" and "The Hymn of Praise." Friday Morning, "The Messiah." Friday Evening, Closing Service by the Three Choirs. Principal Vocalists: Madame Albani, Mrs. Hutchinson, Miss Anna Williams, Miss Hilda Wilson, Madame Belle Cole, Miss Jessie King, Mr. Edward Lloyd, Mr Edwin Houghton, Mr. Watkin Mills, Mr. Plunket Greene, and Mr. Brereton. Programmes, containing full particulars, may be obtained either from Messrs. DEIGHTON and Co. or Mr. E. J. SPARK, High Street, Worcester.

COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS.

The College Library is open daily from 10 to 5 and on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 9.

Members desiring occasional practice on the College Organ may obtain particulars on application.

E. H. TURPIN, Hon. Secretary.
Hart Street, Bloomsbury, W.C.

MUSICAL AUTHORS' SOCIETY.—Composers, Performers, Teachers, Librettists, Organists, Students, &c., can promote their interests through the Society's various departments. Annual Subscription, £2 2s. Enclose stamp for particulars to Hon. Sec., Musical Authors' Society, Queen's Gate Hall, South Kensington.

CARDIFF EISTEDDFOD, 1883.—Cantata Competition ("The Crusader"). Will any gentleman who competed for the £50 prize kindly communicate with William L. Frost, 26, Hatfield Street, Hatcham Park, S.E.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC,

TENTERDEN STREET, W.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patrons: HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN AND THE ROYAL FAMILY.
Principal: Dr. A. C. MACKENZIE.

Michaelmas Term commences, September 28.
Entrance, Examination, September 25, at 11.
Entry Forms and all information may be obtained from the Secretary
F. W. RENAUT, Secretary.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC,

KENSINGTON GORE, LONDON.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
Director: Sir GEORGE GROVE, D.C.L., LL.D.
Hon. Secretary: CHARLES MORLEY, Esq.

The Christmas Term will commence on Thursday, September 28.
Entrance Examination on September 26.
Regulations and all information may be obtained from
GEORGE WATSON, Registrar.

THE GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Established by the Corporation of London, 1880.

Principal: Sir JOSEPH BARNBY.

The next Term commences Monday, September 25.
For prospectuses and all further particulars apply to the Secretary.
By order of the Committee,
CHARLES P. SMITH, Secretary.
Victoria Embankment, E.C.

THE
SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW
FOR AUGUST

CONTAINS:—

GENERAL NOTES.
STAFF NOTATION AND THE MOVABLE DOH
THE EVENING CONTINUATION SCHOOLS MUSIC CODE.
H.M. INSPECTORS' REPORTS ON SCHOOL MUSIC FOR 1892.
ANSWERS TO SCHOLARSHIP EXAMINATION QUESTIONS.
THE NEW COMBINED TIME AND TUNE TESTS FOR SCHOOLS.
SCHOOL MUSIC IN CARLISLE AND DUBLIN.
TONIC SOL-FA ASSOCIATION CONCERT.
NEWS FROM ALL PARTS.

THE
SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW
FOR AUGUST

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING MUSIC IN BOTH NOTATIONS:—

"THE CARNOVALE" (ROSSINI). Arranged as a Two-part Song.
EXERCISES IN TIME AND TUNE COMBINED. By W. G. MCNAUGHT.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Office: 1, Berners Street, W.

PRIZES FOR FESTIVAL HYMN TUNES.

THREE PRIZES of £3 EACH (Manchester Sunday School Union). For conditions send stamp to Mr. A. P. Smith, 1, Piccadilly, Manchester.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES.

MISS FLORENCE ARMRIDING (Soprano)
(Pupil of Mr. Shakespeare and Medalist, R.A.M.).
Oratorios, Concerts, Lessons, &c., at 20, Conduit Street. Address, Leicester Villa, Ealing, W.

MADAME BARTER (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., Westbury Road, Wood Green, N.

MADAME CARRIE BLACKWELL (Soprano)
(Pupil of the late Madame Sainton-Dolby).
Orchestral, Oratorio, Ballad Concerts, &c., 4A, Sloane Square, S.W.

MISS EMILY DAVIES (Soprano)
Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., address, Severn House, Seven Sisters' Road, Finsbury Park, N.

MADAME ELEANOR DAY (Soprano)
Concerts, Private Lessons, &c. Strathaven, Hendon, N.W.

MISS MARJORIE EATON (Soprano)
(Pupil of W. Shakespeare, Esq., London).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c. 237, Katherine Street, Ashton-under-Lyne.

MISS FLORRIE FISHER (aged 12, Soprano)
For Concerts, At Homes, &c.
"Miss Fisher aroused the enthusiasm of her audience by a perfect rendering of Bishop's "Should He upbraid" and "Tell me, my heart." Address, F. W. Fisher, May Cottage, Wolverton, Bucks.

MADAME MADELINE HARDY (Soprano)
27, Loughborough Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS FLORENCE MONK (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., Glebe Field, Stoke Newington, N.

MISS ANNIE NORLEDGE (Soprano)
(Pupil of W. Shakespeare, Esq.)
For Oratorios and Ballad Concerts, At Homes, and Musical Parties. Address, 221, South Lambeth Road, London, S.W., and Roseleigh, Newark-on-Trent. Telegrams—Norledge, London.

MISS FANNIE SELLERS (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, Recitals, &c., Crag Cottage, Knaresbro'.

MISS SIMPSON (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c.
For terms apply, Miss Simpson, Todmorden.

MISS KATIE THOMAS (Soprano)
Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, Pupils. 47A, Welbeck Street, W.

MISS ETHEL WEBB (Soprano)
Concerts, &c. 14, Balmoral Road, Nottingham.

MISS GERTRUDE WESLEY (Soprano & Harpist)
(Great-granddaughter of Samuel Wesley).
For Oratorio or Ballad Concerts. Testimonials and Critiques from 53, High Street, Doncaster.

MISS LILY HOWARD (Mezzo-Soprano)
(Pupil of Madame Bella Monti).
Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., address, 1, Arundel Rd., Croydon.

MISS MARY WILLIS (Mezzo-Soprano)
For Oratorios, Operas, Concerts, or Private Lessons, address, 9, Rochester Terrace, Camden Road, N.W.

MISS M. L. BOOKER, L.R.A.M. (Contralto)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, care of Mr. Wm. Marriott, 295, Oxford Street, W.; or, Shirebrook Villa, Heeley, Sheffield.

MISS EMMIE FINNEY (Contralto)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c.
42, Pembridge Road, Notting Hill Gate, W.

MISS EMILY FOXCROFT (Contralto)
76, Calabria Road, Highbury. Free from Sept. 4. Oratorios, &c.

MISS LILIAN HOVEY (Contralto)
(Medalist, R.A.M.; Pupil of Mr. Richard Cummings, A.R.A.M.)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 82, Norfolk Road, Sheffield.

MISS RINA ROBINSON (Contralto)
For Oratorio and Ballad Concerts. 67, Carleton Rd., Tufnell Park, N. References kindly permitted to Dr. A. H. Mann, Dr. E. H. Turpin, and Mr. F. A. W. Docker.

MADAME and MR. SUTTON SHEPLEY
(Contralto and Baritone).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 97, Dalberg Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS LOTTIE SWEENEY (Contralto)
(Pupil of Madame Sainton-Dolby).
For Concerts, Oratorios, &c., address, Miss Sweeney, Vocalist, Armley, near Leeds.

MR. T. HENRY BREARLEY (Tenor)
For Oratorios, Ballads, &c., address, 13, Earl St., Claremount, Halifax.

MR. BEN. BURY, L.R.A.M. (Tenor)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c. Church, Lancs.

MR. HERBERT CLINCH (Tenor)
Oratorio, Ballads, &c., address, 41, Frederick St., St. John's Wood, N.W.

MR. A. F. THORNBOROUGH (Tenor)
(Of Chester Cathedral).
Manager of the Chester and North Wales Musical Agency. All Artists carefully selected for Oratorios, Concerts, &c. A capital Male Voice Quartet. Agent for the Euterpean (Ladies) Orchestra.
Address, 20, Kingsley Terrace, Chester.

MR. HARRY STUBBS, R.C.M. (Tenor)
(Of St. George's Chapel, Windsor).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 18, The Cloisters.

MR. GORDON HELLER (Baritone)
(Of St. James's Hall Concerts, London; late Pupil of Hy. Blower, Esq.)
For Oratorios, &c., address, 20, Blenheim Terrace, Leeds.

MR. GILBERT THORNE (Baritone)
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., address, 11, Penryn Street, Oakley Square, N.W.

MR. WM. THORNTON (Baritone)
Care of Wood and Marshall, Bradford.

MR. JOHN BROWNING
(Principal Bass, Leeds Parish Church Choir).
"Judas Maccabæus."—"Mr. Browning was another great success. Possessed of a most powerful voice, with plenty of dramatic force, a most intelligent reader of the score, he invested his pieces with a life and colour which made him a prime favourite. 'Arm, arm, ye brave,' was declaimed with great vigour, while his singing of that florid composition, 'The Lord worketh wonders,' was really masterly."—Keighley News, December 24, 1892.
"Mr. John Browning has a splendid bass voice of grand resonance, power, and range, which he uses with expression and feeling, and reveals the significance of his songs."—Darlington and Stockton Times, February 11, 1893.
"Maritana."—"Mr. Browning sang 'In happy moments' in a most artistic manner in all respects, and was encored for this song. He gave a splendid rendering of 'Hear me, gentle Maritana,' and the second part of the song, 'The mariner in his barque,' and was encored for a remarkably fine performance of the aria 'This heart by woe o'ertaken,' with its pendant, 'No, my courage,' and repeated the latter."—Huddersfield Examiner, February 24, 1893.
"Elijah."—"Mr. Browning scored a distinct triumph in the very trying work allotted to the baritone, the declamatory sentences of the Prophet being dramatically rendered. He certainly proved himself to be one of the best representatives of Elijah Sheffield has heard."—Sheffield and Rotherham Independent, April 15, 1893.
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Parish Church, Leeds.

MR. HENRY POPE (Bass)
Oratorio, Concerts, Opera, Pupils.
19, Westbourne Park Villas, W.

MADAME LAURA SMART (Soprano) requests that all communications respecting Oratorio, Operatic Recital, or Ballad Concerts be addressed, 29, Burton Road, Kilburn, N.W.; or, 50, Church Street, Liverpool.

CHANGE of ADDRESS.—MR. DAN PRICE (Baritone, of Westminster Abbey) begs to announce his CHANGE of ADDRESS to 9, Clarendon Road, Holland Park, W., where all communications respecting Concert, Masonic, Oratorio Engagements, and Private Lessons should be addressed.

MR. W. CARTLEDGE-WHITE (Tenor) begs to announce his CHANGE OF ADDRESS to 7, Guildford Road, South Lambeth, S.W., where all communications respecting Concert, Opera, and Oratorio Engagements should be addressed.

MR. EGBERT ROBERTS (Bass) requests that all communications respecting Oratorios, Opera, or Concerts be addressed, 45, Pentonville Road, N.

MISS CARRIE LEWIS (L.R.A.M.), Performer and Teacher, Accompanist (good reader), and Solo Pianist, accepts ENGAGEMENTS for Concerts, At Homes, Private Practice, &c. 218, Upper Richmond Road, Putney, S.W.

MISS CLARA TITTERTON, Associate and Silver Medalist, R.A.M., First Class Certificate Society of Arts, &c., &c., receives PUPILS for the VIOLIN and PIANOFORTE on moderate terms. Lessons given at pupils' own residences. Schools attended. Miss Titterton also accepts Engagements for Concerts and At Homes. 38, Agate Road, The Grove, Hammersmith, W.

MR. FRANK FREWER, L.R.A.M., A.C.O. (Organist, St. James's, Garlickhithe, E.C.), teaches the PIANOFORTE, ORGAN, &c. For terms for Concerts, Organ Recitals, Pianoforte or Organ Lessons, address, 6, Wilmot Place, Rochester Road, and Camden Road, N.W.

WANTED, by Experienced PIANOFORTE TEACHER, A.R.A.M., a good Private Connection or School Visiting Engagement. South preferred. Address, A. R. A. M. J., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

MISS
FANNY BOUFFLEUR
(SOPRANO)
For Oratorios, Cantatas, Concerts, &c., 239, Upper Parliament Street, Liverpool.
Agent, N. Vert, Esq., 6, Cork Street, London, W.

MISS

MARIE HOOTON

(CONTRALTO)

(Late Westmoreland Scholar and Parepa-Rosa Gold Medalist of the Royal Academy of Music)

AND

MR.

EDWARD BRANSCOMBE

(TENOR)

(LAY-VICAR OF WESTMINSTER ABBEY)

Are now booking Engagements for the present and ensuing seasons.
Please address, 37, Torrington Square, Bloomsbury; or,
Mr. W. B. HEALEY,
17, Great Marlborough Street, W.

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES, CONCERT-GIVERS, &c.

MR. JOHN BARTLETT

(TENOR)

PRINCIPAL, PRO-CATHEDRAL, KENSINGTON,

AND OF

SIGNOR LAGO'S ROYAL OPERA (Principal),

COVENT GARDEN PROMENADE CONCERTS,

CRYSTAL PALACE ORCHESTRAL CONCERTS,

MADAME FANNY MOODY AND MR. CHARLES MANNERS' CONCERT TOUR, &c.,

Is now Booking Engagements for Oratorio, Concerts, At Homes, &c. Secretaries and others are desired to write for Press notices.
For first appearances moderate terms arranged. Large répertoire.
Kindly address, Mr. John Bartlett, 7, Westfield Terrace, Fulham Road, London, S.W. Or Agents.

MR. THOMAS KEMPTON

(Bass, Vicar Choral, St. Paul's Cathedral)

AND

MR. JAMES BATES

(Director of Choir, Christ Church, Lancaster Gate, W.)

PROVIDE

SOLO BOYS and LEADING BOYS

For Oratorios, Church Festivals, Concerts, &c.

MASTER SYDNEY LOVETT

"Master Sydney Lovett is possessed of a singularly sweet soprano voice and a most refined style."—Daily Telegraph, April 12, 1893.

Master Lovett sang last month at Paddington and Oxford ("Hear my Prayer"), Ealing ("God, Thou art Great," and also at Lyric Concerts); Queen's College, Cambridge; Tunbridge Wells, Southsea, Lowestoft, Bayswater, Stationers' Hall, Criterion Restaurant, Hôtel Métropole, and Lord's Hotel (Ballads), Bexhill ("Daughter of Jairus"), and Westminster Town Hall (visit of T.R.H. the Prince and Princess of Wales).

Engaged all August, but has vacant dates in September and October.

MASTER LEONARD TUDGAY

(Solo Boy, St. Mary's Church, Stoke Newington).

MASTER CHARLES AKAST

(Solo Boy, St. Matthew's Church, Ealing).

MASTER HARRY PEACOCK

(Solo Boy, Hampstead Parish Church).

And other thoroughly trained and reliable vocalists can be seen by appointment.
Letters and applications for testimonials, criticisms, terms, &c., to be addressed:
Messrs. KEMPTON and BATES, 60, Moorgate Street, E.C.
Provincial Clergy, Organists, Musical Directors, and others will find this address easily accessible from all the London termini.

MR.

SMALLWOOD METCALFE

(BASS)

For Oratorios, Concerts, &c.

"Special praise must be given to Mr. Smallwood Metcalfe for his admirable singing. He is the possessor of a fine bass voice of considerable compass and sonority."—The Times, December 6, 1892.
Terms, &c., address, 142, Belsize Road, London, N.W.

MR. LAWRENCE FRYER

(TENOR, St. Paul's Cathedral).

"Has a magnificent voice."—Macclesfield Chronicle.
"A tenor voice of richness and power, which we hope soon to hear again."—Bath Gazette.
"Quite electrified the audience with 'Thou shalt break them.'"—Bishop Stortford Mercury.
"'Comfort ye' and 'Every valley' were grandly rendered."—Sheffield Chronicle.
"In the declamatory passages he reached an enviable point of excellence. 'Sound an alarm' was a remarkable exhibition of power."—Finchley Gazette.
"His ringing tones gave conclusive indication of his great capabilities."—Southampton Times.
"Nature has endowed Mr. Lawrence Fryer with a magnificent tenor voice, which he uses with true artistic feeling."—Grantham Journal.
"A rich and powerful tenor voice, of unusual quality and range."—Nottingham Journal.
Address, 47, Croxted Road, Dulwich; or, St. Paul's Cathedral.

THE MISSES TULLOCH'S RECITALS.

Miss EDITH TULLOCH (Soprano), Pupil of William Shakespeare.
Miss ADA TULLOCH (Guitar), Pupil of Madame Sydney Pratten.
Miss DORA TULLOCH (Recitations).
Miss BERYL TULLOCH (Mandoline).
Operatic Scenas and Arias, Ballads, Italian, French, and German Songs; Mandoline, Guitar, and Mandola Solos and Duets. Spanish Songs to Guitar Accompaniments.
RECITATIONS, DUOLOGUES.
Dates required for Concert engagements (Part 1, Oratorios, Cantatas; Part 2, Miscellaneous), Scotland, November and January and February; Midlands, October and November. For Press Notices, Programmes, and particulars, address, the Misses Tulloch, Erith, Kent; or, usual Agents.

THE

ENGLISH CONCERT PARTY

MADAME LESLIE ARNOTT.

MADAME JULIA HUTCHINGS.

MR. A. BOWYER BRISTOL.

MR. EDMUND EDWARDS.

Solo Pianoforte—
MRS. A. L. RICHARDSON, L.R.A.M.

Solo Violin—
MR. W. H. HENLEY.

Solo Harp—
J. H. COCKERILL
(Sir Charles Hallé's Band).

Conductor and Accompanist—
MR. WALTER J. EVANS.

The above Party are prepared to accept Engagements for the forthcoming season for Sacred, Chamber, or Ballad Concerts; also,

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS WITH

SIR AUGUSTUS HARRIS,

FOR

CONCERT RECITALS OF GOUNOD'S OPERA

PHILEMON AND BAUCIS.

Applications for vacant dates to be made to Manager,
P. Henry Jones, Hampden House, Phœnix Street, London, N.W.
Special arrangements for Charity Concerts.

MR. JOSEF CANTOR'S

"GEMS OF THE OPERAS"

CONCERT COMPANY.

All communications, Church Street, Liverpool.

Telegrams—"Cantor, Liverpool."

MR. BINGLEY SHAW,
CONCERT AGENT AND MANAGER,
Music Warehouse, Market Place, Nottingham.

Mr. Stedman's Musical Agency.

CHOIR BOYS, Paris.—There is a VACANCY in the Choir of the American Church of the Holy Trinity, Paris. Exceptional educational advantages, especially in the French language. No premium required. Requirements: good voice, experience in church music, and gentlemanly appearance. Apply to Mr. Stedman, 12, Berners Street, any morning between ten and twelve.

ORGANIST FOR PARIS

REQUIRED, at the American Church of the Holy Trinity. Applicants must be of good experience. Cathedral Service. Apply, stating experience, with testimonials, to Mr. Stedman, Musical Agency, 12, Berners Street, W.

ORGANIST FOR NICE.

A GENTLEMAN of good Church experience REQUIRED, for the American Church. Duties: 8 months, from October 1 to June 1. Liberal salary. Applications to Mr. Stedman, Musical Agency, 12, Berners Street, W.

BASS (not Baritone) FOR NICE.

There is a VACANCY at the American Church. Candidates must have good Church experience and ability in solo singing. Applications to Mr. Stedman, Musical Agency, 12, Berners Street, W.

CHOIR BOYS.—WANTED, Boys with good voices to train as SOLOISTS. Gentlemanly appearance and some knowledge of music necessary. Liberal and progressive salaries. Apply to Mr. Stedman, Musical Agency, 12, Berners Street, W.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS.

MR. DUTTON (St. Paul's Cathedral) provides SOLO BOYS for Church Festivals, Organ Recitals, Concerts, At Homes, &c.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Have made a great reputation.
MASTER ALBERT LEE.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Are specially experienced in Sacred Music.
MASTER W. A. GOUGH.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Have received splendid testimonials.
MASTER EDWARD WOOD.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Are trained entirely by himself.
MASTER FRANK CAMPBELL.

Address, 19, Alpha Road, New Cross, S.E.

VICTORIA COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Instituted by the Victoria College Corporation, Ltd.
Incorporated 1891.

Patrons:
The Right Hon. The Marquis of Lorne, K.T.
The Right Hon. The Earl of Dartmouth.

Local Secretaries required for towns not already represented.
Regulations as to Diploma and Local Examinations on application.
GEO. A. STANTON, Secretary.
11, Burleigh Street, Strand, W.C.

CHURCH CHOIR GUILD

(Guild of Church Musicians),
35, Wellington Street, London, W.C.

A.C.C.G. and F.C.C.G. Diploma Examination in January, 1894.
COMPETITIONS.
For "Communion Service," Silver Medal.
For "Anthem," Silver Medal.
For "Kyrie in Canon," Bronze Medal.
For further particulars see the Church Musician, and apply to the Warden, Dr. Lewis.

MR. W. C. AINLEY, Mus. Bac., Cantab. (1884), teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c., by Correspondence. Terms moderate. New House, Mirfield, Yorkshire.

MR. T. AINSWORTH, 4, Park Avenue, Blackburn, gives LESSONS in HARMONY and COUNTERPOINT by post. Terms: Beginners, 1s. per lesson; more advanced, 1s. 6d.

DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who passed the following EXAMINATIONS:—MUS. DOC., OXON. and DUBLIN; MUS. BAC. Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, and Durham (1892); L.R.A.M., 1893; L.L.C.M., 1893; F.C.O., 1893. FOUR HUNDRED Certificates, "Diplomas," and Degrees have been gained by Dr. Allison's Pupils at Musical Examinations, and they won SIX GOLD MEDALS and Three Silver Medals. Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Revision of Compositions, by Post, to Correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, Organ, and Piano. 68, Nelson St., Manchester.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, A.R.A.M., teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c., by post. Personal Lessons in Pianoforte or Theory at own or pupil's residence; or at 84, New Bond Street, W. Schools attended. Address, Willersley House, Old Charlton.

EMIL BEHNKE'S System of VOICE TRAINING is carried on by Mrs. and Miss Behnke and assistant. Also Emil Behnke's method of treating STAMMERING. References to doctors whose patients have been cured. Pamphlet, 1s., post-free, of Mrs. Emil Behnke, 18, Earl's Court Square, S.W.

MR. GEORGE J. BENNETT is prepared to receive PUPILS in HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c. Address, 25, Vincent Square, Westminster, S.W.; or, 1, Berners St., W.

MR. T. HEMMINGS, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.C.O., L.Mus., T.C.L., prepares Candidates for ARTS and MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS by Post. Stoke-on-Trent.

DR. HOCH'S CONSERVATOIRE for all branches of Music, in Frankfort-on-the-Maine. The Winter Term commences September 1. Director, Professor Dr. B. Scholz. Tuition is given by Frau F. Bassermann, and by Messrs. Director Dr. B. Scholz, I. Kwast, L. Uzielli, I. Meyer, E. Engesser, A. Glück, G. Trautmann, and K. Friedberg (in Pianoforte); Mr. H. Gelhaar (in Organ); Professor H. Heermann, Professor Naret-Koning, and F. Bassermann (in Violin and Viola); Professor B. Cossmann (in Violoncello); W. Seltrecht (in Contra-Bass); M. Kretzschmar (in Flute); R. Müns (in Oboe); L. Mohler (in Clarinet); F. Thiele (Fagott); C. Preusse (in Horn); I. Wohllebe (in Trumpet); Kammersänger Dr. G. Gunz and C. Schubart (in Singing); Director Dr. Scholz and Messrs. I. Knorr and E. Humperdinck (in Theory and Composition); E. Humperdinck (Partiturspiel and Instrumentation); Dr. G. Veith (in German Literature); Mr. K. Hermann (in Declamation and Mimics); Frl. del Lungo (in Italian Language). The Fee for the Special Branch and necessary accessories is 360 marks; for the Finishing Classes, 450 marks per annum. Applications to be made to the Direction of Dr. Hoch's Conservatoire.

DR. F. J. KARN, Mus. Bac., Cantab.; Mus. Doc., Trinity College, Toronto; L.Mus., T.C.L., gives LESSONS Personally or by post in HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, FUGUE, ORCHESTRATION, ACOUSTICS, &c.; and prepares for Musical Examinations. Latest successes: DURHAM MUS. BAC. and First Exam., Sept. 1892; CAMBRIDGE MUS. BAC., 1892; MUS. BAC., LONDON, 1891; MUS. BAC., DUBLIN, 1891 and 1892; F.C.O. and A.C.O., 1892; L.R.A.M. (Composition), 1891; Mus. Doc. and Mus. Bac., Toronto, 1891, Gold Medalist, 1890; L.T.C.L. and A.T.C.L., 1892; F.T.S.C.; Senior Local, R.A.M. and R.C.M., and T.C.L., Theory and Pianoforte; A.R.C.M.; L.Mus., L.C.M. Upwards of 260 Diplomas and Degrees gained by pupils, and several Medals. Terms very moderate. Address, 70, Park Road, Haverstock Hill, N.W.

DR. W. JOHN REYNOLDS, D.Mus., Lond., L.Mus., T.C.L., gives LESSONS, personally or by post, in the Theory of Music (including acoustics). Recent successes. 48, Highbury Grove, N.

MR. R. STOKOE, Mus. Bac., Cantab., F.C.O., gives ORGAN LESSONS at Christ Church, Down Street, Piccadilly. Harmony, Counterpoint, &c., taught personally or by post. 86, Rossiter Road, Balham, S.W.

DR. TAYLOR, Mus.D., Oxon., F.C.O., L.Mus. (Author of "Vocal Score Reading Exercises for F.C.O. Students"), prepares CANDIDATES for MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS by Post. Address, Wolverhampton Road, Stafford.

MR. A. W. TOMLYN, Mus.B., Dunelm, L.T.C.L., Berwick-on-Tweed, COACHES CANDIDATES for University and all other Exams. by post. Every possible attention and assistance guaranteed. Many past successes.

MR. W. H. TUTT, Mus. Bac., Cantab., L.R.A.M., teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, ACOUSTICS, &c., by Correspondence. Ashburn, Derbyshire.

DR. J. WARRINER prepares Candidates successfully for all MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS, and receives Resident and Professional Students, on advantageous terms, if talented. De Crespigny Lodge, Denmark Hill, S.E.

MRS. WEBSTER, L.R.A.M., is open to an ENGAGEMENT as PIANOFORTE and HARMONY MISTRESS, one or two days a week, in or near London. Mrs. Webster has been exceptionally successful in preparing Candidates for the Associated Board of the R.A.M. and R.C.M. and other Examinations. 90, Angell Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS FLORENCE MARSHALL (Licentiate of the Royal Academy of Music (Teacher), 1890, Pupil of Mr. Emil Behnke and Mr. Walter Mackway) is open to an ENGAGEMENT as SINGING MISTRESS one or two days a week in London. Pupils have passed the Local Examinations of: The Associated Board, R.A.M. and R.C.M.; Incorporated Society of Musicians; and Trinity College, London. For terms, &c., apply to Miss Florence Marshall, Dromore, Ashby Road, Loughborough.

MUSICAL PROFESSION.—MR. W. de M. SERGISON, Organist and Director of the Choir of St. Peter's, Eaton Square, S.W., trains Youths as Musicians, especially as CHOIR-TRAINERS and ORGANISTS. Mr. Sergison's course affords advantages not attainable at any London Academies. Many past pupils are now holding Cathedral and important Church appointments in England, America, and the Colonies. Applications should be addressed to Mr. Sergison, at the Vestry of the Church.

RESIDENT PUPIL.—MR. ARTHUR W. MARCHANT, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.C.O., Organist and Choirmaster, All Saints' Parish Church, Huntingdon, has a VACANCY for another RESIDENT PUPIL. Very fine three-manual Organ (tubular pneumatic). Preparation for College of Organists and other Exams., and every facility for a thorough musical training. A small post as Organist can be offered when qualified. The Terrace, Huntingdon.

MR. E. H. THORNE will have a VACANCY in his house for a RESIDENT PUPIL in September. 13, Neville Terrace, Onslow Gardens, S.W.

THE ORGANIST of the Parish Church, Cuckfield, Sussex, has a VACANCY for a RESIDENT PUPIL. Comfortable home. Apply to Mr. T. E. P. Attewell, as above.

SALISBURY CATHEDRAL.—There will be a competition for two CHORISTERSHIPS in the month of September. Candidates must, as a rule, be between the ages of eight and ten, but exceptions may be made. Apply as soon as possible for information as to day fixed for competition, references required, payments, &c., to Rev. E. E. Dorling, The Close, Salisbury.

KING'S COLLEGE, Cambridge.—CHORISTERSHIPS.—The trial of voices to fill VACANCIES in the Choir School will be held on October 6. Candidates must have a good ear and a good voice, and should be between 9 and 12 years of age. For particulars, apply to the Dean. Names to be sent in by October 1.

ST. JOHN'S CHOIR SCHOOL, Upper St. Leonards-on-Sea.—There are two CHORAL SCHOLARSHIPS to be competed for in August, value TWENTY GUINEAS per annum (including good education). Examination of Candidates will be held in London. Candidates should be between the ages of 10 and 12. Apply, in the first instance, to the Organist, St. John's, 2, Rothsay Road, Upper St. Leonards-on-Sea.

CHORISTERS.—Two LEADING BOYS REQUIRED. £5 per annum. Apply, Thursdays, before 7 o'clock, Organist, 90, North Side, Wandsworth Common, S.W.

TREBLE WANTED, for the Duke of Newcastle's Church at Clumber. Gentlemanly BOYS, aged 9—11, with promising voices, receive FREE BOARD and EDUCATION. Apply to the Chaplain, Clumber, Worksop.

SOLO BOY WANTED, for St. Jude's, S. Kensington. £12 per ann. Resident in S.W. or W. district preferred. Write to Mr. H. W. Hunt, 146, Finboro' Road, S.W.

ALTO (Prof.), aged 22, will give his services in return for good permanent SITUATION. Address, Alto, care of Mr. Wiffen, Main Street, Bulwell, Nottingham.

MR. CLIFFORD-CONSTABLE (late Choirmaster, Parish Church, Bromley, London) at liberty in September for similar APPOINTMENT, or as Solo Tenor. Few vacant Sundays this month for Solo work. Address, care of S. R. Hurst, Esq., 55, Chancery Lane, W.C.

SOLO BASS DISENGAGED during August. Could deputise. Address, J., 22, Elgin Avenue, Maida Vale, W.

BASS SOLOIST (formerly of King's College, Cambridge).— CHOIR APPOINTMENT WANTED. Four years' Cathedral experience; last two years holding an important Church appointment abroad. A permanency desired where other light employment can be found. Address, F. Freeman, Branston, Linc.

CHURCH APPOINTMENT WANTED in the UNITED STATES, by a Bass (pupil of Sig. Manuel Garcia); also Concert engagements or vocal teaching. Highest testimonials. Medalist, R.A.M. Address, Bertramo, Novello & Co., 1, Berners St., W.

DROYLSDEN & DISTRICT PHILHARMONIC UNION.—Principals Wanted, for Gounod's "Faust," October next. Particulars to E. J. Fielding, Cavendish Villa, Fairfield, Manchr.

CONDUCTOR for CHORAL and INSTRUMENTAL SOCIETY WANTED. 7 miles from City, N.E. Monday Rehearsals, October to March. Apply, by letter, stating terms, qualifications, &c., to Society, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 80 and 81, Queen Street, E.C.

TO ORCHESTRAL SOCIETIES.—An experienced CONDUCTOR, of ability and reputation, is open to ENGAGEMENTS in or near London. Address, J. H. Bâton, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

TO HIGH SCHOOLS of MUSIC.—The Teacher of High School PIANOFORTE PLAYING and MUSIC THEORY at well-known (German) Academy of Music, speaking German and English (former student of Leipzig Conservatorium), seeks similar APPOINTMENT in England from next October. Address, A. Z., 10, Postlagernd, Erfurt, Germany.

WANTED, immediately, for the Edinburgh Castle Mission Church, Limehouse, an experienced and efficient ORGANIST (for three-manual and pedal organ with 34 stops, built by Wedlake, and exhibited at the Healtheries Exhibition, 1884). Attendance regularly required at three services on Sundays and on two week evenings, and occasionally, by notice, on a third week evening. Salary, £30 or £40 per annum. Candidates should apply by letter, giving particulars of previous engagements and enclosing copies of testimonials as to qualifications, to Mr. John Odling, Secretary, Dr. Barnardo's Homes, 18 to 26, Stepney Causeway, E.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED, for the Parish Church, Walton-on-the-Naze. Salary, £30. Modern Organ (2 manuals). Address, Committee, Vicarage, Walton-on-the-Naze.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER, thoroughly experienced, WANTED, October 1. Must be communicant. Services: three on Sundays, usual Church Festivals, with occasional week-day. Fully choral service. Surpliced choir. Salary, £75 a year. Apply, by letter, with copies of testimonials, to Rector, Christ Church, Brondesbury, N.W.

PUPIL ASSISTANT-ORGANIST WANTED, for St. Mary's Church, Bangor. Former pupil appointed Assistant at an important Cathedral. For particulars, apply, Edward Broome, Bangor.

ORGANIST (34) desires POST, within thirty miles of London (Essex preferred). References given. Nominal salary. Nonconformist. Address, Organist, Novello, Ewer and Co.

ORGANIST desires RE-ENGAGEMENT in North of London. Address, T. W., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

ORGANIST, &c., desires POST in or near London. Moderate salary. Excellent testimonials. Would deputise. Anglican. E., 51, Cumberland Street, Pimlico, S.W.

MR. C. HUGH ROWCLIFFE, F.C.O., Organist and Choirmaster, is open to DEPUTISE or PERMANENT APPOINTMENT. 76, Brighton Road, Stoke Newington, N.

VIOLINIST.—Excellent Violinist, now playing in one of the most celebrated Continental Orchestras, wants ENGAGEMENT. First-class references. Apply, Bu, 382, Camden Road, N.

THOROUGH TUNER WANTED, for Pianos, American Organs. Steadiness and punctuality essential, and subject to the signing of Music Trades Association agreement. Apply, stating wages, L. V., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

WANTED, TUNER and REPAIRER of Pianofortes and American Organs. State wages required. Crane and Sons, Wrexham.

EXPERIENCED TUNER and REGULATOR REQUIRED, for permanency. Thorough efficiency essential Write, giving age, references, and salary required, Bristol, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

TUNER.—WANTED, a first-class TUNER. Must have good references. Permanency. Apply, Stanley, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

PIANOFORTE TUNER desires RE-ENGAGEMENT. High-class work. Permanency. Address, Philharmonic, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

FIRST-CLASS TUNER seeks RE-ENGAGEMENT, town or country. Competent testimonials. Address, A., 23, Hampden Street, Balsall Heath, Birmingham.

PIANOFORTE TUNER disengaged. Well up in Harmoniums, American Organs, and repairs. Address, I. J. K., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

FIRST-CLASS TUNER, possessing exceptional business capabilities, desires SITUATION as MANAGER or otherwise. Thoroughly experienced in estimating repairs, exchange, sale of instruments, &c. Bookkeeping, correspondence. Highest references. Octave, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street.

YOUNG MAN seeks ENGAGEMENT as Outdoor TUNER. Used to high-class work in present situation. Apply, A. Z., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

MUSIC ASSISTANT WANTED, for London suburb. A gentlemanly young man, thoroughly conversant with the Catalogues, able to read fairly well at sight, and able to try over Pianos in the absence of the principal. Unexceptional references will be required. Write, stating particulars and salary required, to A. Y. T., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

WANTED, in the Music Department, a smart ASSISTANT with good address. Must have a thorough knowledge of the trade. Send photograph and testimonials. Milsom and Son, Bath.

APPRENTICE WANTED to the Music Publishing Business.—Respectable BOY WANTED, just from school. Knowledge of music desirable. Small premium required, payable back in salary during term of apprenticeship. Address, Harrison and Son, Music Publishers, 29, Paternoster Square, E.C.

WANTED, in a Music Shop, an ASSISTANT who can play well and will make himself generally useful. Under 21 preferred. Charles Auty, 10, Westgate, Dewsbury.

MANAGER.—WANTED, RE-ENGAGEMENT as MANAGER or SALESMAN, in Pianoforte, Music, and Small Goods Warehouse. Coast preferred. Good Pianist and Violinist. Good references. Address, X. Z., 2, Lyndhurst Terrace, Fawcett Road, Southsea, Hants.

TO MUSICSELLERS.—WANTED, CHARGE of a BRANCH SHOP near London, with house attached preferred. Good accountant, brilliant performer, and good reader. Active and energetic wife (domesticated), and would assist. Could influence business. Address, Energico, 26, Hatfield St., New Cross, S.E.

SITUATION REQUIRED, in Music Publisher's, as SALESMAN or similar position. Excellent references. Aged 25. T., 3, Buckingham Road, Leyton, E.

ORGAN PRACTICE (near City), 1s. per hour. Three manuals, C.O. pedals. Willis (from Minories), 45, Leman St., E.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—Three manuals; independent pedals. Terms, One Shilling per hour. Specification post-free. Blennerhasset's Studio, 1A, Vernon Street, King's Cross, W.C.

NEW ORGAN STUDIO, with Three-manual PIPE ORGAN, blown by water. Terms for Practice, 1s. per hour. At Smyth's Music Depôt, 54, London Road, Forest Hill, S.E.

WANTED, ORGAN PRACTICE. Chelsea District. State terms. Address, Diapason, Messrs. Deacon's, Leadenhall Street, E.C.

STUDIO ORGAN, with three Manuals and Pedals, for SALE, nearly new. Price £55, or five guineas per quarter for three years. W. White, Grantham.

ORGAN, CC, Two-manual, for Sale, cheap. 5 great, 5 swell, Bourdon ped., 4 couplers. Apply, E. O. Yorston, Organ Builder, Victoria Works, Durham Street, Kennington Oval, S.E.

GRAND ORGAN for SALE. Specially constructed for, and now in use at the National Workmen's Exhibition, Agricultural Hall, Islington. A bargain if purchased before August 12, close of Exhibition. Particulars from Eustace Ingram, Organ Builder, Eden Grove, Holloway, N.

ORGAN for SALE. Now in use at Oxted Church, Surrey. Also our New Model Chancel Organs. Specifications for New Organs, &c., on application. Henry Speechly and Sons, St. Mark's Road, Dalston, N.E.

FOR SALE, a unique CHAMBER ORGAN, by Bishop. Two manuals, perfect tone, very handsome case, suit music room, hall, or small church. Can be inspected now. Apply, R., 82, Talbot Road, Bayswater, W.

FOR SALE.—A Two-manual BELL AMERICAN ORGAN, 20 stops, knee swells, pedals, and blowers, &c., in walnut case, with pipe top. In perfect order; will take half-price (£65). Other offers considered. Apply, by letter, to the Rev. George Morris, Lindsay House, Branksome Park, Bournemouth.

ORGANS for SALE.—Three Second-hand Two-manuals, pedals and bourdons: 1 mahogany case, 9 stops; 1 oak case, 11 stops; 1 pine case, 14 stops; and one in walnut case, 5 stops, one-manual. R. Cope, 21, Jardin Street, Albany Road, Camberwell, S.E.

ORGANS, Church, Chapel, and College, with every modern improvement. Established 1845. W. E. Richardson and Sons, to Her Majesty, Central Organ Works, Hulme, Manchester. Specification and Estimates.

ORGANS.—Three good sound Two-manual ORGANS for SALE. No. 1, £120; No. 2, £150; No. 3, £200. Warranted for five years. Full particulars on application. Fincham's Organ Factory, 150, Euston Road, London. Established 1837.

BROADWOOD Short Drawing-room iron GRAND PIANO, in elegant walnut case. 7 octaves; full trichord. Tone, touch, and condition as new. A bargain, 55 guineas; cost 165 guineas. View at Mr. Fieldwick's, Organist, St. John's, Cromer House, Putney (near Railway Station).

STEINWAY and SONS' UPRIGHT PIANOFORTE, Rosewood Case (New), FOR SALE at a very low price. On view. T., 44, Berners Street, W.

BROADWOOD and SONS' UPRIGHT PIANOFORTE, Rosewood Case (New), TO BE SOLD at a low price. T., 44, Berners Street, W.

FOR SALE, PIANO by Erard (Concert Grand). Original price £160, accept £30. A bargain. Can be inspected. Address, R., 82, Talbot Road, Bayswater, W.

GOOD Old VIOLINS offered cheap to the Trade, having again made some bargains. Paul Petzold, Wiesenstrasse 50, Chemnitz, Saxony.

FOR SALE, Set of ORGAN PEDALS for Piano. Almost new. Cheap. T. Dickson, Eliza Bank, Loanhead, Midlothian, N.B.

HYDRAULIC ENGINES for Organ Blowing. Blennerhasset's Patent "Perfect" Prize Medal Engines are the best. 1B, Vernon Street, King's Cross Road, London, W.C.

"TOWER" ORGAN WORKS.—Specifications, Rebuilding, Repairs, Voicing and Tuning by experienced Artists. Pipes and Fittings. Second-hand Organs and Materials. T. R. Willis (from Minories), 45, Leman Street, London, E.

ORGAN PEDALS to PIANOS.—New method of Attachment by TUBULAR PNEUMATIC. This action surpasses all mechanical actions for prompt and Organ-like Touch. It is less expensive, easier to attach, and does not injure the most delicate Pianoforte. Prospectus, with full description and price lists, on application to Norman Bros. and Beard, Organ Works, Norwich.

TUNERS, REPAIRERS, &c., requiring Tuning Hammers, Kits (guaranteed), or TOOLS of any description, Reeds, Fittings, Materials. Please send for my complete Price List. Karl Wagenhaus, 2, City Road, Hulme, Manchester.

VIOLIN STRINGS. Finest imported. Twenty years' reputation. Sixpence each; sample packet of three, 1s. 1d., post-free. Alphonse Cary, 87, Oxford Street, London, W.

T. R. WILLIS (from Minories, est. 1827), Maker and Importer of Brass and Wood Instruments, Harmonium Reeds, Strings, Wire, Violins, Concertinas, &c. 45, Leman Street, E.

IMPORTANT TO MUSICSELLERS.—Having the largest and most varied stock in Europe, orders received in the morning are executed the same day. Terms and Catalogues on application.

AUTHORS' WORKS CORRECTED, REVISED, and PRINTED without delay, on exceptionally low terms. Estimates given on receipt of MSS.
London: B. Williams, 19, Paternoster Row, E.C.

MUSIC COPIED and DRAWN from the Full Score, with proper cues for the Engraver; also Songs or other Pieces transposed, by J. Peck, 36, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS. Dr. Horton Allison, 68, Nelson Street, Manchester.

TO ORGANISTS and others requiring only a limited number of copies of their Compositions.—Messrs. DINHAM and CO., by their method, execute on the shortest notice and at a trifling cost, Anthems, Services, Orchestral Parts, and every description of Music, from twelve copies and upwards. Specimens, &c., sent free on receipt of card. Dinham and Co., 28, Fenchurch Street, London, E.C. Established 1872.

TO COMPOSERS and CONDUCTORS.—WORKS SCORED for large or small ORCHESTRAS by an experienced Musician. Address, Wm. L. Frost, 26, Hatfield St., Hatcham, London.

Auction Rooms specially for the Sale of Musical Property.

MESSRS. PUTTICK and SIMPSON, Auctioneers, 7, Leicester Square, London, W.C., hold SPECIAL SALES of MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS on or about the 20th of every month. Sales of Musical Libraries, Music Plates, and Copyrights. Trade Stocks, Manufacturers' Plant, &c., are held as occasion may require. Valuations for Probate or Legacy Duty, or for Public or Private Sale. Terms on application.

MUSIC BUSINESS on SALE. Good opening for energetic man. Music, Novello, Ewer & Co., 1, Berners St., W.

ADVERTISER would like to JOIN established MUSIC BUSINESS, or join another in opening. Provinces. Would introduce £500. Tuner, Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners St.

KELLY and CO., PIANOFORTE, AMERICAN ORGAN, and HARMONIUM MAKERS (to Her Majesty), 14 and 16, Mortimer Street, London, W.

Kelly and Co.'s Instruments are the only ones of English manufacture that gained any award at the DUBLIN and PARIS EXHIBITIONS; also PRIZE MEDAL, INVENTIONS EXHIBITION, 1885; GOLD MEDAL and DIPLOMA of HONOUR, YORK EXHIBITION, 1889.

A LIBERAL DISCOUNT for SCHOOLS, CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS, and the PROFESSION.

500 SECOND-HAND PIANOFORTES by the leading Makers, at all times, very cheap. NEW PIANOS (warranted) in elegant Walnut or Rosewood cases, from 19 Guineas.

The Trade, Merchants, and Shippers supplied.

Sole Importers of the celebrated HERMANN PIANOS, CHEAPEST and BEST IN THE TRADE, as recommended by Signor Tito Mattei, the late Sir Julius Benedict, the Abbé Liszt, and others.

D'ALMAINE'S
PIANOS AND ORGANS

CLEARANCE SALE.

Extension of Premises, 89, Finsbury Pavement.

Dealers specially invited.

D'Almaine and Co. (Established 108 years), 89 and 91, Finsbury Pavement, E.C.

NICHOLSON AND CO.,
ORGAN BUILDERS,
PALACE YARD, WORCESTER.

(ESTABLISHED 1841.)

Specifications and Estimates sent free.

ESTABLISHED 1843.

GEO. ROGERS & SONS'

PIANOFORTES.

(Makers to the Emperor of Russia.)

NOBLE IN TONE.

HANDSOME IN APPEARANCE.

UNRIVALLED FOR DURABILITY.

THE FINEST PIANOS IN THE WORLD.

PIANOS

FOR INDIA AND THE COLONIES.

ALSO YACHT PIANOS.

GEO. ROGERS & SONS,

60, BERNERS ST., OXFORD ST., LONDON, W.

THE OLD FIRM.

P. CONACHER & CO.,

Organ Builders,

SPRINGWOOD WORKS,

HUDDERSFIELD.

TWO GOLD MEDALS.

BOY PRODIGIES.—JAPANESE CLARIONET (Hermann Smith).—See August Musical Opinion and Music Trade Review. Also 200 cols. of Musical Literature and Advertisements. Price 2d. Order at all book and musicsellers; at Smith's Railway Stalls; or (by post, 3½d.) at 150, Holborn Bars, London, E.C.

Just Published.

TEN SKETCHES

FOR

VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE

COMPOSED BY

I. B. POZNANSKI.

Price Three Shillings and Sixpence.

Contents.

Sur la Fleuve.	Mazurka.
Berceuse.	La Rosée.
Barcarolle.	Légende.
Au Revoir.	Gavotte.
L'Orientale.	Danse des Faunes.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

BENEDICTUS

ARRANGED FOR SMALL ORCHESTRA BY THE COMPOSER FROM

SIX PIECES FOR VIOLIN

With Pianoforte Accompaniment

COMPOSED BY

A. C. MACKENZIE.

(Op. 37.)

Full Score, 5s.; Orchestral Parts, 3s. 6d.;

Also, as originally written for Violin Solo, with Pianoforte Accompaniment, 2s.;

ARRANGEMENT FOR MILITARY BAND

BY

DAN GODFREY, Jun.

Three Shillings and Sixpence.

ORGAN ARRANGEMENT, by Charlton Palmer and J. B. Lott, 1s. 6d.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

Just Published.

IRISH

SONGS AND BALLADS

THE WORDS BY

ALFRED PERCEVAL GRAVES

THE MUSIC ARRANGED BY

C. VILLIERS STANFORD.

Price Four Shillings.

Contents:

The Song of the Turf.	O Mary, thy laugh was sweet.
The Exiles.	Hush song.
Arranmore Boat Song.	The Kilkenny cats.
The Roving Pedlar.	Sweet Isle.
The Zephyrs blest.	The Hero of Limerick.
Colonel Carty.	Loved bride of O'Byrne.
The Ploughman's whistle.	Our Inniskilling boy.
Love's hallowed seal.	Festival Song (Pleraca).
The March of the Maguire.	Johnny Cox.
Lullaby.	The Irish Reel.
A Lament.	Molleen Oge.
The Song of the Ghost.	Last night I dreamt of my own true love.
Silver and Gold.	Bright love of my heart.
Mavourneen Dhu.	My Colleen rue.
The Darling.	Chieftain of Tyrconnell.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

Just Published.

SIX PIECES FOR VIOLIN

WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

COMPOSED BY

JOSEPH L. ROECKEL.

Price Five Shillings net.

Contents.

No. 1. In Modo Antico.	No. 4. Souvenir de Valse.
„ 2. Preghiera.	„ 5. Tempo di Gavotta.
„ 3. Staccato Étude.	„ 6. Romanza.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

Just Published.

ELEGIE ET RONDO

POUR

VIOLON ET PIANO

PAR

EMILE SAURET.

(Op. 48.)

Price Four Shillings net.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

TRINITY COLLEGE LONDON

For Musical Education and Examination.—Inst. 1872.

Warden:
Professor E. H. TURPIN, Mus.D.
Director of Examinations:
Professor JAMES HIGGS, Mus.B.

At the Fortieth Half-Yearly Higher Examinations, the following Candidates passed:—

Licentiates in Music.—John Henry L. Gauntlett, Emilie Bessie Grant, Mus. B., Thomas James Hoggett, Mus. B.

Associates in Music.—Edith Anstey, Mary Gertrude Bonamy, George Herbert Knight, Hector Roderick Maclean, Alice Mary Overell, Mabel Susannah Slatter, Annie Tyson-Tiplady, Annie A. Wade, Joseph Bede White, Arthur Wm. Youens.

Preliminary Division Certificates (Associate in Music).—Grace Ierson, Joseph Lawrence.

Matriculation Certificates.—Honours: Annie Amelia Eustace, Louise Noble Green, Jessie Henderson Jardine, Emily Elizabeth Killin, George Herbert Knight, Joseph Lawrence, Margaret Hannah Wall, George Woodhouse. Pass: Miriam Ethel W. Biggs, Elsa Sara A. Odell, Mrs. P. S. Pardy.

Certificated Organists.—Mary Elizabeth Ackerley, Lady Blanche Sybil Tollemache, William Spencer Young.

Associate-Pianists.—Baxter Buckley, Minnie Howlett.

Certificated Pianists.—Edith Mary Adnitt, Ethel Constance Arnold, Jeanie Atkins, Sarah Elizabeth Bartholomew, Margaret E. Beeham, Agnes Blick, Jane Beatrice Brough, Julia Augusta Chapman, Amy Cheyne, Ethel Grace Colborne, Eliza Curd, Emily Agnes L. Davies, Kate Florence Day, Emma Jane Dimond, Alice Fetter, Sophie Freeman, Lizzie Mary Godfrey, Ada Angelina Gray, Caroline Mary Hemmons, Agnes M. Henson, Wilfred Ernest Hodgson, Nellie Louisa Hodson, Elsie Annie Howard, Iden Hutchings, Katie Hyman, Elizabeth Anne James, Kate Emily Mary Johnson, Emma Lewis, Jean W. Martyn, Margaret O. Mourant, Norah Naylor, Jessie Neighbour, Jane Pate, Helen Phillips, Mary Rennie, Marguerite May Smythe, Walter Haydn Staveley, Christina Hall Steel, Maud Stevenson, Catherine Stewart, Susanne Sarah Stokvis, Edith Blanche Stone, Mary Duff Strachan, Laura Helen Warren, Fanny Sarah Williams, Maud Agnes Winter.

Certificated Violinists.—Constance Colborne, Claude S. Fenigstein, Conrad John Goebel, Florence Edith Simpson, Emilie W. Uhlhorn-Zillhardt.

Associate-Vocalist.—Walter Attersoll.

Certificated Vocalists.—Joses Bickley, Caroline Mary Hemmons.

Harmony Certificate.—Annie Maria Yelland.

Counterpoint Certificates.—Honours: Sarah Matilda Hughes, Flora Louisa Willoughby.

Choir Training Certificate.—George Townshend Fleming.

Total number of entries, 190; total number of passes, 83.

Examiners:—G. E. Bambridge, Francesco Berger, Henry R. Bird, W. Creser, Mus. D., A. E. Drinkwater, M.A., Charles Edwards, Myles B. Foster, Alfred Gibson, C. Warwick Jordan, Mus. D., James Higgs, Mus. B., E. J. Hopkins, Mus. D., Haydn Keeton, Mus. D., Walmsley Little, Mus. D., E. Lockwood, Michael Maybrick, C. W. Pearce, Mus. D., Ridley Prentice, Gordon Saunders, Mus. D., C. E. Armand Semple, M.B., and E. H. Turpin, Mus. D.

By Order of the Academical Board,
J. GORDON SAUNDERS, Mus. D., Registrar.

All communications to be addressed to Mr. Shelley Fisher, Secretary, Trinity College, London, W.

Just Published.

SIX EASY PIECES

FOR

VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE

COMPOSED BY

H. GROSSHEIM.

(Op. 24.)

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

Just Published.

RING OUT, WILD BELLS

TRIO FOR FEMALE VOICES

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

HENRY LAHEE.

	s.	d.
Full Score	2	0
Orchestral Parts (Violins 1 and 2, Organ, and Bells)	2	0
Vocal Score	0	3

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

John Broadwood & Sons

(ESTABLISHED 1732)

PIANOFORTE MAKERS

BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT TO

HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES

HER ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCESS OF WALES

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH

AND THE

REST OF THE ROYAL FAMILY.

FOR THEIR ROYAL HIGHNESSES

THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF YORK

AT YORK COTTAGE, SANDRINGHAM,

JOHN BROADWOOD & SONS

have had the honour of supplying

AN UPRIGHT GRAND PIANOFORTE

in a decorated and painted Spanish Mahogany case.

33, GREAT PULTENEY STREET (near Regent Street),

LONDON, W.

MUNICH FESTIVAL PERFORMANCES.

THE MASTER-SINGERS OF NUREMBERG

BY

RICHARD WAGNER

A Musical Explanation with Eighty-four Musical Examples by Albert Heintz

Translated into English by Constance Bache.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

TRISTAN UND ISOLDE

BY

RICHARD WAGNER

Explained according to the Musical Development of its Motives by Albert Heintz

With Sixty-six Musical Examples.

Translated into English by Constance Bache.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

PARSIFAL

A FESTIVAL DRAMA

BY

RICHARD WAGNER

Its Origin in the old Legends, and its Musical Motives explained in the order of their Development, by Albert Heintz

With Sixty-seven copious Musical Examples.

Translated into English by Constance Bache.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

THE MUSICAL TIMES
AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR.
AUGUST 1, 1893.

"OF THE MASTERSINGERS' GRACIOUS ART."

Of late years the number of those who take an interest in the manners and customs of the Mastersingers has increased a hundredfold, and the cause is not far to seek. The quaint and picturesque guilds of amateur musicians who, with all their pedantry, did much during the Reformation era to cultivate a love for art among the middle-class citizens of Germany, have been so vividly portrayed for us by Wagner, in his musical comedy. "Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg," that a keen interest in the subject has been awakened in many to whom they were previously little more than a name. The chief source of our knowledge of the Mastersingers and their ways is a work by J. C. Wagenseil, a professor of the University of Altdorf near Nuremberg. This writer published, in 1697, a Latin History and description of Nuremberg, to which he added an Appendix, written in the vernacular, and entitled "Johann Christof Wagenseil's Book of the Mastersingers' Gracious Art; its origin, practice, utility, and rules. In the Preface the supposed origin of the Gipsies is dealt with." The value of this essay is twofold. Not only does it afford the most complete and authentic contemporaneous picture we possess of the doings of the Mastersingers, but to the most cursory reader there is no need of external evidence of the extent to which Wagner was indebted to it for the groundwork of his opera. On both accounts, then, some description of Wagenseil's work is likely to prove interesting.

The first three chapters of the professor's book may be dismissed very briefly. They are interesting, it is true, but for irrelevant discursiveness the author deserves to rank with Mrs. Nickelby. In the preface he endeavours to prove, with the assistance of many learned quotations, that the Gipsies take their origin from Jews of German extraction, but fails to show that they have any real connection with the Mastersingers. His first chapter is chiefly concerned in retailing a long conversation with the French lady-novelist, Madeleine de Scudéri, on the French and German languages, printers' errors, the delicate skin of French ladies, and many other equally interesting topics. In his second and third chapters he approaches his subject by discussing the "Spruch-Sprecher," or improvvisatori of Germany, whose inferiority to the Mastersingers he is careful to establish somewhat elaborately. Having devoted over sixty pages to such matters as these, he condescends, in his fourth chapter, to come to the subject of his essay, and gives us an entertaining, if somewhat mythical, account of the origin of the Mastersingers.

Beginning with the very earliest days of the German people, he expends much erudition in endeavouring to prove that the Mastersingers trace their origin to the "Bards," who, with the "Druids" and "Prophets," were, according to our author, the ministers of religion among the ancient Gauls and Teutons. This theory is based chiefly on the fanciful assumption of a connection between the title "Bard" and the "Bar," or song of the Mastersingers. Of greater value than this pedantic theorizing, however, are the titles and particulars given of two MS. collections of Mastersingers' compositions, dating from the middle of the sixteenth century, which Wagenseil quotes in support of his theory. Leaving, to some extent, the field of speculation, the professor next gives us the names of the twelve "able men" to whom he attributes the immediate origin of the Mastersingers. They are as follows: "1, Heinrich Frauenlob, Doctor of Divinity, of Mayence; 2, Heinrich Mögeling, Doctor of Divinity, of Prague; 3, Nicolaus Klingsohr, Master of the liberal arts; 4, Poppo the Strong, also called Poppfer the Strong, a glass-burner; 5, Walter von der Vogelwaid, a squire; 6, Wolfgang Rohn or Rahm, a knight; 7, Hannss Ludwig Marner, a nobleman; 8, Barthel Regenbogen, a smith; 9, Sigmar the Wise, also called the Roman of Zwickau; 10, Conrad Geiger, whom others called the Hunter, of Würtzburg, an itinerant musician (Musikant); 11, N. Cantzler, a Fisherman; 12, Steffan Stoll, also called Old Stoll, a rope-maker." In passing, it may be remarked that Vogelwaid (or Vogelweide) is the minstrel whom Wagner's hero, when questioned by the Mastersingers, claims as his instructor, while Klingsohr is a name familiar to all students of "Parsifal." According to our author these twelve musicians were supposed to be contemporaries, who flourished at the time of the Emperor Otto I., and arrived independently, in the year 962, at the discovery of the Mastersingers' Art, "just as if by a divine revelation." Whatever the chronological accuracy of this statement, it is interesting as indicating, in the very varied occupations of the Masters enumerated, the transition from the days of the courtly Minnesingers to those of the middle-class Mastersingers who succeeded them. Wagenseil goes on to tell how these early Masters were accused of heresy, and how they successfully defended themselves from the charge before the Emperor and the papal Legate, as is related in detail in a poem composed, it would seem, by a Mastersinger of the Strasburg school. As he points out, however, the story of the twelve "Early Fathers" of the guilds cannot be regarded as history, seeing that, while Otto I. reigned from 936 to 973 A.D., Frauenlob, otherwise known as Heinrich van Meissen, flourished during the latter half of the thirteenth century. The author now devotes much space to the traditions concerning Master Klingsohr, his proficiency in the black arts, and his contest at Eisenach with Wolfram von Eschenbach, whose piety proved a sure defence against Klingsohr's magic. The Landgrave Hermann of Thuringia, who invited these minstrels to his castle, the Wartburg, also figures in this story, which therefore brings to our minds some of the chief characters in "Tannhäuser."

Treading on surer ground, Wagenseil tells us how Mayence was the headquarters and "High School" of the art, which was industriously pursued in many of the chief towns of Germany, and how a coat of arms was granted to the Masters. After Mayence, he tells us that Nuremberg and Strasburg were the towns in which they most flourished, and enumerates as the most celebrated of the old Nuremberg Masters the following twelve: 1, Veit Pogner; 2, Kuntz Vogelgesang; 3, Hermann Ortel; 4, Conrad Nachtigal; 5, Fritz Zorn; 6, Sixtus Beckmesser; 7, Fritz Kothner; 8, Niclaus Vogel; 9, Augustin Moser; 10, Hannss Schwartz; 11, Ulrich Eisslinger; and 12, Hannss Foltz. These names, it will be noticed, are identical with those of the Mastersingers in Wagner's opera, which will be heard with no less interest when it is realised that so many of the dramatis personæ took their origin from real historical personages. Wagner's only alterations are that the Christian name of Zorn is changed to Balthasar, while Vogel, if he does not appear among the dramatis personæ, is mentioned in the dialogue as a member of the Guild.

After some observations on the stimulating effect produced by the Reformation, the rest of this quasi-historical—but chiefly legendary—account of the Mastersingers is brought to a close by some details of the career of the famous cobbler-poet of Nuremberg, Hans Sachs, who, as Wagenseil says, "is justly esteemed the patriarch of the Mastersingers." He continues: "He learnt in his youth the trade of a cobbler, but had a great inclination for poetry and master-song, so went to Leonhart Nunnebecken, a Mastersinger, from whom he received some elementary instruction; after which he applied himself with untiring industry to the art, and attained to such perfection that he far surpassed all who had gone before him, and will not have his like in the future. He pursued his trade many years after returning home from his apprenticeship. All the time, however, his understanding extended far ultra crepidam, and he next became master of a school, and constantly composed poems, besides which he brought the Mastersingers' art into such vogue that in his time over 250 Mastersingers existed in Nuremberg." As regards his works, Wagenseil tells us that he is said to have left 4,370 MS. master-songs, in addition to which "His other poems make several volumes and have been printed at various dates, some in folio, others in quarto. There are among them many things showing much invention, and so discreetly handled that at that time they could not well have been better, and, by reason of their splendid vigour and good sense, which are seen in every line, are indeed to be preferred to much that has been written of late, save that the rhyming of that day was not of the accuracy demanded at the present time." After an enthusiastic commendation of the hymn attributed to Sachs, "Warum betrübst du dich mein Herz?"—the authorship of which, it may be added, is by no means certain—our author ends his eulogium with the following words: "Hannss Sachss [sic] attained the age of eighty-one years, and so long as the world standeth his memory will be revered by the common people no less than that of Homer, Virgil, Ovid, and Horace by the learned." To this account of Hans Sachs it may be added that he was twice married, his first wife dying on March 18, 1560, and his second marriage taking place on September 2, 1561, facts which point to the Midsummer Eve and Day of one of these two years as the exact date of the action in Wagner's opera, for it will be remembered that Sachs is therein spoken of as a widower.

With Wagenseil's fifth chapter, entitled "Complete Tabulatur of the Mastersingers," we come to the more practical and authoritative portion of the work. By "Tabulatur," he tells us, is meant the rules of prosody and the like, observed by the Mastersingers in their compositions, and "habitually read aloud at their assemblies"—as with such good effect by Master Kothner in the opera. The Tabulatur, as given by Wagenseil, is the result of a comparison of many of those in use at different times and in different towns up to the date at which he wrote. The opening sentences, which explain the construction of a Mastersinger's "Bar," or song, have been so faithfully copied by Wagner, in the passage just referred to, that it is worth while quoting a few passages from Wagenseil's book and comparing them with Wagner's versified paraphrase.

Thus, where Wagenseil has the following:—

Ein jedes Meister-Gesangs Bar hat sein ordentlich Gemäs in Reimen und Sylben . . . Ein Bar hat mehrentheils unterschiedliche Gesätz. . . .

we find in Wagner's libretto—

Ein jedes Meistergesanges Bar stell' ordentlich ein Gemässe dar aus unterschiedlichen Gesetzen die Keiner soll verletzen.

Again, from Wagenseil—

Ein Gesätz bestehet meistentheils aus zweyen Stollen, die gleiche Melodey haben. Ein Stoll bestehet aus etlichen Versen. . . .

adapted by Wagner thus—

Ein Gesetz besteht aus zweenen Stollen, die gleiche Melodei haben sollen;
der Stoll' aus etlicher Vers' Gebänd', der Vers hat seinen Reim am End'.

Again, Wagenseil—

Darauf folgt das Abgesang, so auch etliche Vers begreifft, welches aber eine besondere und andere Melodey hat als die Stollen.

Wagnerised thus—

Darauf so folgt der Abgesang, der sei auch etlich' Verse lang,
und hab' sein' besondere Melodei, als nicht im Stollen zu finden sei.

A translation of the opening sentences of the Tabulatur, as given by Wagenseil, is worth attempting: "Every Mastersinger's 'Bar' (song) has its proper measure of rhymes and syllables, ordained and preserved by the Master's oral tradition; this all singers, poets, and markers must be able to measure out and to reckon on the fingers. A 'Bar' has in most cases different sections [Gesätz oder Stuck]; as many as the poet may choose to write. A Section consists for the most part of two Stanzas [Stollen], which have the same melody. A Stanza consists of several verses, and its end is usually indicated, when a master-song is written down, by a little cross [✠]. It is followed by the After-song [Abgesang], which also comprises several verses, but which has a special melody, different from that of the Stanzas. Last comes another Stanza, or portion of a Section, having the melody of the foregoing Stanzas." This is followed by an illustration, as are, indeed, all the rules stated in Wagenseil's book.

After a series of definitions of different kinds of rhymes, and the like, the author gives an awe-inspiring list "Of the XXXII. Faults which may be committed, and their punishment." When Beckmesser, eager to prove his rival's unfitness for the Mastership, enumerates the errors of which Walther, in his trial-song, has been guilty, he names at least seven which are specifically dealt with in this list. Thus "Unredbare Worte" are dealt with in the following fashion: "XIII. 'Unredbar' [Not according to colloquial use] is a fault, and occurs when a collocation is employed other than that which is customary. For example—

The father mine
Is brave and fine;
The mother kind
For me doth mind.

One does not say 'The father mine,' but 'my father'; nor 'The mother kind,' but 'The kind mother.' A word which is 'unredbar' is punished as one syllable" ("syllable" is here equivalent to "bad mark").

Among other faults may be quoted "Kleb-Sylben," rendered "word-clippings" in Mr. Corder's very ingenious translation of the libretto of "Die Meistersinger"; which are defined as contractions, such as "keim" for "keinem," "im" for "in dem." Again, a "Differenz" is when a word is misspelt in order to suit the rhyme, as "Deib" for "Dieb," though the same term is applied by some to unnecessary repetitions of words. After setting forth these many pitfalls into which the unwary Mastersinger may slip, the author explains that, as a matter of fact, many of the older Masters were not so careful as they might have been to adhere to the rules, and quotes from Puschmann, a pupil of Hans Sachs, who wrote a work on the Mastersingers, and apologised for his Master's not infrequent lapses from the strait and narrow path of prosodical rectitude, which, he said, Sachs used to attribute to neglect of study in his youth. The sympathy shown by the cobbler-poet of the opera for the artistic unorthodoxy of Walther's inspirations is the more easily understood after this disclosure of his own delinquencies!

(To be continued.)

FROM MY STUDY.

Among collectors of British ballads the Earl of Crawford holds a distinguished place. In the Preface to a volume which I shall mention again his lordship says that his first purchases of old black letter broadsides were made for the sake of typographical curiosities and early wood-cuts. But this limited interest, as is often the case, soon developed into a more general one, and the idea of making a large collection was formed. The Earl tells how he carried it out:—

"I found an opportunity, and bought of Mr. Ellis the three volumes which had at one time belonged to Mr. Ouvry, late President of the Society of Antiquaries—a collection which, I believe, had originally been formed by Mr. J. Payne Collier. This interesting series had been catalogued by Mr. T. W. Newton in the year 1877, when a few copies were printed for private distribution. To these three volumes I gradually added five others, or some five or six hundred additional pieces of varied interest. But by far the most valuable acquisition I have been able to make was the purchase, in 1885, of lots 139, 140, and 141 of the Jersey sale. The collection, as it came into my hands, consisted of 787 ballads, having but few duplicates among them. About 60 of these I placed in the British Museum, on learning that they were greatly wished for there; the remainder were incorporated with my own. Since that date, only one collection of any importance has come into the market, and that I was fortunate enough to secure from the Messrs. Sotheran." The Crawford collection, at the time when the Preface was written, numbered above 1,400 pieces, the greater part in black letter, and ranging in date from 1660 to 1715.

The volume referred to above is a catalogue of the Earl's Ballads, entitled: "Catalogue of a Collection of English Ballads of the XVIIth and XVIIIth centuries, printed for the most part in Black Letter. Privately Printed. MDCCCXC." Only one hundred copies were issued, and of these No. 79 is in my library. As an example of Lord Crawford's method of cataloguing, I make the subjoined extract:—

315.—The devil has left his puritanical dress, |
And now like an Hawker attends on the press, |
A New Satyricall | Ballad | of the | Licentiousness of the Times |
To the Tune of the Blinde Beggar of Bednall Green. |
London, Printed in the Year, 1679. |
No woodcuts, 2 cols., 22 stanzas. R. L.
Issued just after the dissolution of Parliament. Omission had been made to renew the Censorship of the Press, and in consequence the whole town was flooded with scurrilous papers.
Bagford $\frac{3}{5\frac{3}{2}}$, p. 715. Br. Mus. Poet. Broadsides 93.

The last line means that a copy of the Ballad is in the Bagford Collection, now in the British Museum, where also is a second copy.

Collectors of this form of popular literature may find a useful hint in Lord Crawford's method of preserving his treasures. He says in the Preface to his Catalogue: "Up to the time of the Jersey purchase I had bound the ballads in volumes, but I always felt the inconvenience of this practice, as it was not possible to insert or withdraw a sheet. I therefore broke up the whole of the bound volumes, 15 in number, and re-arranged the whole on separate sheets in the order of their first lines. Each ballad is mounted on stout paper of uniform size, with a simple black line drawn round the sides; any notes or remarks are written in the margins, and the whole are kept in cardboard boxes. The convenience of this method of preserving and using the collection is so great that I can with confidence recommend its adoption. On the acquisition of any new pieces, they can be placed in their proper order without delay, and one has not to wait until one or two hundred have accumulated to send a new volume to the binder." There is also the consideration that the old Ballads (like their present successors) are printed upon very fragile paper, and that the usage of two centuries has more or less damaged the edges. By gumming them on to stout paper further mischief is altogether avoided.

In making his collection, Lord Crawford acquired a good many duplicate copies—enough to fill two of the cardboard boxes referred to above. These he disposed of some time ago, and they have now come into my possession. Upon some of them I propose to draw for the edification or amusement of my readers.

Premising that most of the Ballads belong to the period of the later Stuarts—Charles II. to Anne—I would dwell for a moment upon the wood-cuts with which they are adorned. These are, as need scarcely be said, of a rough description, and it would appear that the printers had but a limited number of blocks, since they are used over and over again, without much reference to the subject of the ditty they assume to illustrate. For the most part they represent individual figures of men and women in the costume of the day, but there are many groups of two or three persons, and occasionally a background is roughly sketched in. But these cuts, however crude, have a certain value. For example, a while ago question arose as to the form of the block upon which criminals—or martyrs, as the case may be—were executed during the sanguinary period of the Stuarts, the discussion having special reference to the case of Charles I. Some asserted, on the one hand, that the block was a high one, resembling that now shown in the Tower, while others contended with, according to the authorities cited, greater accuracy, that it was, so to speak, a mere billet of wood upon which the victim, stretched on the ground at full length, placed his neck. An illustration to one of the ballads in my possession shows the condemned person in the position just described, and, so far as it goes, is unquestionable evidence against the high block. Other cases in which the illustrations throw light upon customs and manners might be cited, but I pass on to the ballads themselves.

A large majority of the pieces are on the subject of love, or, perhaps I should say, a form of sensuality which conceals its ugliness under that beautiful name. Most of them are licentious, not a few are positively indecent. The spirit of the courtly poets who flourished in the disgraceful reign of the second Charles here shows itself in grosser forms, and emphasises the re-action which came when the strong hand of Puritanism could no longer hold in check the public display of vice. I pass over the love songs, not merely because they are offensive, but because, when not dissolute, they are deadly dull. Other ballads, of precisely an opposite character, invite attention, and, as a matter of fact, deserve it. It may not be generally known that, in those days, there were religious ballads as well as vicious ones. Some worthy people, it would appear, sought to counteract the prevailing ungodliness by such means, and I now have before me a broadside headed "A Soluntary Song, for all Stubborn Sinners to amend their Lives and Evil Ways," to be sung to the tune of "The Sinner's Redemption." It has two cuts, the more germane of which represents the last enemy as a skeleton on the Holbein pattern, carrying in one hand an hour-glass, in the other a dart with which he touches a lady who appears to be arguing on the subject of the interview. The song contains nineteen stanzas, each ending with a refrain in Roman letter—

Happy's that Sinner, to be sure,
That true repentance can procure.

Citation of one or two verses will suffice as a sample of specific injunctions to practise Christian virtues—

The naked man see that thou cloath, the hungry person see you feed,
These things observe, false dealing loath,
and thou shalt happy be indeed.

. . . . . .

Flee that which loathsome is to man,
and hateful in God's blessed sight,
'Tis drunkenness that here I mean,
wherein so many take delight.

A second ballad of this description is entitled "A Warning for all Worldlings to learn to Dye," and has a cut representing a Divine Person in a cloud, with a nimbus round His head and hands upraised. He is attended by two cherubs, and rays of light flash from the clouds. The tune is "The Ladies Fast." From sixteen stanzas of eight lines I select three—

And seest thou not in sickness oft,
men's memories decay,
Who many times do rove and rage
when they have need to pray,
Whose hearts are bent to ban and curse till death doth close their eye.
Therefore in chiefest of thy health prepare thyself to dye.

And if thou hast thy memory and understanding right,
And of thy speech the perfect use,
and brightness of thy sight,
Yet may the Lord withhold His grace, and take thy Faith from thee,
That to repent thy folly past thou shalt not able be.

The last stanza imitates the secular ballad in praying for the King and Queen, and is altogether quaint—

Let every one pray that the Lord may bless our King and Queen,
And grant that they in all their days
may joyfully be seen:
And after death that they may live
In joy eternally,
Then let all good people say, Amen,
and so, Amen, say I.

The next example is a temperance song, which would cheer the hearts of Sir Wilfrid Lawson and Lady Henry Somerset, if it did not depress by calling to mind how very little apparent good such effusions have done, since this was printed two centuries ago. Its title is "The Heavy Heart and a Light Purse," and after the title comes the following: "Being the good fellow's vindication to all his fellow Companions, wishing them all to have a care, and keep out of the Ale-wives snare, for when they are out you may get in, but when you are in you can't get out; this by experience he hath found true, but now he bids them all adieu."

This song it was composed and made
By a Loyal heart that is called John Wade.

"Tune of My Lord Monks March to London, or Now we have our freedom, &c." The reformed tippler tells of his one-time prosperity, and how popular he was in the ale-houses:

I had good House, I had good Land,
and lived in good behaviour,
But I spent it all at their command now jeers me for my labour.
My hostess she would wait on me,
my host then easily won me,
Cause they did see that I was free
till my kind heart had undone me.

Run Tap, run Tapster, I would cry, hang Sorrow, let's be merry;
My gold and silver I let fly in both White-wine and Sherry.
For my own part, I ne'er will start,
no company will shun me,
Good fellows all I in would call
till my kind heart had undone me.

When his money was gone he had no friends:

But when that I no money had,
to call I could not leave it,
To be rid of me then they was glad,
at last they did perceive it.
Then where I spent and money lent,
they strait began to shun me,
My hostis Brown began to frown,
when my kind heart had undone me.

I sent my child, thought to prevail,
a shilling for to borrow,
Or else to trust me two quarts of ale—
lo thus began my sorrow.
She'd send me none, bid her begone,
thus grief did over-run me,
Full forty pound with her I drown'd,
till my kind heart had undone me.

A true ballad, not only in form but substance and spirit, is that called "The Unfortunate Forrester, or Fair Elener's Tragedy," sung to the tune of Chevy Chace. It tells how Lord Thomas, the "Forrester" aforesaid, fell in love with beauteous Elener. She, however, was poor and not acceptable to his lady mother, who said—

I know a pritty black-brow'd Lass, though not so handsome quite,
She her in wealth doth far surpass which will give thee delight.

Lord Thomas meekly prepared to obey, and, riding to Elener's abode, invited her to the wedding. Elener accepted and duly presented herself. The rest must be told in the words of the poet:

When to Lord Thomas she was come,
she asked to see his Bride,
He took her into a private room, where both together cry'd.

Could anything be more delightful in its simple pathos than the last two lines?

He bid her look at that window, for there she might be seen,
Methinks, quoth she, good sir, you know
I am to her a Queen.

Herself to murder she was bent,
and turning to a bed,
A Dagger to her heart she sent,
And streight way fell down dead.

Lord Thomas seeing she was slain,
the self-same dagger took;
He vow'd in Heaven her to obtain,
Then to his heart he strook.

Poor lovers! in death they are made to point a moral:

Let parents therefore have a care
how that they do deny
Their children's choice, lest that they share those lovers' destiny.

The struggles in Church and State which raged through the period covered by these ballads are of course reflected here. There are songs in which Puritanism, or what remained of it under the persecution of the Established Church, is bitterly assailed, and others in which Puritanism gives as good as it has been obliged to take. An example of the former class is "The Ballad of the Cloak, or The Cloaks Knavery to the Tune of From Hunger and Cold, or Packingtons Pound." This famous old melody is printed in square-headed notes at the top of the sheet, and takes the place of the usual woodcut. The ten stanzas in the song make up a formidable indictment against the once triumphant "sectaries," whose distinctive garment, the black cloak, is here the symbol of everything wicked. The first stanza runs thus:

I'le tell you in brief
A story of grief,
Which happen'd when Cloak was Commander-in-Chief:
It tore Common Pray'rs,
Imprison'd Lord May'rs,
In one day it voted down Prelates and Players:
It made people perjur'd in Point of Obedience,
And the Covenant did cut off the Oath of Allegiance.
Then let us endeavour to pull the Cloak down,
That crampt all the Kingdom and crippl'd the Crown.

The last two lines are the refrain of the song. Third stanza:

It seiz'd on the Tower Guns,
Those fierce demi-Gorgons;
It brought in the Bagpipes and pull'd down the Organs;
The Pulpits did smoak,
The Churches did Choak,
And all our Religion was turn'd to a Cloak:
It brought in lay-Elders could not write nor read,
It set Public Faith up and pull'd down the Creed.

Sixth stanza:

In pulpits it moved,
And was much approved
For crying out—Fight the Lords Battels belov'd:
It bobtayl'd the Gown,
Put Prelacy down,
It trod on the Miter to reach at the Crown,
And into the field it an Army did bring
To aim at the Council but shoot at the King.

This song seems to have been popular. My copy is subscribed—"Reprinted, corrected, revised, and enlarged by the author," and, according to a former owner, was issued in 1681 or the year following.

Sometimes these effusions in the interests of Church and State took the form, familiar even in our own days, of a mock Litany. An example is now before me, without author's or printer's name, the only subscription being, "London: Printed in the year 1680." It is called "The Loyal Subjects Littany," and aims alike at the Pope and the Nonconformists. A short extract will be enough:

From every Religion which Treason allows,
From the Geneva stifness and the Roman bows,
From affronting of God or adoring of Shows,
Libera nos Domine.

From a bi-fronted Conscience like the sign of an Alehouse,
That faces the Church and out-faces the Gallows,
With one side stark raw and the other side callous,
Libera nos Domine.

From a Supreme Vicar to shackle the King,
From a long round Senate which means the same thing,
From a Monk without and a Devil within,
Libera nos Domine.

The "New Satyricall Ballad of the Licentiousness of the Times" (1679), already mentioned, is directed against the interest shown by the common people in concerns of State—against, in point of fact, the democratic spirit which the Restoration had not been able to extinguish. All the people are afflicted with concern for the interests of the nation. Says our balladist:

They bawl and they yaul aloud through the whole Town
The rights of Succession and Claims to the Crown,
And snarling and grumbling like fools at each other,
Raise Contests and Factions betwixt Son and Brother.

That is the general state, but the poet condescends to particulars:

Another, though he be but a senseless Widgion,
Will, like an Archbishop, determine religion;
Whate'er his opinion is, that must be best,
And straight he Confutes and Confounds all the rest.

A politick Citizen in his blew Gown,
As gravely in shop he walks up and down,
Instead of attending the wares on his staul,
Is all day relating the Intreagues at Whitehall.

But what can they do, these meddling people?—

Men may prate and may write, but 'tis not their rimes
That can anyways change or alter the times,
It is now grown an Epidemical disease
For people to talk and to write what they please.

All fools together are the people with whom this rhymester does not agree:

God bless our Good King who our little world rules
And is not disturb'd at the Actions of Fools,
It very much helps a wise Man's Melancholly
To see and observe and to laugh at their Folly.

Another ballad, published in 1688, anticipates the arrival of the Prince of Orange and all the good that came with him. It is to be sung "to the tune of Couragio." Here are two or three specimen verses of this exultant and, to the opposite party, peculiarly irritating song:

Then welcome to our English shore,
And now I will engage-o,
We'l thump the Babylonish Whore,
And kick her trump'ries out of Door;
Couragio, &c.

The Judges, too, that Traitors be,
Must truss by this Voyagio;
'Twill be a noble Sight to see
Dispensing Scarlet on a Tree!

The Monks away full swift will hye
On their dismal Voyagio:
Ten pounds a post-horse then they cry,
And all away to Calis fly.

When all is done we then shall hope
To see, by this Voyagio,
No more Nuncio, no more Pope,
Except it be to have a Rope.

My next ballad is of a different kind. Though printed and published in London, it is a panegyric upon the town of Shrewsbury, sung "to a delightful new Tune, or Shrowsbury for Me." The poet, evidently a son of the Severn borough, goes into an ecstasy over the delights of the place:—

There's six Parish Churches
all in that fair Town,
And six gallant Ministers
in their black Gowns:
There's twice a week Market,
for all men to see,
And every man to his mind,
Shrowsbury for me.

The tradesmen of Shrowsbury drive a fine Trade,
Their Wives go most gallant,
and bravely array'd,
And like loving couples
they always agree,
Then ev'ry man, &c.

So on and on, till the poet sums up thus:

Then who would not gladly live in this brave Town,
Which flourishes gallantly,
with high Renown?
The like of it is not in England to see,
Then ev'ry man, &c.

Here, for the present, I cease my extracts from these old ballads—faint echoes from the life of a past now dead; texts upon which many a sermon might be founded. There is a certain pathos in them all, and the reflection which suggests itself as one looks through them upon the play of human passions is that of Hans Breitmann: "Where be dat barty now?"

X.

SCHUBERTIANA.

The great composers had different ways of working, and it is interesting to catch a glimpse of any of them under the excitement of inspiration. Readers of this journal need not be told that Beethoven was always sketching, and from the numerous sketch-books which have been preserved one sees that his musical thoughts only shaped themselves gradually, and that their development was at all times more or less of a painful process. Mozart made sketches, but they were, for the most part, fragmentary notes and reminders, and apparently were only in a few cases deemed worthy of preservation. The few, however, which exist show, says Otto Jahn, "the thoughtfulness and deliberation with which he worked." Schubert composed rapidly, and although sketches of his are in existence, there is proof that at any rate many of his compositions —not merely songs, but even works of considerable compass and importance — were written currente calamo. Let us for a few moments enter the workshop of this last-named master, under the guidance of Herr Eusebius Mandyczewski, who, in the "Revisionsbericht" numbers connected with the Schubert edition published by Breitkopf and Härtel, has communicated many interesting facts, showing, as he himself observes in one place, how Schubert's "works came, as it were, suddenly into being, at the moment itself of writing." Some of the facts in themselves may be small, but in connection with genius even the smallest matters are often of great moment. The autograph score of Schubert's Third Symphony shows that it was originally planned to commence with strings only; then an oboe solo was added, afterwards withdrawn, and finally the opening bars with strings and wind were written as printed. Thus Schubert sketched, not as Beethoven, in a book, but on the music paper as he was writing out the score. The Symphony in C (No. 9) affords a striking illustration of the truth of the proverb "Second thoughts are best." The whole of the movement was built on the theme (sit venia verbo)— and wherever it appeared it assumed this form. But when completed, the monotony of the theme evidently struck his sensitive ear, and by a touch of his magic wand the second and the fourth G became D, and thus the plain tonic and dominant notes were turned into a strong and characteristic phrase; and this alteration he made throughout the movement. In a sketch-book, the original form quoted above might possibly be regarded as a rough memorandum of a more finished form in the mind's ear of the composer, but the score shows clearly that the whole movement was evolved from the tonic-dominant phrase. Schubert also made an interesting change in the Andante. The major melody given out by the oboe—had originally the following form—

There is something quite Beethovenish about this emendation.

Of the "Unfinished" Symphony, Schubert wrote a pianoforte sketch, and from among the fragments preserved more than one interesting fact may be gleaned. In the recapitulation section of the first movement, the lovely second theme was thus introduced—but in the printed score the passage is more terse—nobler; as a rule, Schubert expanded, here he contracts. The clarinet line will sufficiently recall the entry—

The whole of the second movement is fully sketched; the differences between it and the printed score are trifling, but the changes in the latter show a surer, stronger hand. There is also a sketch of the third movement (Allegro, over 100 bars, and Trio, sixteen bars). Of this, only the first nine bars were scored.

In the Octet (Op. 166), the lovely phrase for clarinet and bassoon in the Finale— passed through several transformations, and of these one was—the same rhythm, but different intervals.

For the slow movement of his Quartet in B flat (No. 3) Schubert made four beginnings: the first was in the key of B flat, the second and third in F, and the fourth (the printed one) again in B flat. The third is in different time, but has a vague resemblance to the second; still the four are independent attempts rather than re-shapings of one and the same thought. It seems, indeed, as if he had started with no definite plan.

Here is a curious specimen of Schubert's mode of working:—The Quoniam of his Mass in F was originally in three-four time, and was followed by thirty-five bars of a Fugue in the same measure. Then the latter were scratched through; the Quoniam, by alteration of some notes and by addition of rests, was changed into common time and followed by a Fugue in similar measure, and it was thus printed. In the new edition of Schubert's works the original version of the Quoniam (which can be distinctly traced in the score) is also given. The fine Quartet movement in C minor, written in 1820, was not meant to be a fragment, but part of a complete work. The autograph contains about forty bars of a most interesting Andante, and these are given in the "Revisionsbericht." Of this, as of the "Unfinished" Symphony, it may be asked: "Why was it left so?" These two works are, indeed, emblems of a life that came to an end long before the composer had delivered his full message. A few facts in connection with the great Mass in A flat are of interest:—Schubert made many changes in the score, but the original form can be clearly traced. There is, in fact, a copy in the handwriting of Ferdinand Schubert of the older form; it is now in the possession of Dr. Johannes Brahms. The Gloria originally commenced, not with voices and instruments ff, but with a piano phrase of four bars for flute, oboes, and violins, and then the voices entered with a forte note immediately followed by piano. The Benedictus, too, opened differently. Here is the very first sketch of the "Cum Sancto Spiritu"—

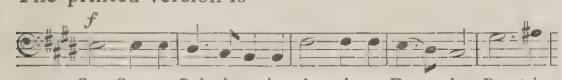
The printed version is—



We shall hope at some future time to return to the subject of Schubert's method, or rather methods, of composition.

THE ALLGEMEINE DEUTSCHE MUSIKVEREIN IN MUNICH.

Though late in season it seems not too late to speak of the latest meeting of the above-named Society, seeing that its operations, to a great extent, enable us to gauge the condition of music in Germany at the present period, especially as regards the aim and attainments exemplified in the work of the rising generation of composers.

Before speaking of the new works which were brought to a hearing at the twenty-ninth meeting of the Allgemeine Deutsche Musikverein (General German Musical Society), recently held at Munich, it may not be unprofitable to take a hasty glance at the history and constitution of the Society itself. Founded by Liszt (with L. Köhler and Dr. Brendel as his principal coadjutors) at Leipzig in 1859, it was the eventual outcome of a series of six remarkable articles which, under the title "De la Situation des Artistes," Liszt had contributed to Schlesinger's Gazette Musicale in 1835, and which served as the basis of the statutes of the Society when they came to be drawn up at Weimar in 1861. Like our Incorporated Society of Musicians, this Society has made the advancement of musical art and of musicians its principal aim; and this it has sought to effect in various ways—viz., (1) by instituting a kind of musical brotherhood, and thus bringing musicians into closer personal contact with each other; (2) by establishing periodic festivals, at which facilities are offered for bringing forward new works by living composers, without altogether excluding the less familiar works of older masters; (3) by convening meetings at which papers on musical subjects may be read and discussed; and (4) by furthering the publication of new works, both musical and literary, emanating from its members. Since its establishment in 1859 the Society, which is under the protection of his Royal Highness the Grand Duke Carl Alexander of Saxony, has held twenty-nine meetings—viz., at Leipzig (4), Weimar (3), Carlsruhe, Dessau, Altenburg, Magdeburg, and Wiesbaden (2); Cassel, Halle, Meiningen, Hanover, Erfurt, Baden-Baden, Zürich, Sondershausen, Cologne, Eisenach, Berlin, and Munich (1).

Dr. Franz Brendel, at Liszt's request, was its first President. On his death he was succeeded by Carl Riedel, and he in turn by Hans von Bronsart, Intendant of the Royal Court Theatre of Weimar, its actual President. But, as long as he lived, Liszt was the mainspring of the Society's operations. How strong an interest he felt in it, and how hard he worked in its behalf, is made very apparent in his recently published correspondence.

The official programme-book of the late meeting contains a list of the compositions brought forward at previous meetings, from which it would appear that thoroughly good work has been done. Among the most conspicuous of the composers who have been drawn upon we find the names of Bach, Beethoven, Berlioz, Brahms, Bronsart, Bruckner, Bülow, Cornelius, Grieg, Liszt, Raff, Schumann, Smetana, Saint-Saëns, Svendsen, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Wagner, and many others less known to fame.

Unlike our English Festivals, which are avowedly projected in the aid of charity, and are therefore to a great extent tied down to the choice of such familiar works as are calculated to attract the greatest numbers, this Society, relying mainly upon its members for support, is independent of the general public, and therefore in a position to produce such works as it is thought may prove most interesting to musicians, without for a moment considering the wishes of the uninitiated. But it would not have been able to carry out all that it has succeeded in doing except for the happy circumstance that in Germany "art" takes precedence of "sport," and that on many occasions it has been found possible to obtain a guarantee against loss from the Emperor, or from some rich potentate and art-patron. The meeting of which I have now to speak was held "under the munificence" of His Royal Highness the Prince Regent of Bavaria. Presumably this included the co-operation of the Royal Opera band, with its conductors, Hermann Levi and F. Fischer, and the use of the theatre for one Concert and of the Odeon for the other three.

For such a meeting it would be impossible to find a pleasanter or more interesting place than Munich, nor could a greater amount of hospitality and consideration have been shown by the authorities to the members of the Society. Three operatic representations in the Royal Court Theatre, to which free admission was generously granted, were specially arranged for their delectation. Free admission to the principal art-galleries, and that at hours when they are not usually open to the public, was also accorded. That such liberality was altogether an unmixed good can hardly be said, for it tended too much to distract attention from the main purpose of the meeting—viz., the performance of new works composed by its members. Three operatic performances and four concerts of nearly all new music within the space of five days were more than it was possible for anyone thoroughly to digest.

Of the four Concerts two were orchestral and vocal and two of chamber music, both vocal and instrumental. Past masters were represented at the former by Berlioz, Liszt, and Wagner, and at the latter by Jensen and Smetana. By way of specifying their works brought forward it should be stated that the fine scena and air for Cassandra, from the first act of Berlioz's "La Prise de Troie," was grandly declaimed by Frau Louise Reuss-Belce, of Carlsruhe. Liszt was represented by his inspired setting of the Thirteenth Psalm for tenor solo, chorus, and orchestra, and by his Symphonic Poem "Die Ideale." Both works have been heard in London or in its immediate neighbourhood; the Psalm having been twice brought forward at St. James's Hall (in 1873 and 1875) by the late Walter Bache, and the Symphonic Poem at the Crystal Palace, by Mr. August Manns in 1881. That neither should have been repeated in London is much to be wondered at, and is only to be accounted for by the fact that on their first hearing in this country they were regarded as strange and containing too much that was unfamiliar. Since the respective dates of their production here we have grown accustomed to music of a far more complicated nature, and were they to be brought forward again they would be found at this date to be comparatively simple and perfectly comprehensible. Regard is especially due to the Psalm. As treated by Liszt, this splendid work might not inaptly be designated as a symphonic poem or a tone-picture with words; for in a highly dramatic manner it brings before us the Psalmist-King, at the head of his people, importunately praying to God, and at last giving expression to their faith in a hymn of praise. Dramatic as is the music which Liszt has provided, it is at the same time intensely devotional. For its due effect, as we learn from one of Liszt's recently published letters, it requires a dramatic tenor, who must sing as if he were praying, bewailing his sins, and lamenting, and must at the same time be able to rise to thanksgiving and religious inspiration. This it found to the full in Herr Vogl, the exponent of the tenor solo; and, the choir being thoroughly at home with their parts, the performance, which was directed by Herr Porges, was a thoroughly satisfactory one. The same might be said of "Die Ideale," ably conducted by Professor Kellermann; but that it was understood by the majority of the audience cannot be thought, for not a word of explanation was vouchsafed in the programme-book, nor was it even stated that it was Schiller's poem which suggested the music. Not a word need be said about Wagner's well-known festal marches—the "Huldigungs" and the "Kaiser"—but the attention of tenor singers may well be called to the "Grals-Erzählung," from "Lohengrin," which Herr Vogl gave in its original (unpublished) form. This, as may be seen in F. Müller's interesting book on "Lohengrin," originally comprised a second stanza of twenty lines, which Wagner is said to have expunged from the opera almost as soon as it was written. For concert-use the piece is far preferable in its original form to the plan—which has sometimes been adopted—of following up "Lohengrin's Narration," as we know it in the opera, by his "Farewell to Elsa." It may be hoped, therefore, that Madame Wagner will accord her consent to the publication of the original version. While on the subject of Wagner I should not omit to call the attention of soprano vocalists to this master's remarkably fine song "Stehe still" (No. 2 of "Fünf Gedichte"), which, together with Liszt's "Nonnenwerth" and "Jugendglück," was effectively rendered by Frau Louise Reuss-Belce. A highly commendable String Quartet, by F. Smetana, entitled "Aus meinem Leben," and a set of six songs, "Dolorosa" (Frau Therese Halir, of Weimar), by Adolf Jensen, completed the list of contributions by deceased composers.

Among the works contributed by living composers the post of honour is unquestionably due to our countryman, Eugen d'Albert, who, born at Glasgow in 1864, received the earlier part of his musical education at the Kensington Training School, the forerunner of the Royal College of Music. Since his appearance at a Richter Concert in October, 1881, when he came forward with a Pianoforte Concerto, which, as the work of a lad of sixteen, was simply astounding on account of the evidence it gave of his precocity, he has made Germany his home. Though since the retirement of Madame Schumann, Von Bülow, and Rubinstein, he has universally been regarded by German critics as the greatest of living pianists, and has appeared as a virtuoso of the pianoforte in most of the principal cities of Germany, Russia, and the United States, he has still found time for composition. Regarding this from a serious point of view, he has not hurried himself, but has been content to publish twelve large works during the twelve years which have elapsed since he left England. On the present occasion, when he appeared in the triple capacity of pianist, composer, and conductor, he came forward with three of his most recently published compositions—viz., a Pianoforte Sonata in F sharp minor (Op. 10), a String Quartet in E flat (Op. 11), and a Concerto in E major for pianoforte and orchestra (Op. 12). As the works of a man who long ago "sowed his wild oats" and has "found himself," they are deserving of the best attention. The Sonata and the String Quartet, respectively dedicated to Bülow and Brahms, are strictly classical in form and feeling, and by no means wanting in individuality. The Sonata comprises a well wrought-out quick movement, followed by a remarkably taking and thoroughly Beethovenian theme, with four ingenious variations and Coda; the Finale consisting of a Prelude, leading to a most masterly fugue on three subjects, in which the pianoforte is treated in a most modern and advanced style, apparently an outgrowth from Schumann and Tausig. The Quartet, probably written with the fear of Brahms before his eyes, is more classically restricted, but withal a genial and effective work. With the Concerto he has allowed himself more freedom of form. It might be defined as consisting of a well developed quick movement interrupted by a melodiously passionate Adagio and a singularly piquant and original Scherzo. It will be noticed that here he has to a certain extent trenched upon the form devised by Liszt, a fact which seems sufficiently to account for the unfavourable opinion of the work expressed by Herr Tappert, who, much as he idolized Wagner, could never bring himself to admire Liszt as a composer. On the other hand, the highest praise might be awarded to the Concerto on the grounds that its composer has succeeded in retaining all the characteristics of a three-movement work within a more limited space and without the circumlocution which the older masters were wont to indulge in. To all three works the fullest justice was done in performance. D'Albert himself was the exponent of the Sonata; the Quartet (as well as that by Smetana mentioned above) was in the safe hands of the Munich Quartet-party, MM. Walter, Ziegler, Vollnhals, and Bennat; and the Concerto, conducted by the composer, was superbly rendered by Frau d'Albert-Careño. The recalls which followed each of these works were too numerous to count, and reached their climax in the ovation which the Concerto provoked.

Next to the D'Alberts, Herr Leopold Auer, of St. Petersburg, was the most fêted guest. That he is still in full possession of extraordinary powers as one of the greatest living masters of the violin was manifested by his splendid rendering of Tschaikowsky's Concerto in D for violin and orchestra (Op. 35)—a work of which I can only recall one hearing in London—viz., when it was played by Herr Brodsky at a Richter Concert in 1882. It is possible that it may have been played by M. Sarasate; if not, he and other violinists should lose no time in turning their attention to it.

Herr Auer further testified to his admiration of his friend Tschaikowsky by the interest he evidently felt in conducting his Orchestral Fantasia "Francesca da Rimini"—a work which, by its excessive realism, far transcends the legitimate sphere of music. One must draw the line somewhere, says Mr. Dannreuther very aptly in his article on Berlioz in the "Dictionary of Music and Musicians," and we would draw it on the hitherside of such movements as the "Orgies" which form the Finales of the "Symphonie Fantastique" and "Harold en Italie," or the chorus of devils in the "Damnation de Faust." Though it could hardly be regarded as a pleasure-giving work or as an exemplary one to bring before young composers, it afforded incontestable proof of its author's enormous and almost unprecedented skill in orchestration.

Anton Bruckner was represented by the Adagio from his Seventh Symphony, a movement which is said to have been intended as an elegy on the death of Wagner. Imposing and pretentious as it is, it sounds better in the Symphony than apart from it. The same may be said of a Scherzo from an unpublished Symphony by the Russian composer, E. von Mihalovich, but for the opposite reason, that, as one critic has aptly remarked, it sounded as proper and correct as the essay of a student fresh from the composition-class of the Leipzig Conservatoire, rather than as the work of a composer who at one time seemed to be pursuing an independent path.

I need not dilate upon an ambitious and over-elaborated Symphonic Poem, "Ideal und Leben" (MS.), by Albert Gorter, a young composer of Munich, of whom, gifted as he evidently is with ideas and sentiment, better things may be expected when he has learnt self-restraint.

"Olafs Hochzeitsreigen," a so-called "Symphonic Waltz," by Alexander Ritter, the successful composer of operas ("Der faule Hans," &c.), stands a far better chance of acceptance, when it comes to be published, notwithstanding the unpleasantness of its subject-matter. Somewhat similar in style and treatment to Saint-Saëns's "Danse Maccabre," it deals with the rage of a Scandinavian king on his making the discovery that his daughter has secretly engaged herself to one of his knights. They are allowed to be married and to join the wedding dance, but as midnight strikes they are laid low by the executioner. This tragic story has given rise to some unquestionably clever and characteristic music, in which, by the help of piquant orchestration, the feelings of the loving couple and the rage of the king are cleverly and effectively contrasted.

Besides Liszt's Psalm, the only choral work brought forward was a setting, by Richard Strauss, of a fragment from Goethe's "Wanderer's Sturmlied," for six-part chorus and orchestra (Op. 14). Whether the choice of one of the most obscure of Goethe's poems, unaccompanied by any explanation of its purport, was a prudent undertaking on the part of Herr Strauss is open to question; but it may certainly be averred that the performance of this work (under the direction of Herr Porges), regarded apart from its poetical purport as abstract music, went far to prove the truth of the oft-repeated statement by German critics that Herr Strauss is to be regarded as one of the most talented and most promising composers of the day. Its effect, as a grandly designed piece of polyphonic vocal writing, supported by an elaborate and independent orchestral accompaniment, was quite astounding.

Among the most important of the new instrumental chamber works it is sufficient to specify a Trio (Op. 19) by Robert Kahn, of Berlin, in the performance of which the composer was ably associated with Carl Halir (violin) and Fr. Grützmacher, jun. (violoncello); a Sonata for pianoforte and violoncello (H. Schwartz and Fr. Grützmacher) by Edmund Uhl (Op. 5); and a Sonata for violin and pianoforte (B. Walter and A. Schmidt-Lindner) by Ad. Sandberger (Op. 10). All testified to the earnestness of purpose with which a classical style is still cultivated in Germany, but none were specially remarkable, unless, on account of its geniality, an exception may be made in favour of the Trio by R. Kahn.

Space fails to speak in detail of the operatic representations, which included "Tannhäuser" (in consequence of the illness of Herr Mikorey substituted for Cornelius's "Barbier von Bagdad"), the second part of Berlioz's "Les Troyens," and Cornelius's "Der Cid." Each of the two last-named calls for a separate essay. It must suffice, therefore, to say that the mounting of "Tannhäuser," with entirely new decorations, which in some respects were superior even to those of Bayreuth, seemed to bode well for the care which, it may be expected, will be bestowed upon the projected series of Wagner's music-dramas announced for the coming autumn, and extending from the middle of August to the end of September. "Les Troyens," which has hitherto only been played in Carlsruhe, Paris, and Munich, was highly interesting archæologically as a spectacle and on account of its many musical beauties. Though to some extent Berlioz seems to have taken Gluck for his model, he has made it apparent that he was well on the way from grand opera to music-drama. The same might be said of "Der Cid," which, produced at Weimar in 1865, and successfully revived at Munich in 1891, also belongs to a transitional period. Widely different in style as it is from the "Barbier," it testifies all the more strongly to the extraordinary power of this gifted poet-musician. That a work which, like this, should be received with open arms wherever serious opera is appreciated should not have made its way more rapidly is much to be wondered at.

C. A. B.

Here is a thematic coincidence with a vengeance! An injunction in Chancery was recently sought to restrain an alleged infringement of copyright in a comic opera ditty. The defendants pleaded (1) that there was no copyright in a musical phrase, (2) that the defendant's music did not resemble plaintiff's, and (3) that plaintiff's phrase was in itself an imitation of earlier music. We may remark, in passing, that these pleas remind one of the celebrated case in which one lady sued another for damages to a borrowed frying-pan; defendant pleading (1) that it had a hole when she borrowed it, (2) that it was sound when she returned it, and (3) that she never had it at all; but the law approves of these little discrepancies. The remarkable feature of the present case is that evidence was given that the same phrase occurred in "Hark, hark, my soul," "Cheer, boys, cheer," the Dead March in "Saul," and "The Merry Wives of Windsor" (presumably the Overture to Nicolai's opera of that name). On comparing these melodies it will be found that the only phrase (if phrase it can be called) which they have in common is the following:—

and if this is to be claimed as private property by any one, good-bye to all music, from Plaidy's Exercises up to the Allegretto of Beethoven's A major Symphony. Certain phrases there are, indeed, which particular composers have so harped upon that no one else dare use them again; but, really, if we may not strike the mediant thrice, what rock is left in life to which to cling? The present writer remembers well having in his student days written a melody which began thus, and on a fellow student objecting that it was a plagiarism of "The heart bowed down," our teacher (the late Sir George Macfarren) pointed out that more melodies had probably been written with this commencement than with any other, and straightway, from the inexhaustible stores of his marvellous memory, he quoted us at least a couple of dozen prominent instances.

One day, some weeks ago, the courtyard of the National Museum at Copenhagen rang with sounds as of horns or trombones. But they were not the tones of modern instruments which were heard. Two members of the Royal Orchestra were playing several pieces on two ancient instruments of the horn family, from 2,000 to 3,000 years old, which the Vossische Zeitung, from which we learn the following details, calls "Luren." Of these horns, to which Professor August Hammerich, of Copenhagen, first drew general attention, the National Museum possesses a unique and precious collection. Twenty-three specimens of them have been found in Denmark, eight in Sweden, and several more in Mecklenburg. Of the Danish instruments no less than fourteen are in perfect preservation; six were found in a marsh near Fredericksborg in 1797, two of them being in C and two smaller ones in E flat. Their elegant form, excellent workmanship, and artistic ornamentation are eloquent proofs of a highly developed craftsmanship in those remote days. The shape seems to be an imitation of the horns of various animals. They were cast in several portions and then joined. It is, no doubt, due to the effects of the marsh water that the horns, which, it is estimated, date from 800 to 500 B.C., are in such perfect condition. Several of them are so little damaged that it is possible to judge their musical characteristics, compass, tone, &c. An interesting feature is the fact that they are always found in pairs, from which it would appear that in all probability they were made and used in pairs. They were, no doubt, principally employed at religious rites in the temples. As regards their tone, it resembles most nearly—at least, in the "natural" tones—that of the modern tenor trombone. Besides the instruments in C and E flat, there are others in D, E, and G. At the performance referred to above their powerful yet mellow tone and extensive compass were greatly admired.

A hitherto unknown and highly diverting anecdote about Schubert's "Erl-King" is told by Dr. M. Friedländer, the famous "Schubertforscher," in the latest volume of the "Vierteljahresschrift für Musikwissenschaft":—In 1817 Breitkopf and Härtel received a setting of Goethe's "Erl-King" by a certain Franz Schubert, in Vienna, for their approval. —"Franz Schubert?"—"in Vienna?"—There was something wrong about this. The only Franz Schubert known to the firm lived in Dresden, a worthy man of forty-nine, and well known as "Royal Church Composer"; how could he play such tricks? The firm sent the MS. to this gentleman with a request for an explanation. In due course the following answer arrived: "I have to inform you that I received your esteemed letter about ten days ago, in which you sent me a MS. of a setting of Goethe's 'Erl-King,' which is supposed to be by me. With the greatest astonishment I beg to say that this Cantata (sic!) has never been composed by me. I shall retain the same in my keeping so as to learn, if possible, who sent you such stuff (Machwerk) in such an impolite manner, and to discover the fellow who has misused my name. For your kindness in sending me the MS. I am greatly obliged, and beg to remain," &c., &c. Poor Franz! but still poorer "Herr Königlicher Kirchencompositeur." So does the whirligig of time bring about its revenges! It has not been ascertained whether Breitkopf and Härtel refused to publish the MS. At any rate, it was not published by Diabelli until 1821; some friends of the composer's paid the expense, as no publisher could be found to undertake the publication, at his own risk, of such an unconventional piece by an unknown composer.

A book which has excited a good deal of interest lately is Sir William Fraser's "Hic et Ubique," a random collection of reminiscences, mostly personal. There are a few passages bearing on music in the little book, but we regret to say that the youngest of the arts fares no better at the hands of Sir William Fraser than she generally does at those of the average "literary gent." For example, in the course of some reminiscences of Sir Julius Benedict, the writer gravely propounds the following monstrous theory: "In an interesting conversation which I had with Sir Julius, coming in the train from Brighton, I ventured the theory that in all the most effective songs the words were written to the music—of course, by some person with an exquisite ear—giving as brilliant instances Moore's words to the Irish and other Melodies, the melodies being simplified by Moore and spoiled by Stephenson, who stripped them of their simplicity, making them difficult and complicated." Sir William Fraser seems to have been quite confirmed in his theory by finding it illustrated by a song in an opera of Benedict's, the words to which, "By the sad sea waves," were afterwards substituted by Chorley for the original text. On this Sir William remarks: "It seemed difficult to believe, although it was certainly the fact, that a man who looked like a red-haired gorilla could have written such exquisite verse." We may be pardoned for adapting the observation and saying that it seems difficult to believe, yet it is certainly the fact, that a man of so much general information can write such shocking nonsense about music.

It is probable that to many persons the very existence of The Worshipful Company of Musicians was unknown until the other day, when they read of the presentation to the Prince of Wales of the first gold medal ever awarded by the Guild. Yet the Musicians' Company is one of the oldest in the City. It was established in 1472, during the reign of Edward IV., and was instituted as a perpetual Guild or Fraternity and Sisterhood of Minstrels—a "Minstrel" being a musician qualified to sing or play in public. One of its duties was to control all "pretenders to minstrelsy," and see that they qualified themselves for their profession, and its power extended over all parts of the kingdom except the Palatinate of Chester. Every minstrel had to join it, the entrance fee being three shillings and fourpence. The first "Master" was Walter Haliday, and the Court consisted of John Cliff, Robert Marshall, Thomas Grene, Thomas Calthorn, William Christian, and William Eynesham, all musicians in the service of the King, and previously in that of his predecessor, Henry VI. In the reign of Charles I. the powers of the Company were restricted to the City of London, but its power to control musicians has long ago lapsed. Within the last twenty years, however, the Worshipful Company of Musicians has shown signs of life, and is yet likely to do much good in advancing the art to which it owes its being.

The Annual Dinner of the Royal Academy of Music Club was given at the Criterion Restaurant on Saturday evening, the 22nd ult. Mr. Banister, the President for the past year, was the Chairman, and nearly a hundred gentlemen, past students or present professors of the "Old Shop," were gathered together. The usual toasts were given and responded to, Mr. Banister proposing "The Queen" and "The Prince and Princess of Wales and the Royal Family," Mr. Fred. Walker "The Royal Academy of Music Club," Mr. Randegger "The Royal Academy of Music" (to which Dr. Mackenzie responded), Mr. Walter Macfarren "The Chairman," and Mr. Oscar Beringer "The Visitors" (for whom Mr. E. F. Jacques answered). Mr. J. Proctor contributed to the evening's entertainment by telling some racy Scotch stories, and altogether a very agreeable evening was spent.

FACTS, RUMOURS, AND REMARKS.

A correspondent has favoured us with the programme of a Concert given, a while ago, at the Bow and Bromley Institute, by Herr Louis Honig. It is an amusing document. Not that the Concert itself differed from other entertainments in which professor and pupils figure. It is rather that Herr Honig took the opportunity of making addenda which are sometimes business-like and always diverting. Thus the audience were told that, between the parts, there would be an "interval of several minutes," and then followed a unique direction: "Visitors from a distance, unacquainted with the locality, requiring refreshments during the interval, are advised to go to the first-class house, the 'Little Driver'—Proprietor, Mr. Good; down the stairs, turn to the right, next door to Bow Railway Station, half-a-minute's walk." On the next page visitors from Richmond and adjacent regions were informed that they should leave the hall precisely at 10.25 "to catch the last train." It is likewise stated that Miss Cora Cardigan not only performs on, but recommends the Boehm flute and Pratten's perfected piccolo, as manufactured by," &c. Below this are particulars concerning the best times to find Herr Louis Honig at home. On the fourth page Herr Honig informs the world that he has instructed 1,750 pupils and brought forward 500 of them at his Concerts; adding remarks which will be read with delighted interest: "Herr Honig believes that if one considers the musical accomplishments of an artist, like his nephew, Victor Opfermann; the delightful tenor vocalist, Mr. William Derby; Miss Annie Parsons, who plays charmingly and sings with sweetness; the youthful Sisters Allen, including Miss Georgie, who plays 'Mozart' on the violoncello and 'Beethoven' on the pianoforte; the successful young professor and composer, Mr. Bucknell (who never had a lesson except from Herr Honig); and a great many others, all past pupils of Herr Honig, it will be admitted that the inspiration, the instruction, the enthusiastic encouragement these performers received, or let us say, have partly received, were of the right sort. Herr Honig knows this, and feels quite happy and even confident in calling attention to such unquestionable facts, not for his own benefit, but for the benefit of all who require sound instruction at a reasonable cost; always bearing in mind that people who learn music should be really fond of melody and harmony, and practise diligently almost every day for some years!" Herr Honig appears to be a very genial and happy man, worthy of the gratuitous advertisement we now give him.

Mr. Philip Hale, who writes nothing that is not worth reading, is the Boston correspondent of the Musical Courier, and in a recent letter to that journal he says some hard things concerning the memorial to Jenny Lind in Westminster Abbey. He approves the action of the Pall Mall Gazette in this matter. That paper, it may be remembered, declared that "Jenny Lind vocalised the Great National Blush that bloomed on the country's damask cheek through the early Victorian period. England blushed self-conscious at its own respectability." Our contemporary added: "If Jenny Lind had cheated her husband and gone off to Paris with a leading tenor, we should not have heard a word of this medallion." That is quite true, and Mr. Hale protests against the English habit of judging an artist chiefly by the morality of private life. Our national worship of what we know as "respectability" is not the noblest feature in English practice, but we hardly see how an artist is to be separated from his personal character. When he stands before the public, he is an artist simply, we grant; but off the platform he is a mere man living with the rest of us under the conditions of society. Would Mr. Hale himself consent to personal relations with a notorious evildoer, however great as an artist? The Jenny Lind memorial is a tribute not to an eminent singer only, or a good woman only, but to a person who was both, and that, in our opinion, is its justification.

Vigilant correspondents have again sent us various extracts from the musical criticisms of country papers, in hope that by making a frightful example of them some improvement in a very weak department of provincial journalism may come about. We do not share the hope to any great extent, but we will make the example. The critic of a Deal paper, noticing a sacred Concert on the Pier, observes: "As the well-trained and most efficient band commenced to play, with great feeling and taste, Mendelssohn's noble Wedding March from 'Scipio,'" &c. He soars into the empyrean over Mascagni's Intermezzo: "Attention never flagged from the commencement, through the perfect beauty of the Intermitzo (sic), ascending into the sublime, dying away in whisperings and melting loveliness, with interludes of happy, joyous sounds, and touching the heart or stirring the pulses all the while." The critic also informs his readers that "'Stabat Mater,' from the 'Pro Peccatio' of Rossini, was modulated effectively to the conditions under which it was given."

In the Canterbury Press we read of a certain young artist that "her repertoire was such as combined beauty of melody with the more severe features of classical music." Not to be outdone, the Maidstone Advertiser informs its readers that at a recent choral festival the Psalms were chanted to some "pretty settings" by, &c. Also, that the anthem was one of Dr. Bozer's, whoever he may be. Also, that, at a following concert, one of the artists sang "a bright, jaunting recit. and air, 'O ruddier than the cherry.'" Also, that "Bold Turpin" is a "cheerful" part-song, and that another artist sang a solo "especially suited to the expressiveness of his magnificent capabilities as a tenor." Also, that in the performance of a glee "the harmony was like one voice." Also, that in a programme containing "Bold Turpin," "the only piece with humour in it was the catch 'Would you know my Celia's charms?'"

The critic of the West Wilts Herald is an amusing scribe and likens the performance of Schubert's orchestral music upon a pianoforte to cutting patches from a second-hand wig and sticking them upon a head among natural hair. He remarks also that two young ladies gave a new reading of a duet and adds: "It is a real pity that Blumenthal did not leave directions as to how flat he really did want it sung." The victims of this sarcasm may have found consolation in the writer's last paragraph, where the printer's boy made him say: "The orchestra played the Scherzo and trio from Schubertz O symphony in C.

Although shey were short of the 2nd clarenet, one 1nd violin, one 'cello, and the contra bass, their playing was more effective than at the Tuesday evening's performance. Being the eve ef a patriotic outburst, Rule Brittania was added to the drogramme."

A Brisbane society paper, Flashes, emits light now and then on musical subjects, and has a critic fairly entitled to rank with the English reporters who have lately engaged our attention. Here are a few extracts from one of his Concert notices: "We are glad to note that Mr. Dicker's fine instrumentation seems in no way to have suffered by his recent accident." "It was followed by a selection from 'Trovatore,' in which the 'Miserere' and Ahchela (sic) morte were rendered with exquisite pathos." "A lively gavotte by Dick made a splendid prelude to the grand chords of Andante from the 'Kreutzer Sonata.'" "The last selection, and the finest of them all, was the 'Soldiers' Chorus' from 'Faust'; the grand strains of the organ reverberated through the building a volume of sound, in which Gounod himself would have been satisfied to recognise his noble chorus." British reporters, look to your laurels.

A writer has arisen in America who holds that so-called classical music exists upon nothing but the vanity of human nature. He is probably "poking fun," but there is just enough of truth in some of his remarks to make the hit a nasty one. An example: "No one will admit that he does not desire to enjoy classical music. Everybody desires to. They have heard critics who do not enjoy the classical rot poured upon the world, any more than the commonest labourer, say that beautiful songs are mere ballads and not music. The critics have told them that a series of thumps and wild piano beatings make up classical music, and that if they study a long time, and have any music in them, they will understand and enjoy it."

Another: "Then when a reputed musician comes, who is well advertised, the social world, filled with vanity and the desire for appearances, rushes forward, fills great music halls, and makes believe that such music is grand and enjoyable. They hear a sweet strain in the great musician's playing: they begin to think that it is pretty, when all at once it is broken off by a series of wild rot that is no more musical than a cracked door-bell. They credit the latter as being classical, and applaud it because some one else applauds it. They don't enjoy it."

The Leipzig correspondent of the Musical Courier sounds a note of warning against the singing masters in that town, with whom, it appears, declamation is the first and second consideration, and musical sounds and technic are a minor. He states: "Singing in Germany is in a deplorable condition, and the facilities for studying vocal music are the most discouraging imaginable. When I behold the number of ambitious, very often talented, Americans who come to Leipzig to study singing, who spend their few dollars hoping to learn something, I have such a feeling of sympathy and sorrow that I cannot refrain from admonishing American students of singing, through the Musical Courier, if they must come abroad to study, not to come to Leipzig."

On the very threshold of the silly season, our old acquaintance, the musical bed, has re-appeared. This time it is the work of a Bombay artisan, who is prepared to sell for 10,000 rupees, and hopes he may get it. At the head of the couch stand the figures of two young Greeks, each armed with a banjo. Two like figures at the foot have large fans. You touch a button, the banjoists begin to play and the fans to wave. Says our evening contemporary, the Globe: "The connection between Greece and the banjo, we may remark in passing, is not very obvious, but it should be remembered that the banjo is the instrument of the blameless Ethiopian, and that in artistic matters there was a considerable interchange of ideas between Greece and Egypt."

Notions of personal liberty and judicial commonsense seem not to have passed beyond an elementary stage even in Western Europe. A few weeks ago a Bavarian soldier stationed at Metz was condemned to six years' imprisonment for singing a song offensive to his King. This may be right enough. A soldier exists under special laws. But what about a father and two sons, not soldiers, who for singing the "Marseillaise" in a Metz beerhouse were sentenced to imprisonment varying from fifteen months to three? The German authorities must be as horribly afraid of Rouget de Lisle's Hymn as those of the Second Empire used to be.

Hanslick upon Verdi: "There is a glory of something infinitely gentle, modest, and noble in the man's nature, whom fame cannot make vain, nor rank haughty, nor age capricious. His face is deeply furrowed, his black eyes deep-set, his beard white; yet his upright carriage, and firm, strong voice prevent him from looking so old. An allusion to Wagnerian influence he parried with the words: 'Song and melody must still always remain the chief element.' In the absolute sense of the early Verdi operas they do not exist in 'Falstaff'; in comparison with Wagner's second period they are there all the time."

Although the fashionable world will be out of town during the next few weeks, there will no doubt be a sufficient number of people remaining in London to fill Covent Garden during the Promenade Concerts, which will open on the 12th inst., under the business direction of Mr. Farley Sinkins. An excellent orchestra has been engaged, and will be conducted by Mr. Frederic H. Cowen; Mr. G. H. Betjemann will be the leading violinist, and will also share the duties of Mr. Cowen as Conductor. Engagements have been concluded with numerous vocalists and instrumentalists of high standing.

Paragraphs have lately been going the round of the press with reference to a certain Princess Ahmadee, described as a descendant of the Royal House of Delhi. The Princess, it appears, has embraced the profession of music, has sung at Cannes before the Duke of Cambridge, and will shortly appear in London. Can this be the Begum Ahmadee who some time ago went the round of the provinces as the "star" of a concert-troupe, and is married to the son of a London clergyman? Or are there two ladies claiming the name and title?

The annual presentation of prizes to the successful students of the Royal Academy of Music was made at St. James's Hall, on the 26th ult., by Mrs. Threlfall. Dr. Mackenzie spoke of the work done at the Academy during the past year, and referred to the increasing prosperity of the Institution, making also touching allusion to the loss sustained by the Academy in the death of Mr. Wingham. Miss Llewela Davies, who was enthusiastically received, was awarded the medal given by the Company of Musicians to the most successful student.

Accredited to Hans von Bülow: "I greatly admire a Strauss waltz, and can see no reason why such a work, which is always artistic, and is among the very best things in its kind, should not be played now and then by a symphony orchestra at a serious concert. It would take the sound of much classical dulness out of our ears, and act as an olive acts, in preparing the palate for a change of dish."

Mr. Arthur Nikisch, late Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, says that Wagner is popular in the small towns of the United States, and accounts for the fact by stating that when weary men of business go to a concert they like music which stirs them up.

There is a story which tells that, after hearing Liszt's Fantasia quasi sonata, "Après une lecture de Dante," a lady remarked to her companion, "Liszt wrote it, my dear, after he had just come from hearing Dante lecture."

Well done, Boston! The famous old Music Hall having to come down to make room for a railway, Boston promptly put its hand in its pocket and subscribed 400,000 dollars for a new one.

We hear with pleasure that the Duke of Edinburgh has accepted the position of President of the Royal Academy of Music.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.

An exceptionally busy season was announced to close on the 29th ult., the last month being noteworthy for the production of three operas entirely new to London, and specially noteworthy for the fact that each of them was performed but once. With regard to the routine work there is scarcely anything to say, as no débuts of importance took place. The State performance, on the 4th ult., in celebration of the Royal Wedding, was a brilliant function, and it is a matter for congratulation that, instead of a programme of scraps, or spectacle coupé, as it is termed abroad, the first four acts of Gounod's "Roméo et Juliette" were given intact, only the tragic climax being omitted. The three novelties were Mascagni's "I Rantzau" on the 7th ult., Isidore de Lara's "Amy Robsart" on the 20th ult., and Professor Villiers Stanford's "The Veiled Prophet" on the 26th ult. It must be frankly admitted that the first-named obtained no more than a succès d'estime, and it is not easy to fully understand why a young composer who won a striking triumph with a powerfully dramatic story should, twice in succession, have elected to deal with such idyllic subjects as those of Erckmann-Chatrian's "L'Ami Fritz" and "Les deux Frères." The latter is the stronger of the two, but it is bucolic and domestic, and the impassioned strains which Mascagni has wedded to it seem frequently out of place. We do not share in the opinion of those who regard the music as laboured and affected; the frequent changes of time-measurement which look so strange on paper are not distinctly aggressive in performance, and there are many indications that the composer's genius is undergoing development. The performance, with Madame Melba, Mr. de Lucia, Mr. Ancona, Mr. David Bispham, and Mr. Castelmary in the principal parts, was, for the most part, highly satisfactory.

Mr. Isidore de Lara's "Amy Robsart" may be dismissed with equal brevity, for here again we have to do with a work which it is in the highest degree unlikely will be taken into general favour, though its merits should be freely acknowledged. The arrangement of Scott's tragic story by Sir Augustus Harris and the French text of Mr. Paul Milliet are alike excellent, such changes as have been made in matters of detail being justifiable on the grounds of dramatic and operatic expediency. But the music is unfortunately quite lacking in freshness of idea, many modern composers, including Verdi, Berlioz, Wagner, Gounod, and Massenet, being drawn upon in turn. Mr. de Lara is at his best in the love duets between Amy and Leicester in the first and third acts, which are certainly expressive, though the phraseology is French rather than English. There is little for the chorus to do, but the pageant music in the Kenilworth scene and the concerted piece near the close of the second act are well written and effective. The opera was favourably received, and it had the advantage of an excellent performance, Madame Calvé as Amy Robsart, Mr. Alvarez as Leicester, Mr. Lassalle as Richard Varney, and Madame Armand as Queen Elizabeth being without flaw in their respective parts.

"The Veiled Prophet" was described at great length in The Musical Times on the occasion of its production at Hanover, in 1881, and to that description we must refer our readers, as the first performance of the work in London took place too late for extended notice in our present issue. It is necessary, however, to say that Professor Stanford has recently revised the score in various ways suggested by his now riper experience, the result being a greatly strengthened version of an already remarkable work. After recent experiences at Covent Garden, the mastery of musical resource shown in "The Veiled Prophet" made more than one heart glad, the more so that, for once, scholarship had been used, not to replace, but to adorn beauty. For the opera is full of melody—melody, too, of a particularly refined, expressive, and individual kind; and though not quite "up to date" as regards "form"—in this respect it belongs rather to the Weber than to the Wagner or late-Verdi school—it is "dramatic" in the modern sense of that much abused term. The rich and effective orchestration was very well played, under Signor Mancinelli, who conducted a performance of the opera that, on the whole, was praiseworthy. Mr. Ancona appeared as the Prophet, Madame Nordica as Zelica, and Mr. Vignas as Azim. The remaining parts were adequately filled by Miss Lucille Hill, Messrs. Villani, Guetary, and Vaschetti. The opera was very cordially received, and Professor Stanford was several times dragged on to the stage by the principal artists concerned. Mr. Barclay Squire's libretto—an admirable adaptation of Moore's poem—had been translated for the occasion by Mr. Mazzucato.

WAGNER CYCLE AT COVENT GARDEN.

On June 28 the faithful devotees of the Bayreuth master received some consolation for their previous disappointments, "Tristan und Isolde," the most fully representative of his ripe music-dramas, being performed with German-speaking artists and under generally favourable conditions. The part of the knightly but fate-stricken hero is not Mr. Max Alvary's best, but he has rather improved upon his conception since last year. His voice was in good order, and although he persists in representing Tristan as a very young man, he acted with becoming dignity in the first act and with the necessary abandonment in the third. Mrs. Moran-Olden is scarcely equal to any of the performers who appeared as Isolde last season, but she is a very earnest and capable artist, and though no longer in her first youth she can still look the part of the passionate and haughty Princess fairly well, and her acting and singing were alike powerful, if somewhat deficient in charm. Miss Esther Palliser again afforded complete satisfaction by her grace and sweetness in the sympathetic character of Brangäne, Mr. David Bispham showed improvement on his efforts last autumn as the faithful Kurwenal, Mr. Wiegand was an excellent representative of the aged King Marke, and the small parts of the sailor and the herdsman were efficiently filled. Mr. Steinbach, of Mayence, showed plainly that although he may not be a conductor of the very highest calibre, he knew the score well, and he kept his forces together in a highly creditable manner.

Special interest attached to the performance of "Die Walküre" on the following Wednesday, from the fact that the orchestra was a newly-appointed body, engaged on account of the too arduous duties accorded to the regular Covent Garden band. Sir Augustus Harris may be congratulated on his supplementary force, which at once made a highly favourable impression in Wagner's elaborate and picturesque accompaniments, the tone and the execution alike of strings and wind being highly commendable. The cast differed considerably from that of last year, Mr. Alvary alone resuming his rôle of Siegmund. The German tenor was at his best in the impressive scene in the second act, where Brünnhilde comes to warn the Wälsung of his approaching death. The part of the Valkyrie was finely portrayed, though less so from a vocal than a dramatic point of view, by Mrs. Moran-Olden, and a new-comer, Mrs. Reuss-Belce, won much favour as Sieglinde, thanks to a pleasing appearance, a good voice, and a graceful and sympathetic manner. The part of Hunding was allotted to Mr. Bispham, who filled it satisfactorily; and Mr. Wiegand, as Wotan, and Miss Meisslinger, as his shrewish wife Fricka, were quite equal to their duties.

In "Die Meistersinger," on the 12th ult., a reversion was made to the Italian tongue, but the list of principal artists was very strong and the audience larger and more fashionable than on any previous Wednesday evening. Wagner's comic opera is more vocal than any other of his accepted works, and therefore it needs vocalists to do it justice. Mr. Jean de Reszke remains incomparable in his rendering of the melodious themes which the composer has allotted to Walther von Stolzing. Mr. Lassalle is still an over-refined, but otherwise an unexceptional exponent of the character of the cobbler-poet Hans Sachs, and Madame Albani sings the music allotted to Eva as few other artists could sing it. Mr. David Bispham, as Beckmesser, displayed noteworthy intelligence, and his assumption was only censurable for crudeness and over-colouring, faults which will doubtless disappear with experience. Mr. Hedmondt, as David, was commendable, though the music lies rather high for his voice, and Mr. Dufriche, as Kothner, and Miss Bauermeister, as Magdalena, were painstaking. The chorus and orchestra did fairly well, considering the arduous work they have endured this season, but the mise-en-scène was not very satisfactory, the street quarrel scene in the second act and the procession in the third being faulty in arrangement.

The cycle came to an end on the 19th ult. with "Siegfried," the performance of which contained much to admire. There is certainly no other artist at present before the public who can present such a picturesque figure, and render so much justice generally to Wagner's youthful hero as Mr. Alvary, and, despite the unquestionable faults in his vocal production, his embodiment is irresistibly fascinating. Mr. Lieban sings so well as the malignant dwarf Mime that we should be glad to hear him in a more purely vocal part. Mrs. Moran-Olden was again intelligent in her acting as Brünnhilde, though her embodiment was deficient in grace and poetic charm, and she sang out of tune. All the smaller parts were well filled, special mention being due to Mr. Wiegand as Wotan and Miss Olitzka as Erda; and the new orchestra, under Mr. Steinbach, performed its arduous duties in a very praiseworthy manner. Altogether the subscribers to the Wagner representations had little ground for complaint as to the manner in which they were brought to a conclusion.

RICHTER CONCERTS.

Since our last notice of these admirable Concerts three more have been given, respectively on June 26 and the 3rd and 10th ult., that of the date last-named bringing the twenty-first series to a brilliant conclusion. At the fourth Concert Miss Agnes Janson and Mr. Eugène Oudin sang, and the orchestra played Beethoven's Seventh Symphony and "Egmont" Overture and Dvorák's third Slavonic Rhapsody (Op. 45). The fifth Concert opened with the Funeral March from "Götterdämmerung," played in honour of those lost by the sinking of the Victoria. Its purport was apparently misunderstood by some among the audience, or they would certainly not have expressed their feelings by applause. On this occasion there was no Symphony, the purely orchestral works being the "King Lear" Overture of Berlioz, that by Schubert to "Des Teufels Lustschloss"—a delightful example of the tuneful ease of this master; Wagner's "Ride of the Valkyries," and Liszt's first Hungarian Rhapsody. The Love Duet from "Die Walküre" was sung by Miss Macintyre and Mr. Ben Davies, the latter also contributing a song from Cornelius's "Barber of Bagdad." According to custom, the pièce de résistance at the last Concert was Beethoven's Choral Symphony, of which a very fine performance was given. The choir divided honours with the orchestra, and of the soloists—Miss Amy Sherwin, Miss Agnes Janson, Mr. Andrew Black, and Mr. Wareham—the first three were irreproachable. In the remainder of the programme were the closing scene from "The Rhinegold," sung (in English) by Miss Sherwin, Miss Minna Fisher, Messrs. Wareham and Black; the Overture to "Tannhäuser," Elizabeth's "Greeting" from the same opera, declaimed with great intelligence and breadth of style by Miss Amy Sherwin, and Pogner's Address from "Die Meistersinger," which lost nothing through its interpreter, Mr. Andrew Black. A special "call" for Herr Richter appropriately closed the proceedings, but by no means adequately expressed our obligations to him.

THE ASSOCIATED BOARD.

On the afternoon of the 12th ult., at the Royal College of Music, Her Royal Highness Princess Christian distributed the certificates granted to successful candidates by the Associated Board of the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music for local examinations in music. The centres represented were London and Croydon. Of about 180 candidates who passed in the Metropolis, 148 received certificates for the pianoforte, 15 for the violin, 8 for the theory of music, and 7 for singing. One young lady from the Guildhall School obtained a certificate for proficiency on the harp, while another gained a certificate for the violoncello as well as for the pianoforte. Her Royal Highness, accompanied by Princess Victoria, arrived at the College at four o'clock, and was received by Dr. A. C. Mackenzie, Sir George Grove, Mr. A. Randegger, Mr. T. Threlfall, Sir W. Parratt, Mr. C. Morley (Treasurer), and Mr. George Watson (Secretary), and conducted to the platform in the hall. Sir W. Parratt having performed a selection of music on the organ, Princess Christian distributed the certificates. Her Royal Highness then said: "It gives me great pleasure, after the lapse of two years, to present the certificates to the competitors who have now successfully passed these examinations. The hopes that I expressed on the former occasion have, I am glad to say, been justified by the result. These two great musical Institutions, working together with perfect agreement and cordiality, have now established a scheme of examination which is steadily growing in favour and is exercising a most beneficial influence upon the study of music in this country. The Associated Board does not distribute its certificates with profusion, but as the reward of real merit, and the public, though somewhat bewildered by the number and variety of diplomas in the musical world, is beginning to understand this, and will soon discern the difference in value between the certificates of the Associated Board of the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music and those granted by private Companies. (Hear, hear.) I heartily congratulate the candidates who have passed such a severe and searching examination as that of the Associated Board, conducted as it is by men of the highest eminence in their profession; and, at the same time, I would earnestly ask the unsuccessful candidates not to be discouraged by their temporary failure, but to work on hopefully for a more happy result of their labours." (Cheers.)

Dr. Mackenzie moved a vote of thanks to Princess Christian for her presence on the occasion, and for her gracious and encouraging address. Sir George Grove seconded the motion, which was carried with acclamation, and the proceedings terminated.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

The programmes of the last few Concerts contained several works which were welcome because they are but rarely heard, though deserving to become better known.

Amongst these was Gade's very charming String Octet (on June 29), which is quite worthy—at least, as regards the first two movements—of the author of the "Ossian" Overture. It was played with great spirit and delightfully true intonation by eight young ladies, from whom we must single out Miss Lilian Wright, who "led" splendidly. Miss Gwendolyn Toms gave a rendering of Schumann's exacting "Etudes Symphoniques" which was remarkable for brilliancy, accuracy, and masculine power and breadth. Miss Kathleen Thomas played Bruch's hackneyed Romance in A minor for the violin; her tone is good, but her technique is scarcely equal yet to the difficulties of such a piece. On the 7th ult. a Wind Instrument Concert was given—an excellent idea, by the way. Thuille's fine Sextet (Op. 6) received a capital rendering, the difficult pianoforte part being excellently played by Miss Toms. A Serenade in E flat for two flutes, two oboes, two clarinets, two bassoons, four horns, and double bass, by Richard Strauss (Op. 7), proved an interesting and beautiful work, richly coloured and harmonised. Professor Stanford conducted a highly creditable performance. Misses Elizabeth Carrington and Lily Cellier sang Bennett's "May dew" and Mr. Henschel's "Spring" respectively, with some success, and Mozart's Clarinet Quintet in A closed the programme. The Orchestral Concert on the 13th ult., conducted by Professor Henry Holmes, opened with Gade's romantic Overture "Nachklänge von Ossian," vigorously and sonorously played; the brass, however, was extravagantly loud, no allowance being evidently made for the small size and splendid acoustic properties of the hall. In Haydn's Symphony in D (No. 2, Breitkopf and Härtel) the trumpets offended in a similar way, the din being all but unbearable. The performances were otherwise excellent. Miss Lilian Wright was not heard at her best in Spohr's dramatic Violin Concerto (Op. 47); for this the heat may have been responsible. She "sang" the slow movement very sweetly and expressively, however. Some movements from a Suite by Bach for strings, two oboes, and two bassoons were also played.

The tenth annual meeting of the Corporation of the Royal College of Music was held at Marlborough House on the 19th ult., the Prince of Wales, President, in the chair. Among the members of the Corporation and of the Council present were Prince Christian, the Duke of Westminster, Earl Stanhope, Lord Thring, Mr. G. W. Spencer Lyttelton, Sir J. Whittaker Ellis and Lady Ellis, Sir Joseph Barnby, Sir W. J. Richmond Cotton, Sir G. H. Chambers, Sir Daniel Cooper, Sir H. Doulton, Sir A. Fairbairn, Sir George Grove (Director), Sir F. Leighton, Sir T. Lucas, Sir Walter Parratt, Sir C. E. G. Phillips, Sir C. L. Ryan, Sir John Smith, Sir John Stainer, Mr. T. P. Chappell, Mr. Samson Fox, Mr. Otto Goldschmidt, Mr. E. W. Hamilton, Mr. A. H. Littleton, Mr. Charles Morley (Hon. Secretary), Mr. George Watson (Registrar), &c.

The balance sheets, audited by Sir Charles Lister Ryan, were laid on the table, and the Hon. Secretary read the Report, which showed that at the end of the tenth year there were 310 pupils on the books, 61 scholars receiving free musical education, and 249 students, or paying pupils. Owing to various causes the completion of the new College building had been delayed. The fitting and furnishing, however, was being rapidly proceeded with, and the special fund for furnishing, suggested at the last annual meeting by His Royal Highness the President, had been started by a contribution of £1,000 from the Duke of Westminster and £500 from Sir William Gilstrap, founder of the Suffolk Scholarship. The available balance at the end of the year was £8,475, an increase of £1,622 over the previous year.

On the motion of the President, seconded by Prince Christian, the Report was adopted.

The President then presented the Hopkinson Gold Medal, for pianoforte playing, to Miss Edith Green, and certificates of proficiency to those candidates who were elected Associates of the College last Easter.

The Duke of Westminster, in moving a vote of thanks to the President for having lent Marlborough House on that occasion, referred to the constant and continued interest which the Prince of Wales takes in the development of this College, and also said a few words with regard to his own gift of £1,000 to the furniture fund for the new building.

The vote was seconded by Mr. Samson Fox, who called attention to the satisfactory progress of the College, both in its studies and finances.

The Prince of Wales said, in reply: "I am very grateful to the Duke of Westminster for the very kind terms in which he has proposed this vote, which has been so kindly seconded by Mr. Fox, and to you also for the manner in which you have received it. It is needless to say that it is a great pleasure for me to preside at this annual gathering in my own house, and to see myself so well supported by so many on this occasion. You will have carefully and attentively listened to the report which the hon. secretary read out to you, and from it I think we may all gather that the College continues in a prosperous condition, and the balance in its favour is larger than it has yet been. It is also satisfactory to observe that the standard of the examination remains in the high position it has hitherto maintained. Unfortunately from one cause and another it has not been possible to open the new College building, but I trust that at a not far distant date it may be opened, and you may be sure that I shall use my utmost endeavour to prevail on Her Majesty the Queen to perform the opening ceremony (cheers). We have heard from the report that fittings and furniture, carpets, curtains, organs, &c., are required, which involve considerable outlay, something like £12,000 sterling, which at the present moment we have not got. But I think we may congratulate ourselves on the liberality of the Duke of Westminster in giving us £1,000 towards it, and on Sir W. Gilstrap following with £500. I only hope that the example which has been very kindly set may be followed by others. One more point I should like to allude to before sitting down, that is to congratulate Miss Butt on her success. I had the opportunity of hearing her in March perform in 'Orpheus,' in which she sang most admirably and acted the difficult part of Orpheus extremely well. I also heard her at the Queen's Concert at Buckingham Palace, and at a private Concert given by my daughter at Portman Square. I trust she may be successful in the career which she has adopted, and that the rest of her musical education may be as well looked after as it has been in the beginning. I understand the Council are considering the best means of doing this. I would also record our sincere thanks to Mr. Daniel Mayer, the representative of Messrs. Erard and Co., for the two Exhibitions that they have given for pianoforte and harp, for which I think we ought to be most indebted to them. I thank you once more for the kindness with which you have received the vote, and also the few remarks I have made to you this day" (cheers).

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

The last Orchestral Concert of the present season took place at St. James's Hall on Tuesday afternoon, the 25th ult., and was largely attended. The programme commenced with an Overture with the Gaelic title of "Cridhe an Ghaidhil," by Mr. Charles Macpherson, a student of the Institution. The work shows considerably more than average promise, so much, indeed, that, if it be fulfilled, the composer's future eminence is assured. His talent is quite unmistakable. There were only three vocal pieces—namely, the baritone air "Repent ye," from Macfarren's Oratorio "John the Baptist," in which Mr. John Walters displayed a good and well-cultivated voice; Mozart's "Deh' vieni," nicely rendered by Miss Katie Thomas; and Gounod's "Salve dimora," which served to show that Mr. Reginald Brophy has a career before him as a tenor vocalist if he will persevere with his studies. Miss Edith E. Byford evinced capital technique in two movements from Max Bruch's Violin Concerto in D minor (No. 3), and Miss Edith Pratt and Miss Ida C. Betts displayed equal promise as pianists, the former in the Allegro from Beethoven's Concerto in E flat, and the latter in Liszt's Concerto in the same key. Lastly, Miss Kate Lewis deserves praise for her excellent elocution and expressive delivery in Sir Francis Doyle's well-known poem "The Spanish Mother." At the end of the Concert came an Overture, "Mokanna's Bride," by Mr. Arthur Hinton, which, though naturally showing faults due to inexperience, did credit alike to the composer and the venerable Institution under whose auspices the work was produced. The Concert, which may be regarded as an unqualified artistic success, was conducted by Dr. A. C. Mackenzie.

MR. KORBAY'S CONCERT.

Quite one of the most interesting and successful Concerts of the season was that held at Grosvenor House, on the afternoon of the 13th ult., in the presence of an audience representative of nearly all that makes for musical righteousness in amateur circles in London. Mr. Francis Korbay, who figured on the occasion in the fourfold capacity of composer, singer, accompanist, and arranger, is no stranger to our shores, having spent a season here in 1871, when he appeared frequently as a pianist, and when the late Madame Ilma di Murska introduced a scena of his at the Crystal Palace Concerts and elsewhere. Since then he has been a resident in New York, where, in the intervals of his work as a teacher, he has found time to compile that splendid collection of transcriptions and arrangements of Hungarian national and folk songs which have found such favour at our principal Concerts during the last few seasons. It was from this collection that the programme was chiefly drawn on the afternoon of the 13th ult.; but several original compositions from Mr. Korbay's pen were now heard for the first time in public, and met with considerable success. The clever, though rather feverish setting of Christina Rossetti's "Birthday Song" had already been given at one of the operatic concerts by Miss Marie Brema, who now repeated it in her best style; also introducing a romantic song, with obbligato parts for violin and violoncello excellently played by the Misses Lushington, "O lieb' so lang du lieben kannst." Of the two original Lieder given by Mrs. Hutchinson, special praise is due to "Resignation," a gracefully written song in the elegiac vein. To the cycle of Schilflieder, or "Reed songs," sung by Mr. Korbay himself, a romantic interest attaches. The lyrics were written by Lenau, that most love-lorn of modern poets, who, in consequence of an unrequited affection, emigrated to America, a country concerning which he is credited with the remark that in it the flowers did not smell, the birds did not sing, and the women could not love. Lenau buried himself in the country, and like a true Hungarian "amused himself in tears." His favourite occupation was wandering round the reed-grown shores of a lake—hence the Schilflieder. For these plaintive outpourings of a constant but most unhappy lover Mr. Korbay has found appropriate musical expression. Alike in sincerity and delicacy they are much above the average of the ordinary love song. The remainder of the programme was devoted to Mr. Korbay's admirably poetic arrangements of the melodies of his native Hungary, sung by the artists already mentioned, and by Mr. Plunket Greene, in whom the curious affinity that has been noticed to exist between Irish and Hungarian music finds so notable an incarnation. Mrs. Hutchinson was remarkably successful in the wonderfully pathetic "Play on, Gipsy," which may in very truth be said to be "steeped in the perfume of tears"; Miss Brema gave a delightfully spirited rendering of "My brown boy is hiding away," and Mr. Plunket Greene, who sang a group of nine songs at the end of the programme, thrilled his hearers by the fervour of his passion and touched them by the sincerity of his pathos. Mr. Korbay accompanied throughout with conspicuous taste and ability.

PIANOFORTE RECITALS.

Towards the end of June these performances began to fall off in number, and those of which we have now to speak were, for the most part, of slight interest. On June 27, at St. James's Hall, Mr. Schönberger gave his last Recital this season with a somewhat modest programme, the only work of importance being Beethoven's Fantasia Sonata in E flat (Op. 27, No. 1). This was played with brilliant technique and much intelligence. Among the succeeding pieces were Preludes, Etudes, and the Fantaisie in F (Op. 49) by Chopin, and pieces by Bach, Scarlatti, Rameau, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Schumann, Jensen, and Liszt, most of which were rendered in a manner calculated to satisfy listeners of every description.

On the following day a Recital was given by Miss Isabel Hirschfeld, at the Princes' Hall, in which she was assisted by Mr. Emile Sauret and Mr. Bernard Lane. The only work of the first grade in the programme was Brahms's Sonata in D minor for pianoforte and violin, in which Miss Hirschfeld displayed a pearly touch and a neat and refined style of execution, but little power or individuality. Her solos comprised various minor pieces by Haydn, Mendelssohn, Sterndale Bennett, Raff, Chopin, &c., in most of which the pianist was fairly satisfying but unimpressive.

Though not exactly a Recital in the strict sense of the term, an orchestra being engaged to take part in the programme, the last entertainment given this season by Madame Berthe Marx, at St. James's Hall, on the 1st ult., may be fittingly placed in that category, inasmuch as, with the exceptions of Schumann's Overture "The Bride of Messina" and Mendelssohn's War March from "Athalie," the scheme consisted of pianoforte music with orchestral accompaniment. There were three Concertos—namely, Beethoven's in E flat, Liszt's in the same key, and Saint-Saëns's in G minor (No. 2), all of which were played with the perfect neatness and exquisite delicacy which characterise Madame Marx's style and atone for a certain lack of vigour and warmth of expression. A Fantaisie in E, by Emile Bernard (Op. 31), was marked "first time of performance." It is in four movements and contains much fresh and effective writing in the modern French style, the accompaniments being quite as interesting as the pianoforte part, the latter consisting at times of merely ornamental passages. The third section, a veritable Scherzo, with muted strings, proved, on the whole, the best part of the work. The Concert was ably conducted by Sir William Cusins.

Mr. Ernest Denhof, who gave a Recital at Erard's Rooms on the 3rd ult., is a sound but rather dull player. His programme was well selected, including Weber's beautiful Sonata in A flat and various pieces by Beethoven, Bach, Chopin, Raff, and Schumann, most of which were executed in a conscientious but decidedly uninteresting manner.

The Recital given by Mr. de Vere Barrow at the Princes' Hall, on the 5th ult., may be dismissed with equal brevity. No important works were included in the programme, but in various minor pieces by Schumann, Brahms, Chopin, Grieg, Paderewski, and Liszt, the player evinced a neat and refined style of execution, and that is the most that can be said in his favour. Mr. de Vere Barrow was assisted by that excellent violoncellist, Mr. Alfred Gallrein, about whom we speak in another column, and in vocal pieces by Miss Ida Agabeg.

Positively the last Recital of which we have to take cognizance is that of Miss Caroline de Radio, which took place at the Steinway Hall on the 10th ult. This charming and accomplished young performer, who is Viennese by birth, notwithstanding her name, came to us too late this season, but she will be heard again with pleasure at a more convenient time. She played Schumann's Sonata in G minor and Liszt's transcription of Schubert's "Erl-King" with much vigour and brilliancy, and she was heard to greater advantage in some quieter pieces by Schumann and Chopin, in which she displayed a delightfully pure and delicate touch. Miss Lidia von Sawrimowicz evinced the possession of a fine mezzo-soprano voice in some vocal selections, but she should not have selected a portion of Beethoven's "Ah! Perfido," which is written for high soprano.

TONIC SOL-FA FESTIVAL.

The ninth Choral Festival of the Tonic Sol-fa Association, held at the Crystal Palace on the 15th ult., was as great a success as either of its predecessors. True, the competition of choirs arranged some time back did not take place, in consequence of there being only one entry; but, on the other hand, the Concerts of the certificated juveniles and of the certificated adults were eminently praiseworthy, both with respect to selection of pieces and to execution. The first of these bodies, said to number 5,000, chiefly representing the middle class and Board Schools of the Metropolis, gave a good account of themselves in several pretty pieces conducted by Mr. George Merritt, the organ being presided over by Mr. J. Frank Proudman. Midway came a sight-singing test, a composition in three parts being interpreted with dash and promptness from hand-signs given by three persons. The 3,000 adult singers, some of whom came from such distant places as Hull, Grimsby, and Galashiels, had for the opening part a selection from "Elijah," with full orchestral accompaniment. "Blessed are the men," the Baal Choruses, "Cast thy burden" (as a chorus), and the picturesque and exciting "Thanks be to God" received steady and tasteful rendering. Mr. Leonard C. Venables conducted, with Mr. H. W. Weston at the organ, and the solo parts were sustained with adequate effect by Mr. Robert Grice and a lad from St. Alban's, Holborn. The excerpts from Mendelssohn's noble work obtained very hearty acceptance. The second part of the Concert was miscellaneous, and included "May no rash intruder" ("Solomon"), Kücken's suggestive "Northmen's Song of Freedom," for male voices; Mr. W. H. Cummings's part-song "On a day—alack the day," and Mr. Charles Nixon's "Soldier, rest," in the delivery of each of which the adults fully maintained the impression made by the juveniles earlier in the day. An anthem, "The earth is the Lord's," composed by Mr. W. G. W. Goodworth in the Tonic Sol-fa notation expressly for this occasion, and which the choir had not previously seen, was delivered with a point and precision under the circumstances remarkable.

THE PLAINSONG AND MEDIÆVAL SOCIETY.

On the 19th ult., before the members of the Mediæval Society, the Rev. G. H. Palmer read an erudite and important paper on the ancient Psalm tones. After some remarks in reference to the greater prominence given in by-gone ages to the use of the Psalms in the services of the church, the lecturer said there were formerly in practice four methods of chanting the Psalms—I. The whole Psalm sung by one person; II. The Psalm sung straight through by the whole choir; III. The Psalm sung by a solo voice, but the listeners interpolating between each verse an unvarying refrain taken generally from the Psalm itself, called the "Responsorial method"; IV. The chanting of the Psalm antiphonally. The third method commonly prevailed in the Western Church until the close of the fourth century. Concerning antiphonal chanting, doubts had of late been raised as to whether the present fashion of alternate choirs was that introduced by St. Ambrose at Milan; whether the word antiphon, defined by an ancient writer as the "accord of an octave," did not imply the chanting of "men, women, maidens, and children," of whose hearty singing St. Ambrose made special mention. Referring to the four Ambrosian modes, the lecturer thought it was a fallacy to suppose that they were identical with the first, third, fifth, and seventh of the authentic modes of the Gregorian system, and also that St. Gregory added the plagal modes two centuries later. There were many instances of Ambrosian melodies which might be said to be quite as much in a plagal as in an authentic mode. It would be nearer the truth to say that a great portion of the Ambrosian music lay within, or at least only occasionally overstepped, the compass of the pentachord which was common to each authentic mode and its corresponding plagal in the Gregorian system. From Milan the antiphonal method quickly spread throughout France and Spain; Rome, however, was the last to relinquish the responsorial method, about 432. From this period we might begin to date the beginnings of what was commonly called Gregorian music, but which was more correctly named the Roman chant—Cantilena Romana; for it was now generally admitted that the efforts of a series of Popes led up and contributed to St. Gregory's great work. The lecturer described the peculiarities of the Ambrosian Psalm tones, examples of which were printed and circulated amongst the audience, as well as sung by a quartet of ladies; and concluded by explaining a new method of Gregorian pointing, which could certainly claim the merit of simplicity.

THE GUILD OF ST. CECILIA.

The Guild of St. Cecilia, formed in July, 1891, with the laudable object of utilising music for the alleviation of certain forms of disease, still perseveres in its philanthropic endeavours, and held a meeting of considerable interest on the 20th ult., at 43, Cornwall Gardens, Queen's Gate, by kind permission of Professor Savary D'Odiardi. The proceedings were opened by a short address by Professor D'Odiardi, who formerly held an esteemed position at the Paris Conservatoire, and who related some important experiences on the beneficial results accruing from the institution, in 1860, under his superintendence, of music classes in the French navy, the musical crews being remarkable for better health, greater cheerfulness, and more cordiality between officers and men. The Professor having relinquished the profession of music in favour of that of medicine, was peculiarly fitted to speak on the influence of music on the nervous system. This he said was greater in women than men, and still greater in girls in their teens than in women, while trained musicians were still more susceptible. The physical action of fine music was to quicken or retard the breathing, either of which disturbance from the normal condition, if persisted in, was prejudicial to health. So great, indeed, was the power of the music of Chopin, Schumann, and Brahms that the exclusive and continued study of the works of either of these masters would, in the opinion of the Professor, be most detrimental to anyone of delicate nervous and physical organism. The musical expression of an idea was a kind of mental photograph which produced similar sensations in those who recognised it. If music could thus disturb the normal actions of the body, it followed that the art could also be made in certain cases beneficial. Canon Harford then gave his experience of some of the good results obtained at various hospitals by the performances to patients by trained professional members of the Guild, and after some musical illustrations and some remarks from Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson, M.D., F.R.S., who presided, the meeting terminated.

THE MUSICIANS' COMPANY.

On the 19th ult. the Prince of Wales was presented with a gold medal by the Worshipful Company of Musicians in recognition of his services to the cause of musical education, particularly in connection with the founding of the Royal College of Music. The ceremony took place at Marlborough House, where the Prince received the Master of the Company (Dr. Bridge, of Westminster Abbey), Sir John Stainer (Junior Warden), Messrs. Wilkinson, Collard, May, Warwick, and Jones (members of the Court), Messrs. Otto Goldschmidt, Alfred Littleton, Street, Hoblyn, and Hoyte (members of the Livery), and Mr. J. T. Theobald (clerk).

The Master (Dr. Bridge) first called upon the clerk to read the resolution unanimously adopted at a recent meeting of the Court, namely:—

"That the Worshipful Company of Musicians, in order to express its deep appreciation of the untiring interest shown by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales in the progress of the art of music in this country, which has resulted in the successful foundation of the Royal College of Music with its liberal endowments in aid of promising talent, respectfully begs his Royal Highness to accept the gold medal struck by the Company for the purpose of encouraging music and musicians. The Company cannot but feel that should his Royal Highness graciously become the first recipient of their offering he would not only confer an honour on them, but would give a prestige and value to their medal which will greatly enhance its value to future holders."

Dr. Bridge then asked permission to explain briefly the circumstances under which the medal had come into existence, and their object in waiting upon the Prince that day. Although but a poor company in point of financial resources, they numbered among their livery many distinguished musicians and amateurs. With a view of giving practical encouragement to music they founded in 1890 a silver medal, to be given annually in rotation to the most distinguished pupils of the three important music schools of London—the Royal Academy of Music, the Royal College of Music, and the Guildhall School of Music. The medal was presented in 1890 to the Royal Academy of Music as the oldest Institution; in 1891 to the Royal College of Music, and in 1892 to the Guildhall School of Music. A gold medal they had never yet presented. They begged his Royal Highness to accept the first of such medals from their hands, in consideration of the very great and beneficial interest which his Royal Highness had taken in the progress of music in this country, by the foundation and endowment of the Royal College of Music, the foundation of the Associated Board, and in other ways. By the acceptance of that medal his Royal Highness would confer a great honour on the members of the Court and Livery of that ancient and loyal company.

Dr. Bridge then handed the medal to the Prince. It was designed by Mr. C. B. Birch, A.R.A., and shows a figure of St. Cecilia and the motto "Harmony." On the reverse are the arms of the company. The medal was enclosed in a velvet case with a suitable inscription.

The Prince of Wales, in reply, said he wished to return his thanks for the kind words of the resolution and for the gift of the very handsome medal. He expressed his best wishes for the progress of music in this country, and said he was much gratified by the recognition which his efforts had met with at the hands of the ancient and interesting Company of Musicians.

The Prince then cordially shook hands with the Master, by whom he was introduced to the Wardens and members present.

MR. HENRY FOWLER BROADWOOD.

Amongst the deaths recorded during the past month, that of the senior partner in the firm of Messrs. John Broadwood and Sons has attracted general attention. Although during the past ten or twelve years he had relinquished active participation in the doings of the house bearing his name, yet his death, when it occurred, came as a shock and reminded the musical world of the eminent position which Mr. Henry Fowler Broadwood, not many years ago, occupied amongst musical instrument manufacturers. He had had, like his father, the advantage of a liberal education. From a private school in France he was sent to Harrow and thence to Trinity College, Cambridge, after which his studies were completed in the University at Heidelberg. On returning to England, he entered with zeal into the practical and theoretical study of pianoforte making, solving with a well-disciplined mind many a knotty mechanical question which had baffled his predecessors. There was undoubtedly in him a strong trait of his great-grandfather, Burkardt Tschudi, the clever harpsichord maker, whose daughter, his grandfather, John Broadwood, married. It was from his great-grandfather that Henry Broadwood derived his heavy eyebrows, his southern eyes, his ever restless nature, and his courtly manner. Yet there was also in him a good deal of the Scotsman, and from his grandfather, John Broadwood, may be said to have come his uncommon shrewdness, his physical strength, and great determination. From his great-grandfather, his grandfather, and his father, one may take it, he inherited his talent and love for musical instrument making. In 1834 he became a partner, and on the retirement of his father, Mr. James Broadwood, he took over the chief direction of the business. From that time until about 1870 Mr. Henry Broadwood was possessed of enough energy for two or three ordinary mortals. To those who knew him he was a remarkable man indeed. His workmen, whilst sometimes feeling acutely his eccentricity and—to them—mistaken determination, regarded him with a reverence bordering on awe. He seemed possessed of two selves. There was Henry Broadwood, the pianoforte maker, and Henry Broadwood, the country squire; and neither self appeared to concern itself about the doings of the other; for whilst he would seldom talk of his fishing or shooting experiences at Great Pulteney Street, he was equally reserved when away from his factory concerning the innumerable experiments and structural alterations in his pianofortes which were ever occupying his mind. Despite his white hair, his activity was that of a young man. He was fond of making sudden descents upon his partners at Great Pulteney Street, and of seeing everybody and no end of instruments within an incredibly short time. After superintending the regulation of, say, a dozen grand pianofortes, he would as suddenly disappear, and two days afterwards a lengthy letter, full of ideas and instructions, would arrive from Scotland. In like manner, he would often visit unexpectedly the manufactory at Westminster, when he would perhaps give a strange order with a latent meaning, but without explanation. His wishes, however, were invariably carried out to the letter and without questioning. It has been frequently averred that because Mr. Henry Broadwood was not in the habit of calling at the Patent Office he made no structural alterations in his instruments. That such an impression is erroneous is entirely disproved by the record kept of thousands of experiments and tests made by him. Not even was Pape, of Paris, whose name, in connection with pianofortes, is attached to over a hundred patents, more brimful of ideas concerning endless structural alterations than Henry Broadwood. His perception of tone-quality was at one time perhaps unique; and in years gone by there were few men who could rival him as a practical acoustician. He had in his mind an ideal tone for his instruments, and to realise that ideal was his constant endeavour. On the acccession of his son, Mr. Henry J. T. Broadwood, he may be said to have practically given up active participation in the business, although, even in his seventieth year, his health and vigour remained unimpaired. Had it not been for an accident which befel him some six years ago, when he was struck on the head by the fall of a Venetian blind in his library, Mr. Broadwood, sen., would in all probability have remained energetic and well for some years yet to come. After that occurrence he gradually became feebler in health. His right hand was affected with palsy, and towards the end his eyesight became very dim. Nevertheless, almost to the last, he possessed remarkable strength for an octogenarian. After a week of fast-declining strength, Mr. Broadwood breathed his last on Saturday morning, the 8th ult, at 8 o'clock. On Tuesday, the 11th ult., his remains were interred in the family vault at Rusper, near Horsham, Sussex. The funeral was largely attended, the little village being more crowded than it had been at any other time within the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

OBITUARY.

We have to announce the following deaths:—

Wilhelm Meyer, composer of part-songs, &c., at Monaco, in his seventy-sixth year.

Adolf Sjödén, a well-known Swedish harp virtuoso, on June 14, at Biel, Switzerland.

Marie Deetz, née Brandt, formerly an esteemed operatic singer, on June 24, aged fifty-eight.

Moritz Nabich, formerly a famous trombone virtuoso, on the 4th ult., at Berlin, in his seventy-eighth year.

Otto Bach, for many years Director of the Mozarteum and Chapelmaster at the Cathedral in Salzburg; since 1880 Chapelmaster at the Neue Votivkirche in Vienna; composer of several operas, symphonies, masses, chamber music, a requiem, &c. He died at Salzburg on the 3rd ult., aged sixty. He was born on February 9, 1833, at Vienna, and married to the widow of Heinrich Marschner, the composer of "Hans Heiling."

C. Albrecht, at Moscow, on June 26; professor at the local Royal Conservatoire, aged sixty-six. His father conducted the first performance of Glinka's "Russlan and Ludmila."

Henri Herold, well-known violin virtuoso, on the 6th ult., at Berlin.

K. A. G. Riccius, composer of songs, incidental music to plays, ballets, &c., for several decades director of the Choir and conductor of light opera at the Dresden Court Theatre, on the 8th ult., at Dresden, aged sixty-three.

Georg Heine, favourite opera singer, on the 9th ult., at Frankfort-on-the-Maine.

Felix Battanchon, excellent violoncello player at the Grand Opéra, Paris, aged seventy-nine, one of the founders of the "Association des artistes musiciens." He was also known as a virtuoso on the now obsolete baryton, the stringed instrument for which Haydn composed 175 compositions.

A. Plunder, at Dresden; excellent flautist, for forty years member of the royal orchestra; one of the best known and most esteemed characters of musical life in the Saxon capital.

Max Heynderickx, a talented pianist, professor at the local Conservatoire; at Ghent, on June 14, aged sixty-nine.

Ottomar Backhaus, for many years first contrabassist at the Stadt-Theater and the famous Gewandhaus Concerts of Leipzig, on June 29, at Homburg.

J. B. Litzau, an esteemed organist and composer, at Rotterdam, on the 17th ult., in his seventieth year.

Johann Karl Fendrich, at Villingen, in the Black Forest, on the 10th ult., aged sixty; principal of the Baden Government School of Musical Instrument-making. As a young man he played in the Zürich Theatre as an amateur flautist; he went to the Leipzig Conservatoire on the advice of Wagner, who gave him a letter of introduction to Moritz Hauptmann. Later on he became a pupil of Liszt, Josef Strauss, Marx Dehn, &c.

Antonio Ghislanzoni, on the 16th ult., at Caprino-Bergamasco, in Lombardy, aged sixty-eight. He was in turns opera singer, journalist, soldier, poet, novelist, and playwright. His name is best known as the author of the book of Verdi's "Aïda," besides which he wrote some seventy or eighty other librettos, many of them of great excellence.

Antonio Superchi, on the 5th ult., at Parma, aged seventy-six. At one time he was well known as an operatic singer; as such he created the part of Charles V. in Verdi's "Ernani." In 1847 he appeared in London. He was lately Inspector of the Theatre Royal, Parma.

Gabriel Balart, at Barcelona, on the 5th ult., aged sixty-nine; director of the local Conservatoire of Music, and composer of a number of popular "Zarzuelas" (operettas) and two symphonies, entitled "Concepcion" and "La Caceria." He was a pupil of Alard, Carafa, and others, and was highly esteemed in his country.

Stembridge Ray, at 230, Paisley Road, West, Glasgow, on June 29; professor of music, aged seventy.

John Fulcher, at Glasgow, on the 10th ult., after a lingering illness; professor of music, composer of "Where has Scotland found her fame?" and other popular songs, in his sixty-third year.

MUSIC IN BRISTOL.

(From our own Correspondent.)

There has been little public musical activity in Bristol during the month, although preparations for the approaching season have gone on steadily. The Festival choir has been hard at work, and on June 26 Sir Charles Hallé came to Bristol to conduct a rehearsal of Schumann's "Paradise and the Peri" and portions of Wagner's "Flying Dutchman," which are in the scheme for the triennial Festival to be holden in October.

On the 13th ult. the annual meeting of the Bristol Musical Association (Saturday Popular Concerts) was held, under the presidency of Canon Ainger. An encouraging report was presented, which showed that although, as regarded the finances, there was a debit balance, useful and far-reaching work had been done by the Society, whose existence had been more than justified. The occasion was embraced for presenting an illuminated address and a purse of 120 sovereigns to Mr. George Gordon, the Hon. Conductor, for his continuous and zealous labours since the formation of the Society. It was resolved to continue the Concerts in October.

The annual meeting of the Bristol Choral Society was held on the 14th ult., when the report presented referred with satisfaction to the finished performances that had been given of the various works brought forward by the Society, and with regret to the financial loss sustained on the last Concert. The officers were elected, and a high tribute of praise was paid to Mr. George Riseley, the Conductor.

The only actual public musical performances have been the open-air Concerts given by the Bristol and Clifton Band.

MUSIC IN LIVERPOOL.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Not a single Concert or indoor musical performance has taken place here during the past month, and matters may be expected to stagnate to an equal extent during the next few weeks. Neither is there anything announced as to the intentions of local societies for next season further than that to the list of choral works already given the Philharmonic choristers are to have placed in their hands at an early date Dr. Hubert Parry's "Blest Pair of Sirens." Apropos of this subject, general congratulation is being expressed that after such a lengthy period of comparative inertness the premier Society is waking up to a sense of its responsibilities. This is emphasised all the more owing to the fact that important symphonic novelties—novelties to Liverpool at least—are under discussion, and but little doubt exists that the progressive policy thus suggested will be still further pursued by the directorate.

After a sharp discussion in the City Council over the question of Sunday music in the parks, the advancing party carried the day by twenty-four votes to fourteen, the majority including the Lord Mayor. The Sunday Society, who were the applicants for the permission in question, are naturally jubilant at this result, and the first performance took place on the 23rd ult., in Sefton Park, an excellent military band being specially recruited for the occasion by Mr. G. C. Smith, one of the leading bandmasters of the district. On the 30th ult. another such open-air Concert was announced in Wavertree Park, and during the whole of the present series the performances will alternate between these two places. An important experiment will thus have been tried, and as to its happy results there can be but little question. The whole expense of the six musical afternoons is being borne by the funds of the Liverpool Sunday Society.

The fourth quarterly meeting of the newly formed Welsh section of the Incorporated Society of Musicians was held at Chester on the 18th ult. Mr. C. Mellodew Lees, of Conway, was announced to preside, the business having been as usual arranged by Mr. Westlake Morgan, of Bangor, the Honorary Secretary.

The annual statement of the Liverpool and Provincial Musicians' Friendly Society has just been issued, and proves this useful and beneficent organisation to be in a flourishing condition. Its business is managed by a few practical musicians without any office expenses worth speaking of, the total cost of management for a year being only £15. On the other hand, upwards of £117 has been spent in sick pay and funerals and there still remains in hand the handsome balance of over £1,259. The example of this Society might well be extensively copied elsewhere.

The annual meeting of the Runcorn Musical Society was held on the 18th ult., when a balance sheet showing a welcome profit was unfolded. Mr. F. H. Crossley was re-appointed Conductor.

MUSIC IN YORKSHIRE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The annual Festival Service of the North-East Cathedral Choir Association, a Society comprising the Cathedral choirs of York, Durham, Ripon, and Wakefield, was held on the 13th ult. in York Minster. The Association has always made it its special aim not only to improve the church music of the Northern Province, but to encourage the art of composition by producing the works of living musicians, and on the present occasion a Cantata, specially written for the occasion by Dr. Naylor, the highly-esteemed Organist of York Cathedral, formed the Anthem. "Manna" is the successor of two similar works—"The Brazen Serpent" and "Meribah"—written for previous meetings of the Association, and forms with them a sacred trilogy on the subject of the wanderings of the Israelites in the wilderness. The librettist, the Rev. J. P. Metcalfe, has compiled his book entirely from Scripture, and the music is laid out for five principal vocalists (a treble, tenor, and three basses), the words of Moses being allotted to the tenor, and those of Aaron to a bass, while the singular and striking combination of three basses (without accompaniment) is reserved for the words of the Lord, promising the gift of bread from heaven. The choruses, in which the composer's strength lies, are in four parts, and the accompaniments are for organ only. Dr. Naylor's excellent musicianship is, as has been suggested, seen to the greatest advantage in the choral portions of the cantata, which are in many instances marked by exceptional power. The opening chorus, "Thus saith the Lord," and one in six-eight time, "Ye shall go out with joy," are pleasant and full of "go," while the elaborate final chorus, a fugue founded on four subjects, and, above all, the powerful and expressive chorus "Would to God we had died," are remarkable for their vigour. The performance, under the composer's conductorship, was excellent, and indeed, when the fact is taken into consideration that only one hour's full rehearsal was practicable, it was remarkable for its precision. The chorus, it should be added, numbered about 630 voices, including many parochial choirs in addition to the nucleus of Cathedral choirs. Dr. Armes, of Durham, and Dr. Crow, of Ripon, shared the task of accompanying the service and the cantata.

On St. Peter's Day, June 29, the Dedication Festival of the Leeds Parish Church was celebrated by a Special Service, of which Benedict's Oratorio "St. Peter" formed the principal feature. Ever since the days of Dr. Hook, the "great vicar," who brought S. S. Wesley to Leeds, the music of the Parish Church has been famous, and the excellent choir, supplemented for the occasion, did ample justice to Benedict's pleasant, if not particularly powerful or original music. The only accompaniment was that of the organ, which was, however, very ably handled by the Organist, Mr. Alfred Benton.

MUSIC IN CHICAGO.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The month of June has been very rich in choral and other vocal productions; in fact, these have rather dominated the orchestral and solo performances. The advent of the month brought the Russian choir, under Madame Lineff, who has acquired well-deserved praise for the admirable drill and, as a consequence, excellent results obtained. Their selections include every class of Russian Folk-Song—dance, wedding, recruiting, &c.; and their value at the present time lies largely in the fact that they are germane to the much-mooted question of national songs as the basis of new orchestral and other forms of musical expresson. The voices are well balanced, of good quality, and the musical intelligence shown is of a high order.

June 14 was marked by an excellent performance of the leading numbers from Handel's "Messiah," enlisting the services of the Apollo Club of Chicago (600 voices), Edward Lloyd (tenor), E. F. Bushnell (bass), Mrs. Agnes Thomson (soprano), Mrs. Christine Neilson Drier (contralto). The great tenor Aria "Thou shalt dash them" was received with special favour, as was Mr. Bushnell's heroic singing of "Why do the nations." The chorus work was well done, and the massing of so great a body of singers in the Festival Hall was extremely effective.

The interpretation of Bach's "St. Matthew" Passion was neither so happy nor so successful, although attended by a large audience. This stupendous work of the great master presents difficulties which neither soloists nor chorus had adequately conquered. The necessary "cuts" led to an unhappy musical result, and the blurred tones of the singers plainly showed a nervousness and uncertainty far from satisfactory. It was wisely determined that the conditions were not favourable for a second attempt, and Mendelssohn's "Song of Praise" and Rossini's "Stabat Mater" were substituted with happier results. At this Concert Mrs. Genevra-Johnstone Bishop was the soprano, Mr. Lloyd, tenor, and Mr. Gardner S. Lamson, bass.

The three days, June 21, 22, and 23, were "Festival Days" for the Western Choral Societies, and brought together the Cincinnati, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Milwaukee, and St. Louis Choral Societies in a full programme, embracing "The Utrecht Jubilate," "St. Paul," "A Stronghold sure," and parts of "Judas Maccabæus," Berlioz's "Requiem Mass," and "Lohengrin." A very pleasing feature of the month's music has been the Ballad Concerts, in which Mr. Lloyd has greatly delighted the audience, always very large on these occasions, by his beautiful interpretation of "Tom Bowling," "The Message," "Come into the Garden, Maud." Mr. Lloyd has also given great pleasure in his Oratorio work, being the only tenor soloist thus far engaged.

A Concert of exceptional interest was given, on the 9th ult., by the Chicago Columbian Chorus, the programme being mainly devoted to selections from Gluck's "Orpheus" and a repetition of the last movement of Mr. Chadwick's Columbian Ode, which was given on the Opening Day of the Exposition. In both of these works the soloist was Mrs. Katherine Fisk, who has already made a favourable impression on London audiences. Mrs. Fisk's rendering of the part of Orpheus was of the highest excellence, and her singing of the recitative "Ye frowning ministers" was full of dramatic intensity. The work of chorus and orchestra combined to render the occasion noteworthy.

For the ensuing month the Concerts will be entirely repetitions of the great Oratorios, &c., previously given, the variations being in the line of new Orchestral and Instrumental Compositions. Our German fellow-citizens have engaged with enthusiasm in the Exposition Music, and two Concerts of unusual excellence have been given by the Arion of Brooklyn and the Liederkranz of New York respectively. With the latter came Miss Lillian Blauvelt, soprano, and Mr. Conrad Behrens, bass, both popular artists in all our great cities. Later works announced for performance are the "Creation" and "Elijah." It is hoped that the last work of Mr. H. W. Parker, "Hora Novissima," will be selected for performance later on, though the details have not yet been arranged.

The Exhibition is becoming more popular every day; vast numbers are coming, and the promised reduction of railroad rates will have a beneficial effect upon the attendance. The musical features are at once an attraction and an education, and the constantly increasing audiences bear witness to the interest and pleasure felt by the people in this matter.

The season in New York ended with the five Concerts given by the Symphony and Oratorio Societies, under Mr. Walter Damrosch, who had the assistance of Madame Materna, Miss Lillian Blauvelt, Mr. W. H. Rieger, Mr. Emil Fisher, and Mr. Ericksen F. Bushnell. The first Concert consisted entirely of selections from Wagner's music-dramas, the second was an exceptionally pleasing performance of "Elijah"; both Concerts received high praise. Then, as usual in warm weather, New York returned to light opera, Roof Garden Concerts, and Vaudeville.

A recent addition to the literature of music calls for notice. Mr. Henry T. Finck, the accomplished musical critic of the New York Evening Post, has given to the world one of the most complete and voluminous among the many biographies of Richard Wagner, dealing in a vivid and attractive way with the life and work of the great tone-master. Much new matter has been accumulated by Mr. Finck, which throws great light upon his theories, method of composition, &c.

The Musical Congress now in session in connection with the Exposition has elicited some valuable discussion, growing out of the papers presented by noted authorities who deal with the subject of musical education in its many aspects. Mr. H. E. Krehbiel, of the Tribune, read recently a valuable paper on American Folk-Song, with vocal illustrations taken from the old melodies of the negro slaves. Miss Alice Fletcher, who has spent much time among the Indians, treated the question of "Indian Songs" very fully, and a native Indian furnished vocal examples of the different classes. These papers, with others treating of cognate themes, will doubtless be issued in permanent form, and will not be the least among the many valuable results accomplished by the Columbian Exposition.

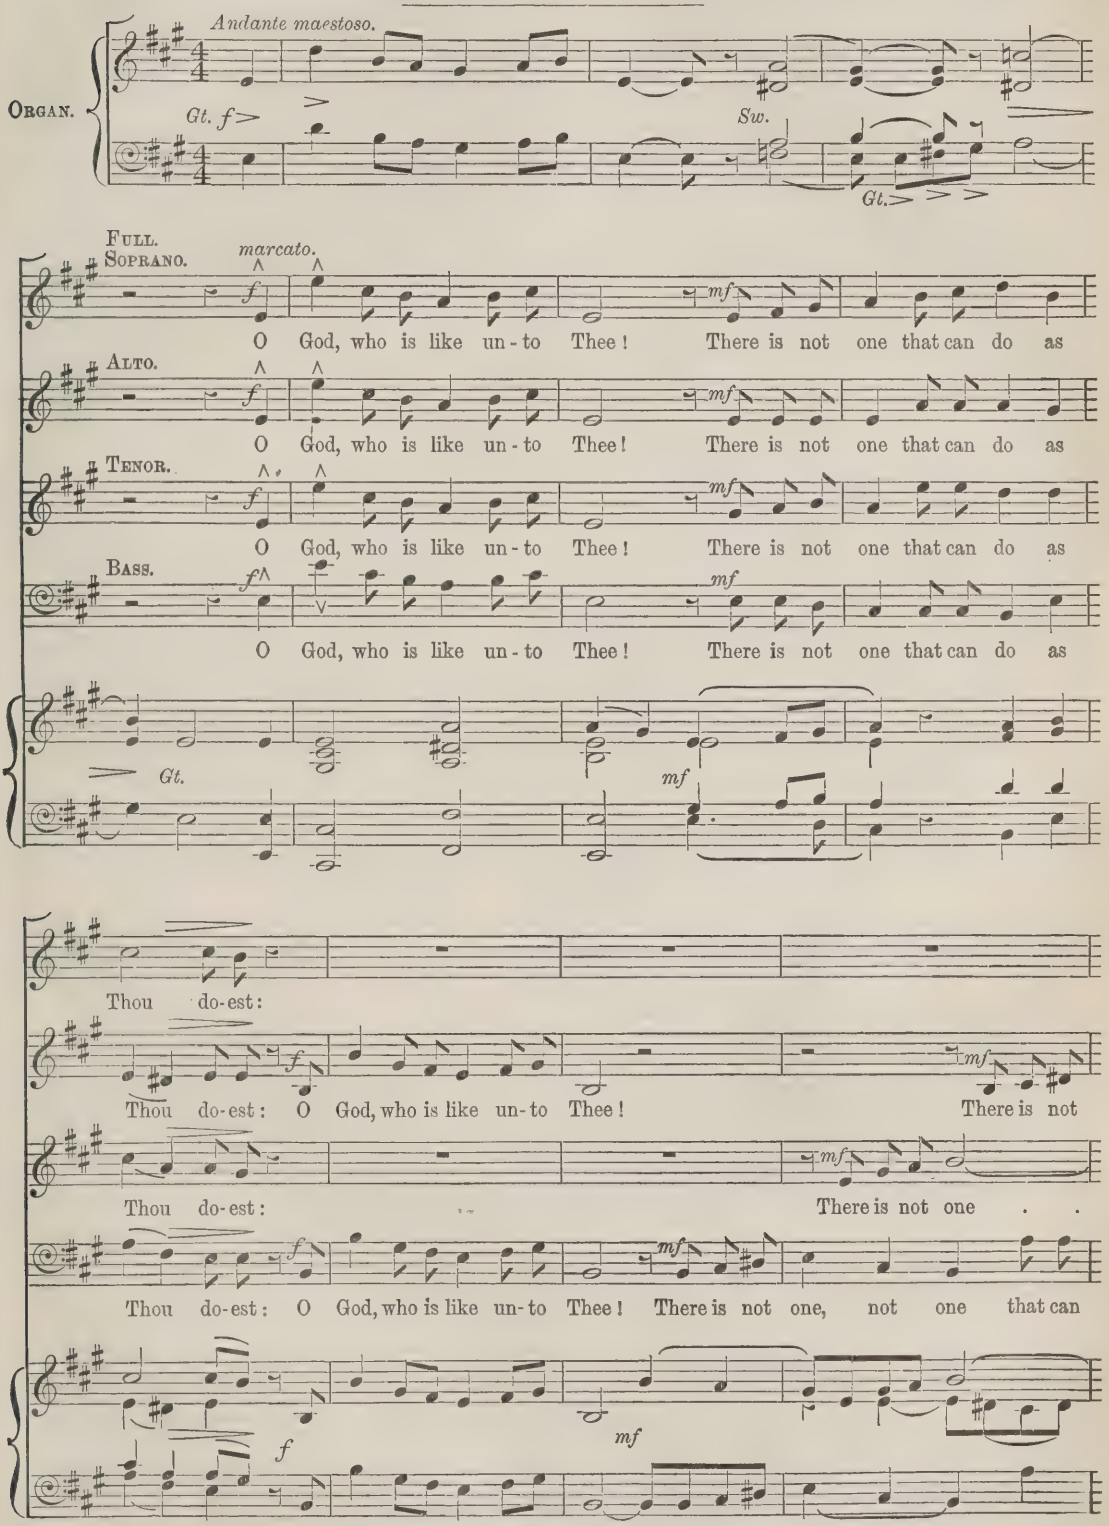
The National Temperance Choral Union Fête at the Crystal Palace, on the 4th ult., boasted three choral contests, as well as a couple of gigantic choral gatherings on the Handel orchestra. At the earlier Concert Mendelssohn's "As the hart pants," "But as for His people" ("Israel in Egypt"), and "The Lord is a Man of war," sung by massed voices, were steadily rendered, under the bâton of Mr. James A. Birch. The setting by R. J. S. Stevens of "Blow, blow, thou winter wind," was also a creditable performance. The sacred and secular elements were again united at the later Concert, the genius of Handel being in this instance exemplified by "And the glory of the Lord"

O God, who is like unto Thee!

HARVEST ANTHEM.

Words from the Psalms of David. Composed by MYLES B. FOSTER.

London: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO., 1, Berners Street (W.), and 80 & 81, Queen Street (E.C.); also in New York.



Andante maestoso.
ORGAN.
Gt. f
Sw.
Gt.
FULL.
SOPRANO.
marcato.
O God, who is like un-to Thee! There is not one that can do as ALTO.
O God, who is like un-to Thee! There is not one that can do as
TENOR.
O God, who is like un-to Thee! There is not one that can do as BASS.
O God, who is like un-to Thee! There is not one that can do as
Gt.
Thou do-est:
Thou do-est: O God, who is like un-to Thee! There is not Thou do-est: There is not one . .
Thou do-est: O God, who is like un-to Thee! There is not one, not one that can Copyright, 1893, by Novello, Ewer and Co.

mf cres.
There is not one that can do as Thou do - est;
sff
Great things are they that one, not one that can do as Thou do - est;
. . . that can do as Thou do - est;
do as Thou do - est, not as Thou do - est;
f
meno f
Allegretto grazioso.
Thou hast done, great things are they that Thou, Thou hast done!..
Solo Soprano, or all Decani Sopranos. con gioja.
The pas-tures are fill-ed with flocks, the valleys are cov- er- ed o-ver with corn; They shout for joy, they
Sw. Oboe. p al - so sing, they sing and shout, for joy. . . . Thou vis - it - est the earth, Thou makest it p without Reed.

Full.
mf
cres.
ve - ry plen - teous. Thou vis - it - est the earth, Thou makest it ve - ry
Thou vis - it - est the earth, Thou makest it ve - ry
Thou vis - it - est the earth, Thou makest it ve - ry
Thou vis - it - est the earth, Thou makest it ve - ry
Gt.
Solo. a tempo tranquillo.
plen - teous. The pas-tures are fill - ed with flocks, the val - leys are cov - er - ed o - ver with plen - teous.
plen - teous.
plen - teous.
Sw.
Full.
f
ff corn. . . They shout for joy, they al - so sing, they shout! . . shout . . for
They shout for joy, they al - so sing, they shout! . . shout . . for
They shout for joy, they al - so sing, they shout! . . shout . . for They shout for joy, they al - so sing, they shout! . . shout . . for Gt.

Tempo 1mo.
molto maestoso.
mf
joy! O God, who is like un-to Thee! There is not one that can do as Thou do-est;
joy! O God, who is like un-to Thee! There is not one that can do as Thou do-est;
joy! O God, who is like un-to Thee! There is not one that can do as Thou do-est;
joy! O God, who is like un-to Thee! There is not one that can do as Thou do-est;
Tempo 1mo.
molto maestoso.
mf
ff
meno f
Great things are they that Thou hast done, great things are they that Thou, Thou hast done!
Great things are they that Thou hast done, great things are they that Thou, Thou hast done!
Great things are they that Thou hast done, great things are they that Thou, Thou hast done!
Great things are they that Thou hast done, great things are they that Thou, Thou hast done!
ff
meno f
dim.
Sw. Reed.
Andante religioso.
Tenor Solo.
con maesta.
mf
Thou o-pen-est Thine
Andante religioso.
Sw. without Reed.
p sostenuto.
sostenuto.
hand, and fill-est all things liv - ing,.. all things liv - ing with plen - teous-ness, Solo Stop.
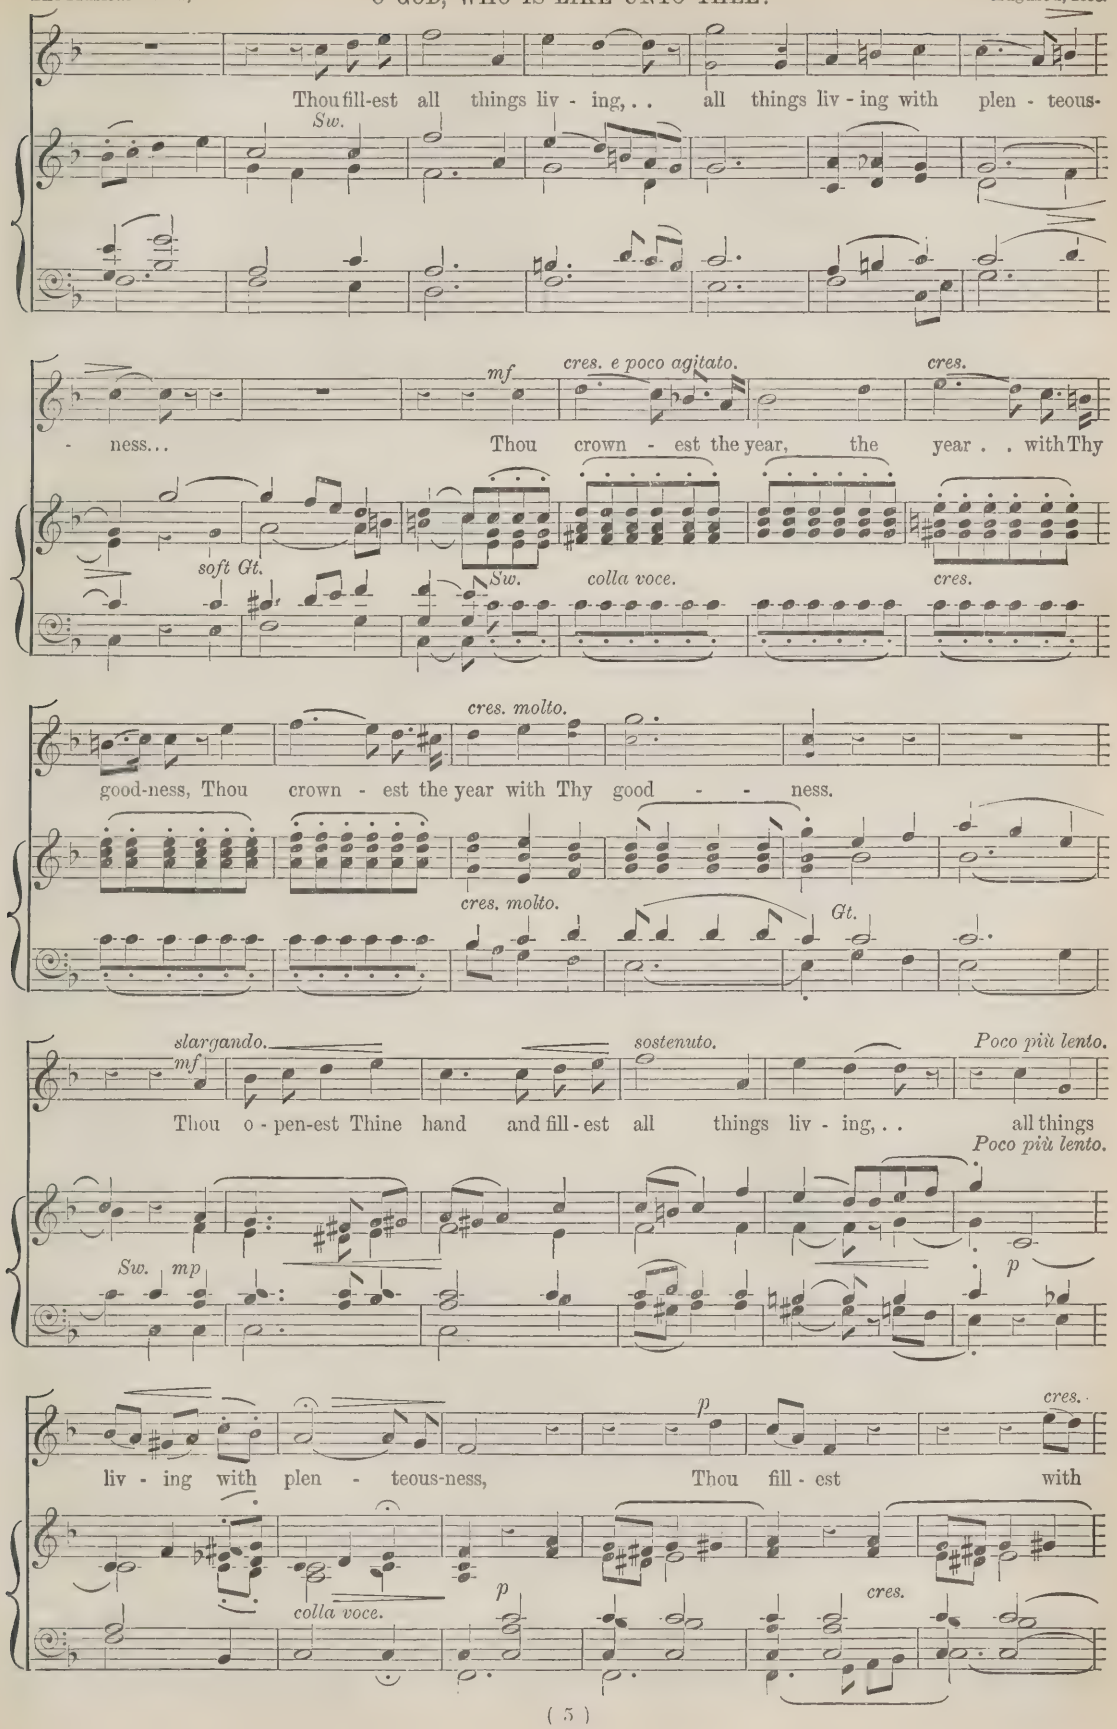
sempre sostenuto.



Thou fill-est all things liv - ing, . . all things liv - ing with plen - teous-
Sw.
- ness...
mf
cres. e poco agitato.
cres.
Thou crown - est the year, the year . . with Thy soft Gt.
Sw.
colla voce.
cres.
cres. molto.
good-ness, Thou crown - est the year with Thy good - - ness.
cres. molto.
Gt.
slargando.
mf
sostenuto.
Poco più lento.
Thou o - pen-est Thine hand and fill - est all things liv - ing, . . all things
Poco più lento.
Sw.
mp
p liv - ing with plen - teous-ness, Thou fill - est with p
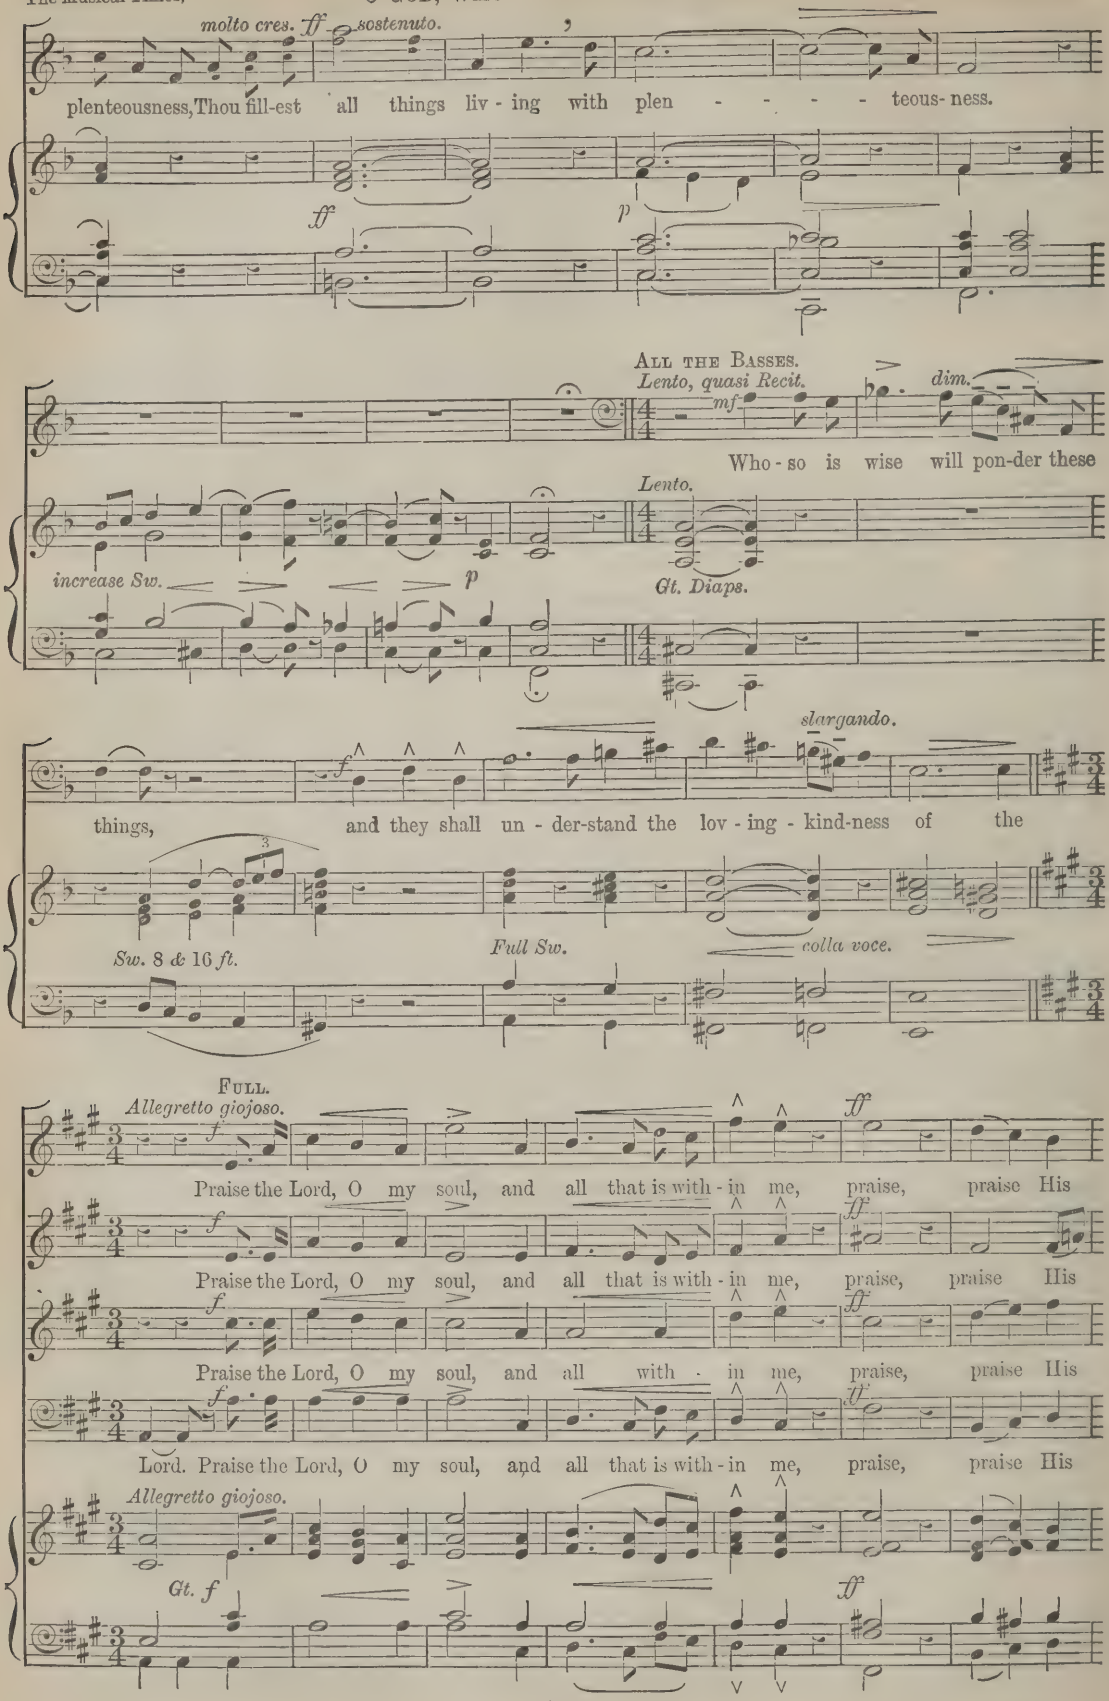
cres.
colla voce.
p
cres.



molto cres.
ff
sostenuto.
plenteousness, Thou fill-est all things liv - ing with plen - - - - teous- ness.
ff
p
All the Basses.
Lento, quasi Recit.
mf
dim.
Who - so is wise will pon-der these Lento. increase Sw.
p
Gt. Diaps.
slargando.
f things, and they shall un - der-stand the lov - ing - kind-ness of the
Sw. 8 & 16 ft.
Full Sw.
colla voce.
Full.
Allegretto giojoso.
f
Praise the Lord, O my soul, and all that is with - in me, praise, praise His ff
Praise the Lord, O my soul, and all that is with - in me, praise, praise His Praise the Lord, O my soul, and all with - in me, praise, praise His Lord. Praise the Lord, O my soul, and all that is with - in me, praise, praise His Allegretto giojoso.
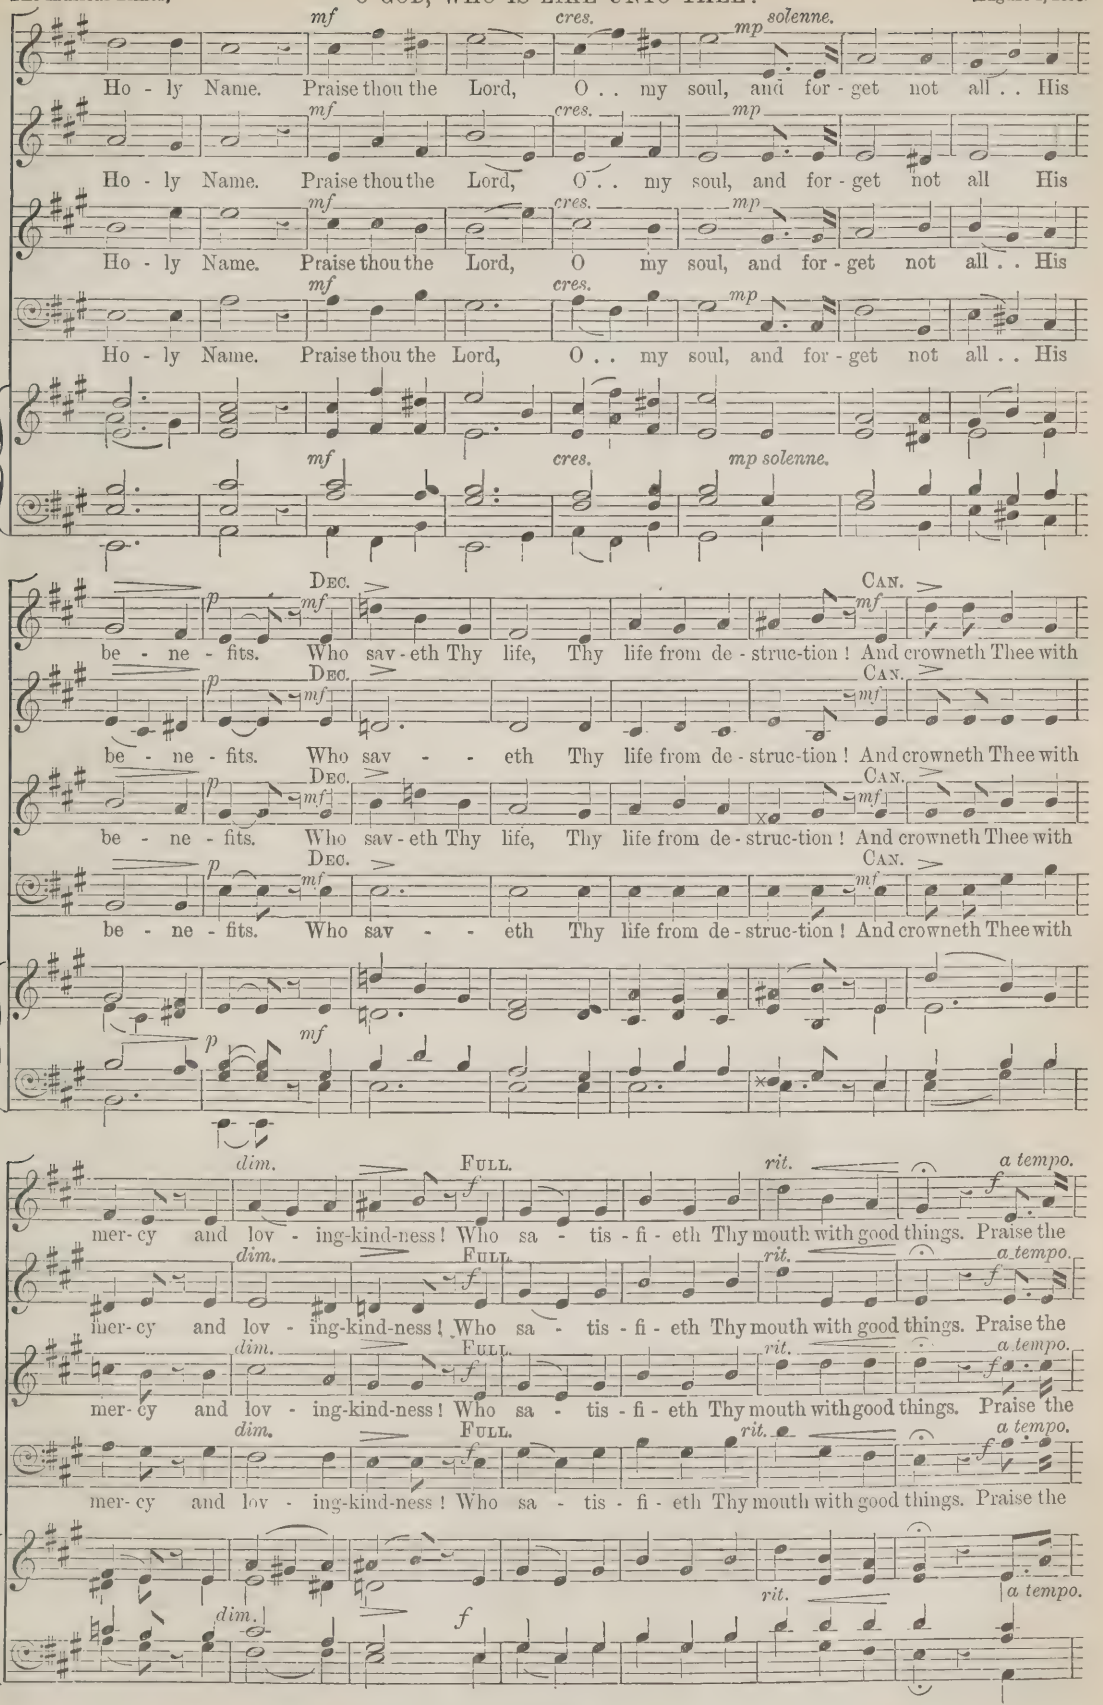
Gt. f
ff



mf cres. mp solenne.
Ho - ly Name. Praise thou the Lord, O . . my soul, and for - get not all . . His Ho - ly Name. Praise thou the Lord, O . . my soul, and for - get not all His Ho - ly Name. Praise thou the Lord, O my soul, and for - get not all . . His Ho - ly Name. Praise thou the Lord, O . . my soul, and for - get not all . . His mf cres. mp solenne.
Dec. Can. be - ne - fits. Who sav - eth Thy life, Thy life from de - struc-tion ! And crowneth Thee with be - ne - fits. Who sav - - eth Thy life from de - struc-tion ! And crowneth Thee with be - ne - fits. Who sav - eth Thy life, Thy life from de - struc-tion ! And crowneth Thee with be - ne - fits. Who sav - - eth Thy life from de - struc-tion ! And crowneth Thee with dim. Full. rit. a tempo.
mer- cy and lov - ing-kind-ness ! Who sa - tis - fi - eth Thy mouth with good things. Praise the mer- cy and lov - ing-kind-ness ! Who sa - tis - fi - eth Thy mouth with good things. Praise the mer- cy and lov - ing-kind-ness ! Who sa - tis - fi - eth Thy mouth with good things. Praise the mer- cy and lov - ing-kind-ness ! Who sa - tis - fi - eth Thy mouth with good things. Praise the Lord, O my soul, and all that is with - in me praise, praise His Ho - ly Name,

Lord, O my soul, and all that is with - in me praise, praise His Ho - ly Name,
Lord, O my soul, and all with - in me praise, praise His Ho - ly Name,
Lord, O my soul, and all that is with - in me praise, praise His Ho - ly Name, ff
rit.
a tempo.
Dec. ten.
Can. ten.
f praise, praise His Ho - ly Name, praise the Lord, praise the Lord.
praise, praise His Ho - ly Name, praise the Lord, praise the Lord.
praise, praise His Ho - ly Name, praise the Lord, praise the Lord.
praise, praise His Ho - ly Name, praise the Lord, praise the Lord.
f a tempo.
p
Più maestoso ed allargando.
Full.
Praise thou the Lord, . . O . . . my soul! . . . .
Praise thou the Lord, . . O . . . my soul! . . . .
Praise thou the Lord, . . . O . . . my soul! . . . .
Praise thou the Lord, . . . O . . . my soul! . . . .

Also published in Novello's Tonic Sol-fa Series, No. 799, price 1½*d*.

("Messiah") and "Then round about the starry throne" ("Samson"). In the contest for choirs of from seventy to a hundred voices the Wellingborough Temperance Choral Society (Conductor, Mr. J. E. Cutlan) was first, and the Cardiff Blue Ribbon Choir second. The South London Temperance Choir (Conductor, Mr. W. Seemer Betts) won the first prize, and the Nottingham Tabernacle Choir the second, for choirs numbering from forty to sixty. In the class for choirs of from twenty to forty voices, the Clapton Park Sunday School Band of Hope body (Conductor, Mr. J. H. Parish) was considered superior to the Lake Road (Portsmouth) Band of Hope Choir.

On the 4th ult., at Barnard's Inn, Mr. Dolmetsch brought his all too short series of Concerts to a close with a selection from the works of John Sebastian Bach. These comprised the Suite in B minor for flute, strings, and harpsichord; the Concerto in D for flute, violin, and harpsichord, with string quartet accompaniment; the Sonata in A for violin, harpsichord, and viola da gamba; the Fantasia Chromatica and Fugue for clavichord; various smaller pieces for violoncello and for lute, and three vocal pieces with accompaniments for various instruments. Miss Hélène and Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch, Miss A. Milne, Mr. J. A. Milne, and Mr. W. A. Boxall were responsible for the stringed instruments; the flute was in the safe hands of Mr. A. P. Vivian, Miss Florence Monk was the vocalist, and the harpsichord and clavichord were respectively played by Miss Ethel Davis and Mr. A. J. Hipkins. The last-named gentleman's performance of that wonderful work, which the late Sir G. A. Macfarren spoke of as the "prophecy of all that is accomplished in the music of the present and all that can be possible in the music of the future—the Chromatic Fantasia" was the feature of the Concert, and was so highly appreciated that an encore—in the shape of the first Prelude from the "Forty-eight"—had to be given.

Mr. John Thomas's annual Concert, by reason of the prominence given to the instrument of which he is such an able professor, had attractions of a special nature that were not ignored by the music-loving public. At St. James's Hall, on June 28, a band of twenty-four harps, played by young ladies, assembled on the orchestra, and with much precision and unanimity of feeling gave arrangements of the "Marche Solennelle" of Gounod and the "Marche Funèbre" of Chopin, as well as a new Minuet and Trio from the pen of Mr. H. J. Timothy. These essays were warmly applauded by the large audience. Besides playing solos to which his name was attached, Mr. Thomas accompanied some of the songs, among them his elegant setting of Byron's "There be none of Beauty's daughters," the vocal portion of which was rendered with such charm by Mr. Ben Davies as to obtain an encore. Others who had no cause to complain of the reception accorded their efforts were Miss Catherine Williams (the John Thomas Welsh scholar at the Royal Academy of Music), Mrs. Mary Davies, Miss Mary Thomas, Mdlle. Clara Eissler, Mr. Dyved Lewys, and Mr. Edward Owen.

Signorina Estrèla Belinfante, at her Afternoon Concert at St. James's Hall, on June 30, was able to boast the presence of Signor Pietro Mascagni as an accompanist. The composer of "Cavalleria Rusticana" assisted the bénéficiaire, who has a well-trained mezzo-soprano voice, in her refined rendering of an air from "L'Amico Fritz" and the recitative and air "Amici, quel lamento" from Gluck's "Orfeo." He also accompanied Signor Maldura in pleasing mandoline solos. Mr. Eugène Oudin charmed his hearers with Massenet's "Pensée d'Automne," and Mr. Ben Davies rendered "Salve dimora" ("Faust") in his most felicitous manner. In Mascheroni's "Ave Maria" (with the composer at the pianoforte) Madame Marie Duma was excellently suited. A transcription of Saint-Saëns's "Danse Macabre" was performed with spirit by the juvenile pianists, Signorine Rosina and Bice Cerasoli, and a fair share of favour was reserved for the violoncello playing of M. Joseph Hollman. The Meistersingers' Bijou Orchestra and the Polymnia Ladies' Vocal Quartet won commendation not only for ability, but for the variety their pieces imparted to the programme.

Madame Inverni's Afternoon Concert at St. James's Hall, on the 3rd ult., was equally attractive in the instrumental and vocal departments. As solo pianist M. Slivinski played with neatness Mendelssohn's "Variations Sérieuses" and pieces by Chopin, Liszt, and Rubinstein; Mr. Leo Stern won hearty commendation for his rendering of a violoncello Pastorale of his own composition and Davidoff's "Am Springbrunnen"; and Mdlle. Yrrac delighted a large assemblage by her ability as a violinist. Madame Inverni's agreeable contralto was heard in the air from Saint-Saëns's "Samson et Dalila," "Mon cœur s'ouvre à ta voix," and in a cycle of love songs by Guy d'Hardelot, entitled "Elle et Lui," the accompaniment to the latter being played by the composer. To these pieces she did the utmost justice. For the last number of the cycle, a duet (in which the Concert-giver was joined by Mr. Isidore de Lara), repetition was demanded. Miss Macintyre, after Santuzza's air from "Cavalleria Rusticana," gave the waltz from "Romeo," and Mr. Philip Newbury was successful in Mr. Edwin D. Lloyd's new song "Concord."

Mr. A. J. Slocombe's Recital of Chamber Music, at St. Martin's Town Hall, on the afternoon of the 8th ult., had an excellent commencement with Brahms's masterly Quintet for pianoforte and strings (Op. 34), played with correct appreciation of the effect intended by Miss Adelina de Lara, Messrs. A. J. Slocombe, W. Sutcliffe, A. Hobday, and B. P. Parker. The representatives of the strings also displayed marked efficiency in the concluding work, Haydn's Quartet in D, No. 35. In his solo efforts—Schumann's "Gartenmelodie" and Gade's "Capriccio"—Mr. Slocombe gave proof of complete command of the resources of his instrument, together with qualities not always possessed by violinists who have acquired a reputation for executive facility. Mr. Alfred Hobday distinguished himself by an eminently refined rendering of Vieuxtemps's "Elégie" for viola, and Miss de Lara's finished style was apparent in three of Schumann's expressive morceaux. Relief to the instrumental works was afforded by songs from Mr. James Bovett, who earned approval by his sympathetic delivery of Handel's "Where'er you walk."

Trinity College, London, made a creditable display at the Students' Orchestral Concert, at Princes' Hall, on the 15th ult. The Overture and Nocturne of Raff's "Italian Suite," Gounod's Saltarello, and the accompaniments to several difficult works yielded testimony to obedience to the wishes of the Conductor, Mr. F. Corder. Madame Blanche St. Clair in two movements of Sterndale Bennett's Concerto in F minor, Miss Eleanor Shuttleworth in Liszt's "Twelfth Rhapsodie," Mr. Albert Ketelbey in the Adagio and Rondo of Beethoven's E flat Concerto, Miss Marion Clapton in Schumann's "Concertstück," and Master Sydney Faulks in a Violin Concerto by De Beriot, demonstrated that their ambition was not of the kind that "o'erleaps itself," though each has still, in varying degree, something to learn. Mr. Ketelbey further showed promise in another branch, that of composer, by means of a song, "At Parting's Hour," entrusted to Miss Helen Vivienne Ambrose.

The annual Concert of the Violin Classes at the Birkbeck Institution was held on the 19th ult., and again afforded its members the opportunity of displaying the results of the admirable and painstaking tuition received from their able instructor, Mr. T. E. Gatehouse, in a selection of favourite melodies by S. Jarvis, and in the ever-popular Intermezzo from "Cavalleria." Mr. Gatehouse's contributions, comprising Van Biene's "Broken Melody," Wieniawski's Mazurka, and a Gavotte of Rameau, were received as usual with much favour, and in a transcription of Schubert's "L'Addio," in which he displayed great pathos and beauty of tone, he was enthusiastically encored. The vocalists were Miss Lilian Burden, Miss C. Taylor, and Mr. James Kift, who also acted very ably as accompanist in Dr. Mackenzie's music to "The Dream of Eugene Aram," which was recited with great dramatic power by Mr. Charles Fry.

The numerous musical services of St. Peter's Festival week this year at St. Peter's, Eaton Square, culminated in a full performance of Mendelssohn's "St. Paul." A complete orchestra (composed chiefly of the best English professional players) and a well-trained chorus, consisting of the three united Parish choirs, gave a really fine rendering of the work, under the bâton of Mr. W. de Manby Sergison, Organist and Choirmaster of St. Peter's. Dr. G. J. Bennett, Organist of St. John's, Wilton Road, gave admirable assistance at the grand organ. The part of the Apostle was taken by Mr. T. Fidge, who showed much promise. Mr. James Leyland made an excellent impression in his declamatory rendering of "Be thou faithful unto death," and the familiar "But the Lord is mindful" was well sung by Master Pearman. The soprano solos were also efficiently sung by Masters Weatherley and Jackson.

Mr. E. Van der Straeten gave a Concert in aid of the building fund of the North-East London Institute and School of Music, at St. Martin's Town Hall, on Friday, June 30. The programme included some part-songs for female voices from the pen of the Concert-giver; the first one, Longfellow's "Curfew," well reflects the sombre words, and the music appears improvised rather than "made." The other songs, though less interesting, are flowing and melodious. Benjamin Godard's Sonata in D minor (Op. 104) for pianoforte and violoncello opened the Concert; the music is characteristic of the composer, but, speaking generally, the thematic material is more interesting than are the thematic developments. The work was played somewhat boisterously by Messrs. Algernon Ashton and Van der Straeten. The Concert concluded with Raff's Quintet, for pianoforte and strings, in A minor (Op. 107).

Mdlle. Mathilda Enequist offered a selection of pieces of divers schools at her Concert at Collard's Rooms, on the 14th ult. Her own contributions included the recitative and air "Bocage épais," from Halévy's "Les Mousquetaires de la Reine," an Ave Maria by C. Paston Cooper (a tasteful performance, repeated by general request), and some Scandinavian melodies. In each of these, exceptional natural gifts were supplemented by artistic intelligence. From M. Strelezki's compositions were drawn "When twilight comes," rendered by Madame Marie Belval; an entirely new song, "Last Year," written for Madame Blanche Vera, and a new Serenade for pianoforte, played by Signor Carlo Ducci. The other vocalists were Mr. Frederic Penna and Mr. John Bartlett, and violin solos were supplied by Signor Arrigo Bocchi.

The Musical Artists' Society gave its sixty-sixth Concert at St. Martin's Town Hall on June 26. The performances were very unequal and in some instances amateurish to a degree, while Schubert's lovely E flat Trio (Op. 100) received very bad treatment indeed Bennett's charming Chamber Trio in A (Miss Lily Tyler, Messrs. Buziau and Albert) and Schumann's Andante and Variations in B flat for two pianofortes (Misses Maud Wilson and Llewela Davies) were excellently rendered, as was also a musicianly but somewhat old-fashioned Suite by Mr. Walter Macfarren. This was played by Miss Davies. Of the various novelties produced there was not one which calls for special notice. The most meritorious was a Pianoforte and Violin Sonata by Mrs. Susan Trew, well played by the composer and Mr. René Ortmans.

A new amateur orchestra, recently formed by Mr. J. B. Smart, gave a Concert at St. Thomas's Schools, Portman Square, on June 27. The orchestra, comprising nearly forty players, showed the results of very careful training on the part of the Conductor, playing well together and indicating capabilities of expression, especially in the Dances in German's "Henry VIII." music and Hermann's Overture "Le Diadême." A violin solo, De Beriot's "Scène de Ballet," given by a youthful member of the orchestra, Master Harry Whittaker, deserves special recognition as showing great promise; and the flute solo by Mr. E. Rourke also met with much favour. The vocalists were Miss Ada Potter, Miss Jennie Carr, Mr. W. C. Peskett, Mr. G. Newton, and the Berners Quartet.

Mr. Wilhelm Ganz gave his annual Concert at the Grafton Galleries on the afternoon of the 11th ult., a high-class miscellaneous programme being as usual provided. The Concert-giver was associated with Messrs. Johannes Wolff, Emil Kreuz, and Hollman in Mozart's Pianoforte Quartet in G minor, all the instrumental artists named played solos, and a long list of vocalists included the names of Madame Fanny Moody, Miss Clara Butt, Miss Marie Brema, Mr. Ben Davies, and Mr. Eugène Oudin. Some disappointment was caused by the receipt of a telegram from Madame Albani stating that she could not appear, but the fashionable audience had certainly an excellent entertainment of its kind, both in respect of quantity and quality.

A Concert was given on Thursday evening, the 13th ult., at the Lecture Hall, Berwick Street, by Mr. Henry A. Evans, Organist of Eccleston Square Church, assisted by the choir and friends. The programme included Macfarren's "May Day," Romberg's "Toy Symphony," and the Overture and three Dances from German's "Music to Henry VIII." The principal vocalists were Miss Bessie Spells, Mrs. Woodhouse, Mr. E. Humphries, and Mr. Wingrove Ives. The string band of the Chelsea Amateur Musical Society rendered good service. Miss Ursula C. Gross and Miss Adams were efficient accompanists. Mr. Joseph Somes and Mr. H. A. Evans conducted.

The Midsummer Examinations of the College of Organists for Fellowship and Associateship have been very largely attended. The following gentlemen have gained the F.C.O. diploma:—Ivor A. Atkins, Hereford; F. Barton, Bowness-on-Windermere; H. J. Dawson, North Berwick; L. Ellis, Leicester; T. H. Ingham, Ashton-in-Makerfield; F. G. Sanders, Clapham; J. F. Shaw, jun., Upper Holloway; J. C. Wainwright, Guildford; H. Wharton Wells, Richmond, Surrey. The A.C.O. list was not completed at the time of going to press. The diplomas were duly presented by Mr. F. Gerard Cobb and Dr. J. C. Bridge.

Miss Mabel Elliot and Miss Olga Racster gave an Orchestral Concert at Princes' Hall on June 27, assisted by Mr. Bantock Pierpoint, Mr. P. Newbury, and the Meistersingers' Orchestra, ably conducted by Mr. Norfolk Megone. Miss Elliot, who has a carefully trained soprano voice, was heard in songs by Handel and Mozart, and Miss Racster, a violinist of considerable ability (pupil of Marsick and Ysaÿe), played Vieuxtemps's Fourth Concerto, Bruch's "Fantasie Ecossaise," and Beethoven's Romance in G. The orchestra rendered the accompaniments with delicacy, and played Weber's "Oberon" Overture and Grieg's "Peer Gynt" Suite (No. 2).

An agreeable Concert was given by Mr. Alfred Gallrein, a very able violoncellist, at the Steinway Hall, on June 29. The player has a fine tone and executive powers above the average, and he was heard to much advantage in a Sonata in D minor by Corelli, and in minor pieces by Popper, Fischer, Godard, and Boccherini. The programme included Beethoven's Trio in D (Op. 70, No. 1), in which Mr. Gallrein was assisted by Messrs. Schönberger and Johannes Wolff, the artists last-named contributing solos with much effect. Songs were added by Miss Liza Lehmann, Miss Agnes Janson, and Mr. Lawrence Kellie.

Mrs. Layton gave her annual Students' Concert on the 18th ult., at the Chelsea Town Hall. A long and diversified programme was provided, including Macfarren's "Songs in a Cornfield," sung by the ladies' choir; duets for two pianofortes by Saint-Saëns, Moscheles, Weber; Mr. Henschel's new vocal quartet, and other pieces of interest. During the interval Mr. Orton Bradley distributed the certificates of the Associated Board of the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music to fourteen students. The hall was filled by a large and attentive audience.

The Terminal Examinations at the Royal College of Music were completed on the 24th ult., and the Council Exhibitions, &c., were awarded as follows:—£15, divided between Katharine Sims (pianoforte), £10, and Lawrence A. Cane (organ), £5; £20 to Agnes L. Lewis (pianoforte); £10 to Rebecca B. Harvey (pianoforte); and £10 to Herbert C. Morris (organ). The pianoforte presented by Messrs. Brinsmead and Son was awarded to Maud Branwell (scholar), and the London Musical Society's Prize for singing, value £3 3s., to Albert H. Archdeacon (Liverpool scholar).

On the 5th ult. a Concert was given by the Misses Greenhill, at Collard's Rooms. Miss Christine Greenhill was successful in her pianoforte solos, as was also her sister, Miss Bessie, on the violin. Mr. Clement Hann took part in the concerted pieces, and was much applauded for his solos on the violoncello. The vocalists who assisted were Mdlle. Marie de Lido, Madame Marie Belval, Mr. Bantock Pierpoint, and the Polymnia Quartet, the last-named party of ladies giving special satisfaction. Mr. F. H. Hankins accompanied.

Benedict's Oratorio "St. Peter" was sung at St. Peter's Church, Brockley, on St. Peter's day, by the choir of the church, assisted by members of the St. Peter's Choral Society, under the direction of Dr. C. J. Frost, the Organist and Choirmaster, Mr. J. Curran accompanying on the organ. The solo parts were sung by Miss Crowden, Miss Maud Pawle, Mr. W. F. Sarjeant, and Mr. E. N. Davis. The work was very well rendered and reflected credit on all concerned.

On the 20th ult. a Concert, arranged by Mrs. Wilcox, of Kilburn Priory, was given at the Hampstead Conservatoire, on behalf of the Victoria Fund. Among the vocalists were Misses Aubrey, Alice Hill, and Messrs. Pope and Ley. Mr. Robert Carrodus delighted the audience with some violin solos, and also played a violin obbligato to one of Miss Aubrey's songs. Mr. Richards accompanied.

Messrs. Algernon and Frank Lindo gave a Concert at Steinway Hall on the 4th ult., assisted by Madame Lucille Saunders, Mr. Johannes Wolff, Miss Lilian Florence, Miss Daisy Defries, Mr. Charles Copland, and other artists. The principal number was a new cantata by Mr. A. Lindo, entitled "A Falling Star," a meritorious work which was well received.

Mr. Charles Santley was due in Cape Town on June 28, and when the mail left that day for England all the seats for his first two Concerts had been sold. The South African tour is being managed by Mr. Carlyle Smythe.

The Sunday Organ Recitals at the People's Palace, London, will be discontinued during the present month. They will be resumed on Sunday, September 3, when the usual two Recitals, afternoon and evening, will be given by Mr. B. Jackson, Organist of the People's Palace.

The Competition for the Charles Lucas Medal took place at the Royal Academy of Music on the 15th ult. The examiners were Messrs. E. Ford, Edward German, and G. Jacobi (Chairman). There were twelve candidates and the Medal was awarded to Hermann F. Löhr.

An interesting Concert was given at the Meistersingers' Concert Hall, on the 1st ult., by the Dutch violoncellist, Mr. Jan Mulder. Among the artists who assisted were Miss Otta Brony and Miss Agnes Bartlett.

The Livery dinner of the Musicians' Company is to take place on October 31, when the Silver Medal of the Guild will be presented by the Master to Miss Llewela Davies of the Royal Academy of Music.

REVIEWS.

The Beethoven Cramer. A selection of Studies by J. B. Cramer, with Comments by L. van Beethoven, and Preface, Translation, Explanatory Notes and Fingering by J. S. Shedlock, B.A. [London: Augener and Co.]

Few recent writers have done more to increase our knowledge of Beethoven quâ artist than Mr. Shedlock, as readers of The Musical Times have good reason to know. It was therefore fitting that he should be the first to give to the world these comments, the preservation of which we owe to the care of Beethoven's friend and pupil, Anton Schindler. "In the Berlin Royal Library," says Mr. Shedlock, in his preface, "there is a (Haslinger) copy of Cramer's Etudes, with comments, some signed 'Beethoven,' some with initials 'A. S.,' in the handwriting of Schindler. This copy, before it came into the possession of the Berlin Library, belonged to Schindler." From a passage in his "Biographie" it seems clear that Schindler had seen the comments in Beethoven's own handwriting, but whether he copied them or wrote them from memory is not known. The Studies treated by Beethoven are Nos. 1 to 9, 12, 13, 15, 16, 18, 21, 23, 24, 27, 29, 30, and 41, and Schindler tells us that he prepared them for his nephew to study from, and "that he considered the method of treating them indicated by him as the best preparation for his own works."

Beethoven was dissatisfied with all the pianoforte methods in use at that time, and once said to Dr. Breuning: "I had a mind to write a Pianoforte School myself, but I found no time." Had he ever carried out this intention we have Schindler's assurance that Cramer's Studies would have formed the most important part of the practical examples. "He regarded them as the chief basis of all genuine playing." The master, we need hardly say, has not been alone in holding this opinion—the greatest teachers have vied with each other in praising these Studies. Dr. von Bülow, who has issued a critical edition of fifty of them, speaks of their "priceless value" and "lasting importance," and Mr. Dannreuther remarks that Cramer "must be considered one of the fathers of the church of pianoforte playing, and worthy of consultation at all times." In view of Schindler's knowledge of the master's opinion, a question naturally suggests itself: "Why," it will be asked, "did he not publish these comments years ago?" His answer is given in an introductory passage which he has prefixed to the volume now in the Berlin Library, and deserves the most careful consideration:—

"Should the question arise why I did not make practical use of all these Studies, and in the interest of Beethoven's music publish them, let this serve as answer: That for the last thirty years the ruling tendency in pianoforte playing, which is alone concerned with technique, would have taken no note of an entirely opposite method. Another generation must come which will endeavour to grasp the spiritual meaning of instrumental music of every kind, and by that means only will a way be opened to the understanding of Beethoven's intentions. Musicians with strong powers of discrimination will understand this; for my part I can affirm that this way, nevertheless, is one of great difficulty. . . . If ever any one should deal with the copy of Cramer's Studies under notice, I would herewith issue the request that he carefully weigh the state of musical matters before making public this totally different way of treating pianoforte music. If published at the wrong time it will meet with the fate of neglect and be for ever lost."—Anton Schindler.

Reading the above and duly considering the injunction conveyed in its last lines, Mr. Shedlock carefully weighed the "state of musical matters" now prevailing, and concluded that these comments might safely be released from their long seclusion. For our own part, he think they should have been made public long ago—say in 1870, which witnessed the hundredth anniversary of Beethoven's birth. They are none the less welcome for coming late, however, especially as at no time has the music of the Bonn master found so many admirers, or been so earnestly studied as now. "In these days," says Mr. Shedlock, "no hint from the greatest of musicians helping us towards a proper understanding of his works will run any danger of being neglected." Now the most important "hint" conveyed by these comments is derived from the remarkable fact that Beethoven does not shrink from suggesting alterations in Cramer's text in order to obtain effects not actually indicated by the latter. It is plain that he regarded the notation as no more than a partial revelation of the composer's intention, for in his comments to Study 16 he says: "In some places I again mark a V—all nuances cannot be indicated: neither can they in other pieces." The master does not, of course, suggest alterations of the notes themselves, but of their force and duration, the results being a great accession of rhythmic and melodic life, and a general increase of polyphonic effect. To give one example of many. Cramer wrote—

In this, says Beethoven, "the first note of the first triplet and the third note of the second triplet must be connected together in the best possible manner so that the melody may stand out thus—

The finger, therefore, must remain on the long note."

It will be urged by some, no doubt, that sanction from so high a quarter of the licences indicated in these comments is not free from danger, and this, of course, is true. On the other hand, those who feel predisposed to take liberties with Beethoven's text in obedience to impulses of a momentary kind will learn from his treatment of Cramer's Studies what sort of "liberties" he would have sanctioned in the case of his own works. They will see that all his suggested emendations had their origin in a central idea and were directed to the same end. If they treat his works as reverently as he treated Cramer's and approach their task as well equipped as he, we shall not have much to fear from the "Beethoven Cramer."

The Parish Choir Book. Nos. 127—133.
[Novello, Ewer and Co.]

The first of the present instalment of this very useful series of church compositions consists of a setting of the Evening Canticles by Oliver King (Op. 82), based on orthodox lines, and not remarkable until the Gloria Patri, which commences with striking effect in D and passes through E minor to G, F, E major, A minor, and thence, by an effective chromatic progression, back to C, the key in which the Service is written. This Gloria is repeated in the Nunc dimittis. The next number is another setting of the Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D, by J. Christopher Marks, very spirited and effective regarded in a strictly musical sense, but careless, to say the least, in regard to the accent of the words. The stress is laid on the last syllable of the words "magnify," "Saviour," "handmaiden," and "blessed," and on the first syllable of the word "without." Mr. Marks shows such manifest evidence of ability that it is worth while to indicate these defects in order that he may avoid them in the future. No. 129 is a simpler setting of the Evening Canticles by A. Herbert Brewer. It is in the key of A and is remarkable for brightness and careful attention to matters of accent. Six Kyries by George Calkin, written in musicianly style and melodious, form the contents of No. 130. The next number is a setting of the Te Deum by E. Burritt Lane, written in ordinary four-part harmony, but very bold and effective, especially as regards transitions of key. In No. 132 we have yet another setting of the Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, by Charles Edwards. It was composed for the special Sunday Evening Choir at St. Paul's Cathedral and is of studied simplicity, but is not on that account ineffective, being smooth and flowing, the voice parts being to a large extent in unison. Far more elaborate is a setting of the Evening Canticles by Horatio Parker, which is the last on the present list. This Service is suitable for festival occasions, and contains many effective episodes, though it is written for full choir throughout.

The Orpheus (New series). Nos. 243-254.
[Novello, Ewer and Co.]

Although the popularity of the glee and the part-song for male voices is generally supposed to have declined since the early years of the present century, it must still be considerable, judging from the constant stream of new compositions. We will draw attention, briefly, to the leading characteristics of the dozen pieces above indicated, which are among the latest additions to a time-honoured series. No. 243, "Echoes," by Oliver King (Op. 54, No. 1), is a simple but elegant part-song of the German pattern, in two verses, the words being by Thomas Moore. The next, "May Morning," by Theodore Distin, is equally unpretentious, but rather more sentimental in character. Of greater length, though certainly not of greater difficulty, is "A Soldier's Song," words and music by Hamilton Clarke, a very lively and spirited composition, with a refrain in the style of a military march. Sung with energy, this piece would prove extremely effective. The same composer's "Midnight and Noon" (No. 246) is very slight, but it contains a striking transition from the key of B flat to G flat, and then back to B flat, pianissimo, at the conclusion of each verse. No. 247, "Go, happy rose," by F. Iliffe, is more elaborate than any of the foregoing, and is a very expressive setting of verses by Herrick. Another version of the same piece, but for mixed voices, is published in Novello's Part-Song Book, No. 645. No. 248, "The wintry winds are blowing," is a vigorous piece, suitable for the Christmas season, and should be borne in mind when conductors are seeking for novelties during the ensuing autumn. There is a spirited pianoforte accompaniment, but it may be dispensed with if required. The words of "The three jolly pigeons," by Harvey Löhr, are of course taken from "She stoops to conquer." The music, in 6-8 measure, is appropriately cheerful and simple, and a comic effect is produced by the voices answering one another at the nonsense words "To roddle, to roll." No. 250, "Where sunless rivers weep," by Charles N. Naylor, a setting of verses by Christina Rossetti, is a dirge, written in a suitably serious style and strikingly simple, though not wanting in expressiveness. Far more cheerful is "Come, my dear one," by J. Varley Roberts, a bright and tripping serenade, certain to please those who appreciate unsophisticated tune. No. 252, "A Lovers' Council," by F. H. Cowen, is a setting of some very sentimental lines, the music being entirely in the composer's usual refined and melodious style. No. 253, "The trysting tree," by George J. Bennett, is also quiet and expressive rather than vigorous. The words are taken, by permission, from "Foliorum Silvula." The same composer's "I love my Jean," which is the last of the present instalment, is a simple and appropriate setting of lines by Robert Burns, Dr. Bennett having judiciously refrained from adopting the somewhat hackneyed phraseology of Scottish music.

Loewe-Album. Ballads (Alb. B. Bach). Vol. III.
[Berlin: Schlesinger.]

In the preface to his interesting book "The Art Ballad," Mr. A. Bach indicated his intention to speak, sing, and write about Loewe, in order to rescue his ballads from the undeserved neglect into which they have fallen; and, since then, he has proved as good as his word. We have now before us, in the form of a third volume of ballads, the latest proof of his industry and zeal. Of the seven ballads contained in it, "Prince Eugen" is striking both as regards rhythm and harmonic colour; the composer has made use of a national song in 5-4 time. The setting of Goethe's "Wedding Song," which, as Mr. Bach justly remarks, "demands considerable technical ability, both in the vocalist and in the pianist," is full of character, and is, we are told, a special favourite among the composer's admirers. Of "Herod's Lament for Mariamne," in the mournful key of E flat minor, Mr. Bach has given a long analysis in his book. This is one of the composer's finest efforts, and it was a great favourite with Mendelssohn. Of Byron's Hebrew Melodies, his sister Fanny wrote: "I had to prevent his setting to music these poems of Byron, as Loewe's music to them is already sublime; and brother Felix has obeyed." All the ballads, in fact, seem to deserve notice, and of the three volumes issued by the Schlesinger firm we consider it the most interesting. In a valuable Introduction Mr. Bach ventures to break a lance with Wagner. The latter, in his "Essay on Actors and Singers," expresses the opinion that the Italian bel canto cannot be employed in connection with the German language. To this our author boldly replies that "a German vocalist who does not possess a finished bel canto will never be able to render with artistic effect the farewell to the Swan in 'Lohengrin,' or the love-song of Siegmund in the 'Walkyrie.'"

Bibliography of Wagner's Leit-Motives and Preludes.
[Waterlow Bros.]

This little pamphlet opens with a short history of the Leit-Motive, showing, at any rate, that Wagner did not invent it. A formidable list of motives used by Wagner in his various works is given. Some are reasonable enough—as, for instance, the "Curse" motive of the "Nibelungen" or the "Death Potion" motive of "Tristan"; but might not the enemy scoff at such names as the "Cooking" or the "Crawling" motive, or the "Intoxicated Gestures" theme? There are some "Commentaries" by the Chevalier Choreligio on "Lohengrin" and "Parsifal," showing their metaphysical and religious meanings; also a translation of Wagner's "keys" to his Preludes. Most of the comments are extremely interesting, but some—as, for instance, the remark that the "Lohengrin" Bridal Chorus, "with its telling and supremely happy orchestration, is more powerful than any sermon"—are more curious than edifying.

Albumblätter für Pianoforte. By Algernon Ashton. Op. 48. [Hamburg: Cranz.]

Drei Klavierstücke. By Algernon Ashton. Op. 53. [Berlin: Ries and Erler.]

Fünf Lieder für eine Singstimme. By Algernon Ashton. Op. 55. [Berlin: Simrock.]

Vier Lieder für eine Singstimme. By Algernon Ashton. Op. 59. [Berlin: Ries and Erler.]

Mr. Algernon Ashton's compositions show a marked tendency in the direction of the modern German school, of which Brahms is the greatest exemplar, and that is perhaps the principal reason why he has only obtained recognition as yet within a somewhat limited circle, notwithstanding his unquestionable ability. His album leaves are four in number, and are noteworthy for excellence of workmanship and musicianly expressiveness; but they have the air of transcriptions of orchestral pieces rather than compositions originally intended for the pianoforte. The Clavierstücke are of similar calibre, but on the whole more pleasing because more spontaneous. They are concert rather than drawing-room pieces, and are not within the means of elementary players. Both the collections of songs may be warmly commended to the notice of vocalists whose tastes soar above commonplace shop ballads. Mr. Ashton has evidently made the best German composers of Lieder his models, and there is not a single example that does not exhibit musicianly qualities, though in respect of melodic beauty they, of course, vary considerably. Part of the effects are gained by the accompaniments, which, on the whole, are not easy. The original German words by several writers embody a number of poetical conceits, and English versions are provided from the pen of Diana V. Ashton.

Wedding March, by William Creser. O Perfect Love; Anthem, by Joseph Barnby. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

These two compositions formed part of the musical portion of the Royal Wedding Service, the march being specially composed in commemoration of the auspicious event. Dr. Creser's piece is in the ordinary march form, the principal section being in C and the trio in F, the customary subdominant key. It is simple and dignified in character and thoroughly English, as befits such a national occasion. The anthem, which forms No. 380 of Novello's Octavo Anthems, and has been already noticed, is hymn-like, devotional, and expressive, being fully worthy of its distinguished composer. The original is in four-part harmony, but we have also before us an edition for voices in two parts, with staff and tonic sol-fa notation, and an arrangement as an ordinary Psalm tune.

FOREIGN NOTES.

It seems that the state of Dr. Hans von Bülow's health is still far from satisfactory, the lengthy and painful treatment which he has been undergoing for weeks past having as yet failed to effect the wished-for result. All admirers of the great, albeit eccentric, artist, chief of German conductors and most enthusiastic and sincere champion of all that is great and noble in music, will hope that he may soon be restored to perfect health.

A new four-act opera, "Narciss Rameau," by Julius Stern, has been accepted for performance at the Frankfort-on-Main Opera House.

Herr Otto Lohse, of the Riga Stadt-Theater, has been appointed to the post of First Conductor at the Hamburg Stadt-Theater, which is in many respects the foremost stage in Germany, more important novelties having been produced there in recent years for the first time than perhaps at any other similar Institution. Herr Lohse is a pupil of Professors Wüllner, Rieschbieter, and Grützmacher, and was formerly a violoncello player at the Dresden Opera.

Herr Felix Draeseke has just completed a new grand opera, "Bertrand de Born." The plot is founded on a well-known poem by Uhland, and the composer is his own librettist.

One of the prize operas in the late Gotha competition—viz., Paul Umlauft's "Evanthia"—enjoys the advantage of an excellent libretto, of which the composer is the author. Two noble Greek youths, Euthymios and Dimitrios, swear eternal friendship, and, in accordance with a Greek custom, their solemn vows are "consecrated" by a noble maiden, Evanthia. Both love Evanthia, who is related to Euthymios; the latter demands of Dimitrios, as a first proof of his friendship, that he ask Evanthia to become his, Euthymios's, wife. Dimitrios, who thinks his love for Evanthia hopeless, consents with a heavy heart. When he approaches the object of his and his friend's passion, she, who loves Dimitrios, concludes that he has come to confess his own love, and in her joyous excitement she pronounces the "yes" ere she becomes aware that it is Euthymios who, through his friend, asks for her hand. When she learns the terrible truth her pride forbids her to retract and declare her love, and the betrothal is duly celebrated. Evanthia and Dimitrios both steal away from the feast and accidentally meet. In a grandly conceived duet they declare their love and say a last farewell. Euthymios comes upon the scene and overhears them. In his passionate grief he prays to Heaven to show him a way out of the complication. He is interrupted by an old peasant, who announces that their enemies, the Turks, have invaded the country and are encamped close by. Euthymios quickly gathers a band of valiant youths, and himself volunteers to ascend a dangerous mountain path, from which he throws a firebrand into the enemy's camp. He thus enables his companions to attack and rout the Turks. While the women and maids are anxiously awaiting the issue, the youths return with shouts of victory, but their leader is brought in wounded to death. His last wish is for the union of Evanthia and Dimitrios. Such a plot should prove a welcome and wholesome change from the stories of conjugal infidelity, vice, and brutality to which the composers of the "new Italian" school are treating us ad nauseam. "Evanthia" has been accepted for performance at the Dresden Court Theatre, while Forster's "Die Rose von Pontevedra," which shared the prize with "Evanthia," will be given at the Royal Opera, Berlin. The latter Institution has also accepted a one-act opera by Victor Hansmann, on the subject of "Enoch Arden."

Apropos of the "Model" performances of operas at Gotha, of which Umlauft's work is to form one, it is interesting to read that upon its having been doubted whether the enterprise was anything but a commercial one, the "Gothaer General Anzeiger" announced officially that the total expenses will amount to at least 80,000 marks, while the receipts, even if the opera house is completely sold out at each performance, can only yield about 30,000 marks. From this it is evident that the object of the art-loving Grand Duke Ernest, in arranging these performances, was a thoroughly artistic and "ideal" one.

At a Symphony Concert at Düsseldorf a new symphonic poem for orchestra, by H. Willemsen, was lately produced. Its title is "On the St. Gothard," and it has a fantastic and somewhat far-fetched programme.

The Giacomo Meyerbeer and Michael Meyerbeer prizes for composers have not been awarded in Germany this year, none of the works submitted having satisfied the demands of the judges.

More "Bühnenfestspiele"! This time at Würzburg, where, between the 30th ult. and the 15th inst., seven performances of Cyrill Kistler's opera "Kunihild" will be given with specially invited artists, of which Frau Eichberger-Kreuziger, from Dresden, and Herr Julius Malten, from Mannheim, will play the parts of the heroine and hero respectively. Applications for seats are to be made to the Bureau der "Würzburger Bühnenfestspiele," Theater Café, Würzburg. Our readers will remember that we gave a detailed account of some previous performances of this opera in our April number. We hear that Mr. W. Ashton Ellis, the secretary of the London Wagner Society, has prepared an English translation of the text-book. A "Guide through the music," by Professor Hermann Ritter, has also made its appearance. What more can Herr Kistler desire?

The Boston (U.S.A.) Symphony Orchestra has at last found a new Conductor—viz., Herr Paur, of the Leipzig Stadt-Theater.

A new four-act opera, "Der Zigeuner" ("The Gipsy"), by Richard Stiebitz, was produced at the Berlin Royal Opera on June 21. It appears to be of the type of Nessler's insipid "Trumpeter."

"Herr Eugen" d'Albert seems to have some enthusiastic admirers at Helsingfors in Finland, no less than five important works from his pen having been performed there recently at various Concerts given by the local "Musikinstitut"—viz., his Suite for pianoforte (Op. 1), String Quartet (Op. 7), Pianoforte Sonata (Op. 10), Overture to Grillparzer's "Esther" (Op. 8), and the first Pianoforte Concerto (Op. 2).

The diaries of Otto Nicolai, the composer of the "Merry Wives of Windsor," have lately been published by Messrs. Breitkopf and Härtel; but if we may judge from a review of the volume in the Allgemeine Musikzeitung, the proprietor of which, Dr. Otto Lessmann, possesses the original manuscript, the editor, Frau or Fräulein B. Schröder, seems to have done her share of the work in a very unsatisfactory manner, Nicolai's "notes" having been Bowdlerised considerably. In spite of this drawback and many inaccuracies, the book is said to be a very enjoyable one.

Max Hesse's "Deutscher Musiker Kalender" for 1893 will contain an interesting feature which the editor seems to have borrowed from a certain champion of the English "new journalism"—viz., a number of biographies, with portraits of well-known musicians, and their replies to a general question: "What do you think of the Future of Music?" Dr. Hugo Riemann, most admirable of musical-lexicographers, will contribute a review of the German Concert season.

At the recent concours at the Brussels Conservatoire, Miss Mabel Chaplin was awarded a first prize.

At the Berlin Royal Opera Fräulein Huhn, from the Cologne Stadt-Theater, has lately been singing as Gast, and has been hailed by some critics as a likely successor to that incomparable artist, Frau Rosa Sucher, whose Isolde, Brünnhilde, Kundry, &c., it is hoped Fräulein Huhn will ere very long equal. "So mote it be!"

A new opera by Hans Huber, entitled "Weltfrühling" (The World's Spring), will shortly be produced at Basle.

At the same place the nineteenth Swiss Sängerfest took place on the 8th, 9th, 10th, and 11th ult. Six thousand singers, belonging to some eighty choral societies, took part.

At Bologna, the Wagnerian stronghold of Italy, a new musical paper has just been founded by the local Wagner Society. It is called Cronica Wagneriana, and its editor is Signor Giulio Padorani, a gentleman of considerable literary fame in his country.

Smetana's opera "Die verkaufte Braut" was given at Berlin for the first time on the 1st ult. with great success, although the performance was not a good one. The wonderful freshness, brilliancy, and humour of the music delighted the Berliners, who encored a large number of pieces, of which an exquisite Sextet in the third act proved a perfect gem. Here is an opportunity for an enterprising English impressario to secure a genuine "national" opera of the most fascinating type. The work has been accepted for performance at the Berlin Royal Opera. It may not be out of place to remark, en passant, that the accent on "Smetana" should be on the first syllable; the word is the Bohemian for "Cream."

The rehearsals for "Lohengrin," which is to be performed at Bayreuth in the summer of 1894, have already begun at the little Franconian Mecca. About twenty-five artists are spending their well-earned holidays there to learn afresh an opera which every one of them, no doubt, has known for years. It may be safely assumed that the performances of this wonderful work at Bayreuth will be as great a revelation, even to the most blasé Wagnerians, as those of the incommensurable "Meistersinger" were in 1888.

Bach's "Trauerode," which was some months ago produced by the London Bach Choir, was recently performed in Paris, at a Concert given by M. A. Guilmant.

The Paris Grand Opéra has at last its new set of Conductors. M. Colonne having retired after conducting the eighteenth performance of "Die Walküre," M. Taffanel, the famous flautist, made his début as first Conductor at the nineteenth performance of the same work, of which he secured a very fine rendering. M. Madier de Montjau, Conductor of the Conservatoire Concerts, has been appointed second and M. Paul Viardot, a well-known violinist, third Conductor. The first work conducted by M. Viardot was M. Saint-Saëns's "Samson et Dalila," the score of which is dedicated to his mother, Madame Viardot, the celebrated singer.

The orchestra of the La Scala Opera, Milan, is being increased to 110 performers, who will shortly start on a four months' tour through America, where a number of Concerts will be given. Their object, apart from whatever attractions the "almighty dollar" may exercise, is to make Italian art better known in the States. Signor Vanza will be the Conductor. It is said that the choir of the Sistine Chapel, Rome, conducted by Maëstro Mustafa, will also travel to Chicago, to give Concerts of sacred music.

Ignaz Brüll's new opera "Schach dem König" will be performed, for the first time on any stage, at the Munich Court Theatre.

At the Paris Opéra Comique two old operas, dating from 1770 and 1769 respectively, have lately been revived—viz., Grétry's "Les deux avares," and "Le Déserteur," by Monsigny. The performances, especially that of the latter, seem to have left a good deal to desire, in spite of which the music made a considerable impression. Next season it is intended to produce Jean Jacques Rousseau's naïve "Devin du village," which was first produced in 1752, and, by its very simplicity, became epoch-making. "Voilà qui sera piquant, vraiment," as Le Ménestrel rightly observes.

The municipality of Pamplona, in Spain, have placed a large marble tablet on the walls of Nos. 19 and 21, St. Nicholas Street, in their town. It bears the inscription: "In this house Pablo Sarasate y Navascues was born on March 10, 1844." It is, perhaps, an unprecedented distinction for a musician to be thus honoured during his lifetime.

A Brazilian composer, M. Azzis Pachero, has written an opera entitled "Moema," which was recently produced at Rio de Janeiro with success.

Gluck's "Armide" is to be performed at the Paris Grand Opéra next season, and a proposal to ask M. Saint-Saëns to write additional accompaniments, to make it suitable for the immense theatre, is being discussed with considerable warmth in our French contemporaries, there being those who rightly think that Gluck stands in no need of such treatment. It will, however, be necessary, at any rate, to transpose some of the music to the modern high pitch to enable the singers to do justice to their parts.

The renowned prima donna of the Dresden Court Theatre, Fräulein Therese Malten, has recently celebrated the twentieth anniversary of her first appearance on the stage. With characteristic delicacy, the lady, whose Elisabeth, Isolde, Brünnhilde, Kundry, &c., have become famous throughout the musical world, chose to appear on this auspicious occasion in a new work by a young composer—viz., the "Hochzeitmorgen," by Karl von Kaskel.

The Vienna Männergesangverein, perhaps the finest male-voice choir in the world, will celebrate this month the fiftieth anniversary of its foundation. Brahms, Rubinstein, Bruckner, and Goldmark are said to be writing special works for the occasion, all, of course, for male voices. Very likely this will be the first time that Brahms has ever written a work "to order."

On the 1st ult. the cantatas (six in number) composed by the candidates for the much-coveted Prix de Rome were performed at the Paris Académie des Beaux-Arts. The result of the competition was as follows:—Premier Grand Prix, M. Bloch, pupil of MM. Guiraud and Massenet; Second Premier Grand Prix (held over from last year), M. Büsser, pupil of M. Guiraud; Premier Second Grand Prix, M. Levadé, pupil of M. Massenet.

A monument to the Swiss composer, Louis Niedermeyer, was unveiled last month at Nyon, Lake of Geneva, where he was born in 1802. It is the gift of his son, Baron de Niedermeyer.

At the Paris Grand Opéra the new disposition of the orchestra (the conductor in the midst of the players, and the violoncelli and bassi nearest the stage), which had been first tried at the performances of "Lohengrin," and lately again at those of "Die Walküre," has proved so satisfactory that it has been definitely adopted for all future operatic performances.

Mdlle. Simonnet, whose delightful impersonation of Angélique in Bruneau's remarkable opera "Le Rêve" will be remembered by all who had the good fortune to see it at Covent Garden two years ago, has left the Paris Opéra Comique.

Dr. A. C. Mackenzie's lectures on Verdi's "Falstaff" have been translated into Italian by Signor P. Mazzoni, and are being published in full by our contemporary the Gazzetta musicale di Milano.

Even the little island of Heligoland has recently celebrated a musical jubilee—viz., on the 19th ult., the centenary of the foundation of its Theatre.

It is announced that a series of Passion Plays, on the lines of those of Oberammergau, will be given at a village called Hoeritz, in Bohemia. A theatre to accommodate 1,500 spectators has been specially built for these performances, which will take place every ten years.

During the year 1892 there were published in Germany no less than 9,753 musical works, of which 2,885 were for the pianoforte, 2,577 for other instruments, 3,966 for the voice, and 325 treatises, pamphlets, &c., on musical subjects.

A new musical paper is about to be published at Munich under the title of Allgemeine Künst-Chronik. The editors are Herren A. Roesser and H. Moltan.

An Italian composer, Signor Ercolani, has written an opera entitled "The Son of Turridu," which is to form a kind of epilogue to Mascagni's "Cavalleria," of which latter work Papa Turridu is, of course, the hero (save the mark!)

Another countryman of the author of "the only Intermezzo," Signor Villafiorita, has boldly set to work to compose another "William Ratcliff," notwithstanding the fact that Mascagni finished his setting of Heine's play some time since.

One of the operas sent in for the late Gotha Prize Competition bears the title of "Ein Traumgebilde" (A dream fancy), and one of its chief numbers is a trio sung by Mozart, Beethoven, and Wagner. Delicious idea!

The "Liedertafel," at Jena, celebrated on the 1st and 2nd ult. the fiftieth anniversary of its foundation.

The French Académie des Beaux-Arts has awarded the Chartrier Prize for chamber music to M. Gabriel Faure.

On the 15th, 16th, and 17th ult. the Thuringian Sängerbund Festival took place at Erfurt. Some 2,000 singers took part. Mendelssohn's "Festgesang an die Künstler" and Brambach's "Germanischer Siegesgesang" were sung inter alia.

We read in a foreign contemporary that the director of the Regio Theatre, at Turin, has suppressed the number "13" in the stalls, because he found it very difficult to dispose of a seat bearing that unlucky figure. The seat is now called No. 12*bis*, which latter, it is hoped, will bring no ill-luck to even the most superstitious. Se non è vero, è ben trovato!

A prize was lately offered at Turin for the best Folk-song; it was gained by a young Piedmontese, G. Tavernier, who is studying music at Dresden under Herr Ed. Kretschmer.

The funeral of the late Franz Erkel, whose death we announced in our last number, was made the occasion of a great popular demonstration of the esteem in which the greatest of Hungarian musicians was held. Thousands of his countrymen followed the hearse from the Pesth Opera House, in the hall of which the body had been lying in state, while the bands played a fine Funeral March from his opera "Hunyady László."

CORRESPONDENCE.

MUSIC IN A FRENCH CATHEDRAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

Sir,—Will you allow me to remark upon one matter in the article of your correspondent on music in a French Cathedral. Being a lover of Plainsong I most fully appreciate all he says in favour of the old Church Music. But I note this observation:—"Our English Cathedrals are not, and cannot be, on a par with Reims while we lack the grand old hymns which have come down through the centuries," &c. (to the end of the paragraph). I would ask, is this strictly correct? Truly, in one sense, our Cathedrals lack the grand old hymns, not because we have lost them, but because an anthem is always sung in the place of the Office Hymn, and if a hymn should be sung in the daily office it is very doubtful if the right hymn would be sung, and still more doubtful that it would be sung to the Plainsong. There are probably few Precentors who know what is the Office Hymn, or where to find it.

But so far from the hymns being lost, they are printed, both words and music, in the Hymnal Noted, and in the edition of the Hymnal Noted with the Appendix, as published by Messrs. Masters, there is a Table giving the daily office hymn throughout the year. The music of the Hymnal Noted published by Messrs. Novello is taken from the Sarum and Roman books for the most part. I would not say that your correspondent will find in the Hymnal Noted the exact music, note for note, he heard at Reims, because the French Plainsong varies a great deal from the stricter form of the Mechlin and Ratisbon books, and also French Plainsong is not regarded either in the chants or hymns to be as pure as that found in the Sarum Hymnal or in the present Roman. If one examines a French Breviary one sees how very different the many endings of the Tones are from the Sarum and Roman. Then, again, at the French Cathedrals and great Collegiate Churches there is a traditional way of singing the Plainsong, notably so at Paris and Rouen. This traditional way, especially as to the harmony, is, I believe, not in print, and the authorities will not allow copies to be made. I truly feel with your correspondent and say that his remark, "No wonder that hymns, with endless variety of treatment, and with an indescribable charm of unworldly beauty, thrill the soul of the listener and haunt his memory after he has left the church," is one of the strongest arguments in favour of Plainsong. I think I may say safely he would not have so spoken after having heard the tune "Melcombe" (that much abused tune) raced through in what is known as a "hearty way" of singing, and the Psalms and Canticles gabbled to Anglican Chants. I have never yet found the "indescribable charm of unworldly beauty" either in a double or a single Anglican Chant; it may be pretty, but ——

I conclude that by the "endless variety of treatment," your correspondent is alluding, among others, to the faux bourdon method of singing the alternate verses of the Office Hymn and the Magnificat, and to the first of the Vesper Psalms as sometimes treated in the same way. Then again in the Magnificat one verse will be chanted by a bass voice, with the alternate verse by the full choir in harmony or faux bourdon. But that solemn and devotional way of rendering the sacred office cannot be done without knowledge and without the spirit, and the spirit of Plainsong is lost in our Cathedrals, for it has long since fled. The utmost that is attempted is the occasional chanting of the Psalms to a mangled tone, and perhaps to Anglican pointing.

I know much is being done to make the Plainsong acceptable (I wish with all my heart it were), but at present I fear the spirit and devotion of the music are wanting, and it is just its "unworldliness" which is not pleasing to the world.

H. A. W.

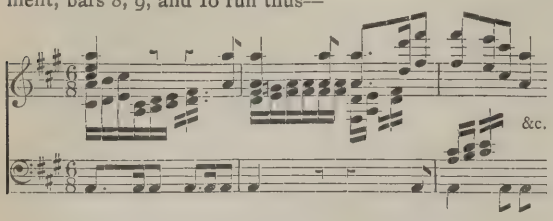
Ipswich, July 10, 1893.

BEETHOVEN'S BLUNDERS (?)

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

Sir,—Mr. Joseph Bennett, writing in the Daily Telegraph of the 22nd ult., states that Mr. Silas has communicated to him the discovery of an error in the score of Beethoven's Seventh Symphony. The "discovery" in question is, of course, nothing new; but the matter is one worthy of more than passing consideration, and in the present saison morte perhaps idle musicians will not object to read a few words concerning it.

The error (if error it be) takes the following form. In the principal subject of the first movement (the Vivace), when this is repeated in tutti with semiquaver accompaniment, bars 8, 9, and 10 run thus—



The harmony in bar 8 changes to $\frac{6}{4}$ half-a-bar sooner than is required by the melody, and this peculiar effect occurs on every occasion. But once in the "recapitulation" it seems as if the composer had forgotten his quaint device, for the harmony in the strings changes half-a-bar later than that on the wind, thus—

Now, it will appear obvious to any good practical musician that we have here one of those oversights which might happen to any composer, and the few who notice the discord (it is so transient as to be less ill-sounding than it looks) would be inclined to remedy it; not, as Mr. Silas suggests, by altering the wind parts, but by making the harmony of the strings change at the half-bar as before. Yet he would be a rash man who would affirm that this seeming slip is really a mistake on the composer's part, for there are numerous instances of the same kind of thing in his works. Two famous ones we know to be deliberate; these are the clashing "Lebewohls" in the Coda of the first movement of the Pianoforte Sonata (Op. 81), as—and the comical "false entry" of the horn in the "Eroica" Symphony too well known to quote. But in the Ninth Symphony are no less than three cases in which different chords have been written simultaneously. The first edition of this work teemed with errors of all kinds, as Beethoven was too ill to correct the proofs, but though most of these were corrected later, there are still several which perplex the student to this day. For instance, in the middle of the first movement occurs the following passage—

Bülow used to alter the oboe notes at * from $\frac{G}{E\flat}$ to $\frac{A\flat}{F}$. Liszt used to alter the second violin and viola the reverse way. Either is good, but in England this and the other passages I speak of remain untouched. The second case is the tutti of the second Presto in the last movement. In the first Presto the opening chord is—a tolerable crushing discord, but in the second Beethoven gives this $\frac{7}{3}$ chord to the brass, and writes—absolutely on the top of it—a dominant minor ninth chord for the rest of the orchestra, so that we get C sharp, D, E, and F, all adjacent notes, sounded together—

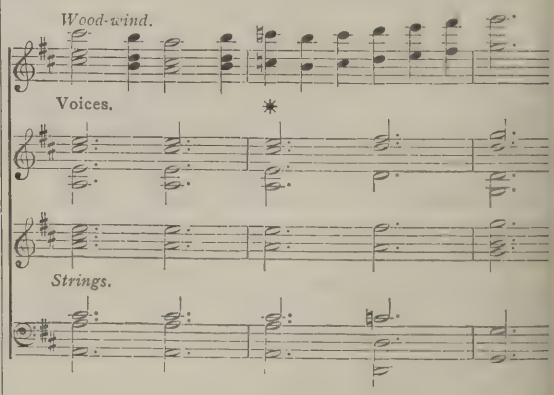
For my own part, I believe—seeing that there are two other errors (?) of a like nature in the same work—that this was a genuine mistake, the horn notes not immediately appealing to the eye; but most musicians maintain that Beethoven intended it. In any case, the ear fails to hear more than a crash, which is quickly past.

The third instance is indeed a crux, being hard to alter satisfactorily. In the last bars of the 6-4 movement we have—



To alter the wind to C sharp, or the alto voice part to C natural, is alike unsatisfactory. I do not know whether any conductor in this country is aware of these and some thirty other minor blemishes in the Choral Symphony, but, as far as I am aware, they remain untouched to this day. This is how we show respect for the composer's intention in artistic England.

At first sight it may seem very foolish to leave such glaring mistakes uncorrected, but the doubt forces itself upon us whether they were intentional or not. Judging by analogy I believe that some of them were intentional, but that, could the composer have heard them with the outer ear, he would have altered not only these but many other hard-sounding passages. To touch the least note that Beethoven has written is rightly regarded as sacrilege, but in such a dilemma the best way for the wise conductor is to alter the passage upon his own responsibility and say nothing about it. The most perplexing thing to me is how little bad all these places sound.—Faithfully yours,

F. Corder.

BACH'S FUGUE IN C SHARP MINOR.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

Sir,—A recent study of this wonderful fugue led me to the discovery of a hitherto unnoticed entry of the subject. In bars 104-5-6 all editions have the following reading:—

No. 1.

The perfection of the work indicates clearly that the omission of the subject in the third voice is the result of careless copying or a printer's mistake. It should be rectified by changing about the second and third voices. The third voice should exhibit the principal theme, which is missing at present, and should read thus:—

No. 2.

I call the attention of Bach connoisseurs to this, and invite expressions of their opinion and criticism.

I would add that this error, which occurs in the present edition of my "Eight Fugues from Bach's Well-tempered Clavier, with Analytical Exposition in Colours and appended Harmonic Schemes," will be rectified in the new revised edition, as the original meaning and perfection of the master's fugue surely demands.

B. Boekelman.

CONGREGATIONAL SINGING.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

Sir,—Following the letter which appeared in your issue of last month on this subject, I cannot refrain from sending you an account of my own recent experiences, with the hope that you may find space for its insertion in your valuable columns.

It was only a few Sundays ago that I entered a church in the neighbourhood of Piccadilly. Let it be nameless. It was the evening service, and the dim religious light which fell around and the solemnity of the service would have impressed me deeply, but for an individual possessing a voice which might have been tenor, baritone, or bass, or the three mingled into one. Whatever it was, the effect was most distracting. There he knelt on a high footstool in his pew at the end of the church, sometimes singing the melody, and sometimes breaking into harmony, as best suited his taste. No response, amen, or any part of the service in which he could join was missed. Often he would start off before the choir in his loudest tones, and finish after their refined notes had died away; and all this time he was kneeling with his eyes tightly closed, and making, as is common with uneducated singers, hideous grimaces painful to witness, perfectly oblivious of all the lovely surroundings, and careless of the comfort of so many silent worshippers. I remained in the church for half-an-hour, and then hurriedly took my leave, feeling that the noise and din of the traffic in Piccadilly were far more musical to my ears than the grating sound of that would-be worshipper's sonorous tones. And this, I am sorry to say, is not an isolated case. Go to St. Paul's Cathedral, Westminster Abbey, and almost any other place of worship, and you will come into contact with these thoughtless people, who consider no one but themselves, often taking part even in the anthems, and disturbing the peace and solemnity which one seeks for in our churches, to say nothing of the discord which is caused. Though a professional singer myself and a choirmaster, I never take part in the singing should I happen to be amongst the congregation. I may be wrong, but to me listening to trained singers in a church is more likely to inspire one with holy thoughts than if we mingled our, perhaps, inharmonious voices with those of the choir. We have almost if not quite got rid of the old-fashioned clerk who used to start the singing, but shall we ever be able to silence such individuals as I have referred to?

I am, Sir, yours obediently,

Clifford Constable.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 Notices of concerts, and other information supplied by our friends in the country, must be forwarded as early as possible after the occurrence; otherwise they cannot be inserted. Our correspondents must specifically denote the date of each concert, for without such date no notice can be taken of the performance.

Our correspondents will oblige by writing all names as clearly as possible, as we cannot be responsible for any mistakes that may occur.

Correspondents are informed that their names and addresses must accompany all communications.

We cannot undertake to return offered contributions; the authors, therefore, will do well to retain copies.

Notice is sent to all subscribers whose payment (in advance) is exhausted. The paper will be discontinued where the Subscription is not renewed. We again remind those who are disappointed in obtaining back numbers that, although the music is always kept in stock, only a sufficient quantity of the rest of the paper is printed to supply the current sale.

Priest, Choirmaster.—R. Mann's "Manual of Singing, for the use of Choir Trainers and Schoolmasters (with additions by Sir John Stainer)," 1s., and Dr. Martin's Primer on "The Art of Training Choir Boys," 3s., both published by Novello, will answer all your requirements.

A. Smith (Homerton).—We know of no such volume, but suggest that you apply to some of the large booksellers—Bumpus, for instance, or Mudie.

A. R. Swaine.—In "Boyce's Cathedral Music" the melody is given as in your second version, but the harmony is different.

W. G.—Cherubini's Requiem Mass is sung throughout by the choir.

BRIEF SUMMARY OF COUNTRY NEWS.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for any opinions expressed in this summary, as all the notices are either collated from the local papers or supplied to us by correspondents.

Aberdeen.—In the Associated Board of the Royal Academy of Music and of the Royal College of Music Local School Examinations sixteen candidates were successful from the Music School. Twelve of these passed in pianoforte playing, three in harmony, and one in singing.

Bedford.—On the 11th ult. the restored and enlarged organ, by Messrs. Norman Bros. and Beard, of Norwich, was re-opened in St. Paul's Church. An immense congregation assembled to hear Mr. W. S. Hoyte's Recital, which included pieces by Mozart, Merkel, Bach, Guilmant, Hesse, Silas, and Mailly.——The following evening a Recital was given by Dr. Harding, the Organist of the Church, whose selection included works by Handel, Hoyte, Beethoven, Guilmant, Bach, Merkel, Paderewski, Mendelssohn, and Grieg.

Bishopstoke.—Mr. Seymour Powell, Organist of Ventnor, I.W., gave an Organ Recital in the Parish Church on the 14th ult. The following was the programme: March in G (Smart), Barcarolle from the Fourth Concerto (Sterndale Bennett), Fugue in B minor (J. S. Bach), Aria, "O rest in the Lord" (Mendelssohn), Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin (Wagner), Andante from Symphony in C (Beethoven), Andante in A minor (Batiste), Hallelujah Chorus (Handel).

Bournemouth.—Mr. Duncan Hume, the Organist of St. Peter's Church, presided at the opening, on Saturday, the 22nd ult., of the new organ erected in the Winter Gardens by Messrs. Norman Bros. and Beard, of Norwich. It is a two-manual instrument, containing twenty-seven speaking stops (including four on the pedal organ), five couplers, and the usual composition pedals.

Brecon.—A Festival of Church Choirs was held at St. John's (Priory) Church on the 5th ult. The choirs that took part were: Llanfrynach, Cwmdu, Llangunider, Llanveigan, St. John's and St. Mary's, Penderyn, Llanstephan, Builth, St. Peter's and All Saints' (Glasbury), Llanilltyd, Cantreff, and Llanfihangel-Talyllyn numbering close on 350. These were led by Mr. R. Meyrick-Roberts, Organist and Choirmaster of St. Mary's, whilst Mr. R. T. Heins, Organist and Choirmaster of St. John's Church, presided at the organ. An orchestra of about forty also lent assistance. The anthem was Goss's "Praise the Lord, O my soul." In the afternoon an Organ Recital was given by Mr. R Meyrick-Roberts in St. John's Church, works by Bach, Handel, Schumann, Cesar Franck, and others being performed with great taste and skill.

Cape Town.—Signor Foli gave two Concerts on June 22 and 24 before crowded and enthusiastic audiences. On the second occasion he sang no less than nine times. Mr. T. Barrow Dowling accompanied Signor Foli throughout both Concerts with his usual care and finish. The rest of both programmes was supplied by excellent local talent. Signor Foli will remain two or more months in Africa.

Chigwell.—On the 5th ult. Mr. Henry Riding gave a very successful Organ Recital in the Parish Church. The programme included well varied pieces skilfully played by Mr. Riding, vocal selections by the Rev. H. de Vere Welchman, Messrs. Herbert Clinch, H. F. Chamen, E. D. Jordan, and Arkwright, and a violoncello solo by Mr. Rowland Hill.

Clifton, Derbyshire.—The second annual Church Festival took place on June 30, when Parts I. and II. of Handel's Messiah were sung as the Anthem. There was a chorus of over fifty voices, the Church Choir being supplemented by the Clifton Choral Society and the Shirley Church Choir, and a band of about twenty strings, with trumpets and drums, under the leadership of Mr. J. G. Grimshaw. The bass solos were in the very efficient hands of Mr. J. H. England. The choruses were sung with a crispness and precision of attack and finish which spoke of earnest study and teaching. Mr. W. H. Tutt conducted with his usual care, and Mr. Windeyer Clark was a most efficient Organist.

Devizes.—On Wednesday, the 19th ult., a Choral Festival took place in St. Peter's Church, in which several choirs of the neighbourhood took part. The music, with the exception of Dr. Warwick Jordan's "Fear not, O land," was chiefly Gregorian, the Magnificat being sung to the first tone (Milan use) arranged with vocal harmonies to the alternate verses, and the Nunc dimittis to a setting from the Rev. Thomas Helmore's "Canticles Noted." The Service was accompanied by a small orchestra, led by Mr. A. Foley, and the organ, at which Mr. Baker presided. Handel's "Occasional" Overture and Mendelssohn's "War March" (from Athalie) were played as voluntaries.

Folkestone.—On Sunday, the 2nd ult., at the Parish Church, the centenary was celebrated of the "Sunday Afternoons for the People," inaugurated in 1884 by the Rev. E. Husband, who has delivered an address and given an Organ Recital at each of them from their commencement. A new hymn, "Fight the good fight," specially composed by him for the occasion, was sung by the boys; a full orchestra played an Overture by Schubert, and other pieces, and joined the choir in the Hallelujah chorus from The Messiah.

Hornsea.—A most successful Concert on behalf of the Victoria Relief Fund was given by Miss Jennie Langford, on the 10th ult. The other performers were Mrs. Charles Wells, Miss A. B. Hall Sissons, Miss Ruth Wells, Mr. Russell, Mr. Munroe (Beverley Minster), Mr. J. R. Henson, Mr. E. Manston, Mr. A. G. Egginton, and Mr. T. G. Buffey. Miss Langford, whose efforts were enthusiastically received, was warmly congratulated on the entire success of her undertaking. Mr. G. H. Smith conducted.

Manchester.—The first annual Dinner and Conference of the Northern Members of the College of Organists was held at the Albion Hotel on Saturday, June 24, when Dr. Henry Hiles presided. After the dinner the present position of the provincial members was discussed, and resolutions were passed as regards placing them on a more equal footing with the London members. Votes of thanks were given to Dr. Hiles for presiding and to Mr. J. E. Adkins for having brought about the meeting, which it is intended should be an annual one.

Moffat.—On the 8th ult. the third annual demonstration of the Choir Union formed in connection with the Established Churches over Dumfriesshire was held in the Established Church, Moffat. Altogether fourteen choirs were represented: Closeburn, Cummertrees, Dalbeattie, Dornoch, Dryfesdale, Greenknowe (Annan), Kirkpatrick-Fleming, Morton (Thornhill), Moffat, Ruthwell, Sanquhar, Urr, Wanlockhead, and St. Michael's, Dumfries. The voices numbered nearly 300, and the orchestra consisted of eleven strings, two cornets, and two American organs. Mr. James Salmond, Organist of the Moffat Church, and Mr. Bushill, of the Morton Church, Thornhill, presided at the organs. The Conductor of the choir was Mr. Henry Graves, Organist of St. Michael's, Dumfries, who has been the leading spirit in the Choir Union movement, and who is to be congratulated on the successful nature of the proceedings. In the course of his sermon the Rev. Dr. Gray, of Liberton, pleaded eloquently for the use of instrumental music in church.

Nelson.—On the 8th ult. the new organ in Salem Chapel was opened by Dr. Peace, of Glasgow, who gave fine interpretations of several pieces. Vocal solos were contributed by Miss Marjorie Eaton, who was in high favour with the audience throughout the evening; Mr. Charles Siebert also sang two solos. The Services were continued on the 9th ult., when Miss Eaton sang solos at the Morning and Evening Services. In the afternoon a sacred Concert was given by Miss Eaton, Dr. Peace, and Mr. Siebert.

Newcastle-on-Tyne.—On the 2nd ult. Mr. Dodds's Choir gave an excellent performance of Farmer's Christ and His Soldiers and Mendelssohn's Hear my Prayer, in Elswick Road Wesleyan Church, the soloists being Misses Bradford, Thompson, and Moffitt, and Messrs. Brabant and Raine. On the following evening the same Choir gave Handel's Oratorio Samson before a large audience, the solo parts being excellently sung by Misses Robinson and Edwards, members of the Choir, and Messrs. Macdonald and Nutton, of Durham Cathedral Choir. The choruses went well and many of the best known numbers were loudly encored. Mr. George Dodds, Junr., was at the organ, and his playing contributed greatly to the success of the performance. Mr. George Dodds, Senr., conducted with marked ability.

Port Elizabeth.—The inaugural Festival of the grand Municipal organ, built by Messrs. Norman Bros. and Beard, in the Market Hall, took place on June 15. Upwards of 2,000 people were present. Mr. Frank Bradley presided at the organ, and was assisted by a chorus of 200 voices. The Mayor and Corporation were present in their robes of office.

Windsor.—On the 15th ult. there was a gathering of Church Choirs from the vicinity of Epping Forest, who, to the number of 300 singers, held a Festival Service in St. George's Chapel and listened to a sermon from the Lord Bishop of St. Albans. The special music was under the direction of Mr. J. W. Ullyett (Mr. Henry Riding at the organ), and included a new setting of the Evening Canticles by Mr. Walter Clinch, Wesley's Anthem "Blessed be the God and Father," and Berthold Tours's Te Deum in F.

Organ Appointments.—Mr. William Lee, Organist and Choirmaster to the Church of St. John the Evangelist, Bournemouth.—Mr. C. T. Gauntlett, Organist and Choirmaster to the Parish Church, Aldeburgh-on-Sea.—Mr. Cuthbert L. Hawley, Organist and Choirmaster to St. John's, Upper St. Leonards-on-Sea.—Mr. William C. Brodie, to All Saints' Church, Cockermouth.—Mr. Charles E. Metcalfe, Organist and Choirmaster to Langholm (Dumfries) Parish Church.

Choir Appointments.—Mr. Frederick Halford Elam (Alto), to York Minster.—Mr. George Stubbs (Bass), to St. Paul's Cathedral.—Mr. G. Beaumont Green (Alto), to St. George's Parish Church, St. George's, East.—Mr. A. F. Sterne (Assistant Vicar-Choral), to St. Paul's Cathedral.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO, EWER & CO.

CRESER, WILLIAM.—Wedding March. Arranged for Military Band by Dan Godfrey, Jun. 3s. 6d.

MACKENZIE, A. C.—Benedictus. From Six Pieces for Violin and Pianoforte. Arranged for Military Band by Dan Godfrey, Jun. 5s.

WARRINER, JOHN.—Transposition (Keyboard and Orchestral). (No. 38. Novello, Ewer and Co's. Music Primers, Edited by Sir John Stainer.) Paper cover, 2s.; paper boards, 2s. 6d.

LAHEE, HENRY.—"Ring out, wild bells." Trio. For Female Voices. The words written by Alfred, Lord Tennyson. Full Score, 2s.; Orchestral Parts, 2s.

GROSSHEIM, H.—Six Easy Pieces. For Violin and Pianoforte. Op. 24. Paper cover, 2s. 6d.

POZNANSKI, I. B.—Ten Sketches. For Violin and Pianoforte. Paper cover, 3s. 6d. (For Contents, see Advertisement, page 455.)

DOLMETSCH, ARNOLD.—Suite of Four Pieces. (No. 1. Novello, Ewer and Co.'s Albums for Pianoforte and Stringed Instruments.) Paper cover, 2s. 6d.

PURCELL, HENRY.—Suite of Five Pieces. The Pianoforte Accompaniment, Marks of Expression, Bowing, and Fingering by Arnold Dolmetsch. (No. 2. Novello, Ewer and Co.'s Albums for Pianoforte and Stringed Instruments.) Paper cover, 2s. 6d.

BENDALL, WILFRED.—"The Lady of Shalott." A Cantata for Female Voices. Words only, 7s. 6d. per 100.

WESTLAKE, FREDERICK.—Mass of the Holy Name. For Chorus, with Organ Accompaniment. Paper cover, 3s.

ELGAR, EDWARD.—"The Black Knight" ("Der Schwarze Ritter"). Cantata. 1st Violin, 2s.; 2nd Violin, 2s.; Viola, 2s.; Violoncello and Bass, 3s.

PEARSON, W. W.—Songs for the little ones in the Infant School and Nursery. With Accompaniment for Pianoforte or Harmonium. Paper cover, 1s.; Tonic Sol-fa, 6d.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW. No. 14. "O perfect love." Anthem. By Sir J. Barnby. Specially arranged as Two-part Chorus for Schools. Exercises in Time and Tune Combined. By W. G. McNaught. Price 1½d.

ADLAM, FRANK.—(in E flat). Missa de Sanctis (The Office of Holy Communion). 1s.; separately, Benedictus and Agnus Dei, 3d.; Ave Verum, 3d.

BOSVILLE, A. W. M.—(in D). Magnificat and Nunc dimittis. 2d.

BROUGH, ALFRED J.—Benedicite, omnia Opera. 1½d.

CRUICKSHANK, W. A. C.—(in B flat). Magnificat and Nunc dimittis. Set to Irregular Chants. (No. 138. Novello's Parish Choir Book.) 3d.

JOHNSON, J. T.—(in E flat). Jubilate Deo. Composed for the Oakham School Speech-Day Service, 1893. 4d.

LUCAS, P. TOTTENHAM—(in A). Te Deum laudamus. 2d.

MILLER, C. E.—(in E flat). Te Deum laudamus. For Four Voices and Organ. 6d.

STAINER, J.—(in G). Te Deum laudamus (Congregational). (No. 136. Novello's Parish Choir Book.) 3d.

BATSON, A. WELLESLEY.—"I will glorify the house." Anthem. For Tenor Solo and Chorus. 6d.

BENNETT, GEORGE J.—"My God, I love Thee." Short Anthem. For Tenor Solo and Chorus. (No. 428. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 3d.

CARNALL, ARTHUR.—"Man goeth forth to his work." Full Anthem. For Harvest. (No. 436. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 3d.

CHARLES, JEAN.—"The Lord shall comfort Zion." Recitative and Air, with Chorus ad lib. 2s. Chorus only, 3d.

CRUICKSHANK, W. A. C.—"I will greatly rejoice in the Lord." Harvest Anthem. For Four Voices. (No. 437. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 4d.

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

HALL, E. V.—"O worship the King." Harvest Anthem. For Soprano Solo and Chorus. (No. 435. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 4d.

MAUNDER, J. H.—"Sing to the Lord of Harvest." Anthem. For Harvest. Words by Dr. Monsell. 3d. Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.

WHITE, JOHN.—"Jesu, Word of God" ("Ave verum"). Anthem. For Lent. (No. 48. Novello's Short Anthems.) 1½d.

—— "Have mercy upon me, O God." Anthem. For Lent. (No. 47. Novello's Short Anthems.) 1½d.

WOODS, F. CUNNINGHAM.—"The Lord opened the doors of heaven." Introit. For Four Voices. (No. 50. Novello's Short Anthems.) 1½d.

BILL, C. M.—Vesper Hymn. To be sung at the close of Divine Service. 2d.

DAWKINS, F. W.—"Babe of Bethlehem." Christmas Carol. Words from "The Penny Post.' 2d. Words only, 1s. 6d. per 100.

HARRISON, S. A.—Communion Hymn. On card. 1d.

NOVELLO'S PART-SONG BOOK:—

No. 676.	Hope	J. Rheinberger	2d.
„ 677.	The Clouds	„ „	3d.
„ 678.	The Fountain	„ „	3d.
„ 679.	Evening Rest	„ „	2d.
„ 680.	The Nightingale	„ „	3d.
„ 681.	Good Advice	„ „	3d.
„ 682.	The Storm	„ „	3d.
„ 683.	Autumn Song	„ „	2d.
„ 685.	When Flora decks	Noel Johnson	2d.
„ 686.	I think on thee in the night	Elizabeth Fédarb	3d.
„ 689.	Beauty, arise	Kellow J. Pye	3d.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. Edited by W. G. McNaught. Book XVII. Five Unaccompanied Trios, written as Sight Tests for the Competitions in Part and Sight-singing by Choirs from the Elementary Schools of London. By W. Roston Bourke. Price 6d.; Tonic Sol-fa, 3d.; or, singly (a. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notation, with Pianoforte Accompaniment, 8vo size; b. Voice Parts only in Tonic Sol-fa Notation):—

		a.	b.
No. 92.	Go, child, in life's fair morning	1d.	1d.
„ 93.	Come sleep, O sleep	1d.
„ 94.	Ah! surely melody from heaven was sent	1½d.	1d.
„ 95.	The violet	1d.	1½d.
„ 96.	Be good, my child	1½d.

NOVELLO'S OCTAVO EDITION of TWO-PART SONGS for FEMALE VOICES:—

No. 62.	I know a bank	C. E. Horn	3d.
„ 71.	The song of the mowers	James Shaw	3d.
„ 72.	A wood note	„ „	3d.
„ 75.	Comrades to-day	Myles B. Foster	3d.

CHAMBERLAYNE, E. A.—"A Song to Spring." For Two Female Voices. (Op. 6, No. 2.) 6d.

GOODHART, ARTHUR.—"Twenty years ago." Words by Arthur Benson. (No. 6. Eton School Songs.) 6d.

LAHEE, HENRY.—"Ring out, wild bells." Trio. For Female Voices. The words written by Alfred, Lord Tennyson. (No. 286. Novello's Octavo Edition of Trios, &c., for Female Voices.) 3d.

REDMAN, DOUGLAS.—"When daffodils." Two-part Song. For Treble Voices. Words by Shakespeare. 3d.

—— "Where from the eye of day." Two-part Song. For Treble Voices. Words by Longfellow. 3d.

WAIT, W. M.—"The jester's repartee." Humorous Part-Song, for A.T.T.B. The words written by A. J. Chalk. 1½d.

CRESER, WILLIAM.—"Father of Life." Marriage Hymn. The words written by the Rev. S. Flood Jones. Sung at the Marriage Service of H.R.H. The Duke of York, K.G., and H.S.H. The Princess Victoria Mary of Teck. 1s. 6d.

HARRISON, S. A.—"Unity and Loyalty." Song. 3d.

SCHLESINGER, SEBASTIAN B.—"Unless." Song. The poetry written by Elizabeth Barrett Browning. No. 1, in D; No. 2, in C. 2s. each.

THOMAS, JOHN.—"O Delyn fy Ngwlad" ("O harp of my land"). Welsh Patriotic Song and Chorus. Words by W. Apmadoc. Composed expressly for the World's Fair International Eisteddfod, Chicago, 1893. 2s.

WALSH, C. F.—"Indian Love Song." Words by Rudyard Kipling. 2s.

CRESER, WILLIAM.—Wedding March. For the Pianoforte. Composed in commemoration of the Marriage of H.R.H. The Duke of York, K.G., and H.S.H. The Princess Victoria Mary of Teck. 2s.

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

MACKENZIE, A. C.—Benedictus. From Six Pieces for the Violin. Arranged for the Organ by J. B. Lott and C. C. Palmer. 1s. 6d.

WAGNER.—Grand March (Introduction, Act III., "Lohengrin"). Arranged for the Organ by W. Creser. (No. 15. Organ Arrangements, edited by George C. Martin.) 1s.

—— Bridal Chorus ("Lohengrin"). Arranged for the Organ by W. Creser. (No. 16. Organ Arrangements, edited by George C. Martin.) 1s.

PEACE, A. L.—Second Sonata da Camera. For the Organ. 4s.

ORIGINAL COMPOSITIONS for the ORGAN.—

			s.	d.
No. 179.	Meditation	B. Luard Selby	1	0
„ 180.	Prelude and Postlude	„ „	1	0
„ 183.	Postlude	Edward Cutler	1	0
„ 186.	Wedding March	William Creser	1	6

NOVELLO'S PUBLICATIONS in the TONIC SOL-FA NOTATION. Translated by W. G. McNaught.

No. 795.	Rise again, glad summer sun	Henry Leslie	1d.
„ 796.	O perfect love	Joseph Barnby	1d.
Te Deum Laudamus (No. 2, in B flat)		J. H. Maunder	2d.

MASON, LOWELL.—Juvenile Songster. 6d.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S New and Standard Publications.

NEW SERIES OF MODERN METHODS.

No. 1.—WALTER MACFARREN'S PIANOFORTE METHOD. Paper cover, 3s. net; cloth, 4s. 6d. net, post-free.

No. 2.—OTTO PEINIGER'S VIOLIN METHOD. Paper cover, 3s. 6d. net; cloth, 5s. net; post-free.

No. 5.—DR. H. KEETON'S CHURCH and CATHEDRAL CHORISTERS' SINGING METHOD. Paper cover, 2s. net; cloth, 3s. net; post-free.

No. 6.—CHARLES WEBB'S TONIC SOL-FA CLASS-SINGING METHOD. Limp cloth, 2s. net; post-free.

Other Methods in preparation.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S LIST of GLEES, &c., containing a choice Selection, by the most eminent Composers, of Two and Three-part Songs for equal voices and Songs for Classes in unison; many numbers in Tonic Sol-fa Notation. Just Published, arranged by Jas. Batchelder for Alto, two Tenors, and Bass, "The Anchor's Weighed," "The Men of Harlech," "Ye Banks and Braes."

F. H. COWEN'S favourite CANTATA for FEMALE VOICES, "THE FAIRIES' SPRING" (An Elfin Legend). Price 2s. 6d. net; Tonic Sol-fa Edition, 1s. net.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S new Edition of STANDARD CLASSICAL PIECES. 151 numbers issued.

ALSO

CLASSICAL MUSIC (new Series) selected, fingered, and edited by Adolphe Schloesser, Professor at the Royal Academy of Music. 72 numbers issued. Lists on application.

ORGAN MUSIC.—BEST'S HANDEL'S CHORUSES. BEST'S COLLECTION of ORGAN COMPOSITIONS. New Compositions and Arrangements. Detailed Lists on application.

THE CANDIDATES' PRACTICAL SCALE and ARPEGGIO HANDBOOKS. Specially arranged for the use of Students preparing for the Examinations (Pianoforte) of the Associated Board of the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music.

By GRAHAM P. MOORE.

Compiled in strict accordance with the Syllabus of the Associated Board, and each Book containing full directions as to the requirements of the Examiners. Issued in four Books, each Book being complete in itself, and containing only those scales required by Candidates for their respective Examinations.

Book 1. For the Local School Examinations, lower division. 1s. net.
„ 2. Higher division. 1s. 6d. net.
„ 3. For the Local Centre Examinations, junior grade. 1s. 6d. net.
„ 4. Senior grade: Part 1, Scales; Part 2, Arpeggi. Each 2s. net.

COMPLETE SCALE and ARPEGGIO TUTOR. By Adolphe Schloesser. Containing all the Scales and Arpeggi required by Pupils preparing for the Metropolitan, Local, and other Examinations, including the Associated Board of the R.A.M. and R.C.M. Engraved in bold style, and printed on best paper, giving clear directions how to practise.

Part 1.	Scales. 33 pages	5s.
„ 2.	Arpeggios. 45 pages	5s
	Complete	8s.

THE HISTORY and CONSTRUCTION of the ORGAN. By Dr. E. J. Hopkins and Dr. E. F. Rimbault. This famous Work, complete, 1 Vol., 636 pp., reduced to 21s. net. Also, in five parts, 5s. each.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S

NEW AND STANDARD PUBLICATIONS—continued.

VIOLIN and VIOLONCELLO MUSIC.—New Compositions by MAUDE VALÉRIE WHITE, TIVADAR NACHÈZ, DAVID POPPER, LEO STERN, ANGELO MASCHERONI, and other well-known Authors. Lists on application.

SPOHR'S GREAT VIOLIN SCHOOL. Translated by JOHN BISHOP. The only version approved by SPOHR. Handsomely bound, cloth, gilt, 15s. net. Patronized and adopted by the Royal Academy of Music. Note.—In ordering, specify R. C. and Co.'s Edition.

NEW CHURCH MUSIC.

THE BENEDICITE, in B flat. By EDWIN H. LEMARE net 3d.
DITTO, in C. By ARTHUR E. GODFREY .. .. .. „ 3d.
THE PATER NOSTER. Composed for the celebration of the Holy Communion. By EDWIN H. LEMARE .. .. net 3d.
THREE KYRIES and A SEVENFOLD AMEN. By ARTHUR E. GODFREY .. .. net 3d.
TE DEUM and BENEDICTUS, from Festival Service in F. By EDWIN H. LEMARE .. .. each net 4d.
CROSSING THE BAR (LAWRENCE KELLIE). Arranged as an Anthem by EDWIN H. LEMARE .. .. net 6d.

NEW ORGAN MUSIC.

Andantino in D flat. By EDWIN H. LEMARE .. .. net 1s. 6d.
Ave Maria (Mascheroni). Transcription. By EDWIN H. LEMARE .. .. net 1s. 6d.
The City of Night (Lawrence Kellie). Transcription. By EDWIN H. LEMARE .. .. net 1s. 6d.
Funeral March (Grieg). Arrangement. By EDWIN H. LEMARE net 1s. 6d.
Gavotte moderne in A flat. By EDWIN H. LEMARE .. „ 1s. 6d.
"Hanover" (Hymn Tune). Concert Fantasia. By EDWIN H. LEMARE .. .. net 3s. 0d.
Pastorale in E. By EDWIN H. LEMARE .. .. .. „ 1s. 6d.
Royal Bridal March. By ARTHUR E. GODFREY.. .. „ 1s. 6d.

ORGAN RECITAL SERIES. EDITED BY EDWIN H. LEMARE.

No. 1. Scherzo Sinfonico. By AMHURST WEBBER .. net 2s. 0d.
„ 2. (a) Canzona, (b) Minuet and Trio. By W. WOLSTENHOLME .. .. net 2s. 6d.

Other numbers in preparation.

6, NEW BURLINGTON ST., LONDON, W.

MR. HARRISON BROCKBANK (Baritone, Royal Italian Opera). For Festivals, Operatic Recitals, Concerts, &c. ("Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Faust"—special study of these works.) For terms and dates, address, 4, Lloyd Street, W.C.

TO INTENDING CANDIDATES for MUS. BAC. DEGREE.—PREPARATION by Correspondence for Entrance Examinations at Oxford, Cambridge, London, and Durham. Method strictly individual. Single subjects if desired. Address, J. Charleston, B.A., Kenilworth House, Oxford.

HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, COMPOSITION, by Postal Lessons. Pupils in all parts of the kingdom. Over 500 Certificates, Diplomas, Degrees, Medals, and Scholarships gained by pupils during past fifteen years. Prospectus free. "Comparison of English and German Methods of Teaching Harmony." Mr. F. Sommer, A.L.A.M., 14, Mardale Street, London, W.

GRATIS.—"Comparison of English and German Methods of Teaching Harmony." Post-free. SOMMER, 14, Mardale Street, Shepherd's Bush, London, W.

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL, Oxford.—There are VACANCIES for PROBATIONERS. Candidates should be between the ages of 9 and 11. Probationers, on being promoted to be choristers, receive board and education free. The boys live in the Choir House, under the superintendence of the Master. For conditions, date of trial, &c., apply to the Rev. the Master, Cathedral Choir House, Oxford.

THE ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER of Holy Trinity, Stroud Green, having to leave London on account of ill-health, desires a similar APPOINTMENT on the South Coast or in the Channel Islands. Highest references. Address, H. J. Dean, 17, Upper Tollington Park, N.

A YOUNG LADY, Artist-Licentiate of the Royal Academy of Music (experienced), is desirous of meeting with an APPOINTMENT as Professor to a High School, or good Ladies' School. Letters to be forwarded under cover to M. M. D., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W. Testimonials will be forwarded on request.

GOOD TUNER WANTED, to go with a Concert Grand on tour. One who has had experience in this business preferred. Address, B. B., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners St., W.

WANTED, a good TUNER. Apply, by letter, stating terms and references, to E. A., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

CONTENTS.

	Page
"Of the Mastersingers' Gracious Art"	457
From my Study	459
Schubertiana	461
The Allgemeine Deutsche Musikverein in Munich	463
Occasional Notes	465
Facts, Rumours, and Remarks	467
Royal Opera, Covent Garden	469
Wagner Cycle at Covent Garden	469
Richter Concerts	470
The Associated Board	470
Royal College of Music	470
Royal Academy of Music	471
Mr. Korbay's Concert	472
Pianoforte Recitals	472
Tonic Sol-fa Festival	472
The Plainsong and Mediæval Society	473
The Guild of St. Cecilia	473
The Musicians' Company	473
Mr. Henry Fowler Broadwood	474
Obituary	474
Music in Bristol	475
„ Liverpool	475
„ Yorkshire	475
„ Chicago	476
Harvest Anthem—"O God, who is like unto Thee." Myles B. Foster	477
General News (London)	476
Reviews	487
Foreign Notes	489
Correspondence	491
Answers to Correspondents	493
General News (Country)	493
List of Music published during the last Month	494

THE MUSICAL TIMES.

SCALE OF TERMS FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

	£	s.	d.
Two Lines	0	3	0
Three Lines	0	3	4
For every additional Line	0	0	10
Half a Column	2	0	0
A Column	4	0	0
A Page	7	10	0

Special Pages (Cover, &c.) by arrangement.
A remittance should be sent with each Advertisement.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To ensure insertion Advertisements should reach the Office NOT LATER THAN THE

TWENTY-THIRD

OF EACH MONTH.

PIANOFORTE TUNER, with London Factory experience, desires ENGAGEMENT. London or South Coast preferred. Good reference. E., 34, Hampton Place, Brighton.

WANTED, Young Man ASSISTANT in Music Warehouse, must have good address and references (trade). Pianos, Organs, and Small Goods. A slight knowledge of the business preferred. Must be able to play the piano. Apply, by letter only, salary required, to Beech's Music Warehouse, 37, Lune Street, Preston.

LIBRETTI.—The Author of many successful lyrics, &c., respectfully solicits inquiries from Composers. Large selection on hand. Lyrico, Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners St., W.

WANTED, to PURCHASE.—Second-hand PEDAL PIANO, or Pedal Attachment only. H. Dancey, 200, Upper Richmond Road, Putney, S.W.

CHAMBER ORGAN for SALE, by BEVINGTON, in handsome mahogany case. Very compact. Dimensions, 9 ft. by 2 ft. 9 in. by 4 ft. 8 in. Seven stops. One octave pedals. Total, 317 pipes. Foot and hand-blowers. Price £30. Apply to A. H. Carr, Cholmeley Lodge, High Street, Highgate, N.

Just Published.

NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S MUSIC PRIMERS,
Edited by Sir JOHN STAINER,
No. 38.

TRANSPOSITION

(KEYBOARD AND ORCHESTRAL)

BY

JOHN WARRINER,

Mus.D., Trinity College, Dublin.

Price Two Shillings.
In paper boards, Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES.

SHORT CANTATAS
RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

PERFORMED BY THE HIGHBURY PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

THE PIED PIPER OF HAMELIN
BY ROBERT BROWNING
SET TO MUSIC
FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
BY
RICHARD H. WALTHEW.

Price Two Shillings.

THE BLACK KNIGHT
CANTATA FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA
The Poem by Uhland; translated by Longfellow
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY EDWARD ELGAR.

Price Two Shillings.

THE SONG OF THE WESTERN MEN
BALLAD FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA
Words by Rev. S. Hawker
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY
G. R. BETJEMANN.

Price One Shilling.

ODE TO THE WEST WIND
Poem by Shelley
Set to Music for Tenor Solo, Chorus, and Orchestra
BY
CHARLES WOOD.

Price One Shilling.

THE BIRTH OF SONG
CANTATA FOR SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
Poem by Lewis Morris
SET TO MUSIC BY
ROSALIND F. ELLICOTT.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

THE COTTER'S SATURDAY NIGHT
Poem by Robert Burns
SET TO MUSIC BY
A. C. MACKENZIE.

Price Two Shillings. Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.

SUMMER ON THE RIVER
CANTATA FOR FEMALE VOICES
THE WORDS WRITTEN BY
SHAPCOTT WENSLEY
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY
FREDERIC H. COWEN.

Price Two Shillings. Tonic Sol-fa (in the Press).

THE BATTLE OF THE BALTIC
Poem by Campbell
SET TO MUSIC BY
C. V. STANFORD.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

PERFORMED AT THE ORATORY, BROMPTON.

MASS IN G MAJOR
FOR SOLI, CHORUS, ORCHESTRA, AND ORGAN
COMPOSED BY
C. VILLIERS STANFORD.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

PERFORMED AT THE ROYAL ALBERT HALL.

EAST TO WEST
AN ODE
BY
ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE
Set to music for Chorus and Orchestra
BY
CHARLES VILLIERS STANFORD.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

WATER-LILIES
A FAIRY SONG
BY
FELICIA HEMANS
Deutsche Uebertragung von L. Klein.
SET TO MUSIC BY
ED. SACHS.

Price One Shilling.

THE
LAY OF THE BROWN ROSARY
CANTATA
For Soprano and Contralto Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra
Words by
ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY
ETHEL M. BOYCE.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

YOUNG LOCHINVAR
BALLAD
By SIR WALTER SCOTT
SET TO MUSIC
FOR BARITONE SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
BY
ETHEL M. BOYCE.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

PRAISE TO THE HOLIEST
MOTET
FOR SOPRANO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
The words by Cardinal Newman
SET TO MUSIC BY
H. J. EDWARDS.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

ELYSIUM
CANTATA
FOR SOPRANO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
Poem by Mrs. Hemans
SET TO MUSIC BY
ROSALIND F. ELLICOTT.

Price One Shilling.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

NEW HARVEST ANTHEMS

READY THIS DAY.

MAN GOETH FORTH

COMPOSED BY

ARTHUR CARNALL.

PRICE THREEPENCE.

O WORSHIP THE KING

COMPOSED BY

E. V. HALL.

PRICE FOURPENCE.

O GOD, WHO IS LIKE UNTO THEE!

COMPOSED BY

MYLES B. FOSTER.

PRICE THREE-HALFPENCE.
Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence.

I WILL GREATLY REJOICE IN THE LORD

COMPOSED BY

W. A. C. CRUICKSHANK.

PRICE FOURPENCE.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

Now ready.

NEW HARVEST ANTHEM

BY

J. H. MAUNDER

SING TO THE LORD OF HARVEST

Staff Notation, 3d.; Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.

"SHORT, EASY, EFFECTIVE."

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

NEW ANTHEMS FOR HARVEST

By R. T. CLARKE MORRISON.

My God and King .. .. 3d.
O magnify the Lord with me .. .. 3d.
O give thanks .. .. 3d.
The eyes of all wait upon thee .. .. 4d.

These are sure to become favourites at all Harvest Festivals.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

HARVEST CAROLS.—"Father blessing every Seed-time" (F. Peskett), "Seed-time and Harvest," "Gracious Lord, we give Thee thanks" (H. Townsend). Price 2d. each; words only, 2s. 6d. per 100.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

POPULAR HARVEST ANTHEMS

BY

E. A. SYDENHAM.

FULL, EASY, EFFECTIVE.

Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.

O GIVE THANKS (55th 1,000).
SING UNTO THE LORD (9th 1,000).
GREAT IS THE LORD (28th 1,000).

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

HARVEST ANTHEMS

LORD OF THE HARVEST

COMPOSED BY

JOSEPH BARNBY.

Price Fourpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence.

I WILL FEED MY FLOCK

COMPOSED BY

J. F. BRIDGE.

Price Three-halfpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence.

SING WE MERRILY

COMPOSED BY

E. V. HALL.

Price Fourpence.

I WILL MAGNIFY THEE

COMPOSED BY

OLIVER KING.

Price Fourpence.

HARVEST HYMN

COMPOSED BY

FERRIS TOZER.

Price Twopence.

MY MOUTH SHALL SPEAK THE PRAISE

COMPOSED BY

JOHN E. WEST.

Price Fourpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence.

HONOUR THE LORD WITH THY SUBSTANCE

(Words from the American Liturgy)

COMPOSED BY

JOHN STAINER.

Price Fourpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

HARVEST THANKSGIVING MARCH

FOR THE ORGAN

BY

J. BAPTISTE CALKIN.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

HARVEST ANTHEMS

By WM. JOHNSON.

He hath made the earth (New) .. .. 3d.
I will magnify (5th Thousand) .. .. 3d.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

ALBERT LOWE'S HARVEST CAROL

HOLY IS THE SEED-TIME

Composed expressly for Harvest Festivals. Octavo, Twopence.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

HARVEST ANTHEMS, by Thos. Smith. Easy and melodious. "Thou crownest the year," "O sing unto the Lord," "Fear not, O land," "It is a good thing to give thanks," "My heart is fixed," "O worship the Lord." Easy Te Deum in F. Five Easy Kyries. Price 3d. each.

London and New York Novello, Ewer and Co.

HARVEST ANTHEMS & HYMNS.

All Thy works praise Thee	E. H. Thorne	3d.
Bless thou the Lord..	Oliver King	3d.
*Blessed be the Name of the Lord	H. Gadsby	1½d.
*Blessed be Thou	E. Bunnett	3d.
*Break forth into joy..	Oliver King	1½d.
Bring unto the Lord, O ye mighty	F. E. Gladstone	3d.
*Fear not, O land, be glad and rejoice	J. Goss	6d.
*Fear not, O land	C. H. Lloyd	1½d.
Fear not, O land	C. W. Jordan	6d.
Give unto the Lord the glory	J. F. Bridge	4d.
*God said, Behold I have given you every herb	G. A. Macfarren	6d.
*Great is the Lord	E. A. Sydenham	3d.
*Honour the Lord with Thy substance	J. Stainer	4d.
*I will feed My flock	J. F. Bridge	1½d.
I will give thanks unto Thee	E. J. Hopkins	6d.
*I will give thanks unto Thee	J. Barnby	4d.
*I will magnify Thee, O God	J. Goss	3d.
I will magnify Thee..	Oliver King	4d.
I will sing a new song	P. Armes	8d.
*Lo! summer comes again	J. Stainer	6d.
*Lord of the Harvest..	J. Barnby	4d.
Lord of the rich and golden grain (Harvest Hymn)	F. Tozer	2d.
Make melody within your hearts	F. A. J. Hervey	3d.
*My mouth shall speak the praise..	J. E. West	4d.
*O come, let us sing to the Lord	B. Tours	1½d.
*O give thanks..	E. A. Sydenham	3d.
*O how plentiful is Thy goodness..	T. M. Pattison	3d.
*O Lord, how manifold are Thy works	J. Barnby	1½d.
*O Lord,how manifold are Thy works	G. A. Macfarren	1½d.
*O praise the Lord of Heaven	J. Goss	6d.
O sing unto the Lord	T. Palmer	4d.
O that men would praise the Lord	J. C. Bridge	4d.
Our God is Lord of the harvest	Emma Mundella	3d.
*Praise, O praise our God and King	E. V. Hall	1½d.
*Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem	E. V. Hall	4d.
Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem	W. Hayes	4d.
Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem	W. G. Wood	4d.
*Praise the Lord, O my soul	H. Lahee	1½d.
*Praise ye the Lord for His goodness	G. Garrett	1½d.
Praised be the Lord..	C. Steggall	1/-
*Rejoice in the Lord..	B. Tours	1½d.
*Sing praises to God..	H. W. Wareing	1½d.
*Sing unto the Lord..	E. A. Sydenham	3d.
Sing we merrily	E. V. Hall	4d.
Sowing and reaping..	J. Maude Crament	2d.
The earth is the Lord's	C. S. Heap	4d.
The earth is the Lord's	T. T. Trimnell	4d.
The earth is the Lord's	A. Lowe	3d.
The eyes of all wait upon Thee	O. Gibbons	4d.
The fostering earth, the genial showers	J. L. Hopkins	3d.
*The harvest-tide thanksgiving (Words only, 1s. 6d per 100).	J. Barnby	1½d.
*The Lord hath done great things	H. Smart	4d.
*The Lord is loving unto every man	G. Garrett	3d.
Thou, O God, art praised in Zion	E. V. Hall	3d.
*Thou visitest the earth and blessest it	W. H. Callcott	2d.
*Thou visitest the earth	M. Greene	1½d.
Thou visitest the earth	J. Baptiste Calkin	4d.
To Thee, O Lord	C. L. Williams	3d.
While the earth remaineth	C. Swinnerton Heap	4d.
*While the earth remaineth	B. Tours	1½d.
*Ye shall dwell in the land	J. Stainer	1½d.
*Ye shall go out with joy	J. Barnby	4d.

 These Anthems are also published in Tonic Sol-fa Notation, 1d. to 4d. each.*

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

TWELVE HYMNS WITH TUNES

FOR

HARVEST

SELECTED FROM "THE HYMNARY."

PRICE ONE PENNY.

Sing to the Lord a joyful song	J. Barnby.
O Lord, the heaven Thy power displays..	F. Ouseley.
Father, blessing every seed-time	J. B. Dykes.
Lord, in Thy Name Thy servants plead..	W. Metcalf.
The wintry time hath ended	H. J. Gauntlett.
Come, ye thankful people, come..	George Elvey.
God, the Father, whose creation	H. Smart.
Lord of the harvest, Thee we hail..	Anonymous.
Lo, summer comes again	E. B. Whyley.
Praise, O praise our Heavenly King	German.
Summer ended, harvest o'er	J Adcock.
O Lord of heaven, and earth, and sea	S. S. Wesley.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

ALBERT LOWE'S HARVEST ANTHEM

THE EARTH IS THE LORD'S

Price Threepence.

Short, easy, full, and effective. Composed expressly for Parish Choirs.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

NEW CANTATAS FOR HARVEST.

SEED-TIME AND HARVEST

A SACRED CANTATA

FOR

SOPRANO AND TENOR SOLI AND CHORUS

The Words selected and arranged from Holy Scripture, &c. interspersed with suitable Hymns, and the Music

COMPOSED BY

JOHN E. WEST.

Price Two Shillings.

Words only, Five Shillings per hundred, or 2d. each with Music to the Hymns.

HARVEST-TIDE

A CANTATA FOR HARVEST

FOR

TENOR AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN, OR SMALL ORCHESTRA

COMPOSED BY

HUGH BLAIR.

Price One Shilling.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

THE GLEANERS' HARVEST

CANTATA FOR FEMALE VOICES

COMPOSED BY

CHARLES HARFORD LLOYD.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

THE JUBILEE CANTATA

(HARVEST CANTATA)

FOR SOLO VOICES, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

COMPOSED BY

C. M. VON WEBER.

(Op. 58.)

Edited, and the Pianoforte Accompaniment revised, by Ebenezer Prout. The words translated from the German version of Wendt by the Rev. J. Troutbeck, D.D.

Octavo, 1s.; Full Score, 21s.; Orchestral Parts, 15s.
Words only, 10s. per 100.

HARVEST CANTATA

FOR

CHORUS, SEMI-CHORUS, AND ORGAN

WORDS SELECTED AND WRITTEN BY

J. FRANCIS WALLER, LL.D.

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

GEORGE GARRETT, M.A., Mus.D.

Price One Shilling. Words only, 5s. per 100, or 2d. each with Music to the Hymns.
Tonic Sol-fa Edition, Sixpence.

Intended for the use of Parochial and other Choirs at Harvest Festivals. The music is not difficult, and provision is made for the introduction of well-known Harvest Hymns, in order that the Congregation may take part in the service.

PUT YE IN THE SICKLE FOR THE HARVEST IS RIPE. Harvest Anthem. By Thos. Smith. 3d.
"Effective, and not difficult."
London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

POPULAR HARVEST-TIDE ANTHEMS.

NEW EDITIONS NOW READY.

THE EARTH IS THE LORD'S

FOR TREBLE SOLO (OR TENOR), QUARTET, & CHORUS

BY

W. J. PRESSEY.

Price 3d. net.

"Bright and effective."

O SING UNTO THE LORD

SHORT FULL ANTHEM

BY PROFESSOR J. FREDERICK BRIDGE, Mus. Doc.

Price 4d. net.

LET THE HEAVENS REJOICE

FOR SOLO, QUARTET, AND CHORUS

BY

GUSTAV ERNEST.

Price 4d. net.

Specimen copies of all the above Anthems sent Post-free on receipt of stamps, 7d.

LONDON: J. & J. HOPKINSON,

34, 35, AND 36, MARGARET STREET, CAVENDISH SQ., W.

EDWYN A. CLARE'S

NEW HARVEST ANTHEMS, &c.

These Compositions are very effective and not difficult.

FEAR NOT, O LAND

Just published. 2nd 1,000. 3d.

A very attractive and easy Anthem.

*THOU CROWNEST THE YEAR. New. 4th 1,000 .. .. .. 3d.
SING UNTO GOD WITH THANKSGIVING. 7th 1,000 .. .. .. 4d.
Varied, effective, and pleasing for the Choir.
*THE EYES OF ALL WAIT UPON THEE. 18th 1,000 .. .. .. 3d.
Sung by 1,500 voices at Newcastle-on-Tyne.
O LORD HOW MANIFOLD. 4th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
PRAISE THE LORD, O JERUSALEM. 11th 1,000 .. .. .. 3d.
MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS IN D. 5th 1,000.. .. .. 4d.
Full of vigour and flowing melody.
Those marked (*) are also published in Tonic Sol-fa.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Fourth Thousand.

NEW AND FAVOURITE

HARVEST ANTHEM

BY

CALEB SIMPER.

HE WATERETH THE HILLS

Both Notations. Staff, 4d.; Sol-fa, 2d.

Band parts also issued.

London: WEEKES and Co., 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.

PRAISE WAITETH FOR THEE, O GOD.

Anthem for Harvest or General use. By VINCENT MORGAN. Price Threepence.

"It is thoroughly singable, devotional, and effective."—Daily News, U.S.A.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

'TIS THE LAST ROSE OF SUMMER.

Arranged as Soprano Solo, accompanied by Four-part Chorus. By BENJAMIN CONGREVE. Price 1½d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

ANTHEMS FOR HARVEST

AND OTHER

FESTIVALS

By WALTER SPINNEY,

ORGANIST OF THE PARISH CHURCH, ROYAL LEAMINGTON SPA.

YE THAT STAND IN THE HOUSE. 31st Thousand .... net 2d.
HOW BEAUTIFUL UPON THE MOUNTAINS. 32nd Thousand ,, 2d.
HE WATERETH THE HILLS. 43rd Thousand .... ,, 2d.
THE HARVEST IS THE END OF THE WORLD. 19th Thousand ,, 2d.

Tonic Copies at same rate.

EXTRACT OF OPINIONS.

"The work of a really gifted writer, in whose veins run a true strain of sacred melody."—Church of England Pulpit.

"Mr. Walter Spinney has already written a goodly number of anthems which have received a warm acceptance by the musical world."—Western Daily Press, Bristol.

"Admirable music."—Bristol Observer.

"Mr. Spinney wields the pen of a true Church musician, and his music always emphasises the meaning of the words."—Musical Standard.

"Please send me copies of your anthems (over 2,000). It will interest you to know that no less than five Church choirs in this city were singing one or other of your anthems last Sunday night."—Publishers' Agent, Ballarat, Australia.

"We have received some very charming anthems by Walter Spinney, Organist of Leamington Spa. They deserve especial praise, are bright, intelligent, melodious, and taking. They are our ideal of Congregational anthems."—The Homilist.

SOLE LONDON AGENTS: MESSRS. WEEKES & CO., 14, HANOVER STREET, W.;

Or, of the Author, WALTER SPINNEY, Bemerton House, Leamington Spa.

NEW HARVEST ANTHEMS, &c.

By CALEB SIMPER.

Interesting, attractive popular, easy, melodious, and effective.

*He watereth the hills. Just published. 4th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
Contains bright Choruses, with Solos for Bass and Soprano (or Tenor). The concluding Chorus is very vigorous, and has some pretty and effective imitation in the parts, without being difficult. Band Parts are also issued. Particulars and prices on title-page of Anthem.

*While the Earth remaineth. New. 6th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
"A particularly effective Anthem; opens with Solo for Bass or Alto, which leads into a well-written Quartet, followed by a brief but brilliant Chorus, full of life and very catchy."—Music Review.

*All Thy works praise Thee. New. 7th 1,000 .. .. .. 4d.
"A more ambitious work than the preceding, but characterised by the same dash and vigour. It contains Solos for the different voices interspersed with Quartets or Chorus, not at all difficult, and very pleasing in its general effect."—Music Review.

*Let us thank the Lord. 6th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
*I will feed My flock. 25th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
Sung at a Choral Festival at Woodstock.

*What shall I render. 6th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
Sung at a Choral Festival at Llandrindod Wells.

The Earth is the Lord's. 8th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
*Fear not, O land. 24th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
*Praise the Lord, O my Soul. 20th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
Sung at several Choral Festivals.

*The Lord is loving. 11th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
Make a joyful noise. 19th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
Sung at several Choral Festivals.

*O Lord, how manifold. 14th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
They that sow in tears. 15th Edition .. .. 3d.
*And God said, let the earth. 61st Edition .. .. .. 3d.
Te Deum, in G. 7th Edit. 4d. Te Deum, in F. 22nd Edit. 3d.
Celebrated Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, in F. 45th Edit. 4d.
Sung at Choral Festivals in Lismore, Derry, and Downpatrick Cathedrals; also at Barrow, Skegness, Great Budworth, East Devon, &c.

Favourite Magnificat and N. dim., in E flat. 15th Edition.. 4d.
Sung at a Choral Festival in Llandaff Cathedral.

New Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, in G. 5th Edition .. 4d.
Easy Holy Communion Service, in E flat. 8th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
*Easy Holy Communion Service, in G. New .. .. .. 4d.
Easy Holy Communion Service, in F. 6th Edition .. .. 6d.
Each Service is complete, with Agnus Dei and Benedictus.

Festal Te Deum, in A flat (Chants). 4th 1,000 .. .. .. 2d.
O how amiable. Dedication Festivals, &c. 3rd 1,000 .. .. 3d.

Those marked (*) are also published in Tonic Sol-fa.

London: Weekes and Co., 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.
Chicago, U.S.A.: Clayton F. Summy, 174-176, Wabash Avenue.

Octavo, Threepence.

THE HARVEST TRULY IS GREAT

SHORT, FULL ANTHEM FOR HARVEST

COMPOSED BY

W. W. PEARSON.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

CHURCH MUSIC

BY

EDWARD BUNNETT, Mus.D., Cantab.

ANTHEMS

Harvest.—"Blessed be Thou." Four voices .. .. .. 3d.
" " " Tonic Sol-fa .. .. .. 1½d.
Harvest Hymn.—"Sing to the Lord" .. .. 1d.
"I was glad." Four voices .. .. 3d.
" Tonic Sol-fa .. .. 1½d.
"The Lord is my Shepherd" .. .. 3d.

SERVICES.

Te Deum laudamus in E. Chant form .. .. 3d.
Benedictus and Jubilate in E " " .. .. 3d.
Tonic Sol-fa.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in F .. .. 1½d.
" " " A .. .. 1½d.
" " " E .. .. 1½d.

HYMNS.

Twenty-four Original Hymn Tunes .. .. 6d.
Twelve Original Hymn Tunes .. .. 3d.
Amen (on Card) .. .. 1d.

ORGAN.

Three Short Organ Pieces .. .. net 2s.
Larghetto in A flat major.
Allegretto Pastorale in A major.
Andante con Moto in F major.
Minuetto .. .. net 1s. 6d.
Twelve Short and Easy Pieces .. .. " 2s. 0d.
Largo in E flat .. .. " 1s. 0d.
Ave Maria .. .. " 1s. 6d.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

VOCAL SCORE, OLD NOTATION. 21st to 25th THOUSAND.

RUTH

A HARVEST PASTORAL

SUITABLE FOR USE IN PLACES OF WORSHIP

WORDS BY

EDWARD OXENFORD

MUSIC BY

ALFRED R. GAUL.

SUITABLE FOR

THANKSGIVING SERVICES.

"The Biblical story of which Ruth is the central figure lends itself with remarkable suitability to an illustration of a harvest celebration. The country landscape, the ripened corn, the sturdy reapers, the standing sheaves, the active gleaners, and the busy farmer, all combine to fill the mind's eye with a pleasant scene of excitement. Set to music by a competent composer such as Mr. A. R. Gaul, the narrative of Ruth's eventful episode lends itself to a pathetic, picturesque, and pleasant performance. The bereaved and sorrowful trio of women on whom the calamity of poverty and famine has fallen, as if to give intensity to their greater grief, and the unexpected and happy influence of patriarchal benevolence displayed by the mighty Boaz, who so quickly transforms sorrow into joy, are all introduced and aptly take their allotted place in the melodious music of Gaul's interpretation of the tale."—Gloucester Citizen.

"The work, like the 'Holy City,' is full of beautiful orchestral passages, while the vocal score abounds with charming numbers."—Bucks Herald.

"'Ruth' is a work of sterling power; its musical form is that of perfect tunefulness combined with simplicity and strength. . . . The composer has grasped his theme in a thoroughly sympathetic manner, and has produced a work which is worthy of the subject."—Bradford Observer.

"Bright, tuneful, fresh, and musicianly—this work will be a great favourite, and will add to Mr. Gaul's reputation."—Birmingham Weekly Dart.

"'Ruth' has been set to music by several composers; none, however, has become so worthily popular as the Cantata under notice. . . . It contains some charming music, and is highly characteristic of the story it so vividly illustrates."—South Wilts Express.

"Full of flowing melody."—Salisbury Times.

PERFORMED IN THE TOWN HALL, BIRMINGHAM, ON TWELVE OCCASIONS.

Vocal Score, paper cover, 2s.; ditto, paper boards, 2s. 6d.; cloth, 4s.
The Choruses (only) in Vocal Score, for Musical Societies, paper cover, 1s.
Tonic Sol-fa Edition, 9d. Band Parts on loan.
London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

COMPOSITIONS BY B. LUARD SELBY.

JESU, WORD OF GOD INCARNATE. Communion Hymn or Anthem. By Bertram Luard Selby .. .. .. os. 2d.
SIX LOVE SONGS. By John Todhunter. Set to Music by Bertram Luard Selby .. .. 2s. 6d.
FOUR RISPETTI. Words by Francesca Alexander. Set to Music by Bertram Luard Selby .. .. net 2s. 0d.
London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

Published June, 1893.

THE OFFERTORY SENTENCES (complete, without the repetition of words). Set to music by G. Gaffe. Price 1s. Published by Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners St., W., from whom copies may be obtained. Specimen copy sent post-free for eight stamps. Address, Mr. G. Gaffe, 4, London Road, St. Albans, Herts.

COMPOSITIONS FOR THE ORGAN

BY

A. L. PEACE, Mus.D.

Now Ready.
SONATA DA CAMERA in C minor (No. 2).
Allegro con fuoco. Allegretto alla marcia. Allegro con brio.
Price 4s. net.
London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

THE CHILD PIANIST.

MRS. CURWEN'S METHOD of TEACHING BEGINNERS on the PIANOFORTE.

Training Classes for Teachers' Certificates under MISS SCOTT GARDNER, at Dudley Mansions, 29, Abbey Road, N.W. Commence end of September. Send for circular.
Visitor and Examiner: Mrs. Curwen.
Publishers of the book: J. Curwen and Sons, 8 and 9, Warwick Lane, London, E.C. Lists gratis.

THE CATHEDRAL PSALTER

POINTED FOR CHANTING.

WORDS ONLY.

No. 1.	Imperial 32mo	cloth	0	9
,, 2.	Ditto, with Proper Psalms	,,	1	0
,, 2A.	Ditto, Public School Edition	,,	2	0
,, 3.	Demy 8vo, large type, with Proper Psalms	,,	2	3
,, 4.	Proper Psalms, 32mo	paper cover	0	6
,, 5.	Canticles, 32mo	...	0	1
,, 6.	Ditto, 8vo	...	0	3
,, 16.	Imperial 32mo (Bible version)	cloth	1	0
,, 7.	Psalter and Canticles, with Chants, 4to	cloth	5	0
,, 15.	Ditto ditto, ditto, demy 8vo	,,	2	6
,, 12.	Canticles, with Chants, 4to	...	0	6

CHANTS ONLY.

,, 8.	Post 4to	paper cover	2	0
,, 9.	Ditto	... cloth	3	0
,, 10.	Fcap. 4to	paper cover	1	0
,, 11.	Ditto	... cloth	1	6
,, 13.	Sol-fa Edition	paper cover	1	0
,, 14.	Ditto	... cloth	1	6

The Clergy can be supplied with copies, in quantities of not less than 25, on liberal terms.

JUST PUBLISHED.

NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S ALBUMS FOR

PIANOFORTE and STRINGED INSTRUMENTS.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH.

No. 1.

SUITE OF FOUR PIECES

BY

ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.

No. 2.

SUITE OF FIVE PIECES

BY

HENRY PURCELL.

THE PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT, MARKS OF EXPRESSION, AND FINGERING BY

ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.

These Pieces are so arranged that if any part, or combination of parts, in addition to the First Violin and Pianoforte are used, they will sound complete.

They may also be played by a Quintet, or small Orchestra of Stringed Instruments, with or without Pianoforte.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

THE BRISTOL TUNE BOOK

EDITION 1891.

Containing 905 Tunes and Chants.

NOW READY.

THIRD SERIES, including Supplement 1881, containing 190 Tunes and 118 varieties of metre.

A COMPANION TO ALL HYMN BOOKS.

EDITION 1881.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 9.	Limp Cloth.. ..	4 0	No. 11.	Small Edition ..	3 0
„ 10.	Cloth Boards, red edges	5 0	„ 12.	Tonic Sol-fa ..	3 0

THIRD SERIES.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 13.	Limp Cloth ..	2 0	No. 16.	Tonic Sol-fa, limp cloth	1 6
„ 15.	Small Edition, limp cloth	1 6

COMPLETE EDITION, 1891.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 17.	Limp Cloth ..	5 0	No. 19.	Small Edition ..	3 6
„ 18	Cloth Boards, red edges	6 0	„ 20.	Tonic Sol-fa ..	3 6

Communications and enquiries as to copyright, and also as to supplying at reduced prices, may be addressed to the Bristol Publishers.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Bristol: W. AND F. MORGAN, Clare Street.
And all Booksellers and Musicsellers.

Price 3s. 6d., cloth, red edges.

THE TUNE BOOK, with the additional Tunes as used at ST. ALBAN'S, HOLBORN, containing nearly 270 Tunes, for Long, Common, Short, and Peculiar Metres; together with several Gregorian Hymns and Antiphons; the Eight Gregorian Tones; the Music of the Reproaches; the Seven Last Words; and Litany Tunes, &c. London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

FOR MALE VOICE CHOIR.—THE NATIONAL ANTHEM, price 4d.; JUBILEE ODE, price 6d. net. By GEORGE RISELEY.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Twenty-third Edition.

JOULE'S COLLECTION OF 527 CHANTS, 57 RESPONSES, &c. Reduced price, 4s. 6d., paper cover; 6s., limp cloth; separate vocal parts, 2s. each.—Tonic Sol-fa Notation, Score, 1s. 6d.
The Chants are selected with due reference to the position of the Reciting-note.

THE PSALTER, PROPER PSALMS, HYMNS, and CANTICLES. Pointed for Chanting by B. ST. J. B. JOULE. Large type, price 2s. 6d. This Psalter, having been collated with the Sealed Books, is free from the errors contained in all other pointed Psalters, through printing from the incorrect copies commonly sold by the Stationers.

Tenth Edition.

JOULE'S DIRECTORIUM CHORI ANGLICANUM. 18mo, price 1s.; in cloth, 1s. 6d.

Seventh Edition.

JOULE'S DIRECTORIUM CHORI ANGLICANUM. 4to, in cloth, elegant, price 7s. 6d.

Seventh Edition.

THE ORDER FOR THE HOLY COMMUNION. Harmonised on a Monotone in a very simple manner for Parochial use. By B. ST. J. B. JOULE. Price 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Fourth Thousand.

MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in E flat, by WILLIAM S. VINNING, Mus. Bac., Cantab. Price 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Third Thousand.

VESPER HYMN. To be sung after Evensong. Words and music by GEORGE KETT. "A very charming hymn-tune."—Sir John Stainer. On card. Price One Penny.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Words alone, for congregational use, One Shilling per hundred, of the AUTHOR, 100, Gordon Road, Nunhead, S.E.

THE

OFFICE FOR THE HOLY COMMUNION

(Including Benedictus qui venit and Agnus Dei)

SET TO MUSIC IN THE KEY OF A FLAT

BY

BASIL HARWOOD.

Price One Shilling.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

WEDDING MARCH FOR THE ORGAN

Composed and dedicated to H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.

BY

WILLIAM CRESER

Composer to Her Majesty's Chapels Royal.

Price 1s. 6d. net.

Also arranged for Pianoforte, 2s. net.

MILITARY BAND PARTS IN THE PRESS.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

MUSIC

SUITABLE FOR USE AT THE

SERVICE OF HOLY MATRIMONY

ANTHEMS AND HYMNS.

	s.	d.
Blessed are all they that fear the Lord .. ..E. G. Monk	1	6
Vocal parts	1	0
Blessed are all they that fear the Lord .. Sidney Naylor	0	9
Except the Lord build the house .. .. F. A. G. Ouseley	0	6
Vocal parts	0	6
Father of Life. Hymn .. .. Jas. Turle	0	3
God, be merciful unto us .. .. .. S. S. Wesley
Octavo	0	3
Vocal parts	1	0
Folio	1	6
O God, Thou art worthy .. .. .. Arthur Sullivan
Vocal parts	1	0
Octavo	0	4
Tonic Sol-fa	0	1½
Folio	1	6
O Perfect Love (Composed for the Wedding of H.R.H. Princess Louise of Wales and the Earl of Fife) .. .. J. Barnby	0	3
Holy Ghost, to earth descending .. .. Antonin Dvorák	0	4
There was a marriage in Cana of Galilee .. .. J. Stainer	0	3
Protect them, Almighty. Chorus .. .. .. J. Barnby	0	3

ORGAN MUSIC.

Nuptial March .. .. B. Luard Selby	1	0
Wedding March (Gounod), No. 1. Arranged by G. C. Martin	2	0
Wedding March, No. 2.. .. .. .. Charles Gounod	2	0
Wedding March (Mendelssohn) .. Arranged by W. T. Best	2	0
Wedding March Arranged by C. E. Willing	1	0
March in "Tannhäuser" .. .. Arranged by F. Archer	2	0
Processional Wedding March .. .. .. Henry R. Bird	1	0
A Wedding Piece .. .. A. C. Mackenzie	1	0
The Bride's March ("Rebekah," J. Barnby) Arr. by James Shaw	1	0
March in B flat .. .. E. Silas	1	0
Grand March ("Lohengrin," Act III., Wagner) .. W. Creser	1	0
Bridal Chorus ("Lohengrin," Wagner) .. .. .. W. Creser	1	0
Wedding March .. .. Composed by W. Creser	1	6

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE SERVICE

FOR THE

SOLEMNIZATION of HOLY MATRIMONY

AS USED IN

WESTMINSTER ABBEY

WITH A SPECIAL ANTHEM

COMPOSED BY

J. FREDERICK BRIDGE.

Mus. Doc., Oxon., Organist and Master of the Choristers.

Price Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

GILL'S EASY VOLUNTARIES.—"Messiah," "Judas," "Elijah," "Creation," "St. Paul." 1s. each set of twenty Voluntaries.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

COMPOSITIONS for the PIANOFORTE, by RALPH H. BELLAIRS, Organist of Bradfield College.
Twelve Lyrical Sketches. Two books. 2s. each. ROBT. COCKS & Co.
Strelinka, Capriccio. J. WILLIAMS.

ASHDOWN EDITION

OF STANDARD PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

		Net s.	d.
1.	Chopin's Twenty-seven Studies	2	6
2.	Stephen Heller's Album. Op. 138 ...	1	6
3.	Henri Roubier's Twenty Melodies of Franz Schubert	2	0
4.	Stephen Heller's Twenty-four Preludes. Op. 81	1	6
5.	Chopin's Eighteen Nocturnes	2	0
6.	Czerny's One Hundred and One Exercises	1	0
7.	Czerny's Etude de la Vélocité	1	6
8.	Schumann's Phantasiestücke. Op. 12 ...	1	6
9.	Schubert's Eight Impromptus	1	6
10.	Liszt's Soirées de Vienne	2	6
11.	Clementi's Six Sonatinas. Op. 36 ...	1	0
12.	Stephen Heller's Thirty-two Preludes. Op. 119	1	6
13.	Rubinstein's Soirées à St. Petersbourg (Six Morceaux). Op. 44	1	0
14.	Chopin's Forty-three Mazurkas	3	0
15.	Schumann's Album für die Jugend. Op. 68	1	6
16.	Dussek's Six Sonatinas. Op. 20 ...	1	0
17.	Gottschalk. Selection No. 1 (Six Pieces)	1	0
18.	Kuhlau's Six Sonatinas. Op. 55 ...	1	0
19.	Chopin's Eight Waltzes	1	6
20.	Kullak's Youthful days. Twenty-four characteristic pieces	1	6
21.	Kessler's Twenty-four Studies	2	6
22.	Clementi's Six Sonatinas. Ops. 37 and 38	1	6
23.	Chopin's Twenty-five Preludes	1	6
24.	Clementi's Gradus ad Parnassum. Twenty-eight Studies ... ... (Selected and Edited by Walter Macfarren.)	2	6
25.	John Field's Six Nocturnes	1	0
26.	Lott's Circle of Diatonic Scales... ...	1	6
27.	Diabelli's Seven Sonatinas. Op. 168 ...	1	0
28.	Kullak's Les fleurs animées. Seven characteristic pieces	1	6
29.	Mendelssohn's Thirty-six Lieder ohne Worte	1	6
30.	Czerny's Forty Daily Studies	1	6
31.	W. S. Bennett's Six Studies. Op. 11 ...	1	0
32.	Stephen Heller's Restless Nights. Op. 82	1	6
33.	Kuhlau's Four Sonatinas. Op. 88 ...	1	0
34.	F. Hiller's Sei capriccetti. Op. 35 ...	1	0
35.	Bertini's Twenty-five Studies. Op. 29	1	0
36.	Mayer's Six Études Mélodiques. Op. 149	1	0
37.	Schumann's Scenes in the forest. Op. 82	1	0
38.	Chopin's Four Ballades	1	6
39.	Stephen Heller's Promenades d'un solitaire. Op. 78	1	0
40.	Kalkbrenner's Twenty Studies. Op. 169	1	0
41.	Schmitt's L'Indispensable. Op. 16 ...	1	0
42.	Bennett's Suite de Pièces. Op. 24 ...	1	6
43.	Czerny's Fifty Études. Op. 740. Book 1. Studies 1 to 24	1	6
44.	Czerny's Fifty Études. Op. 740. Book 2. Studies 25 to 50	1	6
45.	Mayer's Six Études. Op. 31	1	0
46.	Stephen Heller's Promenades d'un solitaire. (Second set. Wanderstunden.) Op. 80	1	6
47.	Schubert's Posthumous Works	1	0
48.	Bache, F. E. Five characteristic pieces	1	0
49.	Lott. Selection No. 1 (Six pieces) ..	1	0
50.	Cramer's Studio. Book 1. Studies 1 to 42	1	6
51.	Cramer's Studio. Book 2. Studies 43 to 84	1	6
52.	Beethoven's Twelve Waltzes	1	0
53.	Silas' Six petits morceaux. Op. 17 ...	1	0
54.	Beethoven's Five Sonatinas	1	0
55.	Gibsone's Meditations (First series) ...	1	0
56.	Bennett's Preludes and Lessons ...	2	0
57.	Heller's Douze Valses. Op. 97 ...	1	6
58.	Bertini. Twenty-five Elementary Studies Op. 137	1	0
59.	Wollenhaupt. Selection No. 1 (Six pieces)	1	0
60.	Edouard Dorn's Mountain Memories ...	1	0
61.	Czerny's Introduction to the Etude de la Vélocité. Op. 636	1	0
62.	Schubert's Moments musicaux and Valses nobles	1	0
63.	Schumann's Faschingsschwank aus Wien. Op. 26	1	0
64.	Diabelli. Four Sonatinas. Op. 151 ...	1	0
65.	Pfeiffer. Twenty-five Studies. Op. 70	2	0
66.	Raff. Douze Romances. Op. 8 ...	1	6
67.	Mendelssohn. Christmas pieces. Op. 72	1	0
68.	Moscheles. Grand Characteristic Studies. Op. 95	2	0
69.	Diabelli. Twenty-eight Melodious Exercises—Duets. Op. 149	1	0
70.	Spindler. Little Musicians. Twenty short pieces. Op. 356	1	0
71.	Herz. Scales and Exercises	1	0
72.	Gurlitt. Child-life. Twenty little pieces. Op. 74	1	0
73.	Heller. Transcriptions of Schubert Songs (Twelve)	1	6
74.	Bertini. Twenty-five Studies. Op. 32. Sequel to Op. 29	1	0
75.	Kirchner. Album Leaves. Album-blätter. Op. 7	1	0
76.	Rubinstein. Acrostychon (Laura). Op. 37	1	0
77.	Bertini. Twenty-five Studies for small hands. Op. 100	1	0

TO BE CONTINUED.

EDWIN ASHDOWN, LIMITED,

NEW YORK: 1 and 3, UNION SQUARE.

LONDON: HANOVER SQUARE.

TORONTO: 68 KING STREET WEST.

NOVELLO'S COLLECTION OF

TRIOS, QUARTETS, &c.

FOR FEMALE VOICES.

RECENT NUMBERS.

251.	Merry Songsters	John Kinross	3d.
252.	Flow'rets fair	"	3d.
253.	The Waterfall	"	3d.
254.	Shades of Night	"	3d.
255.	Four Angels	C. A. Macirone	3d.
256.	Mistress Mary	"	2d.
257.	Rejoice, for love is Lord	A. C. Mackenzie	4d.
258.	O thou divine	"	6d.
259.	The Wood-Nymphs	Percy C. Buck	2d.
260.	A Song	"	2d.
261.	Weep you no more	"	2d.
262.	Sweet the Angelus is ringing	H. Smart	3d.
263.	Orpheus with his lute	Edward German	3d.
264.	Maidens of Zia	Herbert Bunning	3d.
265.	Some strain that once thou heardest	Marie J. A. Wurm	3d.
266.	About the sweet bag of a bee	"	2d.
267.	Whenever life some joy does bring	"	2d.
268.	Under the greenwood tree	"	3d.
269.	Good-Night	"	3d.
270.	Hohenlinden	F. A. Marshall	3d.
271.	My true love hath my heart	W. A. C. Cruickshank	3d.
272.	Roger and Maggie	C. Mühlfeld	2d.
273.	Little thoughts that grow	Chas. H. Lloyd	2d.
274.	Solitude	J. Pointer	3d.
275.	May Morning	"	3d.
276.	The stars are with the voyager	"	2d.
277.	Water-Lilies	"	4d.
278.	To Sea	Myles B. Foster	2d.
279.	If hope were but a fairy	"	2d.
280.	The willow and its lesson	"	2d.
281.	The Promised Land	"	2d.
282.	Song should breathe of scents and flowers	"	2d.
283.	March	"	2d.
284.	Hail! Star of Eve!	R. Spofforth	2d.
285.	Honey-bees love heath'ry heights	Chas. H. Lloyd	3d.
286.	Ring out, wild bells	Henry Lahee	3d.
287.	Sorrow not, why art thou weeping? / One day there came from Lochlin	Niels W. Gade	3d.
288.	Stars of the Summer Night	John E. West	3d.

(To be continued.)

THE ORPHEUS

(NEW SERIES).

RECENT NUMBERS.

215.	The hardy Norseman's house of yore	R. L. de Pearsall	4d.
216.	The Ladies	A. C. Mackenzie	2d.
217.	Bacchanalian	Theodore Distin	3d.
218.	To a brother artist	A. C. Mackenzie	2d.
219.	Sunset (Slowly sinks the sun to rest)	W. A. Barrett	3d.
220.	Shepherds, rise! and shake off sleep	Henry Lahee	3d.
221.	Good-Night	Claude Barton	3d.
222.	Like apple-blossom, white and red	Charles H. Lloyd	2d.
223.	Peace	C. Lee Williams	2d.
224.	Song of the Pedlar	"	3d.
225.	There is a garden in her face	A. Herbert Brewer	3d.
226.	Maiden fair, O deign to tell	Joseph Haydn	3d.
227.	The Cab Catch	A. J. Caldicott	4d.
228.	The Hunt is up. A.T.T.B.	J. L. Hatton	4d.
229.	Good-Night	H. Goetz	3d.
230.	October Song	"	2d.
231.	A Forest Scene	"	3d.
232.	Drinking Song	"	3d.
233.	Heave the anchor	W. A. Barrett	4d.
234.	The Goslings	J. F. Bridge	4d.
235.	The Stream	John P. Attwater	2d.
236.	Ode to the terrestrial globe	J. F. Bridge	3d.
237.	An old rat's tale	"	4d.
238.	Cupid once upon a bed of roses	J. V. Roberts	3d.
239.	I prithee send me back my heart	King Hall	3d.
240.	The Cryer	"	4d.
241.	A wet sheet and a flowing sea	Arnold D. Culley	3d.
242.	Salvete cives nostri	A. L. Peace	4d.
243.	Echoes	Oliver King	2d.
244.	May Morning	Theodore Distin	2d.
245.	A Soldiers' Song	Hamilton Clarke	3d.
246.	Midnight and Noon	"	2d.
247.	Go, happy rose	F. Iliffe	3d.
248.	The wintry winds are blowing	J. Müller	4d.
249.	The three jolly pigeons	Harvey Löhr	4d.
250.	Where sunless rivers weep	Charles L. Naylor	3d.
251.	Come, my dear one	J. V. Roberts	2d.
252.	A lover's counsel	F. H. Cowen	3d.
253.	The trysting tree	G. J. Bennett	2d.
254.	I love my Jean	"	2d.
255.	Echoes	J. Baptiste Calkin	2d.
256.	It was a Lover	Chas. Wood	3d.
257.	When for the world's repose	Earl of Mornington	2d.

(To be continued.)

NOVELLO'S

PART-SONG BOOK.

RECENT NUMBERS.

647.	Sing heigh-ho!	C. V. Stanford	2d.
648.	Airly Beacon	"	2d.
649.	The Knight's Tomb	"	2d.
650.	To his flocks	"	3d.
651.	Corydon, arise	"	3d.
652.	Diaphenia	"	2d.
653.	Sweet love for me	"	3d.
654.	Damon's Passion	"	3d.
655.	Phœbe	"	3d.
656.	This morning, at the dawn of day	From the French	2d.
657.	Sad hearts	A. H. Brewer	3d.
658.	Advice to lovers	P. W. Pilcher	2d.
659.	Peace; come away	C. V. Stanford	2d.
660.	Waiting for father	R. Bartholomew	3d.
661.	The Blue-bottle's fate	A. H. Ashworth	3d.
662.	March like the victors	Roland Rogers	3d.
663.	Hark! the Vesper hymn	Sir John Stevenson	2d.
664.	Ye banks and braes	Arr. by W. G. McNaught	1d.
665.	The trysting tree	George J. Bennett	2d.
666.	Jean	Oliver King	3d.
667.	Cupid is a wayward boy	Ch. H. Lloyd	4d.
668.	Come, fairies, trip it	F. Iliffe	3d.
669.	Song of the Silent Land	John E. West	3d.
670.	The time of youth	King Henry VIII.	2d.
671.	Come o'er the burn, Bessie	Anon.	2d.
672.	Enforce yourself as God's own knight	Edmund Turges	3d.
673.	Thus musing	Wm. Newark	3d.
674.	Ah, my dear son	Anon.	3d.
675.	Pastime with good company	King Henry VIII.	3d.
676.	Hope	Josef Rheinberger	2d.
677.	The clouds	"	3d.
678.	The Fountain	"	3d.
679.	Evening rest	"	2d.
680.	The Nightingale	"	3d.
681.	Good advice	"	3d.
682.	The Storm	"	3d.
683.	Autumn Song	"	2d.
684.	The Oak Tree	G. J. Bennett	3d.
685.	When Flora decks the mantling bowers	Noel Johnson	2d.
686.	I think on thee in the night	Elizabeth Fédarb	3d.
687.	The evening wind	F. J. Harper	3d.

(To be continued.)

NOVELLO'S

OCTAVO ANTHEMS.

RECENT NUMBERS.

392.	Our Father, which art in heaven	J. Barnby	2d.
393.	Like as the hart	Thomas Adams	3d.
394.	I will love Thee, O Lord, my strength	Matthew Kingston	4d.
395.	O Lord, Thou art my God	Ch. H. Lloyd	3d.
396.	I heard a voice	Sir John Goss	2d.
397.	Jesu, lover of my soul	F. Iliffe	2d.
398.	The Lord is my strength	S. Coleridge-Taylor	3d.
399.	At the Lamb's high feast we sing	Rev. E. V. Hall	3d.
400.	Blessed City, heavenly Salem	A. C. Fisher	4d.
401.	Have mercy upon me, O God	James Shaw	3d.
402.	And when the Day of Pentecost	C. W. Smith	3d.
403.	In my Father's house	J. Maude Crament	3d.
404.	Harvest Hymn	Ferris Tozer	2d.
405.	I will magnify Thee	Oliver King	4d.
406.	My mouth shall speak the praise	John E. West	4d.
407.	The Lord is my light and my salvation	C. W. Jordan	3d.
408.	Lighten our darkness	G. R. Vicars	2d.
409.	Lift up your heads	S. Coleridge-Taylor	3d.
410.	Sing we merrily to God our strength	Rev. E. V. Hall	4d.
411.	Lord of the Harvest	J. Barnby	4d.
412.	Honour the Lord with thy substance	J. Stainer	4d.
413.	The fost'ring earth, the genial showers	J. L. Hopkins	3d.
414.	There was war in heaven	W. A. C. Cruickshank	3d.
415.	Break forth into joy	S. Coleridge-Taylor	3d.
416.	Prepare ye the way	J. Maude Crament	4d.
417.	Who is this?	Fred. Rayner	2d.
418.	O God, who hast prepared	A. S. Baker	2d.
419.	Behold, how good and joyful	Hamilton Clarke	4d.
420.	I have set God always before me	"	4d.
421.	The day is past and over	J. C. Marks, Jun.	3d
422.	The Lord is risen	G. M. Garrett	4d.
423.	Why seek ye the living	F. Peel	4d.
424.	Abide with me	R. Dunstan	3d.
425.	Lead, kindly Light	"	3d.
426.	Sun of my soul	"	3d.
427.	Hail! gladdening Light	J. T. Field	2d.
428.	My God, I love Thee	G. J. Bennett	3d.
429.	O praise God in His holiness	G. C. Martin	2d.
430.	O God, who hast prepared	A. W. Batson	3d.
431.	Make me a clean heart	"	3d.
432.	They that sow in tears	"	3d.
433.	Give ear, O Shepherd of Israel	A. Whiting	3d.
434.	Lord, Thou hast searched me	"	3d.

(To be continued.)

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES.

THIRD EDITION.

KING ARTHUR

A DRAMATIC CANTATA

FOR

THREE SOLO VOICES, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

WORDS BY

JAMES SMIETON, M.A.

MUSIC BY

JOHN MORE SMIETON.

OLD NOTATION, 2s. 6d.; TONIC SOL-FA, 1s.
Full Score and Band Parts on hire. String Parts for sale at 16s.

The attention of Conductors is specially directed to the above Cantata, as affording an unusually interesting work for Chorus and Soloists. It takes about an hour and forty minutes to perform, and has been given with conspicuous success by the Choral Unions of Dundee, Broughty Ferry, Airdrie, Peebles, Helensburgh, and Hamilton, as well as performances by Miss Holland's Choir (2), Byfield (2), Uckfield, Wakefield, Brondesbury, Glasgow Academy Choir, Glasgow E. Choral Society, &c.

SCOTSMAN.

This beautiful work will enhance the reputation won for its composer by his similar composition, "Ariadne." It shows a charming gift of melody and no small musicianly skill in its merely technical qualities. It may be recommended to Choral Societies as well worthy of study.

MUSICAL TIMES (JUNE 1, 1892).

Mr. John More Smieton's dramatic Cantata "King Arthur" was the Pièce de resistance at the annual concert by the Glasgow Academy Choir on April 29. A better choice could hardly have been made, inasmuch as the work has been laid out on lines which cannot fail to prove popular amongst the numerous choral societies ever on the alert for novelty. Mr. James Smieton's admirably written libretto has, indeed, afforded opportunity for effective musical treatment, which is not only graceful and melodious, but eminently graphic in its descriptive power, the work, in short, of a craftsman who is steadily making progress amongst contemporary composers.

DUNDEE EVENING TELEGRAPH (MARCH 30, 1892).

"King Arthur" is called by the composer a cantata, but the name hardly conveys to the mind an idea of the elaborate, lengthy, and powerful character of the work. It is rather a musical epic, and is characterised throughout by a scholarly knowledge of harmony, by a variety and richness of effect, and notably by a melodiousness throughout that are really remarkable. One notable feature which must be mentioned is the effective character of Mr. Smieton's recitatives. The beautiful hymn "There is a land" was a much relished item near the close of the cantata, which ended with a powerful chorus, in which the composer calls up all the resources before him to make a telling and impressive finish to the work.

GLASGOW HERALD (NOVEMBER 30, 1892).

The Eastern Choral Society gave a concert last night in the City Hall. The work chosen for performance was Mr. John More Smieton's "King Arthur." Mr. Smieton has set music to his brother's libretto with very happy results, and the work contains many delightful choruses and solos. Miss Annie Lea was the soprano soloist, impersonating Guinevere; Mr. Probert, the tenor (Arthur); Mr. J. W. Render took the music allotted to Merlin and Sir Bedevere. Mr. Cole's orchestra furnished an excellent accompaniment. . . . The choir consisted of about 150 voices, and Mr. George Taggart, the conductor, may be congratulated on having trained them to a high state of efficiency.

SPECIALLY ADAPTED FOR SMALL CHORAL SOCIETIES, CHURCH CHOIRS, &c.—4TH EDITION.

BY THE SAME AUTHORS

ARIADNE

A DRAMATIC CANTATA

FOR FOUR SOLO VOICES, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA.

OLD NOTATION, 2s.; TONIC SOL-FA, 9d.
Full Score and Band Parts on hire.

This charming Work takes about one hour to perform, and has been given by over thirty different Musical Societies throughout the kingdom.

Copies of either Work will be sent free to Conductors, on application to the COMPOSER, 12, Victoria Chambers, Dundee.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

ORATORIOS

BY

GEORGE SHINN, MUS. BAC., CANTAB.

SUITABLE FOR CONCERT ROOM OR CHURCH.

The following works contain many effective Solos and Choruses of moderate difficulty, and will take about an hour and a half to perform.

Orchestral Parts published to both works.

Tenth Thousand.

THE CAPTIVES OF BABYLON.

Price 2s.: paper boards, 2s. 6d.; cloth, 3s. 6d.; Sol-fa, 1s.

LAZARUS OF BETHANY.

Price 2s.; paper boards, 2s. 6d.; cloth, 3s. 6d.; Sol-fa, 1s.

"Mr. Shinn has the happy knack of writing popular music, which is at the same time thoroughly good and free from serious difficulties. This, his latest work, will find acceptance amongst Choral Societies and Church Choirs. The Choruses are bold and effective. The Solo writing is melodious and well suited to the words. The quartet 'Blessed are the dead' is really charming."—Nonconformist Musical Journal.

"Mr. Shinn is entitled to warm praise for his Oratorio, since it is obviously written to provide choirs of moderate capabilities with a work not too long, not too difficult, but withal melodious, musician-like, and, above all, faithful in its representation of the dramatic incidents of its sacred narrative. Upon all these grounds Mr. Shinn can claim a success."—The Keyboard.

"The work contains some remarkably well-written solos and choruses. There are two exquisite bass solos, and the quartet 'Blessed are the dead' is a lovely piece of part-writing. The concluding fugue, 'Hallelujah, Amen,' is a fitting climax to the work."—Sussex Daily News.

London: HART and Co., 22, Paternoster Row, E.C.

COMPOSITIONS

BY

T. MEE PATTISON.

CANTATAS.	Staff. s. d.	Sol-fa. s. d.
The Ancient Mariner	2 6	0 6
Do. do. (Choruses only)	1 0
The Lay of the Last Minstrel	2 6
Do. do. (Choruses only)	1 0
May Day	1 6	0 6
The Miracles of Christ (Sacred)	1 0	0 6
ANTHEMS, &c.
All Thy works praise Thee (Harvest)	0 3	0 1½
Thou visitest the earth (Harvest)	0 2
I know that my Redeemer liveth (Easter)	0 3
There were shepherds (Christmas)	0 2
Thirteen Offertory Sentences	0 4
Six Kyries	0 2
Te Deum laudamus (in F)	0 3

ORIGINAL ORGAN COMPOSITIONS.

Fifteen Introductory and Concluding Voluntaries	3s. 6d.
Five Concluding Voluntaries	1s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

In the Press.

CANTATA

SET TO ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON'S POEM

CROSSING THE BAR

FOR FULL ORCHESTRA, CHORUS, AND PIANOFORTE

BY ALFRED HARBOROUGH.

Vocal Score, with the Orchestral Score arranged for two performers on the Pianoforte, 2s. 6d.; String Parts, 5s.; Wind Parts in the Press.

Full Score on application to the Publishers.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PRACTICAL HINTS ON BOY CHOIR TRAINING. By G. EDWARD STUBBS, M.A., Organist and Choirmaster of St. Agnes Chapel, Trinity Parish, New York.

Sixth Edition.

A useful treatise on the vocal training of Chorister Boys embodying the views of standard writers on the voice.

Although strictly scientific the book deals with the subject in a plain and practical way, and will be found of value to all who are entrusted with the training of boys' voices. It is highly endorsed by leading Clergymen and Choirmasters both in England and America. Price 3s. 6d. net.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

MUSIC

FOR MILITARY BAND

PUBLISHED BY

NOVELLO, EWER & CO.

THREE DANCES

FROM THE MUSIC TO "HENRY VIII."

COMPOSED BY

EDWARD GERMAN.

Arranged by DAN GODFREY, Jun.

Price Fifteen Shillings.

BENEDICTUS

FROM SIX PIECES FOR VIOLIN

COMPOSED BY

A. C. MACKENZIE.

Arranged by DAN GODFREY, Jun.

Price Five Shillings.

THE RUSSIAN NATIONAL ANTHEM

(BARNBY'S ARRANGEMENT).

Arranged by Lieutenant DAN GODFREY.

Price Three Shillings.

THE EMPIRE FLAG

SONG AND CHORUS

COMPOSED BY

A. C. MACKENZIE.

Arranged by CHARLES GODFREY.

Price Five Shillings.

WEDDING MARCH

COMPOSED AND DEDICATED TO H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.

BY

WILLIAM CRESER.

Arranged by DAN GODFREY, Jun.

Price Three Shillings and Sixpence.

In the Press.

BALLET MUSIC

FROM "COLOMBA," AN OPERA

COMPOSED BY

A. C. MACKENZIE.

Arranged by DAN GODFREY, Jun.

In the Press.

SELECTION

FROM "MORS ET VITA"

COMPOSED BY

CH. GOUNOD.

Arranged by DAN GODFREY, Jun.

In the Press.

SELECTION

FROM "THE REDEMPTION"

COMPOSED BY

CH. GOUNOD.

Arranged by DAN GODFREY, Jun.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

RECENTLY REVIVED AT THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

THE IRISH SYMPHONY

IN F MINOR

BY

C. VILLIERS STANFORD.

Full Score, 30s.; String Parts, 11s.; Wind Parts, 22s. 6d.
Pianoforte Arrangement, by CHARLES WOOD (Four Hands), 7s. 6d.

THE TIMES.

Its melodic beauty and the ingenuity with which the various examples of traditional music are interwoven in the general scheme made a deep impression on the audience, and the composer was twice recalled to the platform at the close of the work.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.

Nothing more piquant and beautiful has been offered to public approbation.

MORNING POST.

A masterly composition, the beauties of which become more apparent at each hearing.

STANDARD.

Won immediate recognition, alike for the clever and musicianly treatment of the original subject-matter and the skilful use of traditional Hibernian airs.

DAILY GRAPHIC.

A remarkably impressive and attractive work.

DAILY CHRONICLE.

Every hearing of the Symphony so appropriately named secures fresh friends. It is difficult, indeed, to see how it could be otherwise.

GUARDIAN.

If we except some uncompromising passages in the opening movement the Symphony is written throughout in the composer's most genial vein. The second movement, based on a "hop-jig" tune, which Dr. Stanford has more recently arranged as a song, under the title of "Ould Docthor Mack," is immensely spirited and taking; but the interest of the work by no means flags as it advances. The borrowing of national airs in works of this sort is often a disputable and even dangerous experiment, since it challenges inevitable comparison between the old and the new matter. It must be confessed, however, that Dr. Stanford has emerged from the ordeal with distinction. His own themes are happily coined, and in keeping with the others, while his ornamentation is characteristic and effective.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S
ALBUMS
FOR
VIOLONCELLO AND PIANOFORTE.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH.

*FOUR MARCHES
COMPOSED BY
F. MENDELSSOHN BARTHOLDY.
TRANSCRIBED BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.

*THIRTY MELODIES
COMPOSED BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.

*TEN TRANSCRIPTIONS
FROM MENDELSSOHN'S "ELIJAH"
BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.
Price One Shilling.

*TEN TRANSCRIPTIONS
FROM
GOUNOD'S "MORS ET VITA"
BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.

*TWELVE SKETCHES
COMPOSED BY
BATTISON HAYNES.

*HUNGARIAN DANCES
TRANSCRIBED BY
SIEGFRIED JACOBY.

*NINE TRANSCRIPTIONS
FROM SULLIVAN'S "GOLDEN LEGEND"
BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.

*SIX MORCEAUX DE SALON
COMPOSED BY
JOACHIM RAFF.

*SIX SONATAS
COMPOSED BY
ARCANGELO CORELLI.
EDITED BY
ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.
Price Three Shillings and Sixpence.

*EIGHT
NATIONAL MELODIES
ARRANGED BY
SIEGFRIED JACOBY.

*NINE TRANSCRIPTIONS
FROM GOUNOD'S "REDEMPTION"
BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.

*TWELVE EASY PIECES
COMPOSED BY
ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.

*TWELVE
CHARACTERISTIC PIECES
COMPOSED BY
J. JACQUES HAAKMAN.

TEN PIECES
COMPOSED BY
ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.

*Albums marked * may also be had arranged for Violin and Pianoforte.*

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

NEW FOREIGN PUBLICATIONS.

	s.	d.
CHAMINADE, C.—Two Pianoforte Pieces:—
No. 1. Duetto	4	0
„ 2. Zingara	4	0
—— No. 2. Zingara. Arranged as Pianoforte Duet	7	0
CHERUBINI, L.—Concert-Ouverture. Written for the London Philharmonic Society. Edited by F. Grützmacher:—
Full Score net	8	0
Parts „	12	0
EILENBERG, R.—"In the spinning-room." For Pianoforte. Op. 104	3	0
—— The same. For Orchestra net	4	0
—— "The Harvest Feast." For Pianoforte Solo. Op. 156	4	0
—— The same. For Orchestra net	4	0
—— "Rêve du bal" ("Dream of the Ball"). For Pianoforte. Op. 155	3	0
—— The same. For String Orchestra net	1	6
FOLVILLE, T.—"Salve Regina." For Mezzo-Soprano. On Bach's 27th Prelude. With Pianoforte and Organ Accompaniment	4	0
—— The same. With Pianoforte and Organ, and Violin ad lib.	8	0
GLAZOUNOW, A.—Triumphal March, on the occasion of the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago, 1893. Composed for Grand Orchestra, with Chorus ad lib.:—
Full Score net	8	0
Orchestral Parts „	20	0
Pianoforte Score	6	0
Pianoforte Duet	6	0
GODARD, B.—2me Romance sans paroles. For Pianoforte. Op. 120	4	0
—— The same. For Pianoforte and Violin	5	0
HILGER, A.—"My Darling." Gavotte	2	0
HOFFMANN, J. C.—Five Pieces for the Pianoforte. Op. 20:—
No. 1. Impromptu	4	0
„ 2. Menuet	3	0
„ 3. Elégie	3	0
„ 4. Echo	2	0
„ 5. Berceuse	3	0
—— Sonate. For Pianoforte. Op. 21	9	0
HUBAY, JENO.—Morceau de Concert. For Viola (or Violoncello) and Pianoforte	9	0
—— "Hejre Kati." Scène de la Czarda. Arranged as Pianoforte Duet. Op 32	5	0
—— "Hullámzó Balaton." Scène de la Czarda (No. 5). For Violin and Pianoforte. Arranged as Pianoforte Duet. Op. 33	5	0
—— "Sarga Cserebagar." Scènes de la Czarda (No. 6). For Violin and Pianoforte. Arranged as Pianoforte Duet. Op. 34	5	0
—— "Kossuth-Nota." Scènes de la Czarda (No. 7). For Violin and Pianoforte. Op. 41	7	0
KISTLER, CYRILL.—"Kunihild." Prelude. For Pianoforte	3	0
—— Six Pieces for the Harmonium. Op. 56	3	0
KOCZALSKI, RAOUL.—Compositions for the Pianoforte. Gavotta, Op. 43; Mazurka, Op. 44; Nocturne, Op. 45; Valse triste, Op. 46; Rhapsodie polonaise, Op. 47. In one Vol. net	2	0
LASSEN, E.—"All Souls' Day." "Resolution." "Once again." Arranged for the Harp, by Beatrix Fels each	2	0
MACDOWELL, E. A.—Suite for Orchestra. Op. 42:—
Full Score net	8	0
Orchestral Parts „	22	0
MOSZKOWSKI, M.—Valse pour Piano. Arranged for Violin and Pianoforte, by F. Rehfeld. Op. 34	7	0
—— Air de ballet. As Pianoforte Duet. Op. 36, No. 5	5	0
—— Etincelles. As Pianoforte Duet. Op. 36, No. 6	6	0
OVERTURES. For Pianoforte, Harmonium, and Violin (Violoncello, Flute, and Cornet-à-Pistons ad lib.):—
No. 1. Beethoven, "Egmont."
„ 2. Weber, "Freischütz."
„ 3. Mozart, "Zauberflöte."
„ 4. Mozart, "Don Juan."
„ 5. Gluck, "Iphigenia in Aulis."
„ 6. Cherubini, "Der Wasserträger."
(a.) As Trio. For Pianoforte, Harmonium, and Violin each	8	0
(b.) As Quartet. For Pianoforte, Harmonium, Violin, and Violoncello each	9	0
(c.) As Quintet. For Pianoforte, Harmonium, Violin, Violoncello, and Flute each	10	0
(d.) As Sextet. For Pianoforte, Harmonium, Violin, Violoncello, Flute, and Cornet each	11	0
SCALES. Major and Minor (Harmonic, Melodic, and Chromatic), for all Voices. With Pianoforte Accompaniment net	2	6
SOCOLOW, N.—Elégie et Barcarolle. For Violoncello and Pianoforte. Op. 13 complete	5	0
No. 1. Elégie	3	0
„ 2. Barcarolle	3	0
STCHERBATCHEFF, N.—"Les Orchidées." Deux Valses. Op. 27 complete	4	0
THOMÉ, F.—Trio. For Pianoforte, Violin, and Violoncello. Op. 121 net	12	0
WEBER, C. M.—Adagio and Rondo. For Harmonium and Orchestra. New edition:—
Full Score net	4	0
Orchestral Parts „	5	6
—— The same. For Harmonium and Pianoforte	4	0
—— The same. For Harmonium and Strings:—
Score	4	0
Parts	5	0

Sold at half-price, if not marked net.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

THREE DANCES

FROM THE MUSIC TO HENRY VIII.

COMPOSED BY

EDWARD GERMAN.

Arranged for the Pianoforte by the Composer.

Price Two Shillings.

String Parts, 4s. Wind Parts, 7s. 6d.

Arrangement for Violin and Pianoforte, 3s.

Ditto for Pianoforte Duet, 3s.

Just Published.

Military Band Parts, 15s.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

SUITE

FROM THE MUSIC TO SHAKESPEARE'S

HENRY VIII.

Composed for the production of the Play at the Lyceum Theatre, January, 1892,

By EDWARD GERMAN.

PIANOFORTE DUET.

Price Five Shillings.

CONTENTS.

1. Overture.
2. Prelude to Act II. Intermezzo funèbre.
3. Prelude to Act III. Allegretto in G minor.
4. Prelude to Act IV. March in D.
5. Prelude to Act V. Thanksgiving Hymn.
6. Three Dances:—

I. Morris Dance. II. Shepherds' Dance. III. Torch Dance.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES

FOR THE VOICE

WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

COMPOSED BY

G. HENSCHEL.

IN TWO PARTS.

Part I.—STUDIES IN SUSTAINED SINGING (Low Voice).
Part II.—STUDIES IN FLORID SINGING (Low Voice).

Part I.—STUDIES IN SUSTAINED SINGING (High Voice).
Part II.—STUDIES IN FLORID SINGING (High Voice).

Part I.—STUDIES IN SUSTAINED SINGING (Medium Voice).
Part II.—STUDIES IN FLORID SINGING (Medium Voice).

Price Four Shillings each Part.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

Just Published. 8vo. Price 12s. 6d.

PRIMITIVE MUSIC

AN INQUIRY INTO THE ORIGIN AND DEVELOPMENT OF MUSIC, SONGS, INSTRUMENTS, DANCES, AND PANTOMIMES OF SAVAGE RACES.

By RICHARD WALLASCHEK

With Musical Examples.

London: Longmans, Green and Co.

TIME.—A Short Treatise on TIME, by Frank Manly, I.S.M. Dedicated to Sir Joseph Barnby. Patronised by the leading Members of the Musical Profession. Testimonials from Sir William Cusins, Professor Bridge, Mr. Sims Reeves, &c. Price 6d. London: F. Pitman, 20, Paternoster Row, E.C.

HANDEL'S LARGO

ARRANGED FOR THE

ORGAN

BY

GEORGE C. MARTIN.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

(No. 2. Organ Arrangements edited by George C. Martin. This number also contains Schubert's Andante, from Pianoforte Sonata (Op. 147), and Spohr's "As pants the hart," from "The Crucifixion").

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

BOEKELMAN'S EDITION

OF

BACH'S FUGUES

PRINTED IN COLOURS.

In this Edition the essential parts of each Fugue—viz., Subject, Answer, Counter-subject, Episodes, &c., are each printed in a distinct colour, with a view to helping the Student to a clear understanding of the structure and form of the composition.

Book I. contains—

Vol. 1. Fugue 3, C sharp major. | Vol. 1. Fugue 10, E minor.
„ 1. Fugue 4, C sharp minor. | „ 2. Fugue 7, E flat.

Book II. contains—

Vol. 1. Fugue 1, in C. | Vol. 1. Fugue 21, in B flat.
„ 1. Fugue 7, in E flat. | „ 1. Fugue 22, in B flat minor.

Price Two Shillings net each Fugue.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Sole Agents for Great Britain and the Colonies.

Just Published.

FIVE MINIATURES FOR PIANO

COMPOSED BY

S. B. SCHLESINGER.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence net.

CONTENTS.

No. 1. Pleasant Dreams. | No. 4. Meditation.
„ 2. Good Morning. | „ 5. Flirtation.
„ 3. Melody.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

UNLESS

SONG

THE POETRY WRITTEN BY

ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

SEBASTIAN B. SCHLESINGER.

No. 1, in D. No. 2, in C.

Price Two Shillings each.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW MUSIC by T. E. SPINNEY. Words by AMY THORN. THE SINGER, NOT THE SONG. Price 2s. net. (One of the prettiest songs of the day.)
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HUMOROUS PART-SONGS, by ALFRED ALLEN.
Dickory, dickory, dock .. .. 4d.
Tom, Tom, the Piper's son .. .. .. 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE

ART OF TRAINING CHOIR BOYS

BY

G. C. MARTIN

Organist and Master of the Choristers of St. Paul's Cathedral.

Price Three Shillings; in paper boards, 3s. 6d.

(No. 39. NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S MUSIC PRIMERS, Edited by Sir JOHN STAINER.)

The Exercises for the use of Boys also published separately.
Price One Shilling; in paper boards, 1s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW

CASES

FOR BINDING NUMBERS 1 TO 12,

VOL. I.,

Are now ready, and may be had of all Musicsellers in Town and Country.

Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Handsome Design,

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

ETON SCHOOL SONGS

SET TO MUSIC BY

ARTHUR GOODHART.

Price Sixpence each.

No. 1. Song of the Scug.
„ 2. The Eton College Hunt.
„ 3. The game's the thing.
„ 4. Song of the Wall.
„ 5. No triumphs like those.
„ 6. Twenty years ago.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Dedicated (by permission) to the Right Rev. Lord Bishop of Ripon.

NEW SONG, by JEAN CHARLES, THE LORD SHALL COMFORT ZION, with Chorus ad lib., suitable for Church Choirs. Price 2s. net; post-free, 2s. 1½d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE PSALMS

BIBLE VERSION

POINTED FOR CHANTING

BY THE

REV. DR. TROUTBECK.

CLOTH, ONE SHILLING.

The principles on which the pointing has been done are mainly those of the Cathedral Psalter, of which Dr. Troutbeck was Co-Editor, a Psalter which has now successfully endured the test of long experience. The book is not, of course, divided into daily portions like the Prayer Book Psalter, as it is intended for the use of those Christian bodies in which the Psalms are not sung throughout a monthly course, but it can easily be so divided by those who use it.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES

FOR THE PIANOFORTE

EDITED, ARRANGED IN GROUPS, AND THE FINGERING REVISED AND SUPPLEMENTED

BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

This Collection of Studies is intended to illustrate the various elements of a complete course of pianoforte technique, and to provide students with the means of attacking and overcoming the different special difficulties which have to be encountered. With this view, the Studies have been arranged in groups, those in each group being placed in progressive order, and having reference to some one particular difficulty. The greater part of the Studies themselves have been selected from the standard works of the most eminent Study-writers, and with these are included numerous others, which, though of equally great practical utility, have hitherto been less generally accessible.

1.	FIVE-FINGER STUDIES	..	..	..	Part 1*
2.	„	„	..	..	„ 2*
3.	SCALES	..	..	..	Part 1*
4.	„	..	..	..	„ 2*
5.	BROKEN CHORDS	..	..	..	Part 1*
6.	„	„	..	..	„ 2*
7.	„	„	..	..	„ 3*
8.	„	„	..	..	„ 4
9.	„	„	..	..	„ 5
10.	LEFT HAND	..	..	..	Part 1*
11.	„	„	..	..	„ 2*
12.	„	„	..	..	„ 3
13.	„	„	..	..	„ 4
14.	ARPEGGIO	..	..	..	Part 1*
15.	„	..	..	..	„ 2*
16.	„	..	..	..	„ 3
17.	VELOCITY	..	..	..	Part 1*
18.	„	..	..	..	„ 2*
19	„	..	..	..	„ 3
20.	„	..	..	..	„ 4
21.	„	..	..	..	„ 5
22.	„	..	..	..	„ 6
23.	„	..	..	..	„ 7
24.	FIGURES IN SEQUENCE	..	..		Part 1
25.	„	„	..	..	„ 2
26.	BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES	..	..	..	Part 1
27.	BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES	..	..	..	Part 2
28.	SHAKES	..	..	..	Part 1*
29.	„	..	..	..	„ 2*
30.	„	..	..	..	„ 3
31.	DOUBLE NOTES	..	..	..	Part 1*
32.	„ „	..	..	..	„ 2*
33.	„ „	..	..	..	„ 3
34.	„ „	..	..	..	„ 4
35.	OCTAVES	..	..	..	Part 1*
36.	„	..	..	..	„ 2*
37.	CHORDS	..	..	..	Part 1*
38.	„	..	..	..	„ 2
39.	STACCATO	..	..	..
40.	REPETITION	..	..	..	Part 1*
41.	REPETITION AND TREMOLO		..	..	„ 2*
42.	„	„	..	..	„ 3*
43.	PART-PLAYING	..	..	..	Part 1*
44.	„ „	..	..	..	„ 2*
45.	ORNAMENTS	..	..	..	Part 1
46.	„	..	..	..	„ 2
47.	ACCOMPANIED MELODY		..	..	Part 1
48.	„	„	..	..	„ 2
49.	EXTENSIONS AND SKIPS		..	..	Part 1
50.	„	„	..	..	„ 2
51.	RHYTHM	..	..	..	Part 1
52.	„	..	..	..	„ 2

* These Parts are already published.

FIFTY-TWO BOOKS, PRICE ONE SHILLING EACH.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

THE BEHNKE VOICE-TRAINING METHOD.

JUST PUBLISHED. PRICE, IN PAPER COVERS, TWO SHILLINGS; IN CLOTH, THREE SHILLINGS.

VOICE-TRAINING PRIMER

BY

MRS. EMIL BEHNKE AND DR. CHARLES W. PEARCE.

An easy Catechism of Vocal Physiology and Musical Theory, for the use of Vocal Students generally. This work is also intended as a Text-book for preparing Candidates for Vocal Examinations, particularly those of the Associated Board of the R.C.M. and R.A.M., the Incorporated Society of Musicians, and Trinity College, London. It contains in one volume all the information required for answering the vivâ voce questions of Examiners.

SIXTIETH THOUSAND. PRICE, IN PAPER COVERS, ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE; IN CLOTH, THREE SHILLINGS.

VOICE-TRAINING EXERCISES

In Six separate Books, for Soprano, Mezzo-Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, Baritone, and Bass.

BY

EMIL BEHNKE AND DR. CHARLES W. PEARCE.

"Admirable, and doubtless will prove of great utility."—Rev. Sir F. A. Gore Ouseley.
"Far more precise in plan than anything I have seen."—Sir R. P. Stewart.
"Scientific, systematic, and ingenious."—Sir John Stainer.

THIRD AND IMPROVED EDITION. PRICE, IN PAPER COVERS, ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE; IN CLOTH, THREE SHILLINGS.

VOICE-TRAINING STUDIES

In Six separate Books, for Soprano, Mezzo-Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, Baritone, and Bass.

BY

EMIL BEHNKE AND DR. CHARLES W. PEARCE.

"This work contains 24 Progressive Studies in different styles, and is intended as a companion or supplementary volume to 'Voice-Training Exercises.' Those of a more cantabile character are to be used as Solfeggi, the others are to be sung as Vocalises. In this Second Edition the accompaniments have been simplified. Highly favourable opinions of these Studies have been expressed by Sir John Stainer, Sir Robert Stewart, Mr. W. H. Cummings, and other eminent authorities.

"There can be little doubt that these 'Studies,' which are published in separate keys for all voices, will share the popularity of the 'Exercises.'"—Sunday Times.
"We have no doubt that the second volume will equal the first in popularity."—Morning Post.
"I am glad to find you are still going ahead in your valuable sphere of work. The 'Voice-Training Studies' are a solid and sound contribution to the repertory of teachers and students."—Sir John Stainer.
"Your new book of 'Voice-Training Studies' is admirable, and will prove of very great value to students and teachers. I like it much."—C. Vincent, Mus. Doc.

NEW NUMBERS OF
CHAPPELL'S VOCAL LIBRARY OF PART-SONGS.

114. Strange Adventure ("Yeomen of the Guard"). S.A.T.B. .. .. .. Arthur Sullivan 6d.
115. Serenade (Men's Voices). T.T.B.B. Reginald de Koven 4d.
116. Madrigal ("Haddon Hall"). S.A.T.B. Arthur Sullivan 6d.
117. I loved a lass, a fair one (Men's Voices). T.T.B.B. King Hall 3d.
118. Venetian Song (F. Paolo Tosti). S.A.T.B. King Hall 4d.
119. Mighty Lord (Gounod's "Marche Religieuse") S.A.T.B. .. .. King Hall 3d.
120. On Angels' Wings (Viviani's "Silver Trumpets") S.A.T.B. .. .. King Hall 3d.
121. Crossing the Bar. S.S.A.T.B.B. Arthur M. Goodhart 3d.
122. Sigh no more, ladies. A.T.T.B.B. R. J. S. Stevens 3d.

NEW WORKS FOR TONIC SOL-FA.

FAUST

A Dramatic Legend by HECTOR BERLIOZ. Price 3s. 6d. net.
A Tonic Sol-fa Edition of this celebrated Work. Just Published. Price 2s. 6d. net.

JACKDAW OF RHEIMS

Cantata written by THOMAS INGOLDSBY. Music by GEORGE FOX. Price 2s. 6d. net.
Edition for Tonic Sol-fa. Just Published. 1s. 6d. net.

Orchestral and Chorus Parts of the above may be had on Hire of—

CHAPPELL AND CO., 50, NEW BOND ST., LONDON.

Printed by NOVELLO, EWER and Co., at 69 & 70, Dean Street (W.), and published at 1, Berners Street (W.), and 80 & 81, Queen Street (E.C.)
Sold also by KENT and Co., Paternoster Row (E.C.)—Tuesday, August 1, 1893.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR.

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH.

No. 607.—Vol. 34. SEPTEMBER 1, 1893. Price 4d.; Post-free, 5d.
Registered for transmission abroad. Annual Subscription, Postage-free, 5s.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY,

ROYAL ALBERT HALL.

Patron: HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH, K.G.

Conductor: Sir JOSEPH BARNBY.

There are now VACANCIES in the Choir for SOPRANOS, ALTOS, TENORS, and BASSES (especially Tenors). Only those who have good powerful voices, and who can read music at first sight, will be accepted. Address, Assistant-Secretary, Royal Choral Society, Royal Albert Hall, S.W.

BRISTOL EIGHTH MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

Patron: HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH, K.G.

WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY, FRIDAY, AND SATURDAY,
October 25, 26, 27, 28, 1893.

Wednesday Morning, "Samson" (Handel); Wednesday Evening, "Faust" (Berlioz); Thursday Morning, "Hymn of Praise" (Mendelssohn) and "Stabat Mater" (Rossini); Friday Morning. "Wilderness" (S. S. Wesley), and "Paradise and the Peri" (Schumann); Friday Evening, Grand Wagner Concert, Acts II. and III. "Flying Dutchman" and Selections, Vocal and Instrumental, from Wagner's Operas; Saturday Morning, "Messiah" (Handel).

Principal Vocalists:—
Madame ALBANI.
Mrs. HENSCHEL. Mdlle. LANDI.
Miss ESTHER PALLISER.
Miss CLARA BUTT. Miss NELLIE ROWE.
Miss HILDA WILSON.
Mr. BEN DAVIES. Mr. BANTOCK PIERPOINT.
Mr. EDWARD LLOYD.
Mr. ANDREW BLACK. Mr. MONTAGUE WORLOCK.
Mr. SANTLEY.
Chorus: THE BRISTOL FESTIVAL CHOIR.
Sir CHARLES HALLE'S FESTIVAL BAND.
Conductor, Sir CHARLES HALLÉ.

Ticket Office, Monday, September 11, 1893. Programmes on application to Henry Cooke, Esq., Hon. Sec., Musical Festival, Bristol.

WORCESTER MUSICAL FESTIVAL

SEPTEMBER 10, 12, 13, 14, and 15, 1893.

Sunday Morning, September 10, Grand Opening Service. Tuesday Morning, "Elijah." Tuesday Evening, "Israel in Egypt" and Beethoven's Symphony, No. 7. Wednesday Morning, Bach's Mass in B minor. Wednesday Evening (Public Hall), New Orchestral Work, composed for the occasion, and conducted by Dr. Hubert Parry; Sullivan's Music to "The Tempest," and Miscellaneous Selection. Thursday Morning, Parry's "Job," conducted by the Composer, and Spohr's "Last Judgment." Thursday Evening, Brahms's "German Requiem" and "The Hymn of Praise." Friday Morning, "The Messiah." Friday Evening, Closing Service by the Three Choirs. Principal Vocalists: Madame Albani, Mrs. Hutchinson, Miss Anna Williams, Miss Hilda Wilson, Madame Belle Cole, Miss Jessie King, Mr. Edward Lloyd, Mr. Edwin Houghton, Mr. Watkin Mills, Mr. Plunket Greene, and Mr. Brereton. Programmes, containing full particulars, may be obtained either from Messrs. DEIGHTON and Co. or Mr. E. J. SPARK, High Street, Worcester.

COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS.

The Solo-playing Tests for the F.C.O. Examination in January will be: Prelude and Fugue in G major—J. S. Bach (No. 2, Book II., Peters' Edition); Fantasia in C minor—Berens; Choral, with Variations—H. Smart (Novello, Ewer and Co.).

The Library is open daily for the use of Members from 10 to 5, and on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 9.

Members desiring practice on the College Organ may obtain particulars on application.

The large room, and sundry smaller rooms, may be hired for concerts, meetings, &c. For terms, application should be made to the Assistant Secretary.

E. H. TURPIN, Hon. Secretary.

Hart Street, Bloomsbury, W.C.

PRIZES FOR FESTIVAL HYMN TUNES.

THREE PRIZES of £3 EACH (Manchester Sunday School Union). For conditions send stamp to Mr. A. P. Smith, 1, Piccadilly, Manchester.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC,

TENTERDEN STREET, W.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patrons: HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN AND THE ROYAL FAMILY.
Principal: Dr. A. C. MACKENZIE.

Michaelmas Term commences, September 28.
Entrance, Examination, September 25, at 10.
Competition for Henry Smart Scholarship for Organ Playing and Composition, September 27. Last day for entry, September 14.
Entry Forms and all information may be obtained from the Secretary.

F. W. RENAUT, Secretary.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC,

KENSINGTON GORE, LONDON.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
Director: SIR GEORGE GROVE, D.C.L., LL.D.
Hon. Secretary: CHARLES MORLEY, Esq.

The Christmas Term will commence on Thursday, September 28.
Entrance Examination on September 26.
Regulations and all information may be obtained from

GEORGE WATSON, Registrar.

THE GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Established by the Corporation of London, 1880.

Principal: Sir JOSEPH BARNBY.

The next Term commences Monday, September 25.
For prospectuses and all further particulars apply to the Secretary.
By order of the Committee,

CHARLES P. SMITH, Secretary.

Victoria Embankment, E.C.

MUSICAL DEGREES and DIPLOMAS, King's

College, London.—A complete curriculum is now established for Training for all MUSICAL DEGREES and DIPLOMAS. Examinations will be held each term, and the final examination will be equivalent to that required for degrees, and so form a full preparation for Examinations in Music, held at the Universities and Colleges.

Dr. E. H. Turpin and Dr. F. J. Sawyer have kindly consented to act as Examiners in conjunction with Professor J. E. Vernham and Mr. Hamilton Robinson, Mus. Bac.

Particulars may be obtained of the Professor of Music, King's College, Strand, W.C.; or, from J. W. Cunningham, Secretary.

THE

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW

FOR SEPTEMBER

CONTAINS:—

GENERAL NOTES.
SIR JOHN STAINER'S REPORT ON SCHOOL MUSIC FOR 1892.
LOCAL SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS OF THE ASSOCIATED BOARD.
STAFF NOTATION AND THE MOVABLE DOH. BY W. G. MCNAUGHT.
CHORAL WORKS PERFORMED AT THE TRAINING COLLEGES EXAMINATION, 1892.
REVIEWS.
CORRESPONDENCE: MUSIC IN DEVONSHIRE SCHOOLS: COUNTY COUNCILS AND SINGING CLASSES.

THE

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW

FOR SEPTEMBER

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING MUSIC IN BOTH NOTATIONS:—

"A HOLIDAY ON THE RHINE." Unison Song. By R. SCHUMANN.
"THE PLOUGHBOY." Round. By W. W. PEARSON.
STUDIES IN TIME AND TUNE. By W. G. MCNAUGHT.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Office: 1, Berners Street, W.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES.

MISS FLORENCE ARMRIDING (Soprano)
(Pupil of Mr. Shakespeare and Medalist, R.A.M.).
Oratorios, Concerts, Lessons, &c., at 20, Conduit Street. Address, Leicester Villa, Ealing, W.

MADAME BARTER (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., Westbury Road, Wood Green, N.

MADAME CARRIE BLACKWELL (Soprano)
(Pupil of the late Madame Sainton-Dolby).
Orchestral, Oratorio, Ballad Concerts, &c., 4A, Sloane Square, S.W.

MISS MABEL CROSS (Soprano)
(Of the Royal College of Music, London).
For Oratorios, Cantatas, Concerts, &c., Winsford, Cheshire.

MISS EMILY DAVIES (Soprano)
Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., address, Severn House, Seven Sisters' Road, Finsbury Park, N.

MADAME ELEANOR DAY (Soprano)
Concerts, Private Lessons, &c. Strathaven, Hendon, N.W.

MISS ADA DUMVILLE (Soprano)
For Oratorio, Ballad, and Operatic Concerts. Terms, press opinions, references, &c., 14, Duke Street, Broughton, Manchester.

MISS MARJORIE EATON (Soprano)
"Miss Eaton sang most delightfully."—Surrey Comet.
"Possesses a highly cultivated voice of extensive range, and has a very good appearance on the platform."—Alloa Journal.
"MESSIAH."—"Sang remarkably well, adding another brilliant success to her previous ones gained in this work."—Doncaster Chronicle.
"MARITANA."—"Sang with great expression and wonderful artistic effect, her impersonation of Maritana was a model performance."—Wakefield Mirror.
"ELIJAH."—"As principal soprano Miss Eaton was perfection. Her singing of the Widow and Angel's part was grand."—The Times.
For terms and vacant dates, address, 237, Katherine Street, Ashton-under-Lyne.

MISS ALMA HALLOWELL (Soprano)
(Med. R.A.M.; Pupil of Signor M. Garcia)
MISS FLORENCE HALLOWELL (Contralto)
Can accept Engagements for Oratorios, Miscellaneous Concerts, &c.
Address, Barkisland, Halifax.

MADAME MADELINE HARDY (Soprano)
27, Loughborough Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS HONEYBONE (Soprano)
For Oratorios and Concerts, address, 41, Hampden St., Nottingham; or, Holm Leigh, Earlsfield Road, Wandsworth Common, London.

MADAME MINNIE JONES (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, and Lessons. address, Grove Lodge, Seven Sisters' Road, Finsbury Park, N.

MISS LILY MARSHALL-WARD (Soprano)
MISS JESSIE MARSHALL-WARD (Contralto)
Address, 14, Peel Street, Nottingham.

MISS FLORENCE MONK (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., Glebe Field, Stoke Newington, N.

MISS ANNIE NORLEDGE (Soprano)
(Pupil of W. Shakespeare, Esq.)
For Oratorios and Ballad Concerts, At Homes, and Musical Parties. Address, 221, South Lambeth Road, London, S.W., and Roseleigh, Newark-on-Trent. Telegrams—Norledge, London.

MISS FANNIE SELLERS (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, Recitals, &c., Crag Cottage, Knaresbro'.

MISS SIMPSON (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c.
For terms apply, Miss Simpson, Todmorden.

MISS AGNES WALKER (Soprano)
(Pupil of Fred. Walker, Esq.)
104, Lewisham High Road, New Cross, S.E.

MISS ETHEL WEBB (Soprano)
Concerts, &c. 14, Balmoral Road, Nottingham.

MISS GERTRUDE WESLEY (Soprano & Harpist)
(Great-granddaughter of Samuel Wesley).
For Oratorio or Ballad Concerts. Testimonials and Critiques from 53, High Street, Doncaster.

MISS ALICE ASHFORD (Mezzo-Soprano)
32, Gold Street, Northampton.

MISS MARY WILLIS (Mezzo-Soprano)
For Oratorios, Operas, Concerts, or Private Lessons, address, 9, Rochester Terrace, Camden Road, N.W.

MISS M. L. BOOKER, L.R.A.M. (Contralto)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, care of Mr. Wm. Marriott, 295, Oxford Street, W.; or, Shirebrook Villa, Heeley, Sheffield.

MISS EMMIE FINNEY (Contralto)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c.
42, Pembridge Road, Notting Hill Gate, W.

MISS LILIAN HOVEY (Contralto)
(Medalist, R.A.M.; Pupil of Mr. Richard Cummings, A.R.A.M.)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 82, Norfolk Road, Sheffield.

MISS ANNIE NORTHCROFT (Contralto)
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., 38, Gunter Grove, Chelsea.

MISS RINA ROBINSON (Contralto)
For Oratorio and Ballad Concerts. 67, Carleton Rd., Tufnell Park, N. References kindly permitted to Dr. A. H. Mann, Dr. E. H. Turpin, and Mr. F. A. W. Docker.

MADAME and MR. SUTTON SHEPLEY
(Contralto and Baritone).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 97, Dalberg Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS LOTTIE SWEENEY (Contralto)
(Pupil of Madame Sainton-Dolby).
For Concerts, Oratorios, &c., address, Miss Sweeney, Vocalist, Armley, near Leeds.

MISS VERKRÜZEN (Contralto)
For terms, Concerts, Oratorios, &c., 119, Petherton Rd., Highbury, N.

MISS ALICE WOLSTENHOLME (Contralto)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Radcliffe, Manchester.

MR. RIDSDALE BOWLEY (Tenor)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c., 11, School St., Eccles New Rd., Manchester.

MR. T. HENRY BREARLEY (Tenor)
For Oratorios, Ballads, &c., address, 13, Earl St., Claremount, Halifax.

MR. BEN. BURY, L.R.A.M. (Tenor)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c. Church, Lancs.

MR. HERBERT CLINCH (Tenor)
Oratorio, Ballads, &c., address, 41, Frederick St., St. John's Wood, N.W.

MR. GEORGE GREEN (Tenor)
(Of Liverpool Cathedral).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 122, Rosebery St., Liverpool.

MR. JOSEPH HEALD (Tenor)
5, Hyde Park Mansions, W.

MR. JAMES LEYLAND (Tenor)
Address, 106, Bolingbroke Grove, Wandsworth Common, S.W.

MR. T. OLDROYD (Tenor)
For Oratorios and Concerts, address, The Cathedral, Rochester.

MR. HARRY STUBBS, R.C.M. (Tenor)
(Of St. George's Chapel, Windsor).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 18, The Cloisters.

MR. A. F. THORNBOROUGH (Tenor)
(Of Chester Cathedral).
Manager of the Chester and North Wales Musical Agency. All Artists carefully selected for Oratorios, Concerts, &c. A capital Male Voice Quartet. Agent for the Euterpean (Ladies) Orchestra.
Address, 20, Kingsley Terrace, Chester.

MR. STIRLING WELLS (Tenor)
Festivals, Operatic and Ballad Concerts, Glees, Masonic Banquets, &c., address, 190, Clapham Park Road, S.W.

MR. HERBERT ALDRIDGE (Baritone)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, South Street, Romford, Essex.

MR. HENRY BAILEY (Baritone)
For Oratorio, Operatic, Ballad Concerts, &c. 49, Richmond Gardens, West Kensington Park, W.

MR. ALBERT BARNES (Baritone)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Stannary, Halifax.

MR. GORDON HELLER (Baritone)
(Of St. James's Hall Concerts, London; late Pupil of Hy. Blower, Esq.)
For Oratorios, &c., address, 20, Blenheim Terrace, Leeds.

MR. ROLAND HOYLE (Baritone)
Oratorios, Ballads, &c., Briddon Street, Cheetham, Manchester.

MR. GILBERT THORNE (Baritone)
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., address, 11, Penryn Street, Oakley Square, N.W.

MR. JNO. W. GREENWOOD (Bass)
For Concerts, Ballads, &c. 140, Queen's Road, Halifax.

MR. BARRY LINDON (Basso Profundo)
61, Offord Road, N.

MR. HENRY POPE (Bass)
Oratorio, Concerts, Opera, Pupils.
19, Westbourne Park Villas, W.

MR. CHARLES SIEBERT (Basso)
For Concerts, Organ Recitals, &c., 27, Lausanne Road, Hornsey, N.

J. G. HEWSON (Baritone)

BELPER MUSICAL SOCIETY.—"THE ELIJAH."—"Mr. Hewson possesses a full baritone voice, and was heard to advantage in the Baal scene, his dramatic declamation of recitatives being excellent. Mr. Hewson's most successful effort was 'Is not His word like a fire,' and we cannot say otherwise than that the rendering was magnificent. The audience were delighted with the display that brought out all Mr. Hewson's capabilities as a vocalist, and he was rewarded with vociferous applause. In the air 'It is enough' Mr. Hewson scored another success. He was undoubtedly cognisant with the numbers which fall to the lot of the Prophet, and the difficult work connected with the title rôle could scarcely have been placed in better hands. There are few rôles so difficult as that of the Prophet, and we must compliment the artist who performed it on Tuesday last in no mean manner."—Alfreton and Belper Journal, April 21, 1893.

WALSALL PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.—"THE MESSIAH."—Mr. Hewson was conversant and successful with the bass music, notably in the stormy, restless 'Why do the nations?' and we have very rarely heard this declaimed with such surprising vigour and finished intonation."—Walsall Advertiser, December 31, 1892.

BREDBURY CHORAL SOCIETY.—BALLAD CONCERT.—"Mr. Hewson was very successful in all his songs. For his capital rendering of 'The Castaway' (Barri) an encore was loudly demanded. He responded with 'Two Spoons,' a humorous number which tickled the risibilities of the audience. He was also heartily encored for 'The Judge's Song' from 'Trial by Jury.'"—North Cheshire Herald, February 18, 1893.

SKIPTON CHORAL SOCIETY.—"THE PILGRIMAGE OF THE ROSE," &c.—"Mr. Hewson, a stranger to Skipton, entered into the spirit of his part and gave general satisfaction. In the second part he sang 'So, Sir Page,' and in response to an encore gave 'Father O'Flynn.'"—The Pioneer, December 16, 1892.

"Mr. Hewson's first effort in the second part was 'So, Sir Page' (Mozart), a song full of fire and 'go,' which the executant made the most of, and secured the most enthusiastic encore of the evening. His response was rollicking 'Father O'Flynn.'"—The Craven Herald, December 16, 1892.

For Oratorio, Operatic Recitals, Ballad, &c., Concerts, address, 276, Hyde Road, Manchester. Sixteen-page book of Press opinions on application.

MR. JOHN BROWNING

(Principal Bass, Leeds Parish Church Choir).

"JUDAS MACCABÆUS."—"Mr. Browning was another great success. Possessed of a most powerful voice, with plenty of dramatic force, a most intelligent reader of the score, he invested his pieces with a life and colour which made him a prime favourite. 'Arm, arm, ye brave,' was declaimed with great vigour, while his singing of that florid composition, 'The Lord worketh wonders,' was really masterly."—Keighley News, December 24, 1892.

"Mr. John Browning has a splendid bass voice of grand resonance, power, and range, which he uses with expression and feeling, and reveals the significance of his songs."—Darlington and Stockton Times, February 11, 1893.

"MARITANA."—"Mr. Browning sang 'In happy moments' in a most artistic manner in all respects, and was encored for this song. He gave a splendid rendering of 'Hear me, gentle Maritana,' and the second part of the song, 'The mariner in his barque,' and was encored for a remarkably fine performance of the aria 'This heart by woe o'ertaken,' with its pendant, 'No, my courage,' and repeated the latter."—Huddersfield Examiner, February 24, 1893.

"ELIJAH."—"Mr. Browning scored a distinct triumph in the very trying work allotted to the baritone, the declamatory sentences of the Prophet being dramatically rendered. He certainly proved himself to be one of the best representatives of Elijah Sheffield has heard."—Sheffield and Rotherham Independent, April 15, 1893.

For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Parish Church, Leeds.

MR. RICKARD (the Yorkshire Basso)

(Pupil of the late Signor Pinsuti).

KESWICK HARMONIC SOCIETY ("ACIS AND GALATEA").—"Mr. Rickard was undoubtedly the lion of the evening. He is the next best bass singer to Signor Foli that Keswickians have heard."—Cumberland Times, April 22, 1893.

CONCERT IN STEINWAY HALL, LONDON.—"'Honour and Arms' was given by Mr. Rickard in a manner not unworthy of Herr Henschel himself."—Musical Standard.

For Oratorios and Concerts, address, Halifax, Yorkshire.

MISS FLORENCE J. PEGLAR (Violinist)

Certificated Assoc. Board and G.S.M. For Concerts, At Homes, or Orchestral Work. 41, Manor Road, St. John's, S.E.

MADAME LAURA SMART (Soprano) requests that all communications respecting Oratorio, Operatic Recital, or Ballad Concerts be addressed, 29, Burton Road, Kilburn, N.W.; or, 50, Church Street, Liverpool.

MADAME ELIZA THOMAS (Contralto). Now booking engagements. Address, Zion House, Harlesden, N.W.; or, W. B. Healey, Esq., 17, Great Marlborough Street, W.

MR. and MRS. HENRY BEAUMONT (Madame Adelaide Mullen), Principal Tenor and Soprano, Burns-Crotty Grand Opera Company, on tour. Can also accept Concert Engagements. Address, 59, Elgin Crescent, W.

MR. ASHBRIDGE MILLER (Tenor), Pupil of Signor Emmini, from Milan. For Oratorios, Concerts, and Lessons in Voice Production (Old Italian Method), address, 12, Rupert Lane, Liverpool. Engaged: Douglas (I. of M.), 17th to 30th inst.

MR. W. J. INESON (Baritone). Engaged: Worcester Musical Festival, Tewkesbury Festival, Batley, Darwen, Leek. Other engagements pending. For terms, address, The Cathedral, Hereford.

CHANGE of ADDRESS.—MR. DAN PRICE (Baritone, of Westminster Abbey) begs to announce his CHANGE of ADDRESS to 9, Clarendon Road, Holland Park, W., where all communications respecting Concert, Masonic, Oratorio Engagements, and Private Lessons should be addressed.

MR. W. CARTLEDGE-WHITE (Tenor) begs to announce his CHANGE OF ADDRESS to 7, Guildford Road South Lambeth, S.W., where all communications respecting Concert Opera, and Oratorio Engagements should be addressed.

MR. EGBERT ROBERTS (Bass) requests that all communications respecting Oratorios, Opera, or Concerts be addressed, 45, Pentonville Road, N.

MISS CARRIE LEWIS (L.R.A.M.), Performer and Teacher, Accompanist (good reader), and Solo Pianist, accepts ENGAGEMENTS for Concerts, At Homes, Private Practice, &c. 218, Upper Richmond Road, Putney, S.W.

MISS CLARA TITTERTON, Associate and Silver Medalist, R.A.M., First Class Certificate Society of Arts, &c., &c., receives PUPILS for the VIOLIN and PIANOFORTE on moderate terms. Lessons given at pupils' own residences. Schools attended. Miss Titterton also accepts Engagements for Concerts and At Homes. 38, Agate Road, The Grove, Hammersmith, W.

MR. FRANK FREWER, L.R.A.M., A.C.O. (Organist, St. James's, Garlickhithe, E.C.), teaches the PIANOFORTE, ORGAN, &c. For terms for Concerts, Organ Recitals, Pianoforte or Organ Lessons, address, 6, Wilmot Place, Rochester Road, and Camden Road, N.W.

PIANO, ORGAN, and SINGING LESSONS given by Organist at Pupils' own residences. Terms low. Mr. A. G. Woodham, 70, Balcombe Street, N.W.

MISS

FANNY BOUFFLEUR

(SOPRANO)

For Oratorios, Cantatas, Concerts, &c., 239, Upper Parliament Street, Liverpool.

Agent, N. VERT Esq., 6, Cork Street, London, W.

MISS

MARIE HOOTON

(CONTRALTO)

(Late Westmoreland Scholar and Parepa-Rosa Gold Medalist of the Royal Academy of Music)

AND

MR.

EDWARD BRANSCOMBE

(TENOR)

(LAY-VICAR OF WESTMINSTER ABBEY)

Are now booking Engagements for the present and ensuing seasons. Please address, 37, Torrington Square, Bloomsbury; or,

Mr. W. B. HEALEY,
17, Great Marlborough Street, W.

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES, CONCERT-GIVERS, &c.

MR. JOHN BARTLETT

(TENOR)

PRINCIPAL, PRO-CATHEDRAL, KENSINGTON,

AND OF

SIGNOR LAGO'S ROYAL OPERA (Principal),

COVENT GARDEN PROMENADE CONCERTS,

CRYSTAL PALACE ORCHESTRAL CONCERTS,

MADAME FANNY MOODY AND MR. CHARLES MANNERS' CONCERT TOUR, &c.,

Is now Booking Engagements for Oratorio, Concerts, At Homes, &c. Secretaries and others are desired to write for Press notices.

For first appearances moderate terms arranged. Large répertoire.

Kindly address, Mr. John Bartlett, 7, Westfield Terrace, Fulham Road, London, S.W. Or Agents.

MR.

SMALLWOOD METCALFE

(BASS)

For Oratorios, Concerts, &c.

"Special praise must be given to Mr. Smallwood Metcalfe for his admirable singing. He is the possessor of a fine bass voice of considerable compass and sonority."—The Times, December 6, 1892.

Terms, &c., address, 142, Belsize Road, London, N.W.

MR. LAWRENCE FRYER

(TENOR, St. Paul's Cathedral).

"Has a magnificent voice."—Macclesfield Chronicle.

"A tenor voice of richness and power, which we hope soon to hear again."—Bath Gazette.

"Quite electrified the audience with 'Thou shalt break them.'"—Bishop Stortford Mercury.

"'Comfort ye' and 'Every valley' were grandly rendered."—Sheffield Chronicle.

"In the declamatory passages he reached an enviable point of excellence. 'Sound an alarm' was a remarkable exhibition of power."—Finchley Gazette.

"His ringing tones gave conclusive indication of his great capabilities."—Southampton Times.

"Nature has endowed Mr. Lawrence Fryer with a magnificent tenor voice, which he uses with true artistic feeling."—Grantham Journal.

"A rich and powerful tenor voice, of unusual quality and range."—Nottingham Journal.

Address, 47, Croxted Road, Dulwich; or, St. Paul's Cathedral.

MR. THOMAS KEMPTON

(Bass, Vicar Choral, St. Paul's Cathedral)

AND

MR. JAMES BATES

(Director of Choir, Christ Church, Lancaster Gate, W.)

PROVIDE

SOLO BOYS and LEADING BOYS

For Oratorios, Church Festivals, Concerts, &c.

MASTER SYDNEY LOVETT

"Master Sydney Lovett is possessed of a singularly sweet soprano voice and a most refined style."—Daily Telegraph, April 12, 1893.

Engaged all August, but has some vacant dates in September and October.

MASTER LEONARD TUDGAY

(Solo Boy, St. Mary's Church, Stoke Newington).

MASTER CHARLES AKAST

(Solo Boy, St. Matthew's Church, Ealing).

MASTER HARRY PEACOCK

(Solo Boy, Hampstead Parish Church).

And other thoroughly trained and reliable vocalists can be seen by appointment.

Letters and applications for testimonials, criticisms, terms, &c., to be addressed:

Messrs. KEMPTON and BATES, 60, Moorgate Street, E.C.

Provincial Clergy, Organists, Musical Directors, and others will find this address easily accessible from all the London termini.

THE MISSES TULLOCH'S RECITALS.

Miss EDITH TULLOCH (Soprano), Pupil of W. Shakespeare.
Miss ADA TULLOCH (Guitar), Pupil of Madame Sydney Pratten.
Miss DORA TULLOCH (Recitations).
Miss BERYL TULLOCH (Mandoline).

Operatic Scenas and Arias, Ballads, Italian, French, and German Songs; Mandoline and Guitar Solos and Duets. Spanish Songs to Guitar Accompaniments.

RECITATIONS, DUOLOGUES.

Dates required for Concert engagements (Part 1, Oratorios, Cantatas; Part 2, Miscellaneous), Scotland, November and January and February; Midlands, October and November. For Press Notices, Programmes, and particulars, address, Miss E. Tulloch, Erith, Kent; or, Daniel Mayer's Agency, 8, Argyle Place, W.

MR. JOSEF CANTOR'S

"GEMS OF THE OPERAS"

CONCERT COMPANY.

All communications, Church Street, Liverpool.

Telegrams—"Cantor, Liverpool."

CONCERT AGENTS.

METHVEN, SIMPSON & CO.,

83, PRINCES STREET, EDINBURGH.

THE HORSE-SHOE GLEE SINGERS.

ALTO: Mr. PERCY COWARD (St. George's Chapel Royal, Windsor Castle); TENOR: Mr. ARTHUR S. COWARD; BARITONE: Mr. RANDULPH L. COWARD; BASS: Mr. W. BELL KEMPTON (St. George's Chapel Royal, Windsor Castle).

For Concerts, &c. Terms on application to W. Bell Kempton, 16, Horse-Shoe Cloisters, Windsor Castle.

THE

ENGLISH CONCERT PARTY

MADAME LESLIE ARNOTT.

MADAME JULIA HUTCHINGS.

MR. A. BOWYER BRISTOL.

MR. EDMUND EDWARDS.

Solo Pianoforte—
MRS. A. L. RICHARDSON, L.R.A.M.

Solo Violin—
MR. W. H. HENLEY.

Solo Harp—
J. H. COCKERILL
(Sir CHARLES HALLÉ'S BAND).

Conductor and Accompanist—
MR. WALTER J. EVANS.

The above Party are prepared to accept Engagements for the forthcoming season for Sacred, Chamber, or Ballad Concerts; also,

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS WITH

SIR AUGUSTUS HARRIS,

FOR

CONCERT RECITALS OF GOUNOD'S OPERA

PHILEMON AND BAUCIS.

Applications for vacant dates to be made to Manager,
P. Henry Jones, Hampden House, Phœnix Street, London, N.W
Special arrangements for Charity Concerts.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS.

MR. DUTTON (St. Paul's Cathedral) provides BOYS, trained entirely by himself, and thoroughly experienced in all kinds of Solo music.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Are now booking Engagements for Harvest Festivals.

MASTER ALBERT LEE,
Solo Boy (4½ years), All Saints', Blackheath.

MASTER W. A. GOUGH,
Solo Boy (3¾ years), St. Alban's, Holborn.

MASTER EDWARD WOOD,
Solo Boy (2½ years), St. George's, Bickley, & St. James's, Marylebone.

MASTER FRANK CAMPBELL,
Solo Boy (1¼ years), St. George's, Bickley.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Have made a great reputation.

Address, 19, Alpha Road, New Cross, S.E.

DERBY SCHOOL.

Founded A.D. 1160.

A FIRST-GRADE PUBLIC SCHOOL.

Head-Master .. .. J. STERNDALE BENNETT, M.A.

Election to CHORAL SCHOLARSHIPS in September.

VICTORIA COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Instituted by the Victoria College Corporation, Ltd.
Incorporated 1891.

Patrons:
The Right Hon. THE MARQUIS OF LORNE, K.T.
The Right Hon. THE EARL OF DARTMOUTH.

Local Secretaries required for towns not already represented.
Regulations as to Diploma and Local Examinations on application.
GEO. A. STANTON, Secretary.
11, Burleigh Street, Strand, W.C.

MR. W. C. AINLEY, Mus. Bac., Cantab. (1884), teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c., by Correspondence. Terms moderate. New House, Mirfield, Yorkshire.

MR. T. AINSWORTH, 4, Park Avenue, Blackburn, gives LESSONS in HARMONY and COUNTERPOINT by post. Terms: Beginners, 1s. per lesson; more advanced, 1s. 6d.

DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who passed the following EXAMINATIONS:—MUS. DOC., OXON. and DUBLIN; MUS. BAC. Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, and Durham (1892); L.R.A.M., 1893; L.L.C.M., 1893; F.C.O., 1893. FOUR HUNDRED Certificates, "Diplomas," and Degrees have been gained by Dr. ALLISON'S Pupils at Musical Examinations, and they won SIX GOLD MEDALS and Three Silver Medals. Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Revision of Compositions, by Post, to Correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, Organ, and Piano. 68, Nelson St., Manchester.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, A.R.A.M., teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c., by post. Personal Lessons in Pianoforte or Theory at own or pupil's residence; or at 84, New Bond Street, W. Schools attended. Address, Willersley House, Old Charlton.

EMIL BEHNKE'S System of VOICE TRAINING is carried on by Mrs. and Miss Behnke and assistant. Also Emil Behnke's method of treating STAMMERING. References to doctors whose patients have been cured. Pamphlet, 1s., post-free, of Mrs Emil Behnke, 18, Earl's Court Square, S.W.

MR. GEORGE J. BENNETT is prepared to receive PUPILS in HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c. Address, 25, Vincent Square, Westminster, S.W.; or, 1, Berners St., W.

MR. T. HEMMINGS, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.C.O., L.Mus., T.C.L., prepares Candidates for ARTS and MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS by Post. Stoke-on-Trent.

DR. F. J. KARN, Mus. Bac., Cantab.; Mus. Doc., Trinity College, Toronto; L.Mus., T.C.L., gives LESSONS Personally or by post in HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, FUGUE, ORCHESTRATION, ACOUSTICS, &c.; and prepares for Musical Examinations. Latest successes: DURHAM MUS. BAC. and First Exam., Sept., 1892; CAMBRIDGE MUS. BAC., 1892; MUS. BAC., LONDON, 1891; MUS. BAC., DUBLIN, 1891 and 1892; F.C.O. and A.C.O., 1892; L.R.A.M. (Composition), 1891; Mus. Doc. and Mus. Bac., Toronto, 1891, Gold Medalist, 1890; L.T.C.L. and A.T.C.L., 1892; F.T.S.C.; Senior Local, R.A.M. and R.C.M., and T.C.L., Theory and Pianoforte; A.R.C.M.; L.Mus., L.C.M. Upwards of 260 Diplomas and Degrees gained by pupils, and several Medals. Terms very moderate. Address, 70, Park Road, Haverstock Hill, N.W.

MISS M. KROHN. Guitar taught at own or Pupil's residence (Madame Pratten's method) Singing Class, Wednesday evenings. 113, Blenheim Crescent, Notting Hill, W.

DR. W. JOHN REYNOLDS, D.Mus., Lond., L.Mus., T.C.L., gives LESSONS, personally or by post, in the Theory of Music (including acoustics). Recent successes. 48, Highbury Grove, N.

MR. F. SOMMER, A.L.A.M (Certified as having "highly distinguished himself as a HARMONIST" by the late Professor WYLDE, Mus. Doc., Cantab., Gresham Lecturer on Music, &c.), gives Postal Lessons in HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, COMPOSITION, and prepares Candidates for all MUSICAL EXAMS. Over 500 Certificates, Diplomas Degrees, Medals, and Scholarships gained by Pupils during past fifteen years. Prospectus free, giving full particulars and containing an instructive "Comparison of English and German Methods of Teaching HARMONY."

TERMS:—Per Weekly Lesson (any subject) £0 2 6
12 Weekly Lessons (paid in advance) 1 5 0
24 Weekly Lessons (paid in advance) 2 5 0
No terminal notice required in any case.

MR. F. SOMMER, A.L.A.M., 14, Mardale Street, London, W.

MR. R. STOKOE, Mus. Bac., Cantab., F.C.O., gives ORGAN LESSONS at Christ Church, Down Street, Piccadilly. Harmony, Counterpoint, &c., taught personally or by post. 86, Rossiter Road, Balham, S.W.

DR. TAYLOR, Mus.D., Oxon., F.C.O., L.Mus (Author of "Vocal Score Reading Exercises for F.C.O. Students"), prepares CANDIDATES for MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS by Post. Address, Wolverhampton Road, Stafford.

MR. A. W. TOMLYN, Mus.B., Dunelm, L.T.C.L., Berwick-on-Tweed, COACHES CANDIDATES for University and all other Exams. by post. Every possible attention and assistance guaranteed. Many past successes.

MR. W. H. TUTT, Mus. Bac., Cantab., L.R.A.M., teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, ACOUSTICS, &c., by Correspondence. Ashburn, Derbyshire.

DR. J. WARRINER prepares Candidates successfully for all MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS, and receives Resident and Professional Students, on advantageous terms, if talented. De Crespigny Lodge, Denmark Hill, S.E.

ELEMENTS of MUSIC.—SPECIAL LESSONS by Mrs. WEBSTER, L.R.A.M., Author of the "Groundwork of Music," "Child's Primer" of the Theory of Music. Granville House, 90, Angell Road, Brixton, S.W.

TO INTENDING CANDIDATES for MUS. BAC. DEGREE.—PREPARATION by Correspondence for Entrance Examinations at Oxford, Cambridge, London, Durham, and Dublin. Method strictly individual. Single subjects if desired. Address, J. Charleston, B.A., Kenilworth House, Oxford.

MUSIC PROFESSORS, TEACHERS, and TUNERS (bonâ fide), wherever resident, may extend their local Teaching and Tuning Connection on mutual terms, by communicating with MUTUAL, 64, High Street, Notting Hill Gate, London. Say what subjects you teach (or whether Tuner), and printed particulars will be sent to you by return post.

SINGING—SPEAKING—STAMMERING.

MR. W. ERNEST YOUNG (Baritone Vocalist),
Recommended as Elocutionist by Dr Barclay Baron, Physician for Diseases of the Throat, Bristol General Hospital, GIVES LESSONS in VOICE PRODUCTION, both in SINGING and SPEAKING.

Special attention given to STAMMERING and other defects of speech. Weak throats strengthened by teaching the proper method of using the voice. SINGING PUPILS prepared for all examinations. RESIDENT PUPILS taken for Stammering, &c.

Open to accept Engagements for CONCERTS and AT HOMES.

For terms, vacant dates, references, and Press notices apply, 9, Fern Bank Road, Redland, Bristol.

THE CHILD PIANIST.

MRS. CURWEN'S METHOD of TEACHING BEGINNERS THE PIANOFORTE.

Training Classes for Teachers' Certificates, under MISS SCOTT GARDNER, at Dudley Mansions, 29, Abbey Road, N.W. Commence end of September. Send for circular. Free opening Lecture, by Mrs. CURWEN, on Thursday Evening, September 21, at 7.30.

Visitor and Examiner: Mrs. CURWEN.

Publishers of the book: J. CURWEN and SONS, 8 and 9, Warwick Lane, London, E.C. Lists gratis.

MUSICAL PROFESSION.—MR. W. DE M. SERGISON, Organist and Director of the Choir of St. Peter's, Eaton Square, S.W., trains Youths as Musicians, especially as CHOIR-TRAINERS and ORGANISTS. Mr. Sergison's course affords advantages not attainable at any London Academies. Many past pupils are now holding Cathedral and important Church appointments in England, America, and the Colonies. Applications should be addressed to Mr. Sergison, at the Vestry of the Church.

RESIDENT PUPIL.—MR. ARTHUR W. MARCHANT, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.C.O., Organist and Choirmaster, All Saints' Parish Church, Huntingdon, has a VACANCY for another RESIDENT PUPIL. Very fine three-manual Organ (tubular pneumatic). Preparation for College of Organists and other Exams., and every facility for a thorough musical training. A small post as Organist can be offered when qualified. The Terrace, Huntingdon.

THE ORGANIST of the Parish Church, Cuckfield, Sussex, has a VACANCY for a RESIDENT PUPIL. Comfortable home. Apply to Mr. T. E. P. Attewell, as above.

MR. H. WHARTON WELLS, F.C.O., Organist and Director of the Choir, S. Mary's, Putney, S.W., wishes for a RESIDENT PUPIL. Full musical services and fine organ. Highest recommendations. Last pupil has obtained an appointment.

RESIDENT PUPIL REQUIRED in September. Thorough training for Profession. Coaching for all Exams. 3-manual organ. Mr. W. E. Thomas (Mus. Bac., Oxon.), All Saints', Bloxham, Banbury.

KING'S COLLEGE, Cambridge.—CHORISTERSHIPS.—The trial of voices to fill VACANCIES in the Choir School will be held on October 6. Candidates must have a good ear and a good voice, and should be between 9 and 12 years of age. For particulars, apply to the Dean. Names to be sent in by October 1.

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL, Oxford.—There are VACANCIES for PROBATIONERS. Candidates should be between the ages of 9 and 11. Probationers, on being promoted to be choristers, receive board and education free. The boys live in the Choir House, under the superintendence of the Master. For conditions, date of trial, &c., apply to the Rev. the Master, Cathedral Choir House, Oxford.

SOLO BOY WANTED, for St. Jude's, S. Kensington. £12 per ann. Resident in S.W. or W. district preferred. Write to Mr. H. W. Hunt, 146, Finboro' Road, S.W.

WANTED, a SOLO BOY, in private Chapel Choir. Board lodging, and good education free. Apply to Evelyn, Countess of Craven, Ashdown Park, Shrivenham.

CHOIR-BOY.—WANTED, a LEADING TREBLE, with a strong voice, for the Choir of St. Andrew's. Church, Shepherd's Hill, Crouch End Salary, £5 a year. Apply to the Honorary Organist at the Church, on Tuesday or Friday, at 8.30 p.m.

CHORISTERS.—FOUR BOYS WANTED, for the Gray's Inn Chapel. Must have thoroughly good Soprano voices and possess at least a fair knowledge of music. Salary, £7 10s. per annum. Apply to Mus. Bac., Steward's Office, Gray's Inn, W.C.

SUNDAY DUTY.—MISS MAUD LESLIE, A.L.A.M. (Soprano), desires a permanent ENGAGEMENT in Church or Chapel Choir; or could Deputise. Experienced leader. Highest references. 41, Crystal Palace Road, Dulwich, S.E.

YOUNG LADY (Mezzo-Soprano) is seeking salaried ENGAGEMENT as SOLOIST in London Choir. Recommended by Professor. M. C., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

LICHFIELD CATHEDRAL.—The Dean and Chapter are desirous to appoint a LAY VICAR CHORAL of ALTO voice. Salary about £150 per annum. The highest testimonials as to moral and religious character, proficiency in voice, and knowledge of Church music will be required. Applications, stating age and occupation, previous training, and present employment as a singer, may be sent with testimonials in writing (in one packet) before September 16, 1893, to Charles Gresley, Esq., Chapter Clerk, The Close, Lichfield. A trial of voice will be required before an appointment is made.

ALTO REQUIRED, for St. Paul's, Kilburn, N.W. Two Sunday services, Friday rehearsal, Christmas Day, Good Friday, and Ascension Day. Good voice and reading indispensable. £15. Apply, A. W. Stratton Hanes, 20, Cambridge Avenue, Kilburn.

TENOR WANTED, for St. Mary's, West Kensington. £10 per annum. Two Sunday services and Thursday evening rehearsal. Apply to Dr. Verrinder, 1, Finborough Road, South Kensington, S.W.

TENOR SOLOIST WANTED, for the Chapel of the Benchers, Gray's Inn. Must be thoroughly competent. Apply, sending copies of testimonials, to Mus. Bac., Steward's Office, Gray's Inn. Salary, £20 per annum.

A GENTLEMAN (Young) would give his services in a CHURCH CHOIR (Tenor) in return for Organ practice. Would act as Deputy if required. C. B., Windermere, Beulah Road, Thornton Heath, S.W.

BASS SOLOIST WANTED, for the Chapel of the Benchers, Gray's Inn, W.C. Must be thoroughly competent. Apply, sending copies of testimonials, to Mus. Bac., Steward's Office, Gray's Inn. Salary, £20 per annum.

BASS WANTED, for City Church. Must be Communicant and good reader. Salary, £12. Address, giving particulars as to experience, compass, &c., H. J. White, 9, Sheen Park, Richmond, Surrey.

BASS (not Baritone) for NICE.—There is a VACANCY at the American Church. Candidates must have good Church experience and ability in solo singing. Applications to Mr. Stedman, Musical Agency, 12, Berners Street, W.

BASS-BARITONE.—MR. THURLEY BEALE (late of Chapel Royal, Whitehall) desires a CHURCH APPOINTMENT. Address, 10, Lalor Street, Fulham Palace Road, S.W.

BASS-BARITONE, pupil of eminent artist, seeks a Church appointment. Salary not less than £20 per annum, or £12 for Sunday morning only. Also, Agent Wanted. Apply, Curzon, care of Stevens, Stationers, 439, Oxford Street, W.

AN ORGANIST is REQUIRED for St. Mary's Church, Hadleigh, Suffolk. Duties to commence October 1. Surpliced choir. Salary, £35 a year. Apply, The Churchwardens.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED.—Advertiser would be glad to hear of Gentleman willing to render honorary service as above. Congregational Church, N.W. Address, C., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 80 and 81, Queen Street, E.C.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER (professional) desires RE-ENGAGEMENT. Ten years' exp. Excellent testimonials. Communicant. Accus. to choral services. Associate, 8, Richmond Street, Plaistow, E.

MR. C. HUGH ROWCLIFFE, F.C.O., Organist and Choirmaster, is open to DEPUTISE, or PERMANENT APPOINTMENT. 76, Brighton Road, Stoke Newington, N.

APPOINTMENT as ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER. Church of England. London or Suburbs. Highest references. Disengaged end of September. F. C. O., 31, Gresham St., E.C.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER, experienced and successful, desires POST in or near London. Anglican or Gregorian. Excellent testimonials. Communicant. Tyacke George, Southall, W.

TO CLERGYMEN. — Young Gentleman, late Assistant-Organist of an important Cathedral, Communicant, successful Choir-trainer, &c., is open to receive an immediate ENGAGEMENT as ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER. Highest testimonials from Organist, Bishop, Dean and Chapter, Minor Canons, &c. Fine church and good organ more essential than large salary. Address, Oxon., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

TRURO COLLEGE (Wesleyan).—RESIDENT MUSIC MASTER REQUIRED. Appointment suitable to one studying for his degree. Apply, with copies of testimonials and stating salary expected, to Chas. Bryant, Secretary.

ASSISTANT-ORGANISTSHIP WANTED, in or near London. Accustomed to fully choral service. Palgrave, Merton Hall Road, Wimbledon.

TO HIGH SCHOOLS of MUSIC.—The Teacher of High School PIANOFORTE PLAYING and MUSIC THEORY at well-known (German) Academy of Music, speaking German and English (former student of Leipzig Conservatorium), seeks similar APPOINTMENT in England from next October. Address, A. Z., 10, Postlagernd, Erfurt, Germany.

MUSIC MISTRESS, Leipzig Conser., desires RE-ENGAGEMENT in School. Piano, &c. German. C. M. L., 21, Seymour Street, Leicester.

A GERMAN TEACHER, certificated, well-versed in Classic and Modern Languages, good Musician (Piano), seeks ENGAGEMENT in PRIVATE SCHOOL, or as Tutor in Family. Moderate salary. Excellent references. Address, Carl Hensinger, care of Bosworth and Co., 4, Berners Street, W.; or, to 1, Hochstrasse, Brunswick.

INTER. MUS. BAC., Oxon. (Organist), desires POST as MUSIC MASTER in School, or Assistant to Professional Man. Excellent testimonials. Intermediate, Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

PROFESSOR (Certificated Pianist and Teacher of the Royal Academy of Music, and for thirteen years Professor at a leading London Musical Institution) desires ENGAGEMENT as Teacher of Pianoforte or Singing, at a School in or near Town. Address, R. A. M., 119, High Road, Lee, S.E.

MUSIC-MASTER, holding important TEACHING APPOINTMENTS, can visit another School. Violin and Pianoforte. I. S. M., 24, Walterton Road, Westbourne Park.

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES and CLERGY.—Mr. H. WHARTON WELLS, F.C.O., is open to accept the APPOINTMENT of CONDUCTOR to a good Choral Society, or as Choirmaster at a Church. Highest references. 36, Halford Road, Richmond, S.W.; or, St. Mary's, Putney, S.W.

ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY.—WOOD-WINDS.—Gentlemen playing Oboi, Clarinet, or Bassoon are invited to join an established Society in North-East London. For particulars, apply to the Hon. Secretary, Mr. Chas. Still, 9, St. James's Villas, High Road, Clapton.

CONDUCTOR.—To ORCHESTRAL or CHORAL SOCIETIES.—An experienced Conductor of ability and reputation is open to Engagements. J. H. Beta, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

TUNER.—WANTED, a YOUNG MAN, about 25, for In and Out-door Work. Must be thoroughly proficient. Address, stating previous experience, salary required, and references, to Messrs. Rogers and Priestley, Music Warehouse, Colmore Row, Birmingham.

WANTED, a good PIANOFORTE TUNER. One who can repair Harmoniums and American Organs preferred. Apply, with copies of testimonials, to Cramer, Wood and Co., 4 and 5, Westmoreland Street, Dublin.

PIANO TUNER (Out-door) WANTED. Three days per week. First-class work and references required. Walter Phillips, Putney, London.

GOOD PIANOFORTE TUNER WANTED. Steadiness and punctuality essential. Permanent situation to a thoroughly reliable young man. Apply, stating full particulars, to C. S., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

A GOOD Country TUNER WANTED. Dale, Forty and Co., Piano Merchants, Cheltenham.

WANTED, First-class TUNER with small capital to join advertiser in opening Music Business in Provinces. L. Z., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

WANTED, first-class PIANOFORTE TUNER (factory experience), who can tune Pipe Organs, for a large City in the Country. Permanent berth and liberal salary to a steady, competent tuner. Apply, personally or by letter, to George Rogers and Sons, 60, Berners Street; or, by letter, to Pipes and Strings, care of Messrs. Novello and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

WANTED, Good TUNER and REPAIRER. Out-door. Country. Terms, references, &c., to G. G., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

WANTED, an EXPERIENCED TUNER and REPAIRER for Pianos, Organs, and Harmoniums. Apply, C. 68, Post Office, Leeds.

PIANOFORTE TUNER and TONER WANTED, in the Show-Rooms of a London Firm. Must be thoroughly skilful, reliable, and of good address. Permanent situation and liberal salary offered to a first-class man. Apply to X. L., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

PIANOFORTE TUNER (Young Man) desires SITUATION. Knowledge of American Organs, Repairs, &c. 7 years' experience. Good references. B., Novello, Ewer and Co.

PIANOFORTE TUNER, with good knowledge of Harmonium and American Organ work, seeks ENGAGEMENT. Address, H. G., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

THE LONDON COLLEGE OF MUSIC,

(FOUNDED 1887.) (INCORPORATED, 1892.)

Great Marlborough Street, London, W.

FOR MUSICAL EDUCATION AND FOR EXAMINATIONS IN PRACTICAL AND THEORETICAL MUSIC.

PATRONS.

The Most Noble the MARQUIS OF CARMARTHEN, M.P.
SIR FRANCIS W. BRADY, Bart., Q.C., Member of the Council, Royal Irish Academy of Music.
SIR VINCENT KENNETT-BARRINGTON, Kt.
SIR ALBERT K. ROLLIT, Kt., M.P. SIR ROBERT RAPER, Kt.
The Honourable SIR WILLIAM GRANTHAM.

BOARD OF EXAMINATION.

W. J. WESTBROOK, Esq., Mus. Doc., Cantab.
HORTON ALLISON, Esq., Mus. Doc., Dublin; Mus. Bac., Cantab.; F.R.A.M.
C. G. VERRINDER, Esq., Mus. Doc., Cantuar; Mus. Bac., Oxon.

EXAMINERS.

ALFRED J. CALDICOTT, Esq., Mus. Bac., Cantab. (Principal, Educational Department).
Dr. FREDERICK J. KARN, Mus. Bac., Cantab. (Vice-Principal).
G. AUGUSTUS HOLMES, Esq. (Director, Examination Department).

C. E. ALLUM, Esq., Mus. Doc., T.C.D.
FREDERICK ATKINS, Esq., Mus. Bac., Oxon.
GEO. BARD, Esq., L.Mus., L.C.M.
C. H. BRIGGS, Esq., Mus. Doc., Cantab.
H. DANCEY, Esq., F.C.O.
W. H. LONGHURST, Esq., Mus. Doc., Cantuar, L.Mus., L.C.M.
ORLANDO A. MANSFIELD, Esq., Mus. Doc., F.C.O., L.Mus., L.C.M.
C. T. REYNOLDS, Esq., Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.C.O.
ALEX. ROWLAND, Esq., L.Mus., L.C.M., A.R.C.M.
SEYMOUR SMITH, Esq.
WM. SPARK, Esq., Mus. Doc., L.Mus., L.C.M. and F.C.O.
T. HERBERT SPINNEY, Esq., M.A., F.C.O., &c.

THEODORE S. TEARNE, Esq., Mus. Bac., Oxon., L.Mus., L.C.M., &c., &c.

The College has Local Representatives at the following places :—

ENGLAND AND WALES.—Aberdare, Abergavenny, Aberystwith, Accrington, Altrincham, Alnwick, Alston, Ambleside, Andover, Ashton-under-Lyne, Aylesbury, Baldock, Bangor, Barnard Castle, Barking, Barnsley, Barrow-in-Furness, Basingstoke, Bath, Bedford, Berkhampstead, Berwick-on-Tweed, Beverley, Bexley, Bilston, Bingley, Birmingham, Birkenhead, Bishop-Auckland, Blackburn, Blackhill, Blackpool, Bolton, Boston, Bourne, Bournemouth, Bradford, Brasted, Brentford, Brentwood, Bridport, Bridgwater, Brierley Hill, Brighton, Bristol, Burnley, Burton-on-Trent, Bury, Bury St. Edmunds, Buxton, Calne, Calverley, Camborne, Cambridge, Canterbury, Cardiff, Carlisle, Carmarthen, Chard, Cheltenham, Chester, Chesterfield, Chichester, Chorley, Cleckheaton, Clevedon, Clitheroe, Colwyn Bay, Coventry Cowes (I. of W.), Crewe, Crewkerne, Crook, Croydon, Darlington, Dartford, Darwen, Deal, Devizes, Dereham, Dewsbury, Diss, Docking, Dolgelly, Doncaster, Dorking, Dudley, Eastbourne, Ely, Evesham, Enfield, Falmouth, Farnworth, Fleetwood, Folkestone, Gainsborough, Gravesend, Grays, Greenhithe, Grimsby, Guernsey, Halifax, Haltwhistle, Harrogate, Hartlepool, Hastings, Haverfordwest, Haverhill, Helston, Hereford, High Barnet, Horsham, Hounslow, Hull, Huntingdon, Hythe, Ilkley, Ipswich, Jersey, Keighley, Kidderminster, Kingston-on-Thames, Kingswood, Kippax, Kirby Moorside, Launceston, Leamington Spa, Leeds, Leicester, Leighton Buzzard, Lewes, Lincoln, Lichfield, Littlehampton, Liverpool, Llandilo, Llandudno, Llanelly, Long Melford, Loughborough, Louth, Luton, Maidenhead, Maidstone, Maldon (Essex), Malpas, Malton, Malvern, Manchester, Marazion, Margate, Marple, Matlock, Melton Mowbray, Merthyr Tydvil, Middlesbrough, Morecambe, Morley, Mountain Ash, Needham Market, Newark, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Newport (Mon.), New Quay, New Romney, New Town (N. Wales), North Shields, Northwich, Norwich, Nottingham, Nuneaton, Oldham, Ongar, Ossett, Oswestry, Oxford, Peterborough, Plumstead, Plymouth, Poole, Portmadoc, Preston, Radcliffe, Radstock, Ramsbottom, Ramsgate, Reading, Redhill, Redruth, Retford, Rhyl, Richmond, Rochdale, Rotherham, Ruabon, Rugby, Ryde, Rye, Salford, Salisbury, Saltburn-by-the-Sea, Sandown, Sandwich, Scarborough, Sevenoaks, Shanklin, Sheffield, Sherborne, Shifnal, Shipley, Shrewsbury, Sidcup, Sleaford, Southampton, Southwell, Southend on-Sea, Southport, Southsea, South Shields, Spennymoor, Stafford, Stamford, St. Austell, Stevenage, St. Ives (Hunts), St. Helens, Stockport, Stockton-on-Tees, Stonehouse, Stratford-on-Avon, Stroud, Sunderland, Sutton (Surrey), Sutton-in-Ashfield, Sutton Coldfield, Swansea, Swindon, Taunton, Tavistock, Thame, Thornton Heath, Todmorden, Torquay, Totnes, Tredegar, Truro, Tunbridge Wells, Tunstall (N. Staff.), Uckfield, Uxbridge, Uppermill, Wakefield, Walton-on-Thames, Walsall, Ware, Warley, Warrington, Wednesbury, Wellingborough, Wellington, West Bromwich, Weston-super-Mare, Whitstable, Widnes, Wigan, Wilmslow, Wimborne, Winchester, Windermere, Wisbech, Wiveliscombe, Woodford, Woking, Wokingham, Wolverhampton, Worcester, Workington, Worksop, Worthing, Yeovil, York.

SCOTLAND.—Aberdeen, Alloa, Arbroath, Ayr, Bathgate, Brechin, Broughty Ferry, Coatbridge, Crosshill (Glasgow), Dumfries, Dumbarton, Dundee, Dunfermline, Dunoon, Edinburgh, Forres, Galashiels, Glasgow, Greenock, Jedburgh, Kelso, Kilmarnock, Kirkcaldy, Largs, Larbert, Leven (Fife), Lockerbie, Montrose, Perth, Rosslyn, Skelmorlie, Stirling, Wishaw.

IRELAND.—Armagh, Ballymena, Ballymoney, Banbridge, Belfast, Carlow, Clonmel, Cork, Downpatrick, Dublin, Dundalk, Enniscorthy, Enniskillen, Hillsborough, Kilkenny, Limerick, Londonderry, Monkstown (Co. Dublin), Omagh, Portrush, Waterford, Youghal.

LONDON AND SUBURBS.—Aldersgate Street (City), Balham, Battersea, Brixton, Brockley, Catford, Harlesden, Kensington, Lewisham, Stamford Hill, Stoke Newington, Sydenham, Upper Holloway, Walthamstow, Wandsworth, Willesden, Wood Green.

The London College of Music also has Centres at Ottawa and Montreal, in Canada; at Chicago, Reading, and Minnesota (U.S.A.); at Los Angeles, California; at Valparaiso; at Pietermaritzburg; at St John, New Brunswick; and at Antigua, West Indies.

EXAMINATIONS in PIANOFORTE PLAYING, SINGING, THEORY, and all branches of Music will be held at Centres as above in DECEMBER next, when certificates will be granted to all successful Candidates.

SYLLABUS and FORMS OF ENTRY can be obtained of the Secretary. The last day of entry is NOVEMBER 15.

SILVER and BRONZE MEDALS and BOOK PRIZES are offered for competition at each Examination in accordance with the regulations.

NEW CENTRES will be formed where none at present exist. Application should be made to the Secretary, who will furnish all necessary information.

The DIPLOMAS granted by the College are Associate (A.L.C.M.), Associate in Music (A.Mus., L.C.M.), Licentiate (L.L.C.M.), Licentiate in Music (L.Mus., L.C.M.), and the Diploma of Proficiency (D.P., L.C.M.). Regulations and list of Diplomées may be had upon application.

The "Annual Register" of the College is now ready. Price 2s. 6d.

In the EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT Students are received and thoroughly trained in all branches of Music, under eminent Professors, at moderate fees.

EVENING CLASSES are also held in various subjects at popular fees.

A CLASS for the Study of Modern Light Operas is held every Wednesday evening, from 6 till 9 o'clock, under the direction of Herr Albert Henning.

Several SCHOLARSHIPS and EXHIBITIONS are now being offered for competition. Full particulars may be had on application.

T. WEEKES HOLMES, Secretary.

TRINITY COLLEGE LONDON.

FOR MUSICAL EDUCATION AND EXAMINATION.—INST. 1872.

PRESIDENT:
SIR RICHARD E. WEBSTER, Q.C., M.P.
Warden: Professor E. H. TURPIN, Mus.D.
Director of Studies: Professor BRADBURY TURNER, Mus B.

Students of the College (professional or amateur) can receive instruction in all branches of music under eminent professors.

The NEXT TERM begins on September 25. Students are received at the commencement of the Term, and at the Half-Term.

Students for Three Studies (e.g., Pianoforte, Singing, and Harmony) are received at an inclusive fee of FIVE GUINEAS per Term. Students may enter for one subject at THREE GUINEAS a Term, for weekly lessons of thirty minutes, in any of the following subjects: Pianoforte, Solo Singing, Organ, Violin, Violoncello, Flute, Oboe, Clarinet, Harp, Horn, Trumpet, Double Bass, &c., Figured Bass Playing, Pianoforte Accompaniment, or Elocution. The class fee for Harmony, Counterpoint, Form, or Instrumentation is £1 per Term; and the class fee for Vocal and Aural Physiology, Voice Production, Acoustics, Elocution, French, German, or Italian, ONE GUINEA a Term.

The following Scholarships and Exhibitions in connection with the College are open to all-comers: The Henry Smart Scholarship (tenable for three years), The Queen Victoria Scholarship (tenable for three years), The Sir Julius Benedict Pianoforte Exhibition, the Sims Reeves Vocal Exhibition, the College Organ Exhibition, the College Violin Exhibition, the College Viola Exhibition, the College Violoncello Exhibition, and the College Double-Bass Exhibition (all tenable for one year).

The Tuition of the College is intended to serve as a preparative for the Higher and Local Examinations of the College, and for other public examinations, including the examinations for University degrees.

The successful candidates at the College Examinations entitled to use initials after their names are Licentiates in Music (L.Mus.) and Associates in Music (A.Mus.).

Weekly Lectures are delivered by the Warden during Term, and are especially addressed to students intending to enter for the Higher Examinations. The lectures are free to all students. Other lectures by eminent musicians are given from time to time.

Students' Concerts are given at the College at intervals during Term, and at the end of each term an Orchestral Concert is given at Princes' Hall.

The Orchestral Class meets each Saturday during Term at four o'clock, under the direction of Mr. F. Corder.

Prospectuses and all further information may be obtained from the undersigned.

By Order of the Academical Board,
SHELLEY FISHER, Secretary.
Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, W.

Just Published.

SIX EASY PIECES

FOR

VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE

COMPOSED BY

H. GROSSHEIM.

(Op. 24.)

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

BOOK 16.
SOFT VOLUNTARIES

FOR THE

ORGAN

COMPOSED BY

GEORGE CALKIN.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

SIX PIECES FOR THE VIOLIN

WITH PIANO[illegible]TE ACCOMPANIMENT

ded, [illegible]OSED BY

HERBER[illegible] WAREING.

s the ch[illegible]

			s.	d.
1. May Day Festival	.. 2	ter appea Pastoral Dance	.. 2	0
2. At Killee	 2	preserved Legende.. ..	.. 1	6
3. Romance	 1	s left no Saltarello	.. 2	0

London and New Y[illegible]LO, EWER and Co.

John Broadwood & Sons

(ESTABLISHED 1732)

PIANOFORTE MAKERS

BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT TO

HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES
HER ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCESS OF WALES
HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH
AND THE
REST OF THE ROYAL FAMILY.

FOR THEIR ROYAL HIGHNESSES

THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF YORK

AT YORK COTTAGE, SANDRINGHAM,

JOHN BROADWOOD & SONS

have had the honour of supplying

AN UPRIGHT GRAND PIANOFORTE

in a decorated and painted Spanish Mahogany case.

33, GREAT PULTENEY STREET (near Regent Street),
LONDON, W.

WILL BE PUBLISHED SEPTEMBER 25.

TO BE PERFORMED AT THE NORWICH MUSICAL FESTIVAL, 1893.

THE WATER-LILY

A ROMANTIC LEGEND

FOR SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

JOSEPH BENNETT

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

FREDERIC H. COWEN.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

THE WISHING BELL

A CANTATA

FOR FEMALE VOICES AND ORCHESTRA

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

JETTA VOGEL

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

JOHN FRANCIS BARNETT.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR.

SEPTEMBER 1, 1893.

NORWICH FESTIVAL NOVELTIES.

THIS year Norwich has almost a complete monopoly of new works for the Festival season. Apart from one or two compositions of comparatively little importance—in point of dimension, at any rate—Worcester, Bristol, Cheltenham, and North Staffordshire have placed all their faith in music which is known. Perhaps they are right, but the policy adopted with such curious unanimity in these quarters invests the Festival at Norwich with a special interest, intensified by the fact that the East Anglians, not satisfied with two or even three new works, announce the forthcoming production of five, namely:—

"The Water Lily," a Romantic Legend, by F. H. Cowen; "Una," a Cantata, by A. R. Gaul; "The Wishing Bell," a Cantata for female voices, by J. F. Barnett; an Orchestral Symphony, by E. German, and a "Polish Fantasia" for pianoforte and orchestra, by Paderewski.

Concerning the last two pieces in the list we can say nothing, but, of the first three, the time and the opportunity to speak have arrived.

Mr. Joseph Bennett, who is again Mr. Cowen's literary associate, has founded the book of the "Water Lily" upon a narrative poem by Wordsworth, entitled "The Egyptian Maid, or the Water Lily." Although not ranked among the master's chefs d'œuvre, this work obviously recommends itself as the basis of a libretto, and the wonder is that it was not utilised long ago. The story invented by the poet himself can be taken almost without change, and there is very little of incident in the book supplied to Mr. Cowen which does not come, directly or indirectly, from Wordsworth. The principal additions are found in a Prologue. Readers of the original will remember that Nina, the good enchantress, causes Sir Galahad to see in a dream the Egyptian maid, who, at the close of romantic adventures, is to become his bride. The Prologue, for the details of which Mr. Bennett stands responsible, devotes itself entirely to this incident, and represents it, together with all that follows, in dramatic form.

Sir Galahad, wandering alone in a forest near Caerleon, where Arthur keeps his Court, hears in the distance a rustic chorus with a refrain—

> Sing heigh, sing ho, and wait for Spring;
> A flower in her hand she'll bring.

This reminds the knight of a dream in which, looking upon a water lily, he saw its calyx open and a beautiful female face appear. Is this the flower that Spring has in store for him? He invokes the Spirit of the Lily—

> Come from glade, or bower, or stream,
> Lovely lady of my dream!

Spirits of the Air answer. They bear a message from the good enchantress—

> Sleep, and with the dreaming eye,
> Look upon thy lady nigh.

Sir Galahad falls into slumber and sees, upon the deck of a ship in full sail, the lady of the lily, and hears her tell how that she is voyaging to the Court of Britain to meet her destined husband. The knight awakes in rapture, and the Prologue ends as the distant rustics again sing the refrain of their chorus.

It may be supposed by those who know Mr. Cowen's strong points that the scene above indicated powerfully appealed to him. But it is necessary to say, first of all, that the composer has adopted and, without over-elaboration, quite freely used the Leitmotive system. The music to the Prologue is, therefore, very largely based upon representative themes, some of which first appear in an extremely fanciful orchestral prelude. These are the motive of Spring's Flower—sung in the refrain of the rustic chorus, and a Sir Galahad motive—treatment of which, in a truly fantastic vein, takes up the entire introduction. The first theme is frequently presented in canonic form, and is chorally so dealt with at large. This, and abundant use of unisons, together with a certain ruggedness of harmonic effect, give a stamp of its own to the rustic chorus. Sir Galahad's solo, "Ah! now comes back my dream of yesternight," combines with the second stanza of the chorus, but, we need scarcely add, has quite a distinct individuality. The knight's invocation, "Spirit of the lily fair," is a very important contribution to the Prologue music, and though not in any recognised form, may be regarded as a "set" piece in right of full development, with "a beginning, a middle, and an end." Upon this song Mr. Cowen has lavished his fancy, and here he makes another contribution to the Leitmotiven of the work. The following recurs at appropriate times:—

In the chorus of Spirits of the Air, "From rugged shores, where Norna dwells," the orchestra becomes the chief source of character. It is hard to strike out a new line in music of this faërie class, but by very ingenious instrumentation Mr. Cowen secures individuality. One of the most charming sections of the work is the incantation "Sleep and dream," where, moreover, the voice parts have a beauty of their own. The theme of Sir Galahad's song (No. 3) becomes orchestrally prominent in the peroration.

Strings are muted throughout nearly the whole of the Dream, and their effect in the undulating unisons of the introduction is one of appropriate mistiness. With these unisons are combined a widely-contrasted subject representative of the Water Lily—which figures also in the Egyptian maid's solo, "Methought I saw upon the flowery bank." Ina (for so the maid is called) follows her recitative, "O words of Fate! To Britain's Court I go," with an important and well-developed song, "Blow, happy winds, that play O'er the face of the laughing sea." Here Mr. Cowen has again put forth his lyric strength. One part of the song is of special importance. Ina calls upon Love to stand at the [illegible] and warn off all wandering storms, the melod[illegible]entu[illegible]inning thus—

The whole passage th[illegible]e the tal[illegible]he end is afterwards used in ensemble, as a c[illegible]so well [illegible]the entire Legend.

Passing from the Prologue to the body of the work, we have a scene which faithfully follows the story told by Wordsworth. Merlin, coming out of a cave on the Cornish coast, sees the beautiful ship which carries Ina, and, in wayward mood, resolves upon her destruction. He summons the Storm Spirits who obey his command. But when the vessel has disappeared remorse assails him. Happily Norna, the enchantress, enters, and after making known to Merlin the full meaning of what he has done, bids him prepare a swift car, while she herself sails in her magic boat for the islet on which the Egyptian Princess has been cast.

It will be observed that a supernatural element enters largely into this scene, but the opening section, in which Merlin describes the beauty of the morning and the appearance of the ship, gives occasion for another form of expression. The solo, introduced by a Morning theme, afterwards re-heard, is declamatory, with musical interest mainly in the orchestra, where the Water Lily motive of course becomes prominent, attended, as before, by the undulatory sailing theme. Merlin's call to the Storm Spirits and their fierce reply, together with the brief orchestral passage representing the storm which wrecks the vessel, are powerful episodes, bringing the relief of extreme vigour and decision after so much pure sentiment and delicate descriptiveness. That part of the scene in which Norna's boat figures makes additions to the store of representative subjects. The Boat itself has a theme—and its progress through the water appears to be indicated by the subjoined—

No. 6.

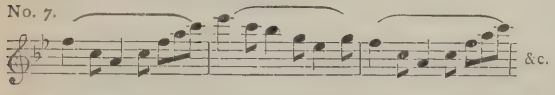
No. 7.

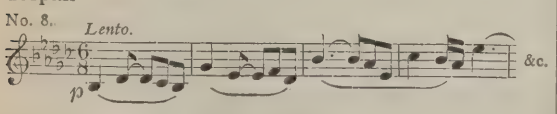


Upon these two motives the treatment almost wholly rests, and very refined and suggestive treatment it is.

The second scene is laid in the islet upon which Ina has been thrown. The shipwrecked maiden laments her escape from a more merciful death than starvation, but, seeing at her feet a lotus bloom with its emerging goddess, once the figurehead of the lost ship, she recognises a ground of hope in that emblem of immortal love and joy. Then the soft voices of aërial spirits, singing of speedy rest, "on love's own breast," give her comfort, and presently she falls into a deathlike sleep. Norna's magic boat approaches to the rescue as the scene ends.

Upon this tender and pathetic episode Mr. Cowen has exerted all his expressive and suggestive power, opening with a sad, but not sombre orchestral introduction, in which the English horn "voices" Ina's despair—

No. 8.



Following a recitative, "Alone upon this barren rock," comes a concerted piece, in which the voices of the aërial spirits blend with the solo and with the orchestra in its most delicate humour.

The piece is founded, in chief measure, upon the "Sleep and dream" subject in the Prologue; more especially as regards the choral portions. In the solo, though new matter appears, the same general character of repose is preserved, and it seems clear that the composer has left nothing undone to the end of such music as "charmeth sleep." The arrival of the succouring boat gives occasion for repetition of the themes and choral music already heard in connection with that magic craft.

Again on the Cornish coast, we witness, in Scene 3, the return of Norna's boat bearing the unconscious Ina. It is now a question whether the maiden's condition is one of sleep or death, and Merlin, still remorseful, makes his wish father the thought that life still exists. He invokes the aid of "nature's sweet restorer," but Norna urges more energetic action. Conscious or unconscious, dead or slumbering, the maid must be taken to Arthur's Court. For that journey Merlin has prepared a car drawn by swans. Ina is placed therein, Merlin follows, and the car, rising high in air, passes swiftly from sight. Thus in the libretto; thus, also, in Wordsworth.

The music to the foregoing scene shows Mr. Cowen again congenially engaged amongst supernatural phenomena. He has a varied form of the Boat motive—for the arrival of Norna and her insensible charge. We hear also the subject from the Prologue, "At the prow, where the lily gleams," and when Merlin, looking upon Ina, exclaims "If sleep, how soft! if death, how fair!" the motive of the maiden's despair is given out by oboe and bass clarinet, beneath tremulous chords for strings. The Sage's address to sleep, "O gentle sleep, still hold her in thy fond embrace," is a notable feature of the present scene. With a melodious and expressive vocal melody are associated, in the first instance, independent passages for two violoncellos soli. As the solo proceeds, this accompaniment is repeated with successively augmented power and increasing richness of effect. The Swans have a rapid figure of their own—

No. 9.

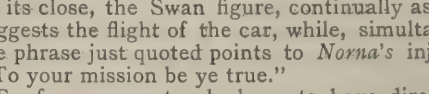
No. 10.

and, as Ina is placed in the car, the Prologue subject, "Come from glade, or bower, or stream," impressively stated by the brass, suggests the waiting knight at Caerleon. Norna addresses the Swans in a solo, "Swiftest birds that ever flew," very fancifully conceived and worked out, and having an opening phrase which recurs—

No. 11.



At its close, the Swan figure, continually ascending, suggests the flight of the car, while, simultaneously, the phrase just quoted points to Norna's injunction, "To your mission be ye true."

So far, supernatural elements have directed the course of the story, and determined the nature of the music; but now comes a change. The final scene is laid at Caerleon, where lists are prepared for a tournament, and a crowd of onlookers has assembled. While awaiting action the people discuss the probable victor. Agravaine, Percival, Tristan, Lancelot, and Galahad have each loud-voiced partisans, till the coming of the King and Queen ends the wordy warfare. Trumpets sound, and the knights are about to make a formal parade, when Merlin's car appears above, and the interest is completely diverted. After expressions of curiosity and wonder from the multitude, Merlin, whose car has reached the earth, informs Arthur of the disaster that has fallen upon the expected flower of the Court, at the same time concealing his own share therein. In few words, the King expresses regret, and, assuming that the maiden is dead, commands the observance of funeral rites. Ladies advance to deck the car with flowers, but Merlin intervenes, begging that the knights may advance successively and touch the unconscious form, "For so may pass to her the kindred life of him, her destined lord." Arthur silently complies, and the strange process begins. Sir Agravaine, Sir Percival, Sir Tristan, Sir Lancelot fail in turn, but the kiss of Sir Galahad has another result. Ina revives, and the story ends amid passionate protestations of mutual love and a powerful ensemble, derived, as already stated, from the maiden's solo in the Prologue, "At the prow, where the lily gleams."

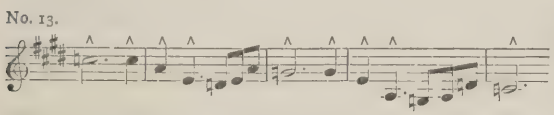
The character of the opening chorus in the final scene presents the greatest possible contrast to the preceding music. It is written in a broad and massive style, and the cries of the various partisans are quite ingeniously contrived for musical as well as realistic effect, the whole being held together, so to speak, by a subject in the orchestra, first stated by the admirers of Sir Agravaine—

No. 12.

&c.

Although King Arthur is a very minor person of the drama, he has a theme to himself—

No. 13.



This, of course, accompanies his entrance, and plays a somewhat conspicuous part in the scene. The exclamations of the people at the sight of Merlin's car are attended by continuous repetitions of the Swan "figure," now soaring high, now descending low and coming to rest. At this point we are again among the Leitmotiven, and hear a variant of the Morning theme (Scene 1), which accompanies, throughout, the lines—

But who is she
That, pale and wan, like drownèd lily lies?
Why sits the Sage
As bowed with age,
While grief and woe are in his anxious eyes?

Merlin's address to Arthur is simple recitative, but the King's reply is attended from beginning to end by his own representative theme, now in 3-4 instead of 4-4. A pathetic note is sounded in the funeral music sung by the ladies, "Rest, maiden, rest." Here the drums have a rhythmic figure in each bar, while clarinet, cor anglais, and bassoon precede the entry of the voices with this subject—which presently becomes of great importance.

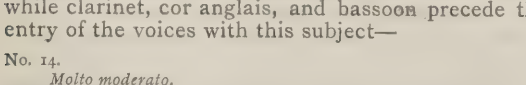
No. 14.

Molto moderato.



&c.

The scene in which the knights touch the inanimate form of Ina must have cost the composer much thought, but it will generally be admitted that its difficulties are very happily surmounted. Of the five knights who approach the maiden, four are unsuccessful, and the people's description of their effort and failure is attended, substantially, by the same music in each case. There are, of course, changes in detail, and the key is successively moved upward a grade. In each case, also, non-success is signalled by the appearance in the orchestra of the funeral theme last quoted. Thus simply and impressively does Mr. Cowen sustain the interest of a scene presenting the very obvious danger of monotony. When Sir Galahad's turn comes, his ardent address to the inanimate maid, "Mine art thou, pure Lily of the Nile," with its constant arpeggios, changes the impression from that of death to life; and after he has kissed her (the orchestra playing the subject "Come from glade, or bower, or stream"), the exclamations of King and people, "O wonderful! she lives! she moves!" are but a natural sequence. Above these cries, with growing intensity, soars the motive just referred to.

The music now takes us back to the Prologue. Sir Galahad's address, "O love, when first I saw thee in a dream," is attended by the subject of the rustic chorus "Sing heigh! sing ho!" and the refrain itself is sung in the distance, as at the outset of the work. With equal significance it recurs later as an interlude in the passionate duet now sung by the knight and Ina. The composer has written no more ardent love-music than this, nor any more characterised by individuality. Its intensity is, at moments, overwhelming, and aptly designed to express the tremendous reaction caused by what has just transpired. Several representative themes appear in the brief remainder of the work—the sailing motive in the Dream scene; the subject "At the prow, where the lily gleams" (used, with its words, in the closing ensemble), and, finally, in the orchestral Coda, a fragment of the Water Lily theme. We cannot bring this description to an end without a word for the extremely picturesque orchestration which gives to the piece so much of its interest and beauty, nor without pointing to the immense advantage enjoyed by a composer when the subject he has chosen is one which appeals to his sympathies and suits the bent of his genius.

MR. GAUL'S "UNA."

After reciting the "argument" of this Cantata, Mr. Frederic Enoch, the writer of the book, adds: "The story is but an episode freely adapted from the first Book of the 'Faërie Queene' of Edmund Spenser." Mr. Enoch emphasises by much more than this acknowledgment the connection of his libretto with the great Elizabethan poem. He gives a series of sixteen Spenserian extracts from which phrases have been taken, and incorporated with his own verses, supplying an ample reference in each case. The libretto, laid out for sixteen musical "numbers," is written in rhymed verse of sufficiently varied structure. It has a dramatic form and the persons of the drama are five: Una (soprano), Fidessa, an Enchantress (contralto), the Redcrosse Knight (tenor), the Hermit, a Magician (baritone), and the Knight Prince Arthur (baritone). Of these the last two may be taken by one artist. The story is, substantially, as follows:—

Una and her lover, the Redcrosse Knight, are journeying through a forest to the rescue of the maiden's father, whom a dragon holds captive. They find shelter at a hermitage, the occupant of which is a magician. The Hermit summons Fidessa to exert her seductive arts upon the knight, who weakly yields and flies with her. Una, left alone, is guarded by a lion till, after various adventures, she encounters Prince Arthur, and learns that he has released the Redcrosse Knight from durance. She hears, also, that her lover, in expiation of his offence, has slain the dragon and liberated her father. Joyous anticipations of a happy bridal close the tale.

Mr. Gaul's style is so well known that to say it is here faithfully exemplified is to give an accurate idea of the new work. This composer sees no reason to change the method which has popularised his name wherever choral societies need music that is musicianly, melodious, and within the scope of moderate executive means. The result, in the present case, leaves no doubt that into all the places which know his previous compositions "Una" will find a way and become as much a favourite as its forerunners. Its characteristics are harmonic simplicity; a preference, in the concerted numbers, for homophonic treatment as distinct from that which is contrapuntal; a subordinate orchestra, in the sense that it is mainly employed for accompaniment rather than the filling of an independent rôle; and, finally, treatment of each situation and feeling without the restraints imposed by Leitmotiven. Only one theme, connected with the Magician's spell, can be said to have a representative character, though there are instances in which others recur. Substantially, in point of fact, the music of each number stands connected with the situations and emotions of the poetic text and with nothing else. It must be obvious that a work constructed on the method just indicated is not a fertile theme for analytical remark, especially in a case where the composer has too much regard for the amenities of music to sacrifice them in the interest of dramatic effect. Mr. Gaul considers before all things the elegance and symmetry of his melodic phrases; the natural flow of his harmony and the preservation of a spirit which, if not monotonously equable, certainly refuses to tear a passion to tatters. In this, from his point of view, he is quite right, and continued observance of the policy means, for him, unchanging public favour.

The Cantata includes two orchestral numbers—an Introduction and an Intermezzo entitled "Early morning in the Woods." The first is chiefly founded upon the Spell subject already mentioned; the second has themes quite independent, but both are in the gentle, flowing, and melodious style which seems the natural expression of Mr. Gaul's musical feeling. That they are effectively scored may be assumed. With regard to the choruses, it may be noted that, despite studied moderation and simplicity, the picturesque is sometimes attained. Such a case is found in the first chorus during an episode referring to nocturnal appearances in the forest. A quasi-religious chorus, "Hark, the Angelus," may confidently await popular applause for its appropriate expression, and a contrasted one of Demon Spirits is entitled to take up the same attitude in right of vigour which makes up for absence of special characterisation. A chorus of peasants, "Let's hasten on," seems to us reminiscent of something by Dvorák, but is more greatly distinguished for fugal statement of a long theme — one of the rare cases in which recourse is had to vocal counterpoint. The music of the Fauns, Naiads, &c., is scarcely picturesque enough to satisfy modern taste, but falls pleasantly on the ear—a remark applicable more or less to all the concerted numbers. The solos are, to a large extent, cast in a familiar mould, being preceded by a recitative, and having the form either of ballad or aria. Their melodies, always flowing and agreeable, in not a few instances melodiously expressive, are "accompanied" in the strict musical sense of the word, the orchestra remaining subordinate and in the background that the singer may not have to contend against a rival interest. That the songs will escape criticism as lacking sufficient variety is hardly to be expected, but Mr. Gaul is an "old compositorial hand" and knows the public to which he appeals. "Una" will doubtless pass from the trying circumstances of Festival performance into the sympathetic bosom of the average British Concert-goer, and there be cherished long and fondly.

Mr. J. F. Barnett's "Wishing Bell."

The librettist of this Cantata, "Jetta Vogel," found a suggestion for her work in a superstitious custom said to be still observed. In South Austria there is a lake with a small island, on which stands a church. The tower of this edifice contains a bell which, in times of family or social emergency, is rung as an accompaniment to prayer for Divine assistance. Hence its name, and hence, also, the title of the composition we now have before us. The story wherein the Wishing Bell is made to play a part is of the simplest character. It does not begin, properly speaking, till the second number, in which we gather that the dwellers around the lake are threatened with the scourge of war. The leader of the defending force is one Rudolph—he takes no part, seeing that the Cantata is limited to female voices—and, in his absence, his mother, Gertrude, and bride, Clare, cross to the island to offer their prayers and ring the Wishing Bell. Meanwhile, some women have ascended the hills to watch the battle, and, on the return of Gertrude and Clare, they tell of a glorious victory for the cause of hearth and home. Soon the triumphant defenders return, and the work ends amid general rejoicing. To this outline of the argument we need scarcely add that the Cantata is necessarily lyrical and descriptive rather than dramatic. The only personages introduced are, indeed, of the most shadowy type, and merely serve as vehicles for the expression of certain emotions. We do not point out these facts by way of censure. The authoress has chosen her own method, and her book has the qualifications necessary for a short piece such as, presumably, was desired by the composer for use in ladies' classes and schools. From internal evidence, we should say that the "Wishing Bell" was not designed, in the first instance, for Festival use. But the composer has since made the changes required by a larger and more important locale than the school or class-room, and there can be little doubt that, with the help of effective orchestration, his Cantata will be a pleasant feature in the music of the Norwich week. The whole of the book is written in rhymed verse.

There is much similarity of character and structure between Mr. Gaul's music and, in the present case, that of Mr. Barnett. Both composers have written with studied simplicity, having apparent regard to certain limitations of executive means, and, both rejecting the Leitmotive system, have treated each section of the poetic text independently. But as in Mr. Gaul's case, so in Mr. Barnett's, an exception is made as regards one or two subjects which repeat themselves in the course of the work on rare occasions. On the other hand, the composer of the "Wishing Bell" makes more distinctive use of the orchestra than does Mr. Gaul in "Una," and endows it with far greater significance. The instrumental Introduction, partly founded upon the theme of an "Angelus" chorus in the body of the work, consists of a number of very short and undeveloped movements—if so the sections may be called. There is, however, no great variety of character and expression in it, Mr. Barnett's obvious aim being an appropriate, if changeful, prelude to the bright and happy chorus which describes the scene of the story and indicates the usage of the bell. The chorus is of the simplest character (Allegretto, 6-8), the parts often moving in thirds, but it has episodes in which a musician's hand more fully appears. A meditative soprano solo in A flat, with organ accompaniment, "Ah, sweet it is to kneel," breaks the flow of the unaffected choral strains, and suggests the religious element which naturally belongs to the story.

The beginning of the action gives opportunity for some picturesque effects. For example, the chorus in which the women describe the passage of Gertrude and Clare to the island has a continuous accompaniment marked by the easy flow (6-8) and undulating movement of barcarolle music. In this case the vocal parts (two) are used in alternation before being employed conjointly, but nowhere does the composer depart from the plain and unpretentious method upon which he has determined. A three-part religious chorus, "Ave Maria Stella," with interspersed solos for Gertrude (contralto), represents the intercessory pleading at the shrine and the ringing of the bell. It is one of the best numbers in the work, and special note may be taken of a passage beginning "The frayed and knotted cord I take, the Wishing Bell I sound." Here, for a moment, the composer shows a leaning to fuller and more recondite expression than the plan of the piece admits. The same tendency appears in the orchestral preludes to the various numbers. These, it may be, formed no part of the original design. A subsequent duet for Gertrude and Clare is in Mr. Barnett's smoothest manner. Excitement deepens as the action proceeds, and we have some vigorous writing in the number containing a chorus of women who have watched the fight, "We have seen the warrior fall." This clearly appears as a likely candidate for popular favour. It is followed, in studied contrast of character, by a prayer, "Angel guards watch o'er us." The choral music in which news of victory is imparted and the return of Gertrude and Clare from the island is described, reverts in character to that of the earlier numbers. The remainder of the work presents a melodious and well-developed air, "The sky of life was dark," with an important harp accompaniment; a military march and chorus, "Soldier, from the fight returning," also well developed, and animating to boot; and a final ensemble of two soli and three chorus parts, "Look around, on lake and mountain," which appropriately closes an unpretending, yet very pleasing work, thoroughly adapted for popular use, and qualified by musicianship (which need not be severed from simplicity) to exert a refining influence upon popular taste.

WELSH CHORAL SINGING.

The Principal of the Royal Academy of Music needs a new introduction to his admirers this month, for he has taken unto himself another name. He is now a Welsh Bard. For the first time in its history the sacred College of the Gorsedd has admitted an English composer into its ranks, and at the National Eisteddfod held at Pontypridd last month Dr. Mackenzie was, with due formalities and much mysterious language, christened "Pencerdd Alban," or "Scotia's Chief of Song." As a Bard of the Isle of Britain, "Pencerdd Alban" has peculiar privileges, and he did not lose time in availing himself of them. He might have been seen by his astonished friends assisting at the crowning of the victorious poet on the last day of the meeting, and placing his hand on the dread sword which is held on high by the Bards of Wales as a symbol of the authority and dominion they exercise over all who seek honour in the realms of music, literature, and art. It was a sincere compliment from a body so exclusively national, and Dr. Mackenzie may certainly claim to have deserved it by the signal services he rendered to Welsh music by his outspoken criticisms during the week. The Welsh Eisteddfod is an extraordinary gathering. Nowhere else in the world can such a spectacle be seen as this immense assembly of 20,000 persons who meet day after day to listen to competitions in singing and playing, and who remain in a crowded pavilion for six hours or more at a stretch, without impatience or disturbance, engrossed in the musical contests which occupy the stage. The scene is sometimes overpowering in its intensity. It is impossible to avoid the impression that it is not an audience but a people which is assembled there. Whatever tendency to find fault may exist amongst those who see the defects which are allied so closely to the great merits of this Welsh Olympia, it is lost in the feeling that this unique gathering becomes a subject not so much for criticism as for philosophy.

At the present moment, however, Welsh choral singing has reached a crisis in its history, and Dr. Mackenzie's excellent observations on the dangers that lie ahead were indeed well timed. However impatient of advice and however jealous of interference the Welsh people may be, they cannot resent the sympathetic but outspoken warning which came from so distinguished and impartial a musician. The vice of the Welsh genius lies in a quality which most other nations would be proud to welcome as a virtue. It has so much facility, so much natural aptitude that it feels disinclined to submit itself to discipline. It is too easily content with the triumphs which it gathers without effort to welcome the irksome restraints which the severity of art would seek to impose upon it. This licence is assisted by the Eisteddfod, which, by its prizes no less than by the pleasurable excitement of competition, tends to confirm rather than correct the failing. The Welsh choirs display a wonderful power in dramatic singing. It may be questioned whether they are rivalled in this respect by any other nation in the world, as the new Bard freely and fully acknowledged. But they do not seek to study the art they practise: they are rarely able to read at sight, they do not seek to widen their experience by attempting to master the standard works of the chief composers, they spend month after month and sometimes year after year in elaborating a scanty répertoire of detached pieces. The number of oratorios known to Welsh audiences is remarkably small. The choirs are content to devote themselves to the study of two or three choruses a year, which are set for competition, and these are reiterated for months at every local Eisteddfod. Those who take them in hand teach them for the most part by note, and have often to ruin their voices by the strain which the task requires. There are few who can read Tonic Sol-fa; the ordinary notation is scarcely understood. When the Cardiff Musical Festival was founded it was discovered that the Welsh choralists were of no avail, because it was impossible for so many works to be mastered by them in the time. Even the chorus which was formed locally was practically unacquainted with the "Elijah," and there were many who had actually never sung in "The Messiah"! Dr. Mackenzie, entirely in ignorance of these facts, and judging from his single experience, pointed out that under such conditions progress was impossible. The elaborate manner in which the test pieces had been prepared had, he observed, brought them to a pitch of perfection which almost amounted to exhaustion; a zeal which was "apt to provoke, after the music itself had been mastered, a desire to polish away, to elaborate, to gild refined gold and paint the lily, until art may be lost sight of and artificiality may take its place!" The danger becomes the more pronounced because this excess of preparation produces an effect so charming, and evokes admiration so sincere that it is difficult for the public to comprehend that a greater virtue has to be sacrificed for a less, and that the art of music is being subordinated to the mere gratification of the dramatic instinct. The question which now presents itself to the Welsh people is this: whether the limit in its musical attainments has been reached, whether its chorus singing is to ever be a mere carving of heads on cherry-stones, or whether it is to reinforce nature by discipline, and seize that honourable distinction in the region of true, zealous, and broad art which lies so clearly open to it.

The repeated applause which Dr. Mackenzie's observations received in an assembly so large and so representative suggests a hope that the Pontypridd Eisteddfod may prove a turning-point in the history of Welsh music. The President at one of the Concerts gave the assurance that the plea of their newly admitted Bard for the development of the orchestra in Wales would not be without its effect. It is to be hoped that the same happy fortune will attend his wise advice on the chorus. After properly observing that, as far as the results of long preparations of set pieces were concerned, the climax of the purpose of the present system of Eisteddfodau had been reached, Dr. Mackenzie went on to suggest that "much less time be given for preparation, and very much more for the acquirement of a thorough knowledge of the elements of music and reading at first sight." Without some such reformation the Eisteddfod may become a curse rather than a blessing to the Principality. It means well by giving prizes to young performers, but there is always a danger—and this the leading musicians of Wales have readily realised—that a distinction so eagerly sought for, and attended by so much enthusiasm, may too easily satisfy a promising student, and may retard instead of stimulating his ambition. Many men of genius have been ruined by a premature recognition of their capacities. It may be pleasing to find so many gifted boys and girls competing for a pianoforte prize, but it is not so gratifying to discover that a year of serious work which might be productive of much solid progress has been devoted mainly to the study of a single sonatina. These obvious defects are not incapable of remedy, but the physician is needed at once. The Eisteddfod should be a means and not an end. It has been suggested that choirs should be tested in reading, and that instead of three numbers being chosen twelve months before the time of trial, a whole oratorio, or even two, should be selected, and that the adjudicators should have power to call upon the competing choirs to perform any portion of them they may choose. At present Welsh choral music has reached finality; it is in a cul de sac. It has shown what refinement and minute attention to microscopic details in phrasing can accomplish. But this is only a limited victory. It is almost melancholy to listen to the wonderful interpretations given by rough colliers to delicately written glees; their very perfection makes one realise the more acutely what splendid attainments they are forfeiting by their neglect of scientific study and the cultivation of a wider knowledge. If the Welsh people would take to heart the excellent advice given to them, and sacrifice their excessive devotion to dramatic detail which almost cloys the sense by its constant supremacy, then, in their critic's words, "the national work which has been going on for ages in their country will be accomplished, and the Eisteddfod will achieve still greater triumphs than it has done in the past."

"OF THE MASTERSINGERS' GRACIOUS ART."

(Continued from page 459.)

Wagenseil next treats "Of the Tones and Melodies"—that is, the music accompanying the master-songs. Plagiarism is guarded against by a rule to this effect: "He who will compose a Master-tone or melody must take great care that no melody which he composes infringes another Master-tone to the extent of four syllables; but that he contrive an entirely new melody and ornaments [Blumen] not to be found in others of the Mastersingers' Tones."

Having composed a duly approved "Tone," the composer is "to give it an honourable and not contemptible name, in order to distinguish it from others, and is to secure a couple of sponsors for it; and he must afterwards set it to three 'Gesätz' [sections] from material with which the Markers will provide him, and write it down as a memorial in the Mastersingers' book provided for the purpose, the exact date, together with the name of the author, being appended thereto." The grades among the Mastersingers are given as follows: "He who is not yet familiar with the Tabulatur is a Scholar; he who is thoroughly acquainted with it is termed a School-friend [Schulfreund]; he who can sing some five or six 'Tones,' a Singer; he that writes songs to existing 'Tones,' a Poet; and he who invents a Tone, a Master; everyone, however, who becomes member of a society is entitled an Associate [Gesellschafter]." It is Walther's ignorance of these successive steps to the mastership he covets that makes David despair of his success in the trial.

Of the "honourable" names given to the melodies of the Mastersingers, many delightfully quaint examples are to be found in a list of 222 "Master-tones, which at the present time, and especially at Nuremberg, are accustomed to be sung." These are divided according to the number of rhymes they contain, varying from five to thirty-four. One or two deserve quotation by reason of the exceeding quaintness of their titles. Such are, "The Extra-short Evening-red-tune, by Georg Hagers"; "The Writing-paper-tune, by M. Ambrose Metzger"; "The Frog-tune, by Heinrich Frauenlob"; "The Faithful-pelican-tune, by Metzger"; "The Sweet-smelling-marjoram-tune, by the same"; "The English-tin-tune, by Kaspar Enderles"; "The Hard-kick-tune, by Daniel Steiglein"; "The Fat-badger-tune, by Metzger."

It is rather tantalizing that Wagenseil gives no specimen of these quaintly-named tunes. The gap may, however, be supplied later on, when we come to consider the four "Crowned Tones," which every Master was expected to know. The reader may also be referred to Mr. H. E. Krehbiel's highly interesting "Studies in the Wagnerian Drama," in which a song, extracted from a MS. volume in the Municipal Library at Nuremberg, is quoted. This song, it may be said, has a double interest for students of "Die Meistersinger," since the poem is by Hans Sachs and the melody by Veit Pogner.

With the sixth chapter we come to what is perhaps the most interesting portion of the essay. It is entitled "Of the Mastersingers' Manners and Customs, at the Singing-School and in convivial society" [Zech], and its value as a commentary on Wagner's opera is the greater since the author bases his account chiefly on the procedure adopted by the Nuremberg Guild. In Nuremberg, he tells us, the Masters held their "Song-Schools," as their vocal tournaments were termed, on Sundays and Feast-Days, but, as a rule, only on the more important festivals. Hence the famous contest in which Walther von Stolzing defeated Sixtus Beckmesser took place on Midsummer-Day, the Festival of St. John the Baptist; a day which, by the way, was specially set apart for the reception of new members into the Guild. The proceedings before and at one of these "Song-Schools" are described by our author at considerable length, and the details are so full of interest that we cannot do better than paraphrase a great part of his narrative.

When a Song-School was about to be held, it was the duty of the junior master to personally visit each of his brethren and give him due notice of the meeting. Each associate of the Guild thus bidden was bound to attend, or, if unable, to send his excuses. This, it will be remembered, is done in the first act of Wagner's opera by one Niklaus Vogel, who does not answer to his name when the roll-call is read by Kothner (the junior master), whereupon one of the apprentices explains that Master Vogel's absence is due to sickness, an excuse which apparently meets with ready acceptance, though, according to the rule, strictly construed, he ought to have sent his excuse through the "Umsager," or messenger. In Wagenseil's time, as in that of Hans Sachs, the Mastersingers' meetings were held in St. Katherine's Church, belonging to the Katherinen-Kloster, or Convent of St. Katherine, and situated near the river Pegnitz, not far from the great Church of St. Lawrence. The building still exists, or at least existed up to a few years ago, but has been turned to base uses, having become the paint-shop of the Municipal Theatre. The preparations for a Song-School are thus described by Wagenseil:—

Near the entrance to the choir a low platform is erected, and upon it a table and large black desk are set, benches being placed around. Round this platform, which is termed the "Gemercke," or Marker's platform, curtains are hung, so that no one can see what takes place inside.

Turning for a moment to the first act of the opera, it is a platform of this description that the apprentices are erecting, till they are reminded by the knowing David that it is not a Song-School, but only a "Freiung" that is about to take place. Of the distinction between Song-School and "Freiung" we shall have to speak presently. To come back to Wagenseil—

A small Cathedra in the form of a pulpit, which is termed the Song-stool, and in which the singer of a Master-song sits, is fixed permanently in its place near the great pulpit. When the date is fixed for a Song-School, notice thereof is given by means of four or five tablets hung up in the town, three of them being fixed on poles in the Great Market, and the fourth on the outer gate leading to St. Katherine's Church. On one of the tablets hanging in the market is painted a garden, in which several persons are walking. And on the top may be read the following lines:

Twelve aged men, long years ago,
This garden kept from fear of foe,
From savage creatures, bear and boar,
That would have wasted it right sore;
They lived, if what they say be true,
In the year nine hundred and 62.

The explanation of this picture and its superscription is to be found partially in an ancient Master-song, which enumerates twelve masters (whose names we have already given) to whom tradition assigns the origin of the Master-song, and asserts that they flourished in the year 962. The garden is explained by Wagenseil as in all probability an allusion to the famous Rose Garden at Worms, in which the most valiant heroes of the world used to meet at the tourney. "On another notice-board is represented King David playing on his harp, and kneeling before the Lord Christ who hangs upon the cross." It is presumably this painting, or at least one very like it, which is now to be seen in the Germanic Museum at Nuremberg, and a woodcut of which is given in Naumann's "History of Music" (p. 252 of the English edition). This same tablet, it may be added, is one of the most interesting and valuable relics of the Mastersingers existing. It is thus described by Mr. Krehbiel in his already-quoted work on the Wagnerian Drama:—

"It is a small affair of wood, with two doors, and was painted by a Franz Hein, in 1581. On the doors are portraits of four distinguished members of the Guild. Two pictures occupy the middle panel, the upper, with a charmingly naïve disregard of chronology, showing King David praying before a crucifix; the lower, a meeting of Mastersingers, with a singer perched in a box-like pulpit. Over the heads of the assemblage is a representation of the chain and medallion with which the victor in a singing contest used to be decorated.

An equally quaint representation of a Song-School, showing the singer in his rostrum, holding a species of chimney-pot hat in his hands, and the four markers in their enclosure, is reproduced in E. Goetze's little monograph: "Hans Sachs" (Vol. 19 of the "Bayerische Bibliothek," Bamberg, 1890).

The third tablet, continues Wagenseil, contains the nativity of the Lord Christ; and on the fourth is a portrait of the good Hannss Sachs. That the object for which the tablets are hung up may be known, a printed paper is stuck on each, having the following contents:—

"At to-day's Song-School, certain lovers of art give to the Mastersingers certain prizes to be sung for.

"Wherefore there shall in the first place in the 'Free-singing' be sung true and authentic histories, edifying and in accordance with Christian teaching.

"The limit shall be from . . . . to . . . . rhymes.*

"In the 'Chief-singing' no song shall be allowed to pass unless it be in accordance with Holy Scriptures: That is to say, out of the Old and New Testament.

"The limit shall be from . . . . to . . . . rhymes.*

"At the commencement of the proceedings, a fine new song in our characteristic style will be sung in chorus.

"Ye singers sing and praise the Lord,
Display your art with one accord;
He who does best shall win much praise,
And shall besides receive the bays,
Therefore, singers, prepare your lays.

"Whoever wishes to hear, must betake himself to St. Katherine's after the sermon at noon, when a beginning will be made."

It may perhaps be as well to explain that the above rhymes, whatever their demerits, are not worse doggerel than the original. Another form of notice read thus:—

Whereas by permission of the honourable, circumspect, and right learned Council of this Town, the Mastersingers are graciously allowed to hold this day a public Song-School, to the praise, honour, and glory of God Almighty, and for the spreading of His Holy Word. There shall at the aforesaid school be sung nothing that is not conformable to Holy Scripture; further, all lampoons and inflammatory songs ["Straffer und Reitzer"], such as lead to disunion, are forbidden; as are also all immodest songs. But he who does the best in a truly artistic spirit shall be honoured with the "David," or insignia of the school, and he who comes next with a beautiful wreath.

The time of meeting in St. Katherine's was generally about one in the afternoon, between midday service and vespers. At the open church door one of the Masters, designated the "Büchsenmeister," stood holding a box, into which those who came as hearers placed their voluntary contributions. So far from an indignity was this office regarded, that it was the privilege of the winner of the secon prize at a Song-School to be the collector at the next meeting. Out of the money thus received the cost of erecting the Markers' platform was paid and prizes were provided.

* In the original this is followed by the words: "Zu dem Gleichen aber von . . . . biss auf . . . . Reimen," the meaning of which the writer has not been able to ascertain.

So soon as a goodly number of persons are assembled the Free-singing ["Freysingen"] is begun, in which any one who will may be heard, and even strangers may take part. And in the Free-singing not only subjects from Holy Scripture, but likewise actual secular events worthy of commemoration, as well as maxims of morality, are allowed to be sung. In the Free-sing, however, there is no marking, so that there is nothing to win excepting glory, though one do never so well. He who desires to sing modestly takes his seat on the song-stool, takes off his hat or cap, and, after a short pause, begins to sing, and continues till he has finished his song. When the Free-singing is over, the assembled masters join in a song, one leading off, and the others joining in. After this the Chief-singing ["Haupt-singen"] begins, in the which nothing is suffered that is not composed from the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, and the singer must in all cases begin by giving the book and chapter from which his song is taken. When, in the Chief-singing, the singer has ascended the song-stool, and rested awhile, the principal Marker calls out: "Begin!"

Beckmesser's comically harsh call, "Fanget an!" which supplies Walther with the motive of his trial song, is thus in strict accord with the rule.

Whereupon the singer makes a beginning, and, when he has completed a Stanza or an After-song, waits till the Marker again cries: "Go on!" After his song is ended, the singer quits the song-stool, and makes way for another.

We now come to the Markers and their duties, a point which will reveal one of the very few details of importance in which Wagner has allowed himself to depart from the realistic accuracy generally observed by him in this comedy.

"Markers" are those who, as the most prominent and most eminent members of the Guild, sit at the table and before the great desk on the curtained platform, and are generally four in number. The senior has lying on the desk before him the Holy Scriptures, according to the translation of Herr Luther; opens them at the place given by the singer, from which his song is taken, and gives careful attention whether the song agrees not only with the tenor of Scripture, but also with Luther's very words. The second Marker, who sits opposite the first, notices whether in the wording of the song all is in accordance with the rules of the "Tabulatur," and if any should be broken, makes a note with a piece of chalk upon the desk of the mistake, and of its punishment; that is, how many syllables (i.e., bad marks) are to be reckoned in respect thereof. The third Marker writes down the last syllable of each verse or rhyme, and sees that all are correctly rhymed, at the same time noting down the mistakes. Lastly, the fourth Marker pays attention to the Tone (Melody), so that the right one be adhered to, and not falsified; also that all Stanzas and After-songs conform together.

For the sake of dramatic effect, Wagner has imagined these multifarious duties to be undertaken by a single individual, and indeed in Sixtus Beckmesser all the pedantry and unimaginativeness of his order are concentrated, the result being a creation which is one of the most original and characteristic in the whole range of operatic literature.

Whilst this singing is going on, the other members of the Guild must abstain from conversation and noise, in order that the singer may not be confused. No singer is to approach the Markers' enclosure, nor shall he, unless invited, enter it and sit down, and so disturb the Markers in their duties.

When all the singers have ended their songs, the Markers consult together as to their respective positions, and should it happen that some have done equally well, neither having made more mistakes than the other, they must tie for the prize, and be heard again, until the honour of winning belongs to one, and he is found to have been guilty of fewer mistakes than the others, or else has made no slips at all, and therefore is said to sing "smoothly" ["glatt"]. The prizes are now divided, the Markers calling to the platform, in succession, the two who have held themselves most bravely, and presenting to them what they have won by their singing. To the victor, he who has done the best, there is awarded in Nuremberg the decoration of the pendant ["Gehäng"]. This pendant is a long and broad silver chain, having the names of the members who caused it to be made engraved on it, and, attached to it, many silver coins of all kinds presented to the Guild. As, however, this chain was, on account of its size, somewhat unserviceable, and not suitable to be worn, there was handed to the prize-winner a cord with three large silver-gilt coins fastened to it, with which he could more conveniently adorn himself. This cord has on it the name of King David, and, on the middle coin, which is also the largest, King David is portrayed playing upon the harp. This Hannss Sachs bequeathed to the Guild. Since the cord was so old as to be in danger of being broken, and the coin also much worn, I have had made for the Worshipful Guild a silver chain for use in the future, to which I have suspended a gilt medallion, on one side of which may be read:

JOH. CHRISTOPHORUS
WAGENSEILUIS
HAC CATENA
SIBI SUÆQUE MEMORIÆ
DEVINCIVIT
NORIBERGENSES PHONASCOS,
CIS IS C XCVI.

On the reverse:

POLLIO
AMAT VESTRAM,
QUAMVIS SIT RUSTICA,
MUSAM.

To the next after the Victor ["Uebersieger"] there falls a beautiful wreath made of silken flowers, which he places on his head.

This, it may be noted, recalls the mocking song of the apprentices in the first act—

The wreath of flowers, in silk so bright,
I hope it may fall to your lot, Sir Knight!

Similarly we are reminded of Pogner's offer of the hand of his daughter as the prize by Wagenseil's next sentence, which is to this effect: "From time to time an amateur is found who generously offers something to be sung for." The ordinary prizes, however, the pendant and wreath just described, remained the property of the Guild, and had to be returned to the Treasurer [Schlüsselmeister] after the meeting. But the honour of wearing these adornments was not the only advantage which accrued to the successful singer, for Wagenseil continues:—

It is to be observed that the Victor, or "King David-winner," acquires, in addition, this advantage—that at the next Song-School he may sit on the Markers' platform. And if by chance anything should escape the notice of the Markers, he is to call their attention to the same; and if any dispute should arise and the Markers ask him "Has the singer committed an error?" he is to answer with becoming modesty. No David-winner is, however, to have the right of addressing the Markers without invitation, but he must wait till he is asked. On the other hand, he is permitted to point out what is not noticed, hence he is bound to pay close attention. A wreath-winner stands at the door and takes the money at the next school.

A song—that is, a text—shall not be set to the same melody more than once in a single year. A text may, however, be sung and set to different melodies frequently in the course of a year. Two songs to the same melody must not be sung in immediate succession. The Markers are to mark faithfully and diligently, according to the rules of the art, and not by favour; to treat all alike just as if they were under oath. . . . And if a Marker's father, son, brother, cousin, brother-in-law, &c., sings, the Marker, as he is liable to be partial, is to resign his office until the singer has ended, and, in the meantime, the "Büchsenmeister," or some other impartial singer and member, is to mark in his place.

It is this rule that is referred to in the opera by Sachs, when, hinting that Beckmesser's very unfavourable judgment of Walther's song is not altogether free from partiality, he says (we again quote from Mr. Corder's version) :—

> The Lord forbid I should demand
> Aught contrary to our laws' command;
> But sure there 'tis written:
> "The Marker shall be chosen so,
> By prejudice unbitten,
> That nought of bias he may show."

A singer's mistakes may be specifically pointed out to him, according to the Marker's judgment, either immediately after his singing, or tying, or else apart, after the Song-School is over, so that others may not ridicule him. When any one in singing, or in versifying, does exceptionally well, making few or no mistakes, he is not to abuse his gifts, or to despise his companions.

(To be continued.)

LONDON STREET MUSIC AND THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

The action of the London County Council in refusing to accede to the requests of several of the Vestries that they would take measures to mitigate the nuisance caused by itinerant musicians and street hawkers, &c., calls for the strongest protest, especially from musicians, artists, literary and medical men, and others who earn their living by the higher kinds of brain work. The enormous increase of late years in the number of itinerant musicians is partly due to the fact that every capital on the Continent and in America has made more or less stringent prohibitory regulations on the subject, with the result that these persons have all flocked to London; and partly that the trade in noise, like most other forms of begging, has been found very profitable, since many persons are ready to be blackmailed rather than submit to the inevitable insults which result from an order to move on.

The majority of these performers are organ grinders, of whom the Italians alone number 920, according to recent statistics. These people often carry their own or hired babies on the handles of the organ carriage in order to excite sympathy, and the incessant hammering within a few inches of the delicate brain of the baby has, in two cases at least, been proved to have produced complete deafness; while in a third case, a baby was found dead from exposure.*

The next in number are probably the German bands; and after these come hundreds of mountebanks, singing beggars, fiddlers, cornet players, performers on the harp, clarinet, tin whistle, and other instruments. No check or control of any kind is exercised over them, except that instrumentalists do not appear to be allowed to perform on Sundays, the "Day of Rest" (?) being given over to psalm-singing beggars, muffin bells, and shouting newspaper boys.

The persons who support and encourage these mendicants may be divided into six classes :—

1. The charitable, who think that they must be very poor, and should be given alms.
2. Those who, having little or no musical temperament, "rather like" plenty of jingle in the streets.
3. Servants.
4. The children of the well-to-do classes.
5. Persons drinking at public houses, outside which places organ grinders and cornet players appear to reap a large amount of their profits.
6. The children of the poor.

The first class are only too ready to give to anyone who begs, either personally or by machinery, without troubling at all to enquire into the merits of the case. In 1891 the average earnings of an organ grinder amounted to eight shillings per day.*

The second class, being practically indifferent as to whether music is performed in the streets or not, would suffer no inconvenience if they were deprived of a mild pleasure which is an intense annoyance to their more sensitive neighbours.

The third class, the domestic servants, can do very well without an amusement which deprives many of their employers of the possibility of properly carrying on their work.

The fourth class have plenty of other amusements, and there is no necessity for them to be provided with open-air concerts at all hours of the day.

The fifth class could easily, with a slight change of legislation, be provided with music, by causing the performers to play inside instead of outside the public-houses, as is the case in Germany.

The only class in whose favour any argument can be urged for the retention of street music is the sixth—namely, the poor children. But it must be remembered that the Government pays a sum variously estimated at from £113,000 to £160,000 a year in grants for the teaching of music in elementary schools; that pianofortes have been provided for this purpose; that the London County Council has provided excellent bands in most of the public parks; and that hundreds of concerts are given in poor neighbourhoods every year by skilled amateurs, often with professional help. Hence it can hardly be said that the poor and their children are without any music except that of the streets; and it could not be a very great hardship to them if it were curtailed or abolished. Besides this, there is the fact, which seems often lost sight of, that while we are paying enormous sums, and working hard, to educate the poor in music, we are at the same time allowing their ear and taste to become utterly corrupted, by constantly listening to the coarsest and most vulgar and degrading of instruments.

Let us now consider the case of the unfortunate minority, whose work is hindered and whose lives are rendered miserable by the pandemonium which goes on in our streets. It is true that by Vict. 27 and 28, cap. 55, they have the power of ordering a musician to depart from the neighbourhood of their house; but let us see how this works. The householder is violently interrupted in the midst of some piece of work requiring close mental application: he goes to the door and tries to attract the attention of the organ-grinder, who carefully looks the other way. He then goes out and orders the performer to stop, by which time probably a small crowd has begun to collect. The grinder stops playing, but remains several minutes to see if the householder is in earnest, during which time the crowd increases. He then moves on, and when the householder has again settled to his work, re-commences grinding perhaps fifty yards off. The irritated householder goes to look for a policeman, and on returning with one finds that the disturber of his work and peace has disappeared, and he has lost half-an-hour of valuable time for which he can get no redress, to say nothing of the extreme annoyance of the whole affair. Soon afterwards, probably, a German band appears; on ordering them to move off he is met with insults, and another half-hour is wasted in the same way. Hence the law gives him absolutely no protection from constant annoyance; and it is, moreover, preposterous that a busy man should be compelled to be constantly going into the street to remove a nuisance which ought to be attended to by the municipal authorities.

* See the Nursing Record, March 16, 1893.

* Daily News, November 30, 1891. In 1845 it was calculated that £20,000 a year was extracted from the pockets of Londoners by Italian children alone. In 1850 "Organs of Cremona," of colossal size and power, drawn by a horse, appeared, and earned £2 a day. These were suppressed by the police in 1851, owing to the carriage accidents caused by them. See "I girovaghi Italiani in Inghilterra," by P. di Calboli, Secretary to the Italian Embassy. 1893. This work, we believe, is shortly to be translated.

Perhaps a worse form of the nuisance is caused by the proximity of mews and public houses, where the organs are played for hours at a time; for the householder is utterly defenceless against these places. As to the performers themselves, who may be supposed to have a vested interest in the money obtained by vagabondage and mendicancy, the organ-grinders could be employed for a time to play in poor neighbourhoods, and they would be amply paid for doing so by the charitable, who are always ready to respond to any appeal for such a purpose; and many of the brain workers would gladly subscribe to any fund which would ensure their freedom from annoyance. The better members of the German bands could probably get engagements in some of the bands in the parks, while the worse players could be restricted to neighbourhoods which would tolerate them; and they could be paid in the same way as the organ-grinders. The host of sham niggers, tin whistlers, psalm-singers, and others should be licensed for a certain period, after which they should be given to understand that they must seek other employments. All street musicians at present performing should be licensed and confined to certain districts, and no new licenses should be issued after a given date, and the fees thus obtained would go a long way towards relieving the overburdened ratepayers. These things have been arranged in Berlin, Paris, New York, and elsewhere, and there is no reason whatever why something of the same kind should not be done in London.

The contention of the County Council that it has "no means at its command to enforce the observance of such a bye-law" as was proposed by the Kensington Vestry, is palpably an attempt to blackmail the public into giving it the coveted control of the police. Under these circumstances, the only thing left seems to be that ratepayers all over London should combine in some way, and either endeavour to move the Council to perform its statutory duties with regard to the suppression of nuisances or obtain legislation on the subject.

BEETHOVEN'S SKETCH BOOKS.

By J. S. Shedlock, B.A.

SECOND SERIES.

No. I.—A SKETCH BOOK APPARENTLY UNKNOWN TO G. NOTTEBOHM.

There is a bound Sketch Book in the Royal Library at Berlin entitled—

> "Autographe de Louis van Beethoven
> Livre d'esquisses, contenant les idées > pour la grande fugue, pour des > Valses, et pour différents Quatuors."

The authenticity of the book is guaranteed by Artaria and Co. (Vienna, 1847), who have appended their seal, but a glance at the pages inside is sufficient guarantee. The "différents Quatuors" are those in B flat (Op. 130), C sharp minor (Op. 131), and F (Op. 135); the Fugue is the one for strings (Op. 133). It is quite evident from the works here named that this is one of the latest of the master's Sketch Books. (The Finale of the B flat Quartet, as now published, was only completed about four months before Beethoven's death.) It was not actually the latest, because we shall presently give a version of the theme of the Finale of the C sharp minor Quartet which shows that the movement was, as yet, in a comparatively early stage.

Our volume* opens with—

The second and the third b in the lower voice should evidently be read as a b natural. Beethoven is at work at his fugue. After a time we come to sketches with "Walzer pour le Clavier" written at the top of the page. The first is in the key of D, 3-8 time. Another one, however, is in 2-4, and commences thus—

Then we come to—and to the familiar—

In one of the Sketch Books of 1825-6 mentioned by Nottebohm ("Zweite Beethoveniana," Ch. i.) the theme of the first movement of the C sharp minor Fugue is at first given—as in this book, but the printed version is also found there Hence that book of 1825-6 would seem to contain later workings.

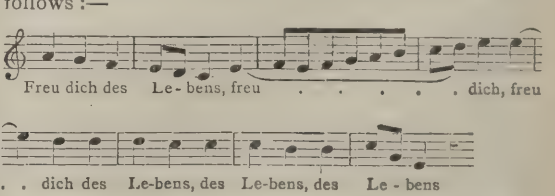
Soon after there is a sketch for a canon, at which Beethoven had made previous attempts. In the second of the above-mentioned Sketch Books connected with the last quartets there is a sketch of a canon "Freu dich des Lebens"; and in the third of the same there is a later version of this canon, as follows:—



* Oblong; sixty-three sheets, sixteen staves on page; comparatively recent binding.

This occurs between sketches for the Quartet in B flat and the one in C sharp minor. Curiously enough, there is still another version of this canon in the book under notice, and it occurs among sketches for the same works. At the head stand the words—

"Muthig u. Schnell."

It has the plural form Freut euch in place of Freu dich, and the close is different, thus—

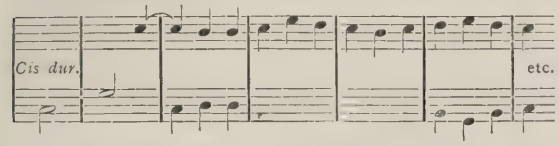
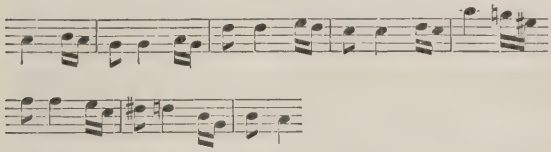
This is an evident improvement. Also the entry of the second voice is indicated at the commencement of the third bar.

Here is a sketch apparently for a "2tes Stück" of the C sharp minor Quartet—

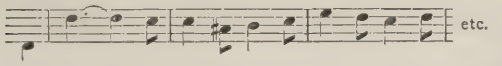


And here is one of the theme of the variations, but, as yet, the opening sentence bears traces of imperfection—

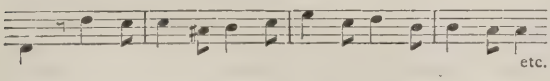


Nottebohm, in his "Zweite Beethoveniana," tells us that the theme of the Finale passed through many transformations. Here is one which we meet with—

And here again is an imperfect form of the theme of the second movement in D—



Also another of the same, commencing on the down-beat—



Soon after this we meet with the opening of the Andante theme as in the printed version, but not yet divided between the two violins. From a previous sketch, however, it can be seen that such a plan was in the composer's mind. And we also find a wild sketch for the Allegro moderato, No 4, beginning—

In the following, with its doubly dotted notes, we seem to have a foreshadowing of the Adagio in G sharp minor (No. 6)—

One must not examine too closely into the values. The highest part is in 2-4, the lowest in 3-4 measure; possibly a crotchet rest should be added to most of the bars of the former; thus—

By way of change we come to a sketch of simple and marked rhythm—

We now catch a glimpse of the Andante moderato e Lusinghiero— followed by sketches for that movement.

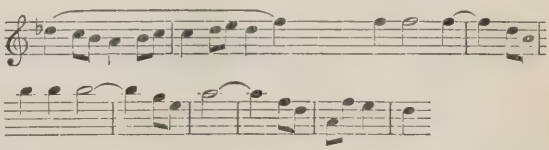
Right in the middle of workings for the Finale of the C sharp minor Quartet, of which we may perhaps quote one more metamorphosis of the theme—

we come across this extraordinary passage—



So here is the theme of the slow movement of the Quartet in F (Op. 135), but without its calm, without its majesty. For a transformation of measure somewhat similar one must hark back, we fancy, to the composer's Op. 18. The slow movement of the second Quartet in G was originally sketched in common time thus—but, as is known, was published in 3-4 measure. But still that theme retained breadth and nobility. What makes the change of the Op. 135 theme still more extraordinary is the fact that on a previous page we find odd bars of it already in 6-8 measure. Such a change is one of the mysteries of genius.

Over the sketch Beethoven has written—

"Süsser Ruhe Gesang" (Song of Sweet Rest).

We soon find him hard at work at the Finale of the C sharp minor Quartet.

Here is a characteristic sketch of the Coda of this Finale—

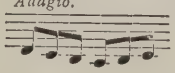
The big, thickly marked semibreves in the last eight bars show that the composer was in an excited—or, we may say, inspired—state when he penned this sketch. What the Volti subito in the margin means is difficult to say. If the page of the Sketch Book be turned over, we find a long sketch of the Adagio of the last Quartet. And indeed this is foreshadowed, for on the previous page, underneath the above sketch, we find—



and—

The Adagio sketch is apparently one of the whole movement, but it does not contain the più lento episode in C sharp minor of the published version.

Then follow one or two sketches, of which one—somewhat resembles in rhythm the Vivace of the Quartet in F—

Of this movement we soon have a definite sketch, and one indeed which shows that it was not in an elementary stage. This is written in pencil, and after pages of similar sketches we come across—which has, as superscription—

"Der entzwungene Entschluss"
(The forced resolution).

In the published score we find the words—

"Der Schwer Gefasste Entschluss," and farther on—

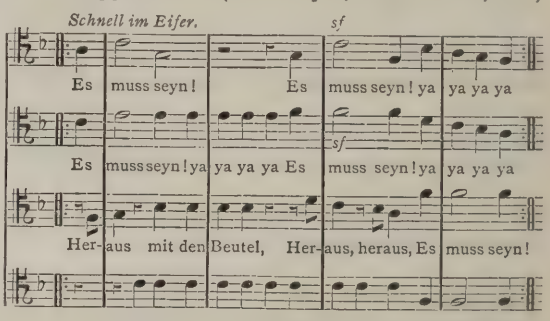
Judging from the sketches, the resolve was not indeed one hastily taken.

Later on we have the theme with counterpoint—

In connection with this theme we give a canon written by Beethoven, July, 1826. It is neither in the Beethoven Edition of Breitkopf und Härtel nor in the Supplement. (See Thayer, Them. Verz., 261.)



Schnell im Eifer.
sf
Es muss seyn! Es muss seyn! ya ya ya ya
Es muss seyn! ya ya ya ya Es muss seyn! ya ya ya ya
Her-aus mit den Beutel, Her-aus, heraus, Es muss seyn!
ya ya ya ya ya ya ya ya ya ya Es muss seyn!

Later on we have the opening of the Finale of the B flat Quartet (Op. 130)—

Nottebohm ("Zweite Beethoveniana," p. 522) mentions a pocket sketch book used by Beethoven during the summer of 1826, which contains workings for the last movements of the Quartets, Op. 135 and Op. 130, but gives no quotations from it. (The book from which our present examples are drawn is no pocket book, but, as stated, a large oblong one with sixteen staves on a page.)

In order to complete the notice of this remarkable Sketch Book we give a few sketches from it.

Here, for instance, are a few bars marked Quintett—

In the year 1826 Beethoven received from the publisher Diabelli a commission to write a quintet, and in the above-mentioned pocket Sketch Book, and in one formerly belonging to A. Schindler (and now in the Royal Library, Berlin), there are sketches for such a work.

Then again we have—

This comes just after the sketch for the Finale of the B flat Quartet.

Here is another sketch—and another—

And here is the last piece of writing in the book, a genuine dernière pensée—

(To be continued.)

We have received from Professor Niecks a copy of the regulations for granting Musical Degrees at Edinburgh. The salient points of the scheme adopted by the University Commissioners are as follows:—

Degree of Bachelor of Music.

Every candidate for the degree of Bachelor of Music must pass a preliminary examination in the following subjects:—(1) English, including Geography and British History; (2) Elementary Mathematics or Elementary Physics or Logic; (3) any two of the following languages—viz., Latin, Greek, French, German, and Italian, provided that one at least of the two shall be a modern language.

A degree in Arts, not being a degree honoris causa tantum, in any of the Universities of the United Kingdom, or in any Colonial or Foreign University, specially recognised for the purpose by the University Court after consultation with the Senatus, shall exempt from the preliminary examination; and the Senatus shall have power to determine what examinations, other than those for the degree hereinbefore mentioned, shall be accepted either in whole or in part in place of the preliminary examination.

Candidates for the degree of Bachelor of Music must attend, in the University of Edinburgh, during a whole Winter Session, a course or courses of instruction extending in all to not less than eighty lectures, and including a course on the History of Music.

There shall be a First Professional Examination in Music in the following subjects:—(1) Singing, or performing upon some Musical Instrument; (2) Reading at Sight; (3) Elements of Music, including Musical Modes and Scales, Notation, Measure and Tempo; (4) Harmony in not more than four parts; (5) Elementary Counterpoint; (6) Form: Sonata, Rondo, Fugue, and Minor Structures; (7) Outlines of the History of Music. The Ear Test shall be applied to every candidate.

There shall be, at least one year after the candidate has passed the First Professional Examination, a Second Professional Examination in Music and in Literature in the following subjects:—(1) One of the following languages not already taken in the preliminary examination — French, German, Italian; (2) Rhetoric and English Literature (including Prose Composition and a knowledge of Metrical Rules); (3) Harmony in not more than five parts; (4) Advanced Counterpoint; (5) Canon in two parts, and Imitation and Fugue in not more than four parts; (6) Form (Description of Structure and Character of Musical Forms, and Analysis of Musical Works); (7) Elements of Instrumentation (Compass of the Orchestral Instruments, and of the Organ and Pianoforte); (8) Critical Knowledge of certain prescribed Scores; (9) Playing at Sight from easy Vocal and Instrumental Scores, and from Figured Bass; (10) The History of Music; (11) Acoustics in so far as connected with the Theory of Music, and Physiology of the Vocal Organs.

In addition, each candidate shall be required to submit the following exercises composed by himself:—

(a) A Solo Song, with Pianoforte Accompaniment.

(b) A Four-part Vocal Composition.

(c) An Instrumental Composition (other than a Dance) for the Pianoforte or Organ, or for any Stringed or Wind Instrument with Pianoforte or Organ Accompaniment.

The extent and standard of the examination in these subjects shall be fixed from time to time by the Senatus Academicus, and the examinations shall be partly written and partly oral and practical.

Degree of Doctor of Music.

Bachelors of Music of the University of Edinburgh of not less than three years' standing, and not less than twenty-five years of age, may offer themselves for the degree of Doctor of Music, under the following regulations:—The degree shall be given in three Departments, and candidates may present themselves in one or more Departments.

The Departments shall be those of—(1) Composers, (2) Executants, (3) Theorists or Historians.

(1) Candidates for the degree of Doctor of Music as Composers shall submit a prescribed number of Vocal and Instrumental Compositions in the larger forms (such as Oratorio, Opera, Cantata, Symphony, Sonata, Overture). Each work shall be the original and unaided composition of the candidate, and shall be accompanied by a declaration to that effect signed by the candidate.

(2) Candidates shall also be examined in the following subjects:—

(a) The more recondite Contrapuntal Forms—Fugal Writing in more than four parts, &c. (b) Instrumentation, including certain prescribed books on the subject. (c) The works of the great Composers, from Palestrina onwards.

(1) Candidates for the degree of Doctor of Music as Executants shall be required to show their special skill in the execution of Solo and ensemble works in different styles. The works shall be selected partly by the candidates and partly by the examiners.

(2) The candidates shall be examined in sight-reading, and shall give evidence of their power of playing Orchestral Scores, and shall be required to invent Transitions and to modulate from one Key and Piece to another. They shall further be required to pass an examination in the History and Literature of their Special instrument, and on the method of teaching that instrument.

(1) Candidates for the degree of Doctor of Music as Theorists or Historians shall present one or more treatises on Theoretical or Historical subjects, which shall be the result of research and original thought, not mere abstracts or compilations of existing works. They shall be accompanied by a declaration signed by the candidate that they are his own unaided work.

(2) Candidates shall also be required to pass an examination (a) in the Theory and (b) in the History of Music.

The examination shall be on a higher standard in the subject which the candidate selects as his specialty.

(1) The degree of Doctor of Music (Mus. Doc.) may be conferred honoris causa tantum.

(2) The honorary degree of Doctor of Music shall not be conferred by the Senatus Academicus on any person unless he has been recommended for the said degree by the Faculty of Music in a reasoned representation, which shall have been submitted in writing to the Senatus Academicus by the said Faculty, and shall have been considered and approved by the Senatus at a special meeting at which not less than two-thirds of the members were present.

In his book "Aus meinem Leben und aus meiner Zeit" ("Of my life and of my times") the late Duke Ernest of Saxe-Coburg Gotha gives a highly interesting account of the difficulties with which he had to contend before he could get his opera "Santa Chiara" performed at the Paris Grand Opéra. He writes:—"During my first visit to the Imperial Court at Paris, in 1854, I endeavoured to take preliminary steps to obtain an introduction for my opera 'Santa Chiara.' The Emperor interested himself in the most friendly manner in the performance of my work at the Grand Opéra, but before this could be managed, extraordinary difficulties had to be surmounted. 'I believe,' Napoleon wrote in his letter of July 25, from Biarritz, 'that the Paris public will be charmed to applaud the opera of your Royal Highness, and to judge your Highness as maëstro after having so favourably judged you as prince.' But all that the Imperial patronage could do was to cause the Minister, Fould, to decide that 'Santa Chiara' should be included in the répertoire of the Grand Opéra. The actual event depended upon a number of personal circumstances, which would have developed into unsurmountable obstacles if Meyerbeer had not given me a helpful hand. The aged master had already paid me a visit at Paris in 1854, and since that time he had been treating with me in the most friendly manner about the performance of my opera; I may therefore suppose that he really was interested in my musical work, as he had often assured me. It has never been an easy matter to understand French ways in matters of art, and more especially of music, and I had now to make my first practical acquaintance with them at the very time when I needed all possible experience to secure for my work a successful performance and reception. Truly, I had to make the most remarkable experiences before I arrived at the goal. When we believed to have at last surmounted all difficulties, new ones arose. Thus I was told at the very moment when the playbill was to go to the printers that to secure a good reception of a German opera it would be absolutely necessary to publish a new arrangement of the libretto, by a French author bearing a distinguished name. Negotiations were accordingly entered into with Scribe, but as his terms for allowing his name to appear on the playbill were of a very unusual nature, the well-known librettist St. George was approached. In the end the real translator, a Belgian, called Oppelt, remained victor, and his German-sounding name appeared in consequence on the playbills. Accompanied by Meyerbeer, I paid visits to all the principal artists, and met with the readiest support. Only here and there, in isolated quarters, so it was reported, were expressions of annoyance heard, because my opera was to be performed at the very time when the Exhibition in Paris was open, which was considered a slight to French art to the benefit of a foreign composer. If it is at all true that intrigues were made against me, occurrences of the kind had to be looked for in places that were of no consequence. Frenchmen such as Auber not only met me in the most friendly way, but I enjoyed their lively sympathy and the most intimate intercourse during the whole time of my sojourn in Paris. The performance was fixed for September 24. I had been invited by the Emperor to be his guest at the Tuileries, as in the previous year, but I begged of him to be allowed to stay with my friend, Prince Chimay, who had also taken the greatest trouble to make my Paris art-pilgrimage a success. I had arrived in Paris just in time to be able to superintend the rehearsals, and could look forward with perfect confidence to the first performance being one of the highest perfection. Everything that the Grand Opéra was capable of doing was done with the enthusiasm so characteristic of Frenchmen. Yet I knew only too well on what strange accidents the success of a first performance, especially of foreign works, in Paris always depends, and I was doubly anxious because I had to await the fate of my 'Santa Chiara' sitting beside the Emperor and the Empress, whom I accompanied into their box. Very soon I could see, however, that the disposition of the public was a friendly one, and the performance succeeded in the most brilliant manner. The opera was performed more than sixty times." If a reigning prince, and friend of the Emperor of the French, experienced the difficulties referred to above, no wonder that other "foreign" composers who were not princes have fared badly in gaining the ear of the Paris public through the medium of the Grand Opéra. Some of the Duke's remarks are no doubt as true now as they were forty years ago.

Mr. F. T. Piggott's long-expected book on the Music and Musical Instruments of Japan has finally appeared. We shall give it the attention due to so important a volume in an early issue. Meanwhile those of our readers who have given thought to the various problems of musical history may ponder over the following extracts from Mr. Piggott's volume. After giving a detailed analysis of various "tunings," he says:—"And now what are the conclusions which this analysis forces upon us? In the first place, that 'scale' and 'key' were principles with which the early founders of Eastern music were familiar; they possibly did not so thoroughly understand them as to be able to reduce what they knew into transmissible thought. But what they knew was precisely what we know in the West—that music must be built on a systematic sequence of notes; their science gave them the same natural notes that Pythagoras employed, and their instinct led them to a sequence which is a sequence of the West. . . . Above all, they knew that the major and the minor modes are, in the main, the natural exponents of the two chief emotions of mankind, gaiety and sadness." Apropos of this last statement, it is interesting to note Mr. Wallaschek's views on the same subject, given in that important contribution to the psychology and embryology of our art—his recently published volume, "Primitive Music." "It has been said," he observes, "that there exists an internal connection between the major and the minor key and our feelings of pleasure and pain. If this were so, savages ought to sing mostly in the major key, as they sing more frequently on merry occasions, and they ought to sing invariably in minor on sad occasions. This, however, is not the case." He then quotes a number of examples from various authors, showing that savage races are not at all consistent in this matter, the Bellacula Indians, for instance, raise the minor to a major third when the excitement increases. "This shows," says Mr. Wallaschek, "that the two keys (modes ?) do not correspond to different qualities of feeling (of pleasure and pain), but merely to the increasing and decreasing of it, quite independent of quality." Something very like this was said by Hanslick, in "The Beautiful in Music." "What part of the feelings," he asks, "can music represent if not the subject involved in them?" The answer is "only their dynamic properties. It may reproduce the motion accompanying psychical action." In other words, emotions manifest themselves to our consciousness in varying degrees of force, rapidity, elation, depression, and regularity, which are also the essential qualities of music.

"I WANT you to feel," wrote Mr. Ruskin to a young friend*—"I want you to feel that long and steady effort—made in a contented way—does more than violent effort—made for some strong motive—or under some enthusiastic impulse. . . . I am afraid of this prize-getting temper in you—chiefly, I suppose, because I have suffered much from it myself—vanity of various kinds having caused me the waste of half my life, in making me try to do things better than I could, or to do things that I couldn't do, or to do them in ways that would bring me credit instead of merely in the proper way. . . . It is not by any effort of which you can possibly be vain that you will do great things." Golden words these, that in our competitive days might well be written up in every school-room! A similar thought was evidently in Dr. Mackenzie's mind when he addressed an enthusiastic Welsh crowd at Pontypridd the other day, and hinted that they were neglecting the substance for the shadow—were in danger, perhaps, of coming to regard art as a means of prize-getting rather than as an end-in itself; and the idea was driven home in still simpler fashion by a distinguished Welshman, Sir David Evans, ex-Lord Mayor of London, who said: "One thing that is wanting on the part of those who take part in these musical competitions is a better knowledge of music." Of course, there has been the usual patriotic outcry, and shallow minds have not omitted to trot out the stock argument made use of in such cases. "We prefer the technical ignorance of the Welsh," says one wiseacre, in a contemporary, "to the less natural (!) singing of the North of England people with their superior knowledge of the technique of music." Again: "We would not barter Nature's gift to the crowd, for all that science can confer on the few."

* The letter will be found in the August number of the English Illustrated Magazine.

How curious is this notion—will it ever be rooted out?—that the musical world is divided into those who feel, but do not know, and those who know, but do not feel! Contrasting these, it is, of course, easy to arouse sympathy on behalf of the former, and by so doing lead the thoughtless to infer that the less they know of music the greater will be their enjoyment of its beauties—a doctrine which will no doubt commend itself to the "idle apprentices" of our great music schools. But ignorance is not always a necessary condition of bliss. There is a third class, never acknowledged in these controversies, those, namely, who, able to feel, have also learnt to know, and who, knowing, have yet not ceased to feel. To this class alone is it given to obtain the highest gratification derivable from art. It follows that all attempts to prove the superiority of feeling to knowledge, or of knowledge to feeling, are useless—nay, mischievous, for nothing so effectually conceals a whole truth as the exhibition under limelight of half of it.

A BLUE BOOK has just been issued by the Education Department, containing reports by various writers on the work accomplished in the Training Colleges of England and Wales. On the subject of music Sir John Stainer's remarks are full of interest. Thus we are informed that whereas about a million and a quarter of children earned the grant for reading music at sight in 1884, in 1892 the number was close on three millions. "All these children," says Sir John, "have learnt enough about the theory and practice of music to constitute a sound basis for future work in after-life. Some take exception to this statement on the ground that the majority of children learn the letter notation (Tonic Sol-fa) and not the Staff. But there need be no misgiving on this score . . . it will be found that the majority of those having real musical taste use the Tonic Sol-fa system as a stepping-stone to the ordinary Staff; and no more scientific method can possibly be found for unravelling the acknowledged difficulties of the Staff as a vocal notation. The ordinary notation will be infinitely better mastered and understood by those who have passed into it through the gates of the more scientific Tonic Sol-fa, and it is important to note all that is learnt by the Tonic Sol-faist is of value when studying the Staff; nothing has to be unlearned."

VERY pleasant, too, is it to read that "At last there seems to be a general movement towards providing school children with a better type of music." On this subject Sir John speaks plainly: "It appears to be a fixed notion among some persons that the interest of children can only be concentrated on something that is positively silly. In music, at all events, this is a fatal creed; a school song thoroughly taught and learnt becomes a companion for life. It is therefore of the highest importance that these compulsory companions should exercise a good influence, not a bad one. Music, good and easy, can be found, and is now being issued for use in schools, and it is to be hoped that in future children leaving school will carry away with them, not a bundle of worthless rubbish which they would gladly throw away, but the cherished memory of many beautiful melodies which they will always recall with pleasure." The following testimony to executive merit should satisfy the ratepayer that his money is not being thrown away: "The excellent singing of children in our large town schools is, naturally enough, a fact unknown to the general public, hence the erroneous statements and criticisms made on school music.

If some of these critics, whose habit seems to be to make statements first and afterwards look at facts, were to hear the remarkable sight-reading, the pure sweet tone, and the tasteful part-singing which is to be found in our leading towns, I am sure they would be astonished and delighted."

We have received a prospectus of the Sterndale Bennett Society founded in Leipzig (14, Schul-Strasse) on April 8 of this year. The objects of the Society are:—1. To promote the study of standard English music—(a) by giving Concerts, at short intervals, consisting of the works of British composers; (b) at which Concerts members will have opportunities of introducing themselves to public notice. 2. To aid musicians (British and Colonial) who have obtained diplomas, either from a conservatorium or through a private master—(a) in obtaining concert engagements, and (b) positions in the profession. 3. To assist musical students—(a) by helping them to pursue their studies in Leipzig, and (b) to supply those intending to become musical students with all possible information as to the choice of rooms, &c., in Leipzig. Members of the Society have the use of the Society's rooms, where musical and other periodicals are placed at their disposal, and also free admission to the Society's Concerts. The Secretary is Mr. Randolph Stuart. Among the Patrons of the Institution are Sir Arthur Sullivan, Sir W. Cusins, and Mr. J. K. Sterndale Bennett.

The Secretary of the Organists' Association for the City of Wakefield and District has favoured us with a copy of the Rules of the Association. We learn that the Society is in the fourth year of its existence and numbers fifty-three members, all of whom hold organists' appointments within a radius of eight or nine miles of Wakefield. The Association was formed for the purpose of hearing and discussing papers on musical subjects and for the promotion of friendly intercourse, and is believed to be the first of its kind ever established in the provinces. We sincerely hope it will find many imitators; the intention is excellent. Such Associations might effect a great deal of good. We note that at the last quarterly meeting the Bishop of Wakefield read an admirable paper on "The relation of the Organ to Worship."

FACTS, RUMOURS, AND REMARKS.

M. Adolph Jullien, the distinguished musical critic of the Paris Moniteur Universel, and author of the celebrated works on Berlioz and Wagner, thus comments upon the special Mozart and Beethoven numbers which The Musical Times issued in 1891 and 1892: "Not very long ago there were published two big works on the two most discussed composers of our time, in which the author had collected together a great number of portraits and caricatures, musical fragments and autograph letters of these two great musicians. The idea has borne fruit, for it is now applied, though in a more modest way, to other masters of the Art of music. Thus The Musical Times, of London, published, on the occasion of the centenary of his death, a number specially devoted to Mozart, and, without having any anniversary to celebrate, another number wholly dealing with Beethoven. They are well edited, and sufficiently rich from the point of iconography. I should like to recommend them even to those lovers of music who are not familiar with English: they will know enough of it to understand or divine the meaning of the legends printed below these interesting engravings, all of them authentic, and if they feel any admiration for Mozart or Beethoven at all, I can promise them that they will derive a lively pleasure from the sight and study of so many accurate documents about their lives and musical careers. Perhaps they may afterwards even feel a desire to make a pilgrimage, in honour of these masters, to Salzburg or Bonn."

In resigning his post as musical director at the Chicago Exhibition, Mr. Theodore Thomas wrote: "The reduction of expenses of the Fair has obliged the bureau to cancel all the engagements made with foreign and American artists and musical organisations and to abandon all future festival performances, thus leaving very little of the original scheme except the bands and the Exposition orchestra, with which are given every day popular and symphony concerts. My suggestion is, therefore, since so large a portion of the bureau's musical scheme has been cut away, that, for the remainder of the Fair, music shall not figure as an art at all, but be treated entirely on the basis of an amusement. More of this class of music is undoubtedly needed at the Fair, and the cheapest way to get it is to divide our two fine bands into four small ones for open air concerts, and our Exposition orchestra into two small orchestras, which can play such light selections as will please the shifting crowds in the buildings and amuse them." So this is the end! But it might have been, and was, anticipated. We in London know from experience that a sight-seeing crowd will not pay to hear artistic music.

The editors of two of the best of our German musical contemporaries are at present evidently enjoying a well-earned holiday, which would account for the fact that their papers have lately been guilty of the statement that "there will be five Musical Festivals in London (sic) during September and October next, one of them in Straffordshire (sic) and another at Norwich, and that at the latter an Oratorio 'Judith,' by Dr. Porry, and a new work entitled 'Una,' by Paul, will be given." The Paris Ménéstrel, referring to matters musical in this "tight little island," is similarly instructive, for he informs us that "the Sixth National Festival" (whatever that may be) will take place at the Crystal Palace, when 10,000 singers, supported by the Handel Orchestra, will give two Concerts." No doubt the Handel Orchestra can "support" even such a vast number of singers, if necessary, without being the worse for it. But this is perhaps hardly what our Paris friend means. He is evidently under the impression that the Handel Orchestra is a band! "A little knowledge," &c.

In our last issue we quoted some strictures, by a correspondent of the Musical Courier, upon the teachers of singing in Leipzig, and the effect has been to call forth a defence of those professors. We have received a long letter from Mr. Harry Brett, a Leipzig resident, which traverses the assertions of the Courier's correspondent, and, as it is simple fairness to set forth both sides of a disputed question, we give publicity to the more material passages.

Mr. Brett sharply attacks the writer in our New York contemporary, whose identity enquiries made of leading musicians and music writers have, it appears, failed to establish. This anonymous and undiscoverable person, according to our Leipzig correspondent, "knows but little of the city which he condemns." "It would be well for him to remember that when a jeweller appraises a necklet, say of pearls, he does not weigh it as a whole, but inspects and weighs each pearl singly." "This gentleman, who condemns a whole and musical city for the fault of a certain number (for charlatans are to be found here as elsewhere), clearly does not know the difference between a goldsmith and a blacksmith. Both being smiths is evidently enough for him."

MR. BRETT follows these preliminary thrusts with mention of a number of Leipzig professors on whose behalf he claims the qualifications of good teachers, and the credit of successful work. Bodo Borchers is first named, and the following list of his more famous pupils given: Karl Scheidemantel, "the equal of our splendid singer, Charles Santley"; Madame Jahns, Ella Focke, Selma Schoder, Therese Martin, "a great coloratura singer"; Hermine Fink, Hermann Bachmann, and Herr Borchers' own three daughters, of whom the youngest, Anna, now in her fourteenth year, "recently astonished her hearers by a remarkable coloratura and good vocalisation."

ANOTHER teacher is Frau Marie Unger-Haupt, widow of Georg Unger. "The large majority of her pupils are distinguished by remarkable purity of intonation, freedom from portamento and vibrato, true vocalisation, and singularly clear articulation." Credit is next claimed for Fräulein Anna Gotze, and for Louis and Louise Ress. Mr. Brett concludes in the following terms: "It seems somewhat ungracious to claim (uninvited) the hospitality of a city and then to endeavour to tear all its reputation off its back. Had the Courier correspondent said the same of specified persons, I should probably have kept silence, for there are teachers here who do no good and much harm to the voice."

NOTHING mundane is sacred, or ought to be, from the play of wit and humour, but there seems to be little of either in Paris, where a paragraphist, professedly "comic," has discovered a new disease which he calls "Wagneritis." "In its acute form, Wagneritis mocks the resources of medicine. The abuse of the 'Tetralogy Elixir,' the 'Tristan pastilles,' and 'Parsifaline' leads inevitably to insanity." So does the humour of the paragraphist and, we should say, by a shorter road.

THE Boston Home Journal says of a patriotic American song, "The Battle Cry of Freedom," that it is "the nearest to a purely national air of any we have." In that case somebody should rid the chorus of the following Cockney rhyme:

> The Union for ever, hurrah, boys, hurrah!
> Bright in its glory shines every star.

At present one does not know whether to pronounce "hurrah" as "hurrar," or "star" as "stah."

AT Alessandria, in Italy, a competition between military bands took place some weeks ago. The prizes consisted of so-called gold medals, which have since been discovered to be only gilt bronze. Of course the cheated prize-winners are speaking their minds pretty freely, and things are getting unpleasant all round. Our friend Le Ménéstrel is likely to add fuel to the fire by its sarcastic remark that "Après tout, l'or est si rare, aujourd'hui, en Italie!"

THE Toronto Saturday Night, in defending Mr. Theodore Thomas from those who complain that he has neglected American music at Chicago, likens the grumblers to an old farmer who, politically, "swore, first by Grenville district, then he held to Pickens county, then went for South Carolina, and believed in the United States, but what the Almighty had made the rest of the world for passed his comprehension."

MESSRS. FARLEY SINKINS and Robert Newman have been appointed joint-managers of the large new concert hall in Langham Place. It is their intention during the autumn and winter to give a series of high-class Orchestral Concerts at lower prices than have hitherto been charged. As these will be under the direction of Mr. Frederic H. Cowen, no extraordinary amount of prescience is necessary to predict the high artistic excellence of the venture. It has our hearty good wishes.

IN consequence of the collapse of the musical arrangements at the Chicago Exposition, the authorities have thought it necessary to abandon the production of Dr. Mackenzie's new Oratorio "Bethlehem." It is, however, understood that the composer by no means regards the contract as annulled by the failure of the Chicago directors to perform their part of it. "Bethlehem" will be heard, for the first time, at the Albert Hall in April.

MUSIC is obviously very much alive in Christchurch (N.Z.), where Mr. Wallace, the Conductor of the Orchestral Society, is about to give a series of high-class Chamber Music Concerts. The venture has our heartiest good wishes.

IT is said that some keys and part of the action of an organ belonging to a Lutheran church were found on the prairie a mile distant from Des Moines, Iowa. A cyclone had gone that way and dropped them.

MILAN has lately been visited by a troupe of whistlers who "perform" selections from operas by Verdi and Mascagni. What next, and next?

THE EISTEDDFOD AT PONTYPRIDD.

CONSPICUOUS success has rewarded the efforts of the Committee of this year's National Eisteddfod celebrated on the first four days of last month at Pontypridd. A spacious iron-roofed pavilion provided accommodation for 20,000 people, and the speeches delivered therein, especially the address on the fourth day by Dr. A. C. Mackenzie, should exert a salutary influence on the future of music in Wales.

The proceedings were opened according to ancient custom by the formal declaration of the bards that peace prevailed, and the celebration of the usual rites pertaining to such occasions. This ceremony was performed in a delightfully picturesque eminence on Pontypridd Common at the place where stands the Rocking Stone. Thither, accompanied by the Penrhiw brass band, an imposing procession wended its way from the Town Hall through gaily decorated thoroughfares. Arrived there, the venerable Archdruid Clwydfardd, who has now attained his ninety-third year, supported by Cadfan and Gurnos, ascended the Logan Stone, and, with the unsheathed sword in hand, in stentorian tones demanded in Welsh "A oes heddwch?" ("Is there peace?"). The bards within the circle clustered around, and each grasping the threatening weapon hastened to reply in the affirmative. "Peace," cried the bards.

The crowd took up the cry, the mountains echoed back the word, and "Peace, peace," resounded in the valleys below. This was thrice repeated, and the venerable Archdruid being satisfied, the sword was returned to the scabbard, and the proclamation was read declaring the Eisteddfod about to be celebrated to be the National Festival of the Cymry for 1893, held in accordance with the rites and ceremonies of the bards of Ynys Prydain. Subsequently the prayer of the Gorsedd was offered by the Rev. Dr. Roberts, and Eos Dar, the popular penillion singer, gave a clever example of this peculiar form of song. After several speeches the bards marched back to the town, and the first meeting was held in the Pavilion, under the Presidency of Lord Tredegar. The proceedings then commenced, the vocal solo competitions attracting the most attention. The prize-winners were Mr. Evan Evans, who was selected out of fifty-four competitors as the best singer of "O where shall I flee?" and "Woe! Horror! Grief!" from Spohr's "Calvary"; Miss Daisy Jones, for the best rendering of Kuhlau's Sonatina in A minor; Miss Annie Bowen, of Llantrissant, as the best singer of Macfarren's "Whoever perished being innocent"; and the Misses May John and Drinkwater, both pupils of Madame Clara Novello Davies. There were but few competitors for musical composition, and the only award made was secured by Mr. Edward Broom for a sacred trio.

The next adjudication, the award of £50 for the orchestral performance of Mendelssohn's "Ruy Blas" Overture, given to the Cardiff Orchestral Society, the only competitors, brought forth some valuable remarks from Dr. A. C. Mackenzie, one of the adjudicators. Dr. Mackenzie said he regretted that only one orchestra had come forward, for musicians considered the study of instrumental music so very important that they thought every encouragement ought to be given to it at all times. He did hope that on another occasion there would be a little harder work to do in connection with the orchestral competition. If they encouraged instrumental music as they encouraged choral music, they would be providing for themselves and their country a double enjoyment. Mr. W. H. Morgan, the Conductor of the successful Society, was presented with a gold medal. Nine choirs entered for the second choral contest, which occupied over two hours, the first prize being gained by Llanelly Glee Society, conducted by Mr. John Thomas; and the second prize to the Blaenycwm United Choral Society, conducted by Mr. Evan Watkins. In the evening a Concert was held in the Pavilion, under the Conductorship of Mr. Hughes. The first part of the programme consisted of Mendelssohn's "Athalie," in which the Eisteddfod Choir, of about 400, and an orchestra of sixty took part. The most important feature of the second part was the performance of Dr. J. Parry's "Arthurian Ballad" Overture, conducted by the composer, whose work was enthusiastically applauded. The most successful soloists were Madame Williams-Penn, Miss Maggie Davies, and Mr. Frederic Griffith, the flute playing of the last-named artist exciting much enthusiasm.

The proceedings of the next day, held under the presidency of Sir David Evans, attracted enormous audiences. Mr. Ben Davies sang the Eisteddfod song, and the following musical awards were made:—Mr. John Thomas, three guineas for the best tenor vocalist; the Aberdare Orchestral Society (conductor, Mr. John Evans), the Merthyr Orchestral Society (conductor, Mr. A. J. Silver), fifteen and five guineas respectively for the best renderings of Haydn's Fifth Symphony. Mr. Harry Blanchett was the prize-winner of the violoncello soloists, and Mr. Barton Jones was awarded the £40 premium, given by the National Eisteddfodd Association, for the best Cantata. The principal feature of the day's proceedings, however, was the chief choral competition. The two prizes, of the respective value of £210 and £60, form in the aggregate the largest sum of money ever offered in a choral competition in Wales. Seven choirs entered. Dr. Mackenzie and others adjudicated, and the first prize was awarded to the Rhymney Society, and second to the Cardiff Choral Union, the successful conductors being invested by Miss Llewella Davies. At the evening Concert Overtures by Dr. Mackenzie, Mr. J. T. Rees, and Mr. J. Moir Clarke were respectively conducted by their composers.

A continuous and heavy rain seriously interfered with the attendance on the third day. The work of adjudicating was, however, steadily pursued, under the Presidency of Lord Swansea, and prizes were awarded to Mr. William Hopkins for penillion singing, to the Revs. J. O. Jenkins and J. H. Davies for collections of old Welsh ballads, to Miss Carrie Davies for a harmonium solo, to Mr. William Morgan for harp playing, and to Miss G. Drinkwater and Messrs. J. Rees and W. Davies, vocalists.

One of the most attractive competitions of the day was that of the ladies' choirs, the test piece for which was Mr. Randegger's "Chorus of Handmaidens." Dr. Mackenzie, after expressing his pleasure at the excellent and refined singing to which he had just listened, announced the winners of the first prize to be the Rhondda Female Choir, conducted by Mrs. Hopkins; and that of the second, Mrs. Arthur Morris's Ladies' Choir from Caerleon. In the brass band contest the first prize was won by the Llanelly Town Band, conducted by Mr. J. Samuel; the second by the Lancaster Town Band, Blaina, conducted by Mr. J. Sutton; and the third by the Ferndale Brass Band, conducted by Mr. J. Ryan.

Unfavourable weather again prevailed on the last day, and at one time the noise of the heavy rain on the iron roof of the Pavilion was so great that even Cymric lungs and fervour had to give way for the nonce. The day's work was commenced by an excellent speech from the President, who on this occasion was Lord Windsor, Lord-Lieutenant of the county, and included the formal conferment upon Dr. Mackenzie of the highest Gorsedd musical degree. Henceforth Dr. Mackenzie will be known to all loyal Welsh musicians as "Pencerdd Alban"—i.e., Scotia's Chief of Song. The first successful competitors were Mr. and Mrs. Stephens, who gained the prize for the soprano and tenor duet; other successful candidates in subsequent competitions were Mr. David Evans, baritone; Mr. W. Barter, tenor; Mr. Willie Rees, first prize, and Mr. Benjamin George, second prize, violinists; Mr. T. C. Page, harpist; Mr. Willie Rees, tenor; and Miss M. M. Rees, pianist.

The first prize for best choir singing of one congregation was gained by the Soar Choir, Merthyr, and the second by the Llanelly Choir. After the important ceremony of the "crowning of the bard," the successful poet this year being the Rev. Benjamin Davies, the chief competition of the day took place. This was the male voice competition for choirs numbering from sixty to eighty voices. The test pieces were "The war horse," by D. Jenkins, and "The Tyrol," by Ambroise Thomas. Eight choirs entered, and the contest lasted over two hours, the first prize of £50 being ultimately won by the Rhondda Glee Society, conducted by Mr. Tom Stephens; and the second prize of £15 by the Treorky Society, conducted by Mr. William Thomas.

Dr. Mackenzie, in delivering the adjudication, said that it was more easy to him, a Scottish Highlander, than for any "Sassenach" to enter fully into the feelings of their national gathering, and he wished to tell them that the occasion had been to him not only a great delight and pleasure, but also a very instructive experience. He felt as though all the week he had been swimming in a perfect sea of song. He had heard some marvellous singing, and they had a right to be proud of the fervour, enthusiasm, feeling, and evident natural understanding and sympathy which the performers had displayed. These eminent qualifications could not be produced by teaching, they were Nature's own gifts. He would ask them, however, in the physician's phrase, to assist Nature. They seemed to him to have arrived at a point when the efforts which were undoubtedly being made ought to be carried out vigorously and quickly. The glorious material which was theirs could be used with even greater benefit to their country and to the spread of music. It appeared to him that the constant and persistent working at certain sets of given pieces many months before these contests was apt to provoke, after the music itself had been mastered, a tendency to polish away, to elaborate, to gild refined gold and paint the lily, until art might be lost sight of and artificiality take its place. Speaking chiefly with respect to competitions among smaller or local choirs, he thought that, so far as the results of long preparation was concerned, the climax of the purpose of the present system of Eisteddfodau had been reached. He thought that to go on longer on exactly the same lines would not mean actual progress. He would suggest that much less time be spent in preparation, and very much more devoted to the acquirement of a thorough knowledge of the elements of music, especially of reading at sight. It was not necessary to eradicate the idea of competition, but that idea might certainly be modified a little and confined to reasonable limits, by which far higher and greater results would accrue.

COVENT GARDEN THEATRE.

On the 12th ult. this Theatre was re-opened by Mr. Farley Sinkins for a series of Promenade Concerts. The exceptional excellence of the orchestra, conducted by Mr. Frederic H. Cowen and Mr. Betjemann, the latter being also leader, and the number of high-class works which figure nightly in the programmes have combined to place the enterprise among those manifestations of artistic activity which The Musical Times is glad to notice and to encourage. The band, numbering a hundred performers, many of whom are of the first rank, is supplemented on occasion by that of the Coldstream Guards. A host of eminent artists, vocal and instrumental, have been engaged; and whilst appeals ad captandum are not entirely absent, they have, at least, been reduced to a minimum. Among the orchestral works heard at the opening Concert were the "Leonora" and "Tannhäuser" Overtures, the Scherzo from the "Midsummer Night's Dream" music, an exquisite little piece by Paderewski, and selections from Ambroise Thomas and Léo Délibes. M. Ysaÿe played, with his usual mastery and breadth of style, Saint-Saëns's Third Violin Concerto; Mesdames Valda, Marian McKenzie, and Belle Cole, and Messrs. Ben Davies and Bantock Pierpoint sang delightfully; and Mr. Charles Fry gained an encore for his recitation of "The Village Choir."

The Concerts given up to the day on which we go to press have included two so-called "Classical" nights, on which Schubert's "Unfinished" and Beethoven's C minor Symphonies were the most important numbers. Mr. Cowen's programmes have been so uniformly good, however, that the "Classical" programmes have almost lost their distinctive character; but indeed it is now so difficult to define the boundary dividing that which is, from that which is not, classical, that if the term could be got rid of altogether clearness of thought would be greatly increased thereby. To name a few of the most important instrumental pieces heard on "off" nights: Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto (Ysaÿe); Pianoforte Concertos by Mendelssohn (G minor), Tschaikowsky (B flat), Liszt (E flat); Haydn's Symphony in G and Mozart's in E flat (played on successive Saturdays, and highly appreciated by the audiences); the Overtures to "Fidelio," "Egmont," "Ruy Blas," "Oberon," "Genoveva," "Rienzi," "The Tempest" (Sullivan), and "Œdipus Rex" (Stanford). Native composers have been more especially cared for on Fridays, and a Wagner night was given on the 24th ult. with so much success that its repetition was announced for the week following. In addition to the vocalists already named, Miss Ella Russell, Madame Alice Gomez, Misses Thudichum, C. Curnow, and Greta Williams, Messrs. Bispham and E. Houghton have appeared. The pianists have been Messrs. Slivinski and F. Dawson. The orchestra is admirably balanced, and its renderings under Mr. Cowen and Mr. Betjemann are, of course, in conformity with the best canons of taste.

NATIONAL CO-OPERATIVE FESTIVAL AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

The National Co-operative Society's Annual Festival at the Crystal Palace, although instituted mainly to foster co-operation in a great flower, fruit, and vegetable show, has incidentally developed into an important demonstration of popular enthusiasm for choral music. Two large choirs, each of five thousand adult performers, sing in turn on the great orchestra, and a choral competition of choirs of about sixty voices is a successful part of the scheme. No musician need cavil at the programmes submitted by the great choirs. They were plainly chosen to court popularity with the choralists and the estimated taste of the audience, and from this point of view it was clear that the music was, on the whole, admirably chosen. This being so, the character of the music that thus obtains favour with a large and representative gathering of the people becomes at least interesting to the patriotic musician because, by this means, he can gauge the results of the efforts in the direction of popular, and more especially school education in music that have been exerted during the last generation. It is gratifying to be able to say that the music selected and enthusiastically performed and received was, on the whole, good and sound from the musician's standpoint. Several of the most effective pieces performed were written by composers quite unknown to fame outside a limited circle. In this connection it is just to specially mention the compositions of Mr. Charles Nixon, an amateur whose works are now frequently in demand at great popular choral concerts. Mr. Nixon has acquired the knack of writing with breadth and simplicity, and without striving after unusual effect. His harmonies are almost entirely diatonic, and his melodies satisfy without cloying. These qualities were all evident in the Harvest Chorus, "Again 'midst joyous shouts," and the Ode specially composed for the Festival, "Sons of Labour." Amongst other pieces well performed we may mention a mixed voice arrangement of "Strike the lyre" (Cooke), "The Larboard Watch" (T. Williams), and two fantasias on national airs. The music was generally remarkably well executed—a fact redounding not only to the credit of the exhilarating enthusiasm of the performers, but to the peculiar ability of the Conductor, Mr. G. William Williams, whose popularity was evidently unbounded. A special recognition of the esteem and regard in which Mr. Williams is held by the members of the choirs was made in the middle of the evening Concert, by the presentation of an illuminated address and a cheque for £40. It was something to hear "For he's a jolly good fellow" sung with meaning by five thousand singers as Mr. Williams came forward to receive his testimonial. Mr. F. Wilson Parish efficiently accompanied on the organ at both Concerts.

At the Choral Competition held in the morning seven choirs entered. Mr. W. G. McNaught adjudicated. A first prize of £10, with a silver medal, and a second prize of £5, with a bronze medal, were offered. The stipulated piece was the four-part song "Mary Morison," by Dr. G. Bennett, besides which each choir sang a piece of its own choice. The choirs came from Portsea Island, Leicester, Oxford, Wolverton, Nottingham, Bacup, and Leeds. The competition was very close. The last three choirs named all sang remarkably well. Nottingham (Conductor, Mr. H. Freeston) sang the test piece with good attack and sentiment, and gave a very fine performance of "Day-break" (Gaul). Bacup (Conductor, Mr. C. Hallows) made some excellent points in "Mary Morison," and sang "The parting kiss" with delicacy, but with scarcely enough force or passion. Leeds (Conductor, Mr. Stephen Hirst) sang "Mary Morison" with much expression and beauty of tone, and gave a vigorous and withal refined performance of a mixed-voice arrangement of Spofforth's "Come, bounteous May." Mr. McNaught awarded the first place to Leeds, and, finding that he could not differentiate Nottingham and Bacup without another hearing—which was impracticable—bracketed these two choirs equal. We understand that the Committee decided, under these circumstances, to give two second prizes of £5.

OBITUARY.

The daily papers have devoted long articles to the life and work of the Duke Ernst II., of Saxe-Coburg Gotha, whose death, at the age of seventy-five, took place on the 23rd ult. Here we have to deal with him only in connection with music. Germany loses in him a Prince who was ever an earnest and even enthusiastic patron of the arts, and more particularly of music. Being himself a composer of some note, he was ever ready to extend his patronage to any enterprise which was likely to further the interests and redound to the glory of his art. Of his works we need only particularise the operas "Zaire," "Toni," "Casilda" (Brussels, 1855), "Santa Chiara" (Gotha, 1854; Paris, 1855; London, 1877), "Diana von Solange" (Coburg, 1858), "Der Schuster von Strassburg" (Vienna, 1871), and "Alpenrosen" (Hamburg, 1873).

Several of these were brought out under various pseudonyms. He also wrote songs, cantatas, and hymns. One of the deceased Prince's last public functions was in connection with the model performances of "Medea," "Rothkäppchen," and the two new works by Umlauft and Forster, at Gotha, of which we speak in another column. German musicians will deeply mourn his death, which leaves a great void in the musical world of the Fatherland.

We regret to have to announce the following deaths, viz.:—

On the 12th ult., at Alwyne Lodge, Canonbury, Mr. W. S. B Woolhouse, F.R.A.S. He was born at North Shields on May 6, 1809. At an early age he exhibited rare precocity as a mathematician, and it is as a writer on mathematics and kindred subjects that he is best known. To musicians his name has become familiar through a "Treatise on Musical Intervals, Temperament, and the Elementary Principles of Music," of which a second edition was published in 1888. Music was a great hobby with him, and he possessed one of the best collections of violins in the country. He was the father of Mr. Woolhouse, the violoncello player, and of Mr. Charles Woolhouse, the music publisher, of Regent Street; one of his daughters, who was the wife of Dr. Rea, the well-known Newcastle musician, died only a few months ago.

John Millard, Professor of Elocution at the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music, on the 9th ult., at 63, Lancaster Road, Notting Hill.

Gustav Hinke, on the 5th ult., at Leipzig, aged 49; first oboist of the local Stadt-Theater and Gewandhaus Concerts, and teacher at the Conservatoire. One of the finest performers on his difficult instrument.

Elizabeth Markhl-Wiswe, formerly a famous pianist, at Vienna, aged fifty-seven. Only a few years ago she gave some very successful Concerts there with Johannes Brahms and J. Hellmesberger, sen.

Alfredo Catalani, at Milan, on the 9th ult., aged thirty-nine; Professor at the Milan Conservatoire, and one of the most talented composers of the "young Italy" school. His works include several operas, "L'Elda," "Dejanice," "Edmea," "Loreley," and "La Wally," the last of which has been performed with considerable success in Germany under the title "Geierwally."

Gustav Schirmer, one of the principal music publishers of New York, on the 6th ult., at Eisenach in Germany, where he was on a visit. He was in his sixty-fifth year.

Jean Charles Alfred Deléhelle, at Paris, aged sixty-seven. A composer of some note and pupil of Adolphe Adam. In 1851 he gained the Prix de Rome with a cantata, "Le Prisonnier." Several operas and operettas of his have been performed, some of them with great success, notably "Monsieur Polichinelle" and a three-act opera-comique, "Don Spavento."

Ignaz Erdelyi, at Budapest, one of the most popular gipsy musicians in Hungary. At the age of eleven he first appeared as a prodigy, his instrument being, of course, the violin. He was engaged, with his gipsy band, by an enterprising impresario, and toured through Europe and the United States. He returned to his native place, Szegedin, a comparatively rich man. For some years past he suffered much illness, and in a fit of depression he ended his life by suicide.

Joseph C. Raff, at Binghampton, U.S.A., aged sixty-two. He was a brother of Joachim Raff, the composer of the "Lenore" Symphony, and was himself a composer and conductor.

Adolphe Dubois-Mayer, at Paris, on the 17th ult., aged seventy-six. He was for nearly twenty years stage manager at the Grand Opéra, having previously occupied a similar post at the Brussels Théâtre de la Monnaie.

Paul Labure, at Nice, on the 3rd ult., aged sixty-seven; for twenty years organist at the Notre Dame Church, Havre.

Percy Palmer, at 23, Victoria Grove, Fulham Road, on the 18th ult., aged thirty-two. When he first appeared before the public, some years ago, he was considered a concert-tenor of great promise; latterly he devoted himself chiefly to teaching singing. He was married to Madame Annie Marriott.

MUSIC IN GLASGOW.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The preliminary prospectus issued by the Scottish Orchestra Co. (Limited) states that the scheme was formed in 1891 for the purpose of maintaining an efficient orchestra on a permanent basis, which would be available for Concerts throughout Scotland over a much longer period than has hitherto been possible. The season commences on the 30th prox., and it will run on until the beginning of next April, during which period thirteeen classical, fourteen popular, and six chamber Concerts will be given. Mr. Georg Henschel is, of course, the Conductor; his band, led by Mr. Maurice Sons, will consist of seventy-six performers, and the solo instrumentalists already engaged include Messrs. Joachim, Sarasate, Paderewski, Leonard Borwick, Mesdames Frida Scotta, Wietrowetz, and Fanny Davies, as also Lady Hallé. Amongst the solo vocalists the names of Mrs. Henschel, Miss Palliser, Mr. Plunket Greene, and Mr. Henschel himself will be found. Meanwhile the directors of the Glasgow Choral and Orchestral Concerts are actively engaged making arrangements for their twentieth season, which commences on December 14 next. The vitality of the old scheme is singularly to the front, as shown, amongst other things, by the dimensions of the Guarantee Fund. It already exceeds £3,000 and further contributions are fully expected. Mr. August Manns returns as Conductor, and it may be taken that a cordial welcome awaits the veteran Sydenham chef, who has done so much for the musical art in the Land o' Cakes. The orchestra will consist of nearly ninety performers. The chief "strings" of former seasons have been retained, and Mr. Elkan Kosman will again lead. A goodly programme of choral works has practically been fixed, and these will include "The Golden Legend," "The Messiah," the second and third acts of Wagner's "Flying Dutchman," and "Israel in Egypt." The usual number of Saturday "Pops" will be given, as also two or three Chamber Concerts, and the artists already booked comprise Messrs. Joachim, Piatti, Cæsar Thomson, Mesdames Fanny Davies and Ella Russell, &c. Other important engagements are, moreover, pending.

If musical matters have been stagnant here during the last three or four months, there will be no cause for complaint on this score later on. The various Choral Societies in and around Glasgow are now looking to their armour. Numerous Concerts of a miscellaneous order are promised, and, as regards the operatic world, Sir Augustus Harris brings his company to Glasgow on Monday, the 18th inst., with a strong répertoire.

MUSIC IN LIVERPOOL.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The promised opera season of two months' duration, with which the new year is to open, is a leading topic of conversation just at present, and expectation is rife as to promises, products, and results. Naturally the changes recently effected in regard to the Carl Rosa Company have come in for a good amount of canvassing, but the general feeling seems to be that the present directors may be very well trusted to the fullest extent in the interests of art as well as of the public. The Court Theatre has of late been redecorated, and was, as usual, re-opened on bank holiday.

The only signs of urban life in regard to musical matters during the past month have been afforded by Mr. W. T. Best, whose Organ Recitals at St. George's Hall continue to attract good audiences, as many as 1,000 or more being present on at least one recent occasion. Towards the end of next month the Sunday Recitals will be again added to those of Thursday and Saturday, and these will alternate for the entire winter season with the Concerts of the Sunday Society in St. George's Hall.

On the 23rd ult. the Penrhyn-Dinoric Choir of male voices gave a valedictory performance in Hope Hall prior to departing, a day later, to Chicago. From the World's Fair these singers hope to return with a fair share of prize-money, and of this there would seem to be a very good chance, judging by the superb manner in which they sang the test pieces in Liverpool under Mr. Edward Broome.

The performances of music in Sefton and Wavertree Parks, which commenced late in July and ended on the Two Cupids.

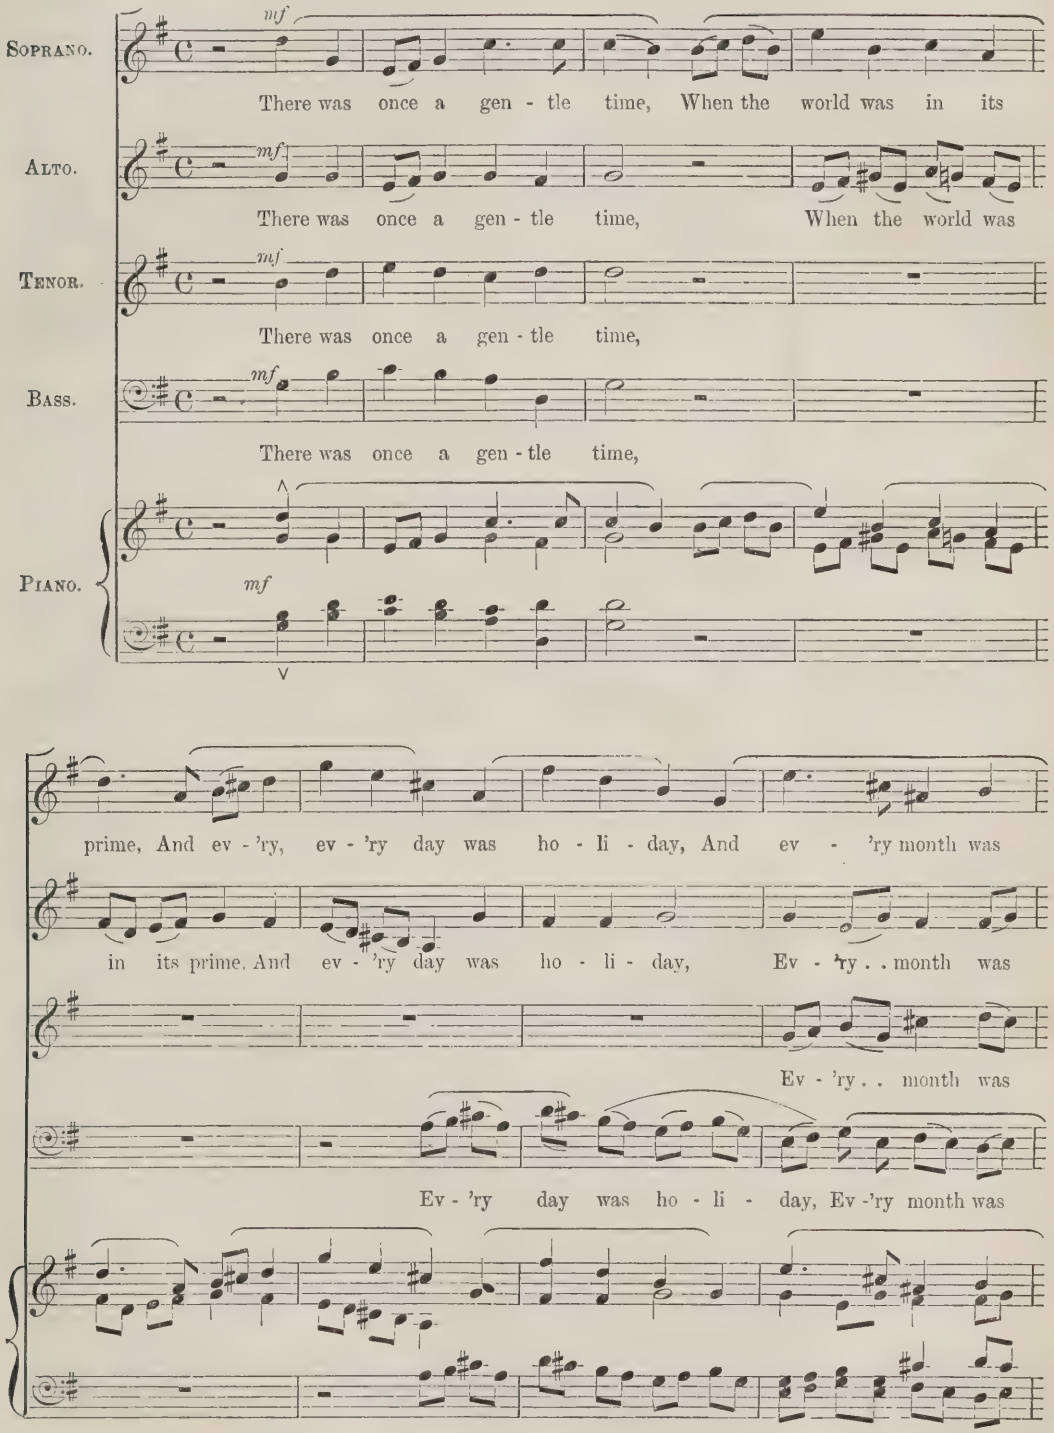
A FOUR-PART SONG.

Words by George Croly (1780-1860). Composed by A. Wellesley Batson, Mus. Bac., Oxon.

London: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO., 1, Berners Street (W.), and 80 & 81, Queen Street (E.C.); also in New York.



Soprano.
Alto.
Tenor.
Bass.
Piano.
mf
There was once a gen - tle time, When the world was in its
There was once a gen - tle time, When the world was
There was once a gen - tle time,
There was once a gen - tle time, prime, And ev - 'ry, ev - 'ry day was ho - li - day, And ev - 'ry month was in its prime. And ev - 'ry day was ho - li - day, Ev - 'ry . . month was Ev - 'ry . . month was
Ev - 'ry day was ho - li - day, Ev - 'ry month was

Copyright, 1893, by Novello, Ewer and Co.

love-ly May, Cu-pid then had but to go, With his pur-ple wings and bow, . . with his love-ly May, Cu-pid then had but to go, With his pur-ple wings and bow, . . with his love-ly May, Cu-pid then had but to go, With his pur-ple wings and bow, . . with his love-ly May, Cu-pid then, With pur-ple wings and bow, with his rall. a tempo.
pur-ple wings and bow, And in blossomed vale and grove, Ev-'ry shep-herd,
rall. a tempo.
pur-ple wings and bow, . . And in blossomed vale and grove,
rall. a tempo.
pur-ple wings and bow, . . And in blossomed vale and grove, Ev-'ry shep-herd, rall. a tempo.
pur-ple wings and bow, . . And in blossomed vale and grove, Ev-'ry shep-herd, ev-'ry shep-herd, ev-'ry shep-herd knelt to love, And in blos-somed
Ev-'ry shep-herd knelt to love, And in blos-somed
ev-'ry shep-herd, ev-'ry shep-herd knelt to love, . . And in blos-somed ev-'ry shep-herd, ev-'ry shep-herd knelt to love, And in blos-somed

mf
vale and grove, Ev - 'ry shep-herd knelt to love. Then a ro - sy dim - pled vale and grove, Ev - 'ry shep-herd knelt to love. Then a ro - sy dim - pled vale and grove, Ev - 'ry shep-herd knelt to love. Then a ro - sy dim - pled vale and grove, Ev - 'ry shep-herd knelt to love. Then a ro - sy dim - pled
mf
cheek, And a blue eye fond and meek, . . And a ring - let - wreath - en cheek, And a blue eye fond and meek, And a ring - let - wreath - cheek, cheek. And a brow, . . Like hy - a-cinths on bed of snow, And a low voice
- - en brow, Hy - a - cinths on bed of snow, And a low voice
Hy - a - cinths on bed of snow, And a low voice ro - sy dim - pled cheek, And a ring - let - wreath-en brow, sil - ver sweet, From a lip with - out de - ceit, . . from a lip with-out de - ceit, sil - ver sweet, From a lip with - out de - ceit, . . from a lip with-out de - ceit, . .

sil - ver sweet, From a lip with - out de - ceit, . . from a lip with-out de - ceit, . .
sil - ver sweet, From lip with- out de - ceit, from a lip with-out de - ceit, . .
rall.
a tempo.
On -ly those the hearts could move, Of the sim - ple swains to love, of the sim - ple
On - ly those the hearts could move, Of the sim-ple
On -ly those the hearts could move, Of the sim- ple swains to love, of the sim - ple
On - ly those the hearts could move, Of the sim - ple swains to love, . . of the sim - ple swains to love, On - ly those the hearts could move, Of the sim - ple swains to love.
swains to love, On - ly those the hearts could move, Of the sim - ple swains to love.
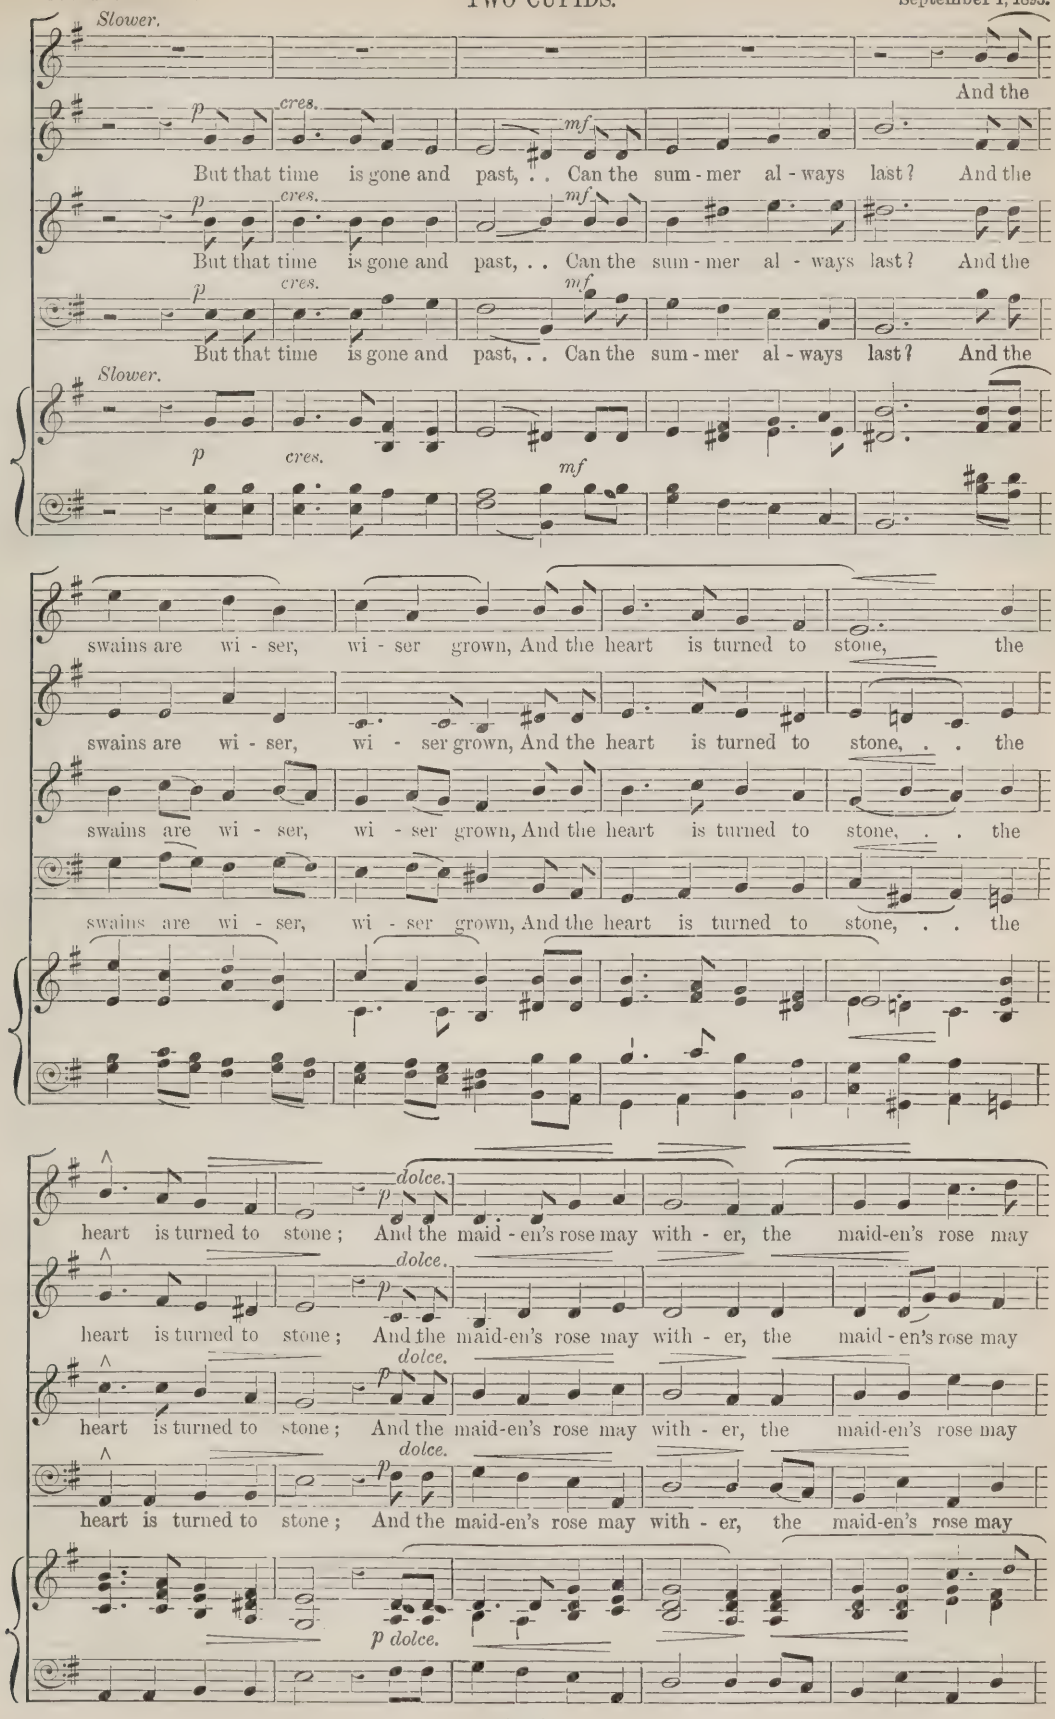
swains to love, . . . On - ly those the hearts could move, Of the sim - ple swains to love.
swains to love, On - ly those the hearts could move, Of the sim - ple swains to love.



Slower.
p
cres.
mf
And the
But that time is gone and past, . . Can the sum - mer al - ways last? And the
But that time is gone and past, . . Can the sum - mer al - ways last? And the
But that time is gone and past, . . Can the sum - mer al - ways last? And the Slower.
p
cres.
mf swains are wi - ser, wi - ser grown, And the heart is turned to stone, the swains are wi - ser, wi - ser grown, And the heart is turned to stone, . . the swains are wi - ser, wi - ser grown, And the heart is turned to stone, . . the swains are wi - ser, wi - ser grown, And the heart is turned to stone, . . the dolce.
p heart is turned to stone; And the maid - en's rose may with - er, the maid-en's rose may heart is turned to stone; And the maid-en's rose may with - er, the maid - en's rose may heart is turned to stone; And the maid-en's rose may with - er, the maid-en's rose may heart is turned to stone; And the maid-en's rose may with - er, the maid-en's rose may p dolce.

with - er, Cu- pid's fled, Cu- pid's fled, no man knows whith-er, Cu-pid's fled, with - er, Cu- pid's fled, Cu- pid's fled, no man knows whith- er, Cu-pid's fled, with - er, Cu- pid's fled, Cu- pid's fled, no man knows whith-er, no man with - er, Cu- pid's fled, Cu- pid's fled, no man knows whith- er, no man Tempo 1mo.
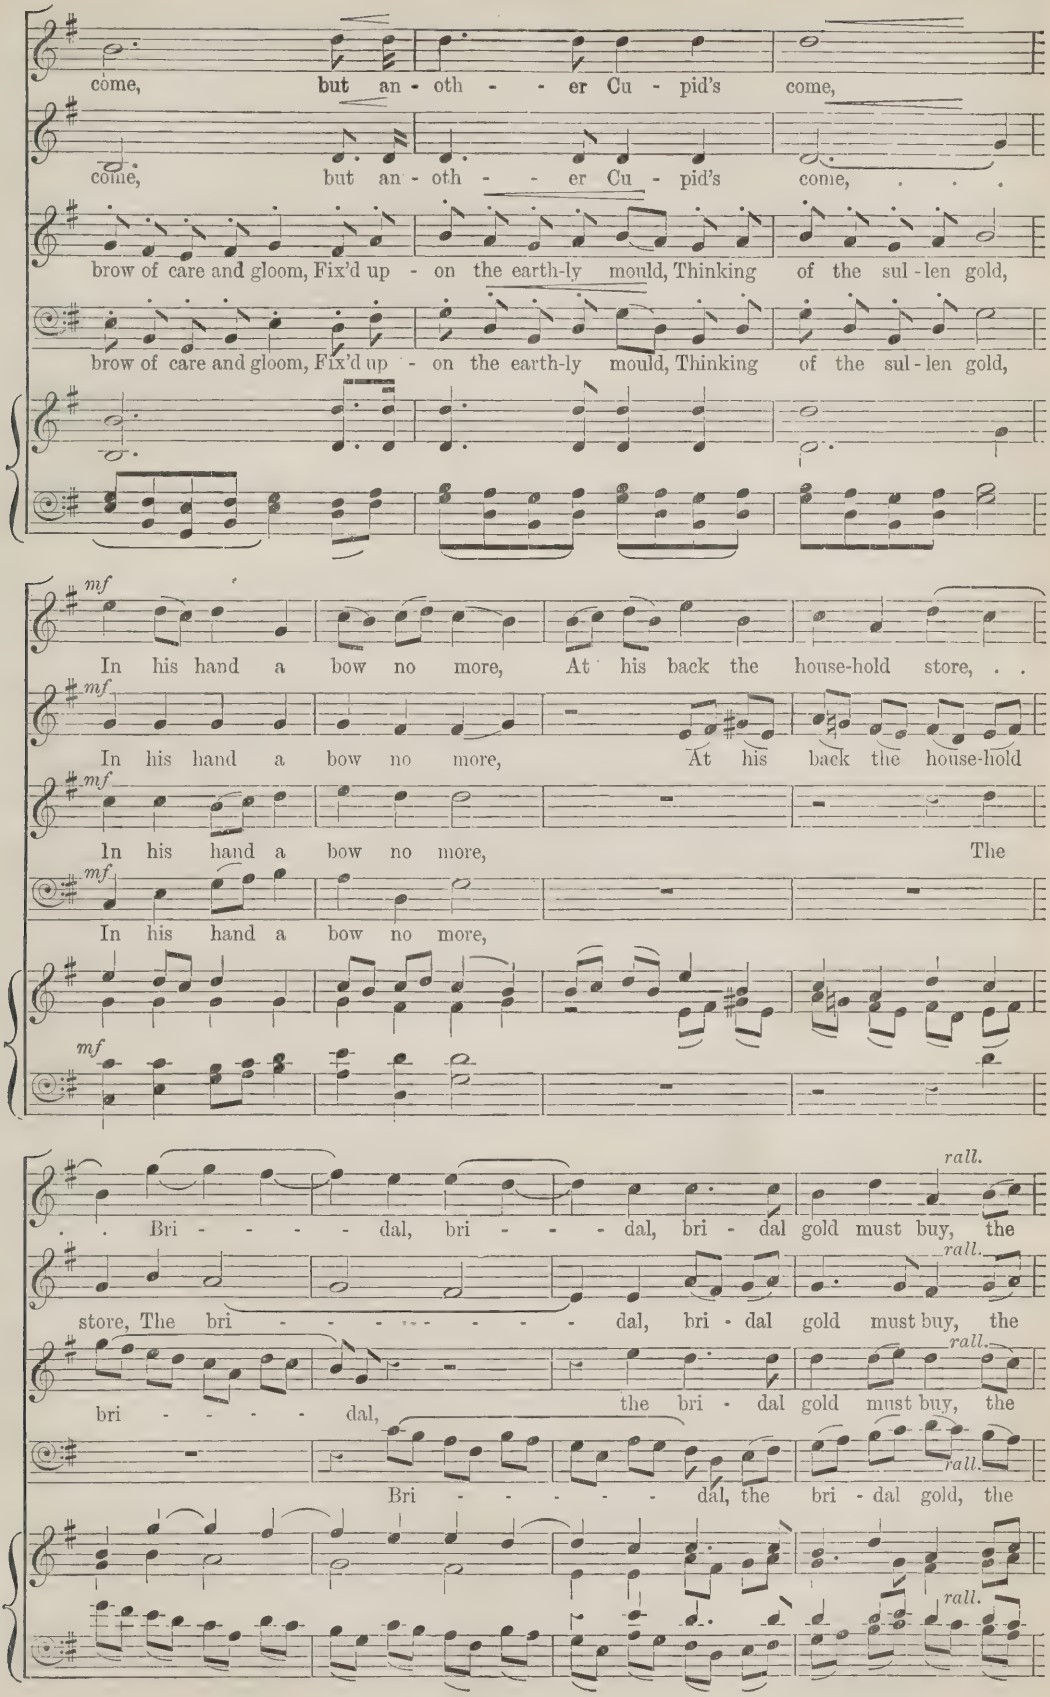
rall.
Cu-pid's fled, no man knows whither, whith-er, no man knows whith - er?
Cu-pid's fled, no man knows whither, whith-er, no man knows whith - er?
knows, . . no man knows whither, whith-er, Cu- pid! no man knows whith - er?
knows, . . no man knows whither, Cu- pid! whither, no man knows whith - er?
With spirit.
But an - oth - er Cupid's come, With a brow of care and gloom, But an - oth - er Cu - pid's
But an - oth - er Cu - pid's
But an - oth - er Cu-pid's come, but an - oth- er Cu-pid's come, With a
With spirit.
But an - oth - er Cu-pid's come, With a



come, but an - oth - - er Cu - pid's come,
come, but an - oth - - er Cu - pid's come, . . .
brow of care and gloom, Fix'd up - on the earth-ly mould, Thinking of the sul - len gold, brow of care and gloom, Fix'd up - on the earth-ly mould, Thinking of the sul - len gold,
mf
In his hand a bow no more, At his back the house-hold store, . .
In his hand a bow no more, At his back the house-hold
In his hand a bow no more, The
In his hand a bow no more,
rall.
. . Bri - - - - - dal, bri - - - - dal, bri - dal gold must buy, the store, The bri - - - - - - - - - dal, bri - dal gold must buy, the bri - - - - - dal, the bri - dal gold must buy, the Bri - - - - - - dal, the bri - dal gold, the bri - dal gold, Use-less now the smile or sigh, . . But he wears the pin-ion still, bri - dal gold, Use-less now the smile or sigh, . . But he wears the pin-ion still,

bri - dal gold, Use-less now the smile or sigh, But he wears the pin-ion still, bri - dal gold, Use-less now, . . But he wears the pin-ion still,
Fly - ing at the sight of ill, . . fly - ing at the sight of . . ill. . .
Fly-ing at the sight of . . ill.
Fly - ing at the sight of ill, . . fly - ing at the sight of ill. . . .
Fly - ing at the sight, the sight of . . ill, . . fly-ing at the sight of ill.
O for the old true - love . . time, When the world was in its prime.
O for the old true - love . . time, When the world was in its prime.
O for the old true - love . . time, When the world was in its prime.
O for the old true - love . . time, When the world was in its prime.

27th ult., have proved conclusively that the people enjoy music out of doors on Sundays here as elsewhere. No small amount of opposition was raised against the experiment in question, and it was stated by opponents of the movement that something akin to mob law would prevail in the parks, and that the music to be produced might not be edifying in character. The Lord Mayor and a large majority of the City Council, however, thought otherwise, and their attitude has been justified by that of the visitors, who, to the number of fifty thousand or more, have benefited by the liberality of the Sunday Society.

The rehearsals of the Philharmonic Society are being resumed, and congratulations are rife as to the choral issues of the programme taken in hand. The only information elicited up to date at the office of the Society in regard to orchestral work relates to the production of Villiers Stanford's "Irish" Symphony, which it is hoped the Professor will personally conduct.

The battle of the bands is being waged at Llandudno, where the rival forces of Messrs. Rivière and Gwillym Crowe are engaged in a musical tournament. However the results of such a state of things may turn out for those chiefly concerned, the public are at least rejoicing in a surplus of good things, there being nearly a hundred performers engaged in the two orchestras.

MUSIC IN WILTS AND HANTS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

This month the two Musical Associations of which Salisbury can boast, the Sarum Choral Society and the Philharmonic Society, will make their preliminary arrangements for the coming winter season. The success of the performance of Sir George Macfarren's "King David" by the first-named Society, last Easter, will probably lead to the selection of another modern work of similar character for the Christmas Concert. Mr. South, the Cathedral Organist, will retain the post of Conductor. The Philharmonic Society, a newly organised body, will confine its attention to short works, choral and orchestral, under the direction of Mr. Alfred Foley. Mr. Barrington Foote's Concert and Opera Company paid a visit to Salisbury on the 9th ult. and gave a successful performance in the County Hall. The chief feature of the programme was a new operetta in one act, entitled "The Improvisatore," written by B. C. Stephenson, and composed by Edward Jakobowski, in which Mdlle. Dagmar, Miss Lucille Saunders, Mr. Jack Robertson, and Mr. Barrington Foote appeared.

At Bournemouth the powers that be have proved the attractiveness of good music. The performances of Mr. Dan Godfrey's band in the Winter Gardens have been so successful, and have drawn such crowds to this pleasant resort, that the Corporation have, with some modifications, renewed the contract, which was shortly about to expire. Under the new arrangements Mr. Godfrey will, during the winter months, substitute an ordinary orchestra for the military band which he has hitherto conducted here. Mr. Matthew Kingston has been appointed Borough Organist, and gives daily Recitals upon the new organ in the Pavilion. On the 10th and 11th ult. the stage of the Bournemouth Theatre Royal was occupied by Mr. D'Oyly Carte's Opera Company. "Haddon Hall" and "The Mikado" were performed to good audiences.

Southsea is being well patronised by visitors, and the Concerts on the Pier still hold their own amongst the many attractions to this popular place.

MUSIC IN CHICAGO.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Chicago, August 6, 1893.

It is difficult to determine what matters are of chief moment in connection with the Music Exhibits of the Exposition, but it would seem to be the general sentiment that the lofty plans of Mr. Thomas have fallen far short of his ideal, not through any failure on his part, but from the lack of an intelligent interest and adequate support on the part of the public, and, as a consequence, a sad falling off in the enthusiasm of the Directors. "The gods themselves are powerless against stupidity," wrote the great German poet, and Mr. Thomas's experience has been at once a comment upon and illustrative of this sad truth. His resignation is a dignified protest against the spirit which would make of the divine art a mere adjunct designed to amuse the idle moments of curious sightseers, or, worse still, a scheme carried out on the sordid commercial basis of smoked hams and salt pork. That it has not been a financial success is unquestionable, but that the music has been a magnificent display of artistic completeness assuming the proportions of a complete exhibit is equally unquestionable; that the problem of money has at length become the potent and determining factor is to be regretted, but the achievements thus far can only merit and receive unstinted praise which extends to Mr. Thomas and his coadjutors.

The choral works presented by the Second Section of the choral societies of the West included selections from "Judas Maccabæus," the "Requiem" Mass of Berlioz, Bach's "A stronghold sure," the "Utrecht" Jubilate of Handel, "Saint Paul" (Part I.) of Mendelssohn, and representative selections from Wagner's "Lohengrin." It is not a gracious task to criticise unfavourably, but simple justice requires the statement that the performance of these societies compared more than favourably with the previous interpretation of the first section, in fulness of interpretation, delicacy of shading, and intelligent response to the demands of the conductor. Facile princeps among the soloists has been Mr. Edward Lloyd, whose perfect method and natural gifts have alike combined to add to the fame previously acquired at the Cincinnati Festivals, while his courtesy of manner in private relations has endeared him to all with whom he came in contact and made his enforced departure a subject of general regret. No better exponent of Oratorio and ballad singing could have been secured by the Bureau of Music than Mr. Lloyd, while his impassioned interpretation of Lohengrin's Narrative and sympathetic portrayal of the parting from Elsa gave evidence of high dramatic capabilities. Others who deserve by this performance special mention are Miss Emma Juch, Miss Medora Henson, and, of particular excellence under very difficult conditions, Mr. George Ellsworth Holmes, a local singer, who in his careful singing and artistic method of vocalisation shows at once his innate powers and, indirectly, the value of study under Mr. George Henschel, whose pupil he was, and whose fame as a teacher he will surely extend. No feature of the Exposition has been more interesting or more instructive than the beautiful singing of the Children's Chorus, under the direction of Mr. William L. Tomlins. The selections have been taken chiefly from the "Souvenir Song Book," recognition of the merits of which, in respect both of poetry and music, is becoming general, although, as yet, not commensurate with the artistic value of the compilation. It has received the unstinted praise of intelligent musicians, and needs only to be well known to be enthusiastically approved and widely used.

It is a matter of regret that the circumstances are not favourable for the production at the Exposition of the latest musical sensation in well-informed circles. I refer to Mr. H. W. Parker's "Hora Novissima," the excellence of which is generously conceded by all musicians of prominence, and it is, on the other hand, a subject of congratulation that this really greatest of American compositions is to have adequate presentation under the auspices of the Boston Handel and Haydn Society during the ensuing season, while Mr. Damrosch has been so favourably impressed that it is under serious consideration with the Directors of the New York Oratorio Society. It is to be hoped that the Music Committee of the excellent body of singers which includes the best elements in Chicago—the Apollo Club—will realise that no more worthy subject of study can be added to their répertoire than this magnum opus of American composers.

It is a pleasure to note the success in Chicago of a singer well and favourably known on your side of the water—Miss Effie Stewart—who has just concluded an engagement at the Trocadero under Dr. Siegfeld. Miss Stewart has created a favourable impression by her charming stage presence and pleasing vocalisation, but having pleasant memories of London and "Auld Reekie" she contemplates an early return to the scene of her most signal triumphs.

Great disappointment is felt that the production of Dr. Mackenzie's "Bethlehem" is, in the interests of economy, pretermitted, and that Dr. Mackenzie's visit is likewise an unrealised expectation. We are compelled to accept as the only consolation the visit of M. Alex. Guilmant, whose Organ Recitals are anticipated with great pleasure.

From New York your correspondent learns of delightful prospects in connection with the opera, as promised by Abbey, Grau, and Scheuffel, with a company of superlative excellence, and novelties in the way of Leoncavallo's "I Pagliacci," &c.

Mr. James C. Culwick, the much esteemed Organist of the Chapel Royal, Dublin, has recently had conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Music by the University of Dublin, in recognition of his able musicianship and his services to the art, especially in the Irish capital. In accordance with well established custom, a performance of Dr. Culwick's compositions took place in the Theatre of Trinity College, Dublin, when the programme included "The Mermaids' Cave," for chorus and orchestra, a String Quartet, and a "Fairy Song," the words by Dr. Todhunter, for quartet, chorus, and orchestra, in addition to other works. In the course of the proceedings, Dean Dickinson, on behalf of a number of friends, presented Dr. Culwick with his doctor's robes, a silver salver, and other articles of value. A large and influential audience were present to show their regard for Dr. Culwick and to endorse the action of the University in having added to its roll of honour a distinguished and cultured musician.

The magnificent organ located at the Albert Palace, Battersea, originally built by Messrs. Bryceson Bros. in 1872-75 for the residence at Regent's Park of the late Mr. Nathaniel J. Holmes, at a cost of about £8,000, was sold by auction on the 24th ult. to Mr. C. H. Walter for £625. The instrument contains 4,209 pipes, and occupies a space thirty feet square and fifty feet in height, in addition to which is the echo organ, which is placed at a distance of a hundred feet from the keyboards, of which there are four. Mr. Walter may be congratulated on his purchase, but the question which most interests the public is "What will he do with it?"

The third series of mid-day Organ Recitals, at St. Michael's Church, Cornhill, was brought to a close on Wednesday, the 9th ult., when the Organist of the Church, Dr. Reynolds, presided at the instrument. The series has proved very successful, each Recital having been well attended, and, it is hoped, appreciated, as some of the leading London organists have performed and the selections have uniformly been of a high standard. It is hoped that a similar series will be given next year.

To celebrate the re-opening of the organ at Waltham Abbey Church, Mr. J. Chalk, Organist of the Church, and Mr. W. G. Wood, of the Royal Academy of Music, each gave two Recitals on the instrument, the former on the 6th, the latter on the 10th ult. Seventeen new stops have been added to the organ, which now possesses forty stops. It was built by Messrs. J. W. Walker and Sons.

At Trinity College, London, the Tallis Gold Medal has been awarded to Katherine Swain; the Gabriel Prize to Clara May Buckman and Amy Julia Holloway (divided); the Pianoforte Prize of £5 (presented by Dr. Colman, of Bristol) to Ada Martha Coviello; and the National Prize of £5 for Pianoforte playing to Mary Rennie.

Mr. B. Jackson, Organist of the People's Palace, London, has given Organ Recitals during August at the Parish Church, Margate; St. Philip's Church, Maidstone; St. Michael's Church, Sittingbourne; and St. Mary's Church, Walmer.

We are asked to state that Mr. T. Westlake Morgan, of Bangor Cathedral, has relinquished all his positions in the Church Choir Guild.

REVIEWS.

Octavo Anthems. Nos. 414-427.
[Novello, Ewer and Co.]

St. Michael's Day will be here shortly and "There was war in Heaven," by W. A. C. Cruickshank, is suitable for that Festival. It is for tenor solo and chorus, the solo voice, however, being only required in the opening recitative. Then follows an extended chorus written in a bold and modern style, but without any fugal details and not by any means difficult. No. 415, "Break forth into Joy," by T. Coleridge-Taylor, is for Christmas. A brightly written chorus is followed by a brief tenor solo, the anthem concluding with a choral, "O come all ye faithful," after the manner of the Church Cantatas of Bach. No. 416, "Prepare ye the way," by J. Maude Crament, is for the Advent season, which will shortly be with us. A remarkably cheerful opening chorus is followed by a quieter and melodious quartet or semi-chorus, and then comes a remarkably effective fugue which is developed at some length. This is a very effective example of the modern style of English Church music. Very different is the next anthem, "Who is this?" a hymn for contralto solo and chorus, by Fred. Rayner, being a setting of verses by the Bishop of Wakefield. Simple, devotional, and expressive, the composition should be kept in view for use during the next Lenten season. No. 418, "O God, who hast prepared," by Alfred S. Baker, is a brief and easy setting of the familiar Prayer Book Collect, within the means of any church choir. Suitable for any season of the year is "Behold, how good and joyful," by Hamilton Clarke. This is a full anthem in three short movements, the middle one of which may be sung as a quartet if desired. The entire composition is quiet, chaste, and churchlike. The same composer's "I have set God always before me" is similar in construction and style, and, on the whole, is the more effective of the two. No. 421, "The day is past and over," by J. Christopher Marks, jun., requires soprano and tenor soloists and chorus. The principal voices are mingled with the choir, and the anthem, taken as a whole, is very melodious and suggestive of Spohr alike in melodic and harmonic progressions. No. 422, "The Lord is risen," by George M. Garrett, is of course intended for Easter-tide. It is full throughout, but there is plenty of variety in the treatment of the words, and the writing is beautifully clear and musicianly, the capabilities of ordinary choirs being well kept in view. Another anthem for Easter is "Why seek ye the living among the dead," by F. Peel. This is a more elaborate composition, commencing with some highly wrought and almost dramatic passages for high and low voices alternately, and leading eventually to a very vigorous chorus, "Thanks be to God," the peroration, however, being extremely quiet. Mr. Peel's anthem is quite modern in feeling. The next three numbers are settings of the familiar hymns "Abide with me," "Lead, kindly Light," and "Sun of my soul," by R. Dunstan. Though, perhaps, rather hymn-like in the preponderance of rhythmical phrases, solo voices are required at times, and the harmonies are rich and sensuous, suggestive frequently of the influence of Spohr. All three are charming, and it is impossible to assign the preference to any one of the set. No. 427, "Hail! gladdening Light," by J. T. Field, is a pretty little full anthem with a few phrases for solo tenor voice, and noteworthy alike for brevity, tunefulness, and musicianly feeling.

The Old English Edition. Nos. I. to VII. Edited by G. E. P. Arkwright.
[London: Joseph Williams; Oxford: Parker and Co.]

"The object of this edition is to present in an accessible form various works by English composers of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, which would otherwise be difficult to obtain. It is intended to reprint a selection from the music hidden away in public and private libraries, which is almost unknown, except to antiquaries and collectors of rare books." This, from the preface, is surely sufficient to recommend the Old English Edition to the favourable notice of music-lovers. That these intentions have so far been admirably carried out is evident from seven beautifully printed volumes now before us. The first contains five songs from a Masque, written by Thomas Campion in honour of the marriage of Lord Hayes (1607), and composed by Campion, Lupo, and T. Giles. They have the simplicity, grace, naïveté, and directness of the popular music of that time; and, though marked by a few archaisms—notably of modulation—are sure to please if sung. The succeeding number contains six fine songs by Arne, from "Comus," "Alfred," "Judith," and "The Fall of Phæton," which are printed both in full score and with the accompaniment arranged for pianoforte. Nos. 3, 4, and 5 are devoted to George Kirbye, who, in 1601, contributed to the famous "Triumphs of Oriana." They contain twenty-four madrigals for four, five, and six voices, the original title-page of which is reproduced. Thus it runs: "The first set of English Madrigals to 4, 5, & 6 voyces. Made and newly published by George Kirbye. London, Printed by Thomas Este, dwelling in Aldersgate Street, 1597." The interest of these is, however, surpassed by that of the two following numbers, containing fourteen three-part and nine four-part songs by William Byrd, forming part of the "Songs of Sundrie Natures, some of gravitie & others of myrth, fit for all companies and voyces," published in 1589. It should be added that each number contains an introduction, a biographical and historical notice, and in several cases notes on some of the peculiarities of harmonisation found in the music—also that paper and printing are in every way excellent.

Trios, Quartets, &c., for Female Voices. Nos. 274-285.
[Novello, Ewer and Co.]

New part-music for ladies' classes continues to be in large request. No. 274 of the present series is "Solitude," a setting by J. Pointer of verses by Kirke White. It is for voices in four parts, and besides being musically effective would form an excellent study in chromatic progressions, especially if the accompaniment be dispensed with. The next three numbers are by the same composer. The first is a charming but scarcely easy setting of Milton's lines "Now the bright morning star"; the next is "The stars are with the voyager," a quieter example than the foregoing, but nicely written; and the last is "Water Lilies," a setting of verses by Mrs. Hemans. This is elaborate and certainly rather difficult, but it will well repay study. Mr. Pointer does not write for school girls but for trained amateurs, who will find his pieces full of interest. No. 278, "To Sea"; No. 279, "If hope were but a fairy"; No. 280, "The Willow and its Lesson"; No. 281, "The Promised Land"; No. 282, "Song should breathe"; and No. 283, "March," are from the pen of Myles B. Foster. They are all unpretending though musicianly little sketches of two or three pages each for voices in two parts only, with, however, in every instance, an independent accompaniment. With the exception of "The Promised Land," which is rather sad, they are written for the most part in a cheerful spirit. No. 284, "Hail! Star of Eve," is by R. Spofforth, arranged and adapted with new words by M. A. Sidebotham. The original is well known, and it only need be said of the transcription that it is well done. The last for the present is "Honey-bees love heath'ry heights," words by Harold Boulton, music by Charles H. Lloyd. It is a bright and tuneful piece in three voice parts, with a flowing independent accompaniment.

Suite for Flute and Pianoforte, by Edward German; Three Pieces for Flute and Pianoforte, by Alfred Cellier; Flute Concerto in D, No. 2, by Mozart, the accompaniments arranged for Pianoforte by Battison Haynes.
[Rudall, Carte and Co.]

Although the flute is not so fashionable an instrument as it was at one time, it has been partially restored to favour of late, proof being afforded by the above-named publications, which form three numbers of The Flute Players' Journal. Mr. Edward German's Suite is in three movements, entitled respectively Valse gracieuse, Souvenir, and Gipsy Dance. The first and second are remarkable for melodic interest and freshness, and the third is appropriately wild and frolicsome. The sequence of keys is rather unusual, the first movement being in F, the second in A flat, and the third in A minor. The pieces by the composer whose premature death less than two years ago was a distinct loss to English musical art are a Caprice in B flat, a Melodie in G, and an Etude in A. Cellier had invariably a fund of graceful tune at his command, and these sketches are as pleasing as they are unpretentious. The third is extremely bright and piquant, but not difficult for either instrument. Mozart's little-known Concerto is one of two composed in 1778 at Paris, as a letter to his father testifies. Otto Jahn says of it that "It is lively and cheerful without laying claim to deeper significance; the accompaniment, although kept well in hand, betrays in little touches the practised hand of a master." It is almost needless to add that the work is perfect as to form, and that Mr. Battison Haynes has accomplished his task of transcription with his customary musicianly skill.

Third Set of Twelve Songs. By Frederic H. Cowen.
[Joseph Williams.]

Mr. F. H. Cowen has the art of expressing himself in a smooth natural manner. His inspiration may not always be at its strongest, but even in the humblest number one comes across he saves himself by some clever device whether rhythmical or harmonic, or some pleasant melodic turn. Take, for instance, the "Cradle Song" (No. 3): the melody is extremely simple, but the quietly moving accompaniment, and the quiet closing cadence impart to it charm and elegance. Or take No. 4, "A Past Springtime." Here the clever harmonies of the accompaniment turn away the attention from the plain character of the music. "Fedalma" (No. 8), words by Clifton Bingham, is a charming song, concise in form and cleverly harmonised. "Somewhere" (No. 10) and "Day is dying" (No. 12) also deserve mention, though perhaps the refined character of the latter is somewhat spoilt by the loud and somewhat sensational close.

Original Compositions for the Organ. Nos. 179-182.
[Novello, Ewer and Co.]

The first and second of these are pieces by B. Luard Selby. "Meditation," in F minor, is a slow and solemn movement, relieved by an alternative section in A flat major, the whole, however, being calm and placid and purely organ-like in style. The other number contains two little pieces—a Prelude in D and a Postlude in G minor—both unpretentious, but written in a legitimate manner, a fair share of the work being allotted to the pedals. The remaining numbers are by Dr. William Creser, and are denominated respectively "Melodia" and "Andante Fughetta." The first, in G, is perhaps rather vague and discursive, but the whole is bound together by the frequent recurrence of the principal theme. In the other the fugal writing is confined to the alternative section, or trio in A minor, the principal movement being a piquant measure in the major key. This is a pleasing little piece of moderate difficulty.

My Musical Life and Recollections. By Jules Rivière.
[Sampson Low, Marston and Co.]

This is decidedly a book to read—preferably during a long railway journey or on a wet day at the seaside. It is not too long, is brightly written, and within its 200 and odd pages figure some of the most celebrated musicians of the last half-century. The career of the author, as here set forth with far more modesty than usual in works of the kind, teaches a lesson of pluck and perseverance, tenacity of purpose, and adaptability to circumstances which may heartily be commended to the notice of those prone to discouragement under temporary failure—an infection to which the artistic temperament is particularly liable. An excellent portrait of Mr. Rivière, "age seventy-two," forms a frontispiece to the volume, which, as regards print and paper, contrasts favourably with many books published at three times its price.

The Glen Collection of Scottish Dance Music. Arranged for Pianoforte by John Glen.

[Edinburgh: J. Glen.]

This volume contains 144 examples of Strathspeys, Reels, and Jigs, selected from the various collections published in Scotland up to the year 1784—here spoken of as "The Gow Era"—and is to be followed by a second, dealing with those published from 1784 to 1792. The author claims to have rescued from neglect many tunes which deserve to be better known; but to our thinking the interest of the book centres on the twenty pages (folio size) of historical, biographical, and bibliographical matter which precede the music, and which include reduced fac-similes of the title pages of the nine earliest known collections—viz., Bremner's (1757), Stewart's (1761), Riddell's, Dow's, Campbell's, McGlashan's, Cumming's, Ross's, and W. Marshall's. An alphabetical list of about 700 tunes, to each of which is appended the name of the collection in which it first appeared, is one of the features for which collectors who add Mr. Glen's volume to their libraries will have most reason to feel grateful.

Twenty-four Songs by Tchaïkowsky.

[Novello, Ewer and Co.]

Among modern Russian composers Tchaïkowsky occupies a distinguished place, and his works include sonatas, concertos, symphonies, and operas. Some of these have been heard in England, but it is by his short pianoforte pieces and songs for one or more voices that his name has become so familiar to us. One must not, of course, infer from this that the works of smaller calibre are of greater merit; but they appeal to a wide circle and are constantly being played or sung, while the opportunities of hearing the orchestral or stage compositions are few and far between. The songs, however, fully deserve their reputation. And the reason of this is not far to seek. There is, in most cases, a freshness and spontaneity about the melodies which at once secures a welcome for them, and they frequently display a languid character and melancholy charm, characteristic of national Russian music, and specially attractive to the ear. Then again the composer's deep knowledge of harmony enables him to set off those melodies to the best advantage. It often happens that through poverty of melodic invention clever writing and effective harmonic colouring appear as an end rather than as a means. But Tchaïkowsky starts with something to say, and any skill shown in expressing his thoughts renders them only more intense. The influence both of Schumann and Chopin is frequently felt, but in a natural, healthy manner. Among so much that is interesting it is difficult to make a selection, but we would name "Why so pale are the roses" for its mournful meandering accompaniment, and "The song that you sang long ago" for its gentle melody and plaintive, sighing accompaniment; also the dainty "What matters?" the quaint "The Czar's Drinking House," and the characteristic "Spanish Serenade." The English translation is from the well-known pen of Lady Macfarren.

English County Songs. Words and Music collected and edited by Lucy E. Broadwood and J. A. Fuller-Maitland.

[Leadenhall Press, 1893.]

This collection shows a great deal of knowledge and research, but we doubt if the songs themselves are, as a rule, worth the trouble they have given. Some few are, however, very quaint and pretty, as "Farewell, my joy," and "My bonnie, bonnie boy," and others; but a large number are merely variants of melodies already known, and are evidently not the best readings. The most interesting part of the book to us has been the words and music of the children's songs; in these and in the local versions of several of our best known carols the antiquary will find much which will repay study. The accompaniments to the songs are all that could be desired, sufficient to support the voice, and without that attempt at independence which mars so many similar works. Mr. Fuller-Maitland and the friends who have helped him in his laborious task are deserving of great credit for this valuable addition to the literature of English folk-songs.

The Parish Choir Book. Nos. 134-138.

[Novello, Ewer and Co.]

The first of these numbers is a setting of the Magnificat and Nunc dimittis by William Spark. It is in D major, and is written for voices in unison. The general style is melodious and flowing, with effective modulations, and the accompaniment is frequently independent. The next is another setting of the same Canticles, and in the same key, by Berthold Tours, jun. Here, however, resemblance ends, for Mr. Tours writes in four-part harmony, and with much boldness and energy, the verses commencing "He hath showed strength" being treated with special vigour. This is a very effective, but by no means difficult service. No. 136 is a simple setting of the Te Deum in G, by J. Stainer. It is marked "to be sung chantwise and not in strict time." If it was Sir John Stainer's intention to write a service in which a congregation may easily join, he has certainly succeeded. The next number contains a Kyrie Eleison and Nicene Creed in F, by T. Tallis Trimnell. The voice parts are mostly in unison, and, musically speaking, the version is tuneful and pleasing, but the composer sacrifices the accent, and sometimes the sense of the words to his rhythmic periods. An intelligent choirmaster, however, could easily make the necessary corrections without injury to the music. No. 138 is a setting of the Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in B flat, by W. A. C. Cruickshank. It is in four-part harmony, and is written in a quiet, flowing style, eminently churchlike. Purists may object to the consecutive octaves in the sixth bar of page 6, but they are obviously intentional, and the effect is by no means unpleasant.

Album of Twenty Songs. With German and English words. The English version by Gwendolen Gore. Music by Jacques Blumenthal. [Boosey and Co.]

In this volume the popular composer has given us of his very best, the result being a series of delightful examples of the musician's art, especially that difficult branch of it—making "music and sweet poetry agree." Good singers will do well to take note of this Album; they will find in it the wherewithal to gratify moods the most varied and tastes the most diversified; melodies full of charm and expression, accompaniments brilliant and interesting, harmonies rich and refined. The words of the songs, it should be added, are far above average merit, the German originals being from the pens of well-known poets.

Sintomi d'Amore; Allora ed Ora. By Pietro Mascagni.

[E. Ascherberg and Co.]

No indication is afforded as to whether these two songs are recent compositions or early efforts of the still young, but already famous Italian composer; but, at any rate, they are replete with the characteristics, not to say mannerisms, which mark the scores of "Cavalleria Rusticana," "L'amico Fritz," and "I Rantzau." In the "Symptoms of Love" the time measurement is changed constantly from two-four to three-four, and the same remark will apply to "Then and now," which is the more impassioned ditty of the two. Whether much is gained by these rhythmical eccentricities is a moot point; at any rate, these romances could not fail to prove effective if sung with the requisite expression, in other words, abandonment. They have Italian and English words, the former by G. Ferruzzi and V. Valle, and the latter by A. Ramsay.

Part-Song Book (second series). Nos. 639-645.

[Novello, Ewer and Co.]

This publication grows apace, proof being thus afforded of the undiminished popularity of part-singing in this country. A few lines will suffice respecting the present seven numbers. The first is "Bright be thy dreams," an extremely simple and almost hymn-like setting of Thomas Moore's familiar stanza, by Oliver King. The next two are "Three children sliding" and "The light of love," by A. Wellesley Batson, both being light and tuneful little pieces, certain to please the members of elementary singing classes and their hearers. No. 642, "From White's and Wills'," by J. D. Davis, and "Give place, you ladies," by William Stephens, are similar compositions, the words being by early English versifiers. More elaborate is "Spanish Serenade," by Edward Elgar, yet one more setting of Longfellow's familiar verses "Stars of the summer night." It is a piquant and charming piece for voices in four parts, with a sparkling accompaniment, moderately but not aggressively Spanish in character. The last for the present is "Go, happy rose," by F. Iliffe, for which the composer has gone for inspiration to the early English poet, R. Herrick, and not without success. The music is strophic and studiously simple, as well as appropriately English in character, but certainly not wanting in expressiveness.

FOREIGN NOTES.

THE "model" performances at Gotha are over, and the two prize "Einakter" (as the Germans, with their wonderful facility for coining new words, call one-act operas) have been given to the world. There seems to be no doubt that the renderings of all the works were exceptionally fine; which is not surprising, considering that some of the best artists and foremost conductors of Germany were engaged. Cherubini's "Medea," with Fräulein Doxat as a splendid interpreter of the difficult title-rôle, and the redoubtable Felix Mottl as conductor, seems to have greatly interested the many musicians present, though those who swear by "Tristan and Isolde" must have found the dialogue, or rather Franz Lachner's setting of the same as recitative, somewhat tedious and incongruous in such a tragedy. Boieldieu's "Le Petit Chaperon rouge," called "Rothkäppchen" in German, pleased very much; the grace and refinement of the melodious music being greatly to the taste of the audience. Of the two anxiously awaited novelties neither seems to have been an unequivocal success, if we may judge from the somewhat contradictory reports in the German papers. They are as unlike each other as well can be. Umlauft's "Evanthia," with its story of self-sacrificing friendship, purest love, and heroic death, appealing to a very different taste to Forster's "Rose of Pontevedra," which is nothing but the closest possible imitation of the "Cavalleria Rusticana." The story of this "Rose" is one of brutal lust and revenge, seduction and murder—the "hero" a scoundrel of the worst type. The music is in keeping with the plot—realistic, mainly designed for effect, and generally in the style of the "Young Italy" school. Umlauft's score reveals the careful student of Wagner; he uses the Leitmotive and the "endless melody" with much success, his themes are generally noble, expressive, and interesting, and the whole is the work of a musician of unquestionable talent, high ideals, and refined taste. Realistic stories "which we can understand" (to quote one of our musical contemporaries), and ditto music, being the fashion just now, there is no doubt that Forster's work and its charming "hero" will be welcomed by the public with considerably more warmth than "Evanthia," which contains no murder, and not even a drinking song. At the completion of the performances at Gotha, the late Duke Ernest showed his appreciation of the efforts of the artists by decorating almost everybody—composers, conductors, and singers, ladies and gentlemen, with an order, a star, or a cross. Those who were not thus honoured were appointed "Court singers," or received some other title. It is now stated that the costs of the Festival were not defrayed by the Duke at all, but by Freiherr von Hartogensis, of Berlin. He, of course, received for his trouble an extra special cross "of the first class, with the star," whatever that may mean. Happy man!

One of Brahms's least known works, the sombre Funeral Song for four-part chorus and wind instruments, "Nun lasst uns den Leib begraben" (Op. 13), was lately performed at Mannheim by the Society for Classical Church Music. We doubt whether this impressive little work has ever been heard in England.

The good people of Bayreuth are in a state of excitement over an article in the Bavarian Courier, in which it is suggested, nay, demanded, that the monopoly which Bayreuth has so far enjoyed in Wagner's "Parsifal" be done away with, and the work given to the world for performance at whatever theatres may feel inclined to battle with the terrible difficulties of the score. The paper in question states that "Parsifal" belonged to the late unfortunate King Ludwig II. and need not, therefore, be reserved any longer for the private ends of Madame Cosima Wagner; whereas Herr Richard Pohl some time ago declared in an open letter that "Parsifal" was intended by its author to be a monopoly for his Bayreuth Theatre. It goes without saying that it would be a terrible blow to the little Franconian town if the above suggestion were carried out. All who have ever been under the indescribable spell of a performance of this veritable "Wunderwerk" at Wagner's Theatre will hope that the Courier may suggest and demand in vain.

Two fine performances of Liszt's monumental "Faust" Symphony were lately given, with the greatest success, at two of the Loh Concerts, Sondershausen, while another Concert was entirely devoted to Brahms. Professor Schroeder is the energetic Conductor at this exceedingly musical little town.

We hear sometimes of a dishonest impresario who, during a successful season, decamps with the receipts without paying the members of his troupe. In Köben, a little place in Silesia, the order of things has been reversed—that is to say, during the absence of the director of a company in a neighbouring town, where he had gone to engage a room for some intended performances, the members disappeared with the well-filled cash box.

The band of the sixth batallion of German Engineers, garrisoned at Neisse, in Silesia, recently gave an interesting Concert to illustrate the development of military music from 1292-1892. Some thirty marches, fanfares, &c., were performed, amongst them an "English War March from Wales" (to quote the programme), said to date from the end of the thirteenth century.

Dr. Carl Reinecke, while taking the waters at Ems during last month, completed a Festival Overture, which he had been requested to write in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the Founding of the Leipzig Gewandhaus Concerts, of which he has been the conductor since 1860. The new work will be performed at the first of the ensuing winter's series of Concerts.

The Director of the Vienna Conservatoire of Music and first Conductor of the Imperial Court Orchestra, Herr Hellmesberger, sen., will shortly retire from his post, and Dr. Hans Richter, at present second Conductor, will take his place at the head of the orchestra. Great interest is taken in the Austrian capital as to the question of the much-coveted directorship of the Conservatoire.

There have also been frequent rumours of Herr Jahn's retirement from the post of first Conductor of the Imperial Opera, but it seems that, after all, they were unfounded.

The famous German actor, Ernst Possart, has been appointed director of the Munich Court Theatre.

Mozart's juvenile opera, "La finta giardiniera," has been "newly arranged," both as regards the libretto and the music, by Herren Kalbeck and Fuchs, and will shortly be performed at Vienna, after which Berlin, Hamburg, and Munich will follow suit. The work, though about 120 years old, will no doubt give as much pleasure to music-lovers as did the same master's first operetta, "Bastien and Bastienne," when it was revived some time since.

Cornelius's delightful "Barber of Bagdad" is gradually making the rounds of the German opera houses, and has now been produced at Weimar, Munich, Hamburg, Cologne, Leipzig, Coburg, Dresden, Bonn, Berlin, Dessau, Ballenstedt, Bernburg, Magdeburg, and Schwerin. It has also been given at Vienna, Prague, Budapest, New York, and London.

A new secular Oratorio, or, as we would call it, cantata, "Walther von der Vogelweide," by the Tyrolese composer, Josef Pembaur, was produced at Innsbruck on July 18 and met with great success. The part of the famous Minnesänger, whose name is known to all Wagner lovers, if only because he is one of the characters in "Tannhäuser," and is mentioned by Walther and praised by Sachs in "Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg," was splendidly sung by the tenor, Alfred Ritterhaus.

At the famous Gürzenich Concerts of Cologne several novelties of some importance were produced during the last season—e.g., two symphonic poems, "Wanderungen," by B. Scholz, and "Frühlingswogen," by Philip Scharwenka, and a "Fantastic" Symphony, by Iwan Knorr.

To commemorate Weber's residence in Breslau, where he was conductor at the Theatre, a stone tablet was, many years ago, affixed to the house in which he lived. It bore the inscription: "In this house Carl Maria von Weber lived in the year 1805." The house in question was lately pulled down, and a new building, which is used as a school, erected on its site. The tablet on the original house has been transferred to the new one, and a second one affixed below it which states that "the above tablet was found on the quondam house, Taschenstrasse 31, and transferred unaltered to the new building."

The Mozart Society at Darmstadt celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its foundation in June last.

The male-voice choir "Concordia," at Eupen, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its foundation on July 24. Some fifty German, Belgian, and Dutch Choral Societies took part in the musical Festival arranged for the occasion.

Herr Panzner, of the Bremen Stadt-Theater, has been appointed Conductor at the Leipzig Stadt-Theater, in place of Herr Paur, who is going to Boston (U.S.A.) to replace Herr Nikisch as Conductor of the Symphony Orchestra.

A five-act opera, "Lichtenstein," by Ferdinand Schilling, was lately produced at Freiburg, in Baden, and enthusiastically received. The music is said to be full of charming melody of a popular kind, and the orchestration is pronounced highly effective. The story is one which appeals to every South German, as it is taken from Wilhelm Hauff's famous novel "Lichtenstein," which deals in a most fascinating manner with the romantic history of Duke Ulerich of Würtemberg (1487-1550). It seems strange that composers have not more frequently gone to Hauff's masterpiece for the plot of a "Grand Romantic Opera." Dr. Hugo Riemann's excellent "Opern Handbuch" names only two—viz., N. Stössel (1836) and Lindpaintner (1846).

A new opera, entitled "The Smith of Gretna Green," was performed for the first time at the Kroll Theatre, Berlin, on July 29, but met with but little success. The composer's name is J. Doebber, and the libretto is by the novelist and poet, Felix Dahn.

The well-known Scandinavian composer, Herr Johann Svendsen, who is living at Copenhagen, paid a visit lately to his native town, Christiania, to conduct three Orchestral Concerts. He was received with the greatest enthusiasm by his compatriots, who had not seen him for six years.

The pupils of the Sondershausen Conservatoire gave a public performance of Mozart's "Entführung aus dem Serail," on July 28. It was conducted by a student, Herr Adolf Grabofsky, who secured a capital rendering of the delightful work.

A new opera, "Saint Joix," by Hans Sommer, the highly gifted composer of "Loreley," one of the most beautiful operas written during the last decade, will be performed for the first time at the Munich Court Theatre during next season. Those who have seen the score of "Loreley" will look forward to the new work with the greatest interest. The famous bass, Eugen Gura, will sing the title-rôle.

During a Wagner Cycle to be given at the Dresden Court Theatre between the 29th ult. and the 23rd inst., "Tannhäuser" will be given both in the original and the so-called Paris versions. An excellent opportunity for making comparisons between them!

Wagner's only son, Siegfried, conducted, on the 5th ult., a performance given at Bayreuth by the pupils of the "Preparatory School for the Bühnenfestspiele," in the Royal Opera House (which must not be confounded with the famous Festspielhaus). The programme consisted of Weber's "Freischütz," the Overture to "Rienzi," and an air from the same work. It is said that Herr Siegfried displayed unmistakable gifts for conducting. From a letter which he wrote to a M. Marcel Hutin, in Paris, it appears that for some time past he has been assiduously studying music under Herren Humperdinck and Kniese, and that his ambition is to conduct all his father's masterpieces at the Festspielhaus. It is not unlikely that Herr Wagner may make a beginning next year with "Lohengrin."

The novelties to be produced at the Paris Opéra Comique during the forthcoming season, will be César Cui's "Flibustier," Hess's one-act "Le Dîner de Pierrot," Banès's "Madame Rose," and Bruneau's "l'Attaque du moulin." Those who are of opinion that M. Bruneau's first opera, "Le Rêve," in spite of its many crudities and fearful progressions, is one of the most poetical and fascinating works of recent years will, no doubt, look forward to his "Attack on the Mill" with great curiosity and interest.

The baritone J. N. Beck, sometime one of the finest dramatic singers of Germany, and from 1853 till 1885 the pride of the Vienna opera, has been confined in a lunatic asylum.

A monument which has been erected to Franz Liszt in his native town of Oedenburg, in Hungaria, will be unveiled on the 3rd inst.

The Frankfort-on-Main Mozart prize for the best String Quartet has this year been awarded to Herr O. Urbach, a pupil of Professor Felix Draeseke.

A new two-act opera, "Una Malia," by Signor Frontini, was produced, for the first time, at the Brunetti Theatre, Bologna, some time ago, but failed completely.

Verdi is at present staying at the Italian Spa, Montecatini, and it is reported that he is hard at work on yet another opera. When the famous dramatic soprano, Signora Gemma Bellincioni, visited him lately, he expressed the hope that she would create the principal part in the new work, and added "your youth will supply what my old age lacks." Apropos of his eightieth birthday, which will be celebrated on October 9 next, it is proposed to present the author of "Falstaff" with an album containing the autograph felicitations of all the most celebrated living musicians of the whole world. It will be a delightful task for someone to draw a distinction between the musicians who do not belong to the "most celebrated" and those who are generally considered, or who consider themselves entitled to be included in that category.

The performances of Bohemian Opera in Berlin have come to an abrupt end through the director of the Company, Herr Baumann, lacking the necessary funds to carry on the season. In fact, on the very day for which the first performance was fixed, the members of the troupe learned with dismay that their worthy chief had already mortgaged his anticipated receipts!

Five of the best Belgian choral societies will shortly give a Concert at the Trocadéro, Paris. There will be about seven hundred voices in all, and M. Alexis Collinet, of Liège, will be the Conductor. The profits will be given to a charity.

M. Victorin Joncières has just completed a new grand opera, entitled "Lancelot," which he will shortly offer to the directors of the Paris Grand Opéra.

A monument to Vieuxtemps is to be erected at Liège, his native place, and various musical festivals are being arranged in different Belgian towns to contribute towards the expense.

It is now definitely stated that Wagner's "Tristan und Isolde" will be produced at the Théâtre de la Monnaie, Brussels, during next season. A newly engaged tenor, M. Cossira, will be the Tristan. Gounod's "Sapho," with Mdlle. Armand in the title-rôle, will also be given.

A new opera, "Gilles de Retz," by P. Emile Ladmirault, was lately produced, with much success, at Nantes.

The rebuilding of the Paris Opéra Comique is to be commenced very shortly. The awards in the recent competition for the best design for the new building have just been made public, the first prize of 10,000 francs having been given to M. Vernier, whose plans will therefore be executed.

It is reported that Signor Sonzogno will give a series of performances of Italian opera at the Paris Grand Opéra, during which the works of Mascagni, Leoncavallo, Puccini, &c., will be presented to the Parisians who took such little interest in the very "Cavalleria" which has taken all the rest of the world by storm. We shall, no doubt, hear more of the project by and bye.

M. Alexandre Guilmant is going to America to represent the French School of organ playing at the World's Fair and to give a series of Recitals in various towns in the States. A few weeks ago he opened a grand new organ in the Saint Vincent Church, San Sebastian, Spain.

Milan will be plentifully supplied with opera during the coming winter season. The La Scala Theatre will produce Rubinstein's "Maccabäer," Puccini's "Manon Lescaut," Franchetti's "Fior d'Alpe," Wagner's "Walküre," and two grand ballets. Signor Sonzogno, the publisher of Mascagni's works, has taken the Dal Verme Theatre, and will give several important novelties—inter aliâ, Leoncavallo's "I Medici," Maiani's "Cavalieri d'Amore," Coop's "Teresa Raquin," and two new works, as yet unnamed, by Signori Giordano and Coronaro. Finally, another publisher, Signor de Marchi, will, at the Alhambra Theatre, mount Gastaldon's "Pater," Frontini's "Una malia," and two other works, as yet nameless, by Signori Marescotti and Berutti. This should be enough to satisfy even the Milanese.

Not satisfied with his Milan season, Signor Sonzogno will, on December 1, open a grand operatic campaign at Naples, the répertoire being made up of Berlioz's "Damnation de Faust," Massenet's "Manon," Saint-Saëns's "Samson et Dalila," Bizet's "La jolie fille de Perth," Mascagni's "I Rantzau" and "Ratcliff," Leoncavallo's "I Medici," and other works by the irrepressible "Young Italians." New operas are produced in such astonishing quantities in Italy that it is almost impossible to keep a record of them. Fifty-two of them were performed between January 1 and July 31 last!

During the Italian opera season at Buenos Ayres, Verdi's "Falstaff" was produced with the greatest success. It was also given at Rio de Janeiro with a similar result. London has thus been forestalled in the production of a recognised masterpiece by South America! It seems incredible.

Maëstro Franchetti, the composer of "Asraël" and "Cristoforo Colombo," has, at the request of Signor Sonzogno, written another opera, in three acts, entitled "Fior d'Alpe" (Flower of the Alps), the libretto of which is by Leo Castelnuovo.

A new opera, "Georges Dandin," by Carlo Sebastiani, was performed for the first time at the Teatro Bellini, Naples, some time ago, and met with considerable success, which was not, however, lasting enough to save the season from having to be closed much sooner than was anticipated.

The projected visit of the La Scala Orchestra to the United States has been abandoned. A wise resolution!

M. Louis Barwolf, one of the most popular composers of Brussels, has perpetrated a work of a distinctly novel type. This is nothing less than a Mass which is founded completely on themes from Wagner's "Lohengrin"! The Kyrie is built on the Grail themes, the Gloria on the chorus in D from the second act, with solos taken from the parts of the King and the Herald; the Credo on the lovely Processional March in E flat in the fourth scene of Act II. and a fragment from the ensemble preceding the duel in Act I. Lohengrin's "Farewell" is drawn upon for the Sanctus and Benedictus, and a fragment of the Elsa theme and the bridal chorus in Act III. supply the material for the Agnus Dei and Dona nobis pacem. The result, according to the correspondent of Le Ménéstrel, is "astonishing." "Of that there is no manner of doubt, no possible doubt whatever," as Mr. Gilbert sings.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE WRONG BAR IN BEETHOVEN'S SYMPHONY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

SIR,—It is easy for anybody now to come forward and say the "discovery" is not new, but then how is it that nobody mentioned the matter before I did? It is the old story—no discovery, however trifling, can be made without declarations from other quarters that it was known before. If Mr. Corder wishes to deprive me of the merit in this little affair—at the bottom of which is a principle of more importance than is apparent at first—I am not angry. Like in numerous cases of the same class, I worked in the interest of the composer for the love of the thing, and not for my own benefit. I fear that the Daily Telegraph made a mistake in stating that I suggest an altering of the wind parts, but even then it would only result in the same view taken by the different arrangers of the Symphony for other instruments, including Hummel (in his arrangement for pianoforte, flute, violin, and violoncello), and my pianoforte master, F. Kalkbrenner: they all omitted the chord of D entirely, and rendered the whole bar in A, proving thus that the bar as it still exists in the full score is wrong. I should say that Hummel and Kalkbrenner were at least as good musicians as those who oppose my statement.

Mr. Corder has not given all the notes of the score, which makes a considerable difference, considering that the original entire range of the chord of D with the chord of A disfigures the combination still more. I append here the bar with all its notes excepting the drums, and also two ways of solving the question. I should have preferred giving all the lines of the full score, but this would encroach obviously too much on your space.

109th bar, second part of first movement, Beethoven's Symphony (No. 7) in A.

Bar as it is—

There are two ways of making the bar right, either 1 or 2:—

In this manner it would agree with the corresponding bar of the first part.

It often happened that wrong notes and entire wrong passages were ascribed to Beethoven's intention, while really they originated through his carelessness and through the copyist or engraver, who had trouble to decipher his writing. I quote here what I wrote lately to Mr. J. Bennett: "I heard in Paris for years in the Société des Concerts (Conservatoire) two bars too many in the Scherzo of the C minor Symphony; also several bars missing in the viola part of the 'Pastoral.' In one of the last quartets by the same master a number of bars were misplaced in the second violin part by the copyist or engraver. All the greatest violinists played the quartet in that state. Some years ago those mistakes were rectified."

In conclusion, I beg to add that as regards the subject of my communication it would be a charitable act for the benefit of those having musical ears to alter it.

E. Silas.

P.S.—Since I forwarded the above to you I have received from Dr. J. Joachim, to whom I wrote about the matter, the following reply:—

Dear Mr. Silas,—I have looked at the manuscript of the Seventh Symphony (in the possession of Mr. Ernst Mendelssohn Bartholdy) and it is clearly written down in it, at the bar you mention, as it is printed! There can be no doubt that it is a lapsus calami of the author, and to my mind the bar ought to be corrected like this in the second violin, tenor, and bass—for the wind instruments are in accordance with the theme in the first part.

I suppose that is also what you mean. With kind regards.—Yours very sincerely, Joseph Joachim.

MUSIC IN A FRENCH CATHEDRAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

Sir,—May I offer a word or two of correction and suggestion?

In his most interesting article "W. E. D." writes as to the Breviary Hymns:—"The removal of these from the English Prayer Book by the Reformers of the sixteenth century was one of those errors which can now never be repaired." Since "H. A. W." has directed attention to that great but too much neglected work, the "Hymnal Noted," your readers may think that this conclusion is hardly justified; but students of that book are also aware that the Reformers of the sixteenth century, so far from "removing" the old hymns from the English Prayer Book, in which they never had a place, were most desirous to insert them had translations been procurable.

A curious mistake is made by "H. A. W." He writes that in our Cathedrals "an anthem is always sung in the place of the Office Hymn." An anthem is usually sung in Cathedrals at the point where "the anthem" (whatever that may mean) is ordered to be sung, and not "in the place of the Office Hymn." As to giving a meaning to those words, we may reasonably suppose, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, that had Cranmer and his fellow-helpers found it possible to retain the hymns they would have inserted them in positions similar to those which they formerly occupied. Our Morning Prayer, or Mattins, is compiled from the old Mattins and Lauds; our Evening Prayer, or Evensong, from Vespers and Compline. At Mattins the hymn occurred between Venite and the succeeding Psalms; at the other offices, between the reading of Scripture and the Canticles, Benedictus, Magnificat, and Nunc dimittis respectively. One of these positions, then, and not the position assigned to the anthem, should be regarded as "the place of the Office Hymn," and whatever strict law may say, there is traditional usage among us to justify the revived use of the hymn in such position. It was a common custom—e.g., in country churches down to the present generation, to sing a selection from Brady and Tate between the second lesson and the succeeding Canticle. I found the practice still prevailing in 1868, at Laxton, in Northamptonshire. Probably this traditional usage originated at a time when the memory of the Office Hymn in a similar position, being fresh in men's minds, suggested a suitable place for the introduction of metrical singing. In our Cathedrals, since the Reformation, metrical singing has been unknown, but there an Organ Voluntary commonly occupied the same position. Not so directly to the point is the custom, once universal, still by no means obsolete, of interrupting the Communion Service by metrical singing between the Creed and the Sermon, while a Bishop is never consecrated at St. Paul's or the Abbey without two unauthorised anthems being interpolated in the same service.

Were the Venite once more separated from the other Psalms by a hymn intervening, its proper character, in that place, as a Canticle, would again be recognised. This has been lost sight of since the Restoration. The late Sir F. Ouseley told me that down to the Great Rebellion no "Morning Service" was composed without the Venite being set as fully as the other Canticles. Will this wonderful century of restoration yet witness the restoration of this Canticle to its former dignity?—Yours faithfully, Pensax Vicarage, Tenbury, August 17, 1893. C. Thompson.

P.S.—Sir F. Ouseley included the Venite in at least one of his own Services, a MS. setting for eight voices unaccompanied. The Venite, however, is only in seven real parts, a Gregorian Tone in octaves forming a Canto fermo in every verse of that number. C. T.

THE SONG OF THE YELLOW-HAMMER.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

Sir,—If it be not too late, permit me to refer to certain remarks contained in the admirable Beethoven number published in December. At page 15, where Sir George Grove is dealing with the birds in the Pastoral Symphony, more especially with the Yellow-Hammer, he says: "In this country the bird is often known by the fancied pronunciation of his notes, thus—

A little bit of bread and no cheese."

For many years a resident in the country, I have taken much interest in bird-notes, and have recorded several; and my experience with regard to the recitative of the Yellow-Hammer is, that the last note is nearly always less than a semitone below the reciting note; but rarely it rises above it to about the same degree. Dominant or octave above I have never heard; and this holds good for localities as widely apart as Cornwall, Sussex, Yorkshire, Derbyshire, and Galloway.

The correct notation should be this—if only we had some sign instead of the ♮ to indicate the quarter-tone.

I think, also, it is patent to all that the vowel-sound of "cheese" more exactly fits the minute interval I describe than it would fit any other.

There is certainly no ground whatever for believing that the Buntings sing in the arpeggio phrase quoted by Schindler. Blackbirds, as everyone readily admits, are unusually melodious; but perhaps not everyone has had the opportunity of recording the subjoined phrase, which I recently heard trilled out repeatedly and evidently con amore, as if it were a Leitmotif of peculiar meaning and depth—

I am, yours, &c.,

F. R. C.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 Notices of concerts, and other information supplied by our friends in the country, must be forwarded as early as possible after the occurrence; otherwise they cannot be inserted. Our correspondents must specifically denote the date of each concert, for without such date no notice can be taken of the performance.

Our correspondents will oblige by writing all names as clearly as possible, as we cannot be responsible for any mistakes that may occur.

Correspondents are informed that their names and addresses must accompany all communications.

We cannot undertake to return offered contributions; the authors, therefore, will do well to retain copies.

Notice is sent to all subscribers whose payment (in advance) is exhausted. The paper will be discontinued where the Subscription is not renewed. We again remind those who are disappointed in obtaining back numbers that, although the music is always kept in stock, only a sufficient quantity of the rest of the paper is printed to supply the current sale.

J. E. L.—We do not know of such an agency. Apply to the College of Organists, Bloomsbury.

LEWIS E. G. COLLINS.—You have no legitimate ground for complaint—certainly not against the College. If the bulk of the members stay away from a meeting, it is clear they have no wish to vote.

W. A. M. SHIPLEY.—The works you name can all be had of Novello, Ewer and Co.

W. EVANS, OSWESTRY.—We know no modern work dealing with the whole subject, which is an enormous one. See an exhaustive and classified list of works relating to Worship Music at the end of J. S. Curwen's "Studies in Worship Music" (first series). A new work on the subject, by Mr. R. C. Hope, is announced by Mr. Eliot Stock.

BRIEF SUMMARY OF COUNTRY NEWS.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for any opinions expressed in this summary, as all the notices are either collated from the local papers or supplied to us by correspondents.

BANGOR.—A Choral Festival will be held in the Cathedral on the 25th inst., at which a thousand voices will take part. A new Welsh anthem by the Cathedral Organist (Mr. T. Westlake Morgan) will be sung, under the composer's bâton, and the organ accompaniment, played by Mr. Llewelyn Jones, will be supplemented by trumpets, trombones, and drums.——The Penrhyn-Dinorwic Male Voice Choir (Conductor, Mr. Edward Broome) has left for Chicago to compete at the World's Fair Eisteddfod.——Mr. Westlake Morgan has given Organ Recitals at the Cathedral and at Christ Church, Llanfairfechan. He has resigned his connection with the Church Choir Guild.

CHIGWELL.—Speech Day proceedings at the Grammar School, on the 1st ult., included a Concert by the choir, under the direction of Mr. Henry Riding, the music-master. Part-songs, solos, instrumental trios, and a new setting of Conan Doyle's "Song of the Bow," by Mr. Riding, formed the programme, which was well carried out.

DOVER.—The usual Summer Concert took place at the College on July 31, before a large audience, in the Great Hall. The dramatic Cantata Penelope, by B. W. Horner, proved a very bright and interesting work, and was rendered with vigour and precision by the College Musical Society, supported by an efficient orchestra and the organ. The solos were carefully sung by Miss E. Finnis, Messrs. Thomas and Wynne. Mr. Barclay acted as leader, Mr. J. H. Stevens as Organist, Mr. Clark as pianist. The Rev. A. H. Stevens conducted, as usual.

FENNY STRATFORD.—A most successful Concert, on behalf of the Victoria Relief Fund, was given in the Town Hall on July 27. The soloists were Miss Downes, Miss Florence Bourne, Mrs. Bailey, and Mr. Salmon. The Concert opened with Handel's Dead March in Saul, followed by a chorus, "Crossing the Bar," by Woodward (in memoriam of the officers and men of H.M.S. Victoria). The programme comprised songs, glees, &c. Mr. W. J. Levi conducted.

FOLKESTONE.—The Centenary of Mr. Husband's "Sunday Afternoons for the People" took place at St. Michael's, not, as inadvertently stated in our last issue, at the Parish Church.

GREAT BERKHAMPSTEAD, HERTS.—The greater part of Mendelssohn's 95*th Psalm* ("Come let us sing") was successfully given by the boys of Berkhampstead School Choral Society, assisted in the choruses by some of the masters, at their Founder's Day Service on the 1st ult. The canon "For the Lord is a mighty God" and the fugal chorus "For His is the sea" especially were very creditably sung, and reflected great praise upon the youthful chorus of seventy voices for their painstaking work. The Rev. C. J. Langley presided at the organ and gave great assistance by his efficient accompaniment, while Mr. J. T. Bavin, the school music-master, conducted.

HALIFAX.—A grand Concert in aid of the sufferers from the Thornhill Colliery Disaster was held in the New Public Hall, on July 31. The following artists generously volunteered their services: Miss Alma Hallowen, Madame Cragg, Messrs. Buckland, Benn, Mundy, Barnes, Rickard, and Hanson. Messrs. Eckersley, Whitaker, and Gaukroger were efficient accompanists. The room was well filled with a most appreciative audience, nearly £50 being realised for the fund.

HITCHIN.—The organ of the Parish Church, which had been for some time closed for cleaning and completion, was re-opened on July 27, when a Recital was given by Dr. Warwick Jordan, of Lewisham. The instrument is a fine one of some fifty stops, by Messrs. Walker and Sons.

NORWICH.—A select company assembled at Messrs. Norman Brothers and Beard's Organ Factory, on July 29, to hear the new organ for Perth, Western Australia. Ten pieces by various composers were performed by Mr. W. S. Hoyte in masterly style.

PLYMOUTH.—The fifth annual competition in connection with the Corporation Concerts will be held at the Guildhall on December 7 and 8, under the superintendence of Mr. John Hele, Borough Organist. Dr. Bridge, of Westminster, will be Chairman, and the following gentlemen will act as visitors and committee of reference:—The Mayor, Captain J. Inskip, Alderman J. Shelly, and Mr. F. B. Westlake. For the organ, the first prize consists of a complete set of Bach's works, presented by the Borough Organist, who also gives Beethoven's String Quartets as first prize for the violin. For the pianoforte and for singing, gold medals (value £10 10s.) are offered by the Mayor and by Mr. F. B. Westlake, and in each of the four departments mentioned there are bronze and silver medals and certificates. Three-fifths of the marks entitle to "pass" and four-fifths to "honours" certificates. Winners of gold medals may have instead a "Corporation Scholarship," entitling them to twelve months' free tuition under an efficient teacher in the neighbourhood chosen by themselves, subject to Mr Hele's approval. They will be expected to perform at two Corporation Concerts during the winter months, and all prize winners will perform at the Concert at which their prize is presented.

WINGHAM.—An Organ Recital was given in the Parish Church on Monday, the 7th ult., by Mr. D. A. Fox. The programme included Prelude and Fugue in E minor (Bach), Grand Chœur (Salomé), Allegro, Fourth Concerto (Handel), Cantilene (Salomé), and other pieces.

ORGAN APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. H. G. Spackman, Organist and Choirmaster to Holy Trinity Church, Gisborne, New Zealand.—Mr. Charles Small, Organist and Director of the Choir to St. Mark's Church, Reigate.—Mr. Matthew Kingston, to the Corporation, Bournemouth.—Mr. Charles Taylor, to the Congregational Church, Eccles.

CHOIR APPOINTMENT.—Mr. Norman Stirling (Principal Bass), to Holy Trinity, Salford.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S New and Standard Publications.

ORGAN MUSIC. PEDAL OBBLIGATO.

HANDEL'S CHORUSES. Arranged from the most favourite Oratorios and Anthems. By W. T. BEST. In Thirty-six Books. 1s. to 2s. each net.

ORGAN COMPOSITIONS—ANCIENT AND MODERN (containing the famous Andante and Allegro by F. E. BACHE). By W. T. BEST. Twelve Books. 1s. each net.

CLASSICAL EXTRACTS. By GEO. COOPER. Seven Books. 1s. 6d. each net.

CLASSICAL MOVEMENTS. By ALFRED REDHEAD. Twelve Books. 1s. each net.

CELEBRATED MARCHES. Arranged by G. R. GRIFFITHS. Two Books. 1s. 6d. each net.

Recently Published.

FUNERAL MARCH (GRIEG). By E. H. LEMARE. 1s. 6d. net.

ORGAN RECITAL SERIES. No. 1, 2s. net; No. 2, 2s. 6d. net.

THE ORGANIST'S LIBRARY. By Dr. W. J. WESTBROOK. Six Books 2s. each net.

Complete Lists of Organ Publications free on application.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS—Just Published.

TWELVE ORIGINAL CAROLS. Words by MAY GILLINGTON.

1.	All in the heart of the winter tide	Howard Talbot	2d.
2.	An Angel came to Bethlehem	A. C. Mackenzie	2d.
3.	Bring forth a carol for Christmas time	W. J. Westbrook	2d.
4.	Dark was the night	Arthur E. Godfrey	2d.
5.	Who is this that comes to Zion?	George C. Martin	2d.
6.	The Morning Stars	Frank L. Moir	2d
7.	The nights are so cold	Alfred J. Eyre	2d.
8.	Oh, rich and poor	Howard Talbot	2d.
9.	Slumber Song	Arthur E. Godfrey	2d.
10.	Sun, Moon, and Stars	Lawrence Kellie	2d.
11.	When Christ the Lord	Arthur E. Godfrey	2d.
12.	In the wintry darkness (for Children)	Arthur E. Godfrey	2d.

Complete, in paper covers, 1s. net; cloth, 2s. net. Words only, complete, 2d.

NEW WORKS.

HOW TO ACCOMPANY: A Guide to Artistic Accompaniment. By ANNIE GLEN. Paper cover, 4s. net; cloth, 5s. net.

CHURCH AND CATHEDRAL CHORISTERS' SINGING METHOD. Dr. HAYDN KEETON. Paper cover, 2s. net; cloth, 3s. net.

TONIC SOL-FA CLASS SINGING METHOD. CHAS. WEBB. Limp cloth, 2s. net.

PROGRESSIVE EXERCISES IN SIGHT SINGING. By W. A. THOMAS. Used by the Guildhall School of Music. 1s. net.

CIRO PINSUTI'S DAILY VOCAL EXERCISES. 28th Edition. 1s 6d. net. The Exercises in this work are set down in every key, so that the Student will not have the trouble of transposing.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S LIST of GLEES, &c., containing a choice Selection, by the most eminent Composers, of Two and Three-part Songs for equal voices and Songs for Classes in unison; many numbers in Tonic Sol-fa Notation

6, NEW BURLINGTON ST., LONDON, W.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO, EWER & CO.

WAREING, HERBERT W.—Six Pieces for the Violin. With Pianoforte Accompaniment:—

		s.	d.
No. 1.	May-Day Festival	2	0
„ 2.	At Killee	2	0
„ 3.	Romance	1	6
„ 4.	Pastoral Dance	2	0
„ 5.	Legende	1	6
„ 6.	Saltarello	2	0

TAYLOR, FRANKLIN.—Progressive Studies for the Pianoforte. Edited, arranged in groups, and the fingering revised and supplemented:—

		s.	d.
Book 41.	Repetition and Tremolo (Part II.)	1	0
„ 42.	Repetition and Tremolo (Part III.)	1	0
„ 43.	Part-Playing (Part I.)	1	0
„ 44.	Part-Playing (Part II.)	1	0

STANFORD, C. VILLIERS.—"East to West." An Ode. 1st Violin, 1s; 2nd Violin, 1s.; Viola, 1s.; Violoncello and Bass, 1s.

MOODY, MARIE.—Adagio and Allegretto in D major. For String Quartet. Score, paper cover, 4s.

—— Allegro Moderato in D minor. For String Quartet. Score, paper cover, 4s.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW. No. 15. Contains the following Music in both notations:—"The Carnovale" (Rossini). Arranged as a Two-part Song. Exercises in Time and Tune Combined. By W. G. McNaught. 1½d.

PARRY, C. HUBERT H.—"Job." An Oratorio. Books of Words. 6d.

WEST, JOHN E.—"Seed-time and Harvest." A Sacred Cantata. Book of Words with Music to the Hymns. 2d.

AGUTTER, B.—(in E flat major). Missa de Sancto Andreâ. A short and easy Service for the Holy Eucharist (including the Kyrie Proper, Benedictus, and Agnus Dei), according to the Use of the Church of England. 1s.

CAMPBELL, JOHN E.—Benedicite, omnia Opera (with a Single Chant for Venite). 2d.

ELLIOTT, ALFRED J.—Preces and Responses (First set). 2d.

KEETON, HAYDN.—(in A). Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, for Parish Choirs. 4d.

NAYLOR, CHARLES L.—(in D). The Office for the Holy Communion (including Benedictus and Agnus Dei), for Parochial and General Use. (No. 27. Short Settings of the Office for the Holy Communion, edited by George C. Martin.) 1s.

BATSON, A. WELLESLEY.—"O God, Who hast prepared." Anthem for General Use. (No. 430. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 3d.

—— "Make me a clean heart." Anthem. For general use. (No. 431. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 3d.

—— "They that sow in tears." Anthem. For general use. (No. 432. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 3d.

CROSBIE, H. A.—"O give thanks." Anthem. Suitable for Harvest. 6d. Tonic Sol-fa, 3d.

DUFFELL, J.—"The strain upraise." Full Anthem. 4d.

ROBERTS, J. VARLEY.—"Shew me Thy ways, O Lord." Anthem. For general use. (No. 49. Novello's Short Anthems.) 3d.

BARNBY, JOSEPH.—"O perfect love." Hymn. For Holy Matrimony. Arranged from the Anthem written for the marriage of H.R.H. Princess Louise of Wales with the Duke of Fife, K.T. 1½d.

BOYSE, ARTHUR.—Fifteen Chants. 2d.

HOYTE, W. S.—Introit or Antiphon, "I am the living bread." As sung at All Saints', Margaret Street, at High Celebration on the Great Festivals. 3d.

METCALFE, JOHN A.—"Oh! the joy, the joy of harvest." New Harvest Hymn. Words by Andrew P. Mitchell, M.A. 1d.

MONK, M. J.—"Holy Father, give Thy blessing." Processional Hymn for the Consecration of St. Mary's Church, Horbury Junction. Words by Rev. Canon Sharp. 1d.

THE ORPHEUS:—

No. 256.	It was a lover	Charles Wood		3d.
„ 258.	Upward	L. Spohr		3d.
„ 259.	Restless love	„		3d.
„ 260.	Know ye the land?	„		3d.
„ 261.	Spring's Oracle	„		4d.
„ 262.	Drinking Song	„		3d.
„ 263.	Good-night	„		3d.

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

CORNWALL, JOHN.—"O were my love a lilac fair." A Four-part Song. The words written by Robert Burns. 4d.

MENDELSSOHN.—"I would that my love." (No. 34. Novello's Octavo Edition of Two-part Songs for Female Voices.) 2d.

ROGERS, ROLAND.—"Rydal Summer Vacation Song." 6d.

STANFORD, C. VILLIERS.—"The flag of Union." The poem written by Alfred Austin, for the Irish Unionist Alliance. 3d.

WEST, JOHN E.—"Stars of the summer night." Trio. For Female Voices. (No. 288. Novello's Octavo Edition of Trios, Quartets, &c., for Female Voices.) 3d.

WILLIAMS, C. LEE.—A Choral Song. Words written by the Rev. Canon Bell. 4d.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS.—Edited by W. G. McNaught. Book XVI. Six Unaccompanied Trios for S.S.A. By Various Composers. Price (Music in both Notations) 6d.; Tonic Sol-fa, 3d.; or, singly:—

No. 86.	Sounds of evening	Franz Abt	1½d.
„ 87.	A winter song	Ferris Tozer	1d.
„ 88.	Stars	H. Elliot Button	1d.
„ 89.	A Canadian boat song	A. H. Ashworth	1½d.
„ 90.	The fairy barque	A. Moffatt	1½d.
„ 91.	To blossoms	G. A. Macfarren	1½d.

MARIGOLD, MARGUERITE.—"Ah, like a tender flower thou art." Song. The Words translated from Heine by C. M. Aikman. 2s.

STANFORD, C. VILLIERS.—"The March of the Maguire" (from "Irish Songs and Ballads"). Song. The Words by Alfred Perceval Graves. 2s.

—— "Sweet Isle" (from "Irish Songs and Ballads"). Song. The Words by Alfred Perceval Graves. 2s.

FEARNLEY, J.—"Wanderer's Night-Song" ("Wanderer's Nachtlied"). Translation from Goethe by Longfellow. No. 1, in D flat; No. 2, in E flat. 2s. each.

CHAMBERLAYNE, E. A.—Sonata in E flat, No. 2. For the Pianoforte. Op. 16, No. 2. 3s.

GLUCK.—Gavottes from "Paride ed Elena" and "Don Juan." Arranged for Pianoforte, Violin, and Violoncello, by Maude S. Verney. 3s.

ORIGINAL COMPOSITIONS for the ORGAN.—

			s.	d.
No. 184.	Minuet	Hamilton Clarke	1	0
„ 185.	Old Easter Melody ("O filii et filiæ"), with Variations	John E. West	1	6
„ 187.	Six Pieces (Nos. 1, 2)	Alfred Redhead	1	6
„ 188.	Six Pieces (Nos. 3, 4)	„	1	0
„ 189.	Six Pieces (Nos. 5, 6)	„	1	6

CALKIN, GEORGE.—Soft Voluntaries for the Organ. Book XVI. 2s. 6d.

GLUCK.—"In Elysium" ("Orphée"). Arranged for the Organ by E. J. Bellerby. (No. 13. Organ Arrangements, edited by George C. Martin.) 1s.

GOUNOD.—"Judex" ("Mors et Vita"). Arranged for the Organ by John E. West. (No. 14. Organ Arrangements, edited by George C. Martin.) 1s.

NOVELLO'S PUBLICATIONS in the TONIC SOL-FA NOTATION. Translated by W. G. McNaught.

No. 791.	A Chant Service for the Te Deum in F	Boyton Smith	1½d.
„ 797.	Serenade	Franz Schubert	2d.
„ 798.	Christmas	G. A. Macfarren	1½d.
„ 801.	The twilight star	J. Barnby	1d.

PEARSON, W. W.—"Songs for the little Ones." 6d.

MISS NELLIE GOSNELL (Soprano)
Oratorio, Orchestral & Ballad Concerts, 40, Compton Rd., W'hampton.

MR. BINGLEY SHAW,
CONCERT AGENT AND MANAGER,
Music Warehouse, Market Place, Nottingham.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED, for South Free Church, Elgin. Salary, £50. Apply, immediately, with testimonials, to Dr. Mackay, The Tower, Elgin.

WANTED, ENGAGEMENT as VIOLIN and PIANO MISTRESS in high-class School or College of Music. Experienced. Certificated. Good references. Address, T. P., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

CONTENTS.

	Page
Norwich Festival Novelties	521
Welsh Choral Singing	525
Of the Mastersingers' Gracious Art	526
London Street Music and the County Council	529
Beethoven's Sketch Books. Second Series	530
Occasional Notes	533
Facts, Rumours, and Remarks	536
The Eisteddfod at Pontypridd	537
Covent Garden Theatre. Promenade Concerts	539
National Co-operative Festival at the Crystal Palace	539
Obituary	539
Music in Glasgow	540
„ Liverpool	540
„ Wilts and Hants	549
„ Chicago	549
Four-part Song—"Two Cupids." A. Wellesley Batson	541
General News (London)	550
Reviews	550
Foreign Notes	553
Correspondence	555
Answers to Correspondents	557
General News (Country)	557
List of Music published during the last Month	558

THE MUSICAL TIMES.

SCALE OF TERMS FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

	£ s. d.
Two Lines	0 3 0
Three Lines	0 3 4
For every additional Line	0 0 10
Half a Column	2 0 0
A Column	4 0 0
A Page	7 10 0

Special Pages (Cover, &c.) by arrangement.
A remittance should be sent with each Advertisement.

SPECIAL NOTICE.
To ensure insertion Advertisements should reach the Office
NOT LATER THAN THE
TWENTY-THIRD
OF EACH MONTH.

WANTED, at once, a GOOD TUNER and REGULATOR, with pushing business ability. The best credentials indispensable. Permanency. Good terms for first-class man. Send photo. S. Hermitage and Sons, Eastbourne.

PIANO TUNERS, of good character, WANTED, at James Smith and Sons, 74 and 76, Lord Street, Liverpool. Apply, by letter, enclosing copies of testimonials, &c.

TUNER.—WANTED, a First-class PIANOFORTE TUNER. Good references. Address, Oblique, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

SITUATION WANTED, as Out-door TUNER, by man of twenty years' experience; five years in America. Write, J. Whiteley, 9, Florida Cottages, Haydock, St. Helen's.

IMPORTANT to VIOLIN TEACHERS and STUDENTS.—HUSSEY'S improved patent FINGERBOARD ATTACHMENT indicates the various positions by means of small projections situated between the strings, and easily distinguishable by the first finger in shifting. A wonderful saving of time and labour effected. Price 1s. 3d. Hussey and Cary, Vogel House, Clapham Junction, London, S.W. Made for half, three-quarter, and full-size Violins. Testimonials from leading Professors and from users.

Musical News says: "Easy to follow and reliable."
IMPORTANT to ORGANISTS, CHOIRMASTERS, and ALL MUSICIANS.—MESSRS. DINHAM, BLYTH and CO, by their Autograph Process, PRINT on the shortest notice, and at low cost, ANTHEMS, SONGS, and every description of MUSIC, from Eighteen Copies and upwards.
Specimens, Scale of Charges, &c., sent Post-free on application. Adopted by Victoria College of Music.
28, FENCHURCH STREET, LONDON.
Write at once. Estimates given.

U.S.A.—"Comparison of English and German Methods of Teaching Harmony." Mailed free to any address in U.S.A., Canada, or the Cape. F. SOMMER, A.L.A.M., 14, Mardale Street, London, W., England.

THEATRE ROYAL, COVENT GARDEN.

Musical Agent .. ..Mr. ROBERT NEWMAN.
Secretary .. .. Mr. C. SINKINS.

MR. FARLEY SINKINS

Has the honour to announce a Season of PROMENADE CONCERTS EVERY EVENING, at 7.45.

Artists for the Third Week:
Madame VALDA and Miss ELLA RUSSELL.
Madame VALLERIA, Miss EMILY SPADA.
Madame MARIE ROZE and Mdlle. ROSINA ISIDOR.
Master TYLER.
Madame PATEY and Madame BELLE COLE.
Miss GRETA WILLIAMS, Miss ALICE HILL.
Mr. PHILIP NEWBURY and Mr. GAWTHROP.
Mr. BRAXTON SMITH.
Mr. PIERPOINT and Mr. ANDREW BLACK.
Mr. THORNDIKE and Mr. MAGRATH.
THE MEISTER GLEE SINGERS.

Mr. FREDERICK DAWSON.
Mr. PHILIP M. CATHIE.
Miss KATE OULD.

Mr. STEDMAN'S CHOIR OF BOYS AND GIRLS.

GRAND ORCHESTRA of 100 PERFORMERS, with the BAND of the COLDSTREAM GUARDS, under the direction of Mr. C. Thomas (by kind permission of Col. J. B. Sterling).
Conductor, Mr. FREDERIC H. COWEN.
Leader and Conductor, Second Part, Mr. G. H. BETJEMANN.
Accompanists, Mr. CLEMENT LOCKNANE and Mr. SPENCER LORRAINE.

Admission, 1s.; Season Tickets, £1 1s. (transferable); Grand Circle (reserved), 2s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls (reserved), 2s.; Amphitheatre Stalls, 1s. 6d.
Season Tickets: Grand Circle, £2 12s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, £2 2s. Private Boxes: Grand Tier, £2 2s and £1 11s. 6d.; First Tier, £1 1s.; Second Tier, 10s. 6d.
Season Tickets: Private Boxes, Grand Tier, 24 guineas and 20 guineas; First Tier, 15 guineas; Second Tier, 10 guineas. Season Tickets transferable.

GRAND NEW CONCERT HALL,

LANGHAM PLACE, LONDON, W.

Mr. FARLEY SINKINS and Mr. ROBERT NEWMAN have been appointed Sole Agents and Managers for this new, spacious, and beautiful Hall, which is, without a doubt, the finest in the country. It is adapted for Concerts, large Meetings, Balls, &c., and will be open in October.
Applications for terms and dates to be made to Messrs. Farley Sinkins and Robert Newman, at the New Concert Hall, Langham Place, London, W.

FARLEY SINKINS AND CO.,

CONCERT AND OPERATIC AGENCY.

All Communications respecting the following Eminent Artists should be made to Messrs. FARLEY SINKINS AND CO., who are their Sole Agents:—
Madame VALDA. Miss THUDICHUM.
Madame EMILY SPADA. Miss MARGARET HOARE.
Mdlle. ROSINA ISIDOR. Miss MABEL BERREY.
Miss AGNES GIGLIO. Miss MARIE TITIENS.
Miss CLARE POWELL and Miss NELLIE ASHER.
Miss MAGGIE PURVIS and Madame DUMA.

Miss MARIAN McKENZIE. Miss GRETA WILLIAMS.
Madame SWIATLOWSKY.
Miss CARRIE CURNOW. Miss ALICE HILL.
Miss MAY PINNEY and Madame ENRIQUEZ.

Mr. PHILIP NEWBURY. Mr. BRAXTON SMITH.
Mr. GAWTHROP. Mr. H. LEWIS THOMAS.
Mr. GORDON FLETCHER. Mr. FAITHFUL PEARCE.

Mr. PIERPOINT. Mr. MONTAGUE WORLOCK.
Mr. MAGRATH.
Mr. ARTHUR BARLOW. Mr. ARTHUR STRUGNELL.
Mr. CHAS. PHILLIPS and Mr. THORNDIKE.

Madame DE PACHMANN.
Mr. FREDERICK DAWSON and Mons. SLIVINSKI.

Miss NETTIE CARPENTER.
Mr. PHILIP M. CATHIE and Mons. ELKAN KOSMAN.

Mr. LEO STERN. Signor RONCHINI.
Mons. IWAN MOSSEL and Herr DAVID POPPER.

POLYMNIA VOCAL QUARTET (LADIES).

FARLEY SINKINS & CO., 391, OXFORD ST., W.

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES.

SHORT CANTATAS
RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

PERFORMED BY THE HIGHBURY PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

THE PIED PIPER OF HAMELIN
BY ROBERT BROWNING
SET TO MUSIC
FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
BY
RICHARD H. WALTHEW.

Price Two Shillings.

THE BLACK KNIGHT
CANTATA FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA
The Poem by UHLAND; translated by LONGFELLOW
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY EDWARD ELGAR.

Price Two Shillings.

THE SONG OF THE WESTERN MEN
BALLAD FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA
Words by Rev. S. HAWKER
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY
G. R. BETJEMANN.

Price One Shilling.

ODE TO THE WEST WIND
Poem by SHELLEY
Set to Music for Tenor Solo, Chorus, and Orchestra
BY
CHARLES WOOD.

Price One Shilling.

THE BIRTH OF SONG
CANTATA FOR SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
Poem by LEWIS MORRIS
SET TO MUSIC BY
ROSALIND F. ELLICOTT.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

THE COTTER'S SATURDAY NIGHT
Poem by ROBERT BURNS
SET TO MUSIC BY
A. C. MACKENZIE.

Price Two Shillings. Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.

SUMMER ON THE RIVER
CANTATA FOR FEMALE VOICES
THE WORDS WRITTEN BY
SHAPCOTT WENSLEY
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY
FREDERIC H. COWEN.

Price Two Shillings. Tonic Sol-fa (in the Press).

THE BATTLE OF THE BALTIC
Poem by CAMPBELL
SET TO MUSIC BY
C. V. STANFORD.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

PERFORMED AT THE ORATORY, BROMPTON.

MASS IN G MAJOR
FOR SOLI, CHORUS, ORCHESTRA, AND ORGAN
COMPOSED BY
C. VILLIERS STANFORD.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

PERFORMED AT THE ROYAL ALBERT HALL.

EAST TO WEST
AN ODE
BY
ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE
Set to music for Chorus and Orchestra
BY
CHARLES VILLIERS STANFORD.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

WATER-LILIES
A FAIRY SONG
BY
FELICIA HEMANS
Deutsche Uebertragung von L. KLEIN.
SET TO MUSIC BY
ED. SACHS.

Price One Shilling.

THE
LAY OF THE BROWN ROSARY
CANTATA
FOR SOPRANO AND CONTRALTO SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
Words by
ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY
ETHEL M. BOYCE.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

YOUNG LOCHINVAR
BALLAD
By SIR WALTER SCOTT
SET TO MUSIC
FOR BARITONE SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
BY
ETHEL M. BOYCE.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

PRAISE TO THE HOLIEST
MOTET
FOR SOPRANO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
The words by Cardinal NEWMAN
SET TO MUSIC BY
H. J. EDWARDS.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

ELYSIUM
CANTATA
FOR SOPRANO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
Poem by Mrs. HEMANS
SET TO MUSIC BY
ROSALIND F. ELLICOTT.

Price One Shilling.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

ALL-ROUND useful TUNER, from COLLARD'S, requires ENGAGEMENT. Competent to undertake repairs, regulating, management, &c., with knowledge of every branch in pianoforte manufacture. Try over and sell well. Musicale, 110, St. Mary's Road, Sheffield.

TUNER seeks ENGAGEMENT (in or out-door). Understands American Organs and Harmoniums. Can also try Pianos. Address, W. V., 48, Gensing Road, St. Leonards-on-Sea.

TUNER (good) seeks ENGAGEMENT. Thorough repairer and well up in country work. M. B., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

TUNER seeks RE-ENGAGEMENT in town or country. Good references. Total abstainer. Apply, W. B., 20, Appleby Road, Dalston, N.E.

AN Englishman, aged 35, married, at present holding one of the best positions in the United States as TUNER and REPAIRER, desires a first-class SITUATION in August or September Apply, pro tem., for photo and testimonials (copies), to Jas. Whittle, Knowsley Road, Ormskirk.

PIANOFORTE TUNER desires RE-ENGAGEMENT. Thorough knowledge of Harmoniums and American Organs. First-class references. G. H., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

AS MANAGER.—Advertiser (32) wishes to CHANGE from present APPOINTMENT. Satisfactory reasons for doing so. Over fifteen years' experience. Pianos, organs, music, and small goods. Excellent references. Full particulars of L. M., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

MANAGER.—WANTED, RE-ENGAGEMENT as MANAGER or SALESMAN in Pianoforte, Music, and Small Goods Warehouse. Coast preferred. Good Pianist and Violinist. Good references. Presto, 84, De Beauvoir Road, Reading, Berks.

WANTED, SITUATION as MANAGER or MUSIC SALESMAN. Well up in Catalogues and Small Goods. Fair Reader, and Tune if required. Apply, D. D., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

TO MUSICSELLERS.—WANTED, CHARGE of a Branch Shop. Accountant, showy pianist, and good reader. Address, Energico, 26, Hatfield Street, New Cross, S.E.

REQUIRED, GENTLEMAN who calls on principal houses in the Music Trade, to introduce Special Novelty. Apply, by letter, Minim, 84, Newgate Street.

WANTED, a gentlemanly and well-educated YOUTH to look after Music Shop in healthy and pretty Watering-place. Must play well. In return would be taught Tuning, &c. Apply, stating age, &c., and enclose photo, to Semitone, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

WANTED, for Music Warehouse in Midlands, a YOUTH. Good Pianist, with some knowledge of the Trade, Instruments, and Sheets preferred. Good opportunity for Improver. Say age, salary, experience, and qualifications. Midland, Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

WANTED, a YOUTH, to the Music Trade and Profession, in Yorkshire. Premium required. Z. T., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

MUSICAL SMALL GOODS DEPARTMENT (Concertinas, Violins, &c.). Experienced young person WANTED, as SALESHAND. Permanency. State last position. Salary, about 8s. Apply, Crane and Sons, Scotland Road, Liverpool.

WANTED, YOUNG LADY, for Music Warehouse. Apply, J. Simpson, 20, Market Place, Rugby.

YOUNG LADY desires ENGAGEMENT in MUSIC BUSINESS, or where her knowledge of music would be useful. Good Pianist and Accompanist. Plays violin. Quick reader. Would give time. R. S., 81, Bridge Road, Battersea, S.W.

LADY, experienced (23), desires RE-ENGAGEMENT in Music Warehouse. Would teach piano and violin. Excellent testimonials. Miss Searle, 104, Parade, Leamington.

SITUATION WANTED, in Music Publisher's, as SALESMAN; or manage Branch. Good testimonials. Aged 25. T., 3, Buckingham Road, Leyton, E.

YOUNG LADY desires RE-ENGAGEMENT in Music Warehouse, or as Manageress. 10 years' reference. L. Allen, Waterloo House, Dudley, Worcester.

CATALOGUES WANTED. Piano and Music Dealers send complete Catalogues, with terms, to J. B., care of Messrs. G. Rogers and Sons, Berners Street, for enclosure.

APARTMENTS.—Organist has ACCOMMODATION for SINGLE GENTLEMAN. Practice with Organ and Choir. Fare to London Bridge, 2d. F., 26, Hatfield St., New Cross.

ORGAN PRACTICE (near City), 1s. per hour. Three manuals, C.O. pedals. Willis (from Minories), 45, Leman St., E.

A FIRST-CLASS SAXON MANUFACTORY
OF MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS & STRINGS
SEEKS AN ENERGETIC AGENT FOR ENGLAND,
Who corresponds in German.
Apply to M., 581, care of Haasenstein and Vogler, A.-G., Leipzig.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—Three manuals; independent pedals. Terms, One Shilling per hour. Specification post-free. Blennerhasset's Studio, 1A, Vernon Street, King's Cross, W.C.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—The Organ at the South London Organ Studio is now re-opened for practice after thorough renovation. Three manuals and pedals. 343, Coldharbour Lane, close to Brixton Station.

ORGANS.—Two fine-toned modern two-manual ORGANS with all the latest improvements. No. 1, £150; No. 2, £200. Warranted for five years. Full particulars on application. Fincham's Organ Factory, 150, Euston Road, London. Also Chancel Organ, price £150.

FOR SALE.—Three-manual ORGAN, 31 stops (5 reeds), blown by hydraulic or hand. Very handsome front. Also three-manual and Pedal Harmonium, 24 stops, blown by foot or hand. Both to be seen at Ysgitty House, Loughor, South Wales. Prices, £300 and £75.

ORGAN (new). Grand-toned. 8 stops on swell, 7 on great, 1 on pedals, 4 couplers, 6 combination pedals. Must be sold. Room wanted. Samuel and Twyford, Abbey Works, Montague Road, Dalston.

CC ORGAN for SALE and HIRE, on easy terms of payment. Price very low. 3 manuals, 30 stops, 2 on pedals, 3 reeds. Apply, G. T., 23, Brunswick Street, Poplar.

ORGANS for SALE.—Three Second-hand Two manuals, pedals and bourdons: 1 mahogany case, 9 stops; 1 oak case, 11 stops; 1 pine case, 14 stops; and one in walnut case, 5 stops, one-manual. Cope, Jardin Street, Albany Road, Camberwell, S.E.

PIPE ORGAN, by BATES. Mahogany case, five stops, including Hautboy, also pedals. Price £25. A. B., 51, New Cross Road, S.E.

CHURCH ORGAN.—Two-manual, nearly new. 16 stops. Full compass. Pitch pine case. Decorated pipes. Good rich tone. W. Richardson, 13, Mostyn Terrace, Brixton.

SECOND-HAND CHURCH ORGANS for SALE.

No. 1.—Two-manual ORGAN, full compass: 5-stop great, 7-stop swell, pedal Bourdon, 3 couplers; in good order.

No. 2.—Two-manual ORGAN: Tenor C swell, 9 stops. To be sold to make room for larger Organ.

No. 3.—One-manual ORGAN: 7 stops, with handsome carved oak case.

Apply, NORMAN BROS. & BEARD, St. Stephen's Gates, Norwich.

NEW ORGAN STUDIO, with Three-manual PIPE ORGAN, blown by water. Terms for Practice, 1s. per hour. At Smyth's Music Depôt, 54, London Road, Forest Hill, S.E.

STUDIO ORGAN, with three Manuals and Pedals, for SALE, nearly new. Price £55, or five guineas per quarter for three years. W. White, Grantham.

ORGAN, CC, Two-manual, for Sale, cheap. 5 great, 5 swell, Bourdon ped., 4 couplers. Apply, E. O. Yorston, Organ Builder, Victoria Works, Durham Street, Kennington Oval, S.E.

ORGANS, Church, Chapel, and College, with every modern improvement. Established 1845. W. E. Richardson and Sons, to Her Majesty, Central Organ Works, Hulme, Manchester. Specification and Estimates.

LARGE Double-Manual HARMONIUM for SALE, by SCHIEDMAYER. Handsome burr walnut case, 20 stops, very powerful, in perfect order. Cost £150. Suitable for a Church or Chapel. Owner will accept £45. W. H. D., care of J. Hopkins and Co., Music Warehouse, Bedford.

CELLO, old, DANIEL ACHAT. STADELMANN, Vienna, TO BE SOLD. Apply to 63, Petherton Road, Highbury.

BROADWOOD Short Drawing-room iron GRAND PIANO, in elegant walnut case. 7 octaves; full trichord. Tone, touch, and condition as new. A bargain, 55 guineas; cost 165 guineas. View at Mr. Fieldwick's, Organist, St. John's, Cromer House, Putney (near Railway Station).

GOOD Old VIOLINS offered cheap to the Trade, having again made some bargains. Paul Petzold, Wiesenstrasse 50, Chemnitz, Saxony.

HYDRAULIC ENGINES for Organ Blowing. Blennerhasset's Patent "Perfect" Prize Medal Engines are the best. 1B, Vernon Street, King's Cross Road, London, W.C.

"TOWER" ORGAN WORKS.—Specifications, Rebuilding, Repairs, Voicing and Tuning by experienced Artists. Pipes and Fittings. Second-hand Organs and Materials. T. R. Willis (from Minories), 45, Leman Street, London, E.

ORGAN PEDALS to PIANOS.—New method of Attachment by TUBULAR PNEUMATIC. This action surpasses all mechanical actions for prompt and Organ-like Touch. It is less expensive, easier to attach, and does not injure the most delicate Pianoforte. Prospectus, with full description and price lists, on application to Norman Bros. and Beard, Organ Works, Norwich.

TUNERS, REPAIRERS, &c., requiring Tuning Hammers, Kits (guaranteed), or TOOLS of any description, Reeds, Fittings, Materials. Please send for my complete Price List. Karl Wagenhaus, 2, City Road, Hulme, Manchester.

VIOLIN STRINGS. Finest imported. Twenty years' reputation. Sixpence each; sample packet of three, 1s. 1d., post-free. Alphonse Cary, 87, Oxford Street, London, W.

T. R. WILLIS (from Minories, est. 1827), Maker and Importer of Brass and Wood Instruments, Harmonium Reeds, Strings, Wire, Violins, Concertinas, &c. 45, Leman Street, E.

CASSOCKS.—500 New, Tailor-made, all sizes, Black and Violet; very cheap. Also Surplices. Surplice, The Church Agency, Lombard House, E.C.

IMPORTANT TO MUSICSELLERS.—Having the largest and most varied stock in Europe, orders received in the morning are executed the same day. Terms and Catalogues on application.

AUTHORS' WORKS CORRECTED, REVISED, and PRINTED without delay, on exceptionally low terms. Estimates given on receipt of MSS.
London: B. WILLIAMS, 19, Paternoster Row, E.C.

MUSIC COPIED and DRAWN from the Full Score, with proper cues for the Engraver; also Songs or other Pieces transposed, by J. Peck, 36, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS. Dr. Horton Allison, 68, Nelson Street, Manchester.

MUSICAL MSS. REVISED.—Songs, Pianoforte Pieces, &c. Scholarly work. Satisfaction guaranteed. Prospectus free. F. SOMMER, A.L.A.M., 14, Mardale Street, London, W.

MUSIC PRINTING.—A few dozen copies of any short UNPUBLISHED WORK LITHOGRAPHED in closest imitation of engraving cheaply. Before sending manuscript, apply for terms and specimen of work, stating number of copies wanted, size of page, and about how many pages. W. Gee, 71, Barrett Street, Old Trafford, Manchester.

MUSIC BUSINESS and extensive STOCK of MUSICAL WORKS (Bound and Unbound), consisting of Operas, Oratorios, Masses, Instrumental Solos, and Concerted Music, &c., of the late William Robinson, of St. Martin's Lane and formerly of the Strand. Established in 1850. To be DISPOSED OF. Apply to L. Robinson, 61, St. Martin's Lane, Charing Cross.

PARTNERSHIP.—WANTED, a SLEEPING PARTNER, who can invest about £1,500 in a Musical Instrument Business, showing good profits, in a growing district. Full particulars, address, Alpha, Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

Auction Rooms specially for the Sale of Musical Property.

MESSRS. PUTTICK and SIMPSON, Auctioneers, 7, Leicester Square, London, W.C., hold SPECIAL SALES of MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS on or about the 20th of every month. Sales of Musical Libraries, Music Plates, and Copyrights, Trade Stocks, Manufacturers' Plant, &c., are held as occasion may require. Valuations for Probate or Legacy Duty, or for Public or Private Sale. Terms on application.

KELLY and CO., PIANOFORTE, AMERICAN ORGAN, and HARMONIUM MAKERS (to Her Majesty), 14 and 16, Mortimer Street, London, W.
Kelly and Co.'s Instruments are the only ones of English manufacture that gained any award at the DUBLIN and PARIS EXHIBITIONS; also PRIZE MEDAL, INVENTIONS EXHIBITION, 1885; GOLD MEDAL and DIPLOMA of HONOUR, YORK EXHIBITION, 1889.
A LIBERAL DISCOUNT for SCHOOLS, CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS, and the PROFESSION.
500 SECOND-HAND PIANOFORTES by the leading Makers, at all times, very cheap. NEW PIANOS (warranted) in elegant Walnut or Rosewood cases, from 19 Guineas.
The Trade, Merchants, and Shippers supplied.
Sole Importers of the celebrated HERMANN PIANOS, CHEAPEST and BEST IN THE TRADE, as recommended by Signor Tito Mattei, the late Sir Julius Benedict, the Abbé Liszt, and others.

D'ALMAINE'S
PIANOS AND ORGANS
GREAT SALE.
Dealers and Professionals specially invited.
Large Discounts to Trade and Profession.
D'ALMAINE and Co. (Established 108 years), 91, Finsbury Pavement, E.C.

ESTABLISHED 1843.

GEO. ROGERS & SONS'
PIANOFORTES.
(Makers to the Emperor of Russia.)
NOBLE IN TONE.
HANDSOME IN APPEARANCE.
UNRIVALLED FOR DURABILITY.
THE FINEST PIANOS IN THE WORLD.
PIANOS
FOR INDIA AND THE COLONIES.
ALSO YACHT PIANOS.
GEO. ROGERS & SONS,
60, BERNERS ST., OXFORD ST., LONDON, W.

THE OLD FIRM.
P. CONACHER & CO.,
Organ Builders,
SPRINGWOOD WORKS,
HUDDERSFIELD.
TWO GOLD MEDALS.

NICHOLSON AND CO.,
ORGAN BUILDERS,
PALACE YARD, WORCESTER.
(ESTABLISHED 1841.)
Specifications and Estimates sent free.

Just Published.
RING OUT, WILD BELLS
TRIO FOR FEMALE VOICES
THE WORDS WRITTEN BY ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY HENRY LAHEE.

	s.	d.
Full Score	2	0
Orchestral Parts (Violins 1 and 2, Organ, and Bells) ..	2	0
Vocal Score	0	3

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TO VOCALISTS.—SONGS by Cowen, Tosti, Pinsuti, Tours, Moir, Sullivan, Molloy, Blumenthal, &c. 4d. to 8d. each. List sent. Address, B., 411, Edgware Road, London, W.

NOVELLO'S
VIOLIN & PIANOFORTE ALBUMS.

	s.	d.
*1. Mendelssohn.—Four Marches. Transcribed by B. Tours. No. 1, Wedding March; No. 2, War March of the Priests; No. 3, Cornelius March; No. 4, Funeral March ..	2	6
*2. Berthold Tours.—Thirty Melodies (expressly written to be used in connection with the Author's Violin Primer)	2	6
*3. Mendelssohn.—"Elijah." Ten Transcriptions by B. Tours	1	0
*4. Gounod.—"Mors et Vita." Ten Transcriptions by B. Tours	2	6
*5. Battison Haynes.—Twelve Sketches.. ..	2	6
*6. Siegfried Jacoby.—Hungarian Dances. (Transcribed)	2	6
7. Ippolito Ragghianti.—Nine Morceaux de Salon	2	6
8. Oliver King.—Twelve Pieces	2	6
*9. Joachim Raff.—Six Morceaux de Salon ..	2	6
10. Siegfried Jacoby.—Six Characteristic Pieces. For Two Violins	2	6
11. Arcangelo Corelli.—Twelve Sonatas. In Two Books. Edited by A. Dolmetsch. Book I.	3	6
12. Arcangelo Corelli.—Twelve Sonatas. In Two Books. Edited by A. Dolmetsch. Book II.	3	6
*13. Siegfried Jacoby.—Eight National Melodies. (Arranged)	2	6
*14. Gounod.—"Redemption." Nine Transcriptions by B. Tours	2	6
*15. Arnold Dolmetsch.—Twelve Easy Pieces ..	2	6
*16. Haakman.—Twelve Characteristic Pieces ..	2	6
17. Handel.—Six Sonatas. The Pianoforte Accompaniment by A. Dolmetsch	3	6
18. Arcangelo Corelli.—Six Trios. For Two Violins and Violoncello, or Pianoforte; or as Quartets, with Violoncello and Pianoforte. Edited and the Pianoforte Accompaniment by A. Dolmetsch	3	6
19. Kate Ralph.—Six Pieces	2	6
20. Various Composers.—Fourteen Pieces ..	2	6
21. Various Composers.—Twelve Pieces.. ..	2	6
22. Various Composers.—Thirteen Pieces ..	2	6
23. Rosalind F. Ellicott.—Six Pieces	2	6
*24. Arthur Sullivan.—"The Golden Legend." Nine Transcriptions by B. Tours	2	6
25. J. Müller.—Forest Pieces (Op. 9)	2	6
26. Ethel M. Boyce.—Eight Pieces	2	6
27. I. B. Poznanski.—Ten Pieces	2	6
28. Ch. de Bériot.—Eight Pieces	2	6
29. Henry Purcell.—Fourteen Pieces. The Pianoforte Accompaniment, Marks of Expression, Bowing, and Fingering by Arnold Dolmetsch	2	6
30. H. W. Ernst.—Seven Pieces	2	6
31. F. David.—Five Pieces	2	6
32. H. Vieuxtemps.—Four Pieces	2	6
33. F. Schubert.—Six Valses arranged by Siegfried Jacoby	2	6

* These Albums may also be had arranged for Violoncello and Pianoforte.

	s.	d.
Edward German.—Three Dances from the Music to Shakespeare's "Henry VIII." Arranged for Violin and Pianoforte by the Composer net	3	0
H. Grossheim.—Six Easy Pieces for Violin and Pianoforte .. .. net	2	6
C. Gurlitt.—Six Pieces for Violin. With Pianoforte Accompaniment .. .. .. net	4	0
Romance (from the above) .. .. .. ,,	2	0
A. C. Mackenzie.—Six Pieces for Violin. With Pianoforte Accompaniment. No. 1, Gavotte; No. 2, Berceuse; No. 3, Benedictus; No. 4, Zingaresca; No. 5, Saltarello; No. 6, Tema con Variazioni .. .. net	5	0
Zingaresca (from the above) .. .. ,,	2	0
Benedictus (from the above) .. .. ,,	2	0
,, ,, ... Arranged for Orchestra. Full Score	5	0
Orchestral Parts	3	6
Highland Ballad, Op. 47, No. 1, for Violin with Pianoforte Accompaniment	3	6

A. C. Mackenzie—continued.	s.	d.
Two Pieces (Barcarola and Villanella), Op. 47, No. 2, for Violin with Pianoforte Accompaniment	3	6
Pibroch.—Suite for Violin Solo. Arrangement for Violin and Pianoforte .. .. net	6	0
Orchestral Parts .. .. .. ,,	18	0
Joseph Nešvera.—Ten Pieces for the Violin. With Pianoforte Accompaniment .. net	6	0
J. L. Roeckel.—Six Pieces for the Violin. With Pianoforte Accompaniment .. .. net	5	0
Emile Sauret.—Elégie et Rondo for Violin and Pianoforte .. .. net	4	0
Herbert W. Wareing.—Six Pieces for the Violin. With Pianoforte Accompaniment:—
No. 1. May Day Festival .. .. net	2	0
,, 2. At Killee .. .. .. ,,	2	0
,, 3. Romance .. .. .. ,,	1	6
,, 4. Pastoral Dance.. .. .. ,,	2	0
,, 5. Legende .. .. .. ,,	1	6
,, 6. Saltarello .. .. .. ,,	2	0

NEW HARVEST ANTHEMS

MAN GOETH FORTH

COMPOSED BY

ARTHUR CARNALL.

PRICE THREEPENCE.

O WORSHIP THE KING

COMPOSED BY

E. V. HALL.

PRICE FOURPENCE.

O GOD, WHO IS LIKE UNTO THEE!

COMPOSED BY

MYLES B. FOSTER.

PRICE THREE-HALFPENCE.
Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence.

I WILL GREATLY REJOICE IN THE LORD

COMPOSED BY

W. A. C. CRUICKSHANK.

PRICE FOURPENCE.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Now ready.

NEW HARVEST ANTHEM

BY

J. H. MAUNDER

SING TO THE LORD OF HARVEST

Staff Notation, 3d.; Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.

"SHORT, EASY, EFFECTIVE."

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW ANTHEMS FOR HARVEST

By R. T. CLARKE MORRISON.

My God and King .. .. 3d.
O magnify the Lord with me .. .. 3d.
O give thanks .. .. 3d.
The eyes of all wait upon thee .. .. 4d.

These are sure to become favourites at all Harvest Festivals.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

POPULAR HARVEST ANTHEMS

BY

E. A. SYDENHAM.

FULL, EASY, EFFECTIVE.

Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.

O GIVE THANKS (55th 1,000).
SING UNTO THE LORD (9th 1,000).
GREAT IS THE LORD (28th 1,000).

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Third Thousand.

WHILE THE EARTH REMAINETH. Anthem for Harvest-tide. By W. H. HOLLOWAY, L.Mus. T.C.L. Quartet and Chorus. Price Threepence.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

HARVEST ANTHEMS

LORD OF THE HARVEST

COMPOSED BY

JOSEPH BARNBY.

Price Fourpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence.'

I WILL FEED MY FLOCK

COMPOSED BY

J. F. BRIDGE.

Price Three-halfpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence.

SING WE MERRILY

COMPOSED BY

E. V. HALL.

Price Fourpence.

I WILL MAGNIFY THEE

COMPOSED BY

OLIVER KING.

Price Fourpence.

HARVEST HYMN

COMPOSED BY

FERRIS TOZER.

Price Twopence.

MY MOUTH SHALL SPEAK THE PRAISE

COMPOSED BY

JOHN E. WEST.

Price Fourpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence.

HONOUR THE LORD WITH THY SUBSTANCE

(Words from the American Liturgy)

COMPOSED BY

JOHN STAINER.

Price Fourpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HARVEST THANKSGIVING MARCH

FOR THE ORGAN

BY

J. BAPTISTE CALKIN.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HARVEST ANTHEMS

By WM. JOHNSON.

He hath made the earth (New) .. .. 3d.
I will magnify (5th Thousand) .. .. 3d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

ALBERT LOWE'S HARVEST CAROL

HOLY IS THE SEED-TIME

Composed expressly for Harvest Festivals. Octavo, Twopence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

OH! THE JOY, THE JOY OF HARVEST. New Harvest Hymn. By JOHN A. METCALFE. Price 1d. Copies from the COMPOSER, Guisborough, Yorkshire; or,
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HARVEST ANTHEMS & HYMNS.

All Thy works praise Thee .. .. .. E. H. Thorne	3d.
Bless thou the Lord.. .. .. .. Oliver King	3d.
*Blessed be the Name of the Lord .. .. H. Gadsby	1½d.
*Blessed be Thou .. .. E. Bunnett	3d.
*Break forth into joy.. .. .. Oliver King	1½d.
Bring unto the Lord, O ye mighty .. .. F. E. Gladstone	3d.
*Fear not, O land, be glad and rejoice .. .. .. J. Goss	6d.
*Fear not, O land .. .. C. H. Lloyd	1½d.
Fear not, O land .. .. C. W. Jordan	6d.
Give unto the Lord the glory .. .. .. J. F. Bridge	4d.
*God said, Behold I have given you every herb G. A. Macfarren	6d.
*Great is the Lord .. .. E. A. Sydenham	3d.
*Honour the Lord with Thy substance .. .. .. J. Stainer	4d.
*I will feed My flock .. .. J. F. Bridge	1½d.
I will give thanks unto Thee .. .. .. E. J. Hopkins	6d.
*I will give thanks unto Thee .. .. J. Barnby	4d.
*I will magnify Thee, O God .. .. J. Goss	3d.
I will magnify Thee.. .. .. Oliver King	4d.
I will sing a new song .. .. P. Armes	8d.
*Lo! summer comes again .. .. J. Stainer	6d.
*Lord of the Harvest.. .. .. J. Barnby	4d.
Lord of the rich and golden grain (Harvest Hymn) F. Tozer	2d.
Make melody within your hearts .. .. F. A. J. Hervey	3d.
*My mouth shall speak the praise.. .. .. J. E. West	4d.
*O come, let us sing to the Lord .. .. B. Tours	1½d.
*O give thanks.. .. .. E. A. Sydenham	3d.
*O how plentiful is Thy goodness.. .. .. T. M. Pattison	3d.
*O Lord, how manifold are Thy works .. .. .. J. Barnby	1½d.
*O Lord, how manifold are Thy works .. .. G. A. Macfarren	1½d.
*O praise the Lord of Heaven .. .. J. Goss	6d.
O sing unto the Lord .. .. T. Palmer	4d.
O that men would praise the Lord .. .. J. C. Bridge	4d.
Our God is Lord of the harvest .. .. .. Emma Mundella	3d.
*Praise, O praise our God and King .. .. .. E. V. Hall	1½d.
*Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem .. .. .. E. V. Hall	4d.
Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem .. .. W. Hayes	4d.
Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem .. .. .. W. G. Wood	4d.
*Praise the Lord, O my soul .. .. H. Lahee	1½d.
*Praise ye the Lord for His goodness .. .. .. G. Garrett	1½d.
Praised be the Lord.. .. .. C. Steggall	1/-
*Rejoice in the Lord .. .. B. Tours	1½d.
*Sing praises to God .. .. H. W. Wareing	1½d.
*Sing unto the Lord .. .. E. A. Sydenham	3d.
Sing we merrily .. .. E. V. Hall	4d.
Sowing and reaping .. .. J. Maude Crament	2d.
The earth is the Lord's .. .. C. S. Heap	4d.
The earth is the Lord's .. .. T. T. Trimnell	4d.
The earth is the Lord's .. .. A. Lowe	3d.
The eyes of all wait upon Thee .. .. .. O. Gibbons	4d.
The fostering earth, the genial showers .. J. L. Hopkins	3d.
*The harvest-tide thanksgiving (Words only, 1s. 6d per 100). J. Barnby	1½d.
*The Lord hath done great things .. .. .. H. Smart	4d.
*The Lord is loving unto every man .. .. .. G. Garrett	3d.
Thou, O God, art praised in Zion .. .. .. E. V. Hall	3d.
*Thou visitest the earth and blessest it .. .. W. H. Callcott	2d.
*Thou visitest the earth .. .. M. Greene	1½d.
Thou visitest the earth .. .. .. J. Baptiste Calkin	4d.
To Thee, O Lord .. .. C. L. Williams	3d.
While the earth remaineth .. .. C. Swinnerton Heap	4d.
*While the earth remaineth .. .. B. Tours	1½d.
*Ye shall dwell in the land .. .. J. Stainer	1½d.
*Ye shall go out with joy .. .. J. Barnby	4d.

* These Anthems are also published in Tonic Sol-fa Notation, 1d. to 4d. each.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TWELVE HYMNS WITH TUNES

FOR

HARVEST

SELECTED FROM "THE HYMNARY."

PRICE ONE PENNY.

Sing to the Lord a joyful song .. .. J. Barnby.
O Lord, the heaven Thy power displays.. .. .. F. Ouseley.
Father, blessing every seed-time .. .. .. J. B. Dykes.
Lord, in Thy Name Thy servants plead.. .. .. W. Metcalfe.
The wintry time hath ended .. .. H. J. Gauntlett.
Come, ye thankful people, come.. .. .. .. George Elvey.
God, the Father, whose creation .. .. H. Smart.
Lord of the harvest, Thee we hail.. .. .. .. Anonymous.
Lo, summer comes again .. .. E. B. Whyley.
Praise, O praise our Heavenly King .. .. German.
Summer ended, harvest o'er .. .. J. Adcock.
O Lord of heaven, and earth, and sea .. .. .. S. S. Wesley.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

ALBERT LOWE'S HARVEST ANTHEM

THE EARTH IS THE LORD'S

Price Threepence.

Short, easy, full, and effective. Composed expressly for Parish Choirs.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW CANTATAS FOR HARVEST.

SEED-TIME AND HARVEST

A SACRED CANTATA

FOR

SOPRANO AND TENOR SOLI AND CHORUS

THE WORDS SELECTED AND ARRANGED FROM HOLY SCRIPTURE, &c. INTERSPERSED WITH SUITABLE HYMNS, AND THE MUSIC

COMPOSED BY

JOHN E. WEST.

Price Two Shillings.

Words only, Five Shillings per hundred, or 2d. each with Music to the Hymns.

Tonic Sol-fa, price One Shilling

HARVEST-TIDE

A CANTATA FOR HARVEST

FOR

TENOR AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN, OR SMALL ORCHESTRA

COMPOSED BY

HUGH BLAIR.

Price One Shilling.

THE GLEANERS' HARVEST

CANTATA FOR FEMALE VOICES

COMPOSED BY

CHARLES HARFORD LLOYD.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

HARVEST CANTATA

FOR

CHORUS, SEMI-CHORUS, AND ORGAN

WORDS SELECTED AND WRITTEN BY

J. FRANCIS WALLER, LL.D.

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

GEORGE GARRETT, M.A., MUS.D.

Price One Shilling. Words only, 5s. per 100, or 2d. each with Music to the Hymns.

Tonic Sol-fa Edition, Sixpence.

Intended for the use of Parochial and other Choirs at Harvest Festivals. The music is not difficult, and provision is made for the introduction of well-known Harvest Hymns, in order that the Congregation may take part in the service.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

THE JUBILEE CANTATA

(HARVEST CANTATA)

FOR SOLO VOICES, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

COMPOSED BY

C. M. VON WEBER.

(Op. 58.)

Edited, and the Pianoforte Accompaniment revised, by EBENEZER PROUT. The words translated from the German version of Wendt by the Rev. J. TROUTBECK, D.D.

Octavo, 1s.; Full Score, 21s.; Orchestral Parts, 15s.
Words only, 10s. per 100.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

VOCAL SCORE, OLD NOTATION. 21ST TO 25TH THOUSAND.

RUTH

A HARVEST PASTORAL

SUITABLE FOR USE IN PLACES OF WORSHIP

WORDS BY

EDWARD OXENFORD

MUSIC BY

ALFRED R. GAUL.

SUITABLE FOR

THANKSGIVING SERVICES.

"The Biblical story of which Ruth is the central figure lends itself with remarkable suitability to an illustration of a harvest celebration. The country landscape, the ripened corn, the sturdy reapers, the standing sheaves, the active gleaners, and the busy farmer, all combine to fill the mind's eye with a pleasant scene of excitement. Set to music by a competent composer such as Mr. A. R. Gaul, the narrative of Ruth's eventful episode lends itself to a pathetic, picturesque, and pleasant performance. The bereaved and sorrowful trio of women on whom the calamity of poverty and famine has fallen, as if to give intensity to their greater grief, and the unexpected and happy influence of patriarchal benevolence displayed by the mighty Boaz, who so quickly transforms sorrow into joy, are all introduced and aptly take their allotted place in the melodious music of Gaul's interpretation of the tale."—Gloucester Citizen.

"The work, like the 'Holy City,' is full of beautiful orchestral passages, while the vocal score abounds with charming numbers."—Bucks Herald.

"'Ruth' is a work of sterling power; its musical form is that of perfect tunefulness combined with simplicity and strength. . . . The composer has grasped his theme in a thoroughly sympathetic manner, and has produced a work which is worthy of the subject."—Bradford Observer.

"Bright, tuneful, fresh, and musicianly—this work will be a great favourite, and will add to Mr. Gaul's reputation."—Birmingham Weekly Dart.

"'Ruth' has been set to music by several composers; none, however, has become so worthily popular as the Cantata under notice. . . . It contains some charming music, and is highly characteristic of the story it so vividly illustrates."—South Wilts Express.

"Full of flowing melody."—Salisbury Times.

PERFORMED IN THE TOWN HALL, BIRMINGHAM, ON TWELVE OCCASIONS.

Vocal Score, paper cover, 2s.; ditto, paper boards, 2s. 6d.; cloth, 4s.

The Choruses (only) in Vocal Score, for Musical Societies, paper cover, 1s.

Tonic Sol-fa Edition, 9d. Band Parts on loan.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CHURCH MUSIC

BY

EDWARD BUNNETT, MUS.D., CANTAB.

ANTHEMS.

HARVEST.—"Blessed be Thou."	Four voices	3d.
" " "	Tonic Sol-fa	1½d.
HARVEST HYMN.—"Sing to the Lord"		1d.
"I was glad."	Four voices	3d.
"	Tonic Sol-fa	1½d.
"The Lord is my Shepherd"		3d.

SERVICES.

Te Deum laudamus in E.	Chant form	3d.
Benedictus and Jubilate in E	" "	3d.
	Tonic Sol-fa.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in F		1½d.
" " "	A	1½d.
" " "	E	1½d.

HYMNS.

Twenty-four Original Hymn Tunes	6d.
Twelve Original Hymn Tunes	3d.
Amen (on Card)	1d.

ORGAN.

Three Short Organ Pieces	net 2s.
Larghetto in A flat major.
Allegretto Pastorale in A major.
Andante con Moto in F major.
Minuetto	net 1s. 6d.
Twelve Short and Easy Pieces	" 2s. 0d.
Largo in E flat	" 1s. 0d.
Ave Maria	" 1s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Put ye in the Sickle, for the Harvest is Ripe

HARVEST ANTHEM BY THOS. SMITH. 3d.

"A good, taking anthem, and not difficult."

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Post-free from the COMPOSER, Music Warehouse, Bury St. Edmunds.

POPULAR HARVEST-TIDE ANTHEMS.

NEW EDITIONS NOW READY.

THE EARTH IS THE LORD'S

FOR TREBLE SOLO (OR TENOR), QUARTET, & CHORUS

BY

W. J. PRESSEY.

Price 3d. net.

"Bright and effective."

O SING UNTO THE LORD

SHORT FULL ANTHEM

BY PROFESSOR J. FREDERICK BRIDGE, Mus. Doc.

Price 4d. net.

LET THE HEAVENS REJOICE

FOR SOLO, QUARTET, AND CHORUS

BY

GUSTAV ERNEST.

Price 4d. net.

Specimen copies of all the above Anthems sent Post-free on receipt of stamps, 7d.

LONDON: J. & J. HOPKINSON,

34, 35, AND 36, MARGARET STREET, CAVENDISH SQ., W.

EDWYN A. CLARE'S

NEW HARVEST ANTHEMS, &c.

These Compositions are very effective and not difficult.

FEAR NOT, O LAND

Just Published. 3rd 1,000. 3d.

A very attractive and easy Anthem.

*THOU CROWNEST THE YEAR. New. 4th 1,000	3d.
SING UNTO GOD WITH THANKSGIVING. 8th 1,000	4d.
Varied, effective, and pleasing for the Choir.
*THE EYES OF ALL WAIT UPON THEE. 19th 1,000	3d.
Sung by 1,500 voices at Newcastle-on-Tyne.
O LORD HOW MANIFOLD. 4th 1,000	4d.
PRAISE THE LORD, O JERUSALEM. 12th 1,000	3d.
MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS IN D. 5th 1,000	4d.
Full of vigour and flowing melody.

Those marked (*) are also published in Tonic Sol-fa.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Eighth Thousand.

NEW AND FAVOURITE

HARVEST ANTHEM

BY

CALEB SIMPER.

HE WATERETH THE HILLS

Both Notations. Staff, 4d.; Sol-fa, 2d.

Band parts also issued.

London: WEEKES and Co., 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.

Published June, 1893.

THE OFFERTORY SENTENCES (complete, without the repetition of words). Set to music by G. GAFFE. Price 1s. Published by NOVELLO, EWER and Co., 1, Berners St., W., from whom copies may be obtained. Specimen copy sent post-free for eight stamps. Address, Mr. G. GAFFE, 4, London Road, St. Albans, Herts.

NEW HARVEST ANTHEMS, &c.

By CALEB SIMPER.

Interesting, attractive popular, easy, melodious, and effective.

*HE WATERETH THE HILLS. Just published. 8th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
Contains bright Choruses, with Solos for Bass and Soprano (or Tenor). The concluding Chorus is very vigorous, and has some pretty and effective imitation in the parts, without being difficult. Band Parts are also issued. Particulars and prices on title-page of Anthem.

*WHILE THE EARTH REMAINETH. New. 7th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
"A particularly effective Anthem; opens with Solo for Bass or Alto, which leads into a well-written Quartet, followed by a brief but brilliant Chorus, full of life and very catchy."—Music Review.

*ALL THY WORKS PRAISE THEE. New. 8th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
"A more ambitious work than the preceding, but characterised by the same dash and vigour. It contains Solos for the different voices interspersed with Quartets or Chorus, not at all difficult, and very pleasing in its general effect."—Music Review.

*LET US THANK THE LORD. 6th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
*I WILL FEED MY FLOCK. 25th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
Sung at a Choral Festival at Woodstock.

*WHAT SHALL I RENDER. 6th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
Sung at a Choral Festival at Llandrindod Wells.

THE EARTH IS THE LORD'S. 8th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
*FEAR NOT, O LAND. 26th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
*PRAISE THE LORD, O MY SOUL. 21st 1,000 .. .. 3d.
Sung at several Choral Festivals.

*THE LORD IS LOVING. 11th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
MAKE A JOYFUL NOISE. 19th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
Sung at several Choral Festivals.

*O LORD, HOW MANIFOLD. 15th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
THEY THAT SOW IN TEARS. 15th Edition .. .. .. 3d.
*AND GOD SAID, LET THE EARTH. 61st Edition .. .. .. 3d.
TE DEUM, in G. 7th Edit. 4d. TE DEUM, in F. 22nd Edit. 3d.
CELEBRATED MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS, in F. 45th Edit. 4d.
Sung at Choral Festivals in Lismore, Derry, and Downpatrick Cathedrals; also at Barrow, Skegness, Great Budworth, East Devon, &c.

FAVOURITE MAGNIFICAT AND N. DIM., in E flat. 15th Edition.. 4d.
Sung at a Choral Festival in Llandaff Cathedral.

NEW MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS, in G. 5th Edition .. 4d.
EASY HOLY COMMUNION SERVICE, in E flat. 8th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
*EASY HOLY COMMUNION SERVICE, in G. New. 2nd 1,000 .. 4d.
EASY HOLY COMMUNION SERVICE, in F. 6th Edition .. .. 6d.
Each Service is complete, with Agnus Dei and Benedictus.

FESTAL TE DEUM, in A flat (Chants). 4th 1,000 .. .. .. 2d.
O HOW AMIABLE. Dedication Festivals, &c. 3rd 1,000 .. .. 3d.

Those marked (*) are also published in Tonic Sol-fa.

London: WEEKES and Co., 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.
Chicago, U.S.A.: CLAYTON F. SUMMY, 174-176, Wabash Avenue.

HARVEST ANTHEM.

AND GOD SAID, LET THE EARTH BRING FORTH GRASS. Containing Bass Solo. By RICHARD RICHARDS, A.C.O. Price 3d.

NEW SONG. JUST PUBLISHED.

THE ANGEL'S QUEST. Words by FLORENCE HOARE. With Pianoforte and Organ Accompaniment. By same COMPOSER. Price 2s. 6d. net.
London: WEEKES and Co., 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.; or, COMPOSER, Buxton House, Handsworth, Birmingham.

HAIL TO OUR HARVEST HOME. A Four-part Harvest Song. By BENJAMIN CONGREVE. Price 1½d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

FOR FESTIVAL OR GENERAL USE.

AWAKE, PUT ON THY STRENGTH

NEW ANTHEM

BY

F. R. GREENISH, MUS.D., OXON.

Price 4d. Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.

Composed for the Haverfordwest District Musical Association, and sung by over 500 voices at their Annual Festival, June, 1893, when it was most warmly received. The local Press is unanimous in its praise.

"A most effective composition. Perfectly easy, yet full of variety, and extremely melodious throughout. The striking subject given to the tenors at the words 'Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice'; the expressive soprano melody 'For the Lord hath comforted,' and the fine chorale, with its re-appearance for the voices in unison, in the final movement, are alone sufficient to ensure its popularity."

Also, by the same Composer,

O GOD, MY SOUL THIRSTETH. 8th Thousand. Price 3d.
Most successful Anthem. Easy and effective. Immensely popular wherever it has been heard.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in F.
By ARTHUR CARNALL. Price 4d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

AN EVENING HYMN. Words by Rev. WM. BRIGHT, D.D.; music by JOHN E. CAMPBELL. On card, 1d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

ANTHEMS

FOR

ST. MICHAEL AND ALL ANGELS.

	s.	d.
For He shall give His angels .. .. .. Mendelssohn	0	2
*Holy, Holy, Holy is God the Lord .. .. Mendelssohn	0	2
*Let all the angels of God .. .. Handel	0	1
*Let their celestial concerts all unite .. .. .. Handel	0	1½
*O praise the Lord, all ye His angels .. .. J. Barnby	0	4
Vocal score, folio, 1s. 6d.; vocal parts, 1s.
Do. do. (shorter form) .. .. J. Barnby	0	3
O praise the Lord, ye angels .. .. Handel	2	6
Chorus parts, 1s.
O praise the Lord of Heaven .. .. .. G. J. Elvey	2	0
Vocal parts, 1s. 3d.
*O praise the Lord of Heaven .. .. Goss	0	6
Vocal score, folio, 2s.; vocal parts, 1s.
*Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem .. .. Scott	0	1½
Vocal score, 9d.; vocal parts, 6d.
Praise the Lord, O my soul .. .. Croft	2	3
Vocal parts, 1s. 1½d.
There was war in heaven .. .. W. A. C. Cruickshank	0	3
*Therefore with angels and archangels .. .. .. Novello	0	2
Vocal score, 9d.; vocal parts, 6d.
*With angels and archangels .. .. .. J. L. Hopkins	0	3
Vocal score, 1s.; vocal parts, 1s.
*To Thee, Cherubin and Seraphin .. .. .. Handel	0	1½
Ye boundless realms of joy / Your voices raise .. .. Handel	0	3

* Also published in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PLAIN-SONG MUSIC. Edited by Rev. H. A. WALKER, M.A. Missa in Duplicibus, 3d.; Missa de Angelis, 3d.; Organ, 2s.; Missa Regia, 3d.; Organ, 2s.; Dumont's Mass, No. 2 (Easy, like Merbecke's Service), 3d.; Organ, 2s.; Te Deum Chant, from Alfieri, 3d.; Dies Iræ, Sequence for Solo Voices and Chorus in Faux Bourdon, 9d.; The Holy Communion, Rules for Chanting Collects, Epistles, and Gospels, and other music; Organ for Sursum Corda, Pater Noster, Versicles and Responses for Matins and Evensong, 9d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

COMPOSITIONS

BY

T. MEE PATTISON.

CANTATAS.	Staff. s.	d.	Sol-fa. s.	d.
The Ancient Mariner	2	6	0	6
Do. do. (Choruses only)	1	0
The Lay of the Last Minstrel	2	6
Do. do. (Choruses only)	1	0
May Day	1	0	0	6
The Miracles of Christ (Sacred)	1	0	0	6
ANTHEMS, &c.
All Thy works praise Thee (Harvest)	0	3	0	1½
Thou visitest the earth (Harvest)	0	2
I know that my Redeemer liveth (Easter)	0	3
There were shepherds (Christmas)..	0	2
Thirteen Offertory Sentences	0	4
Six Kyries	0	2
Te Deum laudamus (in F)	0	3

ORIGINAL ORGAN COMPOSITIONS.

Fifteen Introductory and Concluding Voluntaries .. .. 3s. 6d.
Five Concluding Voluntaries .. .. 1s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

A SONG OF LIFE

(ODE TO MUSIC)

No. 1. Lullaby. No. 3. Serenade. No. 5. Ave Maria.
„ 2. King Cricket. „ 4. The Charge. „ 6. Requiem.
No. 7. Song of the Redeemed.

SET TO MUSIC FOR FOUR-PART CHORUS

BY

ALFRED R. GAUL.

Price One Shilling; Words only, Five Shillings per hundred.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PRACTICAL HINTS ON BOY CHOIR TRAINING. By G. EDWARD STUBBS, M.A., Organist and Choirmaster of St. Agnes Chapel, Trinity Parish, New York.

Sixth Edition.

A useful treatise on the vocal training of Chorister Boys embodying the views of standard writers on the voice.

Although strictly scientific the book deals with the subject in a plain and practical way, and will be found of value to all who are entrusted with the training of boys' voices. It is highly endorsed by leading Clergymen and Choirmasters both in England and America. Price 3s. 6d. net.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE BRISTOL TUNE BOOK

EDITION 1891.

Containing 905 Tunes and Chants.

NOW READY.

THIRD SERIES, including Supplement 1881, containing 190 Tunes and 118 varieties of metre.

A COMPANION TO ALL HYMN BOOKS.

EDITION 1881.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 9.	Limp Cloth ..	4 0	No. 11.	Small Edition ..	3 0
„ 10.	Cloth Boards, red edges	5 0	„ 12.	Tonic Sol-fa ..	3 0

THIRD SERIES.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 13.	Limp Cloth ..	2 0	No. 16.	Tonic Sol-fa, limp cloth	1 6
„ 15.	Small Edition, limp cloth	1 6

COMPLETE EDITION, 1891.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 17.	Limp Cloth ..	5 0	No. 19.	Small Edition ..	3 6
„ 18.	Cloth Boards, red edges	6 0	„ 20.	Tonic Sol-fa ..	3 6

Communications and enquiries as to copyright, and also as to supplying at reduced prices, may be addressed to the Bristol Publishers.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Bristol: W. AND F. MORGAN, Clare Street.
And all Booksellers and Musicsellers.

Price 3s. 6d., cloth, red edges.

THE TUNE BOOK, with the additional Tunes as used at ST. ALBAN'S, HOLBORN, containing nearly 270 Tunes, for Long, Common, Short, and Peculiar Metres; together with several Gregorian Hymns and Antiphons; the Eight Gregorian Tones; the Music of the Reproaches; the Seven Last Words; and Litany Tunes, &c. London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

FOR MALE VOICE CHOIR.—THE NATIONAL ANTHEM, price 4d.; JUBILEE ODE, price 6d. net. By GEORGE RISELEY.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Twenty-third Edition.

JOULE'S COLLECTION OF 527 CHANTS, 57 RESPONSES, &c. Reduced price, 4s. 6d., paper cover; 6s., limp cloth; separate vocal parts, 2s. each.—Tonic Sol-fa Notation, Score, 1s. 6d.
The Chants are selected with due reference to the position of the Reciting-note.

THE PSALTER, PROPER PSALMS, HYMNS, and CANTICLES. Pointed for Chanting by B. ST. J. B. JOULE. Large type, price 2s. 6d. This Psalter, having been collated with the Sealed Books, is free from the errors contained in all other pointed Psalters, through printing from the incorrect copies commonly sold by the Stationers.

Tenth Edition.

JOULE'S DIRECTORIUM CHORI ANGLICANUM. 18mo, price 1s.; in cloth, 1s. 6d.

Seventh Edition.

JOULE'S DIRECTORIUM CHORI ANGLICANUM. 4to, in cloth, elegant, price 7s. 6d.

Seventh Edition.

THE ORDER FOR THE HOLY COMMUNION. Harmonised on a Monotone in a very simple manner for Parochial use. By B. ST. J. B. JOULE. Price 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Fourth Thousand.

MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in E flat, by WILLIAM S. VINNING, Mus. Bac., Cantab. Price 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Third Thousand.

VESPER HYMN. To be sung after Evensong. Words and music by GEORGE KETT. "A very charming hymn-tune."—Sir John Stainer. On card. Price One Penny.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Words alone, for congregational use, One Shilling per hundred, of the AUTHOR, 100, Gordon Road, Nunhead, S.E.

THE

OFFICE FOR THE HOLY COMMUNION

(Including Benedictus qui venit and Agnus Dei)

SET TO MUSIC IN THE KEY OF A FLAT

BY

BASIL HARWOOD.

Price One Shilling.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

WEDDING MARCH FOR THE ORGAN

Composed and dedicated to H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.

BY

WILLIAM CRESER

Composer to Her Majesty's Chapels Royal.

Price 1s. 6d. net.

Also arranged for Pianoforte, 2s. net.

MILITARY BAND PARTS 3s. 6d. net.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

MUSIC

SUITABLE FOR USE AT THE

SERVICE OF HOLY MATRIMONY

ANTHEMS AND HYMNS.

	s.	d.
Blessed are all they that fear the Lord .. .. E. G. Monk	1	6
Vocal parts	1	0
Blessed are all they that fear the Lord .. Sidney Naylor	0	9
Except the Lord build the house .. .. F. A. G. Ouseley	0	6
Vocal parts	0	6
Father of Life. Hymn .. .. Jas. Turle	0	3
God, be merciful unto us .. .. .. S. S. Wesley
Octavo	0	3
Vocal parts	1	0
Folio	1	6
O God, Thou art worthy .. .. .. Arthur Sullivan
Vocal parts	1	0
Octavo	0	4
Tonic Sol-fa	0	1½
Folio	1	6
O Perfect Love (Anthem) .. .. .. J. Barnby	0	3
Ditto (Hymn) .. .. J. Barnby	0	1½
Holy Ghost, to earth descending .. .. Antonin Dvorák	0	4
There was a marriage in Cana of Galilee .. .. J. Stainer	0	3
Protect them, Almighty. Chorus .. .. .. J. Barnby	0	3

ORGAN MUSIC.

Nuptial March .. .. B. Luard Selby	1	0
Wedding March (Gounod), No. 1. Arranged by G. C. Martin	2	0
Wedding March, No. 2. .. .. .. Charles Gounod	2	0
Wedding March (Mendelssohn) .. Arranged by W. T. Best	2	0
Wedding March Arranged by C. E. Willing	1	0
March in "Tannhäuser" .. .. Arranged by F. Archer	2	0
Processional Wedding March .. .. .. Henry R. Bird	1	0
A Wedding Piece .. .. A. C. Mackenzie	1	0
The Bride's March ("Rebekah," J. Barnby) Arr. by James Shaw	1	0
March in B flat .. .. E. Silas	1	0
Grand March ("Lohengrin," Act III, Wagner) .. W. Creser	1	0
Bridal Chorus ("Lohengrin," Wagner) .. .. W. Creser	1	0
Wedding March .. .. Composed by W. Creser	1	6

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE SERVICE

FOR THE

SOLEMNIZATION of HOLY MATRIMONY

AS USED IN

WESTMINSTER ABBEY

WITH A SPECIAL ANTHEM

COMPOSED BY

J. FREDERICK BRIDGE.

Mus. Doc., Oxon., Organist and Master of the Choristers.

Price Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

GILL'S EASY VOLUNTARIES.—"Messiah," "Judas," "Elijah," "Creation," "St. Paul." 1s. each set of twenty Voluntaries.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

COMPOSITIONS for the PIANOFORTE, by RALPH H. BELLAIRS, Organist of Bradfield College.
Twelve Lyrical Sketches. Two books. 2s. each. ROBT. COCKS & Co.
Strelinka, Capriccio. J. WILLIAMS.

NOVELLO'S COLLECTION OF

TRIOS, QUARTETS, &c.

FOR FEMALE VOICES.

RECENT NUMBERS.

251.	Merry Songsters	John Kinross	3d.
252.	Flow'rets fair	"	3d.
253.	The Waterfall	"	3d.
254.	Shades of Night	"	3d.
255.	Four Angels	C. A. Macirone	3d.
256.	Mistress Mary	"	2d.
257.	Rejoice, for love is Lord	A. C. Mackenzie	4d.
258.	O thou divine	"	6d.
259.	The Wood-Nymphs	Percy C. Buck	2d.
260.	A Song	"	2d.
261.	Weep you no more	"	2d.
262.	Sweet the Angelus is ringing	H. Smart	3d.
263.	Orpheus with his lute	Edward German	3d.
264.	Maidens of Zia	Herbert Bunning	3d.
265.	Some strain that once thou heardest	Marie J. A. Wurm	3d.
266.	About the sweet bag of a bee	"	2d.
267.	Whenever life some joy does bring	"	2d.
268.	Under the greenwood tree	"	3d.
269.	Good-Night	"	3d.
270.	Hohenlinden	F. A. Marshall	3d.
271.	My true love hath my heart	W. A. C. Cruickshank	3d.
272.	Roger and Maggie	C. Mühlfeld	2d.
273.	Little thoughts that grow	Chas. H. Lloyd	2d.
274.	Solitude	J. Pointer	3d.
275.	May Morning	"	3d.
276.	The stars are with the voyager	"	2d.
277.	Water-Lilies	"	4d.
278.	To Sea	Myles B. Foster	2d.
279.	If hope were but a fairy	"	2d.
280.	The willow and its lesson	"	2d.
281.	The Promised Land	"	2d.
282.	Song should breathe of scents and flowers	"	2d.
283.	March	"	2d.
284.	Hail! Star of Eve!	R. Spofforth	2d.
285.	Honey-bees love heath'ry heights	Chas. H. Lloyd	3d.
286.	Ring out, wild bells	Henry Lahee	3d.
287.	{ Sorrow not, why art thou weeping? / One day there came from Lochlin }	Niels W. Gade	3d.
288.	Stars of the Summer Night	John E. West	3d.

(To be continued.)

THE ORPHEUS

(NEW SERIES).

RECENT NUMBERS.

221.	Good-Night	Claude Barton	3d.
222.	Like apple-blossom, white and red	Charles H. Lloyd	2d.
223.	Peace	C. Lee Williams	2d.
224.	Song of the Pedlar	"	3d.
225.	There is a garden in her face	A. Herbert Brewer	3d.
226.	Maiden fair, O deign to tell	Joseph Haydn	3d.
227.	The Cab Catch	A. J. Caldicott	4d.
228.	The Hunt is up. A.T.T.B.	J. L. Hatton	4d.
229.	Good-Night	H. Goetz	3d.
230.	October Song	"	2d.
231.	A Forest Scene	"	3d.
232.	Drinking Song	"	3d.
233.	Heave the anchor	W. A. Barrett	4d.
234.	The Goslings	J. F. Bridge	4d.
235.	The Stream	John P. Attwater	2d.
236.	Ode to the terrestrial globe	J. F. Bridge	3d.
237.	An old rat's tale	"	4d.
238.	Cupid once upon a bed of roses	J. V. Roberts	3d.
239.	I prithee send me back my heart	King Hall	3d.
240.	The Cryer	"	4d.
241.	A wet sheet and a flowing sea	Arnold D. Culley	3d.
242.	Salvete cives nostri	A. L. Peace	4d.
243.	Echoes	Oliver King	2d.
244.	May Morning	Theodore Distin	2d.
245.	A Soldiers' Song	Hamilton Clarke	3d.
246.	Midnight and Noon	"	2d.
247.	Go, happy rose	F. Iliffe	3d.
248.	The wintry winds are blowing	J. Müller	4d.
249.	The three jolly pigeons	Harvey Löhr	4d.
250.	Where sunless rivers weep	Charles L. Naylor	3d.
251.	Come, my dear one	J. V. Roberts	2d.
252.	A lover's counsel	F. H. Cowen	3d.
253.	The trysting tree	G. J. Bennett	2d.
254.	I love my Jean	"	2d.
255.	Echoes	J. Baptiste Calkin	2d.
256.	It was a lover	Chas. Wood	3d.
257.	When for the world's repose	Earl of Mornington	2d.
258.	Upward	L. Spohr	3d.
259.	Restless love	"	3d.
260.	Know ye the land	"	3d.
261.	Spring's Oracle	"	4d.
262.	Drinking Song	"	3d.
263.	Good-night,	"	3d.

(To be continued.)

NOVELLO'S

PART-SONG BOOK.

RECENT NUMBERS.

640.	Three children sliding	A. Wellesley Batson	2d.
641.	The light of love	"	2d.
642.	From white's and wills'	J. D. Davis	2d.
643.	Give place, you ladies	William Stephens	2d.
644.	Spanish serenade	Edward Elgar	3d.
645.	Go, happy rose	F. Iliffe	3d.
646.	Soft, soft wind	C. V. Stanford	2d.
647.	Sing heigh-ho!	"	2d.
648.	Airly Beacon	"	2d.
649.	The Knight's Tomb	"	2d.
650.	To his flocks	"	3d.
651.	Corydon, arise	"	3d.
652.	Diaphenia	"	2d.
653.	Sweet love for me	"	3d.
654.	Damon's Passion	"	3d.
655.	Phœbe	"	3d.
656.	This morning, at the dawn of day	From the French	2d.
657.	Sad hearts	A. H. Brewer	3d.
658.	Advice to lovers	P. W. Pilcher	2d.
659.	Peace; come away	C. V. Stanford	2d.
660.	Waiting for father	R. Bartholomew	3d.
661.	The Blue-bottle's fate	A. H. Ashworth	3d.
662.	March like the victors	Roland Rogers	3d.
663.	Hark! the Vesper hymn	Sir John Stevenson	2d.
664.	Ye banks and braes	Arr. by W. G. McNaught	1d.
665.	The trysting tree	George J. Bennett	2d.
666.	Jean	Oliver King	3d.
667.	Cupid is a wayward boy	Ch. H. Lloyd	4d.
668.	Come, fairies, trip it	F. Iliffe	3d.
669.	Song of the Silent Land	John E. West	3d.
676.	Hope	Josef Rheinberger	2d.
677.	The clouds	"	3d.
678.	The Fountain	"	3d.
679.	Evening rest	"	2d.
680.	The Nightingale	"	3d.
681.	Good advice	"	3d.
682.	The Storm	"	3d.
683.	Autumn Song	"	2d.
684.	The Oak Tree	G. J. Bennett	3d.
685.	When Flora decks the mantling bowers	Noel Johnson	2d.
686.	I think on thee in the night	Elizabeth Fédarb	3d.

(To be continued.)

NOVELLO'S

OCTAVO ANTHEMS.

RECENT NUMBERS.

392.	Our Father, which art in heaven	J. Barnby	2d.
393.	Like as the hart	Thomas Adams	3d.
394.	I will love Thee, O Lord, my strength	Matthew Kingston	4d.
395.	O Lord, Thou art my God	Ch. H. Lloyd	3d.
396.	I heard a voice	Sir John Goss	2d.
397.	Jesu, lover of my soul	F. Iliffe	2d.
398.	The Lord is my strength	S. Coleridge-Taylor	3d.
399.	At the Lamb's high feast we sing	Rev. E. V. Hall	3d.
400.	Blessed City, heavenly Salem	A. C. Fisher	4d.
401.	Have mercy upon me, O God	James Shaw	3d.
402.	And when the Day of Pentecost	C. W. Smith	3d.
403.	In my Father's house	J. Maude Crament	3d.
404.	Harvest Hymn	Ferris Tozer	2d.
405.	I will magnify Thee	Oliver King	4d.
406.	My mouth shall speak the praise	John E. West	4d.
407.	The Lord is my light and my salvation	C. W. Jordan	3d.
408.	Lighten our darkness	G. R. Vicars	2d.
409.	Lift up your heads	S. Coleridge-Taylor	3d.
410.	Sing we merrily to God our strength	Rev. E. V. Hall	4d.
411.	Lord of the Harvest	J. Barnby	4d.
412.	Honour the Lord with thy substance	J. Stainer	4d.
413.	The fost'ring earth, the genial showers	J. L. Hopkins	3d.
414.	There was war in heaven	W. A. C. Cruickshank	3d.
415.	Break forth into joy	S. Coleridge-Taylor	3d.
416.	Prepare ye the way	J. Maude Crament	4d.
417.	Who is this?	Fred. Rayner	2d.
418.	O God, who hast prepared	A. S. Baker	2d.
419.	Behold, how good and joyful	Hamilton Clarke	4d.
420.	I have set God always before me	"	4d.
421.	The day is past and over	J. C. Marks, Jun.	3d.
422.	The Lord is risen	G. M. Garrett	4d.
423.	Why seek ye the living	F. Peel	4d.
424.	Abide with me	R. Dunstan	3d.
425.	Lead, kindly Light	"	3d.
426.	Sun of my soul	"	3d.
427.	Hail! gladdening Light	J. T. Field	2d.
428.	My God, I love Thee	G. J. Bennett	3d.
429.	O praise God in His holiness	G. C. Martin	2d.
430.	O God, who hast prepared	A. W. Batson	3d.
431.	Make me a clean heart	"	3d.
432.	They that sow in tears	"	3d.
437.	I will greatly rejoice	W. A. C. Cruickshank	4d.

(To be continued.)

Ready September 25.

UNA

CANTATA

FOR FOUR SOLO VOICES, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

COMPOSED FOR THE

NORWICH MUSICAL FESTIVAL, 1893

The Libretto founded on Edmund Spenser's celebrated Poem, the "Faërie Queene"

BY

FREDERICK ENOCH

MUSIC BY

ALFRED R. GAUL.

Price, paper cover, 2s. 6d.; paper boards, 3s.; cloth, gilt, 4s.; Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; vocal parts, each 1s. Words only, 7s. 6d. per 100.

[Ent. Sta. Hall.]

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

In the Press.

CANTATA

SET TO ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON'S POEM

CROSSING THE BAR

FOR FULL ORCHESTRA, CHORUS, AND PIANOFORTE

BY ALFRED HARBOROUGH.

Vocal Score, with the Orchestral Score arranged for two performers on the Pianoforte, 2s. 6d.; String Parts, 5s.; Wind Parts in the Press.

Full Score on application to the Publishers.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

ORATORIOS

BY

GEORGE SHINN, MUS. BAC., CANTAB.

SUITABLE FOR CONCERT ROOM OR CHURCH.

The following works contain many effective Solos and Choruses of moderate difficulty, and will take about an hour and a half to perform.

Orchestral Parts published to both works.

Tenth Thousand.

THE CAPTIVES OF BABYLON.

Price 2s.: paper boards, 2s. 6d.; cloth, 3s. 6d.; Sol-fa, 1s.

LAZARUS OF BETHANY.

Price 2s.; paper boards, 2s. 6d.; cloth, 3s. 6d.; Sol-fa, 1s.

"Mr. Shinn has the happy knack of writing popular music, which is at the same time thoroughly good and free from serious difficulties. This, his latest work, will find acceptance amongst Choral Societies and Church Choirs. The Choruses are bold and effective. The Solo writing is melodious and well suited to the words. The quartet 'Blessed are the dead' is really charming."—Nonconformist Musical Journal.

"Mr. Shinn is entitled to warm praise for his Oratorio, since it is obviously written to provide choirs of moderate capabilities with a work not too long, not too difficult, but withal melodious, musician-like, and, above all, faithful in its representation of the dramatic incidents of its sacred narrative. Upon all these grounds Mr. Shinn can claim a success."—The Keyboard.

"The work contains some remarkably well-written solos and choruses. There are two exquisite bass solos, and the quartet 'Blessed are the dead' is a lovely piece of part-writing. The concluding fugue, 'Hallelujah, Amen,' is a fitting climax to the work."—Sussex Daily News.

London: HART and Co., 22, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Just Published. 8vo. Price 12s. 6d.

PRIMITIVE MUSIC

AN INQUIRY INTO THE ORIGIN AND DEVELOPMENT OF MUSIC, SONGS, INSTRUMENTS DANCES, AND PANTOMIMES OF SAVAGE RACES.

BY RICHARD WALLASCHEK

With Musical Examples.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN and Co.

PRODUCED AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE, JULY 9, 1892.

ISRAEL IN THE WILDERNESS

A SACRED CANTATA

FOR THREE SOLO VOICES, CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA

VERSE BY

JETTY VOGEL

MUSIC BY

ALFRED R. GAUL.

(OP. 43.)

THE TONIC SOL-FA FESTIVAL.

"Mr. Gaul's latest work is another proof of his practical wisdom as well as of his ability as a composer. Mr. Gaul evidently does not feel disposed, though we think he is well able to write a magnum opus which may have to wait a generation to be understood; he appeals successfully to the tens of thousands of people who take an interest in sacred stories set to singable music which can be at once appreciated. We do not say that Mr. Gaul's cantatas will not receive the approbation of posterity; we think they will, but it is certain that they do meet with deserved recognition as fast as they appear. We welcome 'Israel in the Wilderness' as one of those works which foster the love and induce the practice of music amongst the people."—Musical Standard.

"The chief point of interest was the production of Mr. A. R. Gaul's Cantata 'Israel in the Wilderness.' . . . The work was given under Mr. Gaul's own direction by some 3,000 singers, accompanied by the Palace orchestra, with Mr. A. J. Eyre as organist. . . . The various solo and choral movements display Mr. Gaul's facility for the composition of genuine, effective music; clear in purpose, melodious, vigorous, and expressive by turns, and constructed by an experienced thinker and worker. Such music will indeed ever be welcome, and Mr. Gaul has presented in no previous work better characteristics or more successful efforts than are to be found in 'Israel in the Wilderness.' The popular composer was enthusiastically cheered at the close of the performance."—Musical News.

"Altogether worthy of the composer of that amazingly popular work, 'The Holy City.' The performance was excellent, and the composer, who conducted, had ample reason to feel satisfied with the reception of his latest effort."—The Referee.

"The best portion is a number entitled 'The Plagues of Egypt,' written in a sort of free chant form, in which Mr. Gaul has introduced some very clever orchestral effects. The Cantata contains all the elements of popularity, and it was excellently performed under the composer's direction, and very warmly received."—Standard.

"Mr. Gaul's music is exactly what is required for large choral gatherings, for it is effective without presenting any overwhelming difficulties. The part-writing is excellent. . . . Melodious throughout. There is sufficient variety to prevent any feeling of monotony. . . . At its close the composer was heartily cheered."—Daily News.

"Without being unduly difficult, it is indisputably effective."—London Figaro.

"The afternoon was particularly interesting owing to the first performance of Mr. Alfred R. Gaul's Cantata 'Israel in the Wilderness,' which had been composed expressly for the event. . . . Like the majority of Mr. Gaul's productions, it is bright and engaging. . . . The most pleasing of the twenty-three numbers are No. 3, 'So He brought forth His people with joy,' a telling chorus; No. 9, the chorus, 'Declare His honour unto the heathen'; No. 15, the pretty duet between the soprano and tenor voices, 'As the manna falling from the morning skies' (encored on Saturday); and the concluding march, 'Onward moves the guiding pillar,' a chorus full of spirit. Mr. Gaul has in the section devoted to the Plagues contrived to instrumentally illustrate the jumping of the frogs, the buzzing of the flies, the falling hailstones, the fire mingled with the hail, the gusty East wind, and the feeling of darkness. Several of these are clever examples of the imitative in orchestration. At the close of the work, portions of which were loudly applauded, though only the above-mentioned encore was permitted, Mr. Gaul, who conducted, was warmly complimented on a Cantata which is likely to become quite as great a favourite with choral societies as 'The Holy City' and other of his compositions."—Daily Chronicle.

"Characterised by the same refinement as that of Mr. Gaul's extremely successful work 'The Holy City.'"—The Athenæum.

"We may say at once that the music is characterised by Mr. Gaul's usual felicity of treatment. It is evident that the composer, while earnestly seeking a natural expression, has steadily kept in view the resources of the choral societies on whose behalf the work was written. Most of the music is easy, straightforward, and flowing—picturesque rather than dramatic—and it is all cast in a mould that enables the most ordinary listener to apprehend its form and purpose. In venturing to set a description of the plagues of Egypt Mr. Gaul invites dangerous comparisons. He was bound at all hazards to avoid imitation of Handel, and to endeavour to strike out a new path. In our opinion the music to this section is the most original and expressive in the whole Cantata. Mr. Gaul had every reason to be gratified with the performance and reception of his Cantata, and he may expect to hear of many more performances."—Musical Times.

"Musicianly and excellent, and not too difficult to imperil its popularity."—Musical Opinion.

"One of the most musicianly, melodious, and well conceived works of its popular composer."—School Music Review.

Price 2s. 6d.; paper boards, 3s.; cloth, gilt, 4s.
Tonic Sol-fa Edition, 1s.; Words only, 5s. per 100.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

ASHDOWN EDITION

OF STANDARD PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

		Net s.	d.
1.	CHOPIN'S Twenty-seven Studies	2	6
2.	STEPHEN HELLER'S Album. Op. 138 ...	1	6
3.	HENRI ROUBIER'S Twenty Melodies of Franz Schubert	2	0
4.	STEPHEN HELLER'S Twenty-four Preludes. Op. 81	1	6
5.	CHOPIN'S Eighteen Nocturnes	2	0
6.	CZERNY'S One Hundred and One Exercises	1	0
7.	CZERNY'S Etude de la Vélocité	1	6
8.	SCHUMANN'S Phantasiestücke. Op. 12 ...	1	6
9.	SCHUBERT'S Eight Impromptus	1	6
10.	LISZT'S Soirées de Vienne	2	6
11.	CLEMENTI'S Six Sonatinas. Op. 36 ...	1	0
12.	STEPHEN HELLER'S Thirty-two Preludes. Op. 119	1	6
13.	RUBINSTEIN'S Soirées à St. Petersbourg (Six Morceaux). Op. 44	1	0
14.	CHOPIN'S Forty-three Mazurkas	3	0
15.	SCHUMANN'S Album für die Jugend. Op. 68	1	6
16.	DUSSEK'S Six Sonatinas. Op. 20 ...	1	0
17.	GOTTSCHALK. Selection No. 1 (Six Pieces)	1	0
18.	KUHLAU'S Six Sonatinas. Op. 55 ...	1	0
19.	CHOPIN'S Eight Waltzes	1	6
20.	KULLAK'S Youthful days. Twenty-four characteristic pieces	1	6
21.	KESSLER'S Twenty-four Studies	2	6
22.	CLEMENTI'S Six Sonatinas. Op. 37 and 38	1	6
23.	CHOPIN'S Twenty-five Preludes	1	6
24.	CLEMENTI'S Gradus ad Parnassum. Twenty-eight Studies ... ... (Selected and Edited by WALTER MACFARREN.)	2	6
25.	JOHN FIELD'S Six Nocturnes	1	0
26.	LOTT'S Circle of Diatonic Scales... ...	1	6
27.	DIABELLI'S Seven Sonatinas. Op. 168 ...	1	0
28.	KULLAK'S Les fleurs animées. Seven characteristic pieces	1	6
29.	MENDELSSOHN'S Thirty-six Lieder ohne Worte	1	6
30.	CZERNY'S Forty Daily Studies	1	6
31.	W. S. BENNETT'S Six Studies. Op. 11 ...	1	0
32.	STEPHEN HELLER'S Restless Nights. Op. 82	1	6
33.	KUHLAU'S Four Sonatinas. Op. 88 ...	1	0
34.	F. HILLER'S Sei capriccetti. Op. 35 ...	1	0
35.	BERTINI'S Twenty-five Studies. Op. 29	1	0
36.	MAYER'S Six Études Mélodiques. Op. 149	1	0
37.	SCHUMANN'S Scenes in the forest. Op. 82	1	0
38.	CHOPIN'S Four Ballades	1	6
39.	STEPHEN HELLER'S Promenades d'un solitaire. Op. 78	1	0
40.	KALKBRENNER'S Twenty Studies. Op. 169	1	0
41.	SCHMITT'S L'Indispensable. Op. 16 ...	1	0
42.	BENNETT'S Suite de Pièces. Op. 24 ...	1	6
43.	CZERNY'S Fifty Études. Op. 740. Book 1. Studies 1 to 24	1	6
44.	CZERNY'S Fifty Études. Op. 740. Book 2. Studies 25 to 50	1	6
45.	MAYER'S Six Études. Op. 31	1	0
46.	STEPHEN HELLER'S Promenades d'un solitaire. (Second set. Wanderstunden.) Op. 80	1	6
47.	SCHUBERT'S Posthumous Works	1	0
48.	BACHE, F. E. Five characteristic pieces	1	0
49.	LOTT. Selection No. 1 (Six pieces) ..	1	0
50.	CRAMER'S Studio. Book 1. Studies 1 to 42	1	6
51.	CRAMER'S Studio. Book 2. Studies 43 to 84	1	6
52.	BEETHOVEN'S Twelve Waltzes	1	0
53.	SILAS' Six petits morceaux. Op. 17 ...	1	0
54.	BEETHOVEN'S Five Sonatinas	1	0
55.	GIBSONE'S Meditations (First series) ...	1	0
56.	BENNETT'S Preludes and Lessons ...	2	0
57.	HELLER'S Douze Valses. Op. 97 ...	1	6
58.	BERTINI. Twenty-five Elementary Studies Op. 137	1	0
59.	WOLLENHAUPT. Selection No. 1 (Six pieces)	1	0
60.	EDOUARD DORN'S Mountain Memories ...	1	0
61.	CZERNY'S Introduction to the Étude de la Vélocité. Op. 636	1	0
62.	SCHUBERT'S Moments musicaux and Valses nobles	1	0
63.	SCHUMANN'S Faschingsschwank aus Wien. Op. 26	1	0
64.	DIABELLI. Four Sonatinas. Op. 151 ...	1	0
65.	PFEIFFER. Twenty-five Studies. Op. 70	2	0
66.	RAFF. Douze Romances. Op. 8 ...	1	6
67.	MENDELSSOHN. Christmas pieces. Op. 72	1	0
68.	MOSCHELES. Grand Characteristic Studies. Op. 95	2	0
69.	DIABELLI. Twenty-eight Melodious Exercises—Duets. Op. 149	1	0
70.	SPINDLER. Little Musicians. Twenty short pieces. Op. 356	1	0
71.	HERZ. Scales and Exercises	1	0
72.	GURLITT. Child-life. Twenty little pieces. Op. 74	1	0
73.	HELLER. Transcriptions of Schubert Songs (Twelve)	1	6
74.	BERTINI. Twenty-five Studies. Op. 32. Sequel to Op. 29	1	0
75.	KIRCHNER. Album Leaves. Albumblätter. Op. 7	1	0
76.	RUBINSTEIN. Acrostychon (Laura). Op. 37	1	0
77.	BERTINI. Twenty-five Studies for small hands. Op. 100	1	0

TO BE CONTINUED.

EDWIN ASHDOWN, LIMITED,

NEW YORK: 1 AND 3, UNION SQUARE.

LONDON: HANOVER SQUARE.

TORONTO: 68, KING STREET WEST.

JUST PUBLISHED.

NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S ALBUMS FOR

PIANOFORTE and STRINGED INSTRUMENTS.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH.
Extra String Parts, Sixpence each.

No. 1.

SUITE OF FOUR PIECES

BY

ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.

No. 2.

SUITE OF FIVE PIECES

BY

HENRY PURCELL.

THE PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT, MARKS OF EXPRESSION, AND FINGERING BY
ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.

These Pieces are so arranged that if any part, or combination of parts, in addition to the First Violin and Pianoforte are used, they will sound complete.

They may also be played by a Quintet, or small Orchestra of Stringed Instruments, with or without Pianoforte.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

THREE DANCES

FROM THE MUSIC TO HENRY VIII.

COMPOSED BY

EDWARD GERMAN.

Arranged for the Pianoforte by the Composer.

Price Two Shillings.
String Parts, 4s. Wind Parts, 7s. 6d.

ARRANGEMENT FOR VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE, 3s.
DITTO FOR PIANOFORTE DUET, 3s.

Just Published.

MILITARY BAND PARTS, 15s.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

SUITE

FROM THE MUSIC TO SHAKESPEARE'S

HENRY VIII.

Composed for the production of the Play at the Lyceum Theatre, January, 1892,

BY EDWARD GERMAN.

PIANOFORTE DUET.
PRICE FIVE SHILLINGS.

CONTENTS.

1. Overture.
2. Prelude to Act II. Intermezzo funèbre.
3. Prelude to Act III. Allegretto in G minor.
4. Prelude to Act IV. March in D.
5. Prelude to Act V. Thanksgiving Hymn.
6. Three Dances:—

I. Morris Dance. II. Shepherds' Dance. III. Torch Dance.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

BENEDICTUS

ARRANGED FOR SMALL ORCHESTRA BY THE COMPOSER FROM

SIX PIECES FOR VIOLIN

With Pianoforte Accompaniment

COMPOSED BY

A. C. MACKENZIE.

(Op. 37.)

Full Score, 5s.; Orchestral Parts, 3s. 6d.

Also, as originally written for Violin Solo, with Pianoforte Accompaniment, 2s.;

ARRANGEMENT FOR MILITARY BAND

BY

DAN GODFREY, JUN.

Five Shillings.

ORGAN ARRANGEMENT, by CHARLTON PALMER and J. B. LOTT, 1s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

ÉLÉGIE ET RONDO

POUR

VIOLON ET PIANO

PAR

EMILE SAURET.

(Op. 48.)

Price Four Shillings net.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Third Edition. Seventh and Eighth Thousand.
This Edition contains the additional Soprano air "Sun of my Soul."

THE TEN VIRGINS

A SACRED CANTATA

FOR FOUR SOLO VOICES AND CHORUS

BY

ALFRED R. GAUL.

(Op. 42)

COMPOSER OF "THE HOLY CITY," "RUTH," "PASSION SERVICE," "JOAN OF ARC," &c.

"The work will certainly go through Saxondom in the wake of its predecessors from the same pen."—London Daily Telegraph.

"Must attain popularity wherever heard. Infinitely superior to any previous effort of the composer."—Liverpool Daily Courier.

"The Cantata is replete with charming music of that school which every one can appreciate, and which found so distinguished a master in Mendelssohn. If composers would have their works popular with choral societies, it is only reasonable to expect that they will bestow a fair share of their attention upon the choruses. The old masters knew this, and there is no doubt that the fact has much to do with the long-continued popularity of their works; and there is equally little doubt, we think, that the principal cause of the failure of so many works produced now-a-days is the uninteresting nature of the choruses. Compare the choruses of the three most popular works ever produced—'The Messiah,' 'Creation,' and 'Elijah'—with a large number of modern works, and our meaning will be clear. If we mistake not, such thoughts as these passed through Mr. Gaul's mind when he set himself to compose those works which have placed him in the front rank of English composers—'The Holy City,' 'Joan of Arc,' and 'The Ten Virgins'—and that the public endorse his views is proved by the enormous sale which these works have had."—Newcastle Daily Journal, Dec. 17, 1890.

"The subject is an excellent one for a Cantata . . . a stronger work than 'Joan of Arc.' . . . Melodious, vocal, and of moderate difficulty, and, like Mr. Gaul's earlier Cantatas, will be eagerly welcomed by societies in search of new works having these characteristics."—Newcastle Daily Leader, Dec. 16, 1890.

BOW AND BROMLEY INSTITUTE CHOIR.—"The hall was overcrowded by an audience that was disposed to encore every other number of the work. If the verdict of a miscellaneous audience, that could have no possible reason for being favourably prejudiced, is of any account in estimating the merit of a new work, a career that will rival that of the same composer's 'Holy City' may be predicted for 'The Ten Virgins.' That Mr. Gaul should have secured this undoubted popular success with a work far more contrapuntal than any of his former works, is a remarkable tribute to his power of welding science and beauty into one whole."—Musical Times, Dec. 1, 1890.

"A distinct advance upon any of its predecessors."—Birmingham Daily Post.

"That 'The Ten Virgins' is a much finer work than the everywhere favourite 'Holy City' we have no doubt whatever."—Birmingham Daily Gazette.

The above Cantata has been specially planned to meet the requirements of Musical Societies, the greater portion being choral, including three numbers for Sopranos and Contraltos (The Virgins).

Price, paper cover, 2s. 6d.; paper boards, 3s.; cloth, gilt, 4s.; Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Vocal parts, each 1s. Words only, 5s. per 100.

Staff Edition. Sixteenth to Twentieth Thousand.

JOAN OF ARC

A DRAMATIC CANTATA

BY

ALFRED R. GAUL.

PRODUCED WITH THE UTMOST SUCCESS BY THE BIRMINGHAM FESTIVAL CHORAL SOCIETY.

"The Exeter Oratorio Society last night achieved a brilliant success, and it may safely be said, without fear of exaggeration, that never before have they performed a work more satisfactory to themselves or more interesting to the audience than 'Joan of Arc.'"—Western Times.

"One of the most delightful Concerts ever given by the South Shields Choral Society was that of last evening, when the principal piece was 'Joan of Arc.' We cannot speak too highly of Mr. Gaul's work, which is of the most interesting description, and will doubtless soon be a favourite with choral societies."—Shields Daily News.

	s. d.		s. d.
Paper cover .. .. price	2 6	Tonic Sol-fa .. .. price	1 6
„ boards .. .. „	3 0	Vocal parts .. each „	1 0
Scarlet cloth .. .. „	4 0	Words only .. per 100 „	7 0

FOR THE USE OF CHORAL SOCIETIES.—An Arrangement of the Orchestral Parts for Pianoforte and Harmonium, by J. W. ELLIOTT. Price 7s. 6d.

The gratuitous loan of Instrumental parts may be had on application to the COMPOSER, and full liberty is given to perform these Cantatas and to insert the words in any programme without further permission.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

Popular Part-Songs for S.A.T.B.

By W. W. PEARSON.

The Skaters	3d.	The Oyster Dredgers ..	2d.
Blow, Western Wind! ..	3d.	*Sweet to live (32nd thou.).	2d.
Stars of the Night	3d.	*Welcome, young Spring!	2d.
The Lake	3d.	*The Anglers (12th thou.) ..	2d.
*'Tis Morn	3d.	The Dream of Home ..	2d.
Sweet Spring (Madrigal) ..	3d.	Summer and Winter ..	2d.
The River	3d.	*Departed Joys	2d.
Over the mountain side ..	3d.	There's beauty in the deep	1½d.
Soul of living music ..	3d.	Soldier, rest!	1d.
The Stormy Petrel	3d.	Woods in Winter	1d.
The Coral Grove	3d.	Autumn	1d.
Pibroch of Donuil Dhu ..	3d.

HUMOROUS PART-SONGS.

*Three Doughtie Men. (55th thousand)	3d.
Three Children sliding. (8th thousand)	3d.
A Ryghte Merrie Geste	4d.
The Snow-white Doe	4d.
*Ben Bowlegs (EDWARD OXENFORD)	3d.
The Carrion Crow	3d.

DESCRIPTIVE CHORUSES FOR S.A.T.B.

Orchestral Parts on application to the COMPOSER, Elmham, Dereham.

The Iron Horse. (6th thou.)	4d.	The Ocean (6th thou.) ..	3d.
Off to Sea	4d.	*The Ironfounders (32nd thou.)	3d.
The Lifeboat	4d.	The Jäger Chorus (6th thou.)	3d.

Tonic Sol-fa Editions at half the above prices of those marked *.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HUMOROUS PART-SONGS, by ALFRED ALLEN.

Dickory, dickory, dock .. .. 4d.
Tom, Tom, the Piper's son .. .. .. 3d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

ETON SCHOOL SONGS

SET TO MUSIC BY

ARTHUR GOODHART.

Price Sixpence each.

No. 1. Song of the Scug.
„ 2. The Eton College Hunt.
„ 3. The game's the thing.
„ 4. Song of the Wall.
„ 5. No triumphs like those.
„ 6. Twenty years ago.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE SPIDER AND THE FLY

NEW HUMOROUS PART-SONG

For mixed and Male Voices, by

ALFRED J. CALDICOTT, MUS. BAC., CANTAB.

COMPOSER OF

Humpty Dumpty.
Jack and Jill.
Jack Horner.
This is the house Jack built.
Where are you going, my pretty maid?
Sobbing quartet, &c.

Just Published. METZLER and Co., 42, Gt. Marlborough Street, W. Specimen copies, Post-free, 6d., of the COMPOSER, 239, Cromwell Road, S.W. Special terms to Societies.

NEW MUSIC by T. E. SPINNEY. Words by AMY THORN. THE SINGER, NOT THE SONG. Price 2s. net. (One of the prettiest songs of the day.)

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Dedicated (by permission) to the Right Rev. Lord Bishop of Ripon.

NEW SONG, by JEAN CHARLES, THE LORD SHALL COMFORT ZION, with Chorus ad lib., suitable for Church Choirs. Price 2s. net; post-free, 2s. 1d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

AH! LIKE A TENDER FLOWER THOU ART. Song. The words translated from Heine by C. M. AIKMAN, M.A.; the music composed by MARGUERITE MARIGOLD. Price 2s. net.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TIME.—A Short Treatise on TIME, by FRANK MANLY, I.S.M. Dedicated to Sir JOSEPH BARNBY. Patronised by the leading Members of the Musical Profession. Testimonials from Sir William Cusins, Professor Bridge, Mr. Sims Reeves, &c. Price 6d. London: F. PITMAN, 20, Paternoster Row, E.C.

BEETHOVEN'S SEVENTH SYMPHONY (Errors in).—The Lute.—See September Musical Opinion and Music Trade Review. Also 200 cols. of Musical Literature and Advertisements. Price 2d. Order at all book and musicsellers; Smith's Railway Stalls; or (by post, 3½d.) 150, Holborn Bars, London, E.C.

Sixth Thousand.

THE MONTHS

TWELVE VOCAL DUETS FOR SCHOOL USE

Words by EDWARD OXENFORD

MUSIC BY

ALFRED R. GAUL.

"There are in this series of duets the sweetest things of the kind we have ever met with. Things to be treasured in households where sisters or friends delight in joining voices."—Birmingham Daily Gazette.

	s.	d.
Parts I. and II. .. .. each	1	0
Complete, paper cover	1	6
Ditto, paper boards	2	0
Ditto, scarlet cloth	3	0
Or, in Twelve Numbers .. .. each	0	2

Tonic Sol-fa (complete), 9d.; or, singly, 1d. each.

VOCAL TRIOS FOR SCHOOL USE.

THE BIRDS

Words by EDWARD OXENFORD

MUSIC BY

ALFRED R. GAUL.

1. The Robin.
2. The Nightingale.
3. The Dove.
4. The Skylark.
5. The Owl.
6. The Swallows.

"By the production of these Trios our townsman, Mr. A. R. Gaul, has made a valuable addition to the many beautiful and useful compositions he has formerly given to the public. Mr. Gaul's music is unfailingly charming . . . and both in the home circle and in the school class is sure to be heartily welcomed."—Birmingham Daily Gazette.

	s.	d.
Complete, paper cover	1	0
,, scarlet cloth	2	6
Or, in Six Numbers .. .. each	0	2

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES

FOR THE VOICE

WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

COMPOSED BY

G. HENSCHEL.

IN TWO PARTS.

PART I.—STUDIES IN SUSTAINED SINGING (LOW VOICE).
PART II.—STUDIES IN FLORID SINGING (LOW VOICE).

PART I.—STUDIES IN SUSTAINED SINGING (HIGH VOICE).
PART II.—STUDIES IN FLORID SINGING (HIGH VOICE).

PART I.—STUDIES IN SUSTAINED SINGING (MEDIUM VOICE).
PART II.—STUDIES IN FLORID SINGING (MEDIUM VOICE).

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS EACH PART.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

Just Published.

NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S MUSIC PRIMERS,
Edited by Sir JOHN STAINER,
No. 38.

TRANSPOSITION

(KEYBOARD AND ORCHESTRAL)

BY

JOHN WARRINER,

Mus.D., Trinity College, Dublin.

Price Two Shillings.
In paper boards, Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HANDEL'S LARGO

ARRANGED FOR THE

ORGAN

BY

GEORGE C. MARTIN.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

(No. 2. Organ Arrangements edited by George C. Martin. This number also contains Schubert's Andante, from Pianoforte Sonata (Op. 147), and Spohr's "As pants the hart," from "The Crucifixion").

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

IRISH SONGS AND BALLADS

THE WORDS BY

ALFRED PERCEVAL GRAVES

THE MUSIC ARRANGED BY

C. VILLIERS STANFORD.

Price Four Shillings.

CONTENTS:

The Song of the Turf.
The Exiles.
Arranmore Boat Song.
The Roving Pedlar.
The Zephyrs blest.
Colonel Carty.
The Ploughman's whistle.
Love's hallowed seal.
The March of the Maguire.
Lullaby.
A Lament.
The Song of the Ghost.
Silver and Gold.
Mavourneen Dhu.
The Darling.
O Mary, thy laugh was sweet.
Hush song.
The Kilkenny cats.
Sweet Isle.
The Hero of Limerick.
Loved bride of O'Byrne.
Our Inniskilling boy.
Festival Song (Pleraca).
Johnny Cox.
The Irish Reel.
Molleen Oge.
Last night I dreamt of my own [true love
Bright love of my heart.
My Colleen rue.
Chieftain of Tyrconnell.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE

ART OF TRAINING CHOIR BOYS

BY

G. C. MARTIN

Organist and Master of the Choristers of St. Paul's Cathedral.

Price Three Shillings; in paper boards, 3s. 6d.

(No. 39. NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S MUSIC PRIMERS, Edited by Sir JOHN STAINER.)

The Exercises for the use of Boys also published separately.
Price One Shilling; in paper boards, 1s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

FIVE MINIATURES FOR PIANO

COMPOSED BY

S. B. SCHLESINGER.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence net.

CONTENTS.

No. 1. Pleasant Dreams.
,, 2. Good Morning.
,, 3. Melody.
No. 4. Meditation.
,, 5. Flirtation.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW FOREIGN PUBLICATIONS.

	s.	d.
ATTRUP, C.—Bridal March. For Organ and Wind Instruments	4	0
BLASSER, G.—Sérénade. For String Orchestra. Op. 88:—
Score .. .. net	3	6
Parts	6	0
BOELLMANN, L.—Quartet in F minor. For Pianoforte, Violin, Viola, and Violoncello. Op. 10 .. .. .. net	12	0
—— Trio. For Pianoforte, Violin, and Violoncello. Op. 19 „	12	0
BOISDEFFRE, R.—Quartet. For Pianoforte, Violin, Viola, and Violoncello. Op. 13 .. .. net	12	0
—— Trio in G minor. For Pianoforte, Violin, and Violoncello. Op. 32 .. .. net	8	0
BOSSI, M. E.—Three Pieces for the Organ:—
No. 1. Evening Song	3	0
„ 2. Idyl	3	0
„ 3. Allegretto	3	0
—— Westminster Abbey Hymn of Glory. For Organ, or Organ and Chorus (Latin Words):—
Score .. .. net	1	6
BRAHMS, JOH.—Waltzes for Pianoforte Duet. Arranged for String Quartet (Double Bass ad lib.). Op. 39:—
Score .. .. net	2	6
Parts .. .. „	5	0
CHAMINADE, C.—Menuet. For Pianoforte	6	0
—— Berceuse. For Pianoforte	4	0
—— Barcarolle. For Pianoforte	4	0
—— Chaconne. For Pianoforte	4	0
D'INDY, V.—Trio. For Pianoforte, Clarinet (or Violin), and Violoncello. Op. 29:—
No. 1. Overture; No. 2. Divertissement; No. 3. Chant élégiaque; No. 4. Finale .. .. net	12	0
FÄHRMANN, H.—Sonata, No. 2. For Organ. Op. 8	8	0
FISCHER, C. A.—"Consolation." For Violoncello and Organ	3	0
FRITZSCH, E.—Souvenirs d'Italie. Four Pieces. For Mandolin (or Violin) and Pianoforte. Op. 45:—
No. 1. "Venice" (Barcarolle)	3	0
„ 2. "Florence" (Nocturne)	3	0
„ 3. "Rome" (Canzone)	3	0
„ 4. "Naples" (Tarantella)	4	0
—— Two Pieces. For Mandolin (or Violin) and Pianoforte. Op. 46:—
No. 1. Sérénade; No. 2. Danse Espagnole .. each	3	0
GLAZOUNOW, A.—Quintet. For Two Violins, Viola, and Two Violoncellos. Op. 39:—
Score .. .. net	10	0
Parts	24	0
GODARD, B.—2me Romance sans Paroles. For Pianoforte. Op. 120	4	0
—— The same. For Violin and Pianoforte	5	0
—— Sérénade à Mabel. For Pianoforte	4	0
GUILMANT, A.—Romance de Chauvet. Transcription for Organ .. .. net	1	6
HOTH, G.—Suite. For String Orchestra. Op. 6A:—
Score .. .. net	2	6
Parts .. .. „	4	0
KOUSNETZOFF, A.—Suite. For Four Violoncellos (Allegro, Andantino, Intermezzo, Scherzo, Allegro con brio):—
Score .. .. net	6	0
Parts .. .. „	12	0
LEMAIRE, G.—"Dreaming." For small Orchestra (with Violin or Violoncello Solo):—
Parts .. .. net	2	6
—— The same. For Violin, Violoncello and Pianoforte (Harp and Organ ad lib.)	7	0
—— Pastorale. For small Orchestra. With Solo for Violin or Violoncello .. .. net	2	6
LUZATTO, F.—2me Trio. For Pianoforte, Violin, and Violoncello .. .. net	10	0
—— Suite. For Quartet (Pianoforte, Two Violins, and Violoncello). Op. 51 .. .. net	7	0
MARAIS (1606).—Chaconne. For the Viole d'amour (or Viola) and Pianoforte .. .. net	3	0
—— Sarabande. For the Viole d'amour (or Viola) and Pianoforte	5	0
MARTUCCI, G.—Quintet. For Pianoforte, Two Violins, Viola, and Violoncello	30	0
POENITZ, F.—Sinfonietta, A minor (Largo and Allegro agitato, Adagio molto, Finale, Allegro giocoso). For Harmonium, Violin, and Violoncello. Op 32	18	0
REINECKE, C.—"Biblical Pictures" ("biblische Bilder"). For Pianoforte. Books I. to IV. .. .. each	4	0
SEITZ, F.—"Pupils' Concert" ("Schüler Conzert"):—
No. 1. (3rd Position) D major. For Violin and Pianoforte	7	0
„ 2. (1st Position) G major. For Violin and Pianoforte	6	0
„ 3. (3rd Position) G minor. For Violin and Pianoforte	8	0
THIERIOT, A.—Octet, B major. For Two Violins, Viola, Violoncello, Double Bass, Clarinet, Horn, and Bassoon. Op. 62:—
Parts .. .. net	17	0
THOMAS, O.—Two Elegies. For the Organ. Op. 5:—
No. 1. D minor	3	0
„ 2. F minor	3	0
VIARDOT, P.—Etudes caprices. For Violin .. .. net	5	0
VOGT, G.—Adagio religioso. For Two Oboes and English Horn, or Two Clarinets in B flat and Saxophone alto in E flat:—
Score .. .. net	1	6
Parts .. .. „	2	6

Sold at half-price, if not marked net.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

MUSIC
FOR MILITARY BAND
PUBLISHED BY
NOVELLO, EWER & CO.

THREE DANCES
FROM THE MUSIC TO "HENRY VIII."
COMPOSED BY
EDWARD GERMAN.
Arranged by DAN GODFREY, Jun.
Price Fifteen Shillings.

BENEDICTUS
FROM SIX PIECES FOR VIOLIN
COMPOSED BY
A. C. MACKENZIE.
Arranged by DAN GODFREY, Jun.
Price Five Shillings.

THE RUSSIAN NATIONAL ANTHEM
(BARNBY'S ARRANGEMENT).
Arranged by Lieutenant DAN GODFREY.
Price Three Shillings.

THE EMPIRE FLAG
SONG AND CHORUS
COMPOSED BY
A. C. MACKENZIE.
Arranged by CHARLES GODFREY.
Price Five Shillings.

WEDDING MARCH
COMPOSED AND DEDICATED TO H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.
BY
WILLIAM CRESER.
Arranged by DAN GODFREY, Jun.
Price Three Shillings and Sixpence.

In the Press.

BALLET MUSIC
FROM "COLOMBA," AN OPERA
COMPOSED BY
A. C. MACKENZIE.
Arranged by DAN GODFREY, Jun.
In the Press.

SELECTION
FROM "MORS ET VITA"
COMPOSED BY
CH. GOUNOD.
Arranged by DAN GODFREY, Jun.
In the Press.

SELECTION
FROM "THE REDEMPTION"
COMPOSED BY
CH. GOUNOD.
Arranged by DAN GODFREY, Jun.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES

FOR THE PIANOFORTE

EDITED, ARRANGED IN GROUPS, AND THE FINGERING REVISED AND SUPPLEMENTED

BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

THIS Collection of Studies is intended to illustrate the various elements of a complete course of pianoforte technique, and to provide students with the means of attacking and overcoming the different special difficulties which have to be encountered. With this view, the Studies have been arranged in groups, those in each group being placed in progressive order, and having reference to some one particular difficulty. The greater part of the Studies themselves have been selected from the standard works of the most eminent Study-writers, and with these are included numerous others, which, though of equally great practical utility, have hitherto been less generally accessible.

1.	FIVE-FINGER STUDIES	Part 1*
2.	„	„ 2*
3.	SCALES	Part 1*
4.	„	„ 2*
5.	BROKEN CHORDS	Part 1*
6.	„	„ 2*
7.	„	„ 3*
8.	„	„ 4
9.	„	„ 5
10.	LEFT HAND	Part 1*
11.	„ „	„ 2*
12.	„ „	„ 3
13.	„ „	„ 4
14.	ARPEGGIO	Part 1*
15.	„	„ 2*
16.	„	„ 3
17.	VELOCITY	Part 1*
18.	„	„ 2*
19.	„	„ 3
20.	„	„ 4
21.	„	„ 5
22.	„	„ 6
23.	„	„ 7
24.	FIGURES IN SEQUENCE	Part 1
25.	„	„ 2
26.	BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES	Part 1
27.	BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES	Part 2
28.	SHAKES	Part 1*
29.	„	„ 2*
30.	„	„ 3
31.	DOUBLE NOTES	Part 1*
32.	„ „	„ 2*
33.	„ „	„ 3
34.	„ „	„ 4
35.	OCTAVES	Part 1*
36.	„	„ 2*
37.	CHORDS	Part 1*
38.	„	„ 2
39.	STACCATO
40.	REPETITION	Part 1*
41.	REPETITION AND TREMOLO	„ 2*
42.	„ „	„ 3*
43.	PART-PLAYING	Part 1*
44.	„ „	„ 2*
45.	ORNAMENTS	Part 1
46.	„	„ 2
47.	ACCOMPANIED MELODY	Part 1
48.	„	„ 2
49.	EXTENSIONS AND SKIPS	Part 1
50.	„	„ 2
51.	RHYTHM	Part 1*
52.	„	„ 2

* These Parts are already published.

FIFTY-TWO BOOKS, PRICE ONE SHILLING EACH.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

Printed by NOVELLO, EWER and Co., at 69 & 70, Dean Street (W.), and published at 1, Berners Street (W.), and 80 & 81, Queen Street (E.C.)
Sold also by KENT and Co., Paternoster Row (E.C.)—Friday, September 1, 1893.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR.

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH.

No. 608.—Vol. 34. OCTOBER 1, 1893. Price 4d.; Post-free, 5d.
Registered for transmission abroad. Annual Subscription, Postage-free, 5s.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY,

ROYAL ALBERT HALL.

Patron: HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF SAXE-COBURG GOTHA. (DUKE OF EDINBURGH, K.G.)
Conductor: Sir JOSEPH BARNBY.

TWENTY-THIRD SEASON, 1893-94.

PROSPECTUS.

The series will comprise ten Concerts, at which the following works will be performed:—November 2, Berlioz's "FAUST"; November 23, "ISRAEL IN EGYPT"; December 7, "JEPHTHA"; January 1, "MESSIAH"; January 18, "THE GOLDEN LEGEND"; February 7, "REDEMPTION"; March 1, "REQUIEM" (from "Mors et Vita") and Rossini's "STABAT MATER"; March 23, "MESSIAH"; April 12, Mackenzie's "BETHLEHEM"; and April 26, "ELIJAH."

Arrangements have been made with the following artists:—

Madame ALBANI	Mr. EDWARD LLOYD
Miss ANNA WILLIAMS	Mr. BEN DAVIES
Mrs. HENSCHEL	Mr. PHILIP NEWBURY
Miss ESTHER PALLISER	Mr. HENSCHEL
Madame MORAN-OLDEN	Mr. WATKIN MILLS
Madame BELLE COLE	Mr. PLUNKET GREENE
Miss MARIAN McKENZIE	Mr. ANDREW BLACK
Miss MARIE BREMA	Mr. NORMAN SALMOND
Miss AGNES JANSON	Mr. DAVID BISPHAM

Organist: Mr. HODGE.

The Band and Chorus will consist of 1,000 performers.

A special feature in the programme will be the production of Dr. Mackenzie's new Oratorio "Bethlehem," and Handel's "Jephtha" will be performed for the first time by this Society.

It has been found necessary to revert to Thursdays for the Society's performances instead of Wednesdays, and it is hoped that this change will prove convenient to subscribers and the general public.

Of the ten Concerts to be given, eight will be included in the Subscription series. Prices of subscription for these eight Concerts: Stalls, 3 guineas; Arena, 2 guineas; Balcony (reserved), 1½ guineas.

Prices for each Concert: 10s. 6d., 7s., 5s., 4s., and Gallery Promenade, 1s.

Subscribers' names can now be received, seats secured, and prospectuses obtained at the Royal Albert Hall.

First Concert, Thursday, November 2, at 8. Berlioz's "Faust." Artists: Madame Moran-Olden, Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. E. Epstein, and Mr. Henschel.

CHELTENHAM TRIENNIAL MUSICAL FESTIVAL,

October 16, 17, 18, 19, 20.

Monday Evening.—Full Rehearsal.

Tuesday Evening.—Festival Ode (Tours); "Stabat Mater" (Rossini); "Hymn of Praise" (Mendelssohn).

Wednesday Evening.—"The Golden Legend" (Sullivan); Choral Song (eight Parts), "Sweet Echo" (Dr. F. Iliffe); Concerto for Two Pianofortes (Mozart), &c.

Thursday Afternoon.—"The Messiah."

Friday Evening.—"Lohengrin"; Festival Ode (Tours); and Grand Selection.

Artists: Miss Thudichum, Miss Medora Henson, Miss Maggie Davies, Miss Susan Harrhy, Miss Beatrice Gough; Miss Hilda Wilson, Miss Jessie King, Miss Lucy Franklin Higgs, Miss Fanny Stephens, and Madame Hope Glenn; Mr. Edward Lloyd, Mr. Henry Piercy, Mr. Edwin Houghton, and Mr. Ben Davies; Mr. Bantock Pierpoint, Mr. W. H. Brereton, Mr. H. Lane Wilson, and Mr. Watkin Mills.

Solo Instrumentalists: Miss Olga Neruda, Miss Amy Woodward, and Miss Agnes Shinner (Pianoforte); Mr. Theodore Carrington (Violin); and Mr. W. Ellis (Trumpet).

Complete Orchestra of 500 performers.

Conductor, Mr. J. A. MATTHEWS.

Tickets: 1s., 2s. 6d., 4s., 5s., 7s. 6d., and 10s. 6d.

Programmes, Tickets, and information from C. Westley's Library, Promenade, Cheltenham. Special trains from all parts at reduced rates.

CRYSTAL PALACE SATURDAY CONCERTS.

The THIRTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL SERIES of these WORLD-RENOWNED CONCERTS will open on SATURDAY, October 14, at 3. Conductor, Mr. August Manns. Prospectus, with sketch programmes of the Concerts before Christmas, and full particulars of prices of serial Transferable Tickets and Seats for Single Concerts, will be sent, post-free, on application to the Manager, Crystal Palace, S.E. The admission to the Palace on the dates of these Concerts will, in future, be One Shilling only.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC,

TENTERDEN STREET, W.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patrons: HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN AND THE ROYAL FAMILY.
President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH, K.G.
Principal: Dr. A. C. MACKENZIE.

Michaelmas Term commenced.
Entry Forms and all information may be obtained from the Secretary.
Fortnightly Concert, Saturday, October 21, at 8.
Lecture by W. S. Rockstro, Esq., every Wednesday at 3.

F. W. RENAUT, Secretary.

THE GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Established by the Corporation of London, 1880.

Principal: Sir JOSEPH BARNBY.

The Michaelmas Term commenced Monday, September 25.
For prospectuses and all further particulars apply to the Secretary.

By order of the Committee,
CHARLES P. SMITH, Secretary.

Victoria Embankment, E.C.

NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE TRIENNIAL MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

President: HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF SUTHERLAND.

VICTORIA HALL, HANLEY, October 19 and 20, 1893.

Thursday Evening.—Berlioz's "Faust."

Friday Morning.—Smart's "The Bride of Dunkerron," Mackenzie's "Pibroch" (Suite), for Solo Violin with Orchestra; Beethoven's Symphony in C minor.

Friday Evening.—"Elijah."

Principals:
Miss MEDORA HENSON. Miss ESTHER PALLISER.
Miss CLARA BUTT.
Mr. EDWARD LLOYD. Mr. HENRY PIERCY.
Mr. FFRANGCON-DAVIES. Mr. WILLIAM EVANS.
Mr. WATKIN MILLS.
Principal and Solo Violin: Mr. WILLY HESS.
Band and Chorus of 350 Performers.
Conductor: Dr. SWINNERTON HEAP.

Programmes on application to Mr. Geo. W. Bradford, Hon. Genera Secretary, Miles Bank Chambers, Hanley.

SOUTH LONDON MUSICAL CLUB.

PRIZE COMPETITION.

The Committee offers £10 10s. for the best Secular Composition for A.T.T.B.B., with Pianoforte Accompaniment, forwarded to the President, South London Musical Club, Gresham Hall, Brixton, London, S.W., not later than Tuesday, December 5, 1893.

The work should occupy not more than ten minutes in performance, and may contain short incidental solos or soli parts. The words must be non-copyright, and the name of their author and the date and place of publication of the book in which they are to be found must be stated.

The Prize will be awarded by a Committee appointed by the Club and assisted by Dr. J. F. Bridge, but will be withheld if the works forwarded are not of sufficient merit.

The composition will become the property of and be published by the Club, and the result of the competition will, in due course, be announced in THE MUSICAL TIMES.

Two vocal scores, with one clearly written set of voice parts, distinguished only by a motto, and accompanied by a sealed envelope bearing the same motto and containing the name and address of the composer, must be forwarded.

COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS.

The Solo-playing Tests for the F.C.O. Examination in January will be: Prelude and Fugue in G major, Bach (No. 2, Book II., Peters); Fantasia in C minor, Op. 25, H. Berens (No. 22, Cecilia Collection, Augener); Choral, with Variations, H. Smart (Novello, Ewer and Co.).

The College Library is open daily from 10 to 5, and on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 9.

Members desiring practice on the College Organ may obtain particulars on application.

The large room, and sundry smaller rooms, may be hired for concerts, meetings, &c. For terms, application should be made to the Assistant Secretary.

E. H. TURPIN, Hon. Secretary.

Hart Street, Bloomsbury, W.C.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES

MISS FLORENCE ARMRIDING (Soprano)
(Pupil of Mr. Shakespeare and Medalist, R.A.M.).
Oratorios, Concerts, Lessons, &c., at 20, Conduit Street. Address, Leicester Villa, Ealing, W.

MISS AUBREY, I.S.M. (Soprano)
Oratorios, Concerts, Dinners, Solo Singing.
13, Canterbury Road, Croydon.

MISS MAUDE BALLARD, A.G.S.M. (Soprano)
(Cert. of Merit and Silver Medal, Cert. of Proficiency and Gold Medal, G.S.M.; Gold and Silver Medals, L.A.M.)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c., 21, Clovelly Mansions, W.C.

MADAME BARTER (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., Westbury Road, Wood Green, N.

MISS VINNIE BEAUMONT (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Ballads, Organ Recitals, &c., address, Point House, Brigg, Lincolnshire.

MADAME CARRIE BLACKWELL (Soprano)
(Pupil of the late Madame Sainton-Dolby).
Orchestral, Oratorio, Ballad Concerts, &c., 4a, Sloane Square, S.W.

MISS SIREMA BURTON (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, Cantatas, &c., address, 6, Woodland Villas, Arboretum Avenue, Lincoln.

MADAME CONWAY (Soprano)
New address, 444, Moss Lane East, Manchester.

MISS MABEL CROSS (Soprano)
(Of the Royal College of Music, London).
For Oratorios, Cantatas, Concerts, &c. Winsford, Cheshire.
"Possesses a lovely voice."—Cheshire County News.

MISS EMILY DAVIES (Soprano)
Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., address, Severn House, Seven Sisters' Road, Finsbury Park, N.

MADAME ELEANOR DAY (Soprano)
Concerts, Private Lessons, &c. Strathaven, Hendon, N.W.

MISS MARJORIE EATON (Soprano)
"Miss Eaton sang most delightfully."—Surrey Comet.
"Possesses a highly cultivated voice of extensive range, and has a very good appearance on the platform."—Alloa Journal.
"Messiah."—"Sang remarkably well, adding another brilliant success to her previous ones gained in this work."—Doncaster Chronicle.
"Maritana."—"Sang with great expression and wonderful artistic effect, her impersonation of Maritana was a model performance."—Waterford Mirror (not Wakefield Mirror, as printed in error last month).
"Elijah."—"As principal soprano Miss Eaton was perfection. Her singing of the Widow and Angel's part was grand."—The Times.
For terms, &c., address, 237, Katherine Street, Ashton-under-Lyne.

MISS FUSSELLE (Soprano)
Licentiate (Artist) R.A.M.
For Concerts, Oratorios, &c. 37, Harrington Square, N.W.

MISS ALMA HALLOWELL (Soprano)
(Med., R.A.M.; Pupil of Signor M. Garcia)
MISS FLORENCE HALLOWELL (Contralto)
Can accept Engagements for Oratorios, Miscellaneous Concerts, &c.
Address, Barkisland, Halifax.

MADAME MADELINE HARDY (Soprano)
27, Loughborough Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS HEROD (Soprano)
Address, Woodley, near Stockport; or, Forsyth's, Manchester.

MISS BESSIE HOLT ("The Lancashire Soprano")
Address: Rawtenstall, near Manchester; or, 6, Ducie Street, Clapham, London, S.W.

MISS HONEYBONE (Soprano)
For Oratorios and Concerts, address, 41, Hampden St., Nottingham; or, Holm Leigh, Earlsfield Road, Wandsworth Common, London.

MRS. BROWN JAMESON (Soprano)
At liberty for Concerts and Oratorio. Care of N. Vert, Esq., 6, Cork Street, Burlington Gardens, W.

MADAME MINNIE JONES (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, and Lessons, address, Grove Lodge, Seven Sisters' Road, Finsbury Park, N.

MISS FLORENCE MONK (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., Glebe Field, Stoke Newington, N.

MISS ANNIE NORLEDGE (Soprano)
(Pupil of W. Shakespeare, Esq.)
For Oratorios and Ballad Concerts, At Homes, and Musical Parties.
Address, 221, South Lambeth Road, London, S.W., and Roseleigh, Newark-on-Trent. Telegrams—Norledge, London.

MISS LILY PEARCE, L.R.A.M. (Soprano)
(From the Weimar Conservatorium).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., 229, Hyde Park Road, Leeds.

MADAME AGNES REID (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c. 46, Havelock Street, Canterbury.

MISS FANNIE SELLERS (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, Recitals, &c., Crag Cottage, Knaresbro'.

MISS SIMPSON (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c.
For terms, apply, Miss Simpson, Todmorden.

MISS AGNES WALKER (Soprano)
(Pupil of Fred. Walker, Esq.)
"The Rose Maiden."—"The solo, 'Bloom on, my roses,' was sung with much taste by Miss Agnes Walker, and the duet, 'I know a rose-bud shining,' with the Tenor, called forth much applause."—Musical Times, July, 1893.
104, Lewisham High Road, New Cross, S.E.

MISS LILY MARSHALL-WARD (Soprano)
MISS JESSIE MARSHALL-WARD (Contralto)
Address, 14, Peel Street, Nottingham.

MISS ETHEL WEBB (Soprano)
Concerts, &c. 14, Balmoral Road, Nottingham.

MISS GERTRUDE WESLEY (Soprano & Harpist)
(Great-granddaughter of Samuel Wesley).
For Oratorio or Ballad Concerts. Testimonials and Critiques from 53, High Street, Doncaster.

MISS MARY WILLIS (Mezzo-Soprano)
For Oratorios, Operas, Concerts, or Private Lessons, address, 9, Rochester Terrace, Camden Road, N.W.

MISS M. L. BOOKER, L.R.A.M. (Contralto)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, care of Mr. Wm. Marriott, 295, Oxford Street, W.; or, Shirebrook Villa, Heeley, Sheffield.

MISS TERESA DEVIENE (Contralto)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c. 70, St. George's Avenue, Tufnell Park, N.

MISS JULIANA DYSON, L.C.M. (Contralto)
Concerts, At Homes, and Private Lessons in Singing, Piano, and Theory. Rose Cottage, Farnworth, R.S.O.

MISS EMMIE FINNEY (Contralto)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c.
42, Pembridge Road, Notting Hill Gate, W.

MISS EMILY FOXCROFT (Contralto)
76, Calabria Road, Highbury, N.

MISS ADELENE GLOVER (Contralto)
(Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden).
For Concerts, Operatic Recitals, &c., address, 5, Brudenell View, Hyde Park, Leeds.

MISS LILIAN HOVEY (Contralto)
(Medalist, R.A.M.; Pupil of Mr. Richard Cummings, A.R.A.M.)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 82, Norfolk Road, Sheffield.

MISS ANNIE NORTHCROFT (Contralto)
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., 38, Gunter Grove, Chelsea.

MISS RINA ROBINSON (Contralto)
For Oratorio and Ballad Concerts. 80, Tufnell Park Road, N.
References kindly permitted to Dr. A. H. Mann, Dr. E. H. Turpin, and Mr. F. A. W. Docker.

MISS HELEN SAUNDERS (Contralto)
(Sainton Dolby Prizeholder, and Sub-Professor, R.A.M.)
Oratorios, Banquets, At Homes, &c., 25, Cloudesley St., Barnsbury, N.

MADAME and MR. SUTTON SHEPLEY
(Contralto and Baritone).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 97, Dalberg Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS LOTTIE SWEENEY (Contralto)
(Pupil of Madame Sainton-Dolby).
For Concerts, Oratorios, &c., address, Miss Sweeney, Vocalist, Armley, near Leeds.

MISS MARY TUNNICLIFFE
(Principal Contralto of St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, E.C.)
94, Fentiman Road, Clapham Road, S.W.

MISS VERKRÜZEN (Contralto)
For terms, Concerts, Oratorios, &c., 119, Petherton Rd., Highbury, N.

MISS ALICE WOLSTENHOLME (Contralto)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Radcliffe, Manchester.

MR. MUNRO DAVISON (F.C.O.)
(Principal Alto, Temple Church).
For Concerts, Masonic Banquets, &c.
(Organist and Choir Director, St. Anne's, Holloway)
For Organ Recitals, &c., 101, Tollington Park, N.

MR. AUGUSTUS BALFE (Tenor)
For Oratorios, Ballad Concerts, Banquets, At Homes, address, care of Organist, Brasted, Kent.

MR. J. T. BIRCH (Tenor)
153, Linwood Road, Handsworth, Birmingham.

MR. CHARLES BLAGBRO (Tenor)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Bradford, Yorkshire.

MR. RIDSDALE BOWLEY (Tenor)
For Concerts, Cantatas, Oratorios, &c.
Weaste, Manchester; or, Forsyth Bros., Deansgate, Manchester.

MR. TOM BUCKLAND (Tenor)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Halifax.
Concert Parties provided.

MR. TOM CHILD
(Principal Tenor, Parish Church, Leeds)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Parish Church, Leeds.

MR. HERBERT CLINCH (Tenor)
Oratorio, Ballads, &c., address, 41, Frederick St., St. John's Wood, N.W.

MR. SINCLAIR DUNN (Scottish Tenor)
For Oratorios, Opera, his popular Entertainments, or Concerts, and the "Balfe Quartet," address, 67, Berners Street, W.

MR. WILLIAM FELL (Tenor)
(Lay-Vicar of Westminster Abbey and late Choral Scholar of King's College, Cambridge).
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, and Private Lessons, address, 50, Bessborough Street, South Belgravia, S.W.

MR. JOSEPH HEALD (Tenor)
5, Hyde Park Mansions, W.

MR. MALDWYN HUMPHREYS, A.R.A.M. (Tenor)
5, Bartholomew Road, N.W.

MR. J. MELLOR (Tenor)
Eccleshill, Bradford, Yorkshire.

MR. T. OLDROYD (Tenor)
For Oratorios and Concerts, address, The Cathedral, Rochester.

MR. T. WILLS PAGE (Tenor)
76, Lewisham High Road, New Cross, S.E. Oratorio, Ballad, Opera, At Homes, Masonic Dinners, &c.

MR. JOHN JAS. SIMPSON (Solo Tenor)
(Ripon Cathedral).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Cathedral.

MR. HARRY STUBBS, R.C.M. (Tenor)
(Of St. George's Chapel, Windsor).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 18, The Cloisters.

MR. J. G. HEWSON (Baritone)

"ELIJAH."

"Mr. Hewson possesses a full baritone voice, and was heard to advantage in the Baal scene, his dramatic declamation of recitatives being excellent. Mr. Hewson's most successful effort was 'Is not His word like a fire,' and we cannot say otherwise than that the rendering was magnificent. The audience were delighted with the display that brought out all Mr. Hewson's capabilities as a vocalist, and he was rewarded with vociferous applause. In the air 'It is enough' Mr. Hewson scored another success. He was undoubtedly cognisant with the numbers which fall to the lot of the Prophet, and the difficult work connected with the title-rôle could scarcely have been placed in better hands. There are few rôles so difficult as that of the Prophet, and we must compliment the artist who performed it on Tuesday last in no mean manner."—Alfreton and Belper Journal, April 21, 1893.

"The honours amongst the soloists were taken by Mr. Hewson, who, as a baritone, has certainly not been surpassed in Retford for a long time. His delineation of the character of Elijah was admirable, and exquisitely did he sing his various recitatives and airs. . . . He sang 'It is enough,' 'Is not His word,' and 'Lord God of Abraham,' with splendid effect."—Retford and Gainsborough Times, December 18.

"The baritone was Mr. Hewson, a fine singer, steady, well-trained, and musical, who found favour with the audience from the first, continued it to the end, and received numerous encores. The most applauded numbers were 'Lord God of Abraham,' 'Is not His word,'—a fine piece of singing, which evoked demonstrations of approval from both choir and audience—'It is enough,' and 'For the mountains shall depart.' The readiness of the singer, his certainty, promptitude, and accuracy, and his expressiveness in the dramatic portions of the Oratorio were all most admirable."—Gainsborough and Retford News, December 18.

"Mr. Hewson was an excellent Elijah."—Mansfield Advertiser.

BENEDICT'S "ST. PETER."

"Mr. Hewson sang the bass solos effectively, delivering the repentant disciple's air, 'O that mine head were waters,' in the best style."—Sheffield Telegraph, April 27, 1892.

"THE CREATION."

"Mr. J. G. Hewson was the bass, and vigorous and most effectual were his contributions. Possessed of strong and pleasant vocal powers, he exercised them to the full."—Derbyshire Courier, April 2, 1892.

"His vigorous declamatory style found ample scope in the part of Raphael; his recitative passages were most effectively delivered, and his solos were deservedly applauded."—Sheffield Daily Telegraph, March 30, 1892.

"Mr. Hewson carried away some golden opinions. He is a singer of recognised ability, and in his rendering of 'Rolling in foaming billows' the audience thoroughly appreciated his efforts. The duet 'Graceful consort' was also most heartily encored."—Blyth Weekly News.

Oratorio, Operatic Recitals, Ballad, &c., Concerts, address, 276, Hyde Road, Manchester. Book of Press opinions on application.

MR. HERBERT ALDRIDGE (Baritone)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, South Street, Romford, Essex.

MR. HENRY BAILEY (Baritone)
For Oratorio, Operatic, Ballad Concerts, &c., 49, Richmond Gardens, West Kensington Park, W.

MR. THEODORE FRANCE (Baritone)
31, Melrose Gardens, West Kensington, W.

MR. GORDON HELLER (Baritone)
(Of St. James's Hall Concerts, London; late Pupil of Hy. Blower, Esq.)
For Oratorios, &c., address, 20, Blenheim Terrace, Leeds.

MR. ROLAND HOYLE (Baritone)
Oratorios, Ballads, &c. Briddon Street, Cheetham, Manchester.

MR. WALTER PEACH (Baritone)
For Concerts and At Homes.
Address, 77, Florence Road, New Cross, S.E.

MR. ROBERT STUTCHFIELD (Baritone)
Concerts, &c. 106, Clapham Road, S.W.

MR. FERGUS ASQUITH (Bass)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Cathedral, Wells.

MR. JOHN BROWNING
(Principal Bass, Leeds Parish Church Choir).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Parish Church, Leeds.

MR. JNO. W. GREENWOOD (Bass)
For Concerts, Ballads, &c. 140, Queen's Road, Halifax.

MR. WALTER J. HOBSON (Bass)
(Choirmaster, St. Martin's Church, Liverpool).
For Oratorios and Concerts, 103, Robson Street, Liverpool.
"Mr. Hobson proved himself to be an artist of much more than average merit."—Vide Press.

MR. T. E. MACKIE (Bass)
(Pupil of Hamilton White, Esq., N.S.P.M.).
Queen's Terrace, West Field, Retford, Notts.

MR. HENRY POPE (Bass)
For Concerts, Oratorio, Opera, Pupils.
Address, 19, Westbourne Park Villas, W.

MR. RICKARD (the Yorkshire Basso)
(Pupil of the late Signor Pinsuti).
Keswick Harmonic Society ("Acis and Galatea").—"Mr. Rickard was undoubtedly the lion of the evening. He is the next best bass singer to Signor Foli that Keswickians have heard."—Cumberland Times, April 22, 1893.
Concert in Steinway Hall, London.—"'Honour and Arms' was given by Mr. Rickard in a manner not unworthy of Herr Henschel himself."—Musical Standard.
For Oratorios and Concerts, address, Halifax, Yorkshire.

MR. CHARLES SIEBERT (Basso)
For Concerts, Organ Recitals, &c., 27, Lausanne Road, Hornsey, N.

MR. GEORGE STUBBS (Bass)
(St. Paul's Cathedral).
For Oratorios, Concerts, Dinners, &c., please address, St. Paul's Cathedral, London.

MR. ARTHUR WARDLEY (Bass)
38, Alexandra Road, Manchester.
For Concerts, Oratorios, &c.
Free Trade Hall Concerts, Manchester.—"Mr. Arthur Wardley uses a good voice with commendable discretion."—Manchester Guardian.

MISS CHRISTINA BRUMLEU
(Violinist, A.L.A.M.).
For Concerts, At Homes, &c., address, Heimath, Sidcup, Kent.

MISS HILDA MEREDITH (Violinist)
(Medalist, R.A.M., and Pupil of the late Mons. Sainton).
For Concerts, At Homes, &c., 52, Holmdale Rd., W. Hampstead.

MISS FLORENCE J. PEGLAR (Violinist)
Certificated Assoc. Board and G.S.M. For Concerts, At Homes, or Orchestral Work. 41, Manor Road, St. John's, S.E.

MR. J. SHARPE (Oboeist and Oboe Maker)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 51, Lydgate Hill, Pudsey, near Leeds.

MADAME AGNES LARKCOM requests that all communications respecting Concerts or Lessons may be addressed to her at 53, Westbourne Park Villas, W.

MISS JULIA JONES (Soprano) begs that all communications respecting Oratorios, Concerts, Vocal Recitals, &c., will be addressed to 15, St. Thomas Road, Finsbury Park, N.

MADAME LAURA SMART (Soprano) requests that all communications respecting Oratorio, Operatic Recital, or Ballad Concerts be addressed, 106, Bolingbroke Grove, Wandsworth Common, S.W.; or, 50, Church Street, Liverpool.

MASTER GEO. TURNBULL SINCLAIR (Soprano) (Solo Boy to W. S. Hoyte, Esq.). For "Sunday Evenings," Harvest Festivals, Oratorios, and Concerts. Apply to 102, College Place, Camden Town, N.W.

MISS BROOKES (Contralto) accepts ENGAGEMENTS for Ballad, Oratorio, and Miscellaneous Concerts. Address, 8, Belvidere Road, Walsall.

MR. EDWARD M. CHESHAM (Baritone). Oratorio, Ballads, &c. Will be pleased to answer any communications addressed to him at Kent Lodge, Turney Road, West Dulwich, regarding the acceptance of a few convenient engagements.

MR. E. JACKSON (Baritone) is now booking Engagements for Oratorios and Ballad Concerts. For terms, press notices, and vacant dates, address, Principal Bass, New Coll., Oxford.

CHANGE of ADDRESS.—MR. DAN PRICE (Baritone, of Westminster Abbey) begs to announce his CHANGE of ADDRESS to 9, Clarendon Road, Holland Park, W., where all communications respecting Concert, Masonic, Oratorio Engagements, and Private Lessons should be addressed.

Telephone No. 496.

MR. BINGLEY SHAW (Baritone), CONCERT AGENT and MANAGER, Pianoforte Warehouse, Nottingham.

MR. BYRON DEWHURST (Bass) requests that all communications respecting Oratorios, Ballad Concerts, At Homes, &c., be addressed to Byron Dewhurst, Cathedral, Canterbury.

MR. EGBERT ROBERTS (Bass) requests that all communications respecting Oratorios, Opera, or Concerts be addressed, 45, Pentonville Road, N.

MR. ALEXANDER TUCKER (Basso Profundo). The Globe (April 25, 1893) says:—"Mr. Alexander Tucker, a basso gifted with a remarkably fine and well-trained voice, sang admirably, and seems likely to attain a distinguished position among modern vocalists." Address, St. Audries, Enfield, N.

MISS CARRIE LEWIS (L.R.A.M.), Performer and Teacher, Accompanist (good reader), and Solo Pianist, accepts ENGAGEMENTS for Concerts, At Homes, Private Practice, &c. 218, Upper Richmond Road, Putney, S.W.

MISS CLARA TITTERTON, Associate and Silver Medalist, R.A.M., First Class Certificate Society of Arts, &c., &c., receives PUPILS for the VIOLIN and PIANOFORTE on moderate terms. Lessons given at pupils' own residences. Schools attended. Miss Titterton also accepts Engagements for Concerts and At Homes. 38, Agate Road, The Grove, Hammersmith, W.

MISS ALICE GLYN, the Mandoline Soloist, accepts ENGAGEMENTS for Concerts, Dinners, Drawing-rooms, &c. Lessons given. 1, Inkerman Terrace, Kensington, W.

MR. FRANK FREWER, L.R.A.M., A.C.O. (Organist, St. James's, Garlickhithe, E.C.), teaches the PIANOFORTE, ORGAN, &c. For terms for Concerts, Organ Recitals, Pianoforte or Organ Lessons, address, 6, Wilmot Place, Rochester Road, and Camden Road, N.W.

MR. ALF. R. WATSON (Solo Violinist and Musical Director of Woodhall Spa) accepts Engagements for Concerts, Solos, Leader, or Principal 2nd Violin or Viola. 7, Clarendon Street, Nottingham.

MR. GEO. B. LISSANT, Organist, St. Augustine's, Queen's Gate, S.W. Organ, Pianoforte, Harmonium, Singing Lessons. Choirs trained. 33, Paultons Square, S.W.

MISS

FANNY BOUFFLEUR

(SOPRANO)

For Oratorios, Cantatas, Concerts, &c., 239, Upper Parliament Street, Liverpool.

Agent, N. Vert Esq., 6, Cork Street, London, W.

MISS LOUISE WEAVER

(CONTRALTO)

AND

MR. GILBERT THORNE

(BARITONE)

are now booking engagements (either together or separately) for Oratorios, Miscellaneous Concerts, At Homes, &c., for the ensuing season.

For terms, &c., please address, The Ferns, Richmond Park Road, Kingston-on-Thames; or, 11, Penryn Street, Oakley Square, N.W.

MR.

SMALLWOOD METCALFE

(BASS)

For Oratorios, Concerts, &c.

"Special praise must be given to Mr. Smallwood Metcalfe for his admirable singing. He is the possessor of a fine bass voice of considerable compass and sonority."—The Times, December 6, 1892.

Terms, &c., address, 142, Belsize Road, London, N.W.

MR. LAWRENCE FRYER

(TENOR, St. Paul's Cathedral).

"Has a magnificent voice."—Macclesfield Chronicle.

"A tenor voice of richness and power, which we hope soon to hear again."—Bath Gazette.

"Quite electrified the audience with 'Thou shalt break them.'"—Bishop Stortford Mercury.

"'Comfort ye' and 'Every valley' were grandly rendered."—Sheffield Chronicle.

"In the declamatory passages he reached an enviable point of excellence. 'Sound an alarm' was a remarkable exhibition of power."—Finchley Gazette.

"His ringing tones gave conclusive indication of his great capabilities."—Southampton Times.

"Nature has endowed Mr. Lawrence Fryer with a magnificent tenor voice, which he uses with true artistic feeling."—Grantham Journal.

"A rich and powerful tenor voice, of unusual quality and range."—Nottingham Journal.

Address, 47, Croxted Road, Dulwich; or, St. Paul's Cathedral.

MR. THOMAS KEMPTON

(Bass, Vicar Choral, St. Paul's Cathedral)

AND

MR. JAMES BATES

(Director of Choir, Christ Church, Lancaster Gate, W.)

PROVIDE

SOLO BOYS and LEADING BOYS

For Oratorios, Festival Services, Concerts, Organ Recitals, &c.

MASTER SYDNEY LOVETT

(Solo Boy, Christ Church, Lancaster Gate, W.)

"Master Sydney Lovett is possessed of a singularly sweet soprano voice and a most refined style."—Daily Telegraph, April 12, 1893.

"Master Sydney Lovett's singing was received with the utmost enthusiasm" (Lord R. Churchill and Right Hon. A. J. Balfour's Primrose League Demonstration, at Paddington).—Globe, May 6, 1893.

"Master Sydney Lovett, a boy with a splendid voice, was the soloist." (Visit of T.R.H. the Prince and Princess of Wales to Westminster Town Hall.)—Standard, July 3, 1893.

MASTER LEONARD TUDGAY

(Solo Boy, St. Mary's Church, Stoke Newington, N.)

MASTER CHARLES AKAST

(Solo Boy, St. Matthew's Church, Ealing, W.)

MASTER HARRY PEACOCK

(Solo Boy, Hampstead Parish Church, N.W.)

MASTER CLAUDE HAMILTON

(Solo Boy, All Saints' Church, Norfolk Square, W.)

Also ten other thoroughly trained and reliable vocalists. Can be seen by appointment.

Letters and applications for testimonials, criticisms, terms, &c., to be addressed:

Messrs. KEMPTON and BATES, 60, Moorgate Street, E.C.

Provincial Clergy, Organists, Musical Directors, and others will find this address easily accessible from all the London termini.

THE MISSES TULLOCHS' VOCAL, INSTRUMENTAL, AND DRAMATIC RECITALS.

Miss EDITH TULLOCH (Soprano), Pupil of W. Shakespeare.
Miss ADA TULLOCH (Guitar), Pupil of Madame Sydney Pratten.
Miss DORA TULLOCH (Recitations).
Miss BERYL TULLOCH (Mandoline).

Operatic Scenas and Arias, Ballads, Mandoline and Guitar Solos and Duets, Italian, French, and German Songs, Spanish Songs to Guitar Accompaniments, Recitations, Duologues.

Country Engagements.—Bearwood, October 11; Mosely, 12; Market Rasen, 16; Louth, 17; Manchester, 23-28, Gentlemen's Concert Hall, return visit, November 6; Pollokshields, 7; Ayr, 10; Paisley, 11; Glasgow City Hall Concerts, 15; Walsall, Leatherhead, Newbury, Perth, Edinburgh, Stirling, Birmingham, Wednesbury, Harborne, King's Heath, &c.

For Vacant Dates, Press Notices, Programmes, and particulars, address, The Misses Tulloch, Erith, Kent; or, Daniel Mayer's Concert Agency, 8, Argyll Place, W.

THE STANSTEAD QUARTET

(MALE VOICE).

For Concerts, Dinners, At Homes, &c. Full Programme arranged. Terms, Sec., Buckhurst, Forest Hill, S.E.

MISS

MARIE HOOTEN

(CONTRALTO)

(Late Westmoreland Scholar and Parepa-Rosa Gold Medalist of the Royal Academy of Music)

AND

MR.

EDWARD BRANSCOMBE

(TENOR)

(LAY-VICAR OF WESTMINSTER ABBEY)

Are now booking Engagements for the present season.

Miss MARIE HOOTEN has fulfilled Engagements at—

Aberdeen
Alfreton
Banbury
Bath
Beckenham
Beeston
Belfast
Birmingham
Blackburn
Blackpool
Bradford
Brockley
Bromley
Burton-on-Trent
Buxton
Cambridge
Carlow
Castle Donington
Cheltenham
Chester
Clonmel
Derby
Dewsbury
Dover
Dundee
Dunfermline
Ealing
Enniscorthy
Epsom
Finchley
Fulham
Glasgow
Grantham
Great Yarmouth
Hampton Court
Harrogate
Heanor
Hornsey
Ilkeston
Ipswich
Kegworth
Leicester
Lichfield
Liverpool
Llandudno
London
Long Eaton
Loughboro'
Luton
Maidstone
Mansfield
Middlesbro'.
Newcastle-on-Tyne
Newport (I.W.)
Northallerton
Northampton
Nottingham
Pontypool
Perth
Paisley
Pollokshields
Redcar
St. Ives
Salisbury
Southampton
South Shields
Stratford
Sutton-in-Ashfield
West Bromwich
Wexford
Woolwich
Worthing
&c., &c.

Mr. BRANSCOMBE has fulfilled engagements at—

Aberdeen
Accrington
Airdrie
Alloa
Armagh
Ayr
Banbury
Barnet
Bath Battle
Beckenham
Bedford
Belfast
Biggleswade
Birmingham
Blackburn
Blackpool
Boston
Bradford
Braintree
Brentwood
Brighton
Bristol
Briton Ferry
Bromley
Broxbourne
Burton-on-Trent
Cambridge
Canterbury
Carlow
Caterham
Chelmsford
Cheltenham
Chertsey
Chester
Chesterfield
Clonmel
Coventry
Cowes
Croydon
Darwen
Derby
Dartford
Dewsbury
Dover
Dowlais
Droylsden
Dublin
Dumfries
Dundee
Dunfermline
Edinburgh
Edmonton
Egham
Enniscorthy
Erith
Ewell
Falkirk
Glasgow
Gloucester
Godalming
Gravesend
Great Yarmouth
Greenock
Guildford
Halifax
Hampton
Harrogate
Harlesden
Hastings
Hertford
High Wycombe
Hoddesdon
Hove
Ingatestone
Interlaken
Ipswich
Jersey
Jarrow
Kegworth
Keighley
Kendal
Kew
Kilmarnock
King's Lynn
Kirkcaldy
Leamington
Lee
Leighton Buzzard
Leytonstone
Liverpool
Llandudno
Llanelly
London
Long Eaton
Lucerne
Luton
Maidenhead
Maidstone
Maldon
Malvern
Mossley
Moulsey
Newark
New Brompton
Newcastle-on-Tyne
Newcastle-under-Lyme
Newport (I.W.)
Northampton
Northfleet
Nottingham
Paisley
Perth
Peterhead
Pollokshields
Pontypool
Plymouth
Putney
Reading
Redhill
Reigate
Richmond
Rochester
Ryde
Selkirk
Sevenoaks
Sheffield
Southampton
Southport
Southsea
Sunderland
Sutton
Swindon
South Shields
Twickenham
Tunbridge Wells
Wakefield
Wexford
Wimbledon
Willesden
Woodside
Wolverton
Woolwich
Workington
Worthing

Miss Marie Hooten and Mr. Edward Branscombe's Engagements (continued)—

And for the following Choral and other Societies:—

Aberdeen Tonic Sol-fa Institute
Accrington Choral Society
Airdrie Choral Union
Alloa Musical Association
All Saints' Choral Society (Hastings)
Armagh Philharmonic Society
Ayr Choral Society
Bach Choir
Banbury Philharmonic Society
Bar Musical Society
Beckenham Choral Society
Bedford Musical Society.
Belfast Philharmonic Society
Biggleswade Choral Society
Blackburn St. Cecilia and Vocal Union
Bow and Bromley Institute Choir
Braintree Choral Society
Brentwood Vocal and Instrumental Society
Brighton Sacred Harmonic Society
Brighton and Hove Choral and Orchestral Society
Bristol Musical Association
Brixton Choral Society
Cambridge University Musical Society
Cecilian Choral Society (Brondesbury)
Chelmsford Musical Society
Chesterfield Harmonic Society
City Glee Club
Corn Exchange Glee Club
Croydon Philharmonic Society
Derby Choral Union
Dewsbury Choral Society
Dover Amateur Musical Society
Dover Catch Club
Dover Choral Society
Dr. Mann's Festival Choir (Cambridge)
Dr. Rea's Choir (Newcastle)
Droylsden Philharmonic Union
Dublin Musical Society
Dublin University Choral Society
Dumfries and Maxwelltown Choral Society
Dundee Amateur Choral Union
Dunfermline Choral Union
East Cowes Choral Society
East Moulsey Choral Society
Edinburgh Choral Union
Electro-Harmonic Society
Excelsior City Musical Society
Falkirk Choral Society
Finsbury Choral Society
Finsbury Park Musical Society
Glasgow Choral Union
Gloucester Choral Society
Great Yarmouth Musical Society
Godalming Choral Society
Greenock Choral Union
Guildford Choral Society
Halifax Choral Society
High Wycombe Choral Society
Hornsey Musical Society
Ipswich Choral Society
Jarrow Philharmonic Society
Keighley Musical Union
Kendal Choral Society
Kentish Town Musical Society
Kirkcaldy Musical Association
Kilmarnock Philharmonic Society
Kyrle Choir
Leamington Philharmonic Choral Union
Lloyd's Musical Society
Luton Choral Society
Maidenhead Choral Society
Maldon Philharmonic Society
Mossley Vocal Society
Mr. Kirkhope's Choir (Edinburgh)
Musical Guild
Newport (I.W.) Choral Society
Northampton Choral Society
North-East London Choral Soc.
North Malvern Choral Society
Nottingham Sacred Harmonic Society
Old Acquaintance Musical Society
Orpheus Choral Society (Kentish Town)
Paisley Choral Union
Perth Musical Society
Peterhead Choral Society
Pollokshields Lyrical Society
Pontypool Harmonic Society
Princes Concert Society
Reading Temperance Choral Society
Redhill and Reigate Harmonic Society
Robert Burns Club
Rochester, Strood, and Chatham Choral Society
Ryde Choral Union
Ryde Philharmonic Society
St. Andrew's Musical Society (Streatham)
St. Cecilia Choral Society (Glasgow)
St. Cecilia Musical Society (Sheffield)
St. George's Choral Society (Gravesend)
St. Mark's Choral Society (Lewisham)
St. Paul's Choral Society (Canonbury)
St. Paul's Choral Society (Walworth)
Selkirk Choral Union
South Acton Choral Society
Southampton Choral Society
South London Institute Orchestral Society
Southport Choral Union
South Shields Choral Society
Streatham Choral Society
Sunderland Philharmonic Society
Sutton Choral Association
Tunbridge Wells Vocal Association
Twickenham Choral Society
Vaudeville Club
Wakefield Choral Society
West End Glee and Musical Society
West Lambeth Choral Society
Westminster Orchestral Society
Wood Green Musical Society
Woodside Park Musical Society
Woolwich Choral Union
Workington Choral Society
&c., &c.

Please address, 37, Torrington Square, Bloomsbury; or,
Mr. W. B. HEALEY,
17, Great Marlborough Street, W.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS.

MR. DUTTON (St. Paul's Cathedral) provides BOYS, trained entirely by himself, and thoroughly experienced in all kinds of Solo music.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Are now booking Engagements for Harvest Festivals.

MASTER ALBERT LEE,
Solo Boy (4½ years), All Saints', Blackheath.

MASTER W. A. GOUGH,
Solo Boy (3¾ years), St. Alban's, Holborn.

MASTER EDWARD WOOD,
Solo Boy (2½ years), St. George's, Bickley, & St. James's, Marylebone.

MASTER FRANK CAMPBELL,
Solo Boy (1¼ years), St. George's, Bickley.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Have made a great reputation.
Address, 19, Alpha Road, New Cross, S.E.

THE
ENGLISH CONCERT PARTY

MADAME LESLIE ARNOTT.
MADAME JULIA HUTCHINGS.
MR. A. BOWYER BRISTOL.
MR. EDMUND EDWARDS.

Solo Pianoforte—
MRS. A. L. RICHARDSON, L.R.A.M.

Solo Violin—
MR. W. H. HENLEY.

Solo Harp—
J. H. COCKERILL
(Sir Charles Hallé's Band).

Conductor and Accompanist—
MR. WALTER J. EVANS.

The above Party are prepared to accept Engagements for the forthcoming season for Sacred, Chamber, or Ballad Concerts; also,

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS WITH SIR AUGUSTUS HARRIS,
FOR
CONCERT RECITALS OF GOUNOD'S OPERA
PHILEMON AND BAUCIS.

Applications for vacant dates to be made to Manager,
P. Henry Jones, Hampden House, Phœnix Street, London, N.W.
Special arrangements for Charity Concerts.

MR. JOSEF CANTOR'S
"GEMS OF THE OPERAS"
CONCERT COMPANY.

All communications, Church Street, Liverpool.

Telegrams—"Cantor, Liverpool."

ATHENÆUM HALL,
BUCHANAN STREET, GLASGOW.

Under the distinguished Patronage of—
The Right Hon. Lord and Lady Blythswood.
The Right Hon. Lord and Lady Kelvin.
Sir James King, Bart., and Lady King.
Brigadier-General Sir Donald Matheson, K.C.B.
James Campbell, Esq., of Tullichewan.

MR. H. A. L. SELIGMANN'S EVENING CONCERT,
FRIDAY, October 6, 1893, at 8 o'clock.
Artists:
Mrs. BROWN JAMESON (Soprano).
Miss NELLIE MOIR (Contralto).
Mr. H. A. L. SELIGMANN (Tenor).
Mr. J. W. RENDER (Baritone).
Mons. CH. CHOLLET (Solo Violin) (First appearance in Glasgow).
Mr. PAUL DELLA TORRE (Solo Pianoforte) (First appearance in Glasgow).
Mr. ALFRED HEAP (Accompanist).

Tickets: Reserved Balcony, 4s.; Reserved Stalls, 3s.; Back Balcony, 1s. 6d.; Area, 1s., from Messrs. Paterson, Sons and Co., 152, Buchanan Street, Glasgow; or at the Secretary's Office, Glasgow Athenæum, St. George's Place. Doors open at 7.30. Carriages at 10.15.

POPULAR MUSICAL UNION.
Conductor, Mr. W. Henry Thomas.

Rehearsals are held in the Governors' Room, The Charterhouse, E.C., every Saturday afternoon at 6 p.m., commencing on September 23.
Mendelssohn's ST. PAUL will be performed at the People's Palace, Mile End, E., on December 2. Subscription for members of the Choir or Orchestra for the Half-Season up to Christmas, 2s. 6d.
Applications for membership may be made to the Hon. Sec. before the Rehearsals; or to 40, Norfolk Street, E.C.

BRISTOL INDUSTRIAL AND FINE ART EXHIBITION.

INSTRUMENTAL COMPETITIONS.
Brass Band Contests (Senior and Junior), open to all Amateur Bands,
AND
SOLO PIANOFORTE COMPETITIONS
(Senior and Junior), open to all Amateurs, will take place on Saturday, December 2, 1893.

CHORAL COMPETITIONS
FOR
FEMALE CHOIRS, MALE CHOIRS, and MIXED CHOIRS,
Will take place on Monday, December 18, 1893.

PRIZES VALUE OVER £250.

All Entries and Entrance Fees to be sent to the Corresponding Secretary not later than Monday, October 23, 1893.
Special Railway Arrangements.
For all particulars, regulations, and rules, apply to Henry J. Spear, Corresponding Secretary, Guildhall, Small Street, Bristol.

THE HORSE-SHOE GLEE SINGERS.
Alto: Mr. PERCY COWARD (St. George's Chapel Royal, Windsor Castle); Tenor: Mr. ARTHUR S. COWARD; Baritone: Mr. RANDULPH L. COWARD; Bass: Mr. W. BELL KEMPTON (St. George's Chapel Royal, Windsor Castle).
For Concerts, &c. Terms on application to W. Bell Kempton, 16, Horse-Shoe Cloisters, Windsor Castle.

GRAND THEATRE, NELSON, LANCASHIRE,
Monday, October 30, 1893.
UNA
By REEDYFORD and SALTAIRE PRIZE CHOIRS.
Chorus of Sixty Voices.
Mrs. Helen Trust, Miss Jaenie Rankin, Mr. Alfred Jordan, Mr. Norman Salmond. Harp, Mr. J. H. Cockerill. Band selected from Sir Charles Hallé's Orchestra. Conductor, Mr. Alfred R. Gaul, Mus. Bac.

MISSION OF THE HOLY REDEEMER CHORAL SOCIETY.
Second Season, 1893-94.
Ladies and Gentlemen are invited to join. First Practice, Tuesday, evening, September 26, at 7.30.
Subscription: 2s. 6d. for the Season; or, 1s. 6d. to Christmas.
Conductor—Mr. W. Marlow, Kyrle Society.
Apply to the Hon. Secretary, 108, Church Street, Stoke Newington; or to the Assistant Hon. Sec., Mr. Walter Frost, 58, Norcott Road, Stoke Newington.

VICTORIA COLLEGE OF MUSIC.
Instituted by the Victoria College Corporation, Ltd.
Incorporated 1891.

Patrons:
The Right Hon. The Marquis of Lorne, K.T.
The Right Hon. The Earl of Dartmouth.
Next Diploma Examination (Central), November 6.
Next Local Theoretical Examination (all Centres), December 4.
Last day of entry, November 20.
Local Practical Examinations will be held at various Centres during the remainder of 1893.
Local Secretaries required for towns not already represented.
Full particulars and Regulations on application.
GEO. A. STANTON, Secretary.
11, Burleigh Street, Strand, W.C.

MUSICAL INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE
Limited.
Central Office: 113, Great Portland Street, W.
Principal: Professor EDWIN M. LOTT, Mus. Doc.
Vice-Principal: J. H. LEWIS, Mus. Doc., D.C.L.
NEXT LOCAL THEORETICAL EXAMINATION, Nov. 29.
Practical Examinations throughout the kingdom.
W. A. PHILPOTT, Mus. Bac., Secretary.

LONDON CONSERVATOIRE OF MUSIC,
Instituted 1876,
PORCHESTER ROAD, HYDE PARK.

This splendidly-appointed building, re-organised on an extended scale, affords increased facilities to resident and out-students, with direct entry to public career if desired. The West wing and grounds are devoted to the ladies' department. Prospectus post-free.
LANSDOWNE COTTELL, Director.

MUSICAL DEGREES and DIPLOMAS, King's College, London.—A complete curriculum is now established for Training for all MUSICAL DEGREES and DIPLOMAS. Examinations will be held each term, and the final examination will be equivalent to that required for degrees, and so form a full preparation for Examinations in Music, held at the Universities and Colleges.
Dr. E. H. Turpin and Dr. F. J. Sawyer have kindly consented to act as Examiners in conjunction with Professor J. E. Vernham and Mr. Hamilton Robinson, Mus. Bac.
Particulars may be obtained of the Professor of Music, King's College, Strand, W.C.; or, from J. W. Cunningham, Secretary.

MR. W. C. AINLEY, Mus. Bac., Cantab. (1884), teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c., by Correspondence. Terms moderate. New House, Mirfield, Yorkshire.

DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who passed the following EXAMINATIONS:—MUS. DOC., OXON. and DUBLIN; MUS. BAC. Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, and Durham (1892); L.R.A.M., 1893; L.L.C.M., 1893; F.C.O., 1893. FOUR HUNDRED Certificates, "Diplomas," and Degrees have been gained by Dr. Allison's Pupils at Musical Examinations, and they won SIX GOLD MEDALS and Three Silver Medals. Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Revision of Compositions, by Post, to Correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, Organ, and Piano. 68, Nelson St., Manchester.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, A.R.A.M., teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c., by post. Personal Lessons in Pianoforte or Theory at own or pupil's residence; or at 84, New Bond Street, W. Schools attended. Address, Willersley House, Old Charlton.

EMIL BEHNKE'S System of VOICE TRAINING is carried on by Mrs. and Miss Behnke and assistant. Also Emil Behnke's method of treating STAMMERING. References to doctors whose patients have been cured. Pamphlet, 1s., post-free, of Mrs. Emil Behnke, 18, Earl's Court Square, S.W.

MR. GEORGE J. BENNETT is prepared to receive PUPILS in HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c. Address, 25, Vincent Square, Westminster, S.W.; or, 1, Berners St., W.

MR. T. HEMMINGS, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.C.O., L.Mus., T.C.L., prepares Candidates for ARTS and MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS by Post. Stoke-on-Trent.

DR. F. J. KARN, Mus. Bac., Cantab.; Mus. Doc., Trinity College, Toronto; L.Mus., T.C.L., gives LESSONS Personally or by post in HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, FUGUE, ORCHESTRATION, ACOUSTICS, &c.; and prepares for Musical Examinations. Latest successes: MUS. BAC., DURHAM, 1891 and 1892, FINAL EXAM.; FIRST EXAM., 1890, 1891, and 1892; CAMBRIDGE, MUS.BAC., 1892; LONDON, MUS.BAC., 1891; DUBLIN, MUS. BAC., 1891 and 1892; F.C.O., 1892; A.C.O., 1893; L.R.A.M. (Composition), Preliminary Mus. Bac. Examination, Cambridge, 1893; Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc., Toronto, 1893; Gold Medalists, 1890, 1892, and 1893; L.Mus., L.C.M.; L.T.C.L. and A.T.C.L.; F.T.S.C.; Senior Local, R.A.M. and R.C.M., Theory and Pianoforte; and T.C.L., Senior Honours; A.R.C.M. Special and individual attention given to Correspondents. Upwards of 300 Diplomas and Degrees and several Gold and Silver Medals gained by pupils. MSS. corrected and revised for publication. Terms very moderate. Address, 70, Park Road, Haverstock Hill, N.W.

MR. C. E. MILLER can receive pupils for Counterpoint, Harmony, Fugue, at 84, New Bond Street; or his residence, 49, Elgin Crescent, Notting Hill. Lessons by correspondence.

DR. W. JOHN REYNOLDS, D.Mus., Lond., L.Mus., T.C.L., gives LESSONS, personally or by post, in the Theory of Music (including acoustics). Recent successes. 48, Highbury Grove, N.

MR. F. SOMMER, A.L.A.M. (Certified as having "highly distinguished himself as a HARMONIST" by the late Professor Wylde, Mus. Doc., Cantab., Gresham Lecturer on Music, &c.), gives Postal Lessons in HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, COMPOSITION, and prepares Candidates for all MUSICAL EXAMS. Over 500 Certificates, Diplomas, Degrees, Medals, and Scholarships gained by Pupils during past fifteen years. Prospectus free, giving full particulars and containing an instructive "Comparison of English and German Methods of Teaching HARMONY."

Terms:—Per Weekly Lesson (any subject) £0 2 6
12 Weekly Lessons (paid in advance) 1 5 0
24 Weekly Lessons (paid in advance) 2 5 0
No terminal notice required in any case.

Mr. F. SOMMER, A.L.A.M., 14, Mardale Street, Shepherd's Bush, London.

Will Correspondents whose letters were returned by the G.P.O. (as "Insufficiently Addressed") kindly write again?

MR. R. STOKOE, Mus. Bac., Cantab., F.C.O., gives ORGAN LESSONS at Christ Church, Down Street, Piccadilly. Harmony, Counterpoint, &c., taught personally or by post. 86, Rossiter Road, Balham, S.W.

DR. TAYLOR, Mus.D., Oxon., F.C.O., L.Mus. (Author of "Vocal Score Reading Exercises for F.C.O. Students"), prepares CANDIDATES for MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS by Post. Address, Wolverhampton Road, Stafford.

MR. A. W. TOMLYN, Mus.B., Dunelm, L.T.C.L., Berwick-on-Tweed, COACHES CANDIDATES for University and all other Exams. by post. Every possible attention and assistance guaranteed. Many past successes.

MR. W. H. TUTT, Mus. Bac., Cantab., L.R.A.M., teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, ACOUSTICS, &c., by Correspondence. Ashburn, Derbyshire.

MUSICAL PROFESSION.—MR. W. de M. SERGISON, Organist and Director of the Choir of St. Peter's, Eaton Square, S.W., trains Youths as Musicians, especially as CHOIR-TRAINERS and ORGANISTS. Mr. Sergison's course affords advantages not attainable at any London Academies. Many past pupils are now holding Cathedral and important Church appointments in England, America, and the Colonies. Applications should be addressed to Mr. Sergison, at the Vestry of the Church.

DR. J. WARRINER prepares Candidates successfully for all MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS, and receives Resident and Professional Students, on advantageous terms, if talented. De Crespigny Lodge, Denmark Hill, S.E.

ELEMENTS of MUSIC.—SPECIAL LESSONS by Mrs. WEBSTER, L.R.A.M., Author of the "Groundwork of Music," "Child's Primer" of the Theory of Music. Granville House, 90, Angell Road, Brixton, S.W.

HARMONY TAUGHT by CORRESPONDENCE. Pupils, in any part of the United Kingdom, prepared by an experienced Teacher for Local Centre Examinations. Terms moderate. Address, E. M. G., Novello and Co., 80 & 81, Queen St., Cheapside, E.C.

VOICES TRAINED (Altos included) and SIGHT-SINGING and the PIANOFORTE TAUGHT by Mr. W. A. FROST (Vicar-Choral of St. Paul's Cathedral), at 16, Amwell Street, Myddelton Square, E.C. Pupils of Mr. Frost have at various times obtained choir appointments in open competitions at St. Paul's Cathedral, Westminster Abbey, the Chapels Royal (St. James's and Whitehall), York, Salisbury, Chichester (two), Norwich, Oxford, and several London churches; and he has often been asked for more efficient altos than he has been able to supply.

MR. ARNOLD BIRCH gives LESSONS in VOICE PRODUCTION and SINGING at his Music Studio (Established 1886), 57, Regent Street, W. New Music by Arnold Birch, "Stepping Stones," "The Desired Haven," "The Mirthful Monk." 2s. A Book of New Kyries, Chants, &c. 6d. Technical Exercises for Pianoforte. 2s.

RESIDENT PUPIL.—MR. ARTHUR W. MARCHANT, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.C.O., Organist and Choirmaster, All Saints' Parish Church, Huntingdon, has a VACANCY for another RESIDENT PUPIL. Very fine three-manual Organ (tubular pneumatic). Preparation for College of Organists and other Exams., and every facility for a thorough musical training. A small post as Organist can be offered when qualified. The Terrace, Huntingdon.

RESIDENT PUPIL DESIRED (Lady or Gentleman), Vocal (specialist) or Organ, with Violin and P.F. Past pupils have been very successful. Comfortable home and careful supervision. Organist, 6, Christchurch Terrace, Doncaster.

MR. H. WHARTON WELLS, F.C.O., Organist and Director of the Choir, St. Mary's, Putney, S.W., wishes for a RESIDENT PUPIL. Full musical services and fine organ. Highest recommendations. Last pupil has obtained an appointment.

AN eminent Conductor and Concert-giver is open to receive a Young Lady as resident (or non-resident) ARTICLED PUPIL, to be trained for Ballad, Operatic, and Oratorio Concerts. She must be young, of good appearance, and should possess a good Contralto voice, with a fair knowledge of music. She would receive a thorough training in the vocal art; and, when efficient, would have the advantage of appearing at Concerts in the principal North of England towns, Scotland, &c. A premium will be required. Address, in first instance, Conductor, Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

MUSICAL VACANCIES for TALENT.—The London Conservatoire of Music, Hyde Park, affords free tuition and resident scholarships preparatory for engagements. Forms for private examination, London, Liverpool, Manchester, and Birmingham branches, post-free.

MISS M. KROHN. Guitar taught at own or Pupil's residence (Madame Pratten's method). Singing Class, Wednesday evenings. 113, Blenheim Crescent, Notting Hill, W.

CONDUCTOR.—To ORCHESTRAL or CHORAL SOCIETIES.—An experienced Conductor of ability and reputation is open to Engagements. J. H. Beta, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES and CLERGY.—Mr. H. WHARTON WELLS, F.C.O., is open to accept the APPOINTMENT of CONDUCTOR to a good Choral Society, or as Choirmaster at a Church. Highest references. 36, Halford Road, Richmond, S.W.; or, St. Mary's, Putney, S.W.

TEACHERS and TUNERS, anywhere, may improve their Local Connections. State subjects. Prospectus sent. Mutual, 64, High Street, Notting Hill Gate, London.

ST. GEORGE'S CHAPEL, Windsor Castle.—CHORAL SCHOLARSHIP VACANT, value £40 per annum. FOUR CHORISTERS also to be elected, paying £50 per annum, with prospect of future Scholarship. Age, between 8 and 11. Sons of professional men eligible.

Education preparatory to Public Schools.

Head Master, Ashley Bickersteth, Esq., M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge.

Election on Tuesday, October 10.

All information on application to Head Master. Address, for the present, The Palace, Exeter.

SOLO BOY WANTED, for St. John Baptist, Kensington. £12. Apply, Miller, 49, Philbeach Gardens, S.W.

CHOIR-BOY.—LEADING TREBLE REQUIRED, for a Church in Dalston. Good salary given. Apply on Thursdays, between 6 and 9 p.m., to 105, Graham Road, Dalston, N.E.

TRINITY COLLEGE LONDON.

For Musical Education and Examination.—Inst. 1872.

President
Sir RICHARD E. WEBSTER, Q.C., M.P.
Warden: Professor E. H. Turpin, Mus.D.
Director of Examinations: Professor Jas. Higgs, Mus.B.

LOCAL EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC.
Eighteenth Annual Series. Session 1893-94.

The LOCAL EXAMINATIONS in INSTRUMENTAL and VOCAL MUSIC take place at the various Centres throughout the United Kingdom, and include Pianoforte, Organ, and Harmonium Playing, Pianoforte Duet Playing, Solo Singing, Violin or other Orchestral Instruments. The Examinations are conducted in Two Divisions—Senior and Junior; and in Pianoforte and Violin Playing there is also a Primary (Elementary) Division. Honours Certificates and Pass Certificates are awarded. Arrangements are being made for holding Examinations during the present Session (November, 1893, to July, 1894) at the following amongst other centres:—

Aberdeen, Aberystwith, Aldershot, Alloa, Altrincham, Ayr, Barrow-in-Furness, Ballymena, Banbury, Bath, Bedford, Belfast, Birmingham, Bishop Auckland, Blackburn, Blackpool, Blairgowrie, Bodmin, Bolton, Bournemouth, Bradford, Brecon, Brentwood, Brighton, Bristol, Brockley and New Cross, Burnley, Bury St. Edmunds, Cambridge, Cardiff, Carlisle, Carmarthen, Carnarvon, Chatham, Cheltenham, Chesterfield, Chichester, Cirencester, Cleator Moor, Colchester, Crieff, Croydon, Derby, Douglas (Isle of Man), Dover, Dublin, Dumfries, Dundee, Eastbourne, Edinburgh, Elgin, Exeter, Falkirk, Folkestone, Galashiels, Glasgow, Gloucester, Goole and Howden, Great Yarmouth, Greenock, Grimsby, Guildford, Halifax, Hanley, Harrogate, Hastings, Haverfordwest, Hawick, Hereford, Holywell, Hull, Inverness, Ipswich, Jersey, Keighley, Keswick, Kilmarnock, King's Lynn, Lancaster, Leamington, Leeds, Leicester, Lincoln, Liverpool, Llandudno and Colwyn Bay, London, Londonderry, Lowestoft, Macclesfield, Maidstone, Manchester, Margate, Newark, Newcastle, Newport, Northampton, Norwich, Nottingham, Oldham, Oxford, Pembroke Dock, Perth, Peterborough, Plymouth, Portsmouth, Preston, Ramsgate, Reading, Redhill, St. Ives, Sheffield, Shrewsbury, Sleaford, Southampton, Southend-on-Sea, Southport, Stockport, Stockton-on-Tees, Stroud, Surbiton, Swansea, Swindon, Taunton, Tiverton, Todmorden, Torquay, Truro, Tunbridge Wells, Walsall, Waltham Abbey, Walthamstow, Ware, Wellington (Salop), West Hartlepool, Weston-super-Mare, Weymouth, Whitby, Wisbech, Wolverhampton, Worcester, Worthing, York.

Any or all of the following printed papers may be had on application to the undersigned: (a) Regulations and list of music to be performed for the Local Examinations in Instrumental and Vocal Music, and Regulations for the (Theoretical) Local Examinations in Musical Knowledge; (b) List of Local Centres; (c) Regulations for the Higher Examinations for Diplomas and Certificates, and List of Music to be performed for the Higher Certificates in Vocal and Instrumental Subjects; (d) Prospectus of the Classes and Lectures Department; (e) General Prospectus containing List of Honorary Officers, &c.

By Order of the Academical Board,
SHELLEY FISHER, Secretary.

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, W.

THE
SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW
FOR OCTOBER

CONTAINS:—

General Notes.
The Class-Teaching of Pianoforte Sight-Reading. By Mrs. Webster.
Ye Olde Englyshe Pastymes (with Music). By Rev. F. W. Galpin.
Specimen Questions for Pupil Teachers' Theory Examinations.
Manchester School Choir Competition.
The Cumberland County Council and Music.
Reviews.
News from all Parts.

THE
SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW
FOR OCTOBER

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING MUSIC IN BOTH NOTATIONS:—

"A Lullaby." Two-part Song, from the Cantata "The Silver Penny." By J. L. Roeckel.
"Aldiborontiphoscophornio." Trio, for S.S.A. By Dr. Callcott.
Two-part Studies, and Studies on the sharp 4th and the flat 7th. By W. G. McNaught.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.
Office: 1, Berners Street, W.

John Broadwood & Sons

(ESTABLISHED 1732)

PIANOFORTE MAKERS

BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT TO

HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES
HER ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCESS OF WALES
HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH
AND THE
REST OF THE ROYAL FAMILY.

FOR THEIR ROYAL HIGHNESSES
THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF YORK
AT YORK COTTAGE, SANDRINGHAM,
JOHN BROADWOOD & SONS
have had the honour of supplying
AN UPRIGHT GRAND PIANOFORTE
in a decorated and painted Spanish Mahogany case.

33, GREAT PULTENEY STREET (near Regent Street),
LONDON, W.

NOW READY.

TO BE PERFORMED AT THE NORWICH MUSICAL FESTIVAL, 1893.

THE WATER LILY

A ROMANTIC LEGEND

FOR SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

JOSEPH BENNETT

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

FREDERIC H. COWEN.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

THE WISHING BELL

A CANTATA

FOR FEMALE VOICES AND ORCHESTRA

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

JETTA VOGEL

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

JOHN FRANCIS BARNETT.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

THE MUSICAL TIMES
AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR.
OCTOBER 1, 1893.

SIR AUGUSTUS HARRIS ON THE OPERA.

Operatic managers are not reticent, though Frederic Gye certainly could, and did, hold his tongue. Bunn, Lumley, and Mapleson are all in print, where their successes and failures—especially their failures—lie open to study. These authors, however, waited till the close of their managerial career before telling the world all about it. Not so their successor, Sir Augustus Harris, who, being a man "up to date," felt bound to less patience. At any rate, Sir Augustus has, in the current number of the New Review, an article entitled "The Opera in England: Some Notes and Reminiscences." A literary critic would say of this effusion that its contents are ill arranged and its style elementary. We shall forbear. An impresario has no time to spend on polishing English, and it should suffice if he convey his meaning.

Sir Augustus naturally begins with the critics. While admitting that the great majority of those persons extend to opera "fair and even generous support," there are a few, it seems, "who take sides either for or against any particular person who may or may not have enlisted their sympathies, for reasons best known to themselves." One of these delinquents, we learn, has compared the giving of high-class opera to the business of a pork-butcher; another has admitted that he never writes an impartial notice; while a third likens the opera to an eating-house. Sir Augustus does not seem personally to be hurt by this highly improper conduct, and is concerned chiefly as to the opinion of foreigners about it. The distinguished manager, indeed, takes a broad view of the situation, seeing that from the time of Handel the impresario's position "has been a sort of Tom Tiddler's ground, which everybody has considered a legitimate arena for the exposition of his views, whether he knew anything of opera or not." We had an idea that Tom Tiddler's ground was a legitimate arena for picking up gold and silver (may Sir Augustus always find it so), but that is neither here nor there. One rejoices to find the manager dignified and calm in the face of such expressions as "pork-butcher" and "eating-house." The spectacle has in it a certain sublimity of moral elevation.

Managers are troubled not only by venomous critics, but by the vagaries of their artists. This, of course, has long been known, but Sir Augustus puts the fact in a new and striking light when he says that an impresario "must run his opera house as a yachtsman keeps his yacht," meaning, as we gather from the context, that he must find his reward in the excitement of facing storms and dangers.

"I have often been asked why I do not go in for yachting, or shooting, or racing, or some such sport—my answer has always been that where other men keep their yachts, I keep an opera house; where others have their grouse and partridges, I have my baritones and sopranos, who give me quite as much excitement and, perhaps, leave me with a bit in hand."

As an illustration of the tact and daring sometimes necessary in managing operatic artists, Sir Augustus mentions the case of a tenor who felt so much annoyed at the criticism of a certain paper upon his début that he made up his mind to leave England forthwith. "The manager, being rather short in his list of tenors, tried to assure him that both he and the public were perfectly satisfied, and taking the newspaper in his hand, looked at it with curiosity, then, turning it over and over, explained that the paper could be of no importance, since he himself had never seen a copy of it before and did not know its name. The newspaper in question was no other than the Daily Telegraph. The singer went home quite satisfied, and convinced that nobody had seen the criticism in question." Sir Augustus has no very exalted opinion of vocalists as devotees of art. When they come to him it is with zeal for the cause of music, but should an engagement be offered they go away under a sense of personal injury if the proposed salary be not equal to that of a Prime Minister. "Scratch the singer," exclaims our author, "and you will find the shopman." What discovery would be made if one were to scratch a manager?

Some statements by Sir Augustus in the matter of singers' terms may surprise the public, who believe that when an artist is said, on authority, to receive so much per night, the precise amount set down actually passes from hand to hand. The figures in the contract are often manufactured to spread abroad an exaggerated sense of the singer's value. "Some artists hold out for a certain sum, but if the manager is willing to insert their price in the contract, he may get a mutual arrangement by which twenty or twenty-five per cent. of the amount shall not be paid, on condition always that it is kept a secret, and that nobody shall know anything at all about it." There is "another way," as the cookery books have it. The favourite arrangement is "for the manager to share a commission with an agent, and pay six per cent. commission, which is to be equally shared between the manager and the agent, unless, indeed, the manager (as in certain cases I have known) prefers to take the lot himself, constituting himself manager and agent all in one." These revelations are interesting, but can hardly have the result of increasing public respect for the region known as "behind the scenes."

Sir Augustus devotes much of his article to an exposition of operatic defects in the past, and conveys an impression that, save at Covent Garden during his father's time as stage-manager, everything done was inartistic and bad. That it was not the best possible may readily be conceded, but opera-goers whose memory goes farther back than that of Sir Augustus Harris can recall representations which gave quite as much satisfaction as those of the present day, and were supported, generally speaking, by much better singers. Sir Augustus must not be allowed unduly to disparage his predecessors. There were Kings before Agamemnon. The writer resents, also, the commonly received opinion that operatic performances are better on the Continent than in England. So warm is Sir Augustus upon this point that he twice brings it up, and even goes so far as to intimate that articles in the press favouring the obnoxious idea are written "on very much the same lines as are the descriptions of those war correspondents who never get nearer the seat of war than the Cheshire Cheese in Fleet Street." He then proceeds to describe, pour rire, a performance of "Il Trovatore" witnessed by him at Florence, and, in another place, he declares that, even at Bayreuth, some of the leading parts are in the hands of singers who would not be tolerated in London, who sing out of tune, or are débutants thrust prematurely into conspicuous positions. No doubt many bad representations are given abroad as well as in England, and also many good ones. But the comparison is not of much practical value. For what Sir Augustus Harris has done towards the betterment of opera in London we are all grateful. At the same time, admiration of a successful manager does not blind us to the fact that there are still some weak points which should be made strong. In an ideal opera house the stage management is always careful, and pays attention to details as well as great and striking effects. No scenery falls about there, and no noisy voices behind the scenes disturb the audience. There, also, no more work is undertaken than can be done efficiently, and no good men are turned out of the orchestra to make room for inferiors. Above all, it is there that operas are chosen for production simply upon their merits, not because they are the work of So-and-So, or because social influences back them, or because some arrangement has been made. If Sir Augustus Harris can reform English procedure in these respects, we are prepared to salute him as the chief of all his kind.

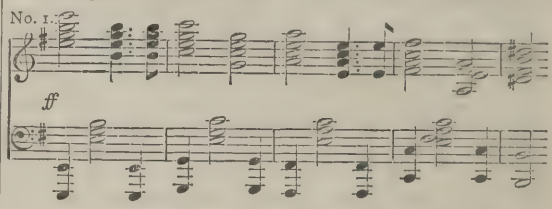
A NEW AMERICAN COMPOSER.

The most gratifying feature of the last twenty years has been the swift rise of a distinct English school of musicians. If our country has not produced a world-famous genius during that period it has at least been cultivating the soil and preparing the way for that consummation. Until lately we could not say the same of our cousins on the farther side of the Atlantic. Commercial pursuits seemed to engross them utterly, leaving no room for the flowers of civilisation. But with the creation of a leisured class came the desire for art, and during the last ten years the Americans have made distinct progress in the cultivation of music. One great drawback they have to contend against, in common with Japan and other reconstructed countries—their reliance upon outside help. The English composer of to-day is educated to excellent advantage in either of our great music schools, and then, as often as not, he takes a foreign tour to get himself well posted in contemporary doings. But the young American musician usually has but one idea of education—to go to Germany and study under Reinecke, Jadassohn, or Rheinberger. By this means he gets a sound tuition, no doubt, but not a trace of any individuality; in fact, it becomes a serious question for our practical neighbours to consider whether it would not be equally satisfactory (and certainly cheaper) to rest content with their large importation of ready-made German musicians and to cease from exporting raw material to have it sent back practically identical with the Teutonic article.

These remarks are really inspired by a consideration of the latest (and perhaps the best) sample of the American-German composer. Mr. Horatio W. Parker, the subject of this article, was born in Auburndale, Mass., on September 15, 1863, consequently he has just completed his thirtieth year. Like most of us, he owes his first steps in music to his mother, and he afterwards studied with Stephen Emery and G. W. Chadwick, names unfamiliar on this side of the ocean, though we have a vague idea that the latter gentleman is a composer of some experience. Mr. Parker then went over to Germany and received what is absurdly called "a finishing" from Rheinberger, at Munich. Here he wrote the usual symphony and overtures, which probably do not figure upon his list of thirty-four published works. These, we understand, consist mainly of songs, church services, and organ pieces, so that the composer is evidently working in a department in which there is scope for a new and clever man. The work which has now brought him before the world is a setting, for voices and orchestra, of the Latin poem "Hora Novissima," by Bernard de Morlaix, descriptive of the joys of the celestial country. It is familiar to modern ears as forming the basis of several of our best known hymns, such as "Jerusalem the Golden," "For thee, O dear, dear country," &c., but has not, as a whole, been musically treated hitherto. It contains thirty-five six-lined rhyming stanzas, and has only the drawback of uniformity of character. The difficult task of making a satisfactory English version which shall also fit the music has been fairly well surmounted by the composer's mother, a lady, we are told, of considerable culture and talents. The Cantata comprises eleven numbers, of which four are for solo voices. The choral writing is massive and effective; mostly in the solid harmony style of to-day, but occasionally the composer shows that he can write counterpoint, and with taste too.

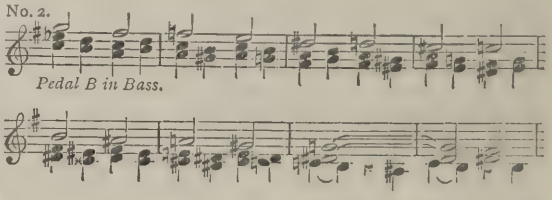
No. 1, a chorus of symmetrical proportions, begins in E minor with some sixty bars (Allegro) of introduction, giving an exposition of several phrases afterwards dealt with at length. Here is the real first subject; it has a distinct flavour of Brahms:—

No. 1.



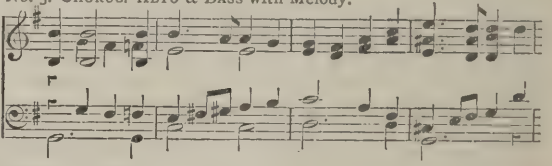
There is also a very curious chromatic pedal passage, which we hear several times in the work, but cannot regard it as a Leitmotive—

No. 2.



The second subject, not so worthy, runs its brief course thus—

No. 3. Chorus. Alto & Bass with Melody.



After due development and recapitulation we have a Coda in the tonic major on a phrase which seems to have grown out of the foregoing; but a remarkable blemish here is a modulatory phrase which is so familiar to every ear as the Love motive in "Die Walküre" that we cannot understand why the composer allowed himself to use it.

No. 2 does not call for much comment; it is a quartet which begins contrapuntally, somewhat after the style of writing usual with Dvorák, but it soon drops into solid harmony. Here a sequential phrase gives a rather unfortunate reminiscence of Gounod, but this is a small fault. We would draw the composer's attention to the very grateful contrast afforded by the vigorous rhythm of the first three bars of p. 24 after the monotony of the preceding portion. If only people would realise the importance of rhythmical variety! This number concludes with an exceptionally charming cadence, in which the tenor has the principal part.

No. 3 is a bass solo, decidedly à la Dvorák, on this subject—

No. 4. Moderato

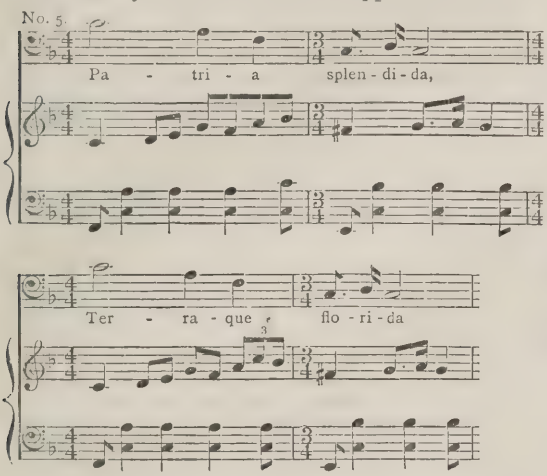
But after the first time the C sharp of the fourth bar is always C natural. Query: why not at first also? There is plenty of interest in the bass and accompaniment and working-out of this, and shortly we get a second subject of a remarkable appearance—

No. 5.



This is an instance of how a clever composer can turn the mere commonplace into something interesting by the cunning of his art. The music flows along quite naturally in bars of various lengths—mostly 4 and 3 alternately—for nearly two pages, and we find nothing forced or laboured about it.

No. 4 is a sturdy chorus, consisting of an introduction and a fugue, with a partly independent accompaniment. It is well worked out, and comes to a powerful climax. We fail to see, however, that any good is gained by allowing the bass to make consecutive octaves with the treble, five bars from the end. F, A flat would have been far better in effect than A flat, F.

No. 5 is an interesting number, and is very near being great. Its faults are, firstly, inexperience, which causes the sections to stand rather too separate; and secondly, unoriginality, the imitation of the first soprano solo in "The Spectre's Bride" being very apparent. Its melodic merits would be all the better, too, if it were not for that fatal phrase from "Die Walküre," which again intrudes itself.

No. 6 is a somewhat vague chorus with solo quartet, constructed largely from the materials of the opening number. The object of this is not clear, as the drift of the words is not at all the same. Towards the close occurs a most unaccountable reminiscence, which we cannot refrain from quoting here—

No. 6. Allegro.

This is terrible, but fortunately it is the last of the plagiarisms. No. 7 is a tenor solo of great merit. Its elaborate accompaniment makes us anxious to see the score, but not being able to do so we can only express our hopes that Mr. Parker has instrumented it more in the style of Gounod than Wagner; that is to say, that the counter melodies floating so sweetly in the upper octaves are more often allotted to the violins than to the wood-wind. If this be so, this number is a complete success. No. 8 we must decline expressing an opinion upon until we have heard it. It is a double chorus in rapid 3-4 time, a sort of Scherzo, not wholly independent of that in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, and owing more than a little to Dvorák. The subject is perseveringly worked out, but of the effect one cannot judge at all on paper.

No. 9 is an alto solo, and we must here declare that the four numbers for single voice are of greatly superior merit to the choral numbers. Perhaps this is the best of all, with its earnest chief subject—and its central episode of greatly similar character to our quotation No. 3, only better continued. We could spare the introductory bars, which seem rather aimless and out of keeping with the rest. There is no time indication to this number, but we should guess it to be about M.M. ♩ = 80.

No. 7.

The next piece is a fugue in what is meant for strict style without accompaniment. Dryness is cleverly avoided here by some good effects of piano and forte, and this number should serve well to show off the powers of a choir. The concluding effort is very broad in outline and looks effective. The chief subject is a bold twelve-bar melody, treated for some little time fugally, though the wisdom of this is open to doubt, as it only fills up space and tells one nothing. After a time the chromatic passage No. 2 turns up and ushers in the melody of the Coda of the opening number—which is treated as a new episode, and finally the two subjects appear together, and a good Coda concludes this earnest and impressive work. If we have seemed to lay some stress on the weak points, it is only to show how little after all there is to be said against our composer's first important essay. There are plenty of young men who can write music more irreproachable from a technical point of view, but very few who can write anything half as interesting. And we count as little the unoriginal bits we have pointed out when it can be said that scarcely any of the remainder is dull or commonplace. Of how many can we say even so much? We do not yet perceive Mr. Parker's true self in his music, but that his next large work will tell us, and we look forward to the revelation with great interest. Meanwhile we should be very glad to hear a performance of "Hora Novissima" in London, and warmly commend the work to the attention of our numerous choral societies in search of novelties.

No. 8.

FROM MY STUDY.

Some time ago a few specimen lyrics from the pen of Miss Maude Robertson-Hicks appeared in one of these articles. The young writer had sent them to me in a time when the discouragements through which unknown talent has to force its way were pressing heavily upon her. She could find an opening nowhere, and her question to me was, in effect: "Shall I give up the struggle or persevere?" I saw ground for encouragement, and by calling attention to the ability of my correspondent as a writer of verse for music, did my best to serve her. It was, therefore, with no slight satisfaction that I received, the other day, a dainty little book of poems, entitled "Flowers from Oversea," written by Maude Robertson-Hicks, and published by George E. Over, of Rugby. The pretty volume contains forty-three short pieces, in all of which I find more or less of the true poetic spirit, in combination with felicity of expression. That they are the product of real feeling is clear from the consistency with which they suggest that the writer looks upon the world and life with a pensive eye. The prevailing mood is one of tenderness and pity, deepening here and there to sadness. But an example or two will serve better than description. The following was suggested by the grave of a young German who, drowned in the Thames, lies buried at Goring:—

I knew thee not, pilgrim from other lands!
But they who knew and loved thee are not near
To bring, with tender thought and trembling hands,
Fresh flowers, and lay them here
Where thou art sleeping, just as children sleep,
A dreamless slumber, strained to England's breast,
Even thy mother may not kneel to weep,
Or pray, by thy long rest.

So I, a stranger, humbly dare to stand,
Because of thee upon this holy ground,
In pity, lest from thy dear Fatherland
There comes no tear, no sound.
With reverent awe, wistful and half afraid,
I place my blossoms on the cold white stone;
Alas, I go from hence—the flowers will fade,
And leave thee still—alone.

Here is a pretty thought, entitled "Hidden":

Let me bury my face in thy sunny hair
Just for a little while,
And who shall know, as it nestles there,
Whether I weep or smile?
Let me bury my heart in thy pure heart, child,
And who shall dream it was once defiled?

One other example will suffice. It is a song of faith, headed "Quarant' Ore":

I kneeled before the hallowed shrine,
While every flower breathed sanctity,
And, pleading with the Heart Divine,
I prayed for thee—I prayed for thee.

And, just as surely as I loved
The fragrance of each blossom there,
I know the Sacred Heart was moved,
And heard my prayer—and heard my prayer.

Content, I leave thee in His hands
Whose wisdom is made manifest,
Content, I say: "He understands,
And knoweth best—and knoweth best."

That Miss Maude Robertson-Hicks has in her the making of a lyrical poetess whom musicians will prize seems to me beyond question.

Fifty years ago a periodical (weekly) styled the Musical Examiner came into existence, spent a short life, and a merry one, and then died. Its first number was issued on November 5, 1842, and its last appeared on December 21, 1844. I am fortunate enough to possess the copy which belonged to the editor, James William Davison. This I took down the other day in mistake for quite a different work, and, opening one of the volumes, I saw that its contents were just half-a-century old. It struck me then that the time was opportune for a glance at musical doings in the early forties through the spectacles of the Examiner.

From the preliminary address it is to be gathered that the Musical Examiner was started to meet a deficiency in the art journalism of the day—the absence, that is to say, of an unbiassed musical journal, free from the influence of cliques and independent of the publishing trade. I doubt if this was all. At that time, even as now, a musical Young England existed, conscious of some powers and a good many opinions, looking with contempt upon the fogyism of such elders as, say, the eminently respectable Mr. Horsley, and eager to assert itself in every possible way. J. W. Davison, G. A. Macfarren, Henry Smart, Sterndale Bennett, and others now less well known, were then in the flush of their manhood, ready for anything, and by no means indisposed to form an English Davidsbund and march against the Philistines. The life and soul of this party, at all events in relation to journalism, was J. W. Davison. Utterly fearless, passionately enthusiastic for the composers and the music he admired, with a flow of words that seethed and foamed like a mountain torrent and with a command of epithets which, in political strife, would have put him on equal terms with Daniel O'Connell himself, the future critic of the Times was just the man for offensive warfare. His qualities are exemplified very impressively indeed in the pages of the Musical Examiner, and those who would know what this remarkable journalist was before a sense of power and responsibility had a steadying effect should seek the information there. As the medium through which Davison communicated his thought and feeling to a circle of fluttered readers, the Examiner yet possesses a living interest, and is a store upon which to draw for amusement no less than for edification. I shall dip into its pages at random.

Musical Young England was not well affected to our older native composers fifty years ago. The Antiquarian Society had reprinted examples of Purcell, whereupon the Examiner: "What are these much-vaunted operas? . . . Dreary wastes of barren flatness, with here and there (at rare intervals) a happy thought; here and there (by accident) an extraordinary chord, which, luckily, has a pleasant effect." Remain in the tomb, you bewigged British musicians, nor seek to rekindle your feeble rushlights. Nevertheless, Macready produced Purcell's "King Arthur" at Drury Lane. Then did the editor of the new weekly gird up his loins, shout his war-cry, and assail that unlucky work. "A monstrosity!" he cried; and again: "As for melody—it has none—a few bold tunes are all it can possibly boast; as for its harmony, we must humbly confess that we can see little or nothing to admire, but much, very much, to find fault with; as for its orchestral accompaniments, they are almost necessarily feeble, and are altogether inventionless." Too much importance should not attach to the strength of these utterances. Young England composed operas.

Some of the news paragraphs in the early numbers remind us how much has happened since they were penned. "Dr. Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy is now at Leipsic, superintending the annual concerts." "Dr. Robert Schumann has just published three violin quartets, which are highly spoken of." "His last works," writes the editor, "(since his marriage has made him one of the happiest of men) display ten times the nerve and freshness of his earlier compositions. Let his example serve to stimulate every artist in a like condition—to love, even hopelessly, raises an artist above himself, but to love triumphantly is a guarantee of after excellence." One of the earliest paragraphs devoted to Wagner in an English musical journal occurs in the second number, where it is said: "'Rienzi,' a grand opera in five acts, the words and music by Herr Richard Wagner, has been produced at the Court Theatre, Dresden, with immense success." It was not then suspected that the time would come when the weapons so fiercely wielded against Meyerbeer, Halévy, and others would be turned in the direction of that Saxon apparition. "And did the Young England of the early forties fight against Meyerbeer, Halévy, and their like?" Listen: "What is this M. Meyerbeer, about whom such a prodigious fluster is made by half-educated amateurs, paid claquers, would-be cognoscenti, and poetasterical penny-a-liners? . . . M. Meyerbeer is a composer moderately, very moderately, gifted with natural powers, and evincing the most flimsy pretensions as a harmonist and contrapuntist. . . . Where then is to be found the Meyerbeeric might? Is it in the 'Huguenots,' that cumbersome drawl of monotonous commonplace, that Noah's ark of pure vulgarities dressed up into a species of puppet importance by the most vapid and inflated grotesquerie, that Athenæumo-apotheosised apology for a good historical opera, that intolerable infliction of beginnings and endings without middles!" As to Halévy, listen again: "A fellow without a solitary new idea, whose invention is a bath for commonplace to swim about in, whose conception is a fountain sprinkling a shower of vulgarisms on the passer-by, whose imagination is a quagmire that would fail a frog in nourishment, whose liveliness would throw a damp upon a funeral . . . who as a melodist is null, as a harmonist is nuller, as a contrapuntist is nullest, who is only rescued from absolute nothingness by a tolerable knowledge of instrumentation." When this appeared, up started Edward James Loder (who also wrote operas) to "go one better." "As to the instrumentation," he writes to the editor, "I cannot quite agree with you in considering it even tolerable. To my idea it is either miserably weak or strikingly harsh, and, if I may use the word, vicious. M. Halévy appears to be a very feeble copy of Meyerbeer, with, if possible, less originality, less melody, but, perhaps, less claptrap . . . When I know that I have such countrymen as Barnett, Macfarren, &c., &c. [to say nothing of E. J. L.], who, were they justly tried would give to the world," and so on, and so on.

Thalberg, as a prominent representative of foreign "pianism," comes in for a large share of Young England's objurgatory wealth. "His chief characteristic is a method—which he stole from Weber and Mendelssohn, and Beethoven (who have all used it to better purpose), and hyperbolised into rhodomontade, while stealing it—of laying down somebody else's subject, in the middle of the keyboard, and sprinkling it with a shower of small notes above, and a shower of small notes below—a characteristic so eminently facile of attainment that, in less than five years, at least a hundred imitators who, like their model, are incapable of aught else, have sprung up, as a flight of swallows, and sprung down, as a blight of locusts, and, in their springing up and their springing down, have gathered skill enough to ape their master with such monkey-like imitativity that the most profound Thalbergist would not be able to distinguish one from the other." But the vials of hottest wrath are poured out upon a certain Thalbergian Andante, known as The Andante by young ladies of the period. "We have heard nothing so maudlin and monotonous, so lachrymose and lackadaisical, so pitifully puling and positively paralytic, as this whining, whooping, whizzing, whurring, wishy-washy wallow of warm waterishness since those dear, delightful, dead-for-durance days when our beloved old aunt, Tabitha, would seat herself at the harpsichord and deal out dolefully the 'groans of the wounded.'"

It is rather surprising to find Monsieur Jullien taken seriously by such unquestionably gifted men as the Young Englanders. Alas, the people ran after him and his entertainments. So down came the sledge-hammer: "Thalberg is a great man, for he manages to hoodwink the multitude of second-rate thinkers by kicking and cuffing sublimity (O mixture of metaphors!) until it is fairly smothered with bruises and black eyes; but Jullien is a far greater man, for, without the capability of even torturing fine things into bombast, without the power of giving birth to the skeleton of a ghost of an idea—what with his gongs and his pistons, his big drums and his side-drums, his triangles and his cymbals, his wood and his brass . . . he has succeeded in persuading the mass of concert-goers that he knows the difference between a common chord and a dromedary's hump!" The spectacle of Jullien flourishing as a green bay tree is too much for the writer, who now pours out sarcasm like a controversial theologian, if indeed a religious disputant was ever so eloquent in his bitterness:

"This is a queer world! Humbug walks about with his hand in his breeches' pockets and smiles contemptuously on the passers-by! Humbug has got a clean shirt, which many a worthy man lacks! Humbug has got a good dinner and a bottle of wine, which not a few of the best of us never see! Humbug carries a gold-headed cane with a shining surface, in which a poor, lean, and hungry artist may, if he chooses, see his face and make mouths at its grim gauntness. Humbug goes to church and pretends to listen to the sermon while he ponders on the coming afternoon's debauchery. Humbug is idolised by the ladies, whose sweet faces smile honey-like on prosperous unworth. Humbug takes lodgings in a fashionable street, and smokes his cigar at the window, dropping the ashes thereof on the head of a houseless historian. Humbug keeps a tiger. Humbug has a box at the opera and yawns, in foolish company, over vile music which brother Humbug has composed. Humbug sleeps on a bed of down, with a canopy to crown his vacant noddle. Humbug does this, and that, and the other, which Worth can never do, and why? Simply because Worth lacks impudence, the atmosphere which Humbug breathes. And so, while Worth lies dozing dolefully in a ditch, Humbug walks, per alta, in galleries and palaces, and waxeth adipose on the fat of the land, and kicketh. Let us then hug thee, O Humbug!"

Some such cry as this has gone up unto heaven in all ages, and is going up at the present moment with no less justification than that which attended it fifty years ago. It may be asked what the musical Young Englanders actually and precisely wanted. To this question I find an answer in an article on the Philharmonic Society, which seems to give a very fair idea of their demands. The writer calls for the works of the great classical masters who stood, like Olympians, above the conflict of contemporary interests, and also for the symphonies of Schubert "as curiosities." By the way, what was known of Schubert's "symphonies" in this country only three years after the Leipsic performance of the "C major"? Of the then living foreign composers, Young England desired to make further acquaintance with Berlioz and Reber (!), and with Spohr and Mendelssohn. But the names of the native musicians are many. "Let us have," cried the voice of the English League of David, "the overtures of Sterndale Bennett. Let us have the C sharp minor Symphony of that highly talented and unjustly neglected composer, Macfarren. Let us have such English pianists as Holmes, Field, and Darrell. Let us have the vocal works of Loder, Barnett, Macfarren, and Smart—surely much better than the inflictions of Bellini and Donizetti. Let us have, as singers, the Misses Rainforth, Birch, and Dolby." Finally, "if entirely new symphonies or overtures are wanted, there are Mudie, Macfarren, Bennett, Wesley, Loder, and others, who can beat any existing foreigner fairly out of the field—put we aside Spohr and Mendelssohn. . . . And so, here are health, prosperity, and a happy new year to the Philharmonic Society, that is, provided our advice be taken, if not, why then a murrain on them all."

Let no one suppose that the peculiarly appellative and energetic language used by, and in the name of, the ardent band of young Englishmen is to be taken as fully meaning all it seems to mean. The Musical Examiner simply held a brief for native music, and pleaded its cause before the high court of the nation with all the privileges of counsel. Hard words were only oratorical colouring. Do you think that when Mr. Sergeant Buzfuz called Mr. Pickwick a "serpent," he believed him to be a reptile, or that his heart went with his tongue in exclaiming: "But Pickwick, gentlemen, Pickwick, the ruthless destroyer of this domestic oasis in the desert of Goswell Street—Pickwick, who has choked up the well and thrown ashes on the sward—Pickwick, who comes before you to-day with his heartless tomato sauce and warming-pans—Pickwick still rears his head with unblushing effrontery, and gazes without a sigh on the ruin he has made!" As for the genial editor of the Examiner, he would have hob-a-nobbed with Meyerbeer and been "hey, fellow, well met" with Halévy anywhere outside his office, or, for that matter, in the very sanctum itself, among the unfinished missives intended for their respective addresses. And he would have quoted Shakespeare to them with a merry laugh:

> The arms are fair
> When the intent of bearing them is just.

The dust and smoke of the conflict have long since cleared away, and Time, the great umpire, has given his decision, upsetting many hopes and rendering futile many efforts. Often did the whilom editor of the Musical Examiner say to me, "Why this earnestness? Why take these things so much to heart? The world will go on in its own way. Look at me, who have passed through it all. What I like, I praise; at what I do not like, I laugh." This may be less heroic than pleasant, but certain it is that the time approaches when the conflicts in which we still living men take part will be hushed and forgotten, till some one looks up the records of them in ancient musical journals, while other combatants are shouting different war cries over our heads.

X.

"OF THE MASTERSINGERS' GRACIOUS ART."

(Concluded from page 529.)

"The instruction of pupils in the Mastersingers' Art, and their subsequent admission to fellowship," is the next subject dealt with by our author. Some understanding of the course of instruction and examination which a candidate for mastership had to undergo will enable us to appreciate the feelings of the Nuremberg Masters when Walther von Stolzing proposed to step into the mastership per saltem. No wonder if they thought this "Junker," who was not a "poet," a "singer," or even a "school-friend," something of an impertinent upstart to imagine he would be admitted at once to the highest grade in their Guild! A distinguished amateur, seeking permission to accumulate the degrees of Mus.B. and Mus.D. on the strength of, let us say, his admired double chant in G minor, could produce no greater astonishment in the minds of the examiners at Oxford or Cambridge.

When a person feels an inclination towards the Mastersinger's art, says Wagenseil, he betakes himself to one of the Masters in whom he has confidence, and who has been the winner of the Insignia on at least one occasion, and begs for his instruction. This is very readily given by him who is thus appealed to, and the Master undertakes the troublesome task of teaching the very difficult "Tones" without any reward whatever, purely from a desire to ensure a continuance of the art. For this reason, indeed, the Mastersingers exert themselves to procure pupils, and to this end even interfere with their rest and sleep, since they are obliged to follow their respective callings, and earn their livings, during the day-time. When an apprentice has conducted himself well, and has become thoroughly acquainted with a fair number of "Tones," especially the four "Crowned Tones," he is, after a year's pupilage, and usually on St. Thomas's Day, introduced by his Master to the Guild, either at one of their social gatherings (auf der Zech) or in the tavern where the ordinary meetings take place, with the request that he should be received into the Guild. Thereupon, the Markers hold an examination, and inquire if the candidate be of honourable birth; if he be not frivolous, but of a quiet and upright demeanour; and if he regularly frequent the Song-school. He is further examined as to whether he have sufficiently mastered the Art, and know the difference between vocalis and consonans, the nature of verses, as regards number, metre, and rhythm; which are "resonant" (klingend; i.e., double rhymes), and which "dull" (stumpf; i.e., single rhymes); if he be familiar with a fair number of "Tones," from the short metres to the long ones, and especially the four "Crowned Tones"; and if in case of need he could "mark" a song.

He is then allowed to sing his trial song, and, if he make more than seven mistakes, cannot be taken into membership. So Beckmesser, when about to act as Marker, warns Walther:—

> Seven faults are given you clear;
> With chalk on a slate they are scored;
> But if more mistakes than seven appear,
> Then, Sir Knight, without hope you are floored.

When all this is done, the Commendator and Candidatus retire, and the senior Marker puts the question whether the candidate be agreeable to the Society, and is to be considered fit for membership. In the event of a favourable answer, the reception takes place, and the Novitius must undertake—

I. That he will remain constant to the Art; and not desert singing, but cultivate it diligently.

II. That, if at any time and in any place the Art and the Guild be evil spoken of or ridiculed, he will, if he hear the same, with modesty gainsay it, and not permit anything to the disadvantage of the Art.

III. That he will live peaceably and quietly with his fellow members, will warn them of threatened harm, will help and stand by them in adversity, will improve and protect their property and means of livelihood, will always speak well of them, and, should one be evil spoken of, will do his utmost to excuse and defend him.

IV. That he will not sing a Mastersong or "Tone" in the public streets, whether by night or by day, nor at entertainments, banquets, or other festive meetings, nor if by chance he should be the worse for liquor, and should thus be likely to cast a stigma on the Guild. It is, however, permitted that he be heard by strangers who specially desire to hear a Mastersong, if he be assured that they will not make a jest of it.

It was at one time the custom to sprinkle the novice with water, which probably was introduced instead of the heathen Rituum initiationis, adopted by the old bards with their pupils. But since this ceremony resembled that of baptism, which name it also took, it is in most places properly given up.

When a singer has for a considerable period been heard in the schools with general satisfaction, and has besides conducted himself blamelessly in other respects, he can solicit enfranchisement [Freiung]: that is to say, that he may at the public Song-school be enfranchised and declared a Master. The entire ceremony has been versified in the Mastersingers' fashion, and set to original melodies, by Herr Ambrosius Metzger, Master of the Liberal Arts, and, as I am informed, formerly an instructor of youth in the Ægidian Gymnasium at Nuremberg, a great lover and patron of the Mastersingers' Art, who was also very successful in the composition of "Tones." Which poem, as it has come into use, and is regularly employed in this solemnity, must have a place here.

As, however, good Master Metzger's poem occupies seven pages, and is, if the truth must be spoken, but sorry doggerel, it shall not "have a place here," but only the briefest description. The various features of the ceremonial are indicated by notes interpolated among the verses. The first portion is headed thus: "To begin with, the greeting to the Masters and Singers is after the following fashion." This greeting is directed to be sung to the "Pointed Palm tune," and contains suitable praise of the Mastersingers' Art in general, and of the all-powerful Markers in particular. Then we have a direction: "Now the Master receives him, and introduces him with song." This song is "The first question, in the Straw tune." Its object is to ascertain the candidate's knowledge of the origin of the Mastersingers' Art. The answer, to the "Green-Lily tune," names Mayence as the place of origin, and the Masters Frauenlob (not mentioned by name, but referred to as "the glorious master of a castle"); Regenbogen, the Smith; Marner, the Swabian Knight; and Mügling (or Mögeling), the learned Doctor of Bohemia, as the founders. The second question is put in the "Writing-paper tune," and asks why these Masters are so honoured "that each has a Crowned Tone," a thing which, as the questioner shrewdly puts it, "has certainly not happened for nothing." The answer, to the "Blue Cornflower tune," narrates the story, already referred to, of how these early Masters were suspected of heretical leanings, how the Emperor Otto, finding no fault in them, sent them to the Pope, who marked his approval of their teaching by conferring upon them a crown, from which their four tones came to be dubbed "Crowned." The next question is sung to the "Black-Amber tune," and demands from the candidate a reason for the importance and prominence of Mastersong. It is answered to the "Orpheus'-passionate-complaint tune," the examinee arguing that the Mastersong is entitled to be regarded as an art because of its fixed principles and rules, examples of which he proceeds to give, mentioning several of the "Thirty-two Mistakes" previously referred to. "Doubtful meaning," "Differences," "Æquivoca," "Too long and too short," are among the faults thus enumerated. The fourth question, to the "Closed-helmet tune," and its answer, to the "Yellow-lion-skin tune," deals with the relation of the Mastersingers' Art to the "Seven liberal arts": Grammatica, Dialectica, Rhetorica, Musica, Arithmetica, Astronomia, and Geometria. Lastly, the examiner, to the "Pointed-arrow tune," asks the candidate why he is not content to remain a "Singer," but is desirous of becoming a full-fledged "Master." To this he replies, to the "Crooked-cornet tune," that, filled with a strong sense of the glory of the Art, he seeks its highest honours, and, if the mighty Markers will but consent to admit him, he will do his utmost to preserve and further the Mastersong.

The actual admission, or "calling from the Song-stool," now takes place, being announced to the candidate in rhymes sung to the "Sorrel tune." The chief feature of the ceremony is the placing of a wreath on the head of the singer, but before this takes place the Master-elect is to present his exercise, in the form of a Mastersong, and must, in addition, sing the highly-prized "Four Crowned Tones." These compositions, of which so much has been heard already, are given by Wagenseil in extenso, and the first of them (which follows Wagenseil's book exactly) may be reproduced here as a specimen:—

Der

Meisterliche Hort/

in vier gekrönten Thönen.

Das Erste Gesetz/

im langen Thon Heinrich Müglings.

1. Ge - ne - sis am neun und zwanzig - sten uns be - richt,
2. Als er sich jetzt ge - ne - het hat her - an der Stadt,
1. wie Ja - cob floh, vor sein Bru - der E - sau ent-wicht.
2. Es da selbst drey gros - se Heer-de der Scha - fe . . hat,
1. Dass er in Me - so - po - ta - mi - am kom - men.
2. Ja - cob fragt um Be - richt; als er ein - ge - nom - men
DER ABGESANG.
die - ses Or - tes Ge - le - gen - heit,
Sie sag - ten ja mit gutem Be - scheid,
Ob ih - nen Na-hars Sohn, La - ban, be - kennt - lich?
Fragt er, ob es auch wol stünd um ihn end - lich,
Und sie be-kräff - tig - ten diss . . . . . .
Trieb ih - re Schaaf da - her Ra - hel an mu - - thig, da - rauff sie ihn be - rich-te - ten ge-wiss, dass diss ein Toch-ter wä - re La-bans gü - tig, . .
Ja - cob sprach, es ist noch hoch Tag, das Vieh kan noch wol blei - - ben,
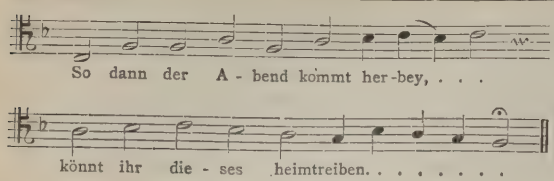
tränckt das - selb vor, und auf der - - Au,
es weid ohn - - - - - Grau.



The above "section" (Gesetz) is followed by three others, set respectively to "The Long Tone of Heinrich Frauenlob," "The Long Tone of Ludwig Marner," and "The Long Tone of Regenbogen." The fifth section is sung to all four melodies. The subject of the verses, which it must be admitted are sad doggerel, is the story of Jacob and his matrimonial experiences. The task of rendering them into English is by no means an easy one, experto credite; but, for the benefit of any of our readers who may be unacquainted with German, an attempt may be made with one or two of the opening lines, if only for the purpose of reproducing, as nearly as may be, the quaintly matter of fact way in which the "Poet" indicates the source of his history:

In Genesis the nine-and-twentieth 'tis read
How Jacob from his brother Esau fled,
And to Mesopotamia was bound.
Now as he came nigh unto a town,
Lo, three great flocks of sheep were lying down.
So Jacob asked for news, now that he found
The situation of the place;
Whether they knew of Laban, Nahor's son?
To this they answer "Yes," with grace.

Wagenseil next treats of the "convivial meetings" held by the Masters:—

On the day when a Song-school is held, it is customary for the singer's guild to hold an honourable, honest, and peaceable convivial meeting [Zech]. At such meeting each one shall lay his arms aside; so too all gambling, unedifying conversation, and immoderate drinking shall be forbidden; and a wreath [Zech-Krantz] is given to be sung for, if it so please the company. Lampoons and inflammatory songs may not, however, be sung, since out of such things only variance arises. And none shall incite the others to sing for money or money's worth. Likewise shall no one sit uninvited with the Markers at their table. Those who have at the school won the Insignia or wreath, or have sung without a fault, shall be presented with XX. groschen. A Marker receives XX. kreutzer. The costs of the convivial meeting shall be defrayed from what has been collected at the School; if, however, the School should not have realised as much, the deficiency shall be made up from the common fund.

Finally, we have a word on the ceremonies attendant on the funeral of a Mastersinger. In any case his fellows are bound to accompany their brother to the grave, but if the deceased should have been a Marker, they sing in his honour an elegiac song so soon as the coffin has been lowered into the grave. The words of such a song, written in honour of a Master named Tobias Martin, are given by Wagenseil. The chapter is brought to an end with one of the learned but irrelevant digressions in which the somewhat pedantic professor seems to delight. Its subject is the term "Uebersieger," applied to the Victor at a Song-school, and the origin of this word is discussed at considerable length, and with an impressive display of learning.

Still more discursive does our author become in his seventh and last chapter. Here he purports to treat "of the manifold advantages which the Mastersingers by their art afford to society." These are soon summed up as including honour to God—especially in the diligent study of Holy Scripture which the custom of choosing Biblical subjects for Mastersongs necessitates—and the furtherance of the common weal, or "Salutem publicam Civitatis," as the writer prefers to term it. This latter is gained by the promotion of good feeling and unity among fellow citizens, and the prevention of idleness. A pleasant picture is drawn by Wagenseil of the honest Mastersinger, who, after working during the day at his particular trade, spends the evening with his fellow guildsmen in rational enjoyment, writing new "Bars" (or Mastersongs), repeating old ones, compiling huge tomes of songs (examples of which, by the way, still exist in some of the German libraries), or teaching apprentices, so that the beloved Art may not come to naught through want of practitioners. And all the labour of these honest folk is given for no other reward than "love for the German Fatherland and the ancient and gracious Art." But, says our author, even the best poets are only badly off in Germany; and this reflection leads to a long dissertation on the happier state of things in France, introduced apparently rather for the purpose of displaying the extent of the writer's travels than for any light it may throw on the Mastersingers. A still longer digression is provoked by the remark that the antiquity of the Mastersingers' Art is a thing of which Germans may be proud, and the professor's heaviest guns are brought to bear upon an unfortunate historian, one Olaus Rudbeck, who had rashly surmised that ancient poems, attributed by Tacitus to Germany, were in fact of Swedish origin. Finally, the essay is brought to a close by a quotation from the work of a previous writer on the Mastersingers, Adam Puschmann, who complains that the "old and beloved art of Mastersinging is so despised and downtrodden," and calls upon all pious Christians, of whatsoever rank they be, not to forget this "ancient, praiseworthy, beloved and Christian art." "For with diligent practice of this art, they will learn to love God's Word, to become acquainted with their Bible, and to learn thereout to obey God and love their neighbour." It is perhaps not going too far afield to see here a last resemblance to Wagner's opera, where, in the closing scene, Hans Sachs curbs Walther's impetuous disdain of the Mastersingers:—"Verachtet mir die Meister nicht," and maintains that, with all their pedantry, they have achieved something for German art. To which we may add that, had they done nothing more than furnish material for one of the most genial and enjoyable of all comedy-operas, they would have earned our heartfelt gratitude.

There was recently invented a new system of musical notation. How many more? you will ask. Well, this was perhaps one of the best efforts made in that direction, but that doesn't signify an atom. It has no more chance of superseding the existing system than Volapük has of supplanting the English language. Inventors are so funny; they get hold of an ingenious idea and forthwith spend their time, money, and energy in endeavouring to force it upon the world, regardless of whether it is acceptable or not. Is it likely that the enormous capital lying locked up in the stacks of printed music under which the earth staggers in her orbit can be rendered null by any new invention whatever? But this is not the point we are aiming at. The inventor naturally sent an account of his scheme to all the musical papers, and the curious thing is that in criticising it most of them declared not only that our present system of notation was the best possible—which would argue an exhaustive knowledge of the matter on their part—but that it really presents few serious difficulties to the learner. Now this is an assertion often made, and is so absurdly untrue that it only proves two things: firstly, that the person making it is a good and quick-witted musician, who, having mastered a difficult art, ceases to appreciate its difficulties; and secondly, that he is not a good or observant teacher. Anyone who has spent a few years teaching ordinary young people the pianoforte must be grossly lacking in the necessary gifts if he fails to foresee exactly what mistakes his pupils will, one and all, make in reading a new piece. The musical intelligence being, more or less, undeveloped, learners naturally read with their eyes only, and are perpetually finding their eyes lead them into error, because each written note is only a conditional and not a constant sign. Yes, you will say, but this fact teaches them to use their brains and to remember key-signatures and so forth. Alas! experience shows that this is not the way it works. The finger-nerves are acted upon either by the brain or by the eye, but rarely by the eye and brain in conjunction; there is not time for this complex operation. If you trust your eye you will be liable to play F natural instead of F sharp if the finger happens to be over the former note, but if you can hold in mind that you are in the key of G while you are playing you may play F sharps even when naturals are intended. And why should the mere act of reading require such severe brain-labour? If it could be simplified, pupils might spare a little thought for the æsthetic side of their work, instead of toiling as they do with the mind so bewildered by the intricacy of its task that they often fail to hear a note they play. Much has been done in this direction by slow degrees, but much remains to be done. Think of the time when they used to put semibreves in the middle instead of at the beginning of a bar. The engraver's eye for symmetry was permitted to cause a world of blunders to students. Even now he will do this—instead of this—

if you let him, entrapping the student into playing the notes separately instead of together. And how few are the editors who will take the trouble to look after such details! Good readers themselves, they quite ignore such simple points as that tailing notes together across the beat, as Schumann is so fond of doing, needlessly confuses the tyro as to the time. The necessary difficulties of our notation are bad enough in all conscience, but the unnecessary ones, in which Schumann was the most prone to indulge, should be done away with as quickly as possible, since music gets every day more chromatic and complicated.

Another point. Is it not about time that we decided upon a definite character to stand for a unit of time, or beat? On hearing a piece of music in four-time, for instance, it is impossible to say whether the composer has written four minims or four semiquavers in the bar, but why should he ever write anything else than four crotchets? A crotchet then might have a definite value, instead of which we have, even in the present day, the anomaly that crotchet-beats of any given metronome time may represent either quick or slow time. Thus in Verdi's "Requiem" the first movement is in common time, Andante ♩ = 80. The "Tuba mirum" is also in common time, but though the beat is nearly the same, ♩ = 88, it is marked Allegro sostenuto. In the "Rex tremendæ" the time is a shade slower, and the ♩ = 72 is Adagio maestoso. In the "Lux æterna" it is ♩ = 88, marked Molto moderato, so here we have the entire range of terms applied to what is practically the same tempo.

The opinion of a great singer on the merits of contemporary operatic composers, though it may not carry conviction, is at least entitled to respect. In a recent number of Black and White an interview with M. Jean de Reszke is published which makes it plain that the famous tenor takes anything but an optimistic view of the latest utterances of the lyric Muse. M. de Reszke disclaims all intention of indulging in any forecast as to the future of opera, but confines himself to a survey of its present condition, which he has no hesitation in pronouncing to be one of decadence. Leaving out of consideration Verdi's "Falstaff", and Puccini's "Manon Lescaut" — the latter because he has not heard it — M. de Reszke looks in vain for any manifestation of real genius. This will prove anything but good hearing for those who pin their faith to the young Italian school. The condensed realism of the up-to-date one-act opera evidently has little attractions for M. Jean de Reszke. He has never assumed, and apparently has no ambition to assume, such rôles as those of Turiddu and Canio. And it is hardly necessary to add that his failure to recognise the merits of contemporary French composers has already been keenly resented by our sensitive Gallic neighbours, all the more as he has been so indiscreet as to declare that his favourite parts are Siegfried and Tristan. On the other hand, it is worthy of note that Madame Patti by no means shares these pessimistic views, having decided to produce and appear in an opera by one of the young lions of the peninsula. Let us hope that it will prove worthier of her talents than the previous operas with the first production of which she has been associated. For it is a curious fact that, throughout her long and brilliant career, Madame Patti has never "created" a rôle of any importance.

We notice that a writer in Truth alludes to the falling off in attendance and offertories at the Worcester Festival as likely to give the coup de grâce to the "lazy plan" of producing no novelties. Now, to begin with, the published list of the collections, so far from showing a falling off, indicates an advance on 1890. As to the attendance, there was undoubtedly a falling off of several hundreds, though this might very fairly be accounted for by the inclusion in the programme of a work which was practically a novelty to West Country audiences—Bach's great Mass in B minor, the performance of which drew an audience nearly 1,000 short of the average. As to the advisability of crowding a programme with novelties, we refrain from expressing an opinion at the moment; but we may be allowed to utter a protest against the injustice of charging the Worcester authorities with laziness. Laziness indeed! Why, look at the list of works produced, including no fewer than four of the most exacting choral compositions in existence: Bach's Mass in B minor, Handel's "Israel in Egypt," Brahms's "Requiem," and Parry's "Job"! It is sufficiently evident that whoever wrote the paragraph to which we have referred cannot have attended the Festival. Attendance on the day of the first rehearsal (Monday, the 11th ult.) would have speedily convinced him that no charge of laziness could be preferred against the committee. On the contrary, the very general impression was that the programme was, if anything, of too arduous and ambitious a character, and imposed upon the rank and file of the executants rather more of a strain than they were capable of bearing. Two at least of the works produced, and those the most difficult of all—we mean the Bach and the Brahms—were practically novelties to more than half the choir.

Àpropos of the Worcester Festival, it is amusing, though not always edifying, to note the spirit in which the representatives of some of our miscellaneous weekly contemporaries address themselves to the task of commenting on the events of the week. In some cases the dresses of the principal performers or of the most aristocratic of the visitors, in others the hospitality dispensed by the local magnates, constitute the chief feature of these notices. Where any criticism or display of knowledge is attempted the results are too often disastrous. For example, we gather from one excellent lady's journal that Mrs. Hutchinson created a very favourable impression by her rendering of an entire chorus, while the same writer is responsible for the interesting statement that Bach was in the habit of conducting daily performances of his B minor Mass in the "Thomanes Kirche" [sic]. Of the Miscellaneous Concert we read: "It was a bonne bouche, light in its constitutional [sic] elements, and came as a relief after the heavy classical strains of the Mass." In the account of the performance of what the writer calls the "Lobegesang" occurs the statement so thoroughly typical and characteristic of the musical Philistine: "Madame Albani electrified her hearers by her production of the B flat on the word 'Praise' in her first solo." This sort of thing is depressing, but at least it is preferable to the performances of other writers who have nothing to say about the music, but prefer to dilate on the inferior quality of the Mayor's sandwiches or the delights of the Dean's mayonnaise.

Mr. James Payn, in a recent issue of the Illustrated London News, has some sympathetic remarks on organists, àpropos of the mention, in a religious journal, of the presentation to an Organist in a Congregational Chapel of the modest sum of £10 on the completion of the twenty-fifth year of his services. The same journal, it appears, in commenting on the incident, remarks that "organists have feelings, and it is well that they should be recognised." And then Mr. Payn goes on to improve the occasion by misquoting a famous anecdote: "It seems but a negative patronage that is extended to him all the world over. 'Please do not shoot at the organist, he does his best,' is, we know, the sort of encouragement he meets with across the Atlantic, and here at home matters are but little better." Now, curiously enough, on the same day on which Mr. James Payn was maltreating this anecdote in the Illustrated London News, the Rev. H. R. Haweis was guilty of precisely similar conduct in the columns of the Daily Chronicle. In the next day's issue Mr. Walter Wren gave what we believe to be the correct version, and may be quoted here: "In the Wild West a 'saloon' often joins the bar. There the miners dance to the music of a pianoforte. An English traveller saw a placard on the wall, just behind the pianoforte player's head, 'Don't shoot at the orchestra. He does his best.'"

In the Allgemeine Musik Zeitung, of the 15th ult., Dr. Heinrich Reimann has an article in which he makes the somewhat startling announcement that the well known humorous Serenade for three men's voices, "Liebes Mädchen hör mir zu" ("Maiden fair, O deign to tell"), which has for years been attributed to Haydn, is not by the "Father of the Symphony," but in all probability by Mozart. We cannot reproduce all his arguments to support his assertion, but they seem to us convincing enough. The one thing which he is at a loss to explain is how the little piece came to be attributed to Haydn. There is no trace of it in any Haydn biographies nor in the various catalogues of his works, and no old edition bearing his name as author is known. Dr. Reimann thinks that the following two bars, near the end of the first verse—which resemble the opening of the Andante in Haydn's "Surprise" Symphony, have done all the mischief. This could only be by Haydn! On the other hand, there are in existence three or four editions, dating respectively from about 1790, 1810, 1840, 1868, which all name Mozart as the composer. If this shows that for over half-a-century he was considered the author of the amusing trifle, it does not necessarily prove that we have to do with a genuine Mozart. But Dr. Reimann considers that internal proofs of this are not wanting. He refers, amongst other things, to the rollicking, somewhat uncouth text, which would be more likely to appeal to Mozart than Haydn; but more especially to the original and wonderfully dramatic music given to the third voice, which certainly seems to have the name of the author of "Figaro" writ large upon it. Perhaps some of our readers can throw some additional light on this matter?

Whence shall spring the English composer who is to write greater symphonies than those of Beethoven, and operas which shall reduce Wagner's music-dramas to the comparative position of the music of primeval man, we know not; but, judging from the past, it is not improbable that his early years will be passed as a choirboy at St. George's, Windsor. Be this as it may, the number of famous musicians who have received their early musical education at the Chapel Royal makes the new arrangements for the choirboys of considerable musical importance. Accommodation is now provided for thirty boarders, twenty-four of whom are choristers, and for whom are provided twelve scholarships, each of the value of £40 per annum, which reduce the fees of the fortunate holders to £10 a year. The six non-choristers are to pay annual fees to the amount of £70. The musical education of all will be entrusted to Sir Walter Parratt, and Mr. Ashley Bickersteth has been appointed Head Master of the school, with Mr. Gerald Harries as assistant. Other details of the scheme show that much attention has been bestowed to secure the general welfare and progress of the boys. The school is intended for the sons of the clergy and professional men, and the next examination for entrance is fixed for the 10th inst. May the best boys win, and may England's future great musician be amongst them.

A young Portuguese composer, Alfredo Keil, who is "chiefest among ten thousand" of his confrères in that he is a millionaire as well as a writer of operas, returned recently to his native country, laden with twenty-eight laurel wreaths, fifty-one bouquets, and a number of other floral trophies. They were tokens of the admiration felt by the good folk of Turin for his genius, when he dwelt amongst them to produce his opera "Irene." The happy composer was naturally anxious to show these precious visible proofs of his Turin triumphs to his Lisbon friends, and was received by them at the railway station with all the pomp and enthusiasm usual under such circumstances—especially when the composer is a millionaire. Next day Mr. Keil appeared at the Custom House to take his laurels home. Imagine his disgust when the officials demanded duty according to the new Portuguese tariff—viz., eighty francs in gold for each kilogramme of the "trophies," or about 2,000 francs in all. The irate composer-millionaire protested, but in vain; public and press took his part, but the officers of the Customs refused to budge. Thus it came even to pass that Mr. Keil's wreaths, bouquets, &c., had to be publicly sold to the highest bidder, and now the Portuguese Exchequer is the richer by 3,000 reis —say, 13s. sterling. Sic transit, &c.

Mr. Charles Santley's singing in Durban during his recent trip to Africa has been the theme of much eulogistic comment in the local press. How much it was appreciated may be seen by the following remarks, made in the Natal Advertiser, from which our young vocalists may derive valuable hints:—"The wonderful preservation of Mr. Santley's voice is unquestionably due to faultless training in his early days, and careful self-culture during his long and busy career. The greatest beauty of Mr. Santley's singing, however, has been his marvellous power of expression. He has all along, and now probably in a greater degree than ever, possessed the rare art of reproducing the exact sentiment of the music he undertakes. It is one thing to perceive the sentiment of a song, and another thing to convey it to an audience; but in this respect Mr. Santley is unequalled."

FACTS, RUMOURS, AND REMARKS.

The present month will be unusually active with Festivals. Beginning on the 3rd to the 6th inst. with Norwich (particulars of which have already been fully detailed in these columns), interest will, a fortnight later—the 16th to the 20th inst.—be transferred to Cheltenham, where "The Golden Legend," "Stabat Mater," "Hymn of Praise," "The Messiah," and a selection from "Lohengrin" will be the chief features, novelty being imparted by the production of a Festival Ode by Berthold Tours, and a choral song, "Sweet Echo," by Dr. F. Iliffe. Conductor, Mr. J. A. Matthews. On the 17th and 18th inst. a two-days' Festival will be given at Hovingham, Yorks, when Sullivan's "The Golden Legend," "Hymn of Praise," Spohr's "God, Thou art great," and a new cantata, "The Rock-Buoy Bell," written for the occasion by Dr. Alan Gray, will be performed. On the 19th and 20th inst. the North Staffordshire Triennial Festival will be held, and will include Berlioz's "Faust," Smart's "Bride of Dunkerron," "Elijah," Mackenzie's "Pibroch," and Beethoven's C minor Symphony. Conductor, Dr. Swinnerton Heap. The Bristol Triennial Festival, under the direction of Sir Charles Hallé, will, from the 25th to the 28th inst., form a fitting conclusion to a notable Festival month.

Taking as his text an assertion by the Daily Telegraph's "Holiday Correspondent" that Whitby is "musically inclined, and, what is more, backs up its inclination," Mr. Henry Hallgate, Conductor of the local Choral Society, discourses in the Whitby Gazette: "In 1879, the present Whitby Choral Society was formed, 'to advance the culture of music in Whitby by affording all the musical elements of the town opportunities of studying and performing the works of good composers.' For thirteen years this Society has held weekly rehearsals from September till April each season, and has given concerts, whose programmes have included oratorios, cantatas, masses, symphonies, part-songs, and solos, all of which have been regularly, if not always adequately, rehearsed and prepared for public performance. Thus the opportunity has been afforded to the whole town. Many have availed themselves of it, and not a few can testify to the benefits and the pleasure they have found in the work. . . . In 1882, the verdict was that 'the singing was an improvement on former melancholy efforts.' In 1885, 'the choruses were magnificently given.' In 1893, 'The chorus singing was almost perfection, the parts being admirably balanced.' Surely this good work is worth supporting. There is more musical material than ever in our town at the present time." Not all remarks by holiday correspondents are so well justified.

Mr. Louis Honig has sent us a genial letter with reference to our comments upon the programme of one of his Concerts in East London. Unfortunately we have not space for the whole epistle, but here is a part thereof: "I do assure you, I am quite delighted that the editor of such a first-class and highly esteemed journal should have thought it worth while to report my little doings, for you gave it out in such a charming style that I have derived more pleasure from your article than teaching a dozen Lasses of Richmond Hill, and some of them are such dear girls." With regard to the direction for refreshments, Mr. Honig writes: "The Bow and Bromley Institute, where I hold my Concerts, is a considerable distance from some towns in Surrey, where I teach, and my patrons are good and kind enough to come all the way to Bow, and the people of Surrey are thirsty (at least I am), and classic music without a drink after travelling twenty miles is really too dry." Mr. Honig is not quite pleased with the correspondent who sent us his programme, but, he adds: "If I can afford you any further amusement, I shall be proud to do so." For ourselves we shall be glad to hear of, or from, Mr. Honig again. He is a sensible man, and knows how to take banter in which there is not a spark of malice.

This is the season for Concert prospectuses, and a number of them are before us. We can only summarise the contents of each, with hearty good wishes for the success of all.

Crystal Palace.—Saturday Concerts begin on the 14th inst. New works to be produced before Christmas: Mr. F. H. Cowen's romantic legend "The Water Lily," and Mr. Edward German's new Symphony, both composed for the Norwich Festival. Also an orchestral prelude, "The Eumenides of Æschylus," by Mr. W. Wallace; an orchestral ballad, "Durand," by Mr. Godfrey Pringle; concert-overture, "Youth," by Dr. Henry Hiles; overture, "The Fire Worshippers," by Mr. Granville Bantock; and a Cradle Song for orchestra, by Mr. C. H. Couldery. M. Paderewski will play for the first time at the Crystal Palace his new Polish Fantasia for pianoforte and orchestra, and Herr Julius Klengel will introduce his new Violoncello Concerto. Artists engaged: Miss Esther Palliser, Madame Ada Patterson, Mr. Edward Lloyd, Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. William Ludwig,

Mr. Andrew Black, Mr. Norman Salmond, Mr. Bantock Pierpoint, and Signor Foli; Frau Moran-Olden, Miss Emma Juch, Miss Meisslinger, Mdlle. Otta Brony, and Mr. David Bispham. The admission to the Palace on Saturdays will be reduced to one shilling.

Royal Choral Society.—The season of ten Concerts begins on November 2. Works to be performed: Berlioz's "Faust," "Israel," "Jephtha," "Messiah," "Golden Legend," "Redemption," Requiem from "Mors et Vita" and Rossini's "Stabat," Mackenzie's "Bethlehem," and "Elijah." Concerts to take place on Thursdays instead of Wednesdays. "Jephtha" (with Sir Arthur Sullivan's additional accompaniments), and, of course, "Bethlehem," are additions to the repertory. Sir Joseph Barnby will conduct as heretofore.

St. James's Hall.—Three Sarasate Concerts will be given, under the direction of Mr. Vert—on the afternoons of the 14th inst., November 13, and December 4. At the first Concert the eminent Spanish virtuoso will have the assistance of Madame Berthe Marx as solo pianist.

The London Symphony Concerts will consist of a series of eight Concerts, extending from November 8 to April 5. The programmes are of the highest possible interest, Beethoven and Wagner figuring, of course, most prominently among the composers represented. Two programmes—those of February 8 and April 5—will be indeed of notable importance, that on the first-named date being "In memoriam, Richard Wagner," when the Prelude and Good Friday Music from "Parsifal," the Prelude and Isolde's death from "Tristan," and the "Walkürenritt" will be given, and, as a fitting tribute, Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony will occupy the central position. On the last date the programme will be devoted to Beethoven, and will comprise the Overture "Coriolanus," Pianoforte Concerto in G (No. 4), and the Choral Symphony. The solo artists at present announced are Mdlle. Frida Scotta, Miss Beatrice Langley, M. Paderewski, M. César Thomson, Miss Ilona Eibenschütz, M. Emile Sauret, and Mr. Leonard Borwick. The choir organised by Mr. Henschel will assist when necessary, and, needless to add, that artist, eminent in so many capacities, will conduct the Concerts.

The Popular Concerts will be resumed on the 16th inst., and the London Ballad Concerts on November 29.

Concerts are also announced at St. James's Hall by Mr. Percy Notcutt on the 7th inst., Mr. Paderewski on the 31st inst., Mr. Ambrose Austin (Scotch Ballad Concert) on November 30, and Madame Patey's Farewell Concert will take place on December 12.

Mr. Basil Tree's useful Panel List just issued will, as usual, be found a reliable guide to all the important London Concerts at present announced.

South Place Sunday Popular Concerts.—The eighth series begins on the 1st inst., admission being free on all occasions. A collection is made to defray expenses. Some idea of the fare thus liberally provided may be gathered from the opening programme, which contains, among other things, Schumann's Quintet, Ballade and Polonaise by Vieuxtemps, Characteristic Piece (Mendelssohn), and Gerald Walenn's String Quartet in F minor. The songs include Schumann's "Belshazzar" and Gounod's "Valley." Artists: Mrs. Frances Ralph and Miss Walenn; Messrs. Franklin Clive, Gerald, Arthur, and Herbert Walenn. Accompanist, Mr. Smith Webster. Here, truly, is a deserving enterprise, which we cordially recommend for support.

Paterson and Sons' Orchestral Concerts.—The enterprising caterers to whom Edinburgh is so much indebted announce a series of ten Concerts, beginning November 6, ending March 26. The band will be that of the Scottish Orchestral Society, conducted by Mr. Henschel. Works announced include Berlioz's "Faust" (first time in Edinburgh); Dr. Mackenzie's "Story of Sayid"; Symphonies by Brahms, Haydn, and Beethoven; Overtures to "King Lear," "Ossian," "Egmont," "Les Abencerages," and "Euryanthe"; various orchestral selections, and Concertos by F. Hiller, Rubinstein, and Max Bruch. Numerous artists of eminence are engaged, and the season, thus equipped, should run a triumphant course.

Mr. Edward German's charming Dances from his "Henry VIII." music were some weeks ago performed by the Bruxelles Harmonie Communale, conducted by M. Fritz Sennewald. The programme announced them in these terms: (a) "Danse mauresque," (b) "Danse des Bergers," (c) "Danse aux Flambeaux, de l'opèra Henry VIII. de Saint-Saëns, arr. par Edward German." This mixing up of Shakespeare's play, M. Saint-Saëns's opera, and our clever young composer's music is good, but the translation of "Morris Dance" into "Danse mauresque" is almost better. For although it is correct enough according to the dictionaries (the dance deriving its name from the Moors, among whom it probably originated), those in the audience who, being unacquainted with our old English dance, expected something Oriental, must have been surprised at "Saint-Saëns's" failure to impart the requisite local colour to the piece, unless, perchance, Mr. German's typically English strains actually suggested Eastern music to them.

"A Visitor" writes to the Times declaring that the Festival of the Three Choirs should no longer be so called, because, at Worcester recently, a hundred singers from Leeds were imported to make up the tale of 250 chorus people. He asks: "Do the authorities mean to assert that, in the combined counties of Worcester, Hereford, and Gloucester, 200 competent singers cannot be found," &c. "A Visitor" then mentions the towns in the three counties, adding: "Have they not all musical societies, or are they all musically asleep? Surely there must be something wrong in these counties if they cannot," &c. Seeing that the Times correspondent wrote from the Gloucester Club, he ought to have known, and might have known by enquiry of anybody around him, that at the Gloucester Festival last year the chorus—and a good chorus too—was drawn entirely from the three counties. The action of the Worcester committee in engaging Yorkshiremen was wholly unnecessary.

According to the Daily Telegraph, a writer in the City Press found a company of the City Glee Singers "warbling sweetly" in the side streets of Ramsgate. It was after dark, and the performers wore masks and wigs. We see no necessity for masks and wigs, and no reason for indulging in pity. City Glee Singers, or any other, are no more disgraced by exercising their art in a pleasure town than are the capital players upon wind instruments often to be found there. "Has high-class music come to this!" exclaims the Telegraph. We answer that "this" is just what high-class music ought to come to. The more we can send into the homes and haunts of the millions the better for art and the people. One thing is certain—glee singers are much more profitably engaged in the side streets of Ramsgate than in wasting their strains upon regardless ears at City banquets.

The following is given by a daily paper as the plot of the forthcoming Gilbert-Sullivan opera. We reproduce it under all reserves: "The scene is laid on a tropical island. King Paramount, bitten with Anglomania, sends his daughter, the Princess Zara, to Girton. When the young lady returns she brings certain 'Imported Flowers of Progress,' by the help of whom the island is to be re-organised upon an English basis. Included in the party are a captain of Life Guards and a naval officer, a Q.C., a Lord Chamberlain, a County Councillor named Blushington, and a Company Promoter. The Princess finds the country in a state of chaos, owing to the conduct of the King's two Ministers, and in the endeavour to reconstitute the nation upon an English basis Gilbert finds plenty of opportunities for whimsical satire at the expense of our manners and customs."

A ruri-decanal conference had a nice question to settle the other day. The lay secretary of a Sabbatarian organisation happens to be Town Clerk of Bournemouth, and, as such, a prominent official of a Corporation which sanctions Sunday Concerts in the Winter Gardens. How could the same man occupy positions so contrary? This question the ruri-decanal conference took gravely into consideration. Several clergymen expressed their abhorrence of the Sunday Concerts and it seemed that the only way out of the mess was for the lay secretary or the Town Clerk to lay down his office. When, however, the lay secretary explained that his conscience was clear because, as Town Clerk, he admitted none but season-ticket holders to the Gardens and took no money at the doors, the conference gave absolution. Would they have done so had the Town Clerk made a collection?

Mr. F. Parkinson, F.S.S., M.P.S., writes: "Will you kindly state in an early number, if you will be so good as to favour me by so doing, that the 'Bibliography of Wagner's Leitmotives,' &c., reviewed by you in your August number was the work of the undersigned, for the nom de plume will disappear when the second thousand are issued; moreover, it is not my intention to adopt it with regard to the second musical book I am just finishing, entitled 'Classical Music and how to understand it,' which incident, together with my determination to write a combined commentary upon 'The Nibelung's Ring' very shortly, you might like to note as a piece of news under Facts, Rumours, and Remarks. Copies will be forwarded for review in due course."

Concerning the story of the South Carolina farmer, quoted in our last and credited to the Toronto Saturday Night, Mr. A. C. Roberts, of New York, writes: "It is of small moment, but you will find the story first told in my own article in the Boston Musical Herald on "American Music at the Exposition." I doubt whether the Editor of the Toronto Saturday Night ever heard of the "South Carolina farmer" until he read about him in my screed. He is a tradition of my youth, and as every gentleman has a right to his own song, so I suppose he ought to have a right in his own story." Certainly, Mr. Roberts.

The American Art Journal says: "The story is told of a young woman, a member of a church choir in St. Louis, who went to the Prosecuting Attorney one day last week and demanded a warrant for all its other members, because they had asserted that her voice was not good, and that she spoiled the harmony of every effort made by the choir. She wept when the Prosecuting Attorney told her the others had a right to criticise her voice. Later she dried her tears for awhile and with renewed courage and determination went for a Police Court summons, only to be disappointed again."

The numerous friends and admirers of Signor Piatti will be pleased to hear that King Umberto has conferred on the illustrious violoncellist the distinguished honour of the Order of Commendatore of the Crown of Italy. The occasion was a Concert given at Bergamo on the 18th ult., the proceeds of which are to be given towards the erection of a monument to Donizetti, the composer, who was a native of that town, as is Signor Piatti himself. Additional interest was lent to the event by the fact that Signor Piatti, who met with a most enthusiastic reception, had not played in his own country for upwards of eighteen years.

The Musical Courier's German correspondent writes that Richard Wagner's son "has inherited so little of his father's musical gifts that Anton Seidl, who at one time tried to give Siegfried some rudimentary pianoforte lessons, had to give up the task in despair, and by the advice of Wagner himself, who disgustedly told Seidl that there was no music in his son's soul. Such, at least, is the story I have from Seidl's own lips." The young gentleman himself tells a different tale, and has entered upon the career of a chef d'orchestre, hoping, in course of time, to be able to conduct all his father's works.

Apropos of the enormous number of new one-act operas à la "Cavalleria" which are everywhere being announced, a German contemporary, the Munich Kunst und Theater Anzeiger, waxes funny in a German fashion as follows: "Only one-act operas seem to be considered the essence of true music now. They continue to grow and increase in ever greater—shortness. It will not be long before half-act operas become the fashion, and then quarter-acts will follow, till at last composers will come to the conclusion that it will be best not to compose at all. That would, perhaps, be the best music."

Mr. Walter, by whom the Albert Palace organ was bought at the recent auction, states that he had no idea of the feeling in Battersea for the retention of the instrument. Enlightened on this point he wrote: "I am willing . . . to make void the contract between the Office of Works and me for the purchase of the organ, and on their returning to me the deposit of the £50 which I paid, I will give £100 towards the funds for the acquisition of the Palace for public purposes." Nothing could be more handsome than this behaviour.

We all admire the musical service at St. Paul's, and are glad to hear, through Archdeacon Sinclair, that, "in the opinion of undoubted judges," it is the best in Europe. The Archdeacon estimates that 10,000 persons attend the metropolitan Cathedral each Sunday. He does not say that they are attracted by the music, but we note this sentence: "In the evenings the Cathedral is quite full, even though, as frequently happens, the preacher may be a young, unknown curate."

The Middlesbrough Musical Union announces three Subscription Concerts, beginning on December 13, when Mr. R. H. Walthew's "Pied Piper of Hamelin" (produced last season by the Highbury Philharmonic Society) will be given. Mr. Kilburn will, as usual, be the Conductor. The Society deserves every encouragement for its efforts in performing works by native composers.

We understand that the production of Mr. F. H. Cowen's opera "Signa" at the Dal Verme Theatre, Milan, is definitely fixed for the last week of this month.

News comes from Exeter that the Oratorio Society has, after a time of depression, got its head above water. "After providing for all liabilities," writes a correspondent, "there is a balance at the bank." This goes to encourage hope of a triennial festival in the far South-West.

A part of the machinery—a steam pipe, to be precise—used for working "Die Walküre" at the Grand Opéra, gave way the other evening, and was followed by a deafening hiss of escaping vapour. The gods of Walhalla did not comport themselves with dignity under the new circumstances. All-Father Wotan jumped into the orchestra among the musicians, while stately Brünnhilde rushed off the stage for dear life. Nobody, however, was a penny the worse.

Hove is first and Brighton relatively "nowhere" in the matter of open-air music. Both these near neighbours have kept bands a-foot during the summer, and while the Brighton enterprise is described as an absolute failure, the Hove account shows a surplus of £150. There must be a reason for the difference. Let the larger community find it out and amend.

"An Old Man" complains in print because "Robert le Diable" is sometimes called "Roberto il Diavolo." He must be very hard up for a musical grievance.

WORCESTER MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

The managers of the 170th meeting of the Three Choirs cannot be charged with erring in the direction of exaggerated enterprise. For that matter, indeed, they showed no enterprise at all, either in the production of new works or in following the lead of Gloucester last year and trusting the choral music to local singers. It may be that the committee perceived good reasons for extreme caution. Times are bad, especially in agricultural districts, where squires and yeomen have little money to spend on amusements, and the policy of putting forward known and tried attractions was, possibly, recognised as more than ever imperative. Be this as it may, the programme of the Festival contained but one new work—an Overture by Dr. Parry—and but one other composition not before heard in this country—a pretentious and unduly favoured symphonic piece, "Gretchen im Dom," for orchestra and organ, the work of Fischer, a Dresden organist, who departed this life about Christmas last. The second was given "by request" of an influential local gentleman, who heard the piece in Germany and wished that his neighbours might also have a pleasant recollection concerning it. Both these novelties were performed at the solitary secular Concert which now remains to these Festivals, and is, at Worcester, given in the Public Hall on Wednesday evening. There was a large audience on the occasion, and Dr. Parry's Overture had a sympathetic hearing, as anything by a man personally so esteemed is sure to have. The work bears no name, and no clue to its "poetic basis" has, to our knowledge, been given. It happens, however, that neither name nor clue is needed for the enjoyment of music which, like Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, clearly suggests a conflict as between light and darkness. The nature of the contending elements each hearer can judge for himself, but they are plainly to be felt in the strenuous, agitated leading subject, with its strong treatment, and the melodious, graceful, and tender second theme. The Overture is worked out with full command of necessary means, and gives the impression of a masterly composition which will become more esteemed the better it is known. With regard to "Gretchen im Dom," we must pronounce it an apt example of the forcible-feeble in music. The composer puts in motion a great deal of machinery, and sets up a huge clatter of wheels and cranks, but nothing worth speaking of is ground out. A mountain labours and, when all is over, we say "A mouse has come forth." The organ part is curiously ineffective considering that an organist wrote it. Enough of "Gretchen im Dom," and good-bye!

Six performances were given in the Cathedral, the first being, according to unvarying rule, devoted to "Elijah," and, also according to unvarying rule, the attendance was large—the second largest of the week, in point of fact; first honours being taken by "The Messiah" on Friday. It would be idle to consume time and space with details, especially as the chief solos were in the tried and capable hands of Madame Albani, Miss Anna Williams, Mr. Lloyd, and Mr. Watkin Mills, whose rendering of the Prophet's music was very favourably regarded. The contralto solos (save one) were entrusted to Madame Belle Cole, that lady's somewhat uncultivated style having a foil in the very refined and sympathetic singing of "Woe unto them," by Miss Jessie King, a young beginner with, apparently, a future. The choruses were given fairly well under the conditions set up by the control of an inexperienced Conductor. Mr. Hugh Blair, the Organist of Worcester Cathedral, is a capable man, but, like every other, needs practice in the difficult craft of a chef d'orchestre. He will arrive in time, but at present he is not there, and consciousness of this seemed to lessen the spirit with which the chorus (including 100 singers from Leeds) attacked their work. Tuesday evening was devoted to Beethoven's Symphony in A and Handel's "Israel in Egypt." The performance of the Symphony, or rather its effect, was marred by the Conductor's slow tempi, and otherwise had weak points. It is, however, something to have such great orchestral works recognised as fit for use in a sacred place. Created by Heaven's inspiration, they are certainly fit for the house in which the Lord of Heaven is worshipped, and there is not the least need to slow down the tempi lest they should give offence. Perpend, Mr. Blair. Handel's Oratorio of the great Deliverance, with its massive double choruses, had a better effect than was anticipated in view of comparatively small means. The performance was, of course, helped by the resonant qualities of the Cathedral. Every chorus-singer in such a building is equal to two in a concert-room, and three or four at the Crystal Palace. Hence the ensemble did not so much lack the requisite power and majesty as the numerical force engaged seemed to suggest. The solos were entrusted to Miss Williams, Madame Cole, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Ineson, and Mr. Brereton. Of these artists Mr. Lloyd took chief honours with a superb rendering of "The enemy said."

Wednesday's proceedings opened with Bach's Mass in B minor—performed according to the Leeds version of 1886 and 1892. The choice of this work was bold and somewhat risky, but, although the Conductor's tempi were again too slow in not a few movements, no case of failure resulted, while it will readily be understood that the music derived immense advantage from the place of performance. Bach's ungrateful solos—we speak in the popular sense—were conscientiously sung by Miss Williams, Miss Hilda Wilson, Mr. Houghton, and Mr. Watkin Mills, the artist last-named acting as substitute for Mr. Plunket Greene. We fear the efforts of these singers met with little appreciation, all of which, such as it was, went out to the more lively and exultant choruses. Mr. Sinclair, of Hereford, did capital work at the organ. We have already mentioned the novelties given at the Secular Concert in the evening. There only remains to add that Schubert's Symphony in B minor, a selection from Sullivan's "Tempest" music, some of Dvorák's Sclavonic Dances, and the Overture to "Figaro" filled a conspicuous place in the programme. The chorus-singers were, very wisely, given a rest that evening, but Mrs. Hutchinson, Mr. Lloyd, and Mr. Plunket Greene contributed solos amid general satisfaction.

Dr. Parry's "Job" and Spohr's "Last Judgment" were performed on Thursday morning, the soloists in the first of these works being Master Perkins, of the Worcester Cathedral Choir, Mr. Houghton, Mr. Brereton, and Mr. Plunket Greene; in the second, Madame Albani, Miss Jessie King, Mr. Houghton, and Mr. Greene. This was a strong programme. Dr. Parry's Oratorio made such an impression at Gloucester in 1892 that its performance at Worcester was anticipated with much interest; and the "Last Judgment" always draws. Hence a very large audience assembled—the third in numbers of the week. Under the composer's firm guidance "Job" had an excellent rendering—perhaps the best in its short career. A new life and spirit seemed to animate all concerned and the greatest success of the Festival resulted. The last two numbers—namely, the Lamentations and the chorus in which the Patriarch is answered—made the best effect, as well they might, seeing that Mr. Plunket Greene delivered the solo magnificently, and the Finale received almost equal justice. That the audience were deeply touched by what they heard their profound attention went to show. Spohr's Oratorio, conducted by Mr. Blair, made its customary Cathedral effect. Heard under the conditions ruling at Worcester, there is no more impressive and touching music than that of the "Last Judgment." In the evening Brahms's "German Requiem" and Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise" constituted the programme, and were successful in drawing a good second muster of amateurs. The "Requiem" was a safe selection. It enlisted the sympathies of the performers, while its lofty and solemn strains, in association with the most tremendous of all subjects, and heard in such a place, inspired a feeling almost of awe among the congregation. Brahms's music was, on the whole, well rendered, the choruses especially. As for the solos, they were in the hands of Madame Albani, who wholly mistook the character of "Ye now are sorrowful," and of Mr. Watkin Mills, who did his work in dignified and appropriate style. The "Hymn of Praise" was, of course, a success; Madame Albani, Miss Williams, and Mr. Lloyd taking the solo music. Mr. Lee Williams presided at the organ.

"The Messiah," on Friday morning, drew more than 3,000 people. Of its performance nothing need be said.

The Festival included two grand special services, one taking place on Sunday, the 10th ult., the other on the Friday evening following. At the first the Dean preached an eloquent sermon regarding the duty and function of praise; and in the music chosen were settings of the Te Deum and Jubilate composed by Mr. Hugh Blair for the occasion, which, let us add, they worthily honoured. This is excellent Church music, and an admirable blend of traditional art with the more free treatment of the present day. The anthems were Mendelssohn's "When Israel" and Mozart's Motet "Glory, honour." Dr. Mackenzie's beautiful "Benedictus," played during the Offertory, made a great effect. At the closing service by the Three Choirs, Mrs. Hutchinson sang "Let the bright Seraphim." The festival organ was specially built by Nicholson and Co., of Worcester. It consisted chiefly of 16-ft. and 8-ft. stops, with a 32-ft. effect in the pedals.

COVENT GARDEN THEATRE.

The excellence which characterised the initial performances of Mr. Farley Sinkins's Promenade Concerts has been well sustained during the past month. The programmes have presented an admirably varied selection of music, for the most part of artistic value, and their execution has been of great merit. Among the important works performed have been Beethoven's First, Sixth, and Seventh Symphonies, Mendelssohn's "Italian" and "Scotch" Symphonies, the Andante and Finale from Mr. Cowen's "Welsh" Symphony, Haydn's "Military" Symphony, Schumann's Fourth Symphony, the Overtures to the "Magic Flute," Berlioz's "Carneval Romain," Bennett's "The Naiads," Sullivan's "Ouvertura di Ballo," Schubert's "Rosamunde," Beethoven's "Prometheus" and third "Leonora," Cliffe's "Cloud and Sunshine," Cherubini's "Anacreon," Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Ruy Blas," Weber's "Euryanthe," Auber's "Fra Diavolo," Wallace's "Lurline," and C. Ould's "Robert Macaire." Many other orchestral works of interest have been heard, including Dr. A. C. Mackenzie's first Scotch Rhapsody, Brahms's Hungarian Dances, Mr. William Wallace's clever but over-elaborated Symphonic Poem "The Passing of Beatrice," Dr. Hubert Parry's incidental music to "Hypatia," a graceful "Serenade Espagnole" by Mr. G. R. Betjemann, Mr. E. German's Dances from his incidental music to "Henry VIII.," a characteristic Gavotte in E minor and a piquant Minuet in G by M. De Nevers, and a "Danza Esotica," very French in style, by Mascagni, the last-named being played for the first time in England on the 12th ult. In addition to these performances three more Wagner Concerts have been given, when the usual excerpts from the master's works were excellently interpreted. The solo instrumentalists have been Messrs. Slivinski, F. Dawson, M. Wolff, and P. M. Cathie, the last-named a promising young violinist from the Royal Academy of Music. Foremost among the vocalists must of course be placed Mr. Sims Reeves, who, in spite of oft-repeated farewells, fresh in the memories of most people, made his re-appearance at these Concerts on the 11th ult., and at this and subsequent Concerts was received with the utmost enthusiasm. He sang "Tom Bowling," and other songs with which his name will long be associated, with the same beauty of phrasing and artistic finish that has so greatly contributed to his reputation; but his voice, to those who remember him in his prime, is but as the echo of its former richness and power. Other vocalists who have repeatedly appeared have been Mesdames Marie Roze, Palliser, Valleria, Giulia Valda, Ella Russell, Belle Cole, Marian McKenzie; and Messrs. Philip Newbury, Braxton Smith, Thorndike, Oudin, Bispham, Pierpoint, the Meister Glee Singers, and Master Cyril Tyler.

Mr. F. H. Cowen's selection of the music and the many fine performances he and Mr. Betjemann have secured must be spoken of with high approval, and the success of the Concerts should be welcomed as the sign of a growing appreciation for high-class orchestral music.

SAINT-SAËNS'S "SAMSON ET DALILA."

A Biblical opera does not seem exactly the thing to lay before a Promenade Concert audience, but these are days of experiments which often meet with success in proportion to their apparent risk, public taste being capricious and public procedure erratic. Mr. Farley Sinkins distinctly speculated on the 25th ult. with Saint-Saëns's "Samson et Dalila," and we are very much afraid that he lost by the venture, inasmuch as the audience, though favourable enough in their reception of the work, was comparatively small. Mr. Sinkins must be credited with having resolved upon giving a good performance. He has an orchestra which can do anything, and the chorus-singers were gathered, at an unfavourable time of year, it is true, from the best available quarters. For the three important rôles in the opera—Dalila, Samson, and the High Priest—the manager engaged two French artists well known abroad in connection with the work, and Mr. Eugene Oudin, while the general control of the production was arranged to be taken by the composer himself. But, alas, "the best laid schemes of mice and men" are subject to disturbing influences, and in this case neither the Gallic singers nor the Gallic composer had anything to do with the performance. They came to London, and went back again—at any rate, the two gentlemen did—while the lady, who remained at her post, eventually declined to sing with a new tenor. We shall not discuss the reasons for this state of things. Those assigned take colour from the quarter whence they come, and it is none of our business to reconcile them. We can only regret the fiasco.

Mr. Sinkins would have been quite justified, under the circumstances, in postponing the performance until other artists had learned the music, and this, we think, would have been the better course. He was, however, anxious to keep faith with the public, and, therefore, engaged the services of an unknown soprano, Miss Edith Miller—a former student of the R.A.M., we hear—and of Mr. Bernard Lane. These singers were an indifferent choice, because wanting in physical means, but they may have been Hobson's choice. Not every soprano or tenor would undertake to get up an opera between Saturday and Monday. Much to the credit of their courage and resources, Miss Miller and Mr. Lane essayed the formidable task, and, although their efforts were necessarily inadequate, they filled the gap sufficiently well to make the performance possible. Of course the presentation of an opera with the two leading parts feebly represented had a depressing effect, and only the circumstances we have detailed justified the forbearance of the audience, who remained throughout the evening in kindly mood and gave the work a favourable reception. Mr. Oudin, we need hardly say, sang the music of the High Priest very finely. Whenever he rose the aspect of things brightened, and there was much to enjoy. Mr. Magrath, as the Old Hebrew, was likewise efficient, while service more or less acceptable was rendered by Mr. Barlow, Mr. Gawthrop, and Mr. H. Lewis Thomas. The orchestra has much to do in "Samson et Dalila," and that under Mr. Cowen's direction played up with spirit, if not with the finesse demanded by a composer who delights as much in delicate touches as in broad and sonorous effects. As for the chorus, its position at the back and nearly up in the "flies" was most unfavourable, the singers never having a fair chance of showing their powers. Altogether, the performance had many drawbacks, and cannot be referred to as having given the public a fair opportunity of judging the French master's opera. For the reason just stated we refrain from criticism of the work—a task which should only be entered upon when the performance is an adequate representation. General impressions are another matter, and enough was heard at Covent Garden to prove that the music of "Samson" makes a serious claim, on behalf of its composer, to very high honours. The impressiveness and charm of the opening and closing acts, in which religious feeling predominates, are remarkable, while the second, dealing with Samson's fall and betrayal, shows dramatic strength and works up to an exciting climax. It must not be supposed that the opera, though only of late it has attracted attention in this country, is a recent work. It was first produced at Weimar in 1877, and is said to have been written several years earlier.

MR. GERMAN'S MUSIC TO "THE TEMPTER."

The recognition by actors of the assistance their art can derive from music is a striking feature of our time. An example of how effectively the musician can help to realise the intentions of the dramatist is furnished by Mr. Edward German's incidental music to Mr. H. A. Jones's new drama "The Tempter," produced on the 20th ult., at the Haymarket Theatre. Mr. German has furnished an appropriate Prelude to each act, and much incidental music that happily enforces the dramatic significance of the play. In the Introduction the two principal themes are severally representative of The Tempter and Lady Avis, and the energetic termination of the movement effectively prepares the audience for the storm at sea which occupies the opening scene. The music continues throughout the whole of this scene, and in the next scene a good deal is heard from the orchestra, including a theme which subsequently recurs when Prince Leon and the Lady Isobel are together. A stirring Bacchanalian Dance forms the Prelude to the second act, in which subsequently occurs a kind of "Gregorian" Hymn and an original and characteristic song for The Tempter; a charming Berceuse ushers in the third act, and a Dramatic Interlude, in which the principal themes are effectively recapitulated, forms an appropriate introduction to the fourth. The music is admirably played by an excellent orchestra, under the experienced conductorship of Mr. Armbruster; but its effectiveness is much impaired by the position of the players under the stage.

OBITUARY.

The sudden death of Sir William George Cusins, on August 31, at Remonchamps, in the Ardennes, was one of the startling incidents of the month. It appears that Sir William left England for his holiday abroad in good health, but was soon struck down by influenza. From this he seemed to recover, but the treacherous disease, as is so often the case, left the seeds of death behind it. "On the last day of his life," we read, "he partook of a hearty meal in the presence of the doctor, and afterwards went off into a sound sleep. From that sleep he never awoke. The cause of death was certified to be acute inflammation of the lungs." The remains were buried at Spa—a place to which the deceased musician is said to have been much attached. The leading events in Sir William Cusins's life may be thus succinctly stated. Born in London, October 14, 1833; he entered the Chapel Royal in his tenth year; studied at Brussels, 1844; gained a King's Scholarship at the Royal Academy of Music, 1847; first appeared in public as a pianist, 1849; Organist of Queen's Private Chapel, and entered the Orchestra of the Royal Italian Opera, 1849; made Assistant-Professor at the Academy, 1851; appointed Conductor of the Philharmonic Society, 1867; nominated Master of the Queen's Music, 1870. Sir William resigned his Court appointment, and was Knighted, only a short time before his death. If not a prolific composer, his works show ambition. The chief of them are "Gideon," an Oratorio produced in 1871; two Concert-Overtures, one of which, "Les Travailleurs de la Mer," had a hearing at a Philharmonic Concert not long ago and made a lively impression, and a Pianoforte Concerto in A minor, which has been publicly performed on various occasions. Sir William was a man of strong opinions, which he knew how to express with energy and clearness; but his honesty was never doubted, even by those who most differed from him. In the department of musical literature his monograph on the MS. of "The Messiah" will always be regarded as a valuable contribution.

The death, at Adelaide, of Mr. John McKinlay, husband of Madame Antoinette Sterling, is much regretted in London artistic circles. Himself a musician of taste and acquirements, his marriage, in 1875, to the well-known American contralto was an auspicious union, which proved to be one of no ordinary happiness. The circumstances of Mr. McKinlay's death were peculiarly sad. In the absence of his wife, who had gone from Adelaide to New Zealand, an illness from which he suffered took a fatal turn. The situation of the widow, so far from home and friends, needs no description in words. It appears that some unfavourable remarks were made in the Australian press because Madame Sterling prosecuted her tour during her husband's illness, but she has since stated that this was done in obedience to his request. It appears, moreover, that on landing in New Zealand she found a telegram stating that Mr. McKinlay was convalescent. She further said: "I wanted to keep faith with the public, and with the syndicate who had engaged me." Madame Sterling has the unqualified sympathy of the English public in her bereavement.

We regret to have to announce the death of Mr. John Bridge, the father of Professor J. F. Bridge, of Westminster Abbey, and Dr. J. C. Bridge, of Chester Cathedral. He was for many years a lay clerk in the choir of Rochester Cathedral, and greatly esteemed both as a musician and as a man. He was one of the original members of the Choir Benevolent Fund, and was for years a well known figure at the Handel Festivals. He died on the 1st ult., aged seventy-three, at the North Gate, Chester, the residence of his youngest son, and was buried in Rochester Cathedral.

We have also to announce the following deaths:—

On the 15th ult., at 14, Stonor Road, West Kensington, Isabel Susannah, aged twenty-one, the wife of Mr. H. C. Tonking, the well known organist.

Antoine Jean Baptiste Dubrucq, excellent oboe player, formerly at the Paris Opéra Comique, afterwards principal oboe of the Crystal Palace orchestra, the Royal Italian Opera, Sir Charles Hallé's and the Richter Concerts. For many years he was also a member of the Queen's Private Band. He died at Hastings on the 19th ult., aged 53.

Ferdinand Brissler, on August 6, at Berlin, aged seventy-five; pianist and teacher, and well known through his numerous pianoforte arrangements of orchestral works.

Abraham Adam Herion, on August 12, at Dresden, aged eighty-six. Formerly a well known pianist, teacher, and composer. He was a pupil of Moritz Hauptmann, but his compositions have been all but forgotten. At his own request the news of his death was not published till some days after his funeral.

Bertha Sieberg-Johannsen, on August 13, at Reichenthal. An opera singer of considerable distinction, greatly appreciated in Germany and the United States. She was the sister of the present Director of the St. Petersburg Conservatoire of Music.

Alexis W. A. Heyblom, conductor, author of some singing methods and numerous male-voice choruses much sung in Holland, on August 13, at Rotterdam, aged sixty-one.

Paul Ehrke, an excellent opera singer, at Hamburg, on the 9th ult., aged fifty-three. In 1882 he was in London as a member of the German Opera at Drury Lane Theatre. His performance of the difficult part of Beckmesser in Wagner's "Meistersinger" was wonderfully fine; in fact, one of the most perfect creations ever seen on the lyric stage. It has never been approached by any other artist who has essayed the part in this country.

Wilhelm Kalliwoda, pianist, teacher, and composer, formerly Court Capellmeister at Carlsruhe, on the 8th ult., aged sixty-six. He was a pupil of Mendelssohn and a son of Johannes W. Kalliwoda, whose symphonies, overtures, &c., are still sometimes performed in England.

Maurice Dengremont, violin virtuoso, formerly a travelling prodigy. As such he appeared in London in 1879, when he created the greatest enthusiasm. This paper referred to him after his first appearance at the Crystal Palace, on October 4, as "a remarkable musical genius, having a great future before him," and expressed a hope that his powers might not be unduly forced, lest he should share the fate of so many youthful prodigies, and develop into a very ordinary man. Our fears have, alas! been more than justified, for poor Dengremont died at Buenos Ayres a complete wreck, both physically and mentally. A terrible warning to the parents and agents of the many prodigies now before the public. He was only twenty-seven.

Paul Beck, Conductor of the Ballet at the Hanover Court Theatre, composer of many marches, dances, songs, &c., at Hanover, on August 9.

MUSIC IN BELFAST.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The musical season here opened on the 11th ult. with a most successful week's performances by the Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company. Of the eight operas given by this justly celebrated troupe, six were new to this city—namely, "Pagliacci," "L'Amico Fritz," Gluck's "Orpheus and Eurydice," A. Goring Thomas's "Golden Web" (one act only of which was given), Adolphe Adams's "Postillion of Longjumeau," and Verdi's "Otello," all of which were attended with crowded houses.

Following the Carl Rosa troupe we have had a week of D'Oyly Carte's répertoire Company. The operas performed were "The Mikado," "Iolanthe," "Patience," "The Gondoliers," and "The Yeomen of the Guard."

For the forthcoming season the Philharmonic Society has made important engagements among the foremost British and foreign artists. The first Concert will be given on the 13th inst., with Miss Ella Russell, Madame Belle Cole, Mr. Ben Davies, Signor Foli, Mr. Frederick Dawson (pianist), Mons. Elkan Kosman (solo violin), Mr. Sydney Brooks (violoncellist), and Mr. Spencer Lorraine (accompanist). For the second Concert, on November 28, Dr. A. C. Mackenzie's "Dream of Jubal" and Stanford's "Battle of the Baltic" will be given. The Christmas "Messiah" (extra Concert), which of late years has been so popular here, promises this year to be more than usually attractive, the engagements for it being Madame Fanny Moody, Miss Lily Moody, Mr. Hirwen Jones, and Mr. Charles Manners. The third Concert will be a miscellaneous one; for it the following artists are announced: Madame Marian McKenzie, Mons. Eugène Oudin, Mr. Edwin Houghton, Mons. Slivinski, and possibly Mdlle. Duma. And for the last Subscription Concert, Mendelssohn's "St. Paul" will be performed. The Saturday Popular Concerts are attracting crowded audiences to the Ulster Hall weekly, while the Organ and Pianoforte Recital in the same building, by Mr. W. G. Price and Mr. Lawrence Walker, has been well attended.

MUSIC IN BIRMINGHAM.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The musical schemes at present issued for the forthcoming season offer much of solid interest, if not of a very novel kind. It would, however, be rather uncharitable to complain of this lack of novelty, seeing that productions of new or unaccustomed musical works have, of late years, generally resulted here in disappointment and monetary loss. In the face of so many discouraging experiences, it would be a very loyal or enthusiastic musical citizen that could defend the public of Birmingham against a charge of indifference to, or distaste for, new experiments in art.

The Festival Choral Society will not, in a single instance, venture outside its present répertoire. At the same time, a commendable list of works is put forward, comprising one or two interesting revivals—viz., Dr. Parry's "Judith," Max Bruch's "Lay of the Bell," Gade's "Crusaders" (first heard here at the Festival of 1876), and Rossini's "Stabat Mater." The first Concert, on the 12th inst., will, however, be devoted to a performance of the "Elijah," perhaps the very "safest" work of its class that could be produced here. "When in doubt, play the 'Elijah,'" might be given as sound advice to a Birmingham choral society manager or conductor. Dr. Stanford's "The Revenge" serves to fill out the spare time left by Max Bruch's work at one of these Concerts.

Mr. Stockley, whose Orchestral Concerts appeal to cultivated tastes as perhaps the highest musical treats of the season, does not yet give full details as to the orchestral works to be produced at the four Concerts of his subscription series. We learn, however, at the time of going to press, that among the more important orchestral selections Mr. Stockley proposes to introduce Professor Villiers Stanford's "Irish" Symphony, Dr. Hubert Parry's "Hypatia" music, written for the production of that play at the Haymarket Theatre (both works to be conducted by their respective composers), Wagner's "Walkürenritt" and "Tannhäuser" Overture. Interesting and here practically novel productions of the older "classic" school will be the "Rhenish" Symphony of Schumann and the "Reformation" Symphony of Mendelssohn. Beethoven will be represented by his Fifth Symphony; so far, a very attractive list.

Messrs. Harrison, whose Concerts number among the very important social events of the year, offer their usual imposing annual list of artists. As the names are those of artists, with little exception, of renown or established repute, it is not thought necessary to give any particulars as to what music these artists will perform; nor is it necessary in one respect, since the only difficulty these enterprising managers seem to meet with is that of finding sufficient seating accommodation for their fashionable clientèle. Last year, we believe, applications at the first ballot greatly exceeded the number of allotable seats in the hall. Madame Melba, whose Concert here last season gave peculiar proof of the lack of interest towards what is novel on the part of the public, returns to satisfy the hungry curiosity of all that missed her wonderful display on that occasion, along with Madame Albani, Miss Ella Russell, Miss Palliser, Mesdames Sterling, Gomez, Cole, Hope Glen, and Miss Alice Hill; the latter, one of our Birmingham protegées. The vocalists of the sterner sex are Messrs. Edward Lloyd, B. Davies, Durward Lely, Andrew Black (the two latter gentlemen new to us), Foli, and N. Salmond. We shall also hear the Meister Glee Singers again, who have amused us so much on more than one previous occasion. The pianists of the hour will be represented by Miss Adelina de Lara (another "Birmingham young lady," and sure of a good reception on that account alone, although her talents have already here been made sufficiently manifest), Mr. Frederick Dawson, and "Little Frida Simonson, the wonderful child pianist, only eight years old." ("The cry is still they come!") Sir Charles and Lady Hallé will, almost as a matter of course, renew their acquaintance with us, since, destitute of a "Hallé" Concert, the Harrison series would appear indeed lacking. Among violinists we also are led to expect Mesdames Nettie Carpenter, Marianne Eissler, and M. Elkan Kosman. Mr. W. L. Barrett will appear as flautist; Miss Clara Eissler as harpiste—would it not be wrong nowadays to speak of a lady as a "harper"? that very clever boy violoncellist, Master Jean Gérardy; and a new performer upon that instrument (the violoncello), Mr. Sydney Brooks, who also seeks, as a débutant, the applause of his fellow townspeople. But is not this sufficient to form an idea of the goodly array of talent which Messrs. Harrison offer to their patrons? The first Concert takes place on the 9th inst., with a "full, overflowing house" to be depended upon.

The Birmingham Orchestral Association (under the conductorship of Mr. Halford) promises a performance of the "Bohemian Girl," a work which has not before been produced in this way—that is, as a Concert Cantata—but which is certain to "take" with our Birmingham public.

The Society of Artists (picture exhibition) offers a Concert every Saturday afternoon, starting the 14th inst., throughout its present season. It bespeaks the deplorable, crowded state of the "profession" when—as we are given upon authority to understand—a lengthy series of concerts may be organised without much, if any, expense to the promoters in the matter of fees, &c. At these Matinées it is the "idea" that the music shall accompany the contemplation of the pictorial works; but the audience is generally found to be a stationary one while the Concert is going on. Lining the wall of the Society's large round room in rows they stand, with performers in or about the centre, an arrangement which, when the press becomes great, must be very trying to singer or player. Mr. O. Pollack is Conductor of these Concerts, and doubtless his present series will be found equally attractive to that of last season.

Mr. F. W. Beard has already given the first Concert of the season. On Saturday evening, the 16th ult., this enterprising young musician gave a very pleasant entertainment at popular prices in the Town Hall. Signor Gennaro Volpe, announced (with name in extra large type) as "Mandolinist to the Court of Norway and Sweden," was vastly successful. He brought out some surprisingly good effects from his instrument, though the selection of such pieces as Raff's Cavatina, written originally for violin, requiring long reiteration of melodic notes, we do not think quite suited to the genius of the mandoline. Mr. Beard was assisted by Misses Nelly Brown and F. Loveless; Messrs. Philip Yorke and Taunton. The Lichfield Quartet sang some glees in highly pleasing style.

MUSIC IN BRISTOL.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Public activity in musical matters in Bristol has scarcely commenced, a few minor Concerts only having yet been given. Among the various musical societies, however, preparations are being made for the work of the season so near upon us. The members of the Festival Choir are exceedingly busy putting the final touches to the works to be performed at the Triennial Festival this month. Sir Charles Hallé again visited Bristol on the 18th ult. to direct a rehearsal of the Wagner selections to be brought forward.

The season promises to be a busy one, but there are two regrettable things to which attention may here be drawn. Owing to the proprietor of a diorama having engaged, for nearly three months from Christmas, Colston Hall, the only large public building in Bristol available for Concert purposes, music will suffer considerably during that period. Inconvenience of this kind has long been experienced in this city, and for years there has been much talk of remedying it, but there seems little likelihood of active measures being taken. The other regrettable fact is that the Orchestral Concerts, which are of a first-class order, are not supported as they should be. Although some will be given, the necessary cutting of the coat according to the cloth must lead to an undesirable curtailment of forces. It is a reproach to our city that, whereas miscellaneous concerts organised from a distance are generally well attended, the public fail to adequately support choral and instrumental performances of the highest class given by local societies. This seems almost incredible in a place noted for the excellence of its music, where hundreds of young people every year pass examinations in musical subjects, and where between 2,000 and 3,000 singers and players are engaged in the practice of the tonal art in the central, district, and parochial choral and orchestral societies.

MUSIC IN GLASGOW.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The local musical season was inaugurated on the 18th ult., when Sir Augustus Harris's Italian Opera Company began a week's engagement at the Theatre Royal. Nothing in its way could have been more auspicious, inasmuch as five years have passed since an Italian Operatic Corps has found its way to the banks of the Clyde. The Company, which included the Sisters Ravogli, Messrs. Dufriche, Bispham, Giannini, and other equally well-known artists, was a particularly strong one, and the répertoire comprised "Pagliacci," "Lohengrin," "Orfeo," "Les Huguenots," and the inevitable "Cavalleria Rusticana."

The liveliest interest still centres in our couple of rival orchestral schemes, leading particulars of which have already appeared in The Musical Times. It is, therefore, only now needful to add that the Scottish Orchestra Company's arrangements include the production of several novelties, and more particularly works from the pens of Professor Villiers Stanford, Dr. Hubert Parry, and Mr. Arthur Somervell. Each of these gentlemen will, moreover, conduct his own compositions. The management also announce that it has been arranged to keep every performance within a couple of hours, a consideration for which many folks will be devoutly thankful. A similar consideration also marks the arrangements of the Glasgow Choral Union, and it will be noted with much pleasure that Mr. Joseph Bradley will again conduct the choral concerts in connection with the old scheme. These have, indeed, been made specially attractive, and they will now include Mr. Hamish MacCunn's setting of "Lord Ullin's Daughter," and, as regards the production of the second and third acts of Wagner's "The Flying Dutchman," the services of Miss Esther Palliser, Mr. E. C. Hedmondt, and Mr. Andrew Black ought to invest the performance with features of unusual interest. More, Mr. August Manns has certainly not overlooked the important question of novelty in his own special domain—that of the orchestral department.

But the couple of schemes just glanced at do not by any means exhaust the records pertaining to the season's work. Next month the welcome visit of the Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company is due, the Messrs. Harrison, of Birmingham, have again arranged for a series of Concerts (with Madame Adelina Patti and Madame Albani as the bright particular stars), and the enthusiastic band of Helensburgh amateurs is once more to the front with a prospectus full of all sorts of good things. The Eastern Choral Society takes up Gadsby's "The Lord of the Isles," the Dumbarton Choral Union has placed in rehearsal "The Bride of Dunkerron" and Stanford's "The Revenge," and down Renfrew way the local choral society is understood to be studying Haydn's the "Creation." Other societies in the neighbourhood are busy formulating their plans, and on the 6th inst. (as will be seen from our advertising columns)

Mr. H. A. L. Seligmann gives a Concert in the Athenæum Hall, for which a popular programme has been prepared.

Mr. J. More Smieton has been unanimously awarded the prize offered by the Glasgow Select Choir for the best original setting of Burns's "The Jolly Beggars." The adjudicators were Mr. Ebenezer Prout, Professor Niecks, and Mr. Allan Macbeth.

A deputation from the Incorporated Society of Musicians, consisting of Mr. W. H. Cummings and Dr. W. H. Hunt (Birkenhead), Mr. Liddle (Newcastle), and Mr. Edward Chadfield, the general Secretary, visited Glasgow on the 16th ult., for the purpose of explaining to the local professional musicians the objects of the Society. Mr. Julius Seligmann, the Chairman of the Glasgow Society of Musicians, presided at the meeting; and after some interesting discussion, Mr. Allan Macbeth moved the following resolution: "That the Incorporated Society of Musicians has by its action done much to promote the art of music, and to improve the position of its professors, and is therefore worthy of the active support and sympathy of the professors of music residing in Glasgow and its vicinity." The resolution was unanimously carried, and towards the end of the meeting twenty-five gentlemen signified their desire to join the Society. In the evening the deputation was entertained to dinner by the members of the Committee of the Glasgow Society of Musicians.

MUSIC IN LIVERPOOL.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Although the opening of the regular winter season is so near at hand, only a limited amount of definite information as to the doings of local societies has been forthcoming up to the period of writing. The resident members of the Philharmonic Society are at work with Mr. Branscombe as chorus-master, the first compositions laid under contribution being Dr. Hubert Parry's "Blest Pair of Sirens" and Rubinstein's "Tower of Babel." The Post Office Choral Society, under Mr. W. I. Argent, has commenced the rehearsal of MacCunn's "Bonny Kilmeny" and some miscellaneous choruses. The Liscard Society, under the same Conductor, is practising Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise" and Gounod's "St. Cecilia" Mass. The Rock Ferry Musical Society, of which Mr. W. R. Pemberton is the chief, purpose giving Schumann's "Pilgrimage of the Rose" and Mendelssohn's "Elijah," with orchestra, the latter embracing a new departure, dating only from last season. The Liverpool Musical Society has adopted Mr. D. O. Parry as Conductor, and the same gentleman retains the bâton of the Birkenhead Cambrian Choral Society, the work to be first given by the one being Handel's "Judas" and by the other Mendelssohn's "Elijah."

From farther afield the news comes that at Runcorn Handel's "Samson" is being taken in hand by the Musical Society, under Mr. Crossley; and by a strange, and it must be admitted an unfortunate, coincidence, this Oratorio is also to be rehearsed by the Tonic Sol-fa Choir of the same town. At Warrington the old-established Musical Society is at once to prepare the same work, and at Southport the local Philharmonic Society propose giving Dr. Hubert Parry's "L'Allegro," Sullivan's "Te Deum," Handel's "Messiah" and "Jephtha." At the last-named town Messrs. Bartle and Hudson announce a series of four Concerts, at two of which a large orchestra will assist.

The Liverpool Orchestral Society, under Mr. Rodewald, is again to the front with an important programme, and the Societa Armonica, with Mr. W. Cafferata as Conductor, is contemplating a Jubilee commemoration. The orchestra of the Sunday Society is to be heard at seven of the coming ten performances in St. George's Hall undertaken by this Association, and on the alternate Sunday afternoons Organ Recitals will be given by Mr. Best or an approved deputy during the winter.

Messrs. Harrison, of Birmingham, intend to resume the Concerts they inaugurated last season, and announce four of these, with a large array of famous vocal and instrumental soloists. The most important departure in a kindred direction is a series, comprising the same number of performances, of Orchestral Concerts, directed by Mr. E. Goossens, with a band of seventy players. In view of the acknowledged failure of the Hallé Concerts here, through the unaccountable apathy of a section of the public, the outcome of this new and deserving enterprise will be looked forward to with interest.

The action of the City Corporation, in making a grant to the Music School out of the funds at the disposal of the public for technical education, has been followed to some extent by the local board of the important adjoining township of Garston, where singing classes are being established and paid for out of a similar grant.

A brief series of performances by Sir Augustus Harris's Italian Opera Company commenced at the Royal Court Theatre on the 25th ult., too late for present notice. The orchestra was announced to comprise over fifty players, and the whole company is a strong one. It is some years since we were so favoured in Liverpool.

MUSIC IN MANCHESTER.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The season now commencing promises to be an unusually active one. It is, indeed, true that fewer announcements than ordinary have as yet been made with regard to Saturday evening rivalries; but if this merely means that our musical attractions will be less hurtfully concentrated, and that some provision will be made for other nights, the avoidance of the keen competition of the last few winters will be very wise. Such a change has repeatedly been advocated, and it is difficult to understand the object of crowding so many performances, appealing to one class of amateurs, into one night, and leaving bare of like entertainment all the rest of the week. Resolute perseverance in an attempt to establish, upon a firm basis, good and cheap Concerts in the earlier part of each week would certainly succeed.

Sir Charles Hallé's prospectus, of course, claims first attention; and like the promises of other Concert-givers, it shows a sense of the necessity for moving on. The solo engagements will bring down our established favourites—Lady Hallé, Messrs. Joachim, Sarasate, Hess, Siloti, F. Dawson, and Borwick; Misses Palliser, Landi, Anna Williams, and Madame Albani; and at the first Concert (November 2) Miss Emma Juch will doubtless vindicate her claim to so honourable a position. More important, however, is it that just two, only two, British works are to be submitted—viz., Sullivan's "Macbeth" Overture and Stanford's "Irish" Symphony. Perhaps the time may come when greater research into our national library may be deemed prudent. But a Symphony by Sgambati, some characteristic pieces by Smetana, and many lighter orchestral novelties are promised; and the choral efforts will include Beethoven's Choral Symphony and Handel's "Israel in Egypt," works which will delight both choirmaster (Mr. R. H. Wilson) and choir. The first part of Liszt's "St. Elizabeth" has repeatedly been given at the Athenæum by the finished choir over which Dr. Hiles formerly presided, and a great desire was excited to hear the complete work written in so serious and thoughtful a strain. "The Flying Dutchman" will be revived, and Rubinstein's "Tower of Babel" may possibly prove of higher calibre than the "Paradise lost" which we had some years ago.

In addition to his arduous work in connection with the Thursday Evening Choir, Mr. Wilson undertakes the direction of the Openshaw Choral Union, which is rehearsing Cowen's "Rose Maiden" and, as usual, "The Messiah" for Christmas; and a smaller association at Cheadle, which will essay "Carmen," the "Esmeralda" of Goring Thomas, and Dvorák's "Spectre's Bride."

Dr. Watson's Associations will be vigorous as heretofore. The Vocal Society will, in conjunction with many well known cantatas, bring forward several almost forgotten selections from among the masterpieces of the Italian schools of choral writing. Durante's Magnificat will be included in the first programme of the twenty-seventh session. The Stretford Society boldly undertakes the "Hymn of Praise," the Cheetham Glee and Choral Union will give Gaul's "Joan of Arc" and Mendelssohn's "Athalie," and the Athenæum Musical Society is rehearsing the last-named work, together with Bennett's "May Queen."

On Saturday evenings Mr. Barrett's gatherings at St. James's Hall and Mr. Cross's entertainments at the Young Men's Christian Association will still compete for public favour.

Outside the city, but within easy reach, Mr. Blacow's Choral Union at Pendleton (now in its twenty-third season); and, at Oldham, Mr. Clafton's Philharmonic Society for large choral works, and Vocal Society for lighter pieces, serve to keep alive a taste for good music.

In conjunction with Messrs. Hime and Addison, of this city, Messrs. Harrison announce four Star Concerts at pretty wide apart dates, with Mesdames Patti and Albani, Miss Palliser, and other attractions.

The School Board will continue the violin classes started some two years ago, under the guarantee of Dr. Hiles, and afterwards subsidised by the Technical Committee of the Corporation; and additional interest will attach to this effort to bring the orchestral instruments within the grip of poor children by the fact that the next stage in systematic instruction is now organised, and, on the 2nd inst., the new Royal Manchester College of Music, under Sir Charles Hallé's direction, will be opened, with a fairly complete staff of professors and a considerable number of pupils. The aid of the Owens College has been liberally given, and the composition classes of the University course, carried on there by Dr. Hiles, will be rendered available for the more advanced students.

Preluding the full work of the season, we are enjoying the autumn visit of the Royal Carl Rosa Company, and on the 19th ult., at the Town Hall, Mr. J. Kendrick Pyne re-opened the organ, which M. Cavaillé-Coll has materially enlarged. The instrument now contains fifty-one sounding stops, with coupling powers almost rivalling those of an electric action, and is, in all respects, extremely satisfactory, whether as regards power, balance, or varied quality of tone.

MUSIC IN NOTTINGHAM.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The concert season here has set in unusually early owing to the visit of the British Association. On the 16th ult. the Sacred Harmonic Society contributed a handsome item to the entertainment of the distinguished visitors in inviting them to a "Mendelssohn" Night in the Albert Hall. The principal singers were Madame Fanny Moody, Mr. Houghton, and Mr. Charles Manners. The programme included the 95th Psalm, "Hear my Prayer," the "Loreley" Finale, the Pianoforte Concerto in G minor, &c. The latter was very finely played by Miss Cantelo, who received quite an ovation for her performance and was well supported by the orchestra. Madame Fanny Moody and the band and chorus gave an admirable rendering of the "Loreley" Finale, and Mr. Charles Manners was recalled for his characteristic performance of "I'm a roamer." Mr. John Adcock conducted and must be commended for his most important share in the success of the evening.

At the Conversazione given by the Mayor in the Castle Museum, on the 14th ult., a small choir of select voices from the Philharmonic Choir sang part-songs in the Textile Gallery, under the direction of Mr. F. Marshall-Ward. In balance, tone, and finish the combination was unusually good, and their singing evoked unmistakable admiration from the visitors present.

Mr. F. Marshall-Ward has been appointed Conductor of the Mansfield Harmonic Society, which will commence rehearsals in October with Spohr's "Last Judgment."

Mr. William Allen announces important engagements for his coming series of Classical Concerts, in which chamber music for wind instruments will predominate, Beethoven's Septet and Quintet being the chief pieces. Herr Ellenberger continues his Chamber Concerts, which are now well fixed in public favour, owing to the judgment and care displayed in the performance and selection of music. The coming season will indeed be a busy one, and choral music will be again increasingly before our public.

MUSIC IN SHEFFIELD AND DISTRICT.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The coming season promises to be an exceedingly busy one. In addition to an exceptionally large number of Ballad and Orchestral Concerts, the numerous local Choral and Instrumental Societies are putting forward important programmes, and it is to be hoped that the plethora of good things will not, in the present state of trade, result in any serious financial losses.

The Amateur Musical Society have re-commenced rehearsals, under Mr. Schollhammer, the work in preparation being "Elijah." For the second Concert the Committee will, as on previous occasions, select a successful Festival novelty.

The Musical Union (Mr. H. Coward, Conductor) is rehearsing Stainer's "St. Mary Magdalen" for the first Concert. At Christmas "The Messiah" will be given, and in the early spring Mr. H. Coward's Oxford "Exercise," a short Oratorio, entitled "The King's Error," will be performed for the first time. At an informal social Concert Mr. Coward's new Cantata "The Fairy Mirror" will also be produced by this excellent Society.

The Choral Union (Mr. S. Suckley, Conductor) opens the season with a Concert performance of Wallace's Opera "Maritana," to be followed by "The Messiah" and Haydn's "Seasons."

The St. Cecilia Musical Society (Mr. William Brown, Conductor) announces an attractive list of works, among them being "Cavalleria Rusticana" (Concert performance), "The Messiah," "Judas Maccabæus," and "St. Paul." The enterprise of Mr. Brown introduced "The Redemption" and the "Rose of Sharon" to Sheffield, and possibly in a less busy season he may be disposed to essay a repetition of one of these works.

The Upperthorpe Musical Society announces "St. Paul," under Mr. J. Beaumont. The Pitsmoor Musical Society (Mr. J. W. Renshaw, Conductor) is rehearsing Barnett's "Ancient Mariner."

Among other district and suburban societies which have already re-commenced the season's rehearsals are the Ranmoor Vocal and Brincliffe Musical Societies.

The Sheffield Amateur Instrumental Society (Mr. H. Coward, Conductor) has issued a list of works to be performed, among them being "Lenore" Symphony (Raff), Symphony (Hermann Goetz), and works by Edward German and other English composers. Messrs. Harrison, of Birmingham, have announced a series of four Ballad Concerts, at the first of which Madame Patti will sing. When to these are added Mr. Charles Harvey's Subscription Concerts (a series of five Orchestral Concerts), visits by Mr. Sarasate, Dr. Joachim, and Sir Charles Hallé, it will be seen that the season bids fair to be eventful and interesting.

The Barnsley St. Cecilia Society (Mr. Alfred Benton, of Leeds, Conductor) announces "Elijah" to be given in December. For the second Concert the work proposed is Dvorák's "Spectre's Bride."

MUSIC IN WILTS AND HANTS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

In this district signs of musical activity are already perceptible, and the various choral and orchestral societies are making preparations for the forthcoming season.

The report of the Sarum Choral Society shows that good progress has been made during the past year, and the future, in spite of the necessity for economy, appears to be bright and hopeful. The members, with Mr. C. F. South as Conductor, re-assemble for practice this month, and the first Concert will take place near Christmas.

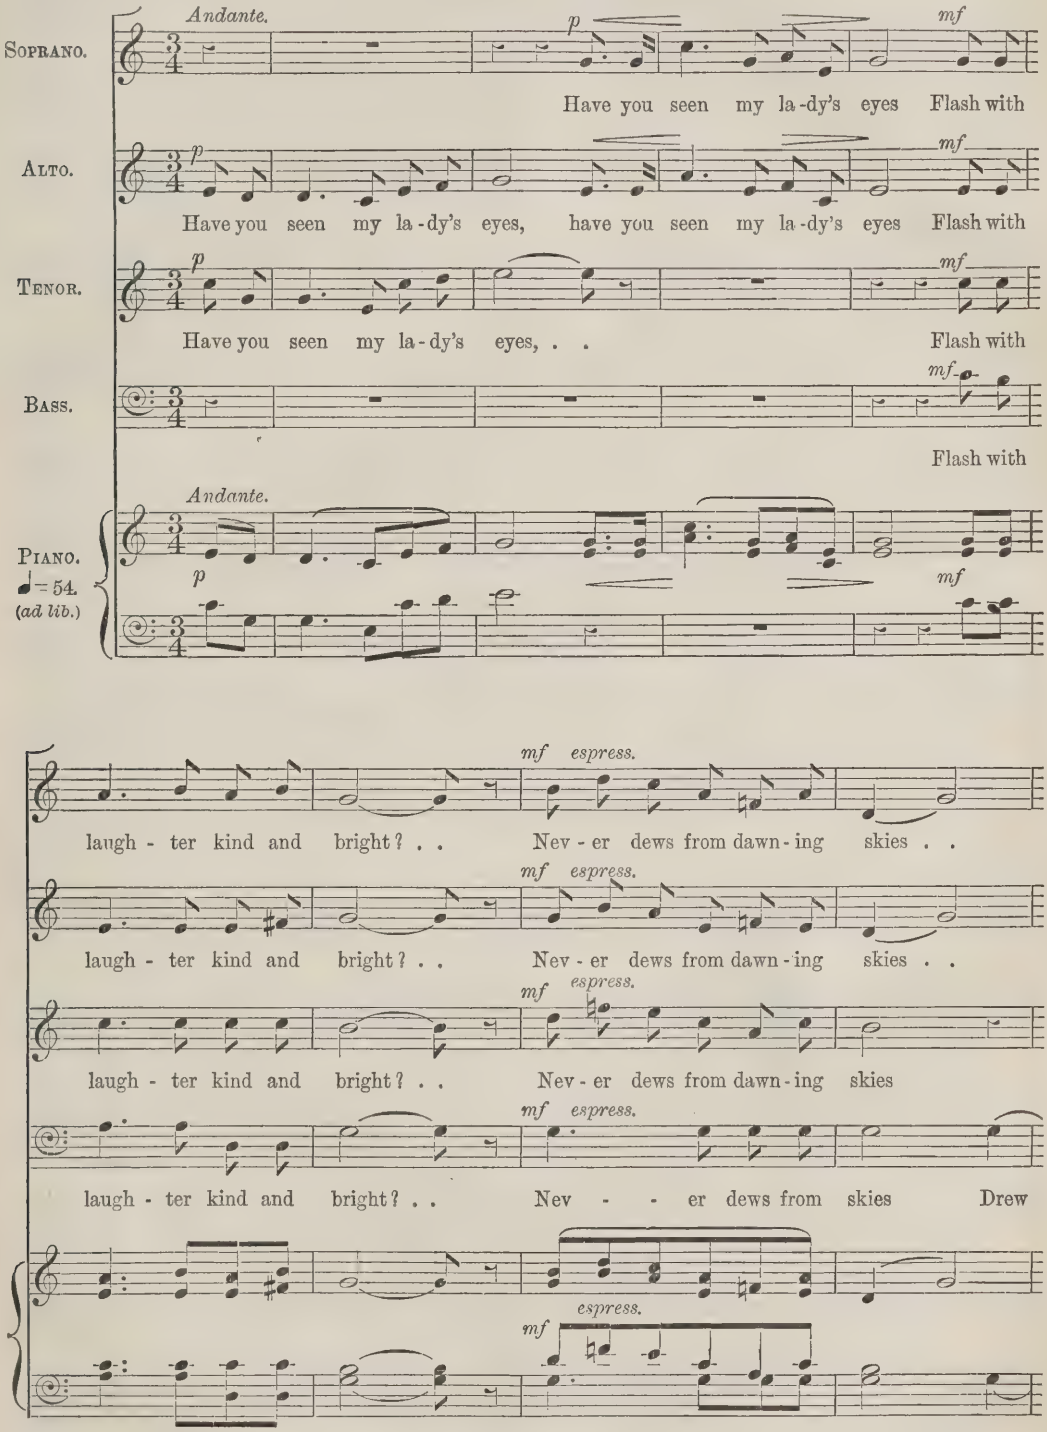
At Westbury the Philharmonic Society, under the conductorship of Mr. Alfred Foley, has commenced operations, and will give a Concert on November 28. The works to be performed include Sir G. A. Macfarren's "May Day," the first movement of Mozart's G minor Symphony, Schubert's Ballet Music in "Rosamunde," Mendelssohn's "War March of the Priests," and the Intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana."

A Lover's Counsel.

A FOUR-PART SONG.

Words by F. Wyville Home. Composed by Frederic H. Cowen.

London: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO., 1, Berners Street (W.), and 80 & 81, Queen Street (E.C.); also in New York.



Andante.
p
mf
Soprano.
Have you seen my la-dy's eyes Flash with Alto.
Have you seen my la-dy's eyes, have you seen my la-dy's eyes Flash with Tenor.
Have you seen my la-dy's eyes, . . Flash with Bass.
Flash with Andante.
Piano.
♩= 54.
(ad lib.)
mf espress.
laugh-ter kind and bright? . . Nev-er dews from dawn-ing skies . .
laugh-ter kind and bright? . . Nev-er dews from dawn-ing skies . .
laugh-ter kind and bright? . . Nev-er dews from dawn-ing skies laugh-ter kind and bright? . . Nev - - er dews from skies Drew espress.

This Part-Song may also be had for Male Voices (T.T.B.B.), No. 252, The Orpheus, price 3*d*.

Copyright, 1893, by Novello, Ewer and Co.

Drew so fair and fine a light. . . Should you see them you were lost; . .
Drew so fair and fine a light. . . .
Drew so fair and fine a light. Should you see . . them you were lost; . .
. . so fine a light. Should you see . . them you were lost; . .
Shun them, shun them, count the cost. . . .
Shun them, shun them, count the cost. If . . she do not smile,
Shun them, shun them, count the cost. If she do not
Shun them, shun them, count the cost. If . . she do not smile,
If she do not smile on you, . . Look not on her, smile . . on you, if she do not smile on you, . . Look not on her, smile on you, if she do not smile on you, . . Look not on her, smile . . on you, if she do not smile on you, Look not,
cres.
mf poco rall.
espress.
dim.

look not on her, lest you rue. Have you look not on her, lest you rue. Have you seen my la - dy dream, have you look not on her, lest you rue. Have you seen my la - dy dream, . .
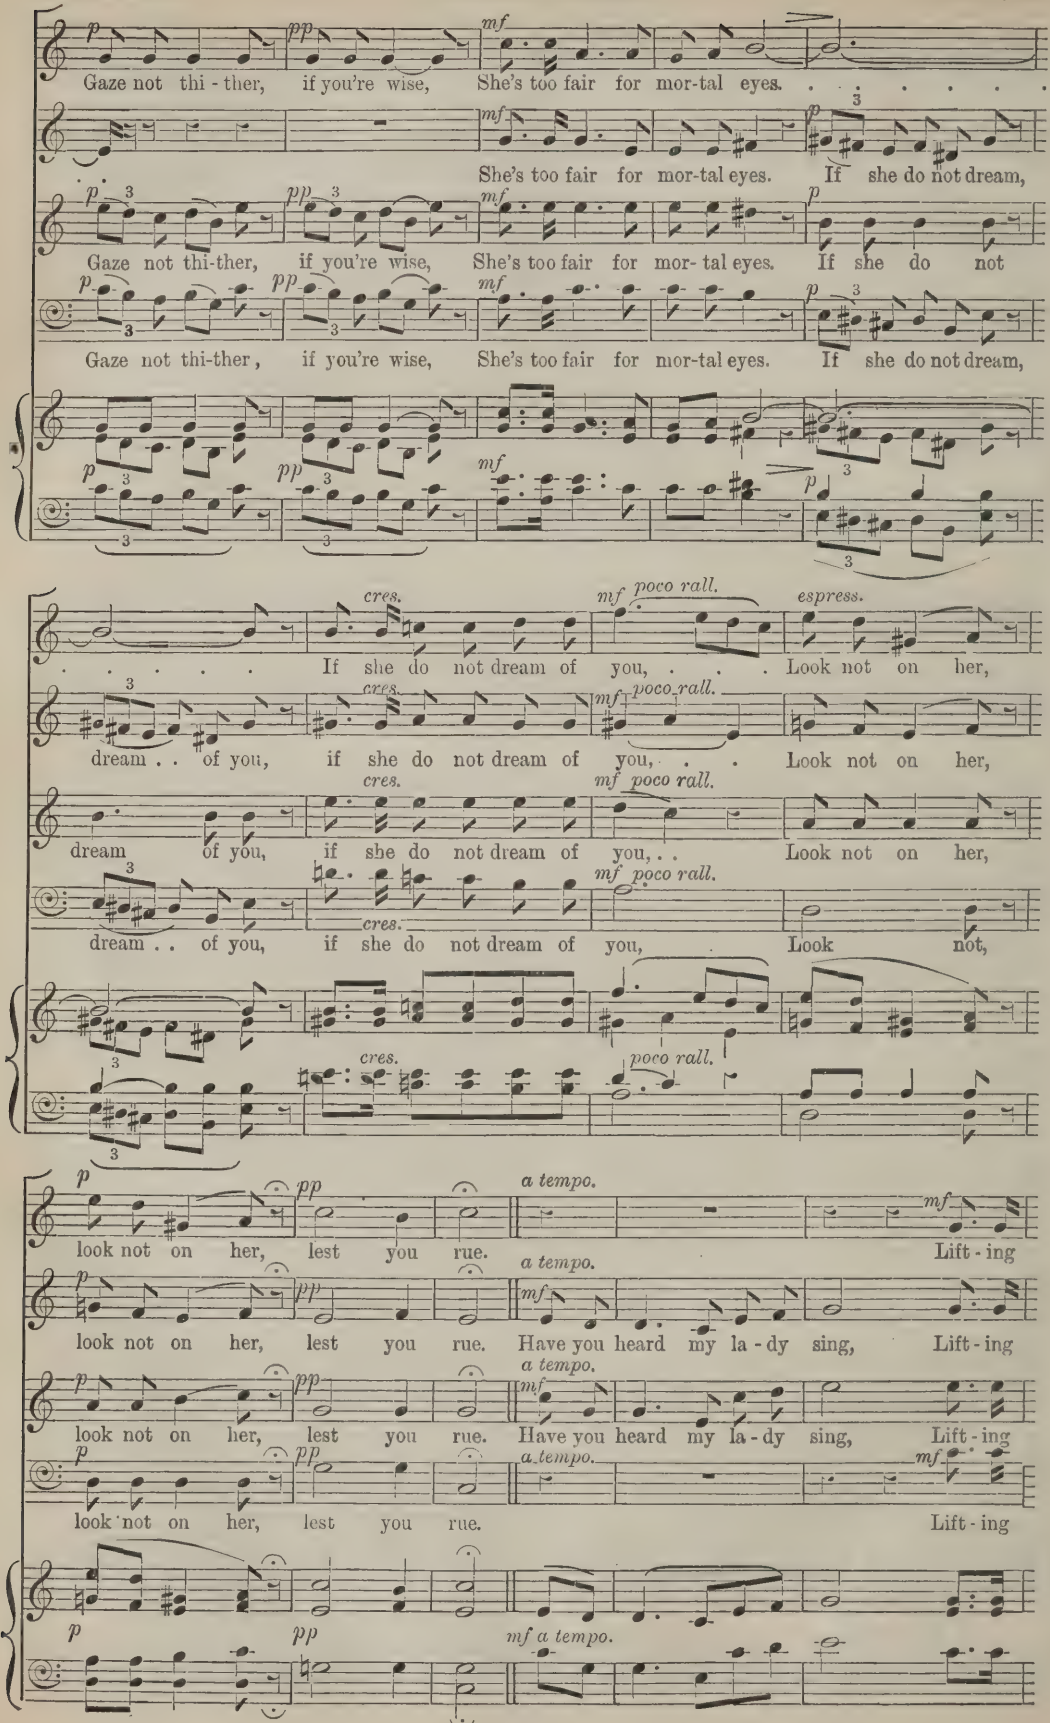
look not on her, lest you rue.
seen my la - dy dream In an hour of soft re - pose? . .
seen my la - dy dream In an hour of soft re - pose? . .
In an hour of soft re - pose? . .
In an hour of soft re - pose? . .
Like shut li - lies of the stream Are her eye - lids when they close.
Like shut li - lies of the stream Are her eye - lids when they close. . . .
Like shut li - lies of the stream Are her eye - lids when they close.
Like li - lies of the stream Are . . her eye - lids when they close.



Gaze not thi-ther, if you're wise, She's too fair for mor-tal eyes.
She's too fair for mor-tal eyes. If she do not dream,
Gaze not thi-ther, if you're wise, She's too fair for mor- tal eyes. If she do not Gaze not thi-ther, if you're wise, She's too fair for mor-tal eyes. If she do not dream,
If she do not dream of you, Look not on her, dream of you, if she do not dream of you, Look not on her,
dream of you, if she do not dream of you, Look not on her, dream of you, if she do not dream of you, Look not, look not on her, lest you rue. Lift-ing look not on her, lest you rue. Have you heard my la-dy sing, Lift-ing look not on her, lest you rue. Have you heard my la-dy sing, Lift-ing look not on her, lest you rue. Lift-ing

mf espress.
up her pret - ty throat? Nev - er wood- land bird of Spring, . .
mf
up her pret - ty throat? . . Nev - er wood- land bird of Spring,
mf up her pret - ty throat? . . Nev - - er bird of Spring, Shook
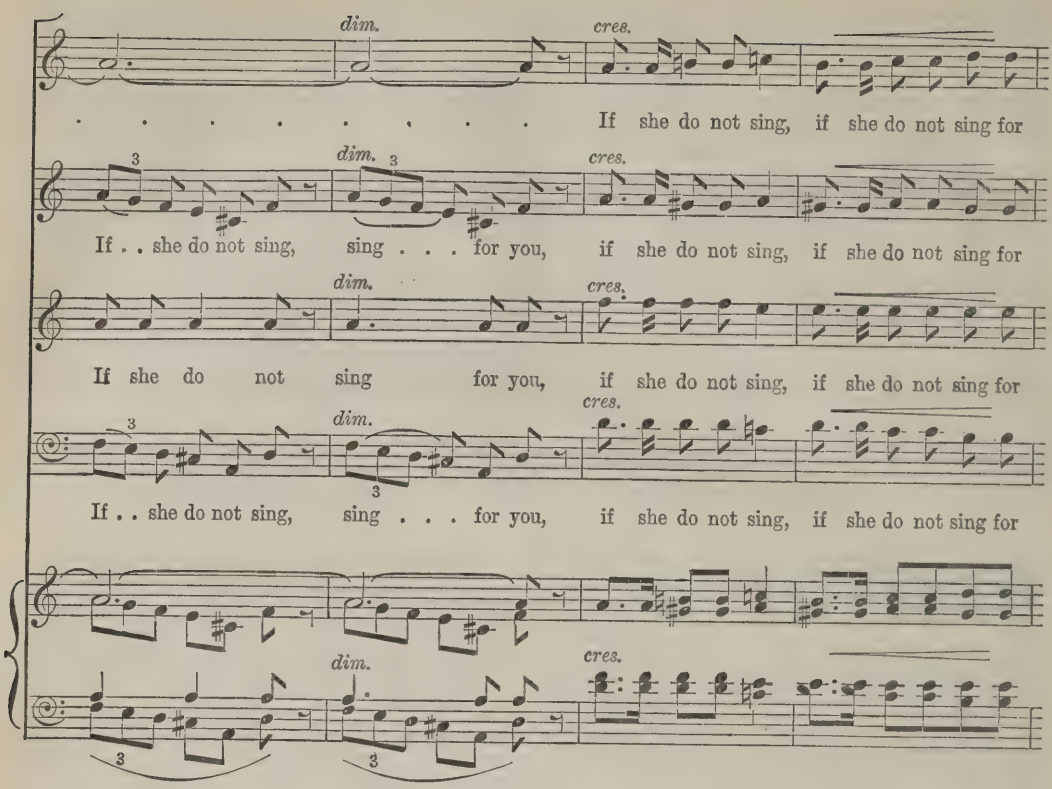
mf up her pret - ty throat? . . Nev - - er bird of Spring, Shook
p
Shook night's heart with such a note, . . . with such a note.
p
Shook night's heart with such a note, . . . with such a note.
p
. . night with such a note, with . . such a note.
p p
. . night with such a note, such a note. Come not near; . .
p
dim.
Come not near; . . 'Tis too sweet for mor - tal ear. . . .
p dim.
List not to . . her, come not near; . . 'Tis too sweet for mor - tal ear. . .
p dim.
List not to . . her, come not near; . . 'Tis too sweet for mor - tal ear. . .
dim.
. . . . . 'Tis too sweet for mor - tal ear. . .
p dim.



dim.
cres.
. . . . . If she do not sing, if she do not sing for
If . . she do not sing, sing . . . for you, if she do not sing, if she do not sing for
If she do not sing for you, if she do not sing, if she do not sing for
If . . she do not sing, sing . . . for you, if she do not sing, if she do not sing for espress.

rall. al fine.
f
poco dim.
you, . . . Do not heark - en, do not heark - en, lest you rue.
you, . . . Do not heark - en, do not heark - en, lest you rue.
you, . . Do not heark - en, do not heark - en, lest you rue.
you, Do not heark - en, do not heark - en, lest you rue.
f rall. al fine.
poco dim.
f

Also published in Novello's Tonic Sol-fa Series, No. 815, price 1*d*.

The Test Valley Musical Society, of which the Rev. E. H. Moberly is Conductor, has decided to give Concerts at Winchester and Portsmouth in January next. The vocal portions of the programme will consist of songs and madrigals, but the instrumental selections will include several works of some importance, among which may be mentioned "Serenade," Op. 9 (Fuchs); Ballade in A minor, Op. 1 (Greef); Minuet (Schubert); Tema and Variations, from Suite for strings, Op. 35 (Alexandre Glazounow).

Mr. Moberly's orchestra of ladies, which, it was expected, would appear again this side of Christmas, will, in all probability, not do so until next year, when they will give a Concert in London, at St. James's Hall. The programme will include two novelties—Serenade for string orchestra by Julius Klengel and Serenade (Op. 44) by Ferdinand Thierot, besides Handel's Concerto Grosso, No. 7.

Dr. Lemare will resume his Oratorio Concerts at Bournemouth later on in the season. A suitable room for these Concerts has yet to be provided, and it is a matter for regret that the stage of the Pavilion in the Winter Gardens is not sufficiently large to accommodate Dr. Lemare's forces.

The Southampton Philharmonic Society will shortly resume work, under the direction of Mr. H. M. Pike; but up to the time of writing no definite programme has been arranged.

MUSIC IN AMERICA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

New York, September 11, 1893.

We are now in the intermediate time between the summer Concert and the oratorio, opera, and orchestral Concerts of the fashionable period, hence there is little of musical interest to chronicle except prospectively. A tour among the New York Conductors revealed the fact that plans are still in nubibus, many having not yet returned from their summer outing.

The total collapse of the Bureau of Music in Chicago, as noted before, has led to serious disappointments, and will doubtless be followed by grave complications, of a more or less unpleasant character. The orchestra, which for a time continued a hopeless experiment under Mr. Max Bendix, has finally dissolved, while the artists and chorus are maintaining tentative relations with the authorities rom which nothing of artistic worth can result.

The one feature of special interest is the forthcoming Worcester Festival, on the 25th to the 29th inst., which is the annual feast of good things musical for a large part of New England. The artists include Madame Nordica, Miss Carl Alves, Mr. Reiger, Dr. Carl E. Dufft, De Pachmann, and Henri Marteau, with others of equal merit. The large forces are the usual chorus of 500 voices and an orchestra selected from the Boston Symphony, the whole under the direction of Mr. Carl Zerrahn, who for many years has been at the head of this enterprise. For the present season he has the efficient aid of Mr. Franz Kneisel. Among other attractions are offered Smart's "Bride of Dunkerron," Schubert's "Miriam's Song," Saint-Saëns's "Samson et Dalila," and parts of "Judas Maccabæus." These, with symphony and solo numbers, constitute a programme of more than ordinary interest, and will doubtless result in a large attendance, despite the financial troubles from which we are just beginning to emerge.

The season promises well in respect of the visits of virtuosi of many sorts and many grades of excellence. Of course, in the forefront of probable success stands Mr. Henri Marteau, the young violinist, who has leaped into fame by legitimate means and genuine artistic worth. Vladimir de Pachmann is with us once again under the Chickering auspices, and will doubtless, as heretofore, delight us with his playing.

Another change in respect of Chicago music is to be noted. The Directors of the Italian Opera have decided, for reasons which seem to them "good and sufficient," to postpone the opening of the season there, and to begin their tour in New York City—practically to inaugurate the Metropolitan Opera House, renewed and improved. Many changes have been made in the matter of seating, decorations, &c., so that artistically, and especially in the matter of acoustics, it is a vast improvement upon its ill-omened predecessor. With the De Reszkes, Lassalle, Madame Nordica, Madame Calvé, Madame Melba, and a company in every way correspondent, the season will doubtless be one of great benefit musically; the directors, however, are very naturally not so sure of the financial side, and have wisely resolved to wait until matters are more settled, and then, as is fit, open in New York.

The arrival of M. Alex. Guilmant in Chicago gave a dignity and importance to the Organ Recitals in Festival Hall. Unfortunately his stay was very limited and his Recitals few in number. Festival Hall was fairly well filled and the audience mildly enthusiastic. It has been arranged that M. Guilmant shall give one or more Recitals in a representative hall or church in each of the great cities. Here in New York he is to give one Recital at the Old South Church, where Dr. Gerril Smith presides; and Mr. William C. Carl, himself a former pupil of Guilmant, is making loyal efforts to secure another at the United Presbyterian, it is to be hoped successfully.

The successful series of Concerts given annually by the Hann family, at Brixton Hall, have now become a regular institution, and the eighth season will commence on Monday, the 30th inst., the other dates being November 20 and December 11. It is intended to perform the following works during the season: Quartet, E flat (Op. 38), Rheinberger; Quartet, E flat (Op. 87), Dvorák; Trio in F, B. Godard; Sonata for pianoforte and violin, in D minor, Schumann; Sonata for pianoforte and violoncello, in D major, Mendelssohn; Sonata for pianoforte (Op. 81A), Beethoven; Quartet in D minor (Op. 76), Haydn; Quartet in A minor (Op. 41), Schumann; Quartet in A major (Op. 18), Beethoven.

Mr. Hermann Smith, who for many years past has devoted much time and study to the practical side of musical acoustics, is about to publish a short treatise on "The art of tuning the Pianoforte." Judging by the advance sheets of the index forwarded us, the professional and amateur tuner will find in the pages of this work all the knowledge that is necessary to make the household instrument as harmonious as its nature will permit; save the knowledge alone derivable from experience, which we would advise the amateur to gain from the school room, or someone else's pianoforte.

For the twentieth annual Festival of the London Church Choir Association, which is to take place at St. Paul's Cathedral on Thursday, November 16 next, an unusually attractive Service-book has been prepared, nearly everything having been composed specially for the occasion. The Magnificat and Nunc dimittis is by Dr. Creser, the anthem by Dr. G. M. Garrett, and the Psalm-chants by Dr. Keeton. The service opens with a Processional Hymn-tune by Mr. C. E. Miller, followed by one composed by Dr. Martin, the Conductor of the Festival.

Musical competitions will be held on December 2 and 18 at the Bristol Industrial and Fine Art Exhibition. On the first date there will be brass band contests, senior and junior, open to all amateur bands; and solo pianoforte competitions, senior and junior, likewise open to amateurs. On the 18th there will be competitions for female choirs, male choirs, and mixed choirs. Prizes value over £250 will be given altogether, and entries and entrance fees are to be sent to Mr. H. J. Spear, the Corresponding Secretary, not later than the 23rd inst.

Mr. Frederick W. Davis, the Conductor of the Broadwood Band, has quite recovered from his recent severe illness. During his enforced absence his duties were most satisfactorily discharged by Mr. Charles Appleford, who has sent in to the committee of management a very encouraging report of the abilities and progress of the players entrusted for the time being to his tuition.

Mr. E. H. Thorne gave an interesting Organ Recital on the 15th ult., at St. Anne's Church, Soho. The programme included two Preludes and Fugues by Bach, Handel's Concerto in B flat, a Toccata and Fugue in C minor and an Allegretto in F sharp minor by the recitalist, and an Interludium in D by Mr. Algernon Ashton. Miss Ada Scrivener was the vocalist.

Mr. Robert Grice was presented by the Gentlemen of St. Paul's Cathedral Choir, on the 24th ult., with a handsome black marble dining-room clock on his retirement from the Choir at Michaelmas. The presentation was made by Mr. R. de Lacy (in the unavoidable absence through illness of the Senior Vicar-Choral, Mr. Fred. Walker).

The Sunday Organ Recitals at the People's Palace were resumed on the 3rd ult., by Mr. B. Jackson. The programme included Mendelssohn's Fourth Sonata, Bach's Prelude and Fugue in D major, and other works by Salomè, Guilmant, Saint-Saëns, Smart, Sullivan, Klein, Grison, and Handel.

We regret that by an oversight in the article on Welsh Choral Singing in our last issue we stated that Dr. Mackenzie was the first English composer who had been created a Welsh Bard. We learn that there are others who claim to have been admitted to that ancient order.

"Peterkin," a comic opera in three acts, written by Mr. L. W. Ladislaw, and composed by Signor L. Camerana, was produced, on the 4th ult., at the Royalty Theatre. A weak libretto, commonplace music, and an inexperienced company resulted in the work being speedily withdrawn.

The Emperor of Germany has been pleased to accept copies of "The Queen's March Past," by Mr. Algernon Rose.

REVIEWS.

The Art of Chanting: History, Principles, Practice. John Heywood. [Clowes and Son.]

We have here a very thoughtful treatise from the pen of a practical musician who combines knowledge with zeal. Before entering on the main question which has given rise to this brochure, we must point out that the author has unwittingly wronged Marbecke. He quotes two passages thus:—

But we should be glad to hear where all the accents in the above quotation are to be found. Quite lately we have had two original copies of Marbecke in our hands and we cannot recall any such marks; nor are they in the Pickering or Rimbault reprints. A most casual glance at Marbecke's Quicunque vult would have shown Mr. Heywood that Marbecke's version of the Fourth Tone was not the modern use, which is made to end in triple measure—but the version used by Glareanus, in which, almost without exception, the first note of the above is non-accented and the second note strongly accented, thus—

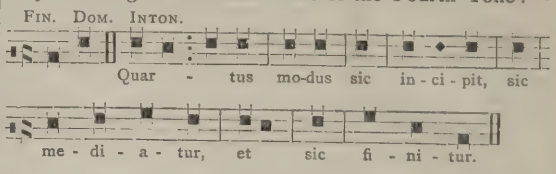
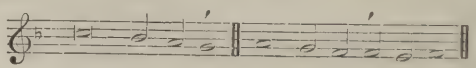
Viewed from this point Marbecke cannot certainly be charged with giving "wildly eccentric settings." Has Mr. Heywood forgotten his mnemonic of the Fourth Tone?—



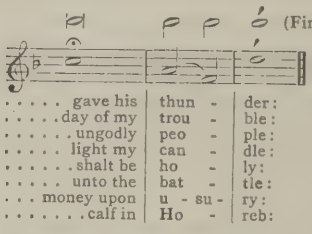
There is certainly nothing in this to justify our author in supplementing Marbecke with accents placed where Marbecke never dreamed of them.

But now let us go at once to the true pith of our author's book. It is an effort to prove that the true form of an Anglican Chant is this—

Let us turn a modern Chant into this form and try the effect—



Of course it follows that the words should be pointed to match this form. We open the "Anglican Psalter" in which Mr. Heywood has, we suppose, carried out his principles and we find—

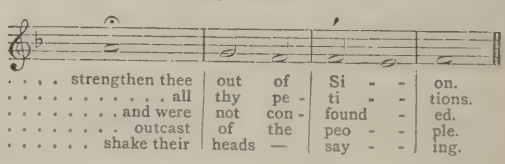


(First half of Chant.)
&c.
. . . . . gave his | thun - | der:
. . . . . day of my | trou - | ble:
. . . . . ungodly | peo - | ple:
. . . . . light my | can - | dle:
. . . . . shalt be | ho - | ly:
. . . . . unto the | bat - | tle:
. . . money upon | u - su - | ry:
. . . . . calf in | Ho - | reb:

We cannot see why these unimportant final syllables should be placed in a position which Mr. Heywood himself considers strongly accented. The theory may be delightful, but the practice approaches the comic.

Now let us see the effect of Mr. Heywood's principles when applied to the second portion of a chant—

Thus affecting an ordinary chant—



Before leaving the question of pointing, we ought to allude to the oft-made remark, that a pointing is good in proportion as it approaches good reading. There is some truth in this, but if pushed too far it leads to the most disastrous results. But, on the other hand, setting aside such exceptions and difficulties as the very short verses in the Te Deum and elsewhere, it may be safely urged that any pointing which wilfully upsets the complicated unwritten laws of good reading cannot be considered the best of its kind. Mr. Heywood writes: "The Lord is King for ever and | e — | -ver." In this example the "ever" and "| e — | -ver" are two distinct statements of the same thing; both cannot be right; but the ordinary Cathedral pointing is right: "The Lord is King for | ever and | ever."

Then, again, did the first syllable of the word "doings" ever get drawled out thus?—"They are corrupt and become abominable in their | do — | -ings." The word "abominable" in the above quotation being a portion of the recitation will, of course, receive its customary pronunciation; but a few verses later Mr. Heywood says: "They are all gone out of the way, they are altogether become abomi- | na — | -ble ||." Here again are two distinct treatments of the same word. Of course our author would suggest that bars containing such unimportant syllables should not be sung in strict time; that rigidity of rhythm is the bane of Anglican chants no one can gainsay, but granted any amount of licence and elasticity, and train a choir (if you can) to tread gently on all the natural positions of musical stress, yet, after all, we maintain that this system is neither satisfactory in music nor reading.

Examples could, of course, be multiplied to any extent, for be it said, to our author's credit, he is remarkably consistent. He is, in fact, far more consistent than some of his followers—Baker and Monk, for instance, who in the "Ancient and Modern Psalter" write: "Praise him upon the well | tu - ned | cymbals: praise him upon the | loud — | cym — | -bals."

Now, if in the above the words "well-tuned cymbals" are recited as in good reading, why should the other class of instruments suddenly become | lou-houd | cy-him- | -bals? Heaven only knows!

We are fully aware that this system of pointing has a large number of adherents, and we warmly recommend them to use the Anglican Psalter forthwith. But we do not like it, and we think we can give good reasons for our likes and dislikes in this matter. The fact is, the strong accent of an Anglican chant is on the final bar of both clauses, and not on the first note of the last bar but one. The cause of this is easily traced and quite unmistakable. As soon as composers began to use a 4 to 3, or the more modern $\frac{6}{4}\,\frac{5}{3}$ immediately before the final chord, the strong accent was necessarily thrown on to the final chord. Every school child knows that in this—an accent on the last chord is inevitable. Also that the following is not so natural—

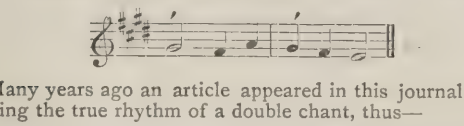
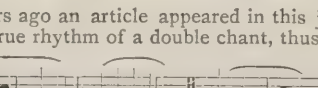
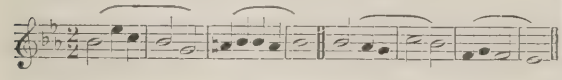
Mr. Heywood has, we think, proved historically that the accent ought, perhaps, to have developed at the penultimate bar, but the naughty chant has chosen to evolute otherwise, and we must face the fact. The rhythm of Barnby's chant is—



No arguments, no theory, can succeed in making it end—



Many years ago an article appeared in this journal describing the true rhythm of a double chant, thus—



The strongest argument urged against it was that the last note of the first half is never held so long in actual practice, but many approved of it, both amongst musicians and clergy. We entirely sympathise with our author in his attack on the ultra-development of the Cathedral system of pointing, by which a large number of important words were ousted from the Recitation in order that they might have the benefit of the succeeding musical phrase; but surely this style of pointing is nearly obsolete, and certainly is not likely to be resuscitated. Mr. Heywood is rather severe, too, on the careless and unintelligent manner in which the Psalms are sung; but here again we take a more optimistic view; throughout the whole country the Psalms are far better treated than they used to be; we have a much more plentiful supply of well-trained, zealous choirmasters, and our clergy day by day are more thoroughly realising the true position of music in worship.

In conclusion, we can only compliment Mr. Heywood on the learning he displays and on the ingenuity of his special pleading. As our Anglican chant grew out of a particular form of the Latin chant, it certainly ought to have had a penultimate stress, as we have already admitted; and it is without doubt rather startling to find how rapidly the modern form of cadence destroyed the promised penultimate stress. But it is absurd to point our Psalms to suit a penultimate accent because the Anglican chant ought to have "developed a tail" of this form. We know that some persons consider the whole thing a matter of taste, not to be argued about. It may be so. Mr. Heywood's principles have led to a system of pointing which does not suit our particular taste.

Concerto en Fa ♯. Pour Piano et Orchestre. Par Sigismond Stojowski. Op. 3.

[Stanley Lucas, Weber and Co.]

A glance at the pages shows at once that the music is of the "higher development"; but then the composer is a virtuoso, and, moreover, the work is dedicated to Antoine Rubinstein. Difficulties written for mere show, for the sake of astonishing the groundlings, must be condemned; but it should not be forgotten that players having perfect command of the keyboard cannot be expected to write as ordinary folk. The only question is, how far such difficulties are a means to an end? Of the Concerto under notice it is impossible to form a definite opinion, inasmuch as the orchestra is only represented by a second pianoforte part. The work opens with a mysterious theme given out without harmony by the orchestra—(was the composer thinking of a certain slow movement of Beethoven's in one of his quartets?)—it constitutes the principal theme of the movement, and is treated with great skill and variety. The second theme, in the orthodox relative major, which is evolved from it, forms an admirable contrast. The second movement, Romanza, is in D flat—i.e., enharmonic change for C sharp. The opening cantabile theme, of Chopinesque character, has much charm; it is first given out by the orchestra. After a middle section, più mosso, of some power, a return is made, vià a short but showy Cadenza, to the opening theme, which is now presented in ornamented fashion. The closing movement is an Allegro con fuoco, full of storm and stress; except in the hands of a great pianist it would stand but a poor chance. It is to be hoped that Sigismond Stojowski will soon have an opportunity of presenting his work before an English audience.

Sonate (No. 2, G dur). Für Pianoforte und Violoncello. Von Algernon Ashton. Op. 75.

Cavatine. Für Violine. Von A. Ashton. Op. 61.

Immortellen. Drei Charakteristische Clavierstücke. Von A. Ashton. Op. 65. [N. Simrock.]

The opening movement of the Sonata for pianoforte and violoncello—an Allegro moderato in G major—is one of great, one might almost say sombre earnestness. The composer, while at work on it, must have been in serious mood. The opening theme, propounded by the violoncello, is of sad, enquiring tone; it is developed at some length, and leads to a second and characteristic theme in the orthodox dominant key. The first part closes with a quiet reminiscence of the first theme. The development section is not long; both themes are worked, and there is great variety of rhythm. The Adagio commences with a quaint and plaintive theme; the opening bars, indeed, have a Volkslied character, but the rest of the long drawn out phrase savours of art rather than nature. The theme in the relative major is of lighter character. The principal theme, on its return, is presented in new and more imposing dress. The Finale (Allegro animato) is extremely vigorous. The whole work is full of sound thought and clever workmanship; but to those who know Mr. Ashton's music these qualities will not come as a surprise. The composer's subjection to the school of Schumann and Brahms is very evident, and it probably proves a bar to the full manifestation of his individuality. The Cavatine for violin is a short effective piece, remarkable for its quiet character; in seven pages there are only four forte bars. The pianoforte pieces are short, clear in form, and interesting to the player; the third is most to our liking.

The One Shilling Classical Album. Henselt.
Tarantelle. By W. Arthur Blakeley.
[J. & J. Hopkinson.]

Pianists have much to be thankful for: they possess a musical literature of never failing interest and of extraordinary variety. Among modern composers, Chopin naturally holds an exalted place, yet, whatever the passion of pianists for the Polish composer, Henselt is not neglected. Chopin may have surpassed him in depth of feeling, but scarcely in technical skill or grace of expression. Both can be enjoyed, and it is only when directly opposed to each other that poetry is felt to be the prevailing feature of Chopin's music and pianism that of Henselt's. The Album under notice contains no less than eight pieces, among which are the lively "Repos d'Amour," the ever delightful "Si oiseau j'étais," and the sparkling "Petite Valse." Players unaccustomed to Henselt's wide arpeggio chords and melodising with both hands would have been thankful for a little more help in the way of fingering.

The Tarantelle, by W. A. Blakeley, is a spirited little piece, but Saltarelle would surely have been a better title for it. The introduction of the principal key in the F major section takes away from its freshness when the first theme returns.

Mozart's Songs. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

Some great composers of the past distinguished themselves in many branches of their art; others in only a few. In a comprehensive study of the art-work of any one composer it is possible, while pointing out the direction in which he displayed his greatest strength, to notice much that is of interest in works, relatively speaking, of inferior value. But for ordinary purposes only the highest summits are noted, and we speak of Mozart's great operas, Beethoven's immortal symphonies, and Schubert's divine songs. And for this reason, and also because musical literature is ever on the increase, it has come to pass that Mozart's songs, so full of tender pathos and delicate charm, do not receive their proper share of attention. In the album under notice we have, among other gems, "The Violet," which has justly been described as "the crown of all the songs"; the popular "To Chloe," with its smooth flowing melody (how, by the way, the cadence—p. 28, line 1—recalls Gluck!); the neat, melodious "The little Spinner," written at the close of 1787, that year so fruitful in great works; and "When evening falls," belonging also to the same year, an expressive song, which, in its delicate word-painting accompaniment, seems to prefigure Schubert.

Suite for Pianoforte. By Edward German.
[Edwin Ashdown.]

The old Gavotte form is frequently met with, but Suites are no longer written with Allemandes, Courantes, &c., and without change of key. Mr. German has, it is true, a Bourrée, but the other movements are in modern style, and, apparently, not even intended to be played in succession. The Impromptu opens with a quiet, plaintive phrase; the Cantabile on page 5 was evidently inspired by Schubert; the movement appears to us a trifle long. The Valse-Caprice is graceful; the opening on the dominant chord of minor thirteenth is curious. Of the remaining four movements, the crisp little Bourrée and the plaintive Elegy are the most attractive.

Kinderfest (Children's Frolics). By S. Jadassohn. Op. 112. [Leipzig: Carl Merseburger.]

These six "easy and instructive" duets for pianoforte are admirable little pieces. Within moderate compass, and with modest means, the composer has produced very attractive tone-pictures. They are all good, but our favourites are No. 2, "Ruhe am Bach" ("A rest by the rivulet"), and No. 3, "Ringelreihn" ("Ringa, ringa, rosie").

Original Compositions for the Organ. Nos. 183, 184, and 185. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

The Postlude in C, which forms the contents of the first of these numbers, is the composition of Mr. Edward Cutler, Q.C., an eminent Chancery barrister, one of an enthusiastic and happily increasing number of amateurs who are endeavouring to prove that music in this country is not the sole prerogative of those who practise it for professional purposes. Its style generally is broad, cheerful, and diatonic, but the chromatic close is novel and almost startling. No. 184 is a Minuet in G by Hamilton Clarke, melodious, but stately and dignified, and therefore by no means unsuitable as a church voluntary. The last of the three is a more elaborate piece, consisting of a series of variations by John E. West on the ancient Easter Hymn "O Filii et Filiæ." The writing is masterly and extremely effective without being too difficult or pretentious.

The Burlington Music Books, Nos. 26 and 28.
[Robert Cocks and Co.]

To those gifted with a fine voice, or to those who have frequent opportunities of hearing vocal music, such collections as No. 26 may not appear of great interest, but to many they are the only means of becoming acquainted with the masterpieces of sacred song. No. 26 contains twelve pieces, including Spohr's "Blest are the departed" (transposed, probably for convenience, from the key of G flat to that of G major) and Mendelssohn's "But the Lord." There is one transcription of an instrumental movement—or, rather, of the opening—the Adagio from the "Hymn of Praise." No. 28 contains songs by Silcher, Gumbert, and Abt, and a not very satisfactory excerpt from Mendelssohn's G minor Concerto.

Romance en Ré and Mélodie. For Violin. By Johannes Wolff. [Robert Cocks and Co.]

The Romance opens with a smooth, soft melody, which, after a full cadence, is followed by a broad phrase in the key of the dominant; the progression from the chord on the dominant to that on the flattened submediant may offend rigid theorists, but it is decidedly effective. After a short middle section, the principal theme is resumed. The second piece is an excellent transcription of a graceful melody by G. Pfeiffer; the pianoforte accompaniment is light and pleasing.

Six Easy Pieces. For Violin and Pianoforte. By H. Grossheim. Op. 24. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

These are very interesting little pieces. To make short and easy pieces attractive is a task of no little difficulty. The first number, "Allegretto," is bright, though not specially characteristic. But the innocent little "Melody" which follows has great charm. No. 3, "Song," is quiet and plaintive; the harmonies of the accompaniment are well selected, and the closing Coda bars with the minor chord on the dominant (the key of the piece is D minor) are quaint. No. 4, "A la Gavotte," is light and taking, though one or two of the bars of the accompaniment are somewhat out of keeping with the rest. No. 5, "Breaking up," is a lively movement; one can picture to one's self the happy, smiling faces of boys about to exchange a comfortless schoolroom for the cosy fireside at home.

Bagatelles for the Pianoforte. Op. 13. By Max Mayer.
[Novello, Ewer and Co.]

These are short pieces with titles after the manner of Schumann's Album. The influence of that composer may be traced here and there, but only in a general way. The music has both character and charm. It is impossible to notice in detail all the twelve numbers, which all contain something of interest, so we must pick out the gems. "Granny's Tale" is a bright little piece, and not lacking in humour; "Poor Cinderella" is full of quaint melancholy; and "Cuckoo" is both real and ideal.

Elégie et Rondo. For Violin. By Emile Sauret. Op. 48.
[Novello, Ewer and Co.]

The Elégie opens with a quiet, plaintive phrase in the key of E minor, which is developed at some length. The middle modulating section, though for the most part soft, is in excellent contrast. After an animato, a long drawn-out phrase leads back to the principal key and principal theme. The piece finishes pianissimo in E major. The Rondo is in the key of A minor, and the leading theme lacks neither grace nor spirit, while the whole of the movement is both clever and brilliant. It is scarcely necessary to say that the solo writing is effective, for everyone knows that M. Sauret is master of his instrument.

Five Miniatures. By S. B. Schlesinger. Op. 18. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

This is a collection of short graceful pieces. "Pleasant Dreams" is both flowing and melodious; an agreeable change comes o'er the spirit of the dreams with the short Allegretto section, which effectively breaks the undulating accompaniment to the principal theme. "Good Morning" is a cheery little piece, somewhat à la Schumann. A "Melody" is of charming simplicity. "Meditation" again recalls Schumann, but the music is most expressive. "Flirtation" is light and lively.

FOREIGN NOTES.

The Wagner cycle at Munich has been a great success, both artistically and financially. The performances have been witnessed by crowded and most enthusiastic audiences, amongst whom great numbers of Frenchmen and Italians were conspicuous, while the English and Americans were also, as a matter of course, present in their hundreds. If the performances were not in every respect equal to those at Bayreuth—none at an ordinary theatre ever can be—several, notably those of "Tristan" and "Siegfried," were nearly perfect. Frau Rosa Sucher—greatest of Isoldes—Fräulein Malten, Fräulein Ternina, Herren Vogl, Alvary, Lieban, Gura, and Scheidemantel seem to have excelled above the rest of the artists, whereas some veteran members of the Munich Opera were hardly equal to the parts entrusted to them. Next year there will be another cycle, during which all those works of the Meister are to be performed which will not be given at Bayreuth, so that visitors to Bavaria will have an opportunity of hearing the whole of the dramas, from "Die Feen" to "Parsifal"! In view of the enormous success of this year's cycle, a Munich paper suggests that the time has now come for the erection of the magnificent German National Festival Theatre which the famous architect, Gottfried Semper, designed in 1865, at the request of King Ludwig II. This, which may be regarded as the realisation of Wagner's ideal theatre (the Bayreuth Festspielhaus being only a temporary structure), was to be built on a height (the "Gasteighöhen") on the banks of the river Isar, some distance away from the town, and was to be devoted to model performances of the "Ring of the Nibelung." Unfortunately, the project had to be abandoned, whereupon the Bayreuth theatre was decided upon.

It is officially announced that the chorus and orchestra of the Munich Opera will be considerably increased, so that even more and better performances can be given in future than hitherto. Amongst the novelties for the new season will be Mascagni's "Rantzau," Brüll's "Check to the King," E. Humperdinck's "Hänsel and Gretel," Smetana's "Sold Bride," Verdi's "Falstaff," Cyrill Kistler's "Kunihild," and last, not least, the anxiously-awaited "Guntram," by that fiery young genius, Richard Strauss. This list of novelties is almost worthy of Covent Garden.

The Berlin Royal Opera will produce the first three of its novelties for the coming season on one and the same evening. They are Ignaz Brüll's "Gringoire"; a one-act opera, "Mara," by Ferdinand Hummel; and Mendelssohn's "First Walpurgis Night," which will then doubtless for the first time be performed on the stage. The splendid music of this finest of all cantatas will assuredly lose none of its effect through having to accompany and illustrate dramatic action. In any case, the experiment will be a very interesting one.

Verdi's "Falstaff" was given for the first time in German at Stuttgart, on the 10th ult., and had but a lukewarm reception. This is, perhaps, hardly to be wondered at, if we imagine to ourselves the effect of Verdi's brilliant music sung by German singers to a German translation of Boito's libretto.

The novelties for the next season of the Cologne Theatre will be Verdi's "Falstaff," Puccini's "Manon," Mascagni's "Rantzau," Umlauft's "Evanthia," Kaskel's "Hochzeitsmorgen," and Rubinstein's "Kinder der Haide." There will also be a complete Wagner cycle.

Major Max Maria von Weber, a grandson of the composer of "Der Freischütz," will shortly publish a history of that opera, for which he will use a considerable amount of hitherto unknown material.

Apropos of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the first performance of Wagner's "Meistersinger" (at Munich in 1868), Messrs. Schott, of Mayence, will shortly publish the autograph of the libretto in fac-simile. It will contain the dream song "Fern meiner Jugend gold'nen Tagen," which the master afterwards decided not to set to music.

Professor Rheinthaler has retired from the post of organist and director of the choir of Bremen Cathedral. His successor is Herr Eduard Nössler.

The Theater Unter den Linden, Berlin, opened its autumn season on August 30 with Sir Arthur Sullivan's opera "The Gondoliers," which was very successful.

Herr Generalmusikdirektor Ernst Schuch, of the Dresden Opera, celebrated, on the 9th ult., the twenty-fifth anniversary of his début as a conductor. Herr Schuch, who is one of the best conductors of the present day, has been mainly instrumental in making the Dresden Opera what it is—a model of its kind. The first work which he conducted, in 1868, at Breslau, was a musical farce having the absurd title of "1733 Thaler 22½ Silbergroschen"; for his "jubilee" performance he selected Beethoven's "Fidelio."

Eugen d'Albert has completed a new choral work entitled "Der Mensch und das Leben" ("Man and Life"). The text is by Otto Ludwig.

The Berlin Philharmonic Choir (Conductor, Herr Siegfried Ochs) will, on the 16th inst., give its third performance of E. Tinel's Oratorio "St. Franciscus," which seems to be steadily growing in the estimation of German music-lovers and critics.

Sir Arthur Sullivan's opera "The Mikado" was some time since played for the hundredth time at the Theater am Gärtnerplatz in Munich—an exceptional run for a town like Munich!

The Hamburg Stadt-Theater will, during next season, produce, inter alia, Verdi's "Falstaff," Franchetti's "Christoforo Colombo," Smetana's "Sold Bride," Smareglia's "Cornelius Schutt," Mozart's "La finta giardiniera," and "Francesca da Rimini" by Hermann Goetz.

From the prospectus issued by the "Internationale Schule für Musik" in Berlin we see that pianoforte lessons are given there on the much discussed Jankó keyboard as well as on the old one, which has so far sufficed for the interpretation of even the most difficult compositions.

Cyrill Kistler's music-drama "Kunihild" has been accepted for performance at the Augsburg and Halle Theatres. When it was lately given at the Würzburg Festspiele, a local paper denounced it in the strongest terms, because it contained what the irate scribe considered an insult to the clergy, or rather to the society of monks. At one local church the opera is said to have even been condemned from the pulpit. In spite of these capital gratis advertisements the Festspiele were an utter financial failure, the unfortunate guarantors having to pay as much as from 60 to 70 per cent. of their subscriptions to the guarantee fund.

Dr. Hans von Bülow is not yet sufficiently recovered from his illness to justify the hope that he may be able to conduct all the Concerts of the Berlin Philharmonic Society next season. In consequence Herren Felix Mottl and Hermann Levi have been engaged as conductors of the first four Concerts.

The Berlin Joachim Quartet will, in November next, give concerts in Belgium and Holland, and, at Easter next year, in Paris. Dr. Joachim and Eugen d'Albert (a decidedly strong "combination") will tour through Germany towards the end of this year.

Frau Amalie Joachim, the famous German Lieder singer, has opened a school of singing at Munich.

Eugen d'Albert's two-act opera "Der Rubin" will be definitely produced at the Carlsruhe Hof-Theater during the first week in October. Herr Felix Mottl will conduct it.

It is reported that the famous old Gewandhaus at Leipzig, in which J. A. Hiller, Mendelssohn, Schumann, Ferdinand Hiller, Gade, Rietz, Reinecke, and others have conducted countless concerts, will be turned into a commercial exhibition room, after having been for over a century devoted to music.

Professor C. Halir, of Weimar, one of the most distinguished German violinists, has just completed a Violin Concerto which he will play in public next month. He will shortly give two Concerts at Leipzig, at which he will play no less than six Concertos. Beethoven, Brahms, Paganini, Spohr, Tschaikowsky, and Lalo are the composers selected by him.

Anton Rubinstein, who has been staying in Italy tending his sick son, has just delivered the full score of his sacred opera "Christus" to his Leipzig publisher.

The Choral Society "Frohsinn," in St. Gallen, whose choir is one of the finest in Switzerland, will shortly celebrate the sixtieth anniversary of its foundation. The principal work to be performed at the Festival which will be held in connection with the event will be G. Vierling's secular Oratorio "The Rape of the Sabines."

Paul Umlauft's Prize Opera "Evanthia" was performed for the first time at the Dresden Court Theatre on August 22, and seems to have met with great success.

The Imperial Court Opera, Vienna, will, during the coming season, add the following works to its répertoire—viz., Tasca's "A santa Lucia," with Signor Stagno and Signora Bellincioni in the principal characters; Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci"; Heuberger's "Miriam," or "The May Festival"; Smetana's "The Kiss"; and Smareglia's "Cornelius Schutt." There will also be the almost inevitable Wagner Cycle, "with excellent casts," as the official announcement states—and with the usual cuts, we suppose, for Vienna does not enjoy Wagner's works in their entirety. It is stated that "a special feature will be made of Marschner's masterworks," which means no doubt that three or four of the best of this composer's fourteen operas will be given, presumably "Hans Heiling," "Der Vampir," and "Der Templer und die Jüdin." A new ballet by Baron Erlanger, bearing the charming title of "The Devil in the ladies' school," will also be given, as well as a similar work, "The five senses," by J. Hellmesberger.

A German music publisher offered a prize lately for the best male-voice quartet, and now the judges in the competition are enjoying the rare and precious privilege of wading through no less than three thousand "new and original" compositions.

A certain Herr C. Hagel, director of the Conservatoire of Music at Bamberg, has written a new "Heroic" Symphony, which was recently performed with success at the Sondershausen Loh Concerts. We suppose there is not much fear of this composition superseding another work with the same title, as has now and then been the case with operas—e.g., Gounod's "Romeo et Juliette" and "Faust," which have driven Bellini's and Spohr's operas of the same names completely out of the field.

A grand international Song Tournament will shortly take place at Düsseldorf, to which over 400 German, Belgian, and Dutch Choral Societies have been invited, many of which have already signified their acceptance of the invitation. A grand choral work, "The Triumph of Liberty," has been composed specially for the occasion by Herr Willemsen, a local celebrity, and will be produced by some of the Düsseldorf choirs in the splendid Tonhalle of the charming "Gartenstadt" on the Rhine.

The Union of North German Liedertafeln (male-voice choirs) some time ago offered a prize for the best musical setting of its motto: "Haltet Frau Musika in Ehren" The judges in the competition, Professors Kretzschmar in Leipzig, Josef Rheinberger in Munich, and Edwin Schulz in Tempelhof, selected two compositions as being worthy of the prize; but at a meeting of the choirs it was decided to refuse both, because it was argued that the music to such a motto should be short, striking, and easy, qualities which the pieces recommended by these gentlemen were considered to lack. During the meeting another simpler setting by Herr Ehrhard, of Wernigerode, was submitted. This met with general approval and was immediately accepted by all the choirs. We wonder how the judges took the snub?

Herr Arthur Nikisch, late Conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has entered upon his duties as first conductor of the Buda Pesth Royal Opera. He is preparing Smetana's "Sold Bride" for his first novelty.

Madame Essipoff-Leschetizki will shortly leave Vienna for St. Petersburg, where she has accepted a post of pianoforte teacher at the Conservatoire of Music.

The monument erected to Liszt at Oedenburg, Hungary, was unveiled on the 3rd ult., with solemn ceremony. It consists of a large bronze bust of the deceased master, and is the work of Professor Victor Tilger. A new "Liszt March," specially composed for the occasion by Count Geza Zichy, was performed during the unveiling, and speeches in German and Hungarian, a Festival Concert and Banquet were included in the programme of the day's festivities. It was at Raiding, a village near Oedenburg, that Liszt was born, and at the age of nine he gave his first public concert at Oedenburg. In later years he frequently visited the town, never without giving a concert in aid of some charity.

It is stated that Herr J. N. Fuchs, one of the Conductors at the Vienna Imperial Opera, will be appointed Principal of the Conservatoire of Music in the Kaiserstadt, in place of Herr Joseph Hellmesberger, who will retire both from this post and from that of first Conductor at the Opera. Dr. Hans Richter, at present second Conductor, will become first, and a namesake of his, Herr Pius Richter, second "Hofkapellmeister."

Señor Felipe Pedrell, the author of two operas, "The last Abencerage" and "Quasimodo," and a symphonic poem, "Los Cantos de la Montagna," has completed a new music-drama which is likely to become epoch-making in the history of Spanish music, because it is an attempt to create a truly national Spanish art-work. It is called "Los Pirineos" and deals with the legends and history of the Pyrenees. The author of the libretto is Dr. Victor Balaguer, a poet of considerable note in his own country, and, like the composer, an enthusiast in the cause of a Spanish national art. In a pamphlet, "Por nuestra musica," which Señor Pedrell published last year, he declared himself a staunch champion of Richard Wagner whose "Ring of the Nibelung" has no doubt served him as a model for his trilogy, for such, it seems, "The Pyrenees" will be. By making liberal use of ancient Moorish and Spanish melodies, of which he has made a special study, he hopes to impart to his music the necessary national colour. Whether these melodies can be successfully pressed into the service of a composer who will, in other respects, follow Wagner's methods as perfected in his third style, remains to be proved. So does the important question whether the Spaniards will take kindly to their new "National music-drama."

Moszkowski's "Boabdil" met with an enthusiastic reception at the German Theatre, Prague.

The Royal Bohemian National Theatre, Prague, gave last month a cycle of Smetana's operas. There were eight in all—viz., "The Branderburgers in Bohemia," "The Sold Bride," "Dalibor," "Libussa," "Two Widows," "The Kiss," "The Secret," and "The Devil's Wall." These performances were followed by a grand Concert of Smetana's compositions, the programme of which included the String Quartet "Aus meinem Leben," the Cantata "Das böhmische Lied," and the cycle of Symphonic poems for orchestra, "Mein Vaterland," consisting of six pieces called respectively "Vysehrad," "Vltava," "Sárka," "Aus Böhmen's Fluren und Hainen," "Tábor," and "Blanik." Little did the unfortunate, modest composer of all these works dream that after his death such honour would be paid to his genius.

The impresario of the Madrid Theatre Royal having been anxious to engage the tenor, Signor Tamagno, for his next opera season, that gentleman was asked for his terms; they were as follows: 1. 2,000 francs for travelling expenses; 2. 6,000 francs in gold for each appearance, to be paid in advance, three hours before the commencement of the performance; 3. To sing only in Verdi's "Otello," Meyerbeer's "Prophet," and Verdi's "Forza del destino," and on no account in "William Tell," because the people of Madrid know him already in that part; 4. Signor Tamagno to be received by the Queen Regent and His Majesty the young King Alfonso! He was not engaged.

More prodigies! A little girl pianist of eight, Berthe Balthasar, has been playing at several concerts at Spa, Belgium. That she created the usual "enthusiasm" goes without saying. At Berlin a boy of nine, Arthur Argiewicz, from Warsaw, has been performing such trifles as Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, Wieniawski's "Legende," and Bach's Chaconne! Prodigious!

The concerts given by Señor Sarasate in his native town of Pampeluna for the benefit of its poor realised the respectable sum of 10,000 francs.

Signora Gemma Bellincioni and her husband, Signor Roberto Stagno, have commissioned Signor Nicola Massa to write an opera, "Eros," specially for them, which they will produce at the Pagliacci Theatre, Florence.

Signor Verga, the Italian novelist on whose tale, "Cavalleria Rusticana," Mascagni's work of the same title is founded, has got over his objection to being set to music. No doubt the 200,000 lire paid to him in royalties since he won the action against Mascagni's publisher has something to do with this result. At present he is said to be engaged on three new librettos at once!

A new comic opera, "Clara di Belleville," by Signor Barbabietolo, was recently performed at Catania with great success.

Rubinstein's opera "Die Maccabäer" will be produced shortly at Milan, Rome, and Turin, under the personal direction of the great pianist.

At Trieste a new illustrated musical paper, Rivista musicale illustrata, has made its appearance.

Professor Ed. Caudella, director of the Conservatoire of Music, Jassy, Roumania, has just finished a new three-act opera. It is his sixth work of the kind, and the title is "Petro Koresho."

The visit of the Russian fleet to Toulon will be the means of making the Parisians and Frenchmen generally somewhat better acquainted with Russian music than is at present the case. At the Grand Opéra works by Glinka, Rubinstein, and Tschaikowsky will be performed, though not a complete opera of either of these masters. M. Carvalho, the director of the Opéra Comique, is pushing forward the rehearsals of César Cui's "Flibustier" with feverish activity, so as to have the work ready for performance by the time the Russian guests arrive in Paris. Finally, the Rouen Theatre is preparing Rubinstein's "Nero."

M. Véronge de la Nux, the composer of an opera, "Zaïre," which has been performed at the Paris Grand Opéra, is about to complete a trilogy entitled "Les Labdacides," the three portions of which are respectively called "Œdipe roi," "Œdipe à Colone," and "Antigone." The libretto, by the composer, is written in prose.

M. Saint-Saëns has undertaken to complete an opera, "Brunehaut," which was left in an unfinished state by the late M. Guiraud.

M. Colonne has been engaged to conduct a series of Orchestral Concerts in Russia, as well as some performances of Massenet's "Werther" and Reyer's "Sigurd."

Wagner's "Flying Dutchman," M. Saint-Saëns's "Phryné," and a comic opera, as yet unnamed, by M. Jacques Dalcroze, will be the novelties at the Geneva Theatre. The director, M. Dauphin, will also produce four new operettas.

M. Henri Maréchal's opera "Déïdamie" was produced at the Paris Grand Opéra on the 15th ult., but without any remarkable success. It appears to be a very creditable, musicianly work, but devoid of any striking features.

M. Paul Taffanel, one of the new Conductors at the Paris Grand Opéra, was sent to Munich last month to be present at the Wagner Cycle. He was instructed to pay particular attention to the performances of "Tristan," which, it seems, will be the next work of Wagner to be produced at the Opéra. Thus the "Wagner Eclipse" predicted by one of our weekly contemporaries goes merrily on! During M. Taffanel's absence things have not gone altogether smoothly at the Opéra. M. Paul Viardot, the third Conductor, having been asked to conduct the "Walküre," that young gentleman proceeded forthwith to stop the performance several times during the first act because he "could not follow the singers"! The audience naturally resented this way of interpreting Wagner, and expressed as much in unmistakable terms, whereupon it was considered wise to entrust the bâton for the remaining two acts to the experienced hands of M. Edouard Mangin, the principal chef de chant. M. Viardot's excuses are a bad ear-ache and insufficient time for rehearsals. During his convalescence M. Viardot might improve the shining hour by perusing "Wagner on Conducting."

August Enna, the composer of the successful opera "The Witch," which enjoyed the distinction of being prohibited in Russia, has completed a new three-act opera, "Cleopatra," the book of which is founded on Mr. Rider Haggard's tale. Messrs. Breitkopf and Härtel are the publishers of the new work, and from a communication which they have been sending to our German musical contemporaries it appears that a Danish publisher has forestalled them in issuing a vocal score of this same "Cleopatra," which is, however, declared to be spurious, and to have been produced without the knowledge of the composer. It is supposed to have been concocted from an early pianoforte sketch score, but how this got into the hands of the publisher in question we are left to conjecture. The sale of this spurious edition has been prohibited in Germany.

A monument to Niels W. Gade has just been completed in Copenhagen and will shortly be erected in the Church at which the deceased master was Organist for thirty-two years. Besides a portrait medallion, wreaths, and the usual biographical data, it bears a poetic inscription which, translated, reads somewhat as follows: "Out of tones he built a Jacob's ladder—from the darkness of this Earth to the realm of Light—in them his dream received life, his thoughts wings—and through them his fame resounds."

The famous "Tivoli" at Copenhagen, one of the largest places of amusement on the Continent, has just celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its foundation. It is one of the sights of the town, and has received within its vast halls all the most renowned artists who have visited the Danish capital. It was here that the composer Hans Christian Lumbye, "the Scandinavian Strauss," produced the many dances, marches, &c., which made his name known throughout the whole of Europe.

Frau Materna, the famous Wagner singer, the original Brünnhilde in "Siegfried" and "Götterdämmerung," and Kundry in "Parsifal," is going to America to sing at a number of Concerts. Her first appearance will be at the New York Philharmonic Society.

A great festive gathering took place last month at the old University town of Upsala, in Sweden, to celebrate the 300th anniversary of the great religious revolt in the sixteenth century which resulted in the establishment of the Protestant faith in Sweden. The musical arrangements included a performance of a Jubilee Cantata, for soli, chorus, and orchestra, composed for the occasion by Mr. Ivar Hedenblad, the Musical Director of the University; and also a vocal Concert, given by the Upsala Students' Chorus, one of the finest male choirs in Europe.

Mr. Christian Danning, a young Danish musician who has studied at the Leipzig Conservatoire, has written a symphony entitled "Dante," which was recently performed in Germany with success.

The Landgrave of Hesse-Cassel, who has been travelling in Norway, went, on the 4th ult., expressly to Bergen in order to pay a visit to Edvard Grieg and his talented wife, who have, during the summer months, been residing at their villa, "Troldhang," near Bergen.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE WRONG BAR IN BEETHOVEN'S SEVENTH SYMPHONY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

Sir,—Allow me to assure Mr. Silas that I have no desire to deprive him of the slightest honour or glory in connection with his discovery. That I discovered it twelve years ago is perfectly true, but when I mentioned the fact I was met with the same rejoinder which so vexes the present discoverer—namely, that it was well-known already.

Sir George Grove, I believe, claims freedom from all errors for Beethoven's published works, but were all existing editions compared I am sure more discrepancies could be found (printers' errors mostly) than would fill one volume of the "Dictionary of Music and Musicians."

Perhaps the proposed fac-simile reproductions of Beethoven's MSS. will throw light on some of the discrepancies alluded to in my last letter, but here is another, of which I have vainly sought an explanation. Towards the end of the Ninth Symphony, in the 6-4 movement, if anyone will take the trouble to compare the first edition with any later one he will find that the second bassoon and double bassoon had not originally the extravagantly difficult quaver runs along with the violoncellos and basses, nor had the second flute anything like its present part. Whether rightly or wrongly I know not, but they were much easier at first. Who altered them?—Faithfully yours,

F. Corder.

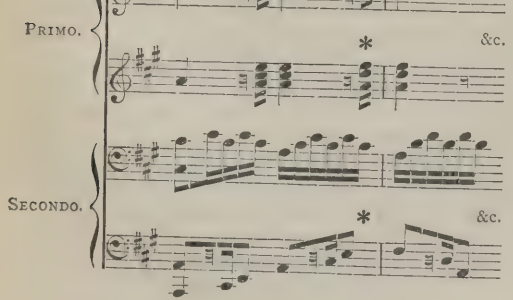
TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

Sir,—I am exceedingly interested in the subject raised by Mr. Silas re Beethoven's Seventh Symphony. I remember, when a student, conducting a local orchestra at a rehearsal of this work, and wondering at the undoubted discord produced by playing the bar in question according to the score and parts, and commented upon it to some of the players.

One feels that one is "treading upon sacred ground" when playing the music of Beethoven, and I am sure that this feeling of awe is the cause why acknowledged great professors of the art have been willing to accept as correct, and no doubt explain satisfactorily to themselves, a passage which from no modern composer would they allow to go unchallenged. Whether such slavery to tradition is wise seems a question. When studying with the late Thomas Wingham I once mentioned this subject, and he said to me he thought that most likely it was a mistake by the engraver.

Mr. Silas is undoubtedly correct in inferring that the bar has generated grave doubts as to the composer really meaning it in the minds of the many musicians who have had the arranging of it from score for pianoforte, &c., as I have before me an old copy of an arrangement for pianoforte duet by W. Watts, published by Chappell & Co. In it I see that although the "Chord of D" is not omitted entirely, as by Hummel and Kalkbrenner, yet the suggestion that the bar in score must be a mistake evidently occurred to him, as the "A" chord is continued up to the last semiquaver of the bar.

It stands thus in this copy:—



I hope, Sir, that you will kindly allow this subject space as long as it is possible, so as to get several opinions, feeling sure that musicians must agree that any trouble is worth taking to get the most reasonably correct version of a bar from so monumental a work as Beethoven's Seventh Symphony.—Yours truly,

H. Wilcox Lawrance.

Heathlands, Lewisham Road.

MUSIC IN FRENCH CATHEDRALS AND CHURCHES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

Sir,—An article on the above subject in The Musical Times for July has just been brought to my notice, in which comparisons are drawn between the music in French and English Cathedrals, very much to the disadvantage of the latter. The writer only mentions Reims and Cologne by name, but he distinctly draws his comparisons between "any one of our provincial Cathedrals and the provincial Cathedral of Reims." In passing, I would note that he purposely leaves out of the question "the well known choirs of the capitals of both countries, which enjoy exceptional advantages." This looks as if he knew very little of such choirs as those of York Minster or Durham, to say nothing of King's or Trinity College Chapels at Cambridge, which, though not in size, can certainly be compared very favourably in other respects with any church or cathedral choir in London.

But it is not of English Cathedral Services I wish to write. My object is to correct the impression conveyed by the article of your correspondent, W. E. D., that English Cathedral services are inferior to French. I do not know Reims, but I have lately, during a tour in France, heard services of one kind or another in the two Abbeys at Caen, and one church, St. Pierre; in the Cathedral of Bayeux, in the church (formerly a Cathedral) at Lisieux, in the Cathedrals of Rouen, Chartres (Funeral Service), and Tours, besides other smaller churches. The services were high mass, low mass, service for the dead performed by priests alone (at Bayeux), penitential service (at the Abbaye aux Dames, Caen), services of Psalms and of hymns alone; so there was no lack of variety from which to draw conclusions. Some of these were specially grand services during the month of May. It is not too much to say we did not hear a service, or even a portion of one, which could be called beautiful or interesting, or even tolerable from a musical point of view. We had high mass seven times, and possibly W. E. D. will not credit it, but there was not a note of harmony in any one of them. This is a state of things alone sufficient to put comparisons out of the question. At Tours the organ, whose tone was grand, was horribly out of tune, and this was the case in one or two other instances. The voices were egregiously out of tune times without number; on one occasion the solo performer, whoever he was, seemed unable ever to hit the right note. At Tours we followed an announcement in the newspaper that at the Church of St. Julien there would be music after vespers. This consisted of a fine baritone, a soprano, and a flautist giving two solos each. They would have been good, or at least fairly good, if the organist had been as equal to his work as those one commonly meets in English country parish churches; but he was not. At Bayeux and Chartres the voices were obviously unequal to singing right without assistance; they were therefore led and dominated by the strains—in unison, of course—of a contra-bass. W. E. D. speaks much of "hymns with endless variety of treatment," of music by Palestrina, Mozart, and Haydn, which he has heard at Reims. These appeared to be totally unknown elsewhere in my painful, but varied experience. Finally, let me emphasise my object in writing, which is to dispel any notion that in the ordinary run of provincial Cathedrals in France anything worthy of the name of music is to be heard.—Yours faithfully,

John Mason.

Windermere, September 10, 1893.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

Sir,—I have just seen the letter of "H. A. W." in your issue for August, in which he expresses his doubts whether the plain-chant of Rouen, with its accompaniments, is in print. As far as the Mass is concerned, there was published by Fleury, of Rouen, in 1868, a set of "Messes pour les fêtes solennelles," which consists of the plain-chant in modern notation with organ accompaniment. The Masses are variously arranged for three or four voices, with the plain-chant in soprano or tenor. A note states that they were harmonised in 1847 by M. Ch. Vervoitte, the Chapelmaster of the Cathedral. Fleury also publishes the "Paroissien Romain, noté," of which the most recent edition is that of 1890. His address at Rouen is 23, Place de l'Hôtel-de-Ville. While I am writing on the subject I may say that a comparison of the plain-chant books of various dioceses in France reveals considerable lack of uniformity in the music. A Holy Week book (Paris, 1828) has music which I cannot find anywhere else, and in a Gradual (Metz, 1805) and a Vesperal (Avignon, 1819) the plain-chant is utterly different from that of Mechlin. The former has frequently not only time-signatures, but also sharps before many notes in the hymns.

Two years ago, in Rouen, at the Feast of the Assumption, I heard a very fine Credo, in the fifth mode, sung in unison by the whole congregation. It is quite unlike any given in the Mechlin edition, but the Digne Gradual (1855) has it, with, however, an intonation different to Dumont's. In the Municipal Library of Rouen there is said to be a MS. plain-chant book which is maintained to be pure, and I was told of a monastery in the neighbourhood where the Gregorian music is said to be uncorrupted.

A study of the various French Graduals and Vesperals leads me to conclude that each diocese went its own way in arranging the plain-chant. I read somewhere that a Commission had been appointed to decide on a single system. Many hymns seem to be peculiar to a particular locality, and one instinctively feels the influence of local popular tunes. In some this is quite undeniable, but the subject is too enormous to go into here.—Yours faithfully,

September 21, 1893. W. W.

DUKE ERNEST'S OPERA "SANTA CHIARA."

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

Sir,—In the last issue of your periodical (p. 534) I see a most astounding statement regarding "Santa Chiara" opera, by the Duke Ernest.

In his book "Aus meinem Leben und aus meiner Zeit," he states that his "opera was performed more than sixty times" in Paris.

Enclosed please find extract from the "Bibliothèque Musicale du Théâtre de l'Opéra," by Théodore de Lajarte, a copy of which you will find at the British Museum, from which official document it appears that "Santa Chiara" had only nine performances at the time.

DLIII.
Sainte Claire (Santa Chiara).
Opéra en 3 actes.
Musique de S. A. R. Ernest, duc de S. Cobourg-Gotha. Paroles de Mme. Birch-Pfeiffer. Traduites par G. Oppelt.
Représenté pour la 1re fois le lundi, 27 Sept., 1855.
A.—Partition d'orch. Trois cahiers in-fol., man.
B.—Partition vocale (souffleur). Quatre cahiers.
C.—Répétiteur de Ballet.
D.—Vingt-six rôles.
E.—Quatre-vingt-dix parties de chœurs.
F.—Conducteur d'orch—Trois cahiers.
G.—Cinquante parties d'orch.
9 représentations.

Respectfully yours,
Albert Zollinger.

Théâtre National de l'Opéra,
34, Rue Dauphine, Paris, September 12, 1893.

[We are not, of course, responsible for the late Duke's statements, and have no means of explaining the discrepancy between his account and M. Zollinger's. We feel inclined to believe, however, that the Duke referred to the total number of performances, in Paris and elsewhere, although the passage in the book reads as if sixty performances in Paris were meant.—Ed. M. T.]

A MUSICAL BLACKBIRD.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

Sir,—The Blackbird mentioned by your correspondent F. R. C. in his letter concerning the song of the Yellow-Hammer, must have been in the habit of frequenting some Cathedral close, or have escaped from the home of a Cathedral chorister, as his Leitmotif proves to be identical with the opening phrase of Thomas Attwood Walmisley's Anthem "Father of Heaven," save that the bird trilled a minor third and Walmisley uses the major.

Yours faithfully,
Henry Knight.

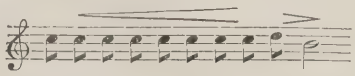
4, Umfreville Road, Harringay, N.,
September 13, 1893.

THE SONG OF THE YELLOW-HAMMER.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE MUSICAL TIMES."

Sir,—I see there has been a good deal of discussion on the song of the yellow-hammer.

Will you kindly insert the following, which I have found to be correct in Cornwall?—



This is quite correct as regards the notation, but the yellow-hammer has a tendency to sharpen slightly the D, and instead of B, a note a quarter-tone between B and B flat, thereby flattening the B. This is, of course, very unmusical.—Yours, &c.,

Cornwall, September 10, 1893. H. T. B.

P.S.—To render the proper effect of the bird the notes will have to be played in the uppermost octave of the pianoforte.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 Notices of concerts, and other information supplied by our friends in the country, must be forwarded as early as possible after the occurrence; otherwise they cannot be inserted. Our correspondents must specifically denote the date of each concert, for without such date no notice can be taken of the performance.

Our correspondents will oblige by writing all names as clearly as possible, as we cannot be responsible for any mistakes that may occur.

Correspondents are informed that their names and addresses must accompany all communications.

We cannot undertake to return offered contributions; the authors, therefore, will do well to retain copies.

Notice is sent to all subscribers whose payment (in advance) is exhausted. The paper will be discontinued where the Subscription is not renewed. We again remind those who are disappointed in obtaining back numbers that, although the music is always kept in stock, only a sufficient quantity of the rest of the paper is printed to supply the current sale.

BRIEF SUMMARY OF COUNTRY NEWS.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for any opinions expressed in this summary, as all the notices are either collated from the local papers or supplied to us by correspondents.

Blackpool.—Dr. Horton Allison's Concerto for pianoforte and orchestra, originally produced at the London Westminster Orchestral Society's Concert on December 9, 1891, received a favourable reception here on August 29, when it was performed at Mr. de Jong's Concert.

Bolton.—A Musical Service was held on the 18th ult. in the Wesleyan Chapel. Mr. A. E. Jones, the Organist, played a varied selection of organ music, Mr. G. W. Nelson contributed two violoncello solos, and Miss Marjorie Eaton's singing of "On mighty pens" was much admired.

Cape Town.—The Dean of Cape Town, on the 4th ult., presented Mr. Barrow-Dowling with a handsomely mounted bâton in recognition of his services as Organist and Choirmaster of the Cathedral.

Christchurch, New Zealand.—Mr. Wallace, on July 20 last, commenced a series of classical Chamber Concerts which promises to prove highly successful. Schumann's Pianoforte and Violin Sonata in D minor, Beethoven's Sonata "Pathétique," Tartini's "Devil's Trill" Sonata, and Haydn's "Emperor" Quartet were included in the first programme, which was excellently rendered. The following week, on July 27, Mr. Wallace introduced to a Christchurch audience, assembled in the Oddfellows' Hall, Mr. F. H. Cowen's cantata St. John's Eve, the melodious and graceful character of which greatly pleased. The soloists were Miss Bonnington, Mrs. Jennings, Mr. F. Woodhouse, and Mr. Day.

Dublin.—Sir Robert Stewart, on the 13th ult., received in the Examination Hall, Trinity College, a deputation of distinguished musicians from London to explain the objects of the Incorporated Society of Musicians. Mr. Chadfield stated that the Society now included 136 Doctors of Music, 53 Bachelors of Music, 33 Fellows, Members, and Associates of the Royal Academy, 32 Licentiates of the Royal Academy, 6 Professors of the Royal College, 95 Fellows of the College of Organists, 30 Licentiates of Trinity College, London, 10 Professors of the Guildhall School, 19 with degrees from foreign conservatoires, and 306 holding appointments as Organists. The approval of the scheme by Sir Robert Stewart will doubtless secure the co-operation of many Irish members.

Halesworth.—Through the liberality of Mrs. Warwick, of Halesworth, the organ in the Parish Church, built by Messrs. Norman Bros. and Beard in 1889, has now been completed. The instrument was opened on the 10th ult.

Hanley.—The fifth season of the Meakin Popular Concerts was opened on the 18th ult. in the Town Hall, before an audience of 3,000. Dr. C. S. Heap was heard in Mendelssohn's Pianoforte Concerto in D minor and in Weber's Concertstück (Op. 79), and Mr. F. Ward, the leader of the orchestra, played the solo part in Hans Sitt's Concertstück for violin (Op. 46). The vocalists were Miss Margaret Hoare and Mr. Magrath, and the orchestral pieces were Dr. Mackenzie's Benedictus, four numbers from Mr. F. H. Cowen's Suite "The Language of Flowers," and the Overtures to The Merry Wives of Windsor and William Tell. The Concerts derive their name from their having been originally subsidised by the late Mr. George Meakin.

Hobart.—On the occasion of the jubilee of the Diocese of Tasmania a Festival Service was held in the Cathedral, which included a performance of Mendelssohn's "Come let us sing." The soloists were Mrs. Lovett, Miss Gill, and Mr. Dudley Allport. The accompaniments were played by Mr. Bradshaw Major, and Mr. Stanley Chipperfield conducted.

Keighley.—In connection with the Keighley Exhibition a Choral Contest was held on the 2nd ult., at which Mr. M. B. Foster, formerly Organist at the Foundling Hospital, acted as judge. The successful competitors were the Eastbrook Choir (Bradford), Wesley Place Wesleyan Choir (Ingrow), Saltaire Prize Choir, Leeds Blenheim Choir, Leeds Musical Union, and Halifax West End Glee Union. In his adjudication Mr. Foster said he felt unable to express the pleasure he had enjoyed in listening to such really fine singing.

Loughton.—A Festival Service was held, on the 6th ult., in the Parish Church, by the Epping Forest Church Choir Association. The music, which included a setting of the Canticles by Walter Clinch and Wesley's "Blessed be the God and Father," was well rendered, under the bâton of Mr. J. W. Ullyett, Mr. Henry Riding presiding at the organ.

Malvern.—Mr. Charles H. Moody's recent Organ Recitals in the Priory Church have been much appreciated. The programmes presented excellent selections from the best organ music.

Oxford.—The new three-manual organ built by Messrs. Nicholson, of Worcester, and erected in Wesley's Memorial Church at a cost of £850, was formally opened on August 31 by Mr. A. F. Kerry, who played a selection admirably calculated to display the beauties of the instrument. Vocal solos were contributed by Mrs. Kerry and Miss Liddell. During the following weeks Recitals on the instrument were also given by Mr. T. W. Dodds, Mr. A. Wiblin, Mr. Fountain Meen, and Mr. Arthur N. Price.

Pontypridd.—The monster Welsh Festival held here on the 4th ult., under the able conductorship of Mr. Dan Davies, proved very successful and was largely attended.

Sandown.—Mr. H. Wharton Wells played an attractive selection of organ music on the 13th ult. at St. John's Church. Vocal solos were contributed by Madame Kate Munns.

Shalesmoor.—The new organ erected in Ebenezer Chapel by Mr. A. Keates, of Sheffield, was formally opened on the 17th ult., by Mr. J. Vazson. On the following Tuesday Dr. Haydn Keeton gave a Recital, when the programme consisted of Mendelssohn's First Organ Sonata, Andante in B flat (Mailly), Prelude and Fugue in G major (Bach), Allegro in F minor (Guilmant), Allegro (Dubois), Fantaisie in E flat (Saint-Saëns), Andante in G minor (Silas), Solemn March in E flat (Smart). Miss Schofield sang "With verdure clad" and the choir rendered one of the choruses from Haydn's First Mass.

South Myms, Middlesex.—An Organ Recital was given on the 17th ult., in St. Giles's Church, by Mr. H. W. Stewardson. The programme included Handel's Fourth Organ Concerto and Bach's Toccata and Fugue in D minor.

Organ Appointments.—Mr. George F. Mountford, Organist and Choirmaster to the Parish Church, Glanmire, co. Cork, Ireland.—Mr. Harold Hewitt, to Christ Church, Sydenham.—Mr. W. Deane, to the Cathedral, Graham's Town, Cape Colony.

Choir Appointments.—Mr. W. H. Stevenson (Bass), to St. Peter's, Vere Street.—Mr. Charles Morgan (Principal Tenor), to All Saints' Church, Cheltenham.—Mr. E. Geere (Tenor), to St. Mary's, West Kensington.—Mr. Frank Pridmore, to St. Peter's, Vere Street.

MISS AMY SARGENT (Soprano)
124, Marylebone Road, N.W.

MISS LIZZIE SCOTT (Soprano)
For terms and vacant dates, address, 38, York Road, Northampton.
Large répertoire, including Oratorios, Cantatas, Ballads, &c.

MISS GEORGINA TEAR (Soprano)
33, Loughborough Road, Brixton, S.W.

MR. E. DUNKERTON (Tenor), Lincoln Cathedral, is booking ENGAGEMENTS for the coming season. Address, Cathedral, Lincoln.

MR. W. CARTLEDGE-WHITE (Tenor) begs to announce his CHANGE OF ADDRESS to 7, Guildford Road, South Lambeth, S.W., where all communications respecting Concert, Opera, and Oratorio Engagements should be addressed.

MR. ROBERT GRICE (Baritone) is at liberty to accept ENGAGEMENTS for Oratorio, Concerts, Masonic and other Dinners, and is prepared to provide complete Concert party. For terms and vacant dates, address, 38, Tytherton Rd., Tufnell Park, N.

MR. ROBERT GRICE, having resigned his appointment at St. Paul's Cathedral, requests that all communications respecting engagements for Oratorio, Concerts, &c., be addressed to him at 38, Tytherton Road, Tufnell Park, N.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO, EWER & CO.

TAYLOR, FRANKLIN.—Progressive Studies for the Pianoforte. Edited, arranged in groups, and the fingering revised and supplemented. No. 39. Staccato. 1s.

BARNETT, JOHN FRANCIS.—"The Wishing Bell." A Cantata. For Female Voices and Orchestra. The words written by Jetta Vogel. Paper cover, 2s. 6d.

COWEN, FREDERIC H.—"The Water Lily." A Romantic Legend. For Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra. The words written by Joseph Bennett. Paper cover, 2s. 6d.

FOSTER, MYLES B.—"Snow Fairies." A Cantata. For Female Voices. The words written by Shapcott Wensley. Paper cover, 1s. 6d.

GAUL, A. R.—"Una." An Allegorical Romance. Cantata. For Four Solo Voices, Chorus, and Orchestra. Verse by Frederick Enoch. Paper cover, 2s. 6d.; paper boards, 3s.; cloth, gilt, 4s.; Tonic Sol-fa edition, 1s. Vocal Parts, 1s. each; Words only, 7s. 6d. per 100.

GRAY, ALAN.—"The Legend of the Rock-Buoy Bell." Ballad. For Chorus and Orchestra. The Words written by Susan K. Phillips. Paper cover, 1s.

HILES, HENRY.—"Youth." A Concert-Overture. 1st Violin, 1s.; 2nd Violin, 1s.; Viola, 1s.; Violoncello, 1s.; Double Bass, 6d.

ILIFFE, FREDERICK.—"Sweet Echo, Sweetest Nymph." Choral Song in Eight Parts. For Mixed Voices, with Orchestral Accompaniment (ad lib.). The Words written by Milton. Paper cover, 1s.

POPHAM, VYVYAN WALLIS.—"Early Spring." By Alfred, Lord Tennyson. Set to Music for Chorus and Orchestra. Paper cover, 1s.

STORER, JOHN.—"Mass of our Lady of Ransom." For Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra. Op. 50. Paper cover, 2s.

TOURS, BERTHOLD.—A Festival Ode. The words written by the Rev. Canon Bell. Paper cover, 1s.

ROECKEL, J. L.—"The Silver Penny." An original, fanciful Children's Operetta. The words written by Louis B. Tisdale. (The music in both notations.) Paper cover, 2s.

THE SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW. No. 16. Contains the following Music in both Notations: "A holiday on the Rhine" (Unison Song), Schumann; "The Ploughboy" (Round for Three Voices), W. W. Pearson; Studies in Time and Tune Combined, 1½d.

ACKLAND, J. E.—The Office of Holy Communion. For Congregational use. 4d.

AITKEN, G. B. J.—(in E flat). Magnificat and Nunc dimittis. (No. 140. Novello's Parish Choir Book.) 4d.

BLAIR, HUGH—(in D major). Te Deum laudamus. 6d.

BROWN, ARTHUR HENRY—(in A). Magnificat and Nunc dimittis. (No. 141. Novello's Parish Choir Book.) 3d.

CRESER, WILLIAM—(in C). Magnificat and Nunc dimittis. 3d.

GALE, CLEMENT ROWLAND—(in D). Magnificat and Nunc dimittis. 6d.

JOHNSON, C.—(in D). Magnificat and Nunc dimittis. A simple setting (Harmony or Unison). For Use in Parish Churches. 2d.

MISSA REX SPLENDENS. Composed by Saint Dunstan (as to the Kyrie) and adapted to the English Communion Service from early manuscripts by the Plainsong and Mediæval Music Society. With accompanying Harmonies by Charles W. Pearce. Paper cover, 1s.

MACFARREN, WALTER—(in A). The Morning and Evening Service. Paper cover, 1s.; or, singly:—No. 1. Te Deum laudamus, 4d.; No. 2. Benedictus, 3d.; Nos. 3 and 4. Jubilate Deo and Kyrie Eleison, 4d.; Nos. 5 and 6. Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, 4d.

PAGE, ARTHUR—(in F). Benedictus and Agnus Dei. From a Setting of the Office of the Holy Communion. (No. 142. Novello's Parish Choir Book.) 3d.

SHINN, GEORGE—(in F). Cantate Domino and Deus Misereatur. 4d.

TIRBUTT, J. CHARLES B.—Eight Easy Offertory Sentences. 6d.

WHITING, ARTHUR.—"Give ear, O Shepherd of Israel." Anthem. For Four Voices. (No. 433. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 3d.

—— "Lord, Thou hast searched me." Anthem. For Tenor Solo and Chorus. (No. 434. Novello's Octavo Anthems). 3d.

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

FOSTER, MYLES B.—"Let not your heart be troubled." Easy Full Anthem. (No. 438. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 3d.

GARRETT, GEORGE.—"Thy mercy, O Lord." Festival Anthem. For Tenor Solo and Chorus. (No. 441. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 6d.

TRYDELL, E. EUGÈNE.—"The fields are white to harvest." Harvest Carol. 3d.

HARRISON, S. A.—Advent Hymn. On Card, 1d.

—— "Confidence." Hymn. On Card, 1d.

SPENCER, FANNY M.—Thirty-two Hymns, with Original Tunes. Paper cover, 1s. 6d. (75 cents).

THE ORPHEUS:—

No. 257.	When for the world's repose	The Earl of Mornington	2d.
„ 258.	Upwards	L. Spohr	3d.
„ 265.	When evening casts her shadows round	Clowes Bayley	3d.

NOVELLO'S PART-SONG BOOK:—

No. 688.	To Daisies, not to shut so soon	J. D. Davis	2d.
„ 690.	It was a lover	Charles Wood	3d.
„ 691.	Sweet Thrush	J. Danby	3d.
„ 698.	When evening casts her shadows round	Clowes Bayley	3d.
„ 700.	Queen of fresh flowers	King Hall	3d.

BOYCE, ETHEL M.—"Magdalen at Michael's Gate." A Carol. For Two Female Voices. (No. 76. Novello's Octavo Edition of Two-part Songs for Female Voices.) 2d.

HANDEL.—"Ye boundless realms of joy" and "Your voices raise" (From Sixth Chandos Anthem). (No. 768. Novello's Octavo Choruses.) 3d.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. Edited by W. G. McNaught. Book XVIII. Six Vocal Dances, by Arthur Richards. Price (Music in both Notations) 6d.; Tonic Sol-fa, 3d.: or, singly:—

		A.	B.
No. 97.	Woodland Voices (Minuet)	1½d.	1d.
„ 98.	Hey-ho-hey (Polka)	2d.	1½d.
„ 99.	In rich clusters (Waltz)	1½d.	1d.
„ 100.	Spring Song (Schottische)	1d.
„ 101.	The Ferry (Gavotte)	2d.	1½d.
„ 102.	Youth (Waltz)	1½d.

—— Book XIX. Five Two-part Songs. By Roland Rogers. Price (Music in both Notations) 8d.; Tonic Sol-fa, 4d.; or, singly:—

		A.	B.
No. 103.	The Home of Song	2d.	1½d.
„ 104.	Life and Love	1½d.	1d.
„ 105.	A Venetian Festa	1½d.	1d.
„ 106.	Autumn Memories	1½d.	1d.
„ 107.	A Bird Song	1½d.	1d.

A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notation, with Pianoforte Accompaniment, 8vo size; B. Voice Parts only in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.

—— (Music in both Notations):—

No. 108.	Song of the Zephyr. Unison Song	W. W. Pearson	1½d.
„ 109.	The Swing. Unison Song	„	1½d.
„ 110.	The Windmill. Unison Song	„	1½d.
„ 111.	Summer. Unison Song	„	1d.
„ 112.	Up in the morning early. Unison Song	„	1d.
„ 126.	Minstrel of the night. Two-part Song	A. W. Fletcher	1½d.

PEARSON, W. W.—"Call John!" Humorous Part-Song. Founded on the popular American Melody "The Old Folks at Home; or, The Swanee River." Arranged for Soprano, Alto, Tenor, and Bass, and Bass Solo. 3d.

GILL, W. H.—Staff Notation Modulator or Pointing Board. Applicable to any System of Solmization. Unmounted, 1s. 6d.; mounted on linen, with rollers, 3s. 6d.; Pocket edition (10½ by 4), 6d.

BARKER, JOHN GODDARD.—"Ever with thee." Song. The Words by John Scott Hull. 2s.

COBB, GERARD F.—"Song and Silence." Song. With an ad libitum part for Horn or Violoncello. Words by Robert S. Hichens. 2s.

ESMOND, ARTHUR.—"Requiescat." Song. The Words written by Matthew Arnold. 2s.

GOODHART, ARTHUR.—"Flower Crowns." Song. The Poetry by Arthur Benson. 2s.

PUGHE-EVANS, D.—"Return unto thy rest." Sacred Song. The Words selected from Holy Writ. 2s.

MOXON, WILLIAM.—"The Play Ground." Sketch Descriptive. For the Pianoforte. 1s. 6d.

HERITTE-VIARDOT, L.—"In Gondola." For the Pianoforte. 2s.

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

CORELLI.—Concerto Grosso (No. X.) Arranged for the Organ by A. B. Plant. (No. 17. Organ Arrangements. Edited by George C. Martin.) 1s. 6d.

SILAS, E.—Antiphon and Interlude. (No. 190. Original Compositions for the Organ.) 1s. 6d.

NOVELLO'S PUBLICATIONS in the TONIC SOL-FA NOTATION. Translated by W. G. McNaught.

No. 800.	Sinks the night	Robert Schumann	1d.
„ 802.	In the hayfields	Ciro Pinsuti	1d.
„ 803.	Evening rest	Carl Hering	1d.
„ 804.	Yet once again we come to greet ye	Mozart	1d.
„ 805.	Voice of the Western wind	J. Barnby	1d.
„ 806.	The dreaming lake	Carl Reinecke	1d.
„ 816.	Dhia, Gleidh an crun (God save the Queen)	Vincent Novello	1d.

WEST, J. E.—"Seed-time and Harvest." 1s.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S New and Standard Publications.

ORGAN MUSIC. Pedal Obbligato.

HANDEL'S CHORUSES. Arranged from the most favourite Oratorios and Anthems. By W. T. Best. In Thirty-six Books. 1s. to 2s. each net.

ORGAN COMPOSITIONS—ANCIENT AND MODERN (containing the famous Andante and Allegro by F. E. Bache). By W. T. Best. Twelve Books. 1s. each net.

CLASSICAL EXTRACTS. By Geo. Cooper. Seven Books. 1s. 6d. each net.

CLASSICAL MOVEMENTS. By Alfred Redhead. Twelve Books. 1s. each net.

CELEBRATED MARCHES. Arranged by G. R. Griffiths. Two Books. 1s. 6d. each net.

Recently Published.

FUNERAL MARCH (Grieg). By E. H. Lemare. 1s. 6d. net.

ORGAN RECITAL SERIES. No. 1, 2s. net; No. 2, 2s. 6d. net.

THE ORGANIST'S LIBRARY. By Dr. W. J. Westbrook. Six Books. 2s. each net.

Complete List of Organ Publications free on application.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS—Just Published.

TWELVE ORIGINAL CAROLS. Words by May Gillington. Music by A. C. Mackenzie, Lawrence Kellie, W. J. Westbrook, Arthur E. Godfrey, George C. Martin, Frank L. Moir, Alfred J. Eyre, and Howard Talbot. 2d. each. Complete, in paper covers, 1s. net; cloth, 2s. net. Words only, complete, 2d. List on application.

F. H. COWEN'S favourite CANTATA for FEMALE VOICES, "THE FAIRIES' SPRING" (An Elfin Legend). Price 2s. 6d. net; Tonic Sol-fa Edition, 1s. net.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S new Edition of STANDARD CLASSICAL PIECES. 153 numbers issued.

ALSO

CLASSICAL MUSIC (new Series) selected, fingered, and edited by Adolphe Schloesser, Professor at the Royal Academy of Music. 72 numbers issued. Lists on application.

THE CANDIDATES' PRACTICAL SCALE and ARPEGGIO HANDBOOKS. Specially arranged for the use of Students preparing for the Examinations (Pianoforte) of the Associated Board of the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music.

By GRAHAM P. MOORE.

Compiled in strict accordance with the Syllabus of the Associated Board, and each Book containing full directions as to the requirements of the Examiners. Issued in four Books, each Book being complete in itself, and containing only those scales required by Candidates for their respective Examinations.

Book 1. For the Local School Examinations, lower division. 1s. net.
„ 2. Higher division. 1s. 6d. net.
„ 3. For the Local Centre Examinations, junior grade. 1s. 6d. net.
„ 4. Senior grade: Part 1, Scales; Part 2, Arpeggi. Each 2s. net.

COMPLETE SCALE and ARPEGGIO TUTOR. By Adolphe Schloesser. Containing all the Scales and Arpeggi required by Pupils preparing for the Metropolitan, Local, and other Examinations, including the Associated Board of the R.A.M. and R.C.M. Engraved in bold style, and printed on best paper, giving clear directions how to practise.

Part 1.	Scales. 33 pages	5s.
„ 2.	Arpeggios. 45 pages	5s.
	Complete	8s.

NEW SONGS. By Lawrence Kellie, Angelo Mascheroni, A. C. Mackenzie, Maude Valérie White, F. H. Cowen, Hamish MacCunn, Frances Allitsen, &c.

NEW PIANOFORTE MUSIC. By Angelo Mascheroni, Benedetto Palmieri, G. Jacobi, Edwin H. Lemare, Graham P. Moore, Isabel Hearne, &c.

NEW VIOLIN and VIOLONCELLO MUSIC. By Otto Peiniger, Tivadar Nachèz, David Popper, Leo Stern, Gilbert R. Betjemann, &c.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S LIST OF GLEES, &c., containing a choice Selection, by the most eminent Composers, of Two and Three-part Songs for equal voices and Songs for Classes in unison; many numbers in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S

NEW AND STANDARD PUBLICATIONS—continued.

NEW WORKS.

HOW TO ACCOMPANY: A Guide to Artistic Accompaniment. By Annie Glen. Paper cover, 4s. net; cloth, 5s. net.

CHURCH AND CATHEDRAL CHORISTERS' SINGING METHOD. Dr. Haydn Keeton. Paper cover, 2s. net; cloth, 3s. net.

TONIC SOL-FA CLASS SINGING METHOD. CHAS. WEBB. Limp cloth, 2s. net.

PROGRESSIVE EXERCISES IN SIGHT SINGING. By W. A. Thomas. Used by the Guildhall School of Music. 1s. net.

CIRO PINSUTI'S DAILY VOCAL EXERCISES. 28th Edition. 1s. 6d. net. The Exercises in this work are set down in every key, so that the Student will not have the trouble of transposing.

Ready shortly.

GABRIELLA: Opera in One Act. Libretto by Alfred Byrne and Fulvio Fulgonio. English version by Mowbray Marras. Music by Emilio Pizzi. Specially composed for Madame Adelina Patti, who will sing the title rôle on her forthcoming tour.

6, NEW BURLINGTON ST., LONDON, W.

CONTENTS.

	Page
Sir Augustus Harris on the Opera	585
A New American Composer	586
From my Study	588
Of the Mastersingers' Gracious Art	590
Occasional Notes	592
Facts, Rumours, and Remarks	595
Worcester Musical Festival	598
Covent Garden Theatre.—Promenade Concerts	599
Saint-Saëns's "Samson et Dalila"	599
Mr. German's Music to "The Tempter"	600
Obituary	600
Music in Belfast	601
„ Birmingham	601
„ Bristol	602
„ Glasgow	602
„ Liverpool	603
„ Manchester	603
„ Nottingham	604
„ Sheffield and District	604
„ Wilts and Hants	604
„ America	611
Four-part Song—"A Lover's Counsel." Frederic H. Cowen	605
General News (London)	611
Reviews	612
Foreign Notes	615
Correspondence	617
General News (Country)	619
List of Music published during the last Month	620

THE MUSICAL TIMES.

SCALE OF TERMS FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

	£	s.	d.
Two Lines	0	3	0
Three Lines	0	3	4
For every additional Line	0	0	10
Half a Column	2	0	0
A Column	4	0	0
A Page	7	10	0

Special Pages (Cover, &c.) by arrangement.
A remittance should be sent with each Advertisement.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To ensure insertion Advertisements should reach the Office

NOT LATER THAN THE

TWENTY-THIRD

OF EACH MONTH.

ALTO and TENOR WANTED, by a Glee Club. No Fees paid. Amateurs, good voices and readers, invited to apply to F. Budge, 28, Albert Square, S.W.

ALTO (Male) WANTED, for St. German's Church, Blackheath. Must have good voice and be able to read well at sight. Communicant. Services: Sunday Morning and Evening, and greater Festivals; one rehearsal weekly. £24. Apply, by letter, to E. Cattermole, 85, Maryon Road, Old Charlton, Kent.

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES, CONCERT-GIVERS, &c.

MR. JOHN BARTLETT

(TENOR)

PRINCIPAL, PRO-CATHEDRAL, KENSINGTON,

AND OF

SIGNOR LAGO'S ROYAL OPERA (Principal),

COVENT GARDEN PROMENADE CONCERTS,

CRYSTAL PALACE ORCHESTRAL CONCERTS,

MADAME FANNY MOODY AND MR. CHARLES MANNERS' CONCERT TOUR, &c.,

Is now Booking Engagements for Oratorio, Concerts, At Homes, &c. Secretaries and others are desired to write for Press notices.

For first appearances moderate terms arranged. Large répertoire.

Kindly address, Mr. John Bartlett, 7, Westfield Terrace, Fulham Road, London, S.W. Or Agents.

CHURCH CHOIR GUILD.

(Guild of Church Musicians),
35, WELLINGTON STREET, LONDON, W.C.
Under the patronage of the Bishops and Clergy of the Church of England.
For Organists, Choirmasters, Precentors, and Choristers.

President:
The Very Rev. Francis Pigou, D.D., Dean of Bristol.
Warden and Licensed Lay Chaplain:
J. H. Lewis, Mus. Doc., D.C.L.

Annual Subscription (Membership), 10s. 6d. Life, £5 5s.
Choirs Enrolled, 10s. 6d.

A.C.C.G. and F.C.C.G. Diploma Examination, Organists' and Choirmasters' Sections, in January, 1894. Full set of last Examination Papers, post-free, thirteen stamps.

Nov. 6 (Monday), Annual Banquet, at which the President, the Very Rev. the Dean of Bristol, will preside. Tickets, 5s. each.

Nov. 22, Grand Choral Festival at Leamington Parish Church.

COMPETITIONS.

Two Guineas for a simple Evening Service.
Silver Medal for Communion Service.
Silver Medal for Anthem.
Bronze Medal for Kyrie in Canon.

The 1893 Calendar gives full particulars of the Guild, also contains a Table of University Degrees and College Diplomas, with Academic Costume, post-free, fourteen stamps.

See The Church Musician, and apply to Dr. Lewis, "Silvermead," Twickenham, S.W.

By Order of the Council.

ALTO WANTED, for the Choir of St. Augustine and St. Faith, Old Change. Two full services on Sundays. Weekly Practice. Salary, about £12 per annum. Apply, Rev. W. H. Milman, Sion College, Victoria Embankment, E.C.

BASS-BARITONE VOCALIST, holder of medals of R.A.M., will give his services (for expenses only) at Oratorio and other Concerts this season, in order to obtain introduction and save Agents' fees. Address, Allegro, care of Pascoe, Stationer, Rugeley.

MUSICAL PROFESSION.—The Organist of St. Andrew's Parish Church, Plymouth, has a VACANCY for an ARTICLED PUPIL. Exceptional advantages are offered and every facility for acquiring a thorough musical education. Full choral services by fine choir of eighty voices. Choir-training and orchestral work are made special features. There are two organs, of four and three manuals respectively, for practice, with hydraulic blowers. The practical course comprises pianoforte, organ, and one orchestral instrument; and the theoretical, harmony, counterpoint, and composition in all its branches. Address, Mr. H. Moreton, F.C.O., 89, Durnford Street, E. Stonehouse, Plymouth.

TO INTENDING CANDIDATES for MUS. BAC. DEGREE.—PREPARATION by Correspondence for Entrance Examinations at Oxford, Cambridge, London, Durham, and Dublin. Payment may be based on success. Method strictly individual. Single subjects if desired. Address, J. Charleston, B.A., Kenilworth House, Oxford.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED, for St. Mary-le-Tower, Ipswich. Salary, £60. Full particulars on application to the Churchwardens.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED, for the Congregational Church, Hastings. A member of a Non-conformist Church preferred. Apply, stating salary, references, &c., to Mr. Notcutt, Orwell House, St. Leonards-on-Sea.

THOROUGH good TUNER REQUIRED, for South of England. Knowledge of reed instruments. State wages, references, &c. Node, Messrs. Novello & Co., 1, Berners St., W.

TUNER WANTED. Must be thoroughly experienced and useful with light repairs. Apply, by letter, to Agate and Co., 183, Church Street, Stoke Newington, N.

TUNER, thoroughly efficient. South London. Write, stating salary, and name of last employer, to Lyra, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

PIANOFORTE and HARMONIUM TUNER REQUIRED. F. A. W. Parkinson, Broadway, Wimbledon.

PIANOFORTE TUNER desires RE-ENGAGEMENT. Good references. Address, J. S. H., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

YOUNG MAN seeks ENGAGEMENT as IMPROVER to piano tuning. Thorough knowledge of Sheet Music and Small Goods in present situation. Apply, G. T., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

YOUNG MAN seeks ENGAGEMENT as Out-door TUNER and SALESMAN. Thorough knowledge of Harmoniums and American Organs in present situation. Apply, M. F., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

WANTED, at the Music Stall, in Market Hall, energetic Young Man as SALESMAN; thoroughly conversant with the Catalogues and fair general knowledge of music. Would be required to travel one or two days weekly. Apply, stating particulars and salary required, Lupton Bros., Burnley.

SALESMAN, aged 25, of good address, requires SITUATION. Used to all branches. Small goods a specialty. G. C., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

PIANO SALESMAN desires MANAGEMENT of a BRANCH BUSINESS. Understands Small Goods and Sheet Music. Aged 30. Piano, Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners St., W.

ORGAN PRACTICE, North London. Fine three-manual Instrument, blown by engine. 31, Poet's Road, Mildmay Park. N.B.—Board and residence for a young musician.

ALFRED MONK, Organ Builder; Works, 550, Holloway Road, London.—Organs built to any specification and constructed on the most improved principles of high-class workmanship and materials at the most reasonable prices. Improved construction to suit foreign climates. Extensive stock of thoroughly well-seasoned materials. A variety of new and second-hand Organs (which have been taken in exchange) for Sale or Hire, or payable in three years. Tuners sent to all parts of the kingdom. Alterations and repairs. Price list and estimates sent free. A. Monk's Patent Improved Tubular Pneumatic Actions.

ORGANS for SALE.—Two Second-hand Two-manual ORGANS, with pedals and Bourdons, with 9 and 11 stops; also one One-manual, 5 stops. R. Cope, Jardin St., Camberwell, S.E.

MUSICAL AUTHORS' SOCIETY.—Composers, Performers, Teachers, Librettists, Organists, Students, &c., can promote their interests through the Society's various departments. Enclose stamp for particulars to Hon. Sec., Musical Authors' Society, Queen's Gate Hall, South Kensington.

U.S.A.—"Comparison of English and German Methods of Teaching Harmony." Mailed free to any address in U.S.A., Canada, or the Cape. F. Sommer, A.L.A.M., 14, Mardale Street, Shepherd's Bush, London, W., England.

NEW CHRISTMAS CAROL.

BABE OF BETHLEHEM

Words from The Penny Post. Music by F. W. Dawkins, Organist, St. James's, Hampton Hill.

By the same Composer:

THROUGH THE MIDNIGHT AIR. 5th thousand.
THE CHRISTMAS STARS ARE SHINING. 3rd thousand.

Price 2d. each; words only, 1s. 6d. per hundred.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.;
Or of the Composer, Ayot Villa, Teddington.

Ready October 20.

TWELVE CHRISTMAS CAROLS

Words by Mrs. G. F. Byron (Miss Gillington)

MUSIC BY

F. PASCAL.

Octavo. Price One Shilling net.

London: Joseph Williams, 24, Berners Street.

THE SECOND ADVENT

SACRED CANTATA

SOLOS FOR TENOR AND BASS, EASY CHORUSES, AND FOUR WELL-KNOWN HYMNS FOR THE CONGREGATION.

Part I.—The Cry of the Church.
Part II.—The Signs. Part III.—The Advent.
Part IV.—The Triumph of the Church.

These four parts may (if preferred) be sung separately as Anthems on the four Sundays in Advent.

The Words selected from Holy Scripture by the Rev. C. T. Mayo.

THE MUSIC (EXCEPT THE HYMN TUNES) COMPOSED BY

ARTHUR H. D. PRENDERGAST.

Vocal Score, with Organ Accompaniment, 1s. 6d.
Words only (with the Hymn Tunes), 1½d.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

Just Published. Three Shillings net.

ORPHEUS. Dramatic Cantata. For Soli and Chorus. By F. J. Sawyer, Mus. Doc.

The attention of Conductors of Choral Societies is invited to this work, which gained

THE PRIZE OF ONE HUNDRED POUNDS offered by Methven, Simpson and Co. for the best Cantata by a British-born composer. The judges were—

Dr. A. C. Mackenzie,
Mr. Frederick Corder,
Mr. Battison Haynes.

Edinburgh: Methven, Simpson and Co., 83, Princes Street.

BENEDICITE, OMNIA OPERA

BY

WILLIAM S. VINNING,

Mus. Bac., Cantab.

PRICE THREEPENCE.

The Monthly Journal of the Incorporated Society of Musicians says: "The above is a setting of really appropriate music. . . . Mr. Vinning's music never flags in interest, and welcome variety is obtained by a judicious use of unison passages for the different divisions of the choir."

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

SIXTY-ONE

MELODIES AND UNFIGURED BASSES

(To be Harmonised in Four Parts)

For the use of ADVANCED MUSICAL STUDENTS and CANDIDATES FOR DIPLOMAS

BY

ROWLAND M. WYNN, Mus. Doc., Oxon., F.C.O.

Price One Shilling.

"Both the melodies and the basses are designed with no little ingenuity, and form the means of bringing out in the student all the amount of skill of which he may be possessed."—Musical Times.

PART-SONGS.

By the same Composer:

EVENING BELLS (6th thousand) .. .. 2d.
GO! HARK! (Hunting Song) .. .. 3d.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

ÉLÉGIE ET RONDO

POUR

VIOLON ET PIANO

PAR

EMILE SAURET.

(Op. 48.)

Price Four Shillings net.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

SIX PIECES FOR THE VIOLIN

WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

COMPOSED BY

HERBERT W. WAREING.

	s. d.		s. d.
1. May Day Festival ..	2 6	4. Pastoral Dance ..	2 0
2. At Killee	2 0	5. Legende..	1 6
3. Romance	1 6	6. Saltarello	2 3

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

FIVE MINIATURES FOR PIANO

COMPOSED BY

S. B. SCHLESINGER.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence net.

Contents.

No. 1. Pleasant Dreams.	No. 4. Meditation.
„ 2. Good Morning.	„ 5. Flirtation.
„ 3. Melody.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S
ALBUMS
FOR
VIOLONCELLO AND PIANOFORTE.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH.

*FOUR MARCHES
COMPOSED BY
F. MENDELSSOHN BARTHOLDY.
TRANSCRIBED BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.

*THIRTY MELODIES
COMPOSED BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.

*TEN TRANSCRIPTIONS
FROM MENDELSSOHN'S "ELIJAH"
BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.
Price One Shilling.

*TEN TRANSCRIPTIONS
FROM
GOUNOD'S "MORS ET VITA"
BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.

*TWELVE SKETCHES
COMPOSED BY
BATTISON HAYNES.

*HUNGARIAN DANCES
TRANSCRIBED BY
SIEGFRIED JACOBY.

*NINE TRANSCRIPTIONS
FROM SULLIVAN'S "GOLDEN LEGEND"
BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.

*SIX MORCEAUX DE SALON
COMPOSED BY
JOACHIM RAFF.

*SIX SONATAS
COMPOSED BY
ARCANGELO CORELLI.
EDITED BY
ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.
Price Three Shillings and Sixpence.

*EIGHT
NATIONAL MELODIES
ARRANGED BY
SIEGFRIED JACOBY.

*NINE TRANSCRIPTIONS
FROM GOUNOD'S "REDEMPTION"
BY
BERTHOLD TOURS.

*TWELVE EASY PIECES
COMPOSED BY
ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.

*TWELVE
CHARACTERISTIC PIECES
COMPOSED BY
J. JACQUES HAAKMAN.

TEN PIECES
COMPOSED BY
ARNOLD DOLMETSCH.

*Albums marked * may also be had arranged for Violin and Pianoforte.*

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES.

SHORT CANTATAS
RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

PERFORMED BY THE HIGHBURY PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

THE PIED PIPER OF HAMELIN
BY ROBERT BROWNING
SET TO MUSIC
FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
BY
RICHARD H. WALTHEW.

Price Two Shillings.

THE BLACK KNIGHT
CANTATA FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA
The Poem by Uhland; translated by Longfellow
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY EDWARD ELGAR.

Price Two Shillings.

THE SONG OF THE WESTERN MEN
BALLAD FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA
Words by Rev. S. Hawker
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY
G. R. BETJEMANN.

Price One Shilling.

ODE TO THE WEST WIND
Poem by Shelley
Set to Music for Tenor Solo, Chorus, and Orchestra
BY
CHARLES WOOD.

Price One Shilling.

THE BIRTH OF SONG
CANTATA FOR SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
Poem by Lewis Morris
SET TO MUSIC BY
ROSALIND F. ELLICOTT.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

THE COTTER'S SATURDAY NIGHT
Poem by Robert Burns
SET TO MUSIC BY
A. C. MACKENZIE.

Price Two Shillings. Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.

SUMMER ON THE RIVER
CANTATA FOR FEMALE VOICES
THE WORDS WRITTEN BY
SHAPCOTT WENSLEY
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY
FREDERIC H. COWEN.

Price Two Shillings. Tonic Sol-fa (in the Press).

THE BATTLE OF THE BALTIC
Poem by Campbell
SET TO MUSIC BY
C. V. STANFORD.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

PERFORMED AT THE ORATORY, BROMPTON.

MASS IN G MAJOR
FOR SOLI, CHORUS, ORCHESTRA, AND ORGAN
COMPOSED BY
C. VILLIERS STANFORD.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

PERFORMED AT THE ROYAL ALBERT HALL.

EAST TO WEST
AN ODE
BY
ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE
Set to music for Chorus and Orchestra
BY
CHARLES VILLIERS STANFORD.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

WATER-LILIES
A FAIRY SONG
BY
FELICIA HEMANS
Deutsche Uebertragung von L. Klein.
SET TO MUSIC BY
ED. SACHS.

Price One Shilling.

THE
LAY OF THE BROWN ROSARY
CANTATA
For Soprano and Contralto Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra
Words by
ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY
ETHEL M. BOYCE.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

YOUNG LOCHINVAR
BALLAD
By SIR WALTER SCOTT
SET TO MUSIC
FOR BARITONE SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
BY
ETHEL M. BOYCE.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

PRAISE TO THE HOLIEST
MOTET
FOR SOPRANO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
The words by Cardinal Newman
SET TO MUSIC BY
H. J. EDWARDS.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

ELYSIUM
CANTATA
FOR SOPRANO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
Poem by Mrs. Hemans
SET TO MUSIC BY
ROSALIND F. ELLICOTT.

Price One Shilling.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

ALTO WANTED. £10. Apply, Friday, 8.30, St. Mary's, Berkeley Square, W.

TENOR (good reader, but not necessarily soloist) WANTED, for St. Cuthbert's, Earl's Court. £15 per annum. Apply to Lieut.-Colonel Douglas, 70, Warwick Road, Earl's Court, S.W.

TENOR REQUIRED, for St. Barnabas, Bell Street, Edgware Road. Salary, £20. Apply, by letter, to the Choirmaster, Mr. W. S. Hoyte, 68, Boundary Road, N.W.

TENOR and BASS WANTED, for St. Augustine's Church, Queen's Gate, S.W. Address, stating terms, Mr. Lissant, 33, Paultons Square, S.W.

WANTED, TENOR and BASS VOICES for Nonconformist Church, Bromley, Kent. Small salary offered. Apply, P., 152, High Street, Bromley, Kent.

BRISTOL CATHEDRAL.—VACANCY for a BASS (not Baritone). Salary, £70, with an additional £5 annually reserved for a bonus to be given (conditionally) on the termination of service. Two days a week "off duty." Only those need apply who have really good Bass voices, are thoroughly competent soloists, are able to read music at sight with facility, and have had some experience in Cathedral music. The Lay Clerks are expected to obtain other employment in the City. Candidates must send testimonials, stating age, trade or profession, and all particulars, to the Rev. the Precentor, before October 15.

SUNDAY DUTY.—MISS MAUD LESLIE, A.L.A.M. (Soprano) desires a permanent ENGAGEMENT in Church or Chapel Choir; or could deputise. Experienced leader. Highest references. 41, Crystal Palace Road, Dulwich, S.E.

YOUNG LADY (Contralto) is seeking ENGAGEMENT in CHOIR in or near London. Experienced; high testimonials. C. F., St. Andrew's Club, Tavistock Place, W.C.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED, for Clacton-on-Sea Church. Salary, £25. Musical Service. Pianoforte pupils may be obtained at the Schools. Address, The Vicar.

HONORARY ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER. Would gentleman give services to small Chapel, Edgware Road? Good choir. Rev., 28, Alma Square, St. John's Wood.

SOUTH PLACE INSTITUTE, Finsbury, E.C.—The Committee would be glad to hear of an Organist willing to play for a short time before Sunday afternoon Free Lectures, in return for which permission to practise on organ can be had. Also any one willing to assist with vocal music. Apply to Hon. Sec., Music Committee, South Place Chapel.

TO ORGAN STUDENTS.—Use of good 3-manual ORGAN given in return for services as Tenor in Choir. Good musical service. Eng. Presbyterian Church. North London. Address, F. C. O., 44, Highbury Place, N.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER, late Deputy, London Church, seeks APPOINTMENT. Moderate salary. Accustomed to full choral services and 3-manual organ. References. Sigma, 36, Lower Street, Kettering.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER, A.C.O., desires RE-APPOINTMENT. Ten years' experience. Excellent testimonials. Communicant. Choral Services, good organ. Associate, 8, Richmond Street, Plaistow, E.

ORGANIST, &c., desires POST in or near London. Moderate stipend. Excellent testimonials. Anglican Service. E., 51, Cumberland Street, Pimlico, S.W.

ENGAGEMENT as an ASSISTANT-ORGANIST, or Assistant in Music Shop. Apply, R. Evans, 45, Broad Street, Ross, Herefordshire.

WANTED, SITUATION as ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER, in or near London. Good references. Write, D. D., Willing's Advertising Offices, 162, Piccadilly, W.

A YOUNG MAN requires POSITION as VOLUNTARY ORGANIST. If necessary could take Choirmaster's position as well. All particulars, with references, to be had of E. S. B., 7, College Place, Camden Town, N.W.

ORGAN and CHOIR APPOINTMENT WANTED. South of London preferred. Long experience, highest testimonials as to choir training, &c. Choral Services, Celebrations, &c. Address, H., care of Mr. Crawford, 2, Norfolk House, Strand, W.C.

WANTED, immediately, an experienced and reliable TUNER. One used to repairs and general work. Permanent situation. Apply, Newman and Sons, Newport, Mon.

WANTED, TUNER and REPAIRER of Pianos, American Organs, and Harmoniums, for large town in Midlands. State age, experience, references, and salary, to S. B., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

WANTED, PIANOFORTE REPAIRER, REGULATOR, and TUNER, &c. At the middle or end of October, a thoroughly competent man is required by a firm in the country. Must understand American Organs, &c., and have good references. A permanent situation to a good all-round man. State salary required, and address, B., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

WANTED, a thoroughly competent PIANOFORTE TUNER. Must have first-class references. Send photo and state salary required to Duck, Son and Pinker, Pulteney Bridge, Bath.

PIANOFORTE TUNER WANTED (first class), for the North of Scotland. Enclose testimonials and photo. Apply, S. Z., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

FOR COUNTRY WORK.—A good TUNER and REPAIRER WANTED; age, about 25. One who understands American Organs and Harmoniums, and has had a Factory experience, preferred. Must be steady, with exceptional references. Apply, stating salary required, to Arthur Wood, Redhill.

TUNER, of Gentlemanly address, WANTED, for a permanency in first-class business in Scotland. Apply, with photo and references, to M. O. N. S., Novello and Co., 1, Berners St., W.

WANTED, as PRINCIPAL TUNER, a first-class responsible man, with good testimonials, in a good provincial firm in the South of England. Permanency. Apply, with photo, stating salary required, to Trichord, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

ASSISTANT-SALESMAN WANTED. Must be experienced, reliable man, able to take charge of the Music and Small Goods Counter. Permanency. South of England. Apply, with photo, stating salary required, to Music, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

MUSIC TRADE.—ASSISTANT WANTED, for Small Goods Department. Wages about 10s. Experience necessary. State last position, age, &c. Letter marked "Application," Crane and Sons, Scotland Road, Liverpool.

TUNERS and TEACHERS, anywhere, may increase their incomes. State subjects. Prospectus sent. Mutual, 64, High Street, Notting Hill Gate, London.

FIRST-CLASS PIANOFORTE TUNER desires RE-ENGAGEMENT. Apply, by letter, to Harmony, 23, Sackville Street, W.

FIRST-CLASS TUNER seeks RE-ENGAGEMENT. Well up in Harmoniums and American Organs, also in country work. Address, T., 1, Larch Villa, Barbourne, Worcester.

PIANOFORTE TUNER (20) requires SITUATION in Music Warehouse. Good pianist. Slight knowledge of sheet trade. Lee, 173, Pentonville Road, N.

PRACTICAL TUNER, 15 years' experience with best houses, desires ENGAGEMENT, for whole or part time, in London or neighbourhood. Address, Hammer, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

TUNER (good) desires SITUATION. First-class out-door experience; small repairs. Understands Organs, Harmoniums, Book-keeping, and Trade generally. Steady, reliable, married. Aged 34. Tuner, care of Moyus, 200, Old Street, London.

TUNER (good) desires SITUATION in November, in London. Understands Harmoniums and American Organs. First-class references. 5 years in present situation. G. G., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

TUNER desires SITUATION. 2½ years' experience. Pianist and Organist. Well recommended. Address, White, Schools, Marden, Kent.

TUNER and REPAIRER seeks ENGAGEMENT. 25 years' experience. Tuner, 73, Cullen Street, Smithdown Road, Liverpool.

TUNER requires SITUATION. Factory and country experience. Good references. Apply, A. D., 119, Hanover Street, Sheffield.

FIRST-CLASS TUNER (out-door) seeks PERMANENCY. Ten years' factory and country experience. Understands American Organs. Aged 26. 40, Elm Grove, Southsea.

TUNER wants ENGAGEMENT as IMPROVER. Knowledge of Sheet Music and Small Goods. W. M. L., 39, Benbow Road, Hammersmith, W.

TUNER and REPAIRER seeks ENGAGEMENT. Good all-round experience. W. R., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

PIANOFORTE TUNER seeks permanent SITUATION. Knowledge of Harmonium and American Organ work. Address, A. K., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

TUNER, with knowledge of Repairs, &c., requires SITUATION. Can play at sight, and has had experience in the Sheet Music and Counter Trade. Apply at Daws's Pianoforte Warehouse, Dorking.

WANTED, by a Young Lady (21), SITUATION in MUSIC SHOP in Town. Good Pianist. Fair knowledge of the Trade. M. W., care of Mrs. Levette, Music Warehouse, Union Court, Old Broad Street, City.

YOUNG LADY requires SITUATION in a MUSIC and MUSICAL INSTRUMENT SHOP. Would give time. Knowledge of piano, and reference. To live in preferred. B., 17, York Place, Scarborough.

AS MANAGER.—Advertiser (32) wishes to CHANGE from present APPOINTMENT. Satisfactory reasons for doing so. Over fifteen years' experience. Pianos, organs, music, and small goods. Excellent references. Full particulars of L. M., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

AS MANAGER.—SITUATION DESIRED, by capable BUSINESS MAN who is also thoroughly experienced Tuner. First-class references. Presto, Novello & Co., 1, Berners St., W.

MANAGER.—WANTED, RE-ENGAGEMENT as MANAGER or SALESMAN in Pianoforte, Music, and Small Goods Warehouse. Good Pianist and Violinist. Excellent testimonial and references. P. J., 84, De Beauvoir Road, Reading, Berks.

SITUATION WANTED, as MUSICSELLER'S ASSISTANT. 10 years' London references. Aged 25. F., 28, Beaconsfield Terrace, Chandos Road, Stratford, E.

YOUTH wishes to LEARN TUNING. Would pay small premium. Had small experience; weekly wage wanted; town or country. F. L., Alphonse Cary, Clapham Junction, S.W.

YOUNG GENTLEMAN, of good appearance and address, requires SITUATION as SALESMAN, &c., in a Music Business. Advertiser is good all round instrumentalist, and has some knowledge of sheet music. Address, W. H., 61, Balfour Rd., Highbury, N.

YOUNG MAN wishes to enter a MUSIC BUSINESS. Plays Violin and Piano. Willing to give time to gain experience. Address, W., 9, Essex Street, Reading.

WANTED, by Young Man, just finished apprenticeship, SITUATION as IMPROVER to the Tuning and Repairing. Address, E. J., 2, Cambrian Road, Chester.

MUSIC ASSISTANT and BOOK-KEEPER requires RE-ENGAGEMENT in Music Warehouse. Nine years' experience in Sheet Music and Small Goods. Excellent references. Frank Woodland, 51, Castle Street, Reading.

HOME offered LADY. Pleasant rectory, 1½ hour London. No children; tennis; good piano and accompanist (Violin or Voice). £65. K. K., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—The Organ in the South London Organ Studio is now re-opened for practice after thorough renovation. 343, Coldharbour Lane, close to Brixton Station.

ORGAN PRACTICE (near City), 1s. per hour. Three manuals, C.O. pedals. Willis (from Minories), 45, Leman St., E.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—Three manuals; independent pedals. Terms, One Shilling per hour. Specification post-free. Blennerhasset's Studio, 1A, Vernon Street, King's Cross, W.C.

NEW ORGAN STUDIO, with Three-manual PIPE ORGAN, blown by water. Terms for Practice, 1s. per hour. At Smyth's Music Depôt, 54, London Road, Forest Hill, S.E.

CC ORGAN for SALE and HIRE, on easy terms of payment. Price very low. 3 manuals, 30 stops, 2 on pedals, 3 reeds. Apply, G. T., 23, Brunswick Street, Poplar.

SECOND-HAND CHURCH ORGANS for SALE.

No. 1.—Two-manual ORGAN, full compass: 5-stop great, 7-stop swell, pedal Bourdon, 3 couplers; in good order.

No. 2.—Two-manual ORGAN: Tenor C swell, 9 stops. To be sold to make room for larger Organ.

No. 3.—One-manual ORGAN: 7 stops, with handsome carved oak case.

Apply, NORMAN BROS. & BEARD, St. Stephen's Gates, Norwich.

ALBERT PALACE ORGAN.—Mr. EDWIN EVANS, Auctioneer, of Lavender Hill, S.W., has now received instructions to SELL this magnificent instrument by private treaty. Offers required immediately. Address as above.

MODERN CC ORGAN for SALE.—Two manuals, 18 stops. Great Organ: 8 stops; swell CC, 6 stops. Very fine 16-ft. tone; Bourdon Pedal Pipes, CCC to E; 3 couplers, 7 combination pedals. Suitable for hall, chapel, or small church. Perfect condition. Handsome mahogany front. For further particulars, address, Organist, 139A, Alexandra Road, N.W.

ORGAN, CC, Two-manual, for Sale, cheap. 5 great, 5 swell, Bourdon ped., 4 couplers. Apply, E. O. Yorston, Organ Builder, Victoria Works, Durham Street, Kennington Oval, S.E.

ORGAN, with two Manuals, 19 stops, modern, built 1881. ORGAN, 12 stops, new; now building in works. W. E. Richardson & Sons, Central Organ Works, Hulme, Manchester.

PEDAL ORGAN, by Estey and Co., for SALE cheap. It has 11 stops, knee swell, side blower, and stool. Price, 30 guineas only; original price, 70 guineas. A drawing and all particulars of this organ may be had post-free. W. White, Grantham.

ORGAN.—BELL AMERICAN ORGAN. Ornamental pipe top, 2 manuals, 23 stops. New; list price, 175 Gns.; cash price, £80. C. E. Mercer, Derby Road, Farnworth, Widnes.

ORGANS.—Two manuals, 12 stops, full compass pedals; One-manual, 3 stops and pedals. To be seen at any time. Haywood, 179, Drummond Street, Euston. Established 1872.

ORGAN for SALE. Now in use, Oxted Church. Must be cleared at once. Cheap. Apply, Henry Speechly and Son, St. Mark's Road, Dalston, N.E.

BROADWOOD "Short Drawing-Room GRAND PIANO" in Walnut, 60 guineas; cost 165 guineas. Also Collard and Collard Short Grand, 45 guineas; cost 110 guineas. Both seven octaves, trichord, modern iron-framed, little used, and condition as new. Can be seen at Mr. Fieldwick's, Organist, St. John's, 108, Upper Richmond Road, Putney (near Railway Station).

95-GUINEA Metal Short Walnut GRAND, by Collard & Collard. 7 octaves, in excellent condition, £40 cash. Also a 7-octave Erard Grand, 30 Guineas cash; and several others on view at Beringer's, 82, High Road, Streatham (near Public Library).

WANTED, Short Drawing-room GRAND PIANO (Broadwood). Walnut, 7 octaves, full trichord. Tone and touch must be perfect, also its condition. State lowest price for cash. Professor, 31, Ashburton Road, Southsea.

120 New and Second-hand Pianofortes by the leading makers, Harps by Erard, Organs, Harmoniums, and other Musical Instruments, Books, Paintings, &c.

DEBENHAM, STORR and SONS will Sell by Auction, at their Mart, King Street, Covent Garden, on Monday, October 2, at Twelve o'clock, Wednesday, the 4th, and Saturday, the 7th, Surgical, Musical, Optical, and other Instruments, valuable Bronzes, Paintings, Books, and Curiosities.

On Tuesday, the 3rd, Books in all classes of Literature, many in handsome bindings.

On Thursday, the 5th, modern Harps by Erard; Pianofortes by Broadwood, Collard, Holdernesse, Erard, and other well-known makers; American Organs, Harmoniums, Musical Boxes, Violoncellos, Guitars, rare Enamels, China and Bronzes, and other interesting items.

On Friday, the 6th, Gallery and Cabinet Paintings, Proof Engravings, Drawings, &c.

On Monday, the 9th, Pianofortes, Harmoniums, &c., rare China, Miniatures, Bronzes, Telescopes, Microscopes, Opera and Marine Glasses, Carvings.

On Tuesday, the 10th, the second portion of the Collection of Paintings.

On Wednesday, the 11th, and following day, Optical, Surgical, and Scientific Instruments, Guitars, Banjos, Clarinets, and other Musical Instruments, Paintings, Drawings, and Miscellanies.

Ten Days' Sale.—On View the day before and morning of Sale. Catalogues Post-free.

ORGAN PEDALS for PIANOFORTES, from £6 15s. to £7 15s. Pedals and Action complete are supplied, as above, by the inventor, Wm. Chinnock Dyer, Beresford Road, Norbiton, S.W. Send post card for list, &c.

HARP.—Cost £120. Fully strung; good working order. Beautiful instrument, cover, and travelling case; taken from customer. £23. Also much used Violin, case, and bow, supposed English. 35s. Tuner, 6, Arthur Road, Holloway, N.

FOR SALE.—Two fine Violoncellos, B. Banks and J. Betts (guaranteed). H. C. B., Novello & Co., 1, Berners St., W.

CELLO for SALE.—Dan. Achat. Stadlman, Vienna. Apply to F. R., 63, Petherton Road, Highbury, N.

VIOLIN STRINGS.—Luigi Fiorini's renowned tested Roman Strings, as used by the greatest artists, are the most reliable Italian Strings. Sample set of three, 2s., post-free, of sole agent, F. Williams, 129, Queen's Road, Finsbury Park, London, N.

HYDRAULIC ENGINES for Organ Blowing. Blennerhasset's Patent "Perfect" Prize Medal Engines are the best. 1B, Vernon Street, King's Cross Road, London, W.C.

"TOWER" ORGAN WORKS.—Specifications, Rebuilding, Repairs, Voicing and Tuning by experienced Artists. Pipes and Fittings. Second-hand Organs and Materials. T. R. Willis (from Minories), 45, Leman Street, London, E.

PIANOFORTE and MUSIC BUSINESS for SALE. Established 18 years. Ill-health cause of sale. Populous district, market town, capital position, principal street. Excellent Tuning and Hiring connection. Stock (could be reduced) and fixtures at a valuation. R. G., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

ORGAN STUDENTS SHOULD TRY

RUMMENS'

Organ Pedal Attachment for Pianofortes

AS ADOPTED BY THE COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS.

Awarded Medal of Honour at the International Inventions Exhibition, London, 1885.

Equal to Organ Practice. Testimonials from all the chief Organists of the day.

Write for particulars to H. J. Rummens, 47, Church Rd., Brixton, S.W.

ORGAN PEDALS to PIANOS.—New method of Attachment by TUBULAR PNEUMATIC. This action surpasses all mechanical actions for prompt and Organ-like Touch. It is less expensive, easier to attach, and does not injure the most delicate Pianoforte. Prospectus, with full description and price lists, on application to Norman Bros. and Beard, Organ Works, Norwich.

TUNERS, REPAIRERS, &c., requiring Tuning Hammers, Kits (guaranteed), or TOOLS of any description, Reeds, Fittings, Materials. Please send for my complete Price List. Karl Wagenhaus, 2, City Road, Hulme, Manchester.

VIOLIN STRINGS. Finest imported. Twenty years' reputation. Sixpence each; sample packet of three, 1s. 1d., post-free. Alphonse Cary, 87, Oxford Street, London, W.

T. R. WILLIS (from Minories, est. 1827), Maker and Importer of Brass and Wood Instruments, Harmonium Reeds, Strings, Wire, Violins, Concertinas, &c. 45, Leman Street, E.

CASSOCKS. — 500 New, Tailor-made, all sizes, Black and Violet; very cheap. Also Surplices. Surplice, The Church Agency, Lombard House, E.C.

IMPORTANT TO MUSICSELLERS. — Having the largest and most varied stock in Europe, orders received in the morning are executed the same day. Terms and Catalogues on application.

AUTHORS' WORKS CORRECTED, REVISED, and PRINTED without delay, on exceptionally low terms. Estimates given on receipt of MSS.
London: B. Williams, 19, Paternoster Row, E.C.

MUSIC COPIED and DRAWN from the Full Score, with proper cues for the Engraver; also Songs or other Pieces transposed, by J. Peck, 36, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

MSS.—SONGS, PIANOFORTE PIECES, &c., REVISED. Scholarly work. Satisfaction guaranteed. Prospectus free. F. Sommer, A.L.A.M., 14, Mardale Street, Shepherd's Bush, London.

TO ORGANISTS and Others.—We PRINT, by Autograph Process, Anthems, Services, and every description of Music and Circulars, on shortest notice and trifling cost. Specimens, scale of charges, post-free. Dinham, Blyth and Co., 28, Fenchurch Street, London, E.C. Established 1872.

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS. Dr. Horton Allison, 68, Nelson Street, Manchester.

Auction Rooms specially for the Sale of Musical Property.

MESSRS. PUTTICK and SIMPSON, Auctioneers, 7, Leicester Square, London, W.C., hold SPECIAL SALES of MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS on or about the 20th of every month. Sales of Musical Libraries, Music Plates, and Copyrights, Trade Stocks, Manufacturers' Plant, &c., are held as occasion may require. Valuations for Probate or Legacy Duty, or for Public or Private Sale. Terms on application.

KELLY and CO., PIANOFORTE, AMERICAN ORGAN, and HARMONIUM MAKERS (to Her Majesty), 14 and 16, Mortimer Street, London, W.
Kelly and Co.'s Instruments are the only ones of English manufacture that gained any award at the DUBLIN and PARIS EXHIBITIONS; also PRIZE MEDAL, INVENTIONS EXHIBITION, 1885; GOLD MEDAL and DIPLOMA of HONOUR, YORK EXHIBITION, 1889.
A LIBERAL DISCOUNT for SCHOOLS, CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS, and the PROFESSION.
500 SECOND-HAND PIANOFORTES by the leading Makers, at all times, very cheap. NEW PIANOS (warranted) in elegant Walnut or Rosewood cases, from 19 Guineas.
The Trade, Merchants, and Shippers supplied.
Sole Importers of the celebrated HERMANN PIANOS, CHEAPEST and BEST IN THE TRADE, as recommended by Signor Tito Mattei, the late Sir Julius Benedict, the Abbé Liszt, and others.

D'ALMAINE'S
PIANOS AND ORGANS
GREAT SALE.
Dealers and Professionals specially invited.
Large Discounts to Trade and Profession.
D'Almaine and Co. (Established 108 years), 91, Finsbury Pavement, E.C.

THE OLD FIRM.
P. CONACHER & CO.,
Organ Builders,
SPRINGWOOD WORKS,
HUDDERSFIELD.
TWO GOLD MEDALS.

ESTABLISHED 1843.
GEO. ROGERS & SONS'
PIANOFORTES.
(Makers to the Emperor of Russia.)
NOBLE IN TONE.
HANDSOME IN APPEARANCE.
UNRIVALLED FOR DURABILITY.
"The most PERFECT PIANOS of the day."
PIANOS
FOR INDIA AND THE COLONIES.
ALSO YACHT PIANOS.
GEO. ROGERS & SONS,
60, BERNERS ST., OXFORD ST., LONDON, W.

NICHOLSON AND CO.,
ORGAN BUILDERS,
PALACE YARD, WORCESTER.
(ESTABLISHED 1841.)
Specifications and Estimates sent free.

TO VOCALISTS.—SONGS by Cowen, Tosti, Pinsuti, Tours, Moir, Sullivan, Molloy, Blumenthal, &c. 4d. to 8d. each. List sent. Address, B., 411, Edgware Road, London, W.

Just Published.
SIX EASY PIECES
FOR VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE
COMPOSED BY
H. GROSSHEIM.
(Op. 24.)
Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.
London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

Just Published.
BOOK 16
SOFT VOLUNTARIES
FOR THE
ORGAN
COMPOSED BY
GEORGE CALKIN.
Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.
London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

TWELVE NEW

CAROLS FOR CHRISTMASTIDE

WRITTEN BY

SHAPCOTT WENSLEY

SET TO MUSIC BY

J. BARNBY.
J. F. BRIDGE.
EATON FANING.
MYLES B. FOSTER.
G. M. GARRETT.
BATTISON HAYNES.
EMMA MUNDELLA.
JOHN STAINER.
BERTHOLD TOURS.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.
Tonic Sol-fa, Eightpence. Words only, Twopence.

Each Carol may be had separately, price 1½d.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

TWELVE OLD CAROLS

ENGLISH AND FOREIGN

ADAPTED AND ARRANGED BY

SIR JOHN STAINER,
Mus. Doc., Oxon.

Contents:

Besançon Carol—"Shepherds! shake off your drowsy sleep."
Tyrolese Carol—"Come, shepherds, come! shake off your sleep."
Poitou Carol (Lucas Le Moigne, 1520)—"Now sing we all full sweetly."
Arpajon Carol (Sixteenth Century)—"The good men all of Chastres."
Carol of the Birds (Bas-Quercy)—"Whence comes this rush of wings afar?"
Carol of the Flowers (Bas-Quercy)—"Come with us, sweet flowers, and worship Christ the Lord."
Gascon Carol—"Infant, so gentle, so pure, and so sweet!"
Carol of Basse-Normandie—"O Night, peaceful and blest!"
Flemish Carol—"Of the Father's love begotten."
The Golden Carol (English)—"We saw a light shine out afar."
English (1661)—"Christmas hath made an end."
English (1661)—"Now farewell, good Christmas."

PRICE ONE SHILLING.
Tonic Sol-fa, Sixpence. Words only, One Penny.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

POPULAR CHRISTMAS CAROLS
ARRANGED FOR

TWO-PART SINGING

With an ad libitum Pianoforte Accompaniment
BY
W. G. McNAUGHT.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.
Tonic Sol-fa, price Sixpence. Words only, Three-halfpence.

Contents:

Good King Wenceslas.
Christmas hath made an end.
Good Christian men, rejoice.
God rest you merry, gentlemen.
The first Nowell.
A Virgin unspotted.
The Wassail Song.
I hear along our streets.
The seven joys of Mary.
The Boar's Head Carol.
Hark! how sweetly the bells.
The holly and the ivy.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

NEW AND OLD

THE WORDS EDITED BY THE
REV. HENRY RAMSDEN BRAMLEY, M.A.
THE MUSIC EDITED BY
JOHN STAINER, M.A., Mus. Doc.

THREE SERIES (MUSIC & WORDS), ONE SHILLING EACH.

Cloth, gilt, 2s. Three Series, complete, cloth, gilt, 4s.; or, in Seventy numbers, 1d. each.

Words only, each Series, 1½d.; or, complete, 4d.; cloth, 6d.

First Series, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation, 1s.; or, in separate numbers, 1d. each.

A Selection from the above (24) for Men's Voices, 2s.

Illustrated Edition (First and Second Series), handsomely bound in cloth, gilt, 7s. 6d.

Library Edition, with Historical Preface, Roxburgh binding, 7s. 6d.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

CHRISTMASTIDE CAROLS

HARMONISED BY

GEORGE C. MARTIN.

FIRST SERIES.—Old Breton Melodies.
SECOND SERIES.—Old French Melodies.

PRICE SIXPENCE EACH SERIES.
Words only, One Penny each series.

Contents of First Series.

Hail! Christmas Bells.
O'er her Child the Virgin weeps.
The stars are bright.
On this day was born.
Glad hymns with one accord.
Outside the city gates.
On Asia Minor's sunny shore.
Across the desert sands by night.

Contents of Second Series.

Round the Virgin gently sleeping.
In the golden lands afar.
The sombre shadows darken fall.
The Circumcision.
The Shepherds glad.
Poising bright on golden wings.
A legend of the flight.
Merrily ring the Christmas bells.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

FOUR

CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

No. 1. The Anthem of Peace .. .. J. Barnby.
„ 2. On Christmas Morn .. .. A. C. Mackenzie.
„ 3. Across the desert sands by night .. .. G. C. Martin.
„ 4. Shepherds! shake off your drowsy sleep .. .. J. Stainer.

PRICE THREE-HALFPENCE.
Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence. Words only, Three Shillings per 100.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

CAROLS FOR CHRISTMASTIDE

SET TO ANCIENT MELODIES
BY THE
REV. THOMAS HELMORE, M.A.
Words, principally in imitation of the original,
BY THE
REV. J. M. NEALE, D.D.

	s.	d.
18mo, Melody only	0	6
„ „ „ in packets of 50	20	0
„ Compressed Score	1	0
Folio, with Pianoforte Accompaniment	4	6
Words only	0	1½
„ „ in packets of 50	5	0

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

NEW HARVEST ANTHEMS, &c.

By CALEB SIMPER.

Interesting, attractive, popular, easy, melodious, and effective.

*He watereth the hills. Just published. 12th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
Contains bright Choruses, with Solos for Bass and Soprano (or Tenor). The concluding Chorus is very vigorous, and has some pretty and effective imitation in the parts, without being difficult. Band Parts are also issued. Particulars and prices on title-page of Anthem.
*While the Earth remaineth. New. 7th 1,000 .. .. 3d.
All Thy works shall praise Thee. 8th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
Te Deum, in G. 7th Edit. 4d. Te Deum, in F. 23rd Edit. 3d.
Celebrated Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, in F. 47th Edit. 4d.
Sung at Choral Festivals in Lismore, Derry, and Downpatrick Cathedrals; also at Barrow, Skegness, Great Budworth, East Devon, Sleaford, &c.
Favourite Magnificat and N. dim., in E flat. 16th Edition.. 4d.
Sung at a Choral Festival in Llandaff Cathedral.
New Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, in G. 6th Edition .. 4d.
Easy Holy Communion Service, in E flat. 8th 1,000 .. .. 4d.
*Easy Holy Communion Service, in G. New. 2nd 1,000 .. 4d.
Easy Holy Communion Service, in F. 6th Edition .. .. 6d.
Each Service is complete, with Agnus Dei and Benedictus.
Festal Te Deum, in A flat (Chants). 5th 1,000 .. .. .. 2d.
O how amiable. Dedication Festivals, &c. 3rd 1,000 .. .. 3d.

Those marked (*) are also published in Tonic Sol-fa.

London: Weekes and Co., 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.
Chicago, U.S.A.: Clayton F. Summy, 174-176, Wabash Avenue.

Third Thousand.

WHILE THE EARTH REMAINETH. Anthem

for Harvest-tide. By W. H. Holloway, L.Mus. T.C.L. Quartet and Chorus. Price Threepence.
London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

CHURCH MUSIC

BY

EDWARD BUNNETT, Mus.D., Cantab.

ANTHEMS.

Harvest.—"Blessed be Thou." Four voices .. .. .. 3d.
" " " Tonic Sol-fa .. .. .. 1½d.
Harvest Hymn.—"Sing to the Lord" .. .. 1d.
"I was glad." Four voices .. .. 3d.
" Tonic Sol-fa .. .. 1½d.
"The Lord is my Shepherd" .. .. 3d.

SERVICES.

Te Deum laudamus in E. Chant form .. .. 3d.
Benedictus and Jubilate in E " " .. .. 3d.
Tonic Sol-fa.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in F .. .. 1½d.
" " " A .. .. 1½d.
" " " E .. .. 1½d.

HYMNS.

Twenty-four Original Hymn Tunes .. .. 6d.
Twelve Original Hymn Tunes .. .. 3d.
Amen (on Card) .. .. 1d.

ORGAN.

Three Short Organ Pieces .. .. net 2s.
Larghetto in A flat major.
Allegretto Pastorale in A major.
Andante con Moto in F major.
Minuetto .. .. net 1s. 6d.
Twelve Short and Easy Pieces .. .. " 2s. 0d.
Largo in E flat .. .. " 1s. 0d.
Ave Maria .. .. " 1s. 6d.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

CHURCH MUSIC by Felix W. Morley, M.A.,

Mus.B. Service in A:—*Te Deum, 4d.; Benedictus, 3d.; *Magnificat and *Nunc dimittis, 3d. Also, Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in F, price 4d. Those marked * have been sung at Festivals of Parish Choirs.
London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

Published June, 1893.

THE OFFERTORY SENTENCES (complete, without the repetition of words). Set to music by G. Gaffe. Price 1s. Published by Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners St., W., from whom copies may be obtained. Specimen copy sent post-free for eight stamps. Address, Mr. G. Gaffe, 4, London Road, St. Albans, Herts.

NEW CHURCH MUSIC. By J. Charles B.

Tirbutt, Mus. Bac.
EIGHT EASY OFFERTORY SENTENCES. Price Sixpence.

New Anthem for All Saints' Day.—THE RIGHTEOUS LIVE FOR EVERMORE. Price Sixpence.
"Perfectly easy of execution throughout and by no means ineffective. Commended to the notice of choirs of even moderate capacity."—Monthly Journal of I.S.M. for September.
London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

CHRISTMAS CAROL.—JOY TO THE WORLD

IS COME. By F. M. Strutt-Cavell. Solo and Chorus. Simple and effective. Price Twopence.
London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

NEW CHRISTMAS ANTHEM

By CALEB SIMPER

BE JOYFUL, O EARTH

Both Notations. Staff, 4d.; Sol-fa, 2d.
Band Parts also issued; ready about October 10.

New Anthem by Caleb Simper for ALL SAINTS' DAY

THE LAMB SHALL LEAD THEM

Old Notation only. Price Threepence.
also

SIX NEW CHRISTMAS CAROLS

Nos. 13 to 18, 1d. each. Now Ready.

The whole series of Carols, Nos. 1 to 18, are published in both Notations, and Band Parts may be had of all. For particulars of Band Parts and words only, see title page.
London: Weekes and Co., 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.

SEND for SPECIMENS of the cheapest and most popular SELECTION of CAROLS published. These Carols were sung at about 2,000 Churches, Christmas, 1892.
Church Bells says: "We cannot too highly recommend this excellent selection."
Dr. H. A. Harding, Mus. Doc., Oxon., F.C.O., says: "Words and music are alike admirable."
Dr. E. W. Taylor, Mus. Doc., Oxon., F.C.O., says: "Your Carols were much appreciated at both church and schools."

CHRISTMAS CAROLS
Edited by T. Herbert Spinney, M.A., Oxon., F.C.O.

First Series.

1. The Christmas Rose .. .. .. T. H. Spinney, M.A., F.C.O.
2. Christians, carol sweetly .. .. Walter Spinney.
3. Alleluia! .. .. Frank Spinney, F.C.O.
4. Hallowed Day .. .. T. H. Spinney, M.A., F.C.O.
5. The snow lay on the ground .. .. .. Frank Spinney, F.C.O.
6. It is Christmas-tide .. .. Frank Spinney, F.C.O.
7. Our King hath come .. .. .. T. H. Spinney, M.A., F.C.O.

Second Series.

1. Brightest and best .. .. Frank Spinney, F.C.O.
2. To Bethlehem's city .. .. .. T. H. Spinney, M.A., F.C.O.
3. Slumber, O Child .. .. H. Ernest Nichol, Mus. Bac., Oxon.
4. The Prince of Peace .. .. .. T. H. Spinney, M.A., F.C.O.
5. Choirs of Angels .. J. L. Gregory, Mus. Bac., Dunelm, F.C.O.
6. The Celestial Flower .. .. Henry Knight.
7. The night watch .. .. .. T. H. Spinney, M.A., F.C.O.

Price 2d. each series; or, in separate numbers (superior edition), 1d. each.
Sol-fa edition, in separate numbers only, 1d. each.
Words only, either series, 2s. 6d. per 100.
Sole London Agents: Weekes & Co., 14, Hanover Street.
Chicago, U.S.A.: Clayton F. Summy, 174-176, Wabash Avenue.
Ballarat, Australia: William King, 10, Drummond Street.

Ready about October 14.

THE PRINCE OF PEACE

Price Threepence.
New Christmas Anthem.
By EDWYN A. CLARE.
Very melodious, effective, and not difficult.
London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in F.

By Arthur Carnall. Price 4d.
London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

PLAIN-SONG MUSIC. Edited by Rev. H. A.

Walker, M.A. Missa in Duplicibus, 3d.; Missa de Angelis, 3d.; Organ, 2s.; Missa Regia, 3d.; Organ, 2s.; Dumont's Mass, No. 2 (Easy, like Merbecke's Service), 3d.; Organ, 2s.; Te Deum Chant, from Alfieri, 3d.; Dies Iræ, Sequence for Solo Voices and Chorus in Faux Bourdon, 9d.; The Holy Communion, Rules for Chanting Collects, Epistles, and Gospels, and other music; Organ for Sursum Corda, Pater Noster, Versicles and Responses for Matins and Evensong, 9d.
London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

Just Published.

TE DEUM LAUDAMUS

IN D MAJOR
Composed, by request, for the Festival of the Three Choirs at Worcester, 1893, by HUGH BLAIR.

Price Sixpence.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

Second Edition.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS. — For Treble Voices

(Unaccompanied). Arranged or composed by Rosamond Philpott. Price Fourpence.
London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES.—For SALE, several

GLEES and PART-SONGS. List sent if stamped envelope is enclosed. Charles Wilkes, Hon. Sec., Choral Society, Christchurch, Hants.

THE BRISTOL TUNE BOOK

EDITION 1891.

Containing 905 Tunes and Chants.

NOW READY.

THIRD SERIES, including Supplement 1881, containing 190 Tunes and 118 varieties of metre.

A COMPANION TO ALL HYMN BOOKS.

EDITION 1881.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 9.	Limp Cloth	4 0	No. 11.	Small Edition ..	3 0
„ 10.	Cloth Boards, red edges	5 0	„ 12.	Tonic Sol-fa ..	3 0

THIRD SERIES.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 13.	Limp Cloth ..	2 0	No. 16.	Tonic Sol-fa, limp cloth	1 6
„ 15.	Small Edition, limp cloth	1 6

COMPLETE EDITION, 1891.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 17.	Limp Cloth ..	5 0	No. 19.	Small Edition ..	3 6
„ 18.	Cloth Boards, red edges	6 0	„ 20.	Tonic Sol-fa ..	3 6

Communications and enquiries as to to copyright, and also as to supplying at reduced prices, may be addressed to the Bristol Publishers.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Bristol: W. AND F. MORGAN, Clare Street.
And all Booksellers and Musicsellers.

Price 3s. 6d., cloth, red edges.

THE TUNE BOOK, with the additional Tunes as used at ST. ALBAN'S, HOLBORN, containing nearly 270 Tunes, for Long, Common, Short, and Peculiar Metres; together with several Gregorian Hymns and Antiphons; the Eight Gregorian Tones; the Music of the Reproaches; the Seven Last Words; and Litany Tunes, &c. London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

FOR MALE VOICE CHOIR.—THE NATIONAL ANTHEM, price 4d.; JUBILEE ODE, price 6d. net. By GEORGE RISELEY.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Twenty-third Edition.

JOULE'S COLLECTION OF 527 CHANTS, 57 RESPONSES, &c. Reduced price, 4s. 6d., paper cover; 6s., limp cloth; separate vocal parts, 2s. each.—Tonic Sol-fa Notation, Score, 1s. 6d.
The Chants are selected with due reference to the position of the Reciting-note.

THE PSALTER, PROPER PSALMS, HYMNS, and CANTICLES. Pointed for Chanting by B. ST. J. B. JOULE. Large type, price 2s. 6d. This Psalter, having been collated with the Sealed Books, is free from the errors contained in all other pointed Psalters, through printing from the incorrect copies commonly sold by the Stationers.

Tenth Edition.

JOULE'S DIRECTORIUM CHORI ANGLICANUM. 18mo, price 1s.; in cloth, 1s. 6d.

Seventh Edition.

JOULE'S DIRECTORIUM CHORI ANGLICANUM. 4to, in cloth, elegant, price 7s. 6d.

Seventh Edition.

THE ORDER FOR THE HOLY COMMUNION. Harmonised on a Monotone in a very simple manner for Parochial use. By B. ST. J. B. JOULE. Price 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Fourth Thousand.

MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in E flat, by WILLIAM S. VINNING, Mus. Bac., Cantab. Price 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Third Thousand.

VESPER HYMN. To be sung after Evensong. Words and music by GEORGE KETT. "A very charming hymn-tune."—Sir John Stainer. On card. Price One Penny.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Words alone, for congregational use, One Shilling per hundred, of the AUTHOR, 100, Gordon Road, Nunhead, S.E.

THE

OFFICE FOR THE HOLY COMMUNION

(Including Benedictus qui venit and Agnus Dei)

SET TO MUSIC IN THE KEY OF A FLAT

BY

BASIL HARWOOD.

Price One Shilling.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

MUSIC

SUITABLE FOR USE AT THE

SERVICE OF HOLY MATRIMONY

ANTHEMS AND HYMNS.

	s.	d.
Blessed are all they that fear the Lord .. .. E. G. Monk	1	6
Vocal parts	1	0
Blessed are all they that fear the Lord .. Sidney Naylor	0	9
Except the Lord build the house .. .. F. A. G. Ouseley	0	6
Vocal parts	0	6
Father of Life. Hymn .. .. Jas. Turle	0	3
Father of life .. .. W. Creser	1	6
God, be merciful unto us .. .. .. S. S. Wesley
Octavo	0	3
Vocal parts	1	0
Folio	1	6
O God, Thou art worthy .. .. .. Arthur Sullivan
Vocal parts	1	0
Octavo	0	4
Tonic Sol-fa	0	1½
Folio	1	6
O Perfect Love (Anthem) .. .. J. Barnby	0	3
Ditto (Hymn) .. .. J. Barnby	0	1½
Holy Ghost, to earth descending .. .. Antonin Dvorák	0	4
There was a marriage in Cana of Galilee .. .. J. Stainer	0	3
Protect them, Almighty. Chorus .. .. .. J. Barnby	0	3

ORGAN MUSIC.

Nuptial March	B. Luard Selby	1	0
Wedding March (Gounod), No. 1.	Arranged by G. C. Martin	2	0
Wedding March, No. 2..	Charles Gounod	2	0
Wedding March (Mendelssohn)	.. Arranged by W. T. Best	2	0
Wedding March	Arranged by C. E. Willing	1	0
March in "Tannhäuser"	Arranged by F. Archer	2	0
Processional Wedding March	Henry R. Bird	1	0
A Wedding Piece	A. C. Mackenzie	1	0
The Bride's March ("Rebekah," J. Barnby)	Arr. by James Shaw	1	0
March in B flat	E. Silas	1	0
Grand March ("Lohengrin," Act III., Wagner) '..	W. Creser	1	0
Bridal Chorus ("Lohengrin," Wagner)	W. Creser	1	0
Wedding March	Composed by W. Creser	1	6

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE SERVICE

FOR THE

SOLEMNIZATION of HOLY MATRIMONY

AS USED IN

WESTMINSTER ABBEY

WITH A SPECIAL ANTHEM

COMPOSED BY

J. FREDERICK BRIDGE.

Mus. Doc., Oxon., Organist and Master of the Choristers.

Price Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

GILL'S EASY VOLUNTARIES.—"Messiah," "Judas," "Elijah," "Creation," "St. Paul." 1s. each set of twenty Voluntaries.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

COMPOSITIONS for the PIANOFORTE, by RALPH H. BELLAIRS, Organist of Bradfield College.
Twelve Lyrical Sketches. Two books. 2s. each. ROBT. COCKS & Co.
Strelinka, Capriccio. J. WILLIAMS.

Published by BREITKOPF and HÄRTEL, Leipzig and London, 54, Great Marlborough Street, W.

T. F. BORDONEL'S

COMPLETE BENEDICTION SERVICE, "THE LORETTO."

Sung at the Pro-Cathedral, Liverpool; Pro-Cathedral, Clifton, &c.
Complete score for Soli, Chorus, Harp, and Organ, 4s. net.
Complete vocal score, 7s. 6d. net.

PENTECOST MASS

Dedicated, by special permission, to the Right Rev. Bernard O'Reilly, D.D., Lord Bishop of Liverpool.
Complete score for Soli, Chorus, and Organ, 5s. net.
Complete vocal score, 2s. net.

FOR SALE.—153 VOCAL SCORES (128 Copies Old Notation, 25 Sol-fa), comprising the following works: 28 Cantata "Silvia," 54 Mendelssohn's "13th Psalm," 55 Gounod's Mass, 16 "Woman of Samaria," also 37 single scores of same work. All in good order. Apply, Richard Fortune, 76, Falmouth Road, Heaton, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

MODERN FOUR-PART SONGS
FOR MIXED VOICES.

With (ad lib.) Pianoforte Accompaniment. Quarto Size—Printed from Engraved Plates.

		Price Net. s.	d.
1.	As the sunshine to the flowers — W. G. Cusins	0	4
2.	Away, away to the summer woods — James Coward	0	6
3.	Children—"Come to me, O ye children" — Walter Maynard	0	6
4.	Lo! the peaceful shades of evening — Walter Maynard	0	6
5.	The dream .. .. .. Alice Mary Smith	0	6
6.	Golden slumbers—"Golden slumbers kiss your eyes" .. .. .. W. H. Cummings	0	4
7.	Oh, the merry May .. Mary Dowling	0	6
8.	Hurrah for Father Christmas .. G. W. Lyon	0	6
9.	Violet—"Brighter than the rays of morning" — Walter Maynard	0	6
10.	The hemlock tree .. .. Walter Maynard	0	6
11.	Venetian boat song .. W. G. Cusins	0	4
12.	Rock them, rock them—"Golden slumbers" — Alice Mary Smith	0	6
13.	Lover's melancholy .. Alice Mary Smith	0	4
14.	Still the angel stars are shining — Charles Gardner	0	6
15.	We are waiting by the river .. J. L. Hatton	0	4
16.	Vesper bells are softly pealing .. J. L. Hatton	0	4
17.	Sunshine .. .. A. H. D. Prendergast	0	6
18.	Lady wake—"Lady wake, the village chimes" — Walter Maynard	0	6
19.	Take thy banner ... .. James Coward	0	6
20.	Lovely spring is come again Emanuel Aguilar	0	6
21.	Fall on us, O night.. .. W. J. Westbrook	0	6
22.	Star that bringest home the bee W. J. Westbrook	0	4
23.	Queen of love .. .. Alice Mary Smith	0	6
24.	Hail, thou bright-eyed virgin morning — W. N. Watson	0	6
25.	Waken, lords and ladies gay — Georgina Bairnsfather	0	6
26.	Oh! slumber, my darling .. ..Henry Leslie	0	6
27.	The corsair's home .. John Thomas	0	6
28.	Spring and autumn .. John Thomas	0	6
29.	Resignation.. .. .. .. J. G. Calcott	0	4
30.	Go, lovely rose .. .. Charles Gardner	0	6
31.	Sweet stream that winds thro' yonder glade — Sir W. S. Bennett	0	6
32.	Rock me to sleep .. .. .. F. Berger	0	4
33.	Summer rain .. .. .. F. Berger	0	6
34.	Spring ... . Henry Hiles	0	6
35.	Think of me.. .. .. .. Ciro Pinsuti	0	6
36.	Old Daddy Longlegs .. C. A. Macirone	0	6
37.	May morning .. .. .. J. L. Hatton	0	6
38.	The golden days .. .. .. J. L. Hatton	0	4
39.	Good-night, good-night, beloved Miss Lindsay	0	6
40.	Maytime .. .. S. Reay	0	6
41.	The hour of thought .. .. S. Reay	0	6
42.	Arise, my love .. .. .. F. Westlake	0	6
43.	They whom He loved on earth .. F. Westlake	0	6
44.	Cynthia .. .. J. B. Surgey	0	4
45.	Roses of the sea .. .. .. F. A. Jarvis	0	4
46.	The crier .. .. O. Prescott	0	6
47.	A matin song .. .. T. R. Prentice	0	6
48.	Low dies the day .. .. H. C. Banister	0	6
49.	Wake, dearest love .. Westley Richards	0	6
50.	Love wakes and weeps ..Sir G. A. Macfarren	0	6
51.	The two stars .. .. Walter Macfarren	0	6
52.	Bells across the sea .. Walter Macfarren	0	6
53.	Beside a placid silver stream C. H. Couldery	0	6
54.	My lady sleeps .. .. ..A. Schloesser	0	6
55.	Of all the arts beneath the heaven — Sir W. S. Bennett	0	6
56.	Love's young dream .. E. W. Hamilton	0	6
57.	O well I love the spring .. .. J. L. Hatton	0	4
58.	Pack clouds away .. ..Henry Smart	0	4
59.	Proud Maisie .. .. Arthur O'Leary	0	6
60.	On a day, alack the day .. W. H. Cummings	0	6
61.	Ask me no more .. .. Cleveland Wigan	0	6
62.	When the wind blows .. William Horsley	0	6
63.	Hear our prayer, O Heavenly Father — T. R. Prentice	0	6
64.	And shall Trelawny die? C. A. Macirone	0	6
65.	Welcome day of joy and gladness. Christmas Carol .. .. J. L. Hatton	0	6
66.	And now we'll say good-night Seymour Smith	0	6
67.	My soul is sinking .. Ignace Gibsone	0	4
68.	The grasshopper .. .. Ignace Gibsone	0	4
69.	Beyond life's troubled sea — J. L. Hatton	0	6
70.	Tears .. .. — J. L. Hatton	0	6
71.	The star .. .. — J. L. Hatton	0	6
72.	A sound of music floateth — J. L. Hatton	0	6
73.	The rainbow .. — J. L. Hatton	0	6
74.	The ladder .. .. — J. L. Hatton	0	6
75.	Echoes . .. .. C. Gordon Hall	0	6
76.	Who is Sylvia? .. .. C. A. Macirone	0	6
77.	The bonnie blackbird .. .. J. L. Hatton	0	6
78.	The home of song .. Seymour Smith	0	6
79.	Good evening (Humorous quartet) — Seymour Smith	0	6
80.	Harvest time .. .. .. W. G. Wood	0	4
81.	Winter, grim winter .. .. W. G. Wood	0	4
82.	The meeting of the waters Michael Watson	0	4
83.	Evening's tranquil time .. Michael Watson	0	4
84.	Merrily oh! .. .. Michael Watson	0	4
85.	It was a lover and his lass Michael Watson	0	4
86.	The girl for me .. .. Francesco Berger	0	4
87.	The grand panjandrum .. Edwin M. Lott	0	4
88.	To the swallow .. .. Seymour Smith	0	4
89.	In the good old time .. .. J. L. Hatton	0	4
90.	Harvest time .. .. W. Smallwood	0	4
91.	If 'tis love to wish you near S. E. Hudson	0	4
92.	Under the maple tree .. .. H. Baumer	0	6
93.	Sweet June roses .. .. Seymour Smith	0	4
94.	Hush! the night draws on R. H. Earnshaw	0	4
95.	It was a lover and his lass John E. West	0	4
96.	The skylark .. .. .. Henry Smart	0	4
97.	The starry midnight hour .. Henry Smart	0	4
98.	Springtime is here .. .. Henry Smart	0	4
99.	Summer winds .. .. .. Henry Smart	0	4
100.	Breezes of evening .. .. C. Oberthür	0	4
101.	The bell's message .. .. Ciro Pinsuti	0	6

Six Sacred four-part songs.

SONGS OF NATURE.

TWELVE TWO-PART SONGS OR CHORUSES FOR SCHOOL CLASSES OR CHOIRS

BY

J. L. ROECKEL.

One Shilling net. Ditto arranged Tonic Sol-fa, Sixpence net.

Catalogue of Vocal Part-Music forwarded gratis and post-free on application to—

EDWIN ASHDOWN, LIMITED,

NEW YORK: 1 and 3, UNION SQUARE. LONDON: HANOVER SQUARE. TORONTO: 122 and 124, YONGE STREET.

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES

FOR THE PIANOFORTE

EDITED, ARRANGED IN GROUPS, AND THE FINGERING REVISED AND SUPPLEMENTED

BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

This Collection of Studies is intended to illustrate the various elements of a complete course of pianoforte technique, and to provide students with the means of attacking and overcoming the different special difficulties which have to be encountered. With this view, the Studies have been arranged in groups, those in each group being placed in progressive order, and having reference to some one particular difficulty. The greater part of the Studies themselves have been selected from the standard works of the most eminent Study-writers, and with these are included numerous others, which, though of equally great practical utility, have hitherto been less generally accessible.

1.	FIVE-FINGER STUDIES	Part 1*
2.	„ „	„ 2*
3.	SCALES	Part 1*
4.	„	„ 2*
5.	BROKEN CHORDS	Part 1*
6.	„ „	„ 2*
7.	„ „	„ 3*
8.	„ „	„ 4
9.	„ „	„ 5
10.	LEFT HAND	Part 1*
11.	„ „	„ 2*
12.	„ „	„ 3
13.	„ „	„ 4
14.	ARPEGGIO	Part 1*
15.	„	„ 2*
16.	„	„ 3
17.	VELOCITY	Part 1*
18.	„	„ 2*
19.	„	„ 3
20.	„	„ 4
21.	„	„ 5
22.	„	„ 6
23.	„	„ 7
24.	FIGURES IN SEQUENCE	Part 1
25.	„ „	„ 2
26.	BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES	Part 1
27.	BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES	Part 2
28.	SHAKES	Part 1*
29.	„	„ 2*
30.	„	„ 3
31.	DOUBLE NOTES	Part 1*
32.	„ „	„ 2*
33.	„ „	„ 3
34.	„ „	„ 4
35.	OCTAVES	Part 1*
36.	„	„ 2*
37.	CHORDS	Part 1*
38.	„	„ 2
39.	STACCATO	*
40.	REPETITION	Part 1*
41.	REPETITION AND TREMOLO	„ 2*
42.	„ „	„ 3*
43.	PART-PLAYING	Part 1*
44.	„ „	„ 2*
45.	ORNAMENTS	Part 1
46.	„	„ 2
47.	ACCOMPANIED MELODY	Part 1
48.	„ „	„ 2
49.	EXTENSIONS AND SKIPS	Part 1
50.	„ „	„ 2
51.	RHYTHM	Part 1*
52.	„	„ 2

* These Parts are already published.

FIFTY-TWO BOOKS, PRICE ONE SHILLING EACH.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

Popular Part-Songs for S.A.T.B.

By W. W. PEARSON.

The Skaters	3d.	The Oyster Dredgers ..	2d.
Blow, Western Wind! ..	3d.	*Sweet to live (32nd thou.)..	2d.
Stars of the Night	3d.	*Welcome, young Spring!	2d.
The Lake	3d.	*The Anglers (12th thou.)..	2d.
*'Tis Morn	3d.	The Dream of Home ..	2d.
Sweet Spring (Madrigal) ..	3d.	Summer and Winter ..	2d.
The River	3d.	*Departed Joys	2d.
Over the mountain side ..	3d.	There's beauty in the deep	1½d.
Soul of living music ..	3d.	Soldier, rest!	1d.
The Stormy Petrel.. ..	3d.	Woods in Winter	1d.
The Coral Grove	3d.	Autumn	1d.
Pibroch of Donuil Dhu ..	3d.

HUMOROUS PART-SONGS.

*Three Doughtie Men. (55th thousand)	3d.
Three Children sliding. (8th thousand)	3d.
A Ryghte Merrie Geste	4d.
The Snow-white Doe	4d.
*Ben Bowlegs (Edward Oxenford)	3d.
The Carrion Crow	3d.

DESCRIPTIVE CHORUSES for S.A.T.B.

Orchestral Parts on application to the Composer, Elmham, Dereham.

The Iron Horse. (6th thou.)	4d.	The Ocean (6th thou.) ..	3d.
Off to Sea	4d.	*The Ironfounders (32nd thou.)	3d.
The Lifeboat	4d.	The Jäger Chorus (6th thou.)	3d.

Tonic Sol-fa Editions at half the above prices of those marked *.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

HUMOROUS PART-SONGS, by Alfred Allen.

Dickory, dickory, dock .. .. 4d.
Tom, Tom, the Piper's son .. .. .. 3d.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

ETON SCHOOL SONGS

SET TO MUSIC BY

ARTHUR GOODHART.

Price Sixpence each.

No. 1. Song of the Scug.
,, 2. The Eton College Hunt.
,, 3. The game's the thing.
,, 4. Song of the Wall.
,, 5. No triumphs like those.
,, 6. Twenty years ago.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

THE SPIDER AND THE FLY

NEW HUMOROUS PART-SONG

For mixed and Male Voices, by

ALFRED J. CALDICOTT, Mus. Bac., Cantab.

COMPOSER OF

Humpty Dumpty.	Where are you going, my pretty maid?
Jack and Jill.	Sobbing quartet, &c.
Jack Horner.
This is the house Jack built.

Just Published. Metzler and Co., 42, Gt. Marlborough Street, W. Specimen copies, Post-free, 6d., of the Composer, 239, Cromwell Road, S.W. Special terms to Societies.

NEW MUSIC by T. E. Spinney. Words by Amy Thorn. THE SINGER, NOT THE SONG. Price 2s. net. (One of the prettiest songs of the day.)

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

Dedicated (by permission) to the Right Rev. Lord Bishop of Ripon.

NEW SONG, by Jean Charles, THE LORD SHALL COMFORT ZION, with Chorus ad lib., suitable for Church Choirs. Price 2s. net; post-free, 2s. 1d.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

TIME.—A Short Treatise on TIME, by Frank Manly, I.S.M. Dedicated to Sir Joseph Barnby. Patronised by the leading Members of the Musical Profession. Testimonials from Sir William Cusins, Professor Bridge, Mr. Sims Reeves, &c. Price 6d. London: F. Pitman, 20, Paternoster Row, E.C.

CHINESE SHENG (Hermann Smith).—The Voice.—See October Musical Opinion and Music Trade Review. Also 200 cols. of Musical Literature and Advertisements. Price 2d. Order at book and musicsellers; Smith's Railway Stalls; or (by post, 3½d.) 150, Holborn Bars, London, E.C.

WANTED, four or five VOCAL SCORES of Sullivan's "Iolanthe," "Pirates," "Yeomen of the Guard," "Haddon Hall," and "Patience"; Slaughter's "Marjorie," and Cellier's "Doris." Send lowest price to H. Hayman, Clevedon, Somerset.

WILLIAM J. YOUNG'S

POPULAR FOUR-PART SONGS for S.A.T.B.

I love the merry springtime ..	2d.	Gaily thro' the greenwood ..	2d.
Welcome, merry May	2d.	The Mountain Maid	2d.
Come o'er the mountain ..	2d.	Sunshine and shadow ..	2d.
The air resounds with music ..	2d.	To a sleeping child	2d.
Blow, ye balmy breezes ..	3d.	Fairy revels	3d.
Forest Echoes	3d.	Sunny rays	3d.
Who is Sylvia	3d.	Where are you roaming? ..	3d.
England's glory..	3d.	O Anglia, land of the brave ..	3d.
The streamlet	3d.	Oh, peaceful vale of rest ..	2d.

PART-SONGS FOR CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR.

Hail, merry Christmas ..	2d.	A merry Christmas to you all	3d.
A Happy New Year	3d.	Songs of Praise	3d.

Over 250,000 of W. J. Young's Part-Songs have been sold.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

Just Published, 8vo, 3d.

CALL JOHN!

HUMOROUS PART-SONG

Founded on the Popular American Melody "The Old Folks at Home"

Arranged for S.A.T.B. and Solo Bass by

W. W. PEARSON.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

COMPOSITIONS

BY

T. MEE PATTISON.

	Staff. s. d.	Sol-fa. s. d.
CANTATAS.
The Ancient Mariner	2 6	0 6
Do. do. (Choruses only)	1 0
The Lay of the Last Minstrel	2 6
Do. do. (Choruses only)	1 0
May Day	1 0	0 6
The Miracles of Christ (Sacred)	1 0	0 6
ANTHEMS, &c.
All Thy works praise Thee (Harvest)	0 3	0 1½
Thou visitest the earth (Harvest)	0 2
I know that my Redeemer liveth (Easter)	0 3
There were shepherds (Christmas)..	0 2
Thirteen Offertory Sentences	0 4
Six Kyries	0 2
Te Deum laudamus (in F)	0 3

ORIGINAL ORGAN COMPOSITIONS.
Fifteen Introductory and Concluding Voluntaries	3s. 6d.
Five Concluding Voluntaries	1s. 6d.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

PRACTICAL HINTS ON BOY CHOIR TRAINING. By G. Edward Stubbs, M.A., Organist and Choirmaster of St. Agnes Chapel, Trinity Parish, New York.

Sixth Edition.

A useful treatise on the vocal training of Chorister Boys embodying the views of standard writers on the voice.

Although strictly scientific the book deals with the subject in a plain and practical way, and will be found of value to all who are entrusted with the training of boys' voices. It is highly endorsed by leading Clergymen and Choirmasters both in England and America. Price 3s. 6d. net.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

In the Press.

CANTATA

SET TO ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON'S POEM

CROSSING THE BAR

For Full Orchestra, Chorus, and Pianoforte

By ALFRED HARBOROUGH.

Vocal Score, with the Orchestral Score arranged for two performers on the Pianoforte, 2s. 6d.; String Parts, 5s.; Wind Parts in the Press.

Full Score on application to the Publishers.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

MUSICAL FORM. By Ebenezer Prout, B.A., Lond., Author of "Harmony: its Theory and Practice," "Counterpoint: Strict and Free," "Double Counterpoint and Canon," "Fugue," "Fugal Analysis." All in Augener's Edition. Bound, net 5s. each. 86, Newgate Street, and 1, Foubert's Place, London.

NOVELLO'S COLLECTION OF
TRIOS, QUARTETS, &c.
FOR FEMALE VOICES.

RECENT NUMBERS.

251. Merry Songsters .. .. John Kinross 3d.
252. Flow'rets fair .. .. " 3d.
253. The Waterfall .. .. " 3d.
254. Shades of Night .. .. " 3d.
255. Four Angels .. .. C. A. Macirone 3d.
256. Mistress Mary .. .. " 2d.
257. Rejoice, for love is Lord .. .. .. A. C. Mackenzie 4d.
258. O thou divine .. .. " 6d.
259. The Wood-Nymphs .. .. Percy C. Buck 2d.
260. A Song .. .. " 2d.
261. Weep you no more .. .. " 2d.
262. Sweet the Angelus is ringing .. .. .. H. Smart 3d.
263. Orpheus with his lute .. .. Edward German 3d.
264. Maidens of Zia .. .. Herbert Bunning 3d.
265. Some strain that once thou heardest Marie J. A. Wurm 3d.
266. About the sweet bag of a bee .. .. " 2d.
267. Whenever life some joy does bring .. " 2d.
268. Under the greenwood tree .. .. .. " 3d.
269. Good-Night .. .. " 3d.
270. Hohenlinden .. .. F. A. Marshall 3d.
271. My true love hath my heart .. .. W. A. C. Cruickshank 3d.
272. Roger and Maggie .. .. C. Mühlfeld 2d.
273. Little thoughts that grow .. .. .. Chas. H. Lloyd 2d.
274. Solitude .. .. J. Pointer 3d.
275. May Morning .. .. " 3d.
276. The stars are with the voyager .. .. .. " 2d.
277. Water-Lilies .. .. " 4d.
278. To Sea .. .. Myles B. Foster 2d.
279. If hope were but a fairy .. .. .. " 2d.
280. The willow and its lesson .. .. .. " 2d.
281. The Promised Land .. .. " 2d.
282. Song should breathe of scents and flowers " 2d.
283. March .. .. " 2d.
284. Hail! Star of Eve! .. .. R. Spofforth 2d.
285. Honey-bees love heath'ry heights .. .. Chas. H. Lloyd 3d.
286. Ring out, wild bells .. .. Henry Lahee 3d.
287. { Sorrow not, why art thou weeping? / One day there came from Lochlin } .. Niels W. Gade 3d.
288. Stars of the Summer Night .. .. .. John E. West 3d.

(To be continued.)

THE ORPHEUS
(NEW SERIES).

RECENT NUMBERS.

222. Like apple-blossom, white and red .. .. Charles H. Lloyd 2d.
223. Peace .. .. C. Lee Williams 2d.
224. Song of the Pedlar .. .. " 3d.
225. There is a garden in her face.. .. .. A. Herbert Brewer 3d.
226. Maiden fair, O deign to tell .. .. .. Joseph Haydn 3d.
227. The Cab Catch .. .. A. J. Caldicott 4d.
228. The Hunt is up. A.T.T.B. .. .. .. J. L. Hatton 4d.
229. Good-Night .. .. H. Goetz 3d.
230. October Song .. .. " 2d.
231. A Forest Scene .. .. " 3d.
232. Drinking Song .. .. " 3d.
233. Heave the anchor .. .. W. A. Barrett 4d.
234. The Goslings .. .. J. F. Bridge 4d.
235. The Stream .. .. John P. Attwater 2d.
236. Ode to the terrestrial globe .. .. .. J. F. Bridge 3d.
237. An old rat's tale .. .. " 4d.
238. Cupid once upon a bed of roses .. .. J. V. Roberts 3d.
239. I prithee send me back my heart .. .. .. King Hall 3d.
240. The Cryer .. .. " 4d.
241. A wet sheet and a flowing sea .. .. Arnold D. Culley 3d.
242. Salvete cives nostri .. .. A. L. Peace 4d.
243. Echoes .. .. Oliver King 2d.
244. May Morning .. .. Theodore Distin 2d.
245. A Soldiers' Song .. .. Hamilton Clarke 3d.
246. Midnight and Noon .. .. " 2d.
247. Go, happy rose .. .. F. Iliffe 3d.
248. The wintry winds are blowing .. .. .. J. Müller 4d.
249. The three jolly pigeons .. .. .. Harvey Löhr 4d.
250. Where sunless rivers weep .. .. Charles L. Naylor 3d.
251. Come, my dear one .. .. J. V. Roberts 2d.
252. A lover's counsel .. .. F. H. Cowen 3d.
253. The trysting tree .. .. G. J. Bennett 2d.
254. I love my Jean .. .. " 2d.
255. Echoes .. .. J. Baptiste Calkin 2d.
256. It was a lover .. .. Chas. Wood 3d.
257. When for the world's repose.. .. .. Earl of Mornington 2d.
258. Upward .. .. L. Spohr 3d.
259. Restless love .. .. " 3d.
260. Know ye the land .. .. " 3d.
261. Spring's Oracle .. .. " 4d.
262. Drinking Song .. .. " 3d.
263. Good-night .. .. " 3d.
265. When evening casts her shadows round .. Clowes Bayley 3d.

(To be continued.)

NOVELLO'S
PART-SONG BOOK.

RECENT NUMBERS.

645. Go, happy rose .. .. F. Iliffe 3d.
646. Soft, soft wind .. .. C. V. Stanford 2d.
647. Sing heigh-ho! .. .. " 2d.
648. Airly Beacon .. .. " 2d.
649. The Knight's Tomb .. .. " 2d.
650. To his flocks .. .. " 3d.
651. Corydon, arise .. .. " 3d.
652. Diaphenia .. .. " 2d.
653. Sweet love for me .. .. " 3d.
654. Damon's Passion .. .. " 3d.
655. Phœbe .. .. " 3d.
656. This morning, at the dawn of day .. .. From the French 2d.
657. Sad hearts .. .. A. H. Brewer 3d.
658. Advice to lovers .. .. P. W. Pilcher 2d.
659. Peace; come away .. .. C. V. Stanford 2d.
660. Waiting for father .. .. R. Bartholomew 3d.
661. The Blue-bottle's fate .. .. .. A. H. Ashworth 3d.
662. March like the victors.. .. .. .. Roland Rogers 3d.
663. Hark! the Vesper hymn .. .. Sir John Stevenson 2d.
664. Ye banks and braes .. .. Arr. by W. G. McNaught 1d.
665. The trysting tree .. .. .. George J. Bennett 2d.
666. Jean .. .. Oliver King 3d.
667. Cupid is a wayward boy .. .. .. Ch. H. Lloyd 4d.
668. Come, fairies, trip it .. .. F. Iliffe 3d.
669. Song of the Silent Land .. .. .. John E. West 3d.
670. Hope .. .. Josef Rheinberger 2d.
677. The clouds .. .. " 3d.
678. The Fountain .. .. " 3d.
679. Evening rest .. .. " 2d.
680. The Nightingale .. .. " 3d.
681. Good advice .. .. " 3d.
682. The Storm .. .. " 3d.
683. Autumn Song .. .. " 2d.
684. The Oak Tree .. .. G. J. Bennett 3d.
685. When Flora decks the mantling bowers .. Noël Johnson 2d.
686. I think on thee in the night .. .. .. Elizabeth Fédarb 3d.
688. To daisies, not to shut so soon .. .. .. J. D. Davis 2d.
690. It was a lover .. .. Charles Wood 3d.
691. Sweet Thrush .. .. J. Danby 3d.
698. When evening casts her shadows round .. Clowes Bayley 3d.
700. Queen of fresh flowers.. .. .. King Hall 3d.

(To be continued.)

NOVELLO'S
OCTAVO ANTHEMS.

RECENT NUMBERS.

396. I heard a voice .. .. Sir John Goss 2d.
397. Jesu, lover of my soul.. .. .. .. F. Iliffe 2d.
398. The Lord is my strength .. .. S. Coleridge-Taylor 3d.
399. At the Lamb's high feast we sing .. .. Rev. E. V. Hall 3d.
400. Blessed City, heavenly Salem .. .. A. C. Fisher 4d.
401. Have mercy upon me, O God .. .. James Shaw 3d.
402. And when the Day of Pentecost .. .. C. W. Smith 3d.
403. In my Father's house .. .. .. J. Maude Crament 3d.
404. Harvest Hymn .. .. Ferris Tozer 2d.
405. I will magnify Thee .. .. Oliver King 4d.
406. My mouth shall speak the praise .. .. John E. West 4d.
407. The Lord is my light and my salvation .. C. W. Jordan 3d.
408. Lighten our darkness .. .. G. R. Vicars 2d.
409. Lift up your heads .. .. S. Coleridge-Taylor 3d.
410. Sing we merrily to God our strength .. Rev. E. V. Hall 4d.
411. Lord of the Harvest .. .. J. Barnby 4d.
412. Honour the Lord with thy substance .. .. J. Stainer 4d.
413. The fost'ring earth, the genial showers .. J. L. Hopkins 3d.
414. There was war in heaven .. .. W. A. C. Cruickshank 3d.
415. Break forth into joy .. .. .. S. Coleridge-Taylor 3d.
416. Prepare ye the way .. .. .. J. Maude Crament 4d.
417. Who is this? .. .. Fred. Rayner 2d.
418. O God, who hast prepared .. .. A. S. Baker 2d.
419. Behold, how good and joyful .. .. Hamilton Clarke 4d.
420. I have set God always before me .. .. " 4d.
421. The day is past and over .. .. .. J. C. Marks, Jun. 3d.
422. The Lord is risen .. .. G. M. Garrett 4d.
423. Why seek ye the living .. .. F. Peel 4d.
424. Abide with me .. .. R. Dunstan 3d.
425. Lead, kindly Light .. .. " 3d.
426. Sun of my soul .. .. " 3d.
427. Hail! gladdening Light .. .. J. T. Field 2d.
428. My God, I love Thee .. .. G. J. Bennett 3d.
429. O praise God in His holiness .. .. G. C. Martin 2d.
430. O God, who hast prepared .. .. .. A. W. Batson 3d.
431. Make me a clean heart .. .. .. " 3d.
432. They that sow in tears .. .. .. " 3d.
437. I will greatly rejoice .. .. .. W. A. C. Cruickshank 4d.
433. Give ear, O Shepherd of Israel .. .. Arthur Whiting 3d.
434. Lord, Thou hast searched me .. .. Arthur Whiting 3d.
438. Let not your heart be troubled .. .. Myles B. Foster 3d.
441. Thy mercy, O Lord .. .. George Garrett 6d.

(To be continued.)

Just Published.

Written and composed expressly for the Cheltenham Triennial Musical Festival, 1893.

A FESTIVAL ODE

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY THE

REV. CANON BELL, D.D.

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

BERTHOLD TOURS.

Price One Shilling.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

Just Published.

To be performed at the Hovingham Festival, October, 1893.

THE LEGEND

OF THE

ROCK-BUOY BELL

BALLAD FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

SUSAN K. PHILLIPS

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

ALAN GRAY.

Price One Shilling.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

A SONG OF LIFE

(ODE TO MUSIC)

No. 1. Lullaby. No. 3. Serenade. No. 5. Ave Maria.
„ 2. King Cricket. „ 4. The Charge. „ 6. Requiem.
No. 7. Song of the Redeemed.

SET TO MUSIC FOR FOUR-PART CHORUS

BY

ALFRED R. GAUL.

Price One Shilling; Words only, Five Shillings per hundred.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

EARLY SPRING

BY

ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON

SET TO MUSIC FOR CHORUS & ORCHESTRA

BY

VYVYAN WALLIS POPHAM.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.
Score and Orchestral Parts, MS.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

Just Published.

IN GONDOLA

FOR THE PIANOFORTE

COMPOSED BY

L. HERITTE-VIARDOT.

Price Two Shillings net.

This piece was suggested to the Composer while lying in a gondola on the "Canal Grande" in Venice, and following another gondola in which a young couple were singing. Hence the Venetian love-song forming the middle part.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

UNA

CANTATA

FOR FOUR SOLO VOICES, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

COMPOSED FOR THE

NORWICH MUSICAL FESTIVAL, 1893

The Libretto founded on Edmund Spenser's celebrated Poem, the "Faërie Queene"

BY

FREDERICK ENOCH

MUSIC BY

ALFRED R. GAUL.

Price, paper cover, 2s. 6d.; paper boards, 3s.; cloth, gilt, 4s.; Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; vocal parts, each 1s. Words only, 7s. 6d. per 100.

[Ent. Sta. Hall.]

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

ORATORIOS

BY

GEORGE SHINN, Mus. Bac., Cantab.

SUITABLE FOR CONCERT ROOM OR CHURCH.

The following works contain many effective Solos and Choruses of moderate difficulty, and will take about an hour and a half to perform.

Tenth Thousand.

THE CAPTIVES OF BABYLON.

Price 2s.: paper boards, 2s. 6d.; cloth, 3s. 6d.; Sol-fa, 1s.

LAZARUS OF BETHANY.

Price 2s.; paper boards, 2s. 6d.; cloth, 3s. 6d.; Sol-fa, 1s.

"Mr. Shinn is entitled to warm praise for his Oratorio, since it is obviously written to provide choirs of moderate capabilities with a work not too long, not too difficult, but withal melodious, musician-like, and, above all, faithful in its representation of the dramatic incidents of its sacred narrative. Upon all these grounds Mr. Shinn can claim a success."—The Keyboard.

Orchestral Parts published to both Works.

London: Hart and Co., 22, Paternoster Row, E.C.

BOEKELMAN'S EDITION

OF

BACH'S FUGUES

Printed in Colours.

In this Edition the essential parts of each Fugue—viz., Subject, Answer, Counter-subject, Episodes, &c., are each printed in a distinct colour, with a view to helping the Student to a clear understanding of the structure and form of the composition.

Book I. contains—

Vol. 1.	Fugue 3, C sharp major.	Vol. 1.	Fugue 10, E minor.
„ 1.	Fugue 4, C sharp minor.	„ 2.	Fugue 7, E flat.

Book II. contains—

Vol. 1.	Fugue 1, in C.	Vol. 1.	Fugue 21, in B flat.
„ 1.	Fugue 7, in E flat.	„ 1.	Fugue 22, in B flat minor.

Price Two Shillings net each Fugue.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.
Sole Agents for Great Britain and the Colonies.

STAFF NOTATION MODULATOR

(40 by 10), 1s. 6d.; Mounted on Linen, with Rollers, 3s. 6d.; (10½ by 4), 6d.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

MUSIC MINUS STAVE for the MILLION.—First Book, Sixpence. Now ready, Second Book, Scales, Chords, and Popular Tunes for Pianoforte; One Shilling. F. Weber, Organist, German Chapel Royal, St. James's Palace. London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

Price 1s.; post-free, in cardboard tube, 1s. 3d.

FORM and ANALYSIS of the FIRST MOVEMENT of a SONATA. Graphically shown in Colour, upon a Sheet 21 inches by 16 inches. With Explanatory Text. (In the Press.) F. Sommer, A.L.A.M., 14, Mardale Street, Shepherd's Bush, London.

FOR SALE.—ELEVEN BOOKS of the MUSICAL ANTIQUARIAN EDITION. Well bound, half-calf, with Macfarren's Organ Accompaniments separate. Price £8. J. G., 21, St. Mary's, York.

PRODUCED AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE, JULY 9, 1892.

ISRAEL IN THE WILDERNESS

A SACRED CANTATA

FOR THREE SOLO VOICES, CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA

VERSE BY

JETTA VOGEL

MUSIC BY

ALFRED R. GAUL.

(Op. 43.)

THE TONIC SOL-FA FESTIVAL.

"Mr. Gaul's latest work is another proof of his practical wisdom as well as of his ability as a composer. Mr. Gaul evidently does not feel disposed, though we think he is well able to write a magnum opus which may have to wait a generation to be understood; he appeals successfully to the tens of thousands of people who take an interest in sacred stories set to singable music which can be at once appreciated. We do not say that Mr. Gaul's cantatas will not receive the approbation of posterity; we think they will, but it is certain that they do meet with deserved recognition as fast as they appear. We welcome 'Israel in the Wilderness' as one of those works which foster the love and induce the practice of music amongst the people."—Musical Standard.

"The chief point of interest was the production of Mr. A. R. Gaul's Cantata 'Israel in the Wilderness.' . . . The work was given under Mr. Gaul's own direction by some 3,000 singers, accompanied by the Palace orchestra, with Mr. A. J. Eyre as organist. . . . The various solo and choral movements display Mr. Gaul's facility for the composition of genuine, effective music; clear in purpose, melodious, vigorous, and expressive by turns, and constructed by an experienced thinker and worker. Such music will indeed ever be welcome, and Mr. Gaul has presented in no previous work better characteristics or more successful efforts than are to be found in 'Israel in the Wilderness.' The popular composer was enthusiastically cheered at the close of the performance."—Musical News.

"Altogether worthy of the composer of that amazingly popular work, 'The Holy City.' The performance was excellent, and the composer, who conducted, had ample reason to feel satisfied with the reception of his latest effort."—The Referee.

"The best portion is a number entitled 'The Plagues of Egypt,' written in a sort of free chant form, in which Mr. Gaul has introduced some very clever orchestral effects. The Cantata contains all the elements of popularity, and it was excellently performed under the composer's direction, and very warmly received."—Standard.

"Mr. Gaul's music is exactly what is required for large choral gatherings, for it is effective without presenting any overwhelming difficulties. The part-writing is excellent. . . . Melodious throughout. There is sufficient variety to prevent any feeling of monotony. . . . At its close the composer was heartily cheered."—Daily News.

"Without being unduly difficult, it is indisputably effective."—London Figaro.

"The afternoon was particularly interesting owing to the first performance of Mr. Alfred R. Gaul's Cantata 'Israel in the Wilderness,' which had been composed expressly for the event. . . . Like the majority of Mr. Gaul's productions, it is bright and engaging. . . . The most pleasing of the twenty-three numbers are No. 3, 'So He brought forth His people with joy,' a telling chorus; No. 9, the chorus, 'Declare His honour unto the heathen'; No. 15, the pretty duet between the soprano and tenor voices, 'As the manna falling from the morning skies' (encored on Saturday); and the concluding march, 'Onward moves the guiding pillar,' a chorus full of spirit. Mr. Gaul has in the section devoted to the Plagues contrived to instrumentally illustrate the jumping of the frogs, the buzzing of the flies, the falling hailstones, the fire mingled with the hail, the gusty East wind, and the feeling of darkness. Several of these are clever examples of the imitative in orchestration. At the close of the work, portions of which were loudly applauded, though only the above-mentioned encore was permitted, Mr. Gaul, who conducted, was warmly complimented on a Cantata which is likely to become quite as great a favourite with choral societies as 'The Holy City' and other of his compositions."—Daily Chronicle.

"Characterised by the same refinement as that of Mr. Gaul's extremely successful work 'The Holy City.'"—The Athenæum.

"We may say at once that the music is characterised by Mr. Gaul's usual felicity of treatment. It is evident that the composer, while earnestly seeking a natural expression, has steadily kept in view the resources of the choral societies on whose behalf the work was written. Most of the music is easy, straightforward, and flowing—picturesque rather than dramatic—and it is all cast in a mould that enables the most ordinary listener to apprehend its form and purpose. In venturing to set a description of the plagues of Egypt Mr. Gaul invites dangerous comparisons. He was bound at all hazards to avoid imitation of Handel, and to endeavour to strike out a new path. In our opinion the music to this section is the most original and expressive in the whole Cantata. Mr. Gaul had every reason to be gratified with the performance and reception of his Cantata, and he may expect to hear of many more performances."—Musical Times.

"Musicianly and excellent, and not too difficult to imperil its popularity."—Musical Opinion.

"One of the most musicianly, melodious, and well conceived works of its popular composer."—School Music Review.

Price 2s. 6d.; paper boards, 3s.; cloth, gilt, 4s.
Tonic Sol-fa Edition, 1s.; Words only, 5s. per 100.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

NEW CANTATAS FOR FEMALE VOICES.

Just Published.

JOAN OF ARC

Words by MARK H. COLLET

MUSIC BY

ARTHUR SOMERVELL

Price 2s. net; Tonic Sol-fa Notation, 1s. net.

THE VALE OF PEARLS

Words by EDWARD OXENFORD

MUSIC BY

J. CHARLES B. TIRBUTT, Mus. Bac.

Price 2s. net.

"Mr. Tirbutt's work is pretty and vocally acceptable. The music is bright and musicianly, and will give pleasurable occupation to school classes. There is also a certain elegance of style and phrasing, which stamp it the work of an experienced teacher."—Monthly Journal.

MARY STUART

Words by J. STEWART

MUSIC BY

GUSTAV ERNEST.

Price 3s. net.

"The composer has set himself a difficult task, which he has well executed. We have nothing but praise for this meritorious composition, which is excellent and tuneful throughout and the work of a good musician."—Church Times.

J. AND J. HOPKINSON,
34, 35, AND 36, MARGARET STREET, CAVENDISH SQ., W.

New Songs Just Published.

SONG AND SILENCE

With an ad libitum part for Horn or Violoncello.

WORDS BY

ROBERT S. HICHENS.

MUSIC BY

GERARD F. COBB.

Price Two Shillings.

RETURN UNTO THY REST

SACRED SONG

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

D. PUGHE-EVANS.

Price Two Shillings.

FLOWER CROWNS

SONG

Poetry by ARTHUR BENSON

MUSIC BY

ARTHUR GOODHART.

Price Two Shillings.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TWO NEW SONGS, by VINCENT MORGAN. "Saviour Divine." For Soprano or Tenor. Price 2s. "O, my fair one." For Mezzo, Baritone, or Alto. Price 2s.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

WANTED, cheap, copy MORCEAUX FUGUES, VAN DER GHEYN. D. S. E., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

COMPLETE LIST

OF

THE PUBLISHED WORKS

OF

I. J. PADEREWSKI.

	s.	d.
Praeludium and Menuetto (Op. 1)	5	0
Elegie (Op. 4)	3	0
Krakowiak (Op. 5, No. 1)	3	0
Mazurka (Op. 5, No. 2)	3	0
Krakowiak (Op. 5, No. 3)	4	0
Introduction and Toccato (Op. 6)	4	0
Krakowiak (Op. 9, No. 1)	3	0
Mazurka (Op. 9, No. 2)	3	0
Mazurka (Op. 9, No. 3)	3	0
Mazurka (Op. 9, No. 4)	3	0
Krakowiak (Op. 9, No. 5)	3	0
Polonaise (Op 9, No. 6)	4	0
Chant du Voyageur (Op. 8)	6	0
Mélodie (Op. 8, No. 3)	3	0
Au Soir (Op. 10, No. 1)	3	0
Chant d'Amour (Op. 10, No. 2)	3	0
Scherzino (Op. 10, No. 3)	3	0
Barcarolle (Op. 10, No 4)	3	0
Caprice Valse (Op. 10, No. 5)	4	0
Variations et Fugue (Op 11)	6	0
Tatra Album (Op. 12). Books 1 and 2, Solo each	6	0
Dans le Désert (Toccata, Op. 15)	6	0
Concerto in A minor, Piano and Orchestra	40	0
Ditto, Two Pianos	20	0
MINUET (Op. 14, No. 1)	4	0
Sarabande (Op. 14, No. 2)	4	0
Caprice (Op. 14, No. 3)	4	0
Burlesque (Op. 14, No. 4)	4	0
Intermezzo Pollaco (Op. 14, No. 5)	4	0
Cracovienne Fantastique (Op. 14, No. 6)	4	0
Légende (Op. 16, No. 1)	4	0
Mélodie (Op. 16, No. 2)	4	0
Thème varié (Op. 16, No. 3)	5	0
NOCTURNE (Op. 16, No. 4)	4	0
Un Moment Musical	3	0
Four Songs, English, German, and Polish words (Op. 7)	6	0

PIANOFORTE DUETS.

Danses Polonaises (Op 5)	(complete)	7	0
Mélodie (Op. 8, No. 3)		3	0
Dances Polonaises (Op. 9). Books I. and II.	each	7	0
Tatra Album (Op. 12). Books I. and II.	„	8	0
Menuet (Op. 14, No. 1)		4	0

PIANOFORTE AND VIOLIN.

Sonata (Op. 13)		13	0
Mélodie (Op. 16, No. 2)		4	0
Krakowiak (Op. 9, No. 5)		4	0
Mélodie (Op 8, No. 3)		3	0
Menuet (Op. 14, No. 1)		4	0

PIANOFORTE AND VIOLONCELLO.

Menuet (Op. 14, No. 1)		4	0
Mélodie (Op. 8, No. 3)		3	0

ORGAN OR HARMONIUM.

Mélodie (Op. 8, No. 3)		4	0
Menuet (Op. 14, No. 1)		4	0

N.B.—The new "Fantasia" will be issued shortly.

WILLCOCKS & CO., LIMITED,

42, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W.

NEW FOREIGN PUBLICATIONS.

	s.	d.
ASHTON, A.—Cavatina. For Violin and Pianoforte. Op. 61	4	0
BIRD, A.—Suite, No. 3. For Orchestra. Arranged as Pianoforte Duet. Op. 32	12	0
BRAHMS, J.—Clarinet Quintet. Op. 115. Arranged as Duet for Clarinet and Pianoforte	16	0
BRUCH, MAX.—"In Memoriam." Adagio. For Violin and Orchestra. Op 65:—
Full Score	16	0
Orchetsral Parts	20	0
—— The same. For Violin and Pianoforte	8	0
CUI, CÉSAR.—Quartet. For Two Violins, Viola, and Violoncello. Op. 45:—
Full Score net	6	0
Parts	18	0
FORSTER, JOS.—"Die Rose von Pontevedra":—
Vocal Score, German words net	15	0
—— The same. Overture. For Pianoforte Solo	3	0
GERMER, H.—Collection of Favourite Compositions by L. VAN BEETHOVEN, F. SCHUBERT, and R. SCHUMANN. Duets for the Pianoforte. Arranged for Purposes of Instruction. Book I. net	2	6
GODARD, B.—Légende Pastorale. For Violin and Pianoforte. Op. 138, No. 1	5	0
—— Sérénade à Mabel. For Violin and Pianoforte. Op. 138, No. 2	5	0
—— Marche des Highlanders. For Violin and Pianoforte. Op. 138, No. 3	6	0
—— Fantasia, in Three Parts. Op. 143:—
Ballade, Intermezzo, Scherzo-Final complete	8	0
GOLDMARK, C.—Suite, No. 2 (E flat). For Violin and Pianoforte. Op. 43 net	12	0
GURLITT, C.—Two Miniature Trios. For Pianoforte, Violin, and Violoncello. Op. 200:—
No. 1. In F; No. 2. In G each	4	0
HOLLAENDER, G.—Six Easy Violin Pieces. Op. 48:—
No. 1. Melodie	2	0
„ 2. Geburtstagmarsch	2	0
„ 3. Schäfers Klage	2	0
„ 4. Kinderlied	2	0
„ 5. Gavotte	2	0
„ 6. Walzer	3	0
HOTH, G.—Suite in the Old Style. For Pianoforte. Op. 6:—
No. 1. Præludium; No. 2. Menuet; No. 3. Sarabande; No. 4. Gavotte complete	4	0
—— Three Pieces. For the Pianoforte. Op. 8:—
No. 1. Præludium; No. 2. Ariette; No. 3. Barcarolle complete	4	0
KIRCHNER, THEODOR.—Orgelcompositionen. Op. 89:—
Heft 2. (Lyrische Blätter, Nos. 5—8); Heft 3. (Lyrische Blätter, Nos. 9—13) each	4	0
LIADOW, A.—Valse badinage. For Pianoforte. Op. 32	2	0
MARX-MARKUS, C.—Gavotte. For Violoncello and Pianoforte. Op. 30	4	0
—— The same. For Two Violoncellos (Pianoforte ad lib.)	5	0
MLYNARSKY, E.—Three Pieces. For Violin and Pianoforte. Op. 4:—
No. 1. Polonaise	6	0
„ 2. Berceuse slave	3	0
MOZART, W. A.—Variations in F. Arranged for Two Pianofortes by JOSEF RHEINBERGER	15	0
MUSSO, L.—Two Pieces. For Violin and Pianoforte:—
No. 1. Berceuse	3	0
„ 2. Elégie	3	0
PALASCHKO, J.—"Stimmungen." Six Pieces. For Violin and Pianoforte. Op. 3:—
No. 1. Lied	2	0
„ 2. Elfentanz	3	0
„ 3. Tarantella	3	0
„ 4. Walzer	4	0
„ 5. Spanisches Ständchen	3	0
„ 6. Etude	3	0
RÜFER, P.—Adagio. For Violin and Organ	2	0
SCHÜTT, E.—"Poesies d'Automne." Five Pianoforte Pieces. Op. 36 complete	8	0
—— The same:—
No. 1. Vision d'Automne	2	0
„ 2. Au village	3	0
„ 3. Cantique d'amour	2	0
„ 4. Valse champêtre	3	0
„ 5. Epilogue	2	0
TSCHAÏKOWSKI, P.—18 Morceaux de Piano. Op. 72:—
No. 1. Impromptu	4	0
„ 2. Berceuse	4	0
„ 3. Tendres Reproches	3	0
4. Danse caractéristique	4	0
„ 5. Méditation	4	0
„ 6. Mazurque pour danser	4	0
„ 7. Polacca de Concert	5	0
„ 8. Dialogue	3	0
„ 9. Un poco di Schumann	3	0
„ 10. Scherzo-Fantaisie	8	0
„ 11. Valse-Bluette	4	0
„ 12. L'Espiègle	3	0
„ 13. Echo rustique	4	0
„ 14. Chant élégiaque	5	0
„ 15. Un poco di Chopin	4	0
„ 16. Valse à cinq temps	4	0
„ 17. Passé Lointain	4	0
„ 18. Scène dansante (Invitation au Trèpak)	4	0

Sold at half-price, if not marked net.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

Novello's School Music.

"At last there seems to be a general movement towards providing school children with a better type of music, and it is to be hoped that in future children leaving school will carry away with them not a bundle of worthless rubbish, which they would gladly throw away, but the cherished memory of many beautiful melodies which they will always recall with pleasure."
—Vide Sir John Stainer's Report for 1892.

Novello's School Songs.

New Series of Action and Kindergarten Songs, Unison Songs, Duets, Trios, &c.

Edited by W. G. McNAUGHT.

THE SATURDAY REVIEW says:—

"The issue of this series by the great classical publishing house is a very interesting fact, marking, as it does, the extraordinary development of popular education in music during the last few years. Perhaps the movement is not altogether to be blessed, for one cannot help thinking that the astounding rapidity with which street children, even in the most distant country places, pick up the latest comic songs, and the confident pertinacity with which they yell them from morning till night, are due to the careful instruction in vocal accomplishments imparted in Board schools and similar establishments. If that be so, however, it forms an additional reason for welcoming Messrs. Novello's excellent series. A more effective counterpoise to the attractions of 'Dysy, Dysy,' and 'Oh! Mr. Porter,' could not be wished. They are all published with Staff Notation and the Tonic Sol-fa on the movable Doh system, which is another sign of the times. The Tonic Sol-fa was long regarded with contemptuous indifference as little better than a foolish fad, except by a few people, who must now be considered as exceptionally enlightened. For it is useless arguing with facts, and the fact here is that the despised notation has undeniably won for itself general recognition among the best judges of musical education, and is actually doing a great work, for which it is proved, by right of conquest, to be specially suitable. We are told that nearly 3,000,000 children learn to sing by it against 500,000 who learn by the Staff; and they learn, on the whole, very successfully. At least as a stepping-stone, therefore, and for elementary purposes, it has won an undeniable position.

"The songs are issued at a very low price, both singly and in books, containing about six each. They are apparently intended to present a series of more or less ascending difficulty. The first numbers are quite elementary, 'easy songs' in unison, by the experienced hand of Mr. A. Moffat, who seems to devote himself particularly to this work. Then come duets and two-part songs, and amongst the composers appear the names of Reinecke, Mendelssohn, Rubinstein, Schumann, Cowen, Hatton, and so forth. We have also sacred songs of a very simple character, no doubt to be followed by others selected from the classics. Then rudiments of the dramatic are introduced in the shape of 'action songs,' which may be given with or without costumes, and are accompanied by full directions for performance. The latest numbers consist of unaccompanied trios, which already demand considerably more skill. The series is under the capable editorship of Mr. W. G. McNaught, and altogether it is very well done. We make no doubt that it will meet with the success it deserves, as an important contribution to national education, worthy of the famous house from which it emanates.

"In connection with the foregoing, we have to mention The School Music Review, also published by Novello. It is a 'monthly periodical devoted to the interests of music in schools,' and has recently completed the first year of its existence. Conducted on the lines of The Musical Times, it contains one or more 'school songs' every month, together with a modest allowance of comment on current topics, news, reports, &c., on subjects connected with musical education. The price is only 1½d."

THE SCHOOL BOARD CHRONICLE says:—

"The Editor of this collection may well be proud of it. It would be hard to find a better collection of School Music for simplicity, tunefulness, and good taste."

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

THE BEHNKE VOICE-TRAINING METHOD.

JUST PUBLISHED. PRICE, IN PAPER COVERS, TWO SHILLINGS; IN CLOTH, THREE SHILLINGS.

VOICE-TRAINING PRIMER

BY

MRS. EMIL BEHNKE AND DR. CHARLES W. PEARCE.

An easy Catechism of Vocal Physiology and Musical Theory, for the use of Vocal Students generally. This work is also intended as a Text-book for preparing Candidates for Vocal Examinations, particularly those of the Associated Board of the R.C.M. and R.A.M., the Incorporated Society of Musicians, and Trinity College, London. It contains in one volume all the information required for answering the vivâ voce questions of Examiners.

SIXTIETH THOUSAND. PRICE, IN PAPER COVERS, ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE; IN CLOTH, THREE SHILLINGS.

VOICE-TRAINING EXERCISES

In Six separate Books, for Soprano, Mezzo-Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, Baritone, and Bass.

BY

EMIL BEHNKE AND DR. CHARLES W. PEARCE.

"Admirable, and doubtless will prove of great utility."—Rev. Sir F. A. Gore Ouseley.
"Far more precise in plan than anything I have seen."—Sir R. P. Stewart.
"Scientific, systematic, and ingenious."—Sir John Stainer.

THIRD AND IMPROVED EDITION. PRICE, IN PAPER COVERS, ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE; IN CLOTH, THREE SHILLINGS.

VOICE-TRAINING STUDIES

In Six separate Books, for Soprano, Mezzo-Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, Baritone, and Bass.

BY

EMIL BEHNKE AND DR. CHARLES W. PEARCE.

"This work contains 24 Progressive Studies in different styles, and is intended as a companion or supplementary volume to 'Voice-Training Exercises.' Those of a more cantabile character are to be used as Solfeggi, the others are to be sung as Vocalises. In this Second Edition the accompaniments have been simplified. Highly favourable opinions of these Studies have been expressed by Sir John Stainer, Sir Robert Stewart, Mr. W. H. Cummings, and other eminent authorities.

"There can be little doubt that these 'Studies,' which are published in separate keys for all voices, will share the popularity of the 'Exercises.'"—Sunday Times.
"We have no doubt that the second volume will equal the first in popularity."—Morning Post.
"I am glad to find you are still going ahead in your valuable sphere of work. The 'Voice-Training Studies' are a solid and sound contribution to the repertory of teachers and students."—Sir John Stainer.
"Your new book of 'Voice-Training Studies' is admirable, and will prove of very great value to students and teachers. I like it much."—C. Vincent, Mus. Doc.

NEW NUMBERS OF

CHAPPELL'S VOCAL LIBRARY OF PART-SONGS.

114. Strange Adventure ("Yeomen of the Guard"). S.A.T.B. .. .. .. Arthur Sullivan 6d.
115. Serenade (Men's Voices). T.T.B.B. Reginald de Koven 4d.
116. Madrigal ("Haddon Hall"). S.A.T.B. Arthur Sullivan 6d.
117. I loved a lass, a fair one (Men's Voices). T.T.B.B. King Hall 3d.
118. Venetian Song (F. Paolo Tosti). S.A.T.B. King Hall 4d.
119. Mighty Lord (Gounod's "Marche Religieuse") S.A.T.B. .. .. King Hall 3d.
120. On Angels' Wings (Viviani's "Silver Trumpets") S.A.T.B. .. .. King Hall 3d.
121. Crossing the Bar. S.S.A.T.B.B. Arthur M. Goodhart 3d.
122. Sigh no more, ladies. A.T.T.B.B. R. J. S. Stevens 3d.

NEW WORKS FOR TONIC SOL-FA.

FAUST

A Dramatic Legend by HECTOR BERLIOZ. Price 3s. 6d. net.
A Tonic Sol-fa Edition of this celebrated Work. Just Published. Price 2s. 6d. net.

JACKDAW OF RHEIMS

Cantata written by THOMAS INGOLDSBY. Music by GEORGE FOX. Price 2s. 6d. net.
Edition for Tonic Sol-fa. Just Published. 1s. 6d. net.

Orchestral and Chorus Parts of the above may be had on Hire of—

CHAPPELL AND CO., 50, NEW BOND ST., LONDON.

Printed by NOVELLO, EWER and Co., at 69 & 70, Dean Street (W.), and published at 1, Berners Street (W.), and 80 & 81, Queen Street (E.C.)
Sold also by KENT and Co., Paternoster Row (E.C.)—Saturday, September 30, 1893.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR.

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH.

No. 609.—Vol. 34. NOVEMBER 1, 1893. Price 4d.; Post-free, 5d.
Registered for transmission abroad. Annual Subscription, Postage-free, 5s.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY,

ROYAL ALBERT HALL.

Patron: HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH, K.G.
Conductor: Sir JOSEPH BARNBY.

TWENTY-THIRD SEASON, 1893-94.

FIRST CONCERT,
THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 2, at 8.

BERLIOZ'S "FAUST."

Artists: Madame MORAN-OLDEN, Mr. BEN DAVIES, Mr. R. GRICE, and Mr. HENSCHEL. Organist, Mr. HODGE.

Prices: 10s. 6d., 7s., 5s., 4s., and Gallery Promenade, 1s.

SECOND CONCERT,
THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 23, at 8.

HANDEL'S "ISRAEL IN EGYPT."

Artists: Miss ANNA WILLIAMS, Miss M. HOARE, Miss CLARA BUTT, and Mr. EDWARD LLOYD.

Ten Concerts will be given during the season, eight being Subscription.

Prices for the Subscription Series of Eight Concerts: Stalls, 3 guineas; Arena, 2 guineas; Balcony (reserved), 1½ guineas. Seats may now be secured, and prospectuses obtained at the Royal Albert Hall.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC,

TENTERDEN STREET, W.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patrons: HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN AND THE ROYAL FAMILY.
President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH, K.G.
Principal: Dr. A. C. MACKENZIE.

Michaelmas Half-Term Entrance Examination, November 6, at 2.
Entry Forms and all information may be obtained from the Secretary.
Fortnightly Concerts, Saturdays, November 4 and 18, at 8.
Lecture every Wednesday at 3.
Chamber Concert at St. James's Hall, Monday, November 20, at 3.

F. W. RENAUT, Secretary.

THE GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Established by the Corporation of London, 1880.
Principal: Sir JOSEPH BARNBY.

The Michaelmas Term commenced Monday, September 25.
For prospectuses and all further particulars apply to the Secretary.

By order of the Committee,
CHARLES P. SMITH, Secretary.

Victoria Embankment, E.C.

READY ON DECEMBER 14.

A SPECIAL NUMBER

OF THE

MUSICAL TIMES

DEVOTED TO

HANDEL

HIS LIFE AND WORKS

EDITED BY

JOSEPH BENNETT

WILL BE ISSUED ON

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 14.

The Number will contain numerous Illustrations, consisting of Portraits, Views, Fac-similes of Manuscripts, and Letters of great interest, hitherto unpublished.

PRICE SIXPENCE.
Postage, 1½d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE ASSOCIATED BOARD

OF THE

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC AND ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC

FOR

LOCAL EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC.

President—H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

ASSOCIATED BOARD:

THE RIGHT HON. THE LORD CHARLES BRUCE, Chairman.
A. C. MACKENZIE, Esq., Mus. Doc., Principal of R.A.M.
Sir GEORGE GROVE, D.C.L., LL.D., Director of R.C.M.

Professor JAMES DEWAR, F.R.S., &c.,	R.A.M.
ALBERTO RANDEGGER, Esq.,
THOMAS THRELFALL, Esq.,
FREDERICK WESTLAKE, Esq.,
His Honour Judge MEADOWS WHITE, Q.C.,
EDWARD W. HAMILTON, Esq., C.B.,	R.C.M.
Sir WALTER PARRATT, Mus. Bac.,
C. HUBERT H. PARRY, Esq., Mus. Doc.,
Sir ARTHUR SULLIVAN, Mus. Doc.,
FRANKLIN TAYLOR, Esq.,

HONORARY TREASURER:
CHARLES MORLEY, Esq.

HONORARY AUDITOR:
Sir CHARLES LISTER RYAN, K.C.B., Comptroller and Auditor-General.

SECRETARY:
GEORGE WATSON, Esq. Central Office, 52, New Bond St., London, W.

BANKERS:
BANK OF ENGLAND, Western Branch, Burlington Gardens, London, W.

SYLLABUS A.

LOCAL CENTRE EXAMINATIONS.

LAST DAY FOR RECEIVING FORMS OF APPLICATION FROM CANDIDATES—

JANUARY 31, 1894.

THE PRELIMINARY LOCAL EXAMINATION (Paper Work) will take place at the various Centres on February 21, 1894.

THE FINAL LOCAL EXAMINATIONS will commence on and after March 27, 1894.

SYLLABUS B.

LOCAL SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS.

LAST DAY FOR RECEIVING APPLICATIONS FOR REGISTRATION FROM SCHOOLS AND TEACHERS OF MUSIC—

FEBRUARY 28, 1894.

THE LOCAL SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS will be arranged in Circuits, and conducted once during the year by a School Examiner appointed by the Board.

They will be held during four periods as follows:—

(a) December.
(b) March, April.
(c) June, July.
(d) October, November.

Schools and Teachers will, so far as is practicable, be allowed to select the period which they prefer for Examination, provided that they notify the same to the Secretary within seven days after receiving notice that their Applications to be Registered have been accepted.

Copies of either Syllabus may be obtained at the Central Office, 52, New Bond Street, London, W.

GEORGE WATSON, Secretary.

SOUTH LONDON MUSICAL CLUB.

PRIZE GLEE COMPETITION.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

With regard to the Advertisement on this subject in the October number of the Musical Times, in which it was stated that compositions should be forwarded on or before December 5, 1893, the Committee hereby give notice that the time has been extended, and that compositions may be sent in up to March 1, 1894.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES

MISS FLORENCE ARMRIDING (Soprano)
(Pupil of Mr. Shakespeare and Medalist, R.A.M.).
Oratorios, Concerts, Lessons, &c., at 20, Conduit Street. Address, Leicester Villa, Ealing, W.

MISS AUBREY, I.S.M. (Soprano)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c., 13, Canterbury Road, Croydon.

MISS MAUDE BALLARD, A.G.S.M. (Soprano)
(Cert. of Merit and Silver Medal, Cert. of Proficiency and Gold Medal, G.S.M.; Gold and Silver Medals, L.A.M.)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c., 21, Clovelly Mansions, W.C.

MADAME BARTER (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., Westbury Road, Wood Green, N.

MADAME CARRIE BLACKWELL (Soprano)
(Pupil of the late Madame Sainton-Dolby).
Orchestral, Oratorio, Ballad Concerts, &c., 4A, Sloane Square, S.W.

MADAME CONWAY (Soprano)
New address, 444, Moss Lane East, Manchester.

MISS MABEL CROSS (Soprano)
(Of the Royal College of Music, London).
For Oratorios, Cantatas, Concerts, &c. Winsford, Cheshire.

MISS EMILY DAVIES (Soprano)
Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., address, Severn House, Seven Sisters' Road, Finsbury Park, N.

MADAME ELEANOR DAY (Soprano)
Concerts, Private Lessons, &c. Strathaven, Hendon, N.W.

MISS AMY B. DEVONSHIRE, L.R.A.M. (Sop.)
For Concerts, Oratorios, Teaching, &c., 110, Broomwood Road, Wandsworth Common, S.W.

MISS ADA DUMVILLE (Soprano)
For Oratorio, Ballad, and Operatic Concerts. Terms, press opinions, references, &c., 14, Duke Street, Broughton, Manchester.

MISS MARJORIE EATON (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., 237, Katherine St., Ashton-under-Lyne.
"Messiah."—"Miss Eaton has a good voice and sang well throughout, particularly 'I know that my Redeemer.'"—Lancaster Guardian.

MISS FUSSELLE (Soprano)
Licentiate (Artist) R.A.M.
For Concerts, Oratorios, &c. 37, Harrington Square, N.W.

MISS ALMA HALLOWELL (Soprano)
(Med., R.A.M.; Pupil of Signor M. Garcia)

MISS FLORENCE HALLOWELL (Contralto)
Can accept Engagements for Oratorios, Miscellaneous Concerts, &c.
Address, Barkisland, Halifax.

MADAME MADELINE HARDY (Soprano)
27, Loughborough Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS HEROD (Soprano)
Address, Woodley, near Stockport; or, Forsyth's, Manchester.

MISS BESSIE HOLT ("The Lancashire Soprano")
Address: Rawtenstall, near Manchester; or, 6, Ducie Street, Clapham, London, S.W.

MISS JESSIE HOTINE (Soprano)
Oratorios, Concerts, Operettas, Banquets, &c.
Address, Craignorth, 33, Upper Bedford Place, Russell Square, W.C.

MADAME MINNIE JONES (Soprano)
"Possesses a voice of great purity and sweetness."—Chronicle.
Address, Grove Lodge, Seven Sisters' Road, London, N.

MISS MAUD LESLIE (Soprano)
For Concerts, &c., 41, Crystal Palace Road, Dulwich, S.E.

MISS LILY MARSHALL-WARD (Soprano)
MISS JESSIE MARSHALL-WARD (Contralto)
Address, 14, Peel Street, Nottingham.

MISS FLORENCE MONK (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., Glebe Field, Stoke Newington, N.

MISS ANNIE NORLEDGE (Soprano)
(Pupil of W. Shakespeare, Esq.)
For Oratorios and Ballad Concerts, At Homes, and Musical Parties.
Address, 221, South Lambeth Road, London, S.W., and Roseleigh, Newark-on-Trent. Telegrams—Norledge, London.

MADAME AGNES REID (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., 46, Havelock Street, Canterbury.

MISS AMY SARGENT (Soprano)
124, Marylebone Road, N.W.

MISS SIMPSON (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c.
For terms, apply, Miss Simpson, Todmorden.

MISS GEORGINA TEAR (Soprano)
33, Loughborough Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS AGNES WALKER (Soprano)
(Pupil of Fred. Walker, Esq.)
104, Lewisham High Road, New Cross, S.E.

MISS ETHEL WEBB (Soprano)
Concerts, &c. 14, Balmoral Road, Nottingham.

MISS GERTRUDE WESLEY (Soprano & Harpist)
(Great-granddaughter of Samuel Wesley).
For Oratorio or Ballad Concerts. Testimonials and Critiques from 53, High Street, Doncaster.

MISS EDITH HIGGS (Mezzo-Soprano)
For Concerts, Dinners, At Homes, &c., please address, 68, Mornington Road, Regent's Park, N.W.

MISS MARY WILLIS (Mezzo-Soprano)
For Oratorios, Operas, Concerts, or Private Lessons, address, 9, Rochester Terrace, Camden Road, N.W.

MISS BOWMONT (Contralto)
For Concerts, Oratorios, &c., 51, Mercer Street, Hulme, Manchester; or, Forsyth Brothers, Deansgate, Manchester.
"Miss Bowmont at once established herself as a favourite."—Southport Guardian, October 18, 1893.
"Possesses a well-trained, mellow contralto voice."—Southport Visitor, October 17, 1893.

MISS LILIAN CLOSE (Contralto)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c. 134, Goldhawk Road, W.

MISS LILLIAN CORNER (Contralto)
Oratorios, Ballads, &c.
22, Campbell Road, Bow.

MISS FLORENCE CROFT (Contralto)
88, Lady Margaret Road, Tufnell Park, N.

MISS TERESA DEVIENE (Contralto)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c. 70, St. George's Avenue, Tufnell Park, N.

MISS EMMIE FINNEY (Contralto)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c.
42, Pembridge Road, Notting Hill Gate, W.

MISS EMILY FOXCROFT (Contralto)
76, Calabria Road, Highbury, N.

MISS LILIAN HOVEY (Contralto)
(Medalist, R.A.M.; Pupil of Mr. Richard Cummings, A.R.A.M.)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 82, Norfolk Road, Sheffield.

MADAME JULIA HUTCHINGS (Contralto)
York Villas, Smethwick, Birmingham.
"Enthusiastically encored night after night."—Skegness Herald.

MISS LUCIE JOHNSTONE (Contralto)
13, Cromwell Grove, West Kensington Park, W.

MISS ANNIE NORTHCROFT (Contralto)
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., 38, Gunter Grove, Chelsea.

MISS RINA ROBINSON (Contralto)
For Oratorio and Ballad Concerts. 80, Tufnell Park Road, N.
References kindly permitted to Dr. A. H. Mann, Dr. E. H. Turpin, and Mr. F. A. W. Docker.

MISS KITTY SABINE (Contralto)
Ballad Concerts, At Homes, &c. 34, Stockwell Park Road, Clapham.

MISS HELEN SAUNDERS (Contralto)
(Sainton Dolby Prizeholder, and Sub-Professor, R.A.M.)
Oratorios, Banquets, At Homes, &c., 25, Cloudesley St., Barnsbury, N.

MADAME and MR. SUTTON SHEPLEY
(Contralto and Baritone).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 97, Dalberg Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS LOTTIE SWEENEY (Contralto)
(Pupil of Madame Sainton-Dolby).
For Concerts, Oratorios, &c., address, Miss Sweeney, Vocalist, Armley, near Leeds.

MISS VERKRÜZEN (Contralto)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., 119, Petherton Rd., Highbury, N.

MISS ALICE WOLSTENHOLME (Contralto)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Radcliffe, Manchester.

MR. MUNRO DAVISON (F.C.O.)
(Principal Alto, Temple Church).
For Concerts, Masonic Banquets, &c.
(Organist and Choir Director, St. Anne's, Holloway)
For Organ Recitals, &c., 101, Tollington Park, N.

MR. AUGUSTUS BALFE (Tenor)
For Oratorios, Ballad Concerts, Banquets, At Homes, address, care of Organist, Brasted, Kent.

MR. CHARLES BLAGBRO (Tenor)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Bradford, Yorkshire.

MR. RIDSDALE BOWLEY (Tenor)
For Concerts, Cantatas, Oratorios, &c.
Weaste, Manchester; or, Forsyth Bros., Deansgate, Manchester.

MR. BEN. BURY, L.R.A.M. (Tenor)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c. Church, Lancs.

MR. TOM CHILD
(Principal Tenor, Parish Church, Leeds)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Parish Church, Leeds.

MR. HERBERT CLINCH (Tenor)
Oratorio, Ballads, &c., address, 41, Frederick St., St. John's Wood, N.W.

MR. OTTO DENE (Tenor)
(Pupil of Sims Reeves, Esq.)
Is open to accept engagements for Oratorio, Ballad, and Operatic Concerts.
The Rosendale Echo (Oct. 11) says: "All his songs were given in an artistic manner, thoroughly in harmony with what we should expect from the master with whom he is studying, we can truly say that we have not heard so good a tenor for some time, and should be in great request by concert directors."
The Times (Oct. 12) says that "Mr. Dene sings with remarkable depth of passion, and his enunciation is perfect."
For terms, address, 151, Milkwood Road, Herne Hill, S.E.

MR. CHARLES ELLISON (Tenor)
(Principal Tenor, Carl Rosa Opera Company, Royal Italian Opera, Crystal Palace Concerts, &c.)
For Opera, Oratorio, or Ballad Concerts, address, 42, Florence Road, New Cross, S.E.

MR. C. EMLYN JONES (Tenor)
MADAME EMLYN JONES (Contralto)
Of the Royal Choral Society Concerts.
For Oratorio, Ballads, &c.
Address, 348, Kennington Road, S.E.

MR. J. MELLOR (Tenor)
Eccleshill, Bradford, Yorkshire.

MR. T. OLDROYD (Tenor)
For Oratorios and Concerts, address, The Cathedral, Rochester.

MR. JOHN PEARSON (Tenor)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Cathedral, Canterbury.

MR. GEO. RILEY (Tenor)
Oratorios, Ballad Concerts, address, 36, Chetwynd Terrace, Leeds.

MR. BEN. ROBERTS
(Principal Tenor, Liverpool Cathedral).
For Oratorio, Ballad, and Operatic Concerts. The Cathedral, L'pool.

MR. HARRY STUBBS, R.C.M. (Tenor)
(Of St. George's Chapel, Windsor).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 18, The Cloisters.

MR. GEORGE WROE (Tenor)
For Oratorio, Concerts, &c., address, Bury, Manchester.

MR. HERBERT ALDRIDGE (Baritone)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, South Street, Romford, Essex.

MR. ROBERT W. BAKER (Baritone)
(Pupil of Mr. Wm. Shakespeare).
For Oratorios and Concerts. For press notices, terms, and dates, address, 77, Alexandra Road, Manchester.

MR. GORDON HELLER (Baritone)
(Of St. James's Hall Concerts, London: late Pupil of Hy. Blower, Esq.)
For Oratorios, &c., address, 20, Blenheim Terrace, Leeds.

MR. W. THORNTON (Baritone)
Address, care of Wood and Marshall, Bradford.

MR. MUSGROVE TUFNAIL (Baritone)
22, Ferndale Road, Clapham, S.W.

MR. JOHN FELLOWS (Bass-Baritone)
For Oratorio, Ballad, and Operatic Concerts, address, Leamington Spa.

MR. FERGUS ASQUITH (Bass)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Cathedral, Wells.

MR. JNO. W. GREENWOOD (Bass)
For Concerts, Ballads, &c. 140, Queen's Road, Halifax.

MR. WALTER J. HOBSON (Bass)
(Choirmaster, St. Martin's Church, Liverpool).
For Oratorios and Concerts, 103, Robson Street, Liverpool.
"Mr. Hobson proved himself to be an artist of much more than average merit."—Vide Press.

MR. WILLIAM ROWE
(Principal Bass, College Chapel, Eton).
For Oratorios, Concerts, Masonic Banquets, &c.
Address, Edgewater, Clewer.

MR. CHARLES SIEBERT (Basso)
For Concerts, Organ Recitals, &c., 27, Lausanne Road, Hornsey, N.

MR. GEORGE STUBBS (Bass)
(St. Paul's Cathedral).
For Oratorios, Concerts, Dinners, &c., please address, 17, Trafalgar Square, Chelsea, S.W.

MR. HENRY SUNMAN (Bass)
Licentiate (Artist) of the Royal Academy of Music.
For Concerts, &c., address, Christ Church Cathedral, Oxford.

MISS HILDA MEREDITH (Violinist)
(Medalist, R.A.M., and Pupil of the late Mons. Sainton).
For Concerts, At Homes, &c., 52, Holmdale Rd., W. Hampstead.

MR. J. SHARPE (Oboeist and Oboe Maker)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 51, Lydgate Hill, Pudsey, near Leeds.

MISS A. MARIE HOLLOWAY (Solo Violinist)
At liberty for Concerts, At Homes, &c.
For vacant dates and notices, address, 84, Tierney Road, Streatham, S.W.; and Bull's House, St. Ives, Hunts.

MR. C. HUGH ROWCLIFFE, F.C.O.
(Accompanist, Organ and Pianoforte).
For Concerts, Banquets, &c., 76, Brighton Road, Stoke Newington, N.

MISS ALICE GLYN (The Mandoline Soloist)
For Concerts, At Homes, and Lessons, address, 1, Inkerman Terrace, Kensington, W.

MADAME AGNES LARKCOM requests that all communications respecting Concerts or Lessons may be addressed to her at 53, Westbourne Park Villas, W.

MISS JULIA JONES (Soprano) begs that all communications respecting Oratorios, Concerts, Vocal Recitals, &c., will be addressed to 15, St. Thomas Road, Finsbury Park, N.

MADAME LAURA SMART (Soprano) requests that all communications respecting Oratorio, Operatic Recital, or Ballad Concerts be addressed, 106, Bolingbroke Grove, Wandsworth Common, S.W.; or, 50, Church Street, Liverpool.

MISS LIZZIE SCOTT (Soprano) is now booking Engagements for Oratorios, Concerts, &c. For terms and vacant dates, address, 38, York Road, Northampton. Répertoire includes "Messiah," "Creation," "Elijah," "Samson," "Redemption," "Judas Maccabæus," "Stabat Mater," "Seasons," "Hymn of Praise," "St. Paul," "Acis and Galatea," "Rose Maiden," "Erl-King's Daughter," "Daughter of Jairus," "Hear my Prayer," &c.

MISS FANNIE SELLERS (Soprano). Engaged: Harrogate; Whitby (six nights); Great Harwood, Ballads; Knaresbro', Ballads; Burnley, "Creation"; Earby, Ballads; Heanor, "Creation"; Sheffield, "St. Mary Magdalen." Others pending. For terms, &c., address, Crag Cottage, Knaresbro'.

MR. W. CARTLEDGE-WHITE (Tenor) begs to announce his CHANGE OF ADDRESS to 7, Guildford Road, South Lambeth, S.W., where all communications respecting Concert, Opera, and Oratorio Engagements should be addressed.

MR. E. DUNKERTON (Tenor), Lincoln Cathedral, is booking ENGAGEMENTS for the coming season. Address, Cathedral, Lincoln.

MR. JAMES GAWTHROP (Tenor), Gentleman of Her Majesty's Chapel Royal, St. James's Palace, begs to announce his CHANGE of ADDRESS to 5, Hazelmere Road, Brondesbury Road, N.W.

CHANGE of ADDRESS.—MR. JOHN COATES (Baritone) requests that all communications respecting Oratorio, Opera, and other Engagements be addressed to 59, Comyn Road, Wandsworth Common, S.W.

MR. E. JACKSON (Baritone) is now booking Engagements for Oratorios and Ballad Concerts. For terms, press notices, and vacant dates, address, Principal Bass, New Coll., Oxford.

CHANGE of ADDRESS.—MR. DAN PRICE (Baritone, of Westminster Abbey) begs to announce his CHANGE of ADDRESS to 9, Clarendon Road, Holland Park, W., where all communications respecting Concert, Masonic, Oratorio Engagements, and Private Lessons should be addressed.

Telephone No. 496.

MR. BINGLEY SHAW (Baritone), CONCERT AGENT and MANAGER, Pianoforte Warehouse, Nottingham.

MR. BYRON DEWHURST (Bass) requests that all communications respecting Oratorios, Ballad Concerts, At Homes, &c., be addressed to Byron Dewhurst, Cathedral, Canterbury.

MR. EGBERT ROBERTS (Bass) requests that all communications respecting Oratorios, Opera, or Concerts be addressed, 45, Pentonville Road, N.

MR. ALEXANDER TUCKER (Basso Profundo). The Globe (April 25, 1893) says:—"Mr. Alexander Tucker, a basso gifted with a remarkably fine and well-trained voice, sang admirably, and seems likely to attain a distinguished position among modern vocalists." Address, St. Audries, Enfield, N.

MR. ALF. R. WATSON (Violinist). Open for Concerts, &c. Solo, Lead, or Viola. 7, Clarendon Street, Nottingham.

MISS CLARA TITTERTON, Associate and Silver Medalist, R.A.M., First Class Certificate Society of Arts, &c., &c., receives PUPILS for the VIOLIN and PIANOFORTE on moderate terms. Lessons given at pupils' own residences. Schools attended. Miss Titterton also accepts Engagements for Concerts and At Homes. 38, Agate Road, The Grove, Hammersmith, W.

MR. FRANK FREWER, L.R.A.M., A.C.O. (Organist, St. James's, Garlickhithe, E.C.), teaches the PIANOFORTE, ORGAN, &c. For terms for Concerts, Organ Recitals, Pianoforte or Organ Lessons, address, 6, Wilmot Place, Rochester Road, and Camden Road, N.W.

MR. H. WHARTON WELLS, F.C.O., is now booking ENGAGEMENTS for ORGAN RECITALS and as Accompanist at Concerts, Oratorios, &c. 36, Halford Road, Richmond, S.W.

ENGAGEMENTS WANTED, at Concerts, &c., as Vocalist, Pianist, or Accompanist. Quick reader. Also pupils for Singing, Organ, and Piano. Miss R., The Library, Church Parade, Hounslow.

ACCOMPANIST (Lady) desires ENGAGEMENTS. Experienced; quick reader. Concerts, At Homes, Private Practice, &c. A. T., 2, Penn Road Villas, Camden Road, N.

ACCOMPANIST (experienced) desires ENGAGEMENTS for CONCERTS or PRIVATE PRACTICE. Good Glee singer (Tenor). B. A., 118, Salcott Road, Wandsworth.

MISS

FANNY BOUFFLEUR

(SOPRANO)

For Oratorios, Cantatas, Concerts, &c., 239, Upper Parliament Street, Liverpool.
Agent, N. Vert, Esq., 6, Cork Street, London, W.

MISS LOUISE WEAVER

(CONTRALTO)

AND

MR. GILBERT THORNE

(BARITONE)

Are now booking Engagements (either together or separately) for Oratorios, Miscellaneous Concerts, At Homes, &c., for the ensuing season.

For terms, &c., please address, The Ferns, Richmond Park Road, Kingston-on-Thames; or, 11, Penryn Street, Oakley Square, N.W.

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES, CONCERT-GIVERS, &c.

MR. JOHN BARTLETT

(TENOR)

PRINCIPAL, PRO-CATHEDRAL, KENSINGTON,

AND OF

SIGNOR LAGO'S ROYAL OPERA (Principal),

COVENT GARDEN PROMENADE CONCERTS,

CRYSTAL PALACE ORCHESTRAL CONCERTS,

MADAME FANNY MOODY AND MR. CHARLES MANNERS' CONCERT TOUR, &c.,

Is now Booking Engagements for Oratorio, Concerts, At Homes, &c. Secretaries and others are desired to write for Press notices.

For first appearances moderate terms arranged. Large répertoire.

Kindly address, Mr. John Bartlett, 7, Westfield Terrace, Fulham Road, London, S.W. Or Agents.

MR.

SMALLWOOD METCALFE

(BASS)

For Oratorios, Concerts, &c.

"Special praise must be given to Mr. Smallwood Metcalfe for his admirable singing. He is the possessor of a fine bass voice of considerable compass and sonority."—The Times, December 6, 1892.

Terms, &c., address, 142, Belsize Road, London, N.W.

MISS ALICE MARY SMITH

(HARPIST)

(Associate of the Royal College of Music).
16, Gerald Road, Chester Square, S.W.

MR. JOSEF CANTOR'S

"GEMS OF THE OPERAS"

CONCERT COMPANY.

All communications, Church Street, Liverpool.

Telegrams—"Cantor, Liverpool."

THE HORSE-SHOE GLEE SINGERS.

Alto: Mr. PERCY COWARD (St. George's Chapel Royal, Windsor Castle); Tenor: Mr. ARTHUR S. COWARD; Baritone: Mr. RANDULPH L. COWARD; Bass: Mr. W. BELL KEMPTON (St. George's Chapel Royal, Windsor Castle).

For Concerts, &c. Terms on application to W. Bell Kempton, 16, Horse-Shoe Cloisters, Windsor Castle.

MISS

MARIE HOOTON

(CONTRALTO)

(Late Westmorland Scholar and Parepa-Rosa Gold Medalist of the Royal Academy of Music)

AND

MR.

EDWARD BRANSCOMBE

(TENOR)

(LAY-VICAR OF WESTMINSTER ABBEY)

Are now booking Engagements for the ensuing season.
Already engaged:

Penge, Hornsey, Mansion House, Canterbury, Lee, City, Northampton, Beeston, Shrewsbury ("Judas"), Wolverhampton ("Light of the World"), Leamington ("Callirhoë"), Nelson, Bradford, Birmingham, Greenock ("Elijah"), Hebden Bridge ("Messiah"), Aberdeen ("Elijah"), Glasgow ("Messiah"), Paisley ("St. Paul"), Walsall ("Elijah"), Birmingham ("Lay of the Bell," Max Bruch), &c.

SOME PRESS OPINIONS.

"Miss Hooton sang 'Hymen, haste' ('Semele'), Handel, with much richness and power. . . . Both her songs, 'La Charmante Marguerite' (old French) and 'Will he come?' (Sullivan), were enthusiastically received. There is no doubt at all that Miss Hooton will take a very high place amongst contraltos. She has everything in her favour, youth, good looks, a splendid voice, which she has been trained to produce in an excellent manner, while she pronounces very distinctly, and has evidently the right musical feeling."—Nottingham Daily Express, January 10, 1891.

Gounod's "Faust."—"Miss Hooton's voice was admirable in the part of Siebel. The delicious music was charmingly sung. For her rendering of 'The flower song' she received a splendid encore."—Blackburn Weekly Express, April 4, 1891.

"This reference to the vocalist leads us on to say that Miss Marie Hooton, Westmorland Scholar and Gold Medalist of the Royal Academy of Music, has been specially engaged, and whatever good opinions she succeeded in creating on her last visit, the manner in which she acquitted herself on Wednesday certainly afforded the highest satisfaction. If we give Miss Hooton the honour of first mention, it is not that we desire to depreciate the instrumental performers, but rather because of her uniform excellence, and the undoubted fact that to a large proportion of the audience her fine singing was one of the most attractive features of the evening. In Part I. Miss Hooton made her opening bow to the house in Mozart's song 'The Violet,' and her beautiful contralto voice, coupled with a distinct and pleasing articulation, at once made her a popular and acceptable vocalist. Her second effort, in the scena 'Ombra felice,' was even more impressive, and though rendered in a language not generally 'understanded of the people,' she sang with so much power and fervour—with a true artistic feeling, indeed, which displayed to advantage a voice full of richness and remarkable for its agreeable tone—that the audience were raised to the highest enthusiasm and an encore had to be conceded, whereupon the song 'Come to me' was substituted and rendered with much taste and vivacity. In the latter part of the programme Miss Hooton sang 'To Chloe' and Non so piu' ('Figaro'), and both were effective in the extreme. She combines with a pure voice, a pleasing and faithful interpretation of her theme, and the delight of the audience was in no sense a matter of surprise. In response to most cordial encores, 'She wandered down the mountain side' (Clay) and 'Annie Laurie' were given and proved equally successful, the popular verdict manifested by the hearty applause being thoroughly deserved."—Grantham Journal, November 21, 1891.

"The May Queen" (Glasgow).—"Mr. Branscombe is a tenor of admirable vocal quality and cultured style, who will assuredly make his mark in the profession. His singing in the Cantata, and also in a song by Blumenthal, Handel's 'Love sounds the alarm,' and Ascher's 'Alice, where art thou?' interpolated in response to an encore, was artistic and refined."—Glasgow Citizen, April 1, 1890.

"Mr. Edward Branscombe's rendering of 'An Evening Song,' by Blumenthal, was exceptionally good; a smooth, pure tenor voice, handled with great judgment and much tenderness and feeling."—Society Times, June 21, 1890.

"Mr. Edward Branscombe, the tenor vocalist of the evening, made a palpable hit by his cultured and most pleasing vocalisation. He possesses a clear organ of fine 'timbre,' and his style is polished and easy to a degree. Mr. Branscombe seems to make no effort in singing, the notes coming unforced, and in a simple, natural way. On his first appearance he gave two short songs, 'At Even' and 'Two Roses,' and so delighted his auditors that they insisted on an encore. 'Alice, where art thou?' was substituted and sung with much sweetness and suitable expression. In the second part, 'Good night! beloved' again captured the house, and the singer, in response to continued plaudits, had to appear once more, this time rendering the old-fashioned 'Phyllis is my only joy' with delightful effect, the smoothness and artistic simplicity of his vocalisation being again noticeable."—Dover County Chronicle, November, 19, 1890.

Please address, 37, Torrington Square, Bloomsbury; or,
Mr. W. B. HEALEY,
117, Great Marlborough Street, W.

THE

ENGLISH CONCERT PARTY

MADAME LESLIE ARNOTT.

MADAME JULIA HUTCHINGS.

MR. A. BOWYER BRISTOL.

MR. EDMUND EDWARDS.

Solo Pianoforte—
MRS. A. L. RICHARDSON, L.R.A.M.

Solo Violin—
MR. W. H. HENLEY.

Solo Harp—
J. H. COCKERILL
(Sir CHARLES HALLÉ'S BAND).

Conductor and Accompanist—
MR. WALTER J. EVANS.

The above Party are prepared to accept Engagements for the forthcoming season for Sacred, Chamber, or Ballad Concerts; also,

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS WITH

SIR AUGUSTUS HARRIS,

FOR

CONCERT RECITALS OF GOUNOD'S OPERA

PHILEMON AND BAUCIS.

Applications for vacant dates to be made to Manager,
P. Henry Jones, Hampden House, Phœnix Street, London, N.W.
Special arrangements for Charity Concerts.

THE CYNTHIA QUARTET (Male Voices)
Alto, Fred. Howard; Tenor, Reynolds Wood; Baritone, Albert Rayment; Bass, Arthur Johnson,
Is now booking Engagements for the season. Glees, Madrigals, Part-songs, and Solos. Whole Concerts given.
Apply, The Secretary, Booth Hay, Christ Church Avenue, Brondesbury, N.W.

CRICHTON VOCAL QUARTET—Messrs. Oliver, Dyer, Wells, Norcroft (Third Season)—accepts Engagements for Concerts, Dinners, &c. Address, Herbert Dyer, 40, Warbeck Road, Shepherd's Bush.

THE QUEEN VOCAL QUARTET.—Miss AMY SARGENT, Miss ISABEL WYATT, Miss LISA STEWART, Miss LUCIE JOHNSTONE. Address all communications to the Secretary, Miss Lucie Johnstone, 13, Cromwell Grove, West Kensington Park, W.

GRESHAM COLLEGE LECTURES.

MICHAELMAS TERM, 1893.

To be given by permission of the City of London School Committee, in the Great Hall of the City of London School, Thames Embankment, E.C. The LECTURES in MUSIC will be delivered as under by Professor BRIDGE, Mus. Doc. (Organist of Westminster Abbey):—

MONDAY, Nov. 6.—"Of Music and its Importance in Education." (Observations on the subject by a Seventeenth Century dilettante).

TUESDAY, Nov. 7, and WEDNESDAY, Nov. 8.—"On the Road to the String Quartet." (The first two of a course of Lectures on Chamber Music.)

FRIDAY, Nov. 10.—"Roger North and his Musical Contemporaries."

The Lectures are free to the public, and commence each day at 6 o'clock p.m.

THE MUSICAL ASSOCIATION.

Founded in 1874 for the Investigation and Discussion of Subjects connected with the Art and Science of Music.

President: Sir JOHN STAINER.

The Meetings are held at the Royal Academy of Music at 8 o'clock on the second Tuesday in November, December, January, February, March, April, May, and June, when papers are read and discussed; at the end of the year, a copy of the proceedings is sent to every Member.
Subscription, One Guinea per annum
J. PERCY BAKER, Secretary, Willersley House, Old Charlton.

MR. THOMAS KEMPTON

(Bass, Vicar Choral, St. Paul's Cathedral)

AND

MR. JAMES BATES

(Director of Choir, Christ Church, Lancaster Gate, W.)

PROVIDE

SOLO BOYS and LEADING BOYS

For Oratorios, Festival Services, Concerts, Organ Recitals, &c.

MASTER SYDNEY LOVETT
(Solo Boy, Christ Church, Lancaster Gate, W.)

"Master Sydney Lovett is possessed of a singularly sweet soprano voice and a most refined style."—Daily Telegraph, April 12, 1893.

"Master Sydney Lovett's singing was received with the utmost enthusiasm" (Lord R. Churchill and Right Hon. A. J. Balfour's Primrose League Demonstration, at Paddington).—Globe, May 6, 1893.

"Master Sydney Lovett, a boy with a splendid voice, was the soloist." (Visit of T.R.H. the Prince and Princess of Wales to Westminster Town Hall.)—Standard, July 3, 1893.

MASTER LEONARD TUDGAY
(Solo Boy, St. Mary's Church, Stoke Newington, N.)

MASTER CHARLES AKAST
(Solo Boy, St. Matthew's Church, Ealing, W.)

MASTER HARRY PEACOCK
(Solo Boy, Hampstead Parish Church, N.W.)

MASTER CLAUDE HAMILTON
(Solo Boy, All Saints' Church, Norfolk Square, W.)

Also ten other thoroughly trained and reliable vocalists. Can be seen by appointment.
Letters and applications for testimonials, criticisms, terms, &c., to be addressed:
Messrs. KEMPTON and BATES, 60, Moorgate Street, E.C.
Provincial Clergy, Organists, Musical Directors, and others will find this address easily accessible from all the London termini.

CHURCH CHOIR GUILD

(Guild of Church Musicians),

35, WELLINGTON STREET, LONDON, W.C.

Under the patronage of the Bishops and Clergy of the Church of England.

For Organists, Choirmasters, Precentors, and Choristers.

President:
The Very Rev. FRANCIS PIGOU, D.D., Dean of Bristol.
Warden and Licensed Lay Chaplain:
J. H. LEWIS, Mus. Doc., D.C.L.
ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION (Membership), 10s. 6d. LIFE, £5 5s.
CHOIRS ENROLLED, 10s. 6d.

A.C.C.G. and F.C.C.G. Diploma Examination, Organists' and Choirmasters' Sections, in January, 1894. Full set of last Examination Papers, post-free, thirteen stamps.

Nov. 6 (Monday). Annual Banquet, at which the President, the Very Rev. the Dean of Bristol, will preside. Tickets, 5s. each.

Nov. 22, Grand Choral Festival at Leamington Parish Church.

COMPETITIONS.

Two Guineas for a simple Evening Service.
Silver Medal for Communion Service.
Silver Medal for Anthem.
Bronze Medal for Kyrie in Canon.

The 1893 Calendar gives full particulars of the Guild, also contains a Table of University Degrees and College Diplomas, with Academic Costume, post-free, fourteen stamps.

See The Church Musician, and apply to Dr. LEWIS, "Silvermead," Twickenham, S.W.

By Order of the Council.

MUSICAL INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE
Limited.
Central Office: 113, Great Portland Street, W.

Principal: Professor EDWIN M. LOTT, Mus. Doc.
Vice-Principal: J. H. LEWIS, Mus. Doc., D.C.L.

LOCAL THEORETICAL EXAMINATION, Nov. 29. Practical Examinations throughout the kingdom.
Examination for Diplomas, January, 1894.
W. A. PHILPOTT, Mus. Bac., Secretary.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY CHORISTERS.—The SECOND ANNUAL DINNER of the OLD CHORISTERS will take place at the Westminster Palace Hotel, on THURSDAY, December 7, 1893, at 7.30. Any "Old Boy" desiring to be present is requested to communicate with A. Beckham (Sec.), 51, Beauchamp Road, Clapham Junction, S.W.

COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS.

November 7, at 8 p.m.—Lecture on Brahms's New Pianoforte Pieces, with Illustrations, by Arthur Trickett, Esq., F.C.O.

The Solo-playing Tests for the F.C.O. Examination in January will be: Prelude and Fugue in G major, Bach (No. 2, Book II., Peters); Fantasia in C minor, Op. 25, H. Berens (No. 22, Cecilia Collection, Augener); Choral, with Variations, H. Smart (Novello, Ewer and Co.).

The College Library is open daily from 10 to 5, and on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 9.

Members desiring practice on the College Organ may obtain particulars on application.

The large room, and sundry smaller rooms, may be hired for concerts, meetings, &c. For terms, application should be made to the Assistant Secretary.

E. H. TURPIN, Hon. Secretary.

Hart Street, Bloomsbury, W.C.

CHURCH ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY.

Committee: Rev. James Baden Powell, St. Paul's, Knightsbridge; Alfred J. Eyre, Esq., Crystal Palace; George C. Martin, Esq., Mus. Doc., St. Paul's Cathedral; Hon. Richard Strutt, 70, Eccleston Square, S.W.; E. H. Turpin, Esq., Mus. Doc., Warden, Trin. Coll., London.

It is proposed to form a Church Orchestral Society, members of which shall be members of the Church of England. The Orchestra to assist on Festivals and special occasions at Churches where its services may be required. Orchestral players, professional and amateur, desiring to join the Society, and others interested in the scheme, are requested to communicate with Hon. R. Strutt, 70, Eccleston Square, S.W. No subscription will be required from members of the Orchestra.

THE MISSES TULLOCHS' RECITAL

STEINWAY HALL, Saturday, November 4, at 3 o'clock.

Tickets, 5s. and 3s., reserved; 2s., unreserved; and programmes at Steinway Hall, the usual agents, or the Misses Tulloch, Erith, Kent; Concert Direction, Daniel Mayer, 8, Argyll Place, W.

THE MISSES TULLOCHS' VOCAL, INSTRUMENTAL, AND DRAMATIC RECITALS.

Provincial Engagements.—Finchley, Nov. 2; Pollokshields, 6; Ayr, 7; Paisley, 10; Glasgow City Hall Concerts, 11; Walsall, 15; Liverpool, 16; Honor Oak, 21; Streatham, 23; Leatherhead, 28.

For Vacant Dates, Press Notices, and particulars, address, The Misses Tulloch, Erith, Kent.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS.

MR. DUTTON (Alto, St. Paul's Cathedral) provides SOLO BOYS, specially prepared for Church Festivals, Organ Recitals, At Homes, Concerts, &c.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Are trained entirely by himself.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Have received splendid testimonials.

HIS Grace The DUKE of NEWCASTLE writes:

"I have heard many excellent Boy Soloists, but never any more perfect both in beauty of voice and in execution."

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS may be engaged for "Last Judgment," "Stabat Mater," "Mors et Vita," "Redemption," "Hear my Prayer," "Holy City," "Messiah," &c.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Have sung SPOHR'S "LAST JUDGMENT" at:—
Beckenham (four times), Lewisham (four times), Brighton (three times), St. Leonard's (twice), Devizes (twice), Bromley (twice), Hornsey (twice), Honor Oak (twice), Haverstock Hill (twice), Bishop's Stortford, Bristol, Camberley, Dulwich, Fulham, Grove Park, Kentish Town, Kilburn, Melksham, Norwood, Potterne, Twickenham, and Westminster.

MASTER W. A. GOUGH, Solo Boy (4 years), St. Alban's, Holborn.
Has sung ROSSINI'S "STABAT MATER" during the past year with marked success at:—
St. Leonard's (four times), Holborn (three times), Hatton Garden, Maidstone, Pembroke, and Sutton.

To avoid disappointment Mr. Dutton would be glad if Clergy and Organists desirous of obtaining the services of his Solo Boys would kindly secure them as far in advance as possible.

MR. DUTTON can supply a Choir of twelve highly trained Boys for special occasions.

MR. DUTTON has, at the present time, three Boys prepared to accept Solo appointments and invites applications.

Address, 19, Alpha Road, New Cross, S.E.

GLOUCESTER CATHEDRAL.

RECITALS OF SACRED MUSIC.

November 9, 23
December 14, 28
January 11, 25

February 8, 22
March 8, 22

C. LEE WILLIAMS.

VICTORIA COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Instituted by the Victoria College Corporation, Ltd.
Incorporated 1891.

Patrons:
The Right Hon. The Marquis of Lorne, K.T.
The Right Hon. The Earl of Dartmouth.

Next Diploma Examination (Central), November 6.

Next Local Theoretical Examination (all Centres), December 4. Last day of entry, November 20.

Local Practical Examinations will be held at various Centres during the remainder of 1893.

Local Secretaries required for towns not already represented.

Full particulars and Regulations on application.

GEO. A. STANTON, Secretary.

11, Burleigh Street, Strand, W.C.

MR. W. DE M. SERGISON

RECEIVES

PROFESSIONAL STUDENTS & AMATEURS

FOR INSTRUCTION IN SINGING

AND

VOICE PRODUCTION

IN THE FOUR PRINCIPAL LANGUAGES,

AT HIS RESIDENCE,

68, BELGRAVE ROAD, S.W.,

AND AT

84, NEW BOND STREET, W.

MR. SERGISON'S instruction ensures—

DISTINCT ARTICULATION,

PURITY OF TONE,

REFINEMENT OF STYLE,

DECLAMATION and DRAMATIC EFFECT,

FULL LEGITIMATE DEVELOPMENT OF THE VOCAL POWERS.

MR. W. C. AINLEY, Mus. Bac., Cantab. (1884), teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c., by Correspondence. Terms moderate. New House, Mirfield, Yorkshire.

DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who passed the following EXAMINATIONS:—MUS. DOC., OXON. and DUBLIN; MUS. BAC. Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, and Durham (1893); L.R.A.M., 1893; L.L.C.M., 1893; F.C.O., 1893. FOUR HUNDRED Certificates, "Diplomas," and Degrees have been gained by Dr. Allison's Pupils at Musical Examinations, and they won SIX GOLD MEDALS and Three Silver Medals. Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Revision of Compositions, by Post, to Correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, Organ, and Piano. 68, Nelson St., Manchester.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, A.R.A.M., teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c., by post. Personal Lessons in Pianoforte or Theory at own or pupil's residence; or at 84, New Bond Street, W. Schools attended. Address, Willersley House, Old Charlton.

MR. T. HEMMINGS, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.C.O., L.Mus., T.C.L., prepares Candidates for ARTS and MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS by Post. Stoke-on-Trent.

MR. F. SOMMER, A.L.A.M.—Postal LESSONS in HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, COMPOSITION, &c. 16 pp., quarto. Prospectus free. 14, Mardale Street, Shepherd's Bush.

DR. F. J. KARN, Mus. Bac., Cantab.; Mus. Doc., Trinity College, Toronto; L.Mus., T.C.L., gives LESSONS Personally or by post in HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, FUGUE, ORCHESTRATION, ACOUSTICS, &c.; and prepares for Musical Examinations. Latest successes: MUS. BAC., DURHAM, 1891, 1892, and 1893 (all Candidates passed); FIRST EXAM., 1890, 1891, 1892, and 1893; CAMBRIDGE, MUS.BAC., 1892; LONDON, MUS.BAC., 1891; DUBLIN, MUS. BAC., 1891 and 1892; F.C.O. and A.C.O.; L.R.A.M. (Composition); Preliminary Mus. Bac., Cambridge, 1893; Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc., Toronto, 1893; Gold Medalists, 1890, 1892, and 1893; L.Mus., L.C.M.; L.T.C.L. and A.T.C.L.; F.T.S.C.; Senior Local, R.A.M. and R.C.M., Theory and Pianoforte; and T.C.L., Senior Honours; A.R.C.M. Special and individual attention given to Correspondents. Upwards of 300 Diplomas and Degrees and several Gold and Silver Medals gained by pupils. MSS. corrected and revised for publication. Terms very moderate. Address, 70, Park Road, Haverstock Hill, N.W.

DR. W. JOHN REYNOLDS, D.Mus., Lond., L.Mus., T.C.L., gives LESSONS, personally or by post, in the Theory of Music (including acoustics). Recent successes. 48, Highbury Grove, N.

MR. R. STOKOE, Mus. Bac., Cantab., F.C.O., gives ORGAN LESSONS at Christ Church, Down Street, Piccadilly. Harmony, Counterpoint, &c., taught personally or by post. 86, Rossiter Road, Balham, S.W.

DR. TAYLOR, Mus.D., Oxon., F.C.O., L.Mus. (Author of "Vocal Score Reading Exercises for F.C.O. Students"), prepares CANDIDATES for MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS by Post. Address, Wolverhampton Road, Stafford.

MR. A. W. TOMLYN, Mus.B., Dunelm, L.T.C.L., Berwick-on-Tweed, COACHES CANDIDATES for University and all other Exams. by post. Every possible attention and assistance guaranteed. Many past successes.

MR. W. H. TUTT, Mus. Bac., Cantab., L.R.A.M., teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, ACOUSTICS, &c., by Correspondence. Ashburn, Derbyshire.

DR. J. WARRINER prepares Candidates successfully for all MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS, and receives Resident and Professional Students, on advantageous terms, if talented. De Crespigny Lodge, Denmark Hill, S.E.

ELEMENTS of MUSIC.—SPECIAL LESSONS by Mrs. WEBSTER, L.R.A.M., Author of the "Groundwork of Music," "Child's Primer" of the Theory of Music. Granville House, 90, Angell Road, Brixton, S.W.

TO INTENDING CANDIDATES for MUS. BAC. DEGREE.—PREPARATION by Correspondence for Entrance Examinations at Oxford, Cambridge, London, Durham, and Dublin. Payment may be based on success. Method strictly individual. Single subjects if desired. Address, J. Charleston, B.A., Kenilworth House, Oxford.

A LICENTIATE (Pianoforte Playing) of the Royal Academy of Music PREPARES CANDIDATES for the Metropolitan Examination (R.A.M.). Pupil of Van Dyk (Leipzig Conservatorium). Lessons given in Regent Street. For terms, address, Musicus, 22, Howard Road, Cricklewood, N.W.

£10.—TEACHERS, TUNERS, MUSIC-SELLERS, wherever resident, can make £10 easily without cost. State subjects taught, or whether tuner, &c. Prospectus sent. Mutual, 64, High Street, Notting Hill Gate, London.

MISS M. KROHN. Guitar taught at own or Pupil's residence (Madame Pratten's method). Singing Class, Wednesday evenings. 113, Blenheim Crescent, Notting Hill, W.

MUSICAL PROFESSION.—MR. W. DE M. SERGISON, Organist and Director of the Choir of St. Peter's, Eaton Square, S.W., trains Youths as Musicians, especially as CHOIR-TRAINERS and ORGANISTS. Mr. Sergison's course affords advantages not attainable at any London Academies. Many past pupils are now holding Cathedral and important Church appointments in England, America, and the Colonies. Applications should be addressed to Mr. Sergison, at the Vestry of the Church.

MR. H. WHARTON WELLS, F.C.O., Organist of St. Mary's, Putney, has a VACANCY for a RESIDENT PUPIL. Fine three-manual organ, full musical service; also Choral and Orchestral Society. 36, Halford Road, Richmond, S.W.

MADAME GEORGE FORTESCUE, L.L.C.M., has a VACANCY for an ARTICLED PUPIL. A thorough musical education given. References given and required. For terms, &c., apply at St. Cecilia School of Music, Boulevard, Weston-super-Mare.

RESIDENT PUPIL.—Mr. Russell Lochner, Professor of Music, Member of the Incorporated Society of Musicians, Organist and Choirmaster, St. Stephen's, Paddington, has a VACANCY for a RESIDENT PUPIL. Highest references and testimonials. Address, 27, Tavistock Road, Westbourne Park, W.

RESIDENT PUPIL.—Mr. A. A. MACKINTOSH, F.C.O., Organist of Godalming Parish Church and Precentor of the Rural Deaneries of Farnham and Godalming, has a VACANCY for the above. Large three-manual organ by HILL (hydraulic and pneumatic). Practice organ in house. Daily choral services. Orchestral and Choral Societies. To one able to play a simple service exceptional terms offered. Address, Oakdene, Godalming.

CROYDON EXCELSIOR MUSICAL SOCIETY is open to ENGAGE Solo Tenors, Baritones, Basses, and Humorous Artists for its Smoking Concerts this season. Send full particulars and lowest terms to the Hon. Sec., Mr. T. Morey, Fernlea, Barham Road, South Croydon.

AMATEUR MALE-VOICE CHOIR, meeting, Covent Garden Hotel, about every fortnight, on Monday evenings. ALTOS and TENORS WANTED. Subscription nominal. Two private Smoking Concerts given during season. Apply, by letter, to R. P. Hart, 23, Surrey Street, Victoria Embankment, W.C.

WANTED, two good BOYS (Soprano) for Grove Park Parish Church, Chiswick. Stipend, £5 each. Apply, Choirmaster, 18, Arlington Park Gardens South, Chiswick.

SALISBURY CATHEDRAL.—There will shortly be a COMPETITION for two CHORISTERSHIPS. Candidates must, as a rule, be between the ages of 8 and 10, but exceptions may be made. Apply as soon as possible for information as to references required, payments, date of competition, &c., to Rev. E. E. Dorling, The Close, Salisbury.

AN ALTO WANTED, for Holy Trinity, Anerley. Full choral service. Apply, by letter, for appointment and particulars of salary, to C. H. Cellier, 41, Venner Road, Sydenham. A SOLO BOY also required for same Church.

KING'S COLLEGE, Cambridge.—There is a VACANCY in the Choir for an ALTO, either a Lay Clerk or a Choral Scholar. Stipend offered, £100 a year for the former; £90 a year for the latter. Date of Competition, December 14, 1893. For further information apply to the Dean, King's College, Cambridge. Applications to be sent in by December 7.

ALTO WANTED, for a City church. Stipend, £10 per annum. Two LEADING BOYS also required. Stipend, £4 per annum. Apply, by letter, to Clissold School of Music, 29, Lordship Road, Stoke Newington.

TO ALTO SINGERS.—WANTED, at once, for All Hallows', Lombard Street, an ALTO SINGER. Stipend, £12 a year. Duties: Two Services on Sundays and Practice on Friday evenings. Must be a Communicant. Apply to T. Bensted, 4, Pembroke Villas, Richmond.

ALTO and TENOR WANTED, for St. Mark's Church, Sandringham Road, West Hackney. Apply, stating experience and salary required, to Mr. S. T. Carter, 72, Colvestone Crescent, West Hackney.

TENORS (Two) WANTED, for the Church of the Ascension, Balham Hill, S.W. £10. Apply at the Church on Wednesday, 8.45 p.m.

TWO TENORS and two BASSES asked to give Voluntary Help, Hospital Choir. Efforts being made, good Musical Service. H. B., 122, Queen Victoria Street.

ST. PETER'S, Eaton Square, S.W.—VACANCY for a BASS VOCALIST. Good reader and knowledge of Church music indispensable. Salary, £20 per annum, with numerous extras, according to efficiency. Send testimonials to Organist and Choirmaster, St. Peter's Vestry, Eaton Square, S.W

BASS WANTED, for Choir at Rosslyn Hill (Unitarian) Chapel, Hampstead. Salary, £15 to £20. For particulars as to duties, apply to Charles Weiss, Birch Bank, Christ Church Road, Hampstead.

A VACANCY amongst the Minor Canons of Durham Cathedral will be filled up by the Dean and Chapter on November 15 next. All particulars may be obtained on application to the Chapter Clerk, The College, Durham. A complete knowledge of Cathedral music is essential.

ALTO (an accomplished singer) would join good choir, N.W. district, to keep in touch with anthems and services. Alto, Post Office, Park Street, Camden Town.

A VICAR-CHORAL (Tenor) of a London Cathedral Choir is prepared to accept an ENGAGEMENT as CHOIR-MASTER, either in London or within a few miles out. Would be willing to attend the evening services. Address, G., 27, King Street, St. James's, W.

BASS-BARITONE.—Mr. GEORGE THOMSON, having completed his engagement with the American Church of the Holy Trinity, Paris, is desirous of obtaining a similar ENGAGEMENT in England. Address, 8, Belmont Park, Lee, S.E.

CORPUS CHRISTI COLLEGE, Cambridge.—An ORGANIST SCHOLARSHIP, the duties of which will include training the Choir, and the value of which will be £50 a year, with rooms rent-free, is to be filled up next month.

Candidates are requested to send their names, with testimonials of character and of musical qualifications, not later than Thursday, November 23, to the Dean, Rev. J. R. HARMER, Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, from whom further particulars may be obtained.

The successful candidate, if not already a member of the College, must place his name on the boards at once, and begin residence as Organist in January next.

ORGANIST WANTED, shortly, for daily RECITALS. Salary, £2 2s. a week. Address, F. J. Dugard, Mus. Bac., Milton, Church Road, Bournemouth.

TRINITY COLLEGE LONDON.

FOR MUSICAL EDUCATION AND EXAMINATION.—INST. 1872.

PRESIDENT:
SIR RICHARD E. WEBSTER, Q.C., M.P.
Warden: Professor E. H. TURPIN, Mus.D.
Director of Examinations: Professor JAS. HIGGS, Mus.B.

The LAST DAY of ENTRY is December 9 for the forty-first Half-yearly HIGHER EXAMINATIONS, which will take place during the week commencing January 8, 1894, as under:—

1. For the Diplomas of Licentiate in Music (L.T.C.L.) and Associate in Music (A.T.C.L.) and for the special distinction of Fellow (F.T.C.L).
2. For Special Certificates in separate Subjects, Practical Division (Pianoforte, Organ, Singing, &c.).
3. For Special Certificates in separate Subjects, Theoretical Division (Harmony, &c.).

LOCAL EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC.
EIGHTEENTH ANNUAL SERIES.

The next Half-yearly Examination in MUSICAL KNOWLEDGE (Theory) will take place on SATURDAY, December 16, 1893, at over 150 Centres throughout the United Kingdom. Last day of entry, November 16.

Local Examinations in INSTRUMENTAL and VOCAL MUSIC (including Pianoforte, Organ playing, Solo-Singing, Violin, &c.) are announced to take place at various Centres in the United Kingdom, during November and December.

Any or all of the following printed papers may be had on application to the undersigned: (a) Regulations and list of music to be performed for the Local Examinations in Instrumental and Vocal Music, and Regulations for the (Theoretical) Local Examinations in Musical Knowledge; (b) List of Local Centres; (c) Regulations for the Higher Examinations for Diplomas and Certificates, and List of Music to be performed for the Higher Certificates in Vocal and Instrumental Subjects; (d) Prospectus of the Classes and Lectures Department; (e) General Prospectus containing List of Honorary Officers, &c.

By Order of the Academical Board,
SHELLEY FISHER, Secretary.

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, W.

THE
SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW
FOR NOVEMBER

CONTAINS:—

GENERAL NOTES.
STAFF NOTATION AND MOVABLE DOH. By W. G. MCNAUGHT.
THE BIRMINGHAM SCHOOL BOARD AND SCHOOL MUSIC.
BIRMINGHAM INSPECTORS ON LONDON BOARD SCHOOL SINGING.
TEST QUESTIONS FOR THE CERTIFICATE EXAMINATIONS.
REPORT OF THE SCOTCH EDUCATION DEPARTMENT ON MUSIC IN SCHOOLS.
MUSIC IN THE GIRLS' PUBLIC DAY SCHOOLS.
SONGS PRESENTED AT BATTERSEA COLLEGE EXAMINATION.
GOUNOD'S CHILDHOOD.
WAKEFIELD MUSIC COMPETITION.
MR. HENRY GADSBY AND THE STOCKWELL TRAINING COLLEGE.
SIGHT-TEST GIVEN AT THE MANCHESTER JUVENILE COMPETITION.
CORRESPONDENCE.
NEWS FROM ALL PARTS.
LONDON SCHOOL BOARD ITEMS.

THE
SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW
FOR NOVEMBER

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING MUSIC IN BOTH NOTATIONS:—

"THERE WAS SILENCE IN BETHLEHEM'S FIELDS." Carol for Unison Singing. By Sir J. STAINER.
"THE STAR IN THE EAST." Unison Carol. By HENRY LESLIE.
STUDIES ON THE MAJOR AND TONIC MAJOR.
EASY STUDIES IN THREE-PART SINGING.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Office: 1, Berners Street, W.

John Broadwood & Sons

(ESTABLISHED 1732)

PIANOFORTE MAKERS

BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT TO

HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES
HER ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCESS OF WALES
HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH
AND THE
REST OF THE ROYAL FAMILY.

FOR THEIR ROYAL HIGHNESSES
THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF YORK
AT YORK COTTAGE, SANDRINGHAM,
JOHN BROADWOOD & SONS
have had the honour of supplying
AN UPRIGHT GRAND PIANOFORTE
in a decorated and painted Spanish Mahogany case.

33, GREAT PULTENEY STREET (near Regent Street),
LONDON, W.

Just Published.

SUMMARY
OF THE
HISTORY AND DEVELOPMENT OF MEDIÆVAL AND MODERN EUROPEAN MUSIC
BY
C. HUBERT H. PARRY.

Price Two Shillings.
In paper boards, 2s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE REQUIEM

FROM

"MORS ET VITA"

BY

CH. GOUNOD.

	s.	d.
8VO, PAPER COVER	2	6
PAPER BOARDS	3	0

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR.

NOVEMBER 1, 1893.

CHARLES GOUNOD.

On a future occasion we propose to devote an article to the work of Gounod in the sphere of secular and sacred music. But with the news of his death fresh upon us, and in the consciousness that eternal silence has taken hold upon his gracious and enchanting muse, it is more fitting to defer criticism for the moment, and confine ourselves to the task of recording the leading features of his long and distinguished career.

Charles François Gounod was born in Paris on June 17, 1818, in a humble 'apartment' in the Rue de l'Eperon. His grandfather, who lived to the age of ninety, had been a "furbisher of the King's weapons"—an office which carried with it free quarters in the Louvre—and his father, an artist and engraver of considerable talent, had gained the second Prix de Rome in 1783. He married late in life, and died between 1825 and 1830. His wife was an excellent musician, and gave pianoforte lessons for many years. She was Gounod's first teacher, and being a woman of strong character and great piety exerted a powerful influence over her impressionable son. His bent for music manifested itself at an early age, but at the Lycée Saint-Louis, his head-master, M. Poirson, declared that he had "the bump of Latin and Greek," and would die a professor, until a practical test of his accomplishments convinced him that music, and music alone, was the lad's true vocation. Before leaving school, le petit Charles had studied harmony under Reicha. At the Conservatoire, which he entered at the age of sixteen, he was the pupil of Halévy for counterpoint and fugue and Lesueur for composition. On the latter's death, in 1837, Gounod was passed on to Paër. In the same year he ran second for the Prix de Rome, carrying off the first prize by twenty-five votes to two in 1839 with his cantata "Fernand." To these records of Gounod's pupilage may be added the fact that a movement of a symphony by him was performed at one of the Conservatoire Concerts in November, 1837, and that a year later an "Agnus Dei" by him was heard at a Concert given in memory of their master by the pupils of Lesueur.

On gaining the Prix de Rome Gounod started off at once for the Eternal City. Some musicians have chafed under the restriction of this obligatory residence. To Gounod, with his taste for classics and ecclesiasticism, it was an unmixed pleasure. He threw himself with the utmost ardour into the study of Palestrina's works, which he took for his model, and in 1841 a Mass, with orchestral accompaniment and solos for tenor and contralto, performed at the Church of San Luigi dei Francesi, gained for him the title of Honorary Organist for life at that church. During this period he composed some of his most beautiful songs, notably "Le Soir" and "Le Vallon," and made the acquaintance of Mendelssohn's sister Fanny, in whose letters may be found a most charming picture of the impulsive young Frenchman, full of talent and of charm, enjoying life to the utmost, and always ready to break out into dithyrambics at the slightest provocation. After three years at Rome, Gounod spent nine months in Vienna studying Bach and "living on counterpoint," as he afterwards described it. On All Souls' Day, 1842, a Requiem Mass of his was performed in the Church of St. Charles. It is worthy of mention that two of the themes in this work re-appear in his later compositions, the Sedisti lassus—of which Mendelssohn said that it might have been signed by Cherubini—in the "Mors et Vita" and the theme of the "Dies iræ" as Marguerite's final appeal to divine pity. Fanny Hensel had given Gounod a letter to her brother at Leipzig, where he was most cordially received by the composer of the "Elijah," and also met Robert Schumann. He also paid a visit to the Hensels in Berlin, of which a most interesting record will be found in Fanny Hensel's letters. In particular she mentions his interest in oratorio music, and his intention to treat the exploit of "Judith" in a work of this form. On his return to Paris the desire to retire from the world, which had already laid powerful hold upon him at Rome, returned with redoubled force. He became Organist to the Church of the Missions Etrangères, studied theology at the School of the Carmelites, and led a life of such cloistral seclusion that he was known as the Abbé Gounod, and his admission to the priesthood was actually—though incorrectly—announced in the press in February, 1846. Happily for art, his mother, though a most devout woman, realised that his ardent and emotional nature rendered him unfit for a life of renunciation, and exerted all her influence in dissuading him from entering the Church. The period of doubt and hesitation extended over several years, until his fate was settled by a chance introduction to Madame Viardot-Garcia. This great artist recognised his talent at once, and persuaded him to accompany her on a tour to England in the winter of 1850-1851. Here it was that Gounod first met with unequivocal encouragement in the press. For at one of Mr. Hullah's Concerts, held in St. Martin's Hall, in January, 1851, selections from his "Messe Solennelle" and a secular Scena for bass were performed to the satisfaction of a critical audience, and elicited a glowing eulogium from the Athenæum of the following 18th. In this notice the young composer was hailed as a master, and confident predictions were uttered as to his career. The authorship has been assigned, on good authority, to M. Viardot, though, no doubt, Henry Chorley, already musical critic of the Athenæum, was responsible for the form in which the notice appeared. It passed unnoticed in England, but it created a great stir in France, where—no doubt through the good services of the Viardots—it was widely disseminated through the press, and stimulated curiosity as to his forthcoming début as an operatic composer. For Madame Viardot's confidence in her new protégé's genius was such that, in renewing her engagement at the Opera, she expressly stipulated for the production, within a certain time, of a work from Gounod's pen. That work was "Sapho," a three-act opera to a poem by Emile Augier, which was duly produced, with Madame Viardot as the heroine, on March 16, 1851. "Sapho" contains some beautiful music, notably the Goatherd's song and the final stanzas sung by the heroine, but it only achieved a succès d'estime. In the following year, in which he wrote the excellent incidental music to Ponsard's "Ulysse" at the Théâtre Français, he assumed the direction of the Orpheonic Society, for which he wrote numerous choruses, motets, and masses for male voices. Here, too, he produced works by Palestrina and Bach, and gained invaluable practical experience as a composer of concerted vocal music. In the same year he married Mdlle. Zimmermann, daughter of one of the professors at the Conservatoire. Gounod's next essay — at the Académie Impériale — was "La Nonne sanglante" (October 18, 1854), the libretto to which, based by Scribe on Lewis's novel "The Monk," had been refused in succession by Meyerbeer, Halévy, and Berlioz. And here it is worthy of note, as M. Pougin points out, that not one of the works destined by him in the first instance for the National Opera House proved a success. Neither "La Nonne" nor "La Reine de Saba" (February 29, 1862), "Polyeucte" (October 7, 1878) nor "Le Tribut de Zamora" (April 1, 1881), established themselves as part of the regular répertoire, while "Faust" and "Roméo et Juliette," so often and triumphantly performed on these boards, had been originally produced at the Théâtre Lyrique. It was at the last-named house that Gounod's "Médecin malgré lui" was also given for the first time on January 15, 1858; but, in spite of its irresistible gaiety, it failed to impress the public, and was not revived until 1886. Nor is the history of "Faust" creditable to the Parisian public. It was declined in the first instance at the National Opera House on the ground that it was not showy enough; and after being accepted at the Théâtre Lyrique, was shelved for a whole year because of the production of Dennery's drama on the same subject at the Porte St. Martin. And when finally, after a variety of vicissitudes, this enchanting work at last saw the light on March 19, 1859, neither press nor public were convinced. Carvalho believed in the work and kept "Faust" in the bills for four months, but the audiences were attracted more by the talent of his wife than the merit of the music. Then he failed, but the publisher, Choudens, who had invested his entire capital in purchasing the copyright for the modest sum of £400, carried the work, the composer, and the prima donna across the frontier, and after a triumphal progress in Germany, Belgium, Italy, and England, "Faust" returned to Paris in 1862, and was, at last, acclaimed as a masterpiece. It was produced for the first time at the Grand Opéra in 1869 with the new ballet Act, and attained its 500th representation on those boards on November 4, 1887. "Roméo et Juliette," produced at the Lyrique on April 27, 1867, was not given at the Grand Opéra till November, 1888. The dates of the productions of Gounod's other operas are as follows: "Philémon et Baucis," Théâtre Lyrique, February 18, 1860; "Mireille," Lyrique, March 19, 1864; "La Colombe," Baden-Baden, 1860; "Cinq Mars," Opéra Comique, April 5, 1877. The list of his dramatic works may be completed by the choruses and incidental music to Legouvé's "Les Deux Reines," Théâtre Ventadour, November 27, 1872; Barbier's "Jeanne d'Arc," Gaîté, November 8, 1873; and the music to the "Drames Sacrés," at the Vaudeville in March, 1893. He is known to have written, to Molière's original text, an opera, "Georges Dandin," the score of which is said to be in England, and to have partially completed the score of "Héloïse et Abélard." In the intervals of his operatic composition Gounod found time to write three Symphonies, two of which have been heard at the Crystal Palace; a short Oratorio, "Tobie"; a dozen Masses; a Stabat Mater; several choruses for male and mixed voices; pianoforte pieces; and an immense number of songs to French, Italian, and English words. At the time of the Franco-Prussian war he took up his residence in England, and lived amongst us till 1875. To this period belong his fine Cantata "Gallia," given at the Albert Hall in May, 1871; the music to "Les Deux Reines," "Jeanne d'Arc," and "Georges Dandin"; the orchestration of "Polyeucte," the whole of which he afterwards re-wrote from memory; and a number of songs and concerted pieces, many of which were specially written for the choir which he himself founded and conducted. The last decade of his life was almost entirely devoted to the composition of sacred music. "The Redemption," sketched as early as 1868, was produced with immense success under the composer's direction at the Birmingham Festival of 1882, and "Mors et Vita" at the gathering of 1885. Amongst his latest works mention must be made of a fourth "Messe Solennelle," a Mass in honour of Jeanne d'Arc, and the "Hymn of our Lady of France," a Te Deum, and a Requiem.

The foregoing bare catalogue gives some idea of the remarkable industry and versatility of the great master whose loss is deplored by the entire musical world. Alike in his gayest and his gravest moods he was an ideal representative of the charm, the elegance, and the stately grace of the best type of Frenchman. He was a very great melodist, with an unerring sense of beauty and symmetry, and his instinct for colour was so keen that with the minimum of means he never failed to produce the richest and most impressive effects. Lastly, to his rare accomplishments as a musician he added the fascinations of a most winning personality and the attractions of a highly cultivated intellect. He sang exquisitely, he was a brilliant conversationalist, a fine scholar, a most suggestive and witty writer, and a master of the art of irony and badinage. Gounod was not a genius of the inaccessible order. He found it hard to close his doors to any one, so great was his bonhomie. His optimism remained with him to the end. And although he had achieved his task on earth, and earned the rest into which he has entered, his loss has evoked the most genuine regret all over the civilized world in the hearts of scores of thousands whom he has cheered, delighted, and soothed by the magic of his muse.

SAVAGE MUSIC AND ITS LESSONS.

"Whatever is founded on such Passions and Principles of Action as are common to the whole Race of Man, will be most effectually investigated, as to its Origin and Progress, by viewing Man in his savage or uncultivated State. . . . It may be affirmed with Truth, that for Want of beginning our Inquiries at this early and neglected Period, and by viewing Man under his State of Civilisation only, many curious and interesting Questions have been left involved in Darkness which might have been clearly unfolded by a free and full Research into the Passions, Propensities, and Qualities of savage Man." The method of study here advocated is, at the present day, generally supposed to be an outcome of the Evolutionary or Darwinian movement, and weaker brethren have, indeed, been known to regard it with suspicion on that account; but the passage we have quoted was written no less than a hundred and thirty years ago, by the learned and ingenious Dr. Brown, Canon of Carlisle, and Chaplain to His Majesty. It occurs in his "History of the Rise and Progress of Poetry through its several species," which was published at Newcastle in 1764, and must certainly be regarded as a remarkable work for its period. Now, as a method recommended by antiquity so respectable, to say nothing of authority so orthodox, cannot fail of acceptance—even in quarters hitherto rendered hostile by reason of the misapprehension referred to—those who adopt it will do well to realise that it has limitations. A note of warning on this subject was sounded by Professor Max Müller in an article which appeared in the Nineteenth Century for January, 1885. Savages, he pointed out, are of two kinds—progressive and retrogressive; and as man obviously began as a "savage" of the former kind we must, in our studies of existing "primitive" races, carefully distinguish between those who have not yet risen to a higher state and those who have fallen from it. Such races, moreover, though "primitive" in one sense, are yet very, very old, and do not therefore represent the actual beginnings of humanity. We must, consequently, not expect too much from such enquiries. Heeding these precautions, however, the Study of Agriology—to give it the ugly modern name—may undoubtedly be pursued with profit, especially in the elucidation of historical problems, when evidence of a more direct sort is not to be obtained.

Unfortunately the materials available for a study of the music of savage or semi-savage races, though abundant, cannot always be relied upon for accuracy. If special training, to say nothing of the gift of a good ear, be needed for the task of transcribing in modern notation the music even of such highly civilised countries as Japan, India, or Arabia, which has long ago attained the position of an exact science, how indispensable are such qualifications for the collection of examples of folk-music among races who cannot yet be said to possess a scale, and with some of whom, indeed, melody is produced rather by accident than design? Yet a large proportion of our information on the subject is derived from books written by travellers who quite obviously did not possess this training, and some of whom supplemented ignorance by prejudice. Another difficulty has been found in the comparative inaccessibility of these records, due to the number of books in which they must needs be sought, and the consequent expenditure of time or money—or both—which this involves; for no one has yet been found to do for the music of the world what Mr. Herbert Spencer has done for its social life in that stupendous monument of patience and intelligent classification, "Descriptive Sociology." This, there is reason to hope, may come in the not-too-far-off future, since Carl Engel, who had in contemplation a work of the kind, left behind him a large collection of tunes which he had got together for the purpose. In the meantime let us give thanks for the boon of a recently published volume, "Primitive Music," by Mr. Wallaschek.*

On the subject of the origin and progress of music as inferred from the study of existing primitive races, a certain number of more or less scientific essays, articles, and lectures have been given to the world from time to time; but, so far as our knowledge extends, Mr. Wallaschek's book is the first attempt—in our language, at any rate—to deal with the problems involved either on a scale commensurate with their number, variety, and importance, or with anything like an adequate conception of their range and difficulty. It should, however, in justice be said that the existence of such a work has been made possible only within the present generation, and even had this been otherwise the equipment for its production would have been obstacle enough. Scientific men, as a rule, know little of music; musicians seldom trouble to acquire those scientific habits of thought without which such enquiries are productive but of words that darken counsel. Helmholtz, Gevaert, and Carl Engel belong to a class so poor in numbers that Mr. Wallaschek, as the latest accession to it, cannot but be welcome. He has laid musicians under a lasting obligation; for in this volume—an octavo of some 300 pages—practically the whole subject is placed within the reach of any ordinarily intelligent reader. Over five hundred works have been consulted, of which a list, occupying twenty-five pages, is given. They comprise travels, journals of learned societies, scientific books of all kinds, musical works and periodicals. The information extracted from these is classified under subject-headings, and forms a veritable storehouse of knowledge, none the less useful for being at times highly entertaining. It consists, naturally, in the main, of passages describing the music, musical instruments, dances, pantomimes, dramatic and other entertainments of savage and barbaric races in every part of the world. From this mass of material the author deduces theories and conclusions on various points of interest to the musician, the historian, and the psychologist, such as: the basis of our musical system, the physical and psychical influence of music, the nature of the most ancient succession of tones (i.e., scale), the impulses to which are due the "origin" of music, the use of harmony, the nature of the musical gift, and so on, and so on. In the course of these enquiries Mr. Wallaschek necessarily discusses the views of Darwin, Herbert Spencer, Wallace, Weismann, Galton, and others, but does so with a tolerance and fairness quite remarkable considering that his own views often differ from theirs. In this respect the book deserves to be quoted as a model—there is nothing dogmatic, nothing assertive—only the evidence of patient investigation and thought, put forward with the modesty that distinguishes the real man of science in search of truth rather than victory or fame.

It is not to be expected that students of this fascinating volume will accept, without question, all Mr. Wallaschek's conclusions; neither indeed would such docility be an advantage. The various points with which he deals are practically new, even to the musical reader, none but specialists having hitherto given them the attention they deserve and may now—thanks to the publication of this volume—receive from all. By and by, no doubt, the note of controversy will sound, and we may then hope for a concentration of effort towards the accumulation of evidence and argument unknown to more peaceful times. Mr. Wallaschek has mapped out plenty of battlefields. Take, for instance, his interesting proposition that "very likely we should never have got regular scales if we had depended upon the ear and voice only. The first and unique cause to settle the type of a regular scale is the instrument. . . . We owe the scale not to nature (voice, ear, laws of sound, or animals), and not to science or artificial systems that were worked upon and thought out for centuries, but to the practical player and the qualities of his instrument"—a view which he supports at greater length than we have space for here. This alone should breed controversy enough to last a lifetime! Or take his statement that harmony is not "so new an invention as is commonly supposed, nor is it confined to European races." This "supposed modern invention," he tells us, "was in use among savage tribes in ancient times." Several examples of savage songs in harmony are given in musical notation, and our author then says: "It may still be objected that those savages who know harmony now may have acquired it in course of time (even without foreign influence), and may have been ignorant of it centuries ago. I think, however, I can take it for granted that there are still savage tribes whose culture has remained stationary ever since the stone age. If this is so it seems—to say the least—extremely improbable that such tribes (as Bushmen, Australians) should at the same time have made any progress in music alone." How far this view may be relied upon is, of course, an open question; but the fact that at the present day harmony is unused, and even disliked, by many Oriental nations high in the scale of civilization, while savages may be found who sing in thirds and sixths, is at least sufficiently remarkable. Still more so is the fact that among these primitive people even the germs of counterpoint may be traced. Witness the following, from Tongatabu:—

* "Primitive Music: An Enquiry into the Origin and Development of Music, Songs, Instruments, Dances, and Pantomimes of Savage Races." By Richard Wallaschek. With musical examples. (Longmans, Green and Co.)

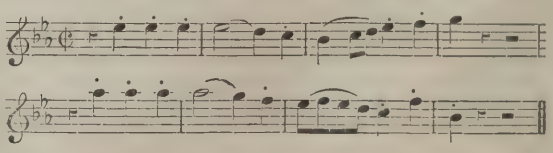
"The difference between people with and without harmonic music," says Mr. Wallaschek, "is not a historical, but a racial one. There is no doubt that our feeling for and comprehension of harmony have been developed by time, but so also has our feeling for melody. . . . I do not think that our ideas of the structure and formation of melody are completed before our ideas of harmony begin, but that both originate at the same time, and, going hand in hand in their respective development, mutually influence each other. . . . It is true that there are periods in the history of music when melody seems to have gone its own way, and when the whole of music seemed to develop into a melodic direction only; but this is the case with harmony and counterpoint as well." Mr. Wallaschek goes even a step farther, and suggests how harmony may have been, if not actually the parent, at any rate the foster-mother of melody. His remark on this subject is most ingenious: "The most primitive germ of harmony and counterpoint is the continuation of the keynote throughout the piece; the same method, but intended only instead of actually sung, gives the principle of tonality—the essence of melody. This shows their common origin." But waning space warns—otherwise we might have gone on quoting from this thought-stimulating book till we had destroyed the reader's wish to possess it; whereas our desire is rather to sharpen appetite than to satisfy. This, by the way, seems also to have been Mr. Wallaschek's aim in restricting the musical examples given in his book to so small a number as twenty-five—if not, we must express our regret that more have not been given. It remains but to add that Mr. Wallaschek, in preparing the English version of his work, has been assisted by Dr. H. R. Mill, Mr. R. H. Legge, Professor and Mrs. Sully, Mrs. Plimmer, and others, and that the existence of the work itself is due to a suggestion of Dr. Edward Westermarck. He has our thanks.

FOLK-SONGS IN SYMPHONIES.

The last three numbers (40-42) of our excellent contemporary the Allgemeine Musik-Zeitung have contained an article by Dr. Heinrich Reimann which cannot fail to make some sensation in musical circles. It is àpropos of another article in the Kroatische Rundschau, which has annoyed certain "patriotic" gentlemen in Austria because it asserts that Haydn founded the melody of his National Hymn, "God preserve our Emperor," on a Croatian folk-song. The writer of this latter article is Professor Fr. S. Kuhac, the greatest living authority on Slavonic folk-songs, and the author of a splendid work (four volumes, each of about 400 pages) containing some 1,600 specimens of them. Dr. Reimann, who has studied this collection well, and speaks most highly of it, does not only not deny the accuracy of Professor Kuhac's statement, but springs a surprise on his readers by asserting that Papa Haydn has undoubtedly borrowed extensively from the all but inexhaustible fund of Croatian folk-tunes. He recalls the fact that Haydn lived for a great many years in the service of Prince Esterhazy, whose castle was situated at the southern end of the Neusiedler Lake, whence it is less than 100 English miles to the frontier of Croatia. We must refer our readers to Dr. Reimann's article for fuller particulars respecting Haydn's indebtedness to that country's tunes; its perusal will repay even those who are not acquainted with German, as numerous examples are quoted in music type, which explain themselves. We can only reproduce a few of the most striking cases. Here is No. 891 in Professor Kuhac's collection:—

which has been used by Haydn in the Finale of his splendid E flat Symphony, where it stands thus—



No. 905 in Kuhac is an interesting specimen—oj Je - le - na, Je - le - na, ja - bu - ka ze - le - na.

Pod njom ras - la, pod njom ras - la, tra - va di - te - li - na,
pod njom ras - la, pod njom ras - la, tra - va di - te - li - na.

which compare with the first subject of the Finale of the Symphony in D—and its continuation—

The next (Kuhac, No. 1,084), with its characteristic augmented second—we find in the beautiful Andante with Variations of the same E flat Symphony for the Finale of which our first quotation is used. But surprising as these "revelations" are, what will be thought of Kuhac's assertion that Beethoven also borrowed a considerable portion of the subject-matter for his Pastoral Symphony and several other works from the same source. Dr. Reimann is somewhat sceptical when he comes to this part of his article, and quotes tunes which, if they were written before Beethoven, prove that the greatest of all composers did not always label borrowed material.* But were they? There's the rub, and the "further particulars" for which Dr. Reimann in his article asks Professor Kuhac will be anxiously awaited by all music-lovers. In the meantime, we will quote the two most striking specimens. Our readers will at once recognise them by their similarity to important subjects in the first and last movements of the Symphony:—

* As he did in two of the Rasoumowsky Quartets, where, it will be remembered, he distinctly calls the themes of the Finales "Thème Russe."

Here we must stop, while expressing a hope that our foremost Beethoven students will take the matter up.

Modern science has dowered us with a phrase which is in everybody's mouth—"The survival of the fittest." Very few of those who use it, however, appear to grasp its real meaning. Thus, for instance, quite recently a musical contemporary delivered itself in a "leader" as follows: "That the old folk-songs are dying out there is no doubt. But this is due to many causes. Life is not so simple as it was; our tastes have changed. . . . I asked a distinguished German musical writer, not long since, how folk-music fared in his country. His reply was that the airs of Millöcker and Sullivan were 'crushing the pretty flowers of the people's song.' . . . The same influences are at work in England. . . . In our enthusiasm for the quest of folk-songs we must remember that things are not good merely because they are old. Many of these songs deserve to be forgotten. . . . The principle of the survival of the fittest may be trusted to keep the best alive." Now by the writer's own showing the "principle" cannot be "trusted" to do anything of the sort, since it is admitted that the "pretty flowers of the people's song" are being crushed. Altogether apart from this obvious mistake, however, the sentence we have italicised illustrates a far more insidious error. The phrase "survival of the fittest" does not mean, and was never intended to mean (necessarily), the survival of the "best," and is not used in this sense by scientific writers. It means survival of those best able to survive under the prevailing (existing) conditions, and therefore "fittest" for (i.e., most in harmony with) them. In order that these "fittest" shall also be the "best"—in a more enduring sense—it is necessary that the prevailing conditions, or, to use the scientific term, the "environment," be favourable. This last condition is continually overlooked by writers, who speak of the "survival of the fittest" with a cheerful complacency born of the entirely erroneous notion that, in spite of conditions tending to the development and encouragement of evil, the eventual result is bound to be the survival of the worthiest. This, of course, favours a policy of laissez faire and encourages the notion that we are under no obligations to hinder noxious, or to foster healthy, growths. If these few remarks should hasten the happy despatch of a dangerous error we shall all have reason to be thankful.

But there are other sentences in the above quotation that call for remark. Says our contemporary, with profound wisdom, "In our enthusiasm for the quest of folk-songs we must remember that things are not good merely because they are old." Quite so; but—who ever said they were? That is not the point. Folk-lore—of which folk-song is a branch—is collected not alone for its own sake—because it is "good," as our contemporary would say—but for the light it throws on history, ethnology, social customs, the progress of artistic taste, and so on. On this account many things, otherwise of little worth, may be, not indeed "good," but interesting and valuable because, and "merely because," they are old. Yet, says our contemporary, "Many of these songs deserve to be forgotten." Why? Is our knowledge of the past to be derived solely from its meritorious side? This would be "History" indeed! Is popular belief in the "wisdom of our ancestors" not great enough already that it should be magnified by suppressing all records of their folly? Besides, what right have we to assume that the taste of our own day will necessarily be that of posterity?—that what we think "bad" or "good" will be so regarded by them? Of course no one asks that all such songs should be sung; but to throw "cold water" on the efforts of those who collect them—often with great difficulty—always with exemplary patience—is nothing short of base ingratitude. Go to! our contemporary, Go to!

We have received with a great shock the news—we had almost written the musical news—that there are bogus Bards as well as bogus degree-holders of a less venerable kind. At first it seemed too awful to be true, and it was only very gradually that we learned to contemplate with something like equanimity the terrible state of things thus brought to light. The hideous revelation came about in this wise: Our September issue, it will be remembered, contained an article stating that Dr. Mackenzie was the first English composer on whom the title and privileges of a Welsh Bard had ever been conferred. This assertion was immediately disputed by several gentlemen of more or less distinction, who claimed that they too, at various times and places in Wales, had been invested with the ancient and honourable title. Awe-struck and appalled at the possible consequences of its error, The Musical Times, in its October issue, humbly recanted. Then stepped forth the formidable "Morien," dreaded of men, to break a lance (so to speak) in our favour. Thus he to the Western Mail: "Dr. Mackenzie was the first, either distinguished Scotchman or Englishman, to receive the distinction in one of the genuine ancient Gorsedds, where the ancient Druids were wont to assemble in their white robes in the olden time. Receiving the distinction on the Logan Stone, otherwise Ark Stone, at Pontypridd was regarded as of equal dignity to receiving the distinction within the sacred precinct of Côr Gawr (Stonehenge), or the Holy Circle of Bryn Gwyddon (Ab Rhi), Wiltshire. And it can be safely stated that Dr. Mackenzie was the very first, either Scotchman or Englishman, to receive the said distinction within a sacred sanctuary of the Ancient Bards of Britannia. All the other modern Gorsedds are vile imitations of this and other ancient ones, and all titles received at them are pinchbeck titles, but Dr. Mackenzie's is a genuine article, made sacred by the shrine and its ancient associations."

Few modern writers have shown more originality in the arrangement of English words than the peculiarly gifted musical critic of the Pall Mall Gazette. The death of M. Gounod brought forth a special memoir, written with special diction. The lucidity and majesty of the following is unsurpassable: "Looking more broadly at the general value of Gounod's work, one is constrained also to recognise an aërial and skipping fancy, and an imagination somewhat at a discount. His muse is unutterably feminine; in all the lighter elegancies it is accomplished beyond every feminine dream of the muse in the street." We are a little doubtful what the "dream of the muse in the street" may be, but farther on, in reference to Gounod's songs, we are told that "the wings of his muse just outlasted the span of their demands." This, of course, clearly explains the dress of the muse. She has not yet been seen in English streets. This too is interesting: "As a writer of religious music, he is almost—allowances for accomplishment being made—commonplace." It is a little startling to read that "The Redemption" is "a deplorable failure" and "'Mors et Vita,' though better, and though redeemed by such a number as 'Et absterget Deus,' is, for Gounod, quite an inferior composition"; but it is comforting to learn from a writer who knows so much that Gounod "has assuredly done work which, for sugar-sweetness and perfection of refinement, reaches the best level of this not quite best kind of achievement." What a future there ought to be for such a critic, and how glorious it would be to have a hand in shaping it!

What with the really artistic "incidental music" that so frequently accompanies and illustrates the higher dramatic ventures of the present day, and the equally artistic renunciation of unnecessary music that is being brought in at one or two theatres, the terribly old convention of "slow music" that used to be quite inevitable, not only in melodrama of the Adelphi type, but in refined comedy, seems likely to die a natural death—and not before its time. An excellent example of improvement is to be observed at the Comedy Theatre, where Mr. A. J. Caldicott is at present directing the music. A well-chosen programme of pieces sufficiently light to keep the audience in good spirits, yet not incongruous even with the more pathetic scenes of "Sowing the Wind," is played between the acts, as well as after the final fall of the curtain—rather an unnecessary tax on the time of the players, by the way. But during the progress of the scenes not a note is heard from the band. When Miss Emery gives Mr. Brandon Thomas the letter which brings about the climax of the magnificently-played third Act, old playgoers who are also musicians, and who are accustomed to have all the illusion suddenly dispersed by the vague meandering of a muted violin, perceive with wonder and gratitude that the orchestra is silent. The result is naturally an enormous augmentation of effect to sensitive persons; and the innovation may indeed be credited with some humble share in the enormous effect made by the actors, whose slightest touches may now be appreciated without interruption. Other houses, please copy.

Last month the United Kingdom gave birth to no less than three new musical monthlies. We doubt if any month has ever before been similarly honoured. The Orchestral Association Gazette is, as its name implies, the organ of the Society founded in June last for the protection of the best interests of orchestral musicians; The Minim is a Cardiff journal devoted to musical matters in general and those of Cardiff in particular; and The Scottish Musical Monthly, which hails from Glasgow, will naturally occupy itself with musical doings North of the Border. To all three we wish, not only success, but that their efforts for the propagation of musical knowledge and the improvement of public taste may be well and wisely directed.

We are glad to see that the street music nuisance, on which an important article appeared in our September issue, is now being very fully ventilated in the columns of The Times. The correspondence was initiated, on the 23rd ult., by a long letter from Mr. H. Heathcote Statham. Next day Professor C. V. Stanford wrote, supporting Mr. Statham; and other writers have since added their protests. We shall return to the subject next month. Meanwhile, it is satisfactory to read that an "Association for the Better Regulation of Street Music and of Street Noises" is in course of formation.

FACTS, RUMOURS, AND REMARKS.

The annual Special Number of The Musical Times, to be issued on December 14, will this time be devoted to the Life and Work of George Frederic Handel, and will, therefore, necessarily be of special interest to Anglo-Saxon readers. The literary matter will be edited and partly written, as before, by Mr. Joseph Bennett. The illustrations will consist of portraits, views, fac-similes of manuscripts, &c.; and several hitherto unpublished letters will also be included.

It appears that even in musical Austria there are critics who nod occasionally. For instance, the gentleman who "does" the music for the Vienna Deutsche Zeitung, having occasion recently to state that a certain young—and, we suppose, pretty—soprano was studying the part of Zerlina in "Don Giovanni," added that Beethoven's (sic) music was well worthy of such honour. Another Viennese critic lately informed his readers that the opera "Cid" would shortly be performed at Prague, and that the composer, P. Corneille (!), was expected to be present at the first performance. This gentleman doubtless means well, but he is foggy. Pierre Corneille certainly wrote a "Cid," but it is not an opera, and—he died in 1684. Our friend no doubt meant to have written "Peter Cornelius," who has composed an opera—or, rather, music-drama—entitled "Der Cid." But even he can't visit Prague—at least, in the flesh—for he died in 1874. Who, then—? We give it up.

The Rev. Hugh Falconer, B.D., lecturing in Newcastle on Mozart, described music as "a modern instrument for the expression and discipline of the emotions." That instrument, according to the rev. gentleman, is somewhat neglected by the Newcastle folk, because, for several years past, no "purely orchestral band" has interpreted to them the works of the masters. If that be the case, Mr. Falconer has a call to upbraid, but he should not make absurd comparisons, as in the following sentence: "We have had to content ourselves with chamber music—perfect, doubtless, of its kind, yet a poor substitute for the sort of music that a fully equipped orchestra can render." The lecturer should have known that good chamber music is never poor, either as a substitute or in any other capacity. By decrying it, Mr. Falconer does no good, and may do harm.

The musical critic of a provincial contemporary was struck in a special manner by a recent Organ Recital. The performer's "rendition" (horrid word!) of one piece was "instinct with feeling." An anthem was "feelingly submitted" by the choir. The playing of a Fantasia was "instinct with feeling and pathos." A Pastoral was given "with marked religious feeling and musicianly pathos," and in a "soulful" Romance for violin the double stopping was "really sublime in its fulsomeness of tone." The writer may certainly be described as a modern "man of feeling."

We are evidently indebted to the same critic for a long notice of a Concert at Harrogate. In it feeling is more conspicuous than before, but there are gems of another kind. A violinist's expression was "full of modulative and artistic tone." We read of "a Sonata for pianoforte and violin dedicated to Kreutzer"; also that the violinist "followed the difficult pianoforte accompaniment with skilful method and artistic exactitude"; also that another performance was "full of melodious fervour and musicianly accentuation"; also that a further display was "fraught with intense musical study and feeling, the tremolo expressiveness being manifestly marked"; also—but enough has been said to make a terrible example of such meaningless word-stringing.

The Wagnerites appear to be quarrelling. One of them thus speaks: "What Mrs. Cosima with her servile Squires of the Grail and Cæsar-swinging Paladins, among whom very many æsthetic 'hurrah-boys' and very few good artists are to be found, seeks to place instead of the serious tradition of her late husband is a personal and Messiah cultus, a tasteless sort of performance, with a considerable tendency towards the Oberammergau style, and, at the same time, a treatment of representative individuality which is totally opposed to Wagner's spirit, and which seeks even to suppress or banish the master's friends and approved directors." It is to be hoped that Mrs. Cosima will change her treatment of "representative individuality," whatever it be.

The Musical Courier, speaking of the "young Vandals who enlisted under Liszt's victorious standards," remarks: "Time has mellowed them, robbed their playing of its clangorous quality, and, when the last Liszt pupil gives his last Recital, we may wonder at the charges of exaggerated realism. Tempered realism is now the watchword of the school. The flamboyancy which grew out of Tausig's efforts to let loose the Wagnerian Valkyrie on the keyboard has been toned down into more sober, grateful colouring. The scarlet vest of the romantic school has been out-worn; the brutal brilliancies and so-called orchestral effects of the realists are now viewed with more amusement than anything else." So mote it be.

Mr. Franz Rummel, an excellent pianist, whom we have for some years missed from our Concert-rooms, where he is well remembered, gave three Concerts lately at Berlin. To judge from the reports in the best local papers, he seems to have been hailed with wonderful unanimity as a player who unites to a brilliant, unerring technique all those higher qualities of head and heart which alone enable an artist to reveal the composers' intentions in the great classical masterpieces. Mr. Rummel played Beethoven's Fourth Concerto, Schumann's A minor and Saint-Saëns's G minor at one Concert, after which the Berlin press spoke of him in terms which are only applied to the very greatest amongst pianists.

The Committee of the first Cardiff Musical Festival have published a balance sheet, from which it appears that the expenditure was just over £3,290, while the receipts from sale of tickets amounted to no more than £2,512; leaving a deficiency of £778. Donations reduced this to £537, and a call of 5 per cent. from the guarantors brought in £543 odd. There is now a balance of £5 9s. 1d. at the bank. Nothing daunted by a heavy loss, the Committee for the Festival of 1895 have met to initiate proceedings, and we hear that new works by Sir J. Barnby and Mr. Haydn Parry were accepted.

The victorious Welsh women lately singing in Chicago reached Southampton on the 4th ult., bringing their treasures with them. Truly, they were laden with trophies. Miss Bessie Evans carried the contralto prize; Miss Mary Johns, the soprano prize; Miss Emily Francis, the prize for Welsh costume and song; the conductress, Mrs. Clara Novello Davies, had the gold medal of the ladies' voice competition; and the whole choir bore aloft, so to speak, the 300 dollars prize for choral singing. Well done, "gallant little Wales"!

King Oscar of Sweden has conferred on Miss Hildegard Werner, of Newcastle, the gold medal "Litteris et Artibus," as a recognition of her musical and literary abilities. The medal, which, by the King's command, Miss Hildegard Werner has to wear, has already been conferred by King Oscar upon Jenny Lind, Christine Nilsson, Lady Hallé-Néruda, and the late Madame Trebelli, and is the highest distinction the King of Sweden and Norway can bestow on a lady artist.

The tenth series of the Musical Guild Concerts was announced to commence on the 31st ult. at the Town Hall, Kensington. The three remaining Concerts will be given on the 14th and 28th inst., and December 12. Among the works promised are Schubert's String Quintet in C, Op. 163 (with two violoncellos), Mozart's Quintet for pianoforte and wind instruments, Saint-Saëns's Pianoforte Trio in F (Op. 18), and Quartets by Brahms and Beethoven.

It is interesting to note that the Guild was honoured by an invitation from the Musical Bureau of the Chicago Exhibition to send over a party of performers to represent England in string ensemble playing. The performers selected were Messrs. A. Bent, W. Stephenson, A. Hobday, P. Kearne, and P. Ludwig, and it was intended that they should give the Concerts during the first three weeks of September. The scheme was of course abandoned when the Chicago failure became known; but the invitation remains as a plume of quite unusual size in the Guild's already well decorated cap.

Mr. Henschel expresses himself as delighted with the orchestra provided for him in Scotland. It contains forty-five British artists, the remainder consisting of performers from various Continental lands. At the first rehearsal Mr. Henschel set them to play a Symphony by Beethoven and the "Meistersinger" Overture. This was done with surprising results, considering that the men had never before met.

A contemporary, finding something to say about musical "prodigies," states that Mozart died of dropsy. That is a discovery, since we have all along been told that his death was due to inflammation of the brain. Has our contemporary mixed up the cases of Beethoven and Mozart, and given to one the disease of the other?

The Handel Festival of next year will take place at the Crystal Palace on June 22, 25, 27, and 29. Programme: "The Messiah," "Israel," and a Selection as before. Mr. Manns to conduct, of course.

Mascagni headed the composers represented in the Viennese repertory last season, there having been fifty-five performances of his works. Wagner, who came next, was twenty behind, and Verdi eight behind Wagner. Cherubini and Gluck—not bad musicians they—brought up the rear, side by side.

Scene: St. James's Hall, during one of last season's Philharmonic Concerts. Elderly lady in stalls, addressing neighbour after a certain Russian pianist's performance of the slow movement in Chopin's E minor Concerto: "Can you tell me, please, who the accompanist is?" Fact!

With the exclamation, "Such is fame!" a correspondent sends us a cutting from The Times, in which the not wholly unknown firm of Novello, Ewer and Co. is described as "Morello, Ewen and Co."

Mr. C. Lee Williams, who has again been laid aside by illness, is now convalescent, and expects, after a short time spent in Malvern, to resume his duties.

Our lively contemporary, Le Ménestrel, informs its readers that Mr. Edward Solomon has just finished an "opera" called "The cricket on the heart." Good!

NORWICH FESTIVAL.

(From our Special Correspondent.)

The very interesting Festival which took place at Norwich on the 3rd ult. and following days was the twenty-fourth triennial celebration, and one of the best, if not the best absolutely, in the entire series. It may be that new blood got into the direction, or that a sudden awakening came upon the accustomed managers. With this we are not concerned. Enough that the results of efficient and enterprising preparations were most satisfactory and lifted the Festival to the first place in its year. The special vitality just indicated acted in various forms. To begin with, it added the highest instrumental talent to the usual solo attractions by the engagement of Messrs. Paderewski and Sarasate. In the next place, it secured an improved chorus by enlisting contingents from Yarmouth and Lowestoft, as well as from Norwich and immediate neighbourhood. Lastly, it obtained five new works for first presentation. Rarely has a festival committee made such a huge step towards improved resources and higher interest. It is pleasant to add that the reward was great, and that the Norwich managers, so encouraged, are not likely to weary in such well doing.

The personnel of the Festival may briefly be put on record before going farther. At the head stood Mr. Alberto Randegger, the Norwich Conductor ever since Sir Julius Benedict gave up a task he was no longer able to discharge. Among the solo vocalists were Mesdames Albani, Helen Trust, Anna Williams, Belle Cole, and Marian McKenzie; Messrs. E. Lloyd, Ben Davies, Henschel, Pierpoint, Brockbank, and Norman Salmond. The solo instrumentalists have already been named. Dr. Bunnett was organist; Dr. Hill, chorus-master; and Mr. Betjemann, principal first violin. In the band were a host of well-known London professionals, this body with the chorus making up an aggregate of 350 performers. The Concerts took place, as usual, in St. Andrew's Hall. As to the programme, that will appear, each piece in its proper place, as these remarks continue.

The opening Oratorio was given on Tuesday evening, the 3rd ult., and, although Mendelssohn's "St. Paul" is generally attractive, it had the smallest audience of the week. This may be explained by the fact that such of the public as are influenced by the presence or absence of "stars" were not tempted to put in an appearance. Madame Albani took no part in the evening's work, neither did Mr. Edward Lloyd. True, Miss Anna Williams, Madame Belle Cole, Mr. Ben Davies, and Mr. Norman Salmond were there to represent various degrees of vocal talent and to do the airs of the Oratorio justice. But the artist-worshippers held aloof—at any rate, so we interpret the comparatively low figures of attendance. Mendelssohn's Oratorio had, on the whole, a successful rendering, the principals doing their work, if not uniformly well, with general credit. Mr. Ben Davies thus early made a most favourable impression, while the fine, manly delivery by Mr. Salmond of the important bass solos was accepted as altogether up to festival mark. More important than individual effort were the exertions of the chorus, who promptly showed how great an improvement in quality of tone and executive skill has lately been made. The chorus has always been more or less a weak point at Norwich. In this instance it showed itself strong, so that, after hearing one or two choral numbers, amateurs and well-wishers put aside anxiety and rested content.

With Wednesday morning came the first of the five novelties, acting as a "curtain-raiser" for Sullivan's "Golden Legend." This was Mr. Edward German's Symphony in A minor—a work written expressly for the Festival. Mr. German is a man of the Abraham Lincoln type, in that he keeps "pegging away." From obscurity into light, through defeat into success, this musician knows the path and travels along it with dogged perseverance. His first Symphony met with a fate which was not encouraging, but Mr. German was far from discouraged, and, when Norwich invited an orchestral work from his pen, he characteristically sat down to compose another. This is almost certain to find favour as a strong and masterful effusion. The qualities just mentioned are especially conspicuous in the Introduction and first Allegro, these sections being laid out upon broad lines, and distinguished by a thoroughly masculine style. The feebly sentimental and the lackadaisical have no friend in Mr. German, whose music, in this instance, while showing sufficient elaboration and ingenuity, is virile to a degree rarely met with at the present time. The Andante con moto belongs to another order. It is wholly given up to beauty and grace, as we know those qualities in melody, in harmony, and orchestral colouring. To the slow movement the Scherzo is attached by a connecting bar or two for no apparent reason. But one does not question the composer's judgment when listening to music so well made, so full of sprightliness and power. The two main sections of the movement are in effective contrast of theme and general expression. Mr. German introduces his second Allegro, like his first, by a short prelude, which anticipates the leading theme. The Finale is elaborately wrought, and shows a good deal of harmonic and contrapuntal ingenuity. Here and there it seems a little overdone, the result being that more than a single hearing appears necessary in order to judge clearly of design and effect. But there is no difficulty in saying at once that Mr. German's second Symphony has great claims upon the attention of the musical world. It is not of the sort to be listened to and then dismissed, but challenges careful judgment upon the data of familiar acquaintance. The composer conducted a very fair performance, and was most cordially applauded and several times recalled at the close of his work. Very few words will suffice for the "Golden Legend," in which Madame Albani, Madame Marian McKenzie, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Pierpoint, and Mr. Henschel took part. The general rendering of Sullivan's familiar music rose to the usual festival mark, and calls for no criticism.

The second Concert on Wednesday was very largely attended, every seat being occupied, as would many more had more been available. This was not so much because the public were eager to hear Mr. Gaul's new Cantata "Una," as because Mr. Paderewski was set down to play the solo in his just completed Polish Fantasia for pianoforte and orchestra. Perhaps even the work may be set aside, and the crowded audience credited with caring much more to see the famous pianist than to hear his music; so much does a personality, if sufficiently notorious, overshadow everything else. But here the Fantasia claims first attention. The work is in three movements, and, so far, its form is analogous to that of a Concerto, but there all resemblance ends. A spirit of fantasy reigns throughout, and of Polish fantasy to boot, the music being everywhere distinguished in the strongest manner by the special features with which Sarmatian composers have made us familiar. The piece, as a whole, is exceedingly difficult, not only for the soloist, who needs to be a Paderewski in order to get through his part with credit, but also for the orchestra, who require a special training in order to render it with the necessary spirit and finesse. On these accounts the Fantasia is not likely to be heard often; but none the less should its merit be recognised, and that it has merit of no common sort is beyond question. Mr. Paderewski played with all his characteristic brilliancy and dash of style, but the orchestra, while vigorous and mostly note-perfect, saw the meaning of the music as through a glass darkly. When all was over, there was a strong disposition on the part of the audience to have an encore piece; but the eminent pianist showed no signs of responding, and "insatiables" had to be content with repeated returns to the platform.

With the Symphony were given—forming a miscellaneous first part—the "Meistersinger" Overture, which was quite well played, and the well-known air from "Samson and Dalila," so long conspicuous in the repertory of Madame Marian McKenzie, by whom it was again sung.

Some descriptive remarks upon Mr. Gaul's "Una" having already appeared in The Musical Times, there is no need to enter into the "argument" or the general features of the music on the present occasion. But we must say that the composer, though he has produced a work which will be found both agreeable and useful by the choral societies for whom he so largely caters, would have done better by aiming higher. Mr. Gaul, we understand, was invited by the Committee to provide the Festival with a Cantata, and there was, consequently, every reason to honour the occasion, and do himself credit, by rising to the full height of his musicianship. He preferred, nevertheless, to consult the means and tastes of his usual clients, and the result is a work neither of Festival rank nor adapted to increase the composer's reputation. We may regret the fact, but are hardly in a position to blame. Mr. Gaul knows his own business best, and he represents a very large musical constituency whose claims he may be right in preferring. That "Una" will enjoy popularity throughout that constituency is very probable. It has a pretty story, consecrated by association with a great English classic; its music is melodious and well written within the limits which the composer set himself, and its structure lays no difficulties upon moderate executive capacity. The performance, conducted by Mr. Gaul in person, was, like the music, a straightforward piece of work. But, for that matter, how could the executants go wrong with a road so plainly staked out and made so smooth and even? The solo vocalists were Mrs. Helen Trust, Madame Belle Cole, Mr. Ben Davies, and Mr. Norman Salmond, who accomplished their facile task to general satisfaction. At the close of the work Mr. Gaul, though a prophet in his own country, received a full meed of honour. The Concert continued with an Overture, "Yewbarrow," written by Dr. Horace Hill in a vein of genial and attractive musicianship. After this Mr. Paderewski played selections from Chopin and Liszt, and had, as a penalty for delighting the audience, to throw in one more. Nicolai's Overture to the "Merry Wives of Windsor" closed the long and varied entertainment.

Dr. Hubert Parry's "Judith" took up the whole of Thursday morning and was given under the direction of its genial and popular composer. To discuss this brilliant example of modern Oratorio here would be rank waste. All musicians and amateurs know it, or, if they do not, deserve to remain in ignorance. "Judith" is an accepted work, like the "Golden Legend" and the "Rose of Sharon," which, also, we have seen rise from the mass of contemporary productions to a high and honoured place. As an accepted work it has passed beyond the range of current criticism and appeals for continued existence to the judgment of future generations. Dr. Parry had the gratification of conducting a satisfactory performance, which passed with but a single drawback, and that, as the composer freely acknowledges, was more his fault than the error of the little chorister boy ostensibly responsible for the slip. The principal vocalists were a strong body—to wit, Madame Albani, Madame McKenzie,

Mr. E. Lloyd, Mr. Pierpoint, and Mr. Henschel. All these artists, as may be supposed, did excellent service, and it would answer no useful purpose to particularise. The choruses went smoothly for the most part, and Dr. Parry was satisfied with the work of the orchestra, upon which so important a task devolved. That the composer-conductor had applause heaped upon him in profusion may freely be assumed.

The second miscellaneous Concert (Thursday evening) was as popular and well-attended as the first, to the programme of which it offered a counterpart. There was again an eminent soloist (Mr. Sarasate) to introduce a work (Mackenzie's "Pibroch") which, if not absolutely new, was new to Norwich; and there was again a Cantata (Mr. Barnett's "Wishing Bell") more or less composed for the occasion. Nor were these things all in the nature of unfamiliar music, seeing that the evening began with Mr. Mancinelli's Overture "Cleopatra," a work heard only once before in this country. This bright and brilliant example of orchestral music was given, under the composer's guidance, with wonderful spirit, and met with a reception so enthusiastic that nothing but a second performance would satisfy the audience. Apart from the merit of the piece, it may be that the Norwich public had a pleasant recollection of its composer's "Isaiah," produced at the Festival of 1890. Between "Cleopatra" and the "Pibroch" stood solos for Mr. Henschel, Madame Cole, Mr. Lloyd, and Miss Anna Williams. Then came Mr. Sarasate, to have a great reception and be so moved by it as to confound the opening phrase of Mackenzie's work with a passage occurring much later. This remarkable freak of memory led to a stoppage and a fresh beginning, but afterwards all went smoothly, and the great violinist, pulling himself together, as the phrase goes, executed the difficult and complicated solo with unusual effect. Nothing could have been better, or more fully an exemplification of the qualities now rapidly making the "Pibroch" a piece which no violinist's repertory can afford to be without. Mr. Sarasate was applauded with enthusiasm for a display of the very highest order.

The "Wishing Bell" followed, with its composer in the conductor's desk, and again it is our duty to speak of a new work as not up to Festival rank. Mr. Barnett's piece was described in the programme as "composed expressly for the Festival," and that is, no doubt, partially exact. But we take it that the airs and choruses (for female voices only) were written at an earlier date, probably with a view to use in ladies' classes, &c., and that the orchestral part was added in prospect of performance under more important conditions. Otherwise, we may be sure, a musician so experienced and skilful as Mr. Barnett would have given his vocal numbers a higher aim and greater distinction. The Musical Times having already sketched the story of the work and its leading features, we shall not go over that ground a second time, but merely deal with the general impressions made by its performance. Those were, with the reservation above indicated, entirely favourable. Although the vocal music is written down to a comparatively mild standard of executive skill, it is full of pleasant tune and equally agreeable effects of harmony. Every number, moreover, shows the hand of a writer who must needs discharge the most modest task in a musicianly spirit. It is in the orchestral part that Mr. Barnett appears to fullest advantage. Here, putting no restraint upon himself, he has written charming preludes and interludes which invest the connected sections with absolute distinction, and raise the entire Cantata to a rank otherwise unattainable. That the "Wishing Bell" will enjoy great popularity may be predicted without hesitation. It is at once easy and artistic. A work of which that may truthfully be said is quite safe with the public. Mr. Barnett's leading interpreters were Mrs. Helen Trust and Madame McKenzie, who, together with the female chorus, did all that was possible to the end of success, upon which result, happily attained, Mr. Barnett received cordial congratulations. After the Cantata came a miscellaneous selection, comprising two instrumental pieces and an air from Stanford's "Veiled Prophet," conducted by the composer; Saint-Saëns's Introduction and Rondo for violin (Sarasate) and orchestra; and, finally, the Overture to "Oberon."

Friday morning was given up to "The Messiah," as to the subject and performance of which the pen of description and criticism may rest. The solos were taken by Mesdames Williams, Trust, McKenzie, and Cole; Messrs. Ben Davies, Pierpoint, and Salmond. There was a large attendance, though the figures fell below those of previous occasions.

The Festival closed, on Friday evening, with the production of Mr. Cowen's "Water Lily," a full description and analysis of which appeared in our last number. Again we have only to speak of impressions made by, and conclusions derived from, the performance, which was, all round, an unquestionable success, if, indeed, the word should not be triumph. No subject other than that found in Wordsworth's poem is more adapted to bring out the composer's strong points, and no treatment of it for the musician's use could have been more sedulously fitted to engage his sympathies. In consequence, the music of the "Water Lily" exactly and fully represents the composer when enthusiasm for his task draws out his utmost skill and feeling. Mr. Cowen's treatment of the supernatural elements in the story is throughout skilful and suggestive. He seems to revel in the opportunity of dealing with aërial spirits, demons of storm, and the doings of sorceress and wizard. For all these he has precisely the right musical motives, the most fitting orchestral figuration and colour, and, so to speak, the most congenial atmosphere. Nor is he less happy when dealing with the simply human characters in the story. His love music, though deficient in the swing of broad phrases with which vocalists can make their best effect, glows with the richest and most varied harmony, and works up with intensity to climaxes yet more intense. In the scene at Caerleon, the composer once again proves that he can deal just as effectively with choral masses. In this respect, the choruses "Lance to lance" and "See, of the glittering train," are veritable masterpieces in dramatic ensemble. We know of nothing precisely like the last-named. It is no less original than impressive. That the work, as a whole, is difficult both for vocalists and instrumentalists must be conceded. Mr. Cowen does not bid for popularity in the measure shown by the latest works of Messrs. Gaul and Barnett, and he is right, seeing that provision should be made not only for limited executive means but for large capacity. Wherever the last-named exists, the "Water Lily" will be a welcome and a favourite work. The reception given to it at Norwich was the heartiest possible, and set upon Mr. Cowen's latest effort the seal of a first audience's unanimous approval. Madame Albani, Madame McKenzie, Mr. Lloyd, and Mr. Salmond exerted themselves strenuously and to the best effect in the solos, while both orchestra and chorus entered into their task con amore. To sum up, the "Water Lily" started upon its career with every promise of future good fortune. The Cantata was preceded by Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony and followed by Sullivan's "Imperial" March. In conclusion, let due credit be given to Mr. Randegger, whose services in connection with the Festival cannot be over-estimated. His successful direction of the music formed only a part of labours which stretched back many months, and resulted in fruition satisfactory to everybody concerned. We understand that the financial results of the Concerts have justified the enterprise of the Committee.

MUSICAL FESTIVALS.

(From our Special Correspondents.)

Tewkesbury.

It happens that the venerable Abbey Church of Tewkesbury, though in a special sense a national monument, has no fund whatever for the support of its fabric. The inhabitants of the district, which is mainly agricultural, are not wealthy, and, if the noble old edifice is to be kept in a proper state, help must be sought far and near, and in all legitimate ways. It occurred, not long ago, to the Vicar, Mr. Sherningham, that some advantage might arise from musical performances on the model of the Festival of the Three Choirs, but limited to one day. The idea, when communicated to Mr. Lee Williams, Mr. J. A. Matthews, and other local leaders of music, met with their cordial approval; the rank and file supported the scheme with as much readiness as their chiefs, and the matter was very soon put in train. From the first it was not intended to seek help outside the county, beyond the engagement of two or three soloists. Gloucestershire is organising its musical forces for precisely such services in the cause of art, and, with instrumentalists and chorus-singers from Gloucester, Cheltenham, and adjacent places, to say nothing of Tewkesbury itself, there was no doubt in the mind of the promoters as to sufficiently satisfactory results. The works chosen for performance were Mr. C. Lee Williams's Church Cantata "Gethsemane" and Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise"—these to be given in the day, and followed, in the evening, by an Organ Recital, with an occasional sacred air by way of relief. Mr. Williams was appointed Conductor, and the little Festival took place on September 28.

The day turned out unfavourable, rain falling almost continuously. This accounts, perhaps, for the very obvious apathy with which the townsfolk regarded the solemnity. Or was it that the Tewkesburians had not taken the trouble to make themselves acquainted with what was going on in their midst? One can hardly over-estimate the indifference of small and isolated communities to anything beyond the ordinary range of their tastes and sympathies, and it may surprise many readers to be told that the seats set apart for free use at the "services" were more sparsely occupied than any others. If Tewkesbury seemed apathetic under the rain clouds, not so the performers, who, coming mostly from a distance, made the thoroughfares near the railway station put on a most unusual appearance of liveliness. The morning was devoted to rehearsal, during which Mr. Lee Williams had some trouble with his "scratch" orchestra; but patience, as usual, did her perfect work, and, after a short interval for luncheon, the public proceedings began.

It may have been because the singers were in the choir of the grand old church that they were requested to wear surplices, though the use of those garments was not insisted upon in the case of the orchestra and soloists. It would be better, perhaps, to say nothing about surplices another time. In the choral societies which gave their help there are not a few dissenters, among whom were, no doubt, some to whom the white robe was objectionable. That the surplices added to the scenic effect is quite true, and when the congregation had assembled in considerable, yet not overwhelming numbers, the sturdy Norman interior presented quite an impressive aspect. This is the place to mention the regulations governing admission, inasmuch as they were ingeniously contrived to avoid offence. A large part of the church was free to all-comers, without money and without price, while the nave was filled by ticket-holders—friends of more than a hundred gentlemen who were subscribers of a guinea each, and had, in return, received passes for distribution as they pleased. Upon the money of the subscribers and the sums received at the offertory the Vicar relied for meeting expenses and for a profit. The service began with a short form of prayer, and then the performers addressed themselves to their task. There is no need to dwell upon the singing of Mrs. Hutchinson, Miss Jessie King, Mr. Houghton, and Mr. Ineson, who were the principal soloists. The efforts of these artists had no special significance, for which one turned to the doings of the Gloucestershire band and chorus. Apropos of these, it is of no use to create a "fool's paradise" and say that the instrumental and choral performance was perfect, or even approaching perfection. It was nothing of the kind, and may best be described, perhaps, as tolerably good—most tolerable in that distinct indications appeared of resources which only need working up in order to attain a satisfactory degree of efficiency. The orchestra, led by Mr. Woodward, included a number of young amateurs who will do better as they make practice and gather experience. As for the chorus, it contains plenty of material for future improvement, and, if these Tewkesbury Festivals be continued, we shall see, no doubt, a steady advance in efficiency. "Gethsemane" made, as at Gloucester last year, a deep impression, so aptly eloquent of religious feeling are its numbers, and so profoundly devotional is their effect when heard in a church amid the influences of sacred associations. The entire work was listened to with sustained attention—as though, indeed, the large congregation felt completely absorbed in the story and its musical telling. All the solo artists above-mentioned did well, Mr. Ineson giving specially vigorous and telling renderings of the baritone airs, though perhaps the most pathetic and really moving effort was made by Miss Jessie King in "It is enough." The subsequent performance of the "Hymn of Praise" was rendered incomplete by the necessity of abbreviating the work. In it, as may be supposed, the chorus were quite at home, while the principal soloists, Mrs. Hutchinson and Mr. Houghton, sang with a full measure of success. The recital by the Abbey Organist, Mr. Bath, passed off well, helped by the varied interest of vocal solos. Orchestra and chorus were then dispersing to their homes, and, of course, took no part.

The value of this one-day Festival lies in the example it sets—one which, let us hope, will extensively be followed where it is possible to organise the musical talent of scattered communities and direct it upon point after point as occasion may serve. In such union is real strength, and the Vicar of Tewkesbury has shown how it may be utilised in a sacred building without giving just cause of offence to anyone. The fabric fund of the Abbey benefited by the Festival to the extent of about £80.

Cheltenham.

The "third triennial Meeting of County Societies, now united as the County of Gloucester Musical Festival Association," took place in the Winter Gardens, Cheltenham, on the 17th ult. and three following days. According to the prospectus, it began on the 16th, but to this statement we demur, because it is neither usual nor right to claim a day of rehearsal as a day of Festival performance, however liberally the public may be admitted. We allow, therefore, no more than four days, and four Concerts, one each day. The Cheltenham triennial gathering stands on a footing curiously different from all others, now that Mr. Kuhe has ceased to hold "festivals" at Brighton. Although it has a public side, particularly in relation to local charities, for which collections are made at the doors, it is essentially a private enterprise, initiated and carried out by its Conductor, Mr. J. A. Matthews, who runs the risk of loss and properly benefits by the gain. This gentleman does not claim for his Festival an equality with those given elsewhere, but frankly states that its objects are different, and "intended to bring together county musicians of all ranks, as much as possible, and to found an institution that will add greatly, it is hoped, to the advancement of musical education and the divine art in our own locality." The object, though thus limited, is of very great importance and deserves all the encouragement that can be given to it, since it is only by the development of local resources that England can be made a musical country in very truth. Mr. Matthews further stated in his prospectus that the band would comprise many of the leading amateurs of the neighbourhood, and that the choir would be drawn from sources within the county. As a matter of fact, the choral societies of Gloucester, Tewkesbury, Stroud, Cirencester, and Tetbury sent large contingents to swell the total number of performers to the high figure of 500. It is the boast of Gloucestershire that the organisation of its county societies enables a numerous and qualified chorus to be massed anywhere within the borders for the furtherance and stimulating of local art. To say that all the players and singers assembled at Cheltenham were of the highest class would be contrary to fact; but it is something—indeed, much—to have them brought together in pursuit of culture more complete than is possible without such union. The solo performers were numerous, but it should be understood that they were individually engaged for one or two performances only. Mr. Edward Lloyd, for example, sang only in the "Stabat Mater" and "Hymn of Praise." With an arrangement like this it is, of course, easy to make a brave show of principals. The vocalists who appeared were Mesdames Thudichum, Henson, Gough, Maggie Davies, Harrhy, Hilda Wilson, Jessie King, Stephens, Higgs, and Hope Glenn; Messrs. Lloyd, Piercy, Houghton, Ben Davies, Pierpoint, Brereton, Lane Wilson, and Watkin

Mills. The list of instrumental soloists included Miss Olga Néruda, Miss Amy Woodward, and Miss Agnes Skinner (pianists); Mr. Theodore Carrington (violin), and Mr. W. Ellis (trumpet). Mr. Woodward was principal first violin, and Mr. J. A. Matthews, Conductor. In the orchestra, it should be added, were twenty ladies, nearly all violinists. Whether each of these was a source of actual as well as apparent strength is a question we do not take upon ourselves to answer.

It is not our purpose to dwell upon the rendering of the familiar works that chiefly made up the programme, but more attention may justly be given to a few compositions of minor importance which brought with them the interest of novelty. One of these opened the first Concert, on Tuesday, the 17th ult. We refer to a setting by Mr. Berthold Tours of a Festival Ode from the pen of Canon Bell, Vicar of Cheltenham. This is in three sections—two choruses and a contralto air, which forms the middle movements. Mr. Tours has written for broad effects, such as can best be attained by simple means, and his music, well fitted for a very large number of executants, flows on in a great stream of satisfying sound. The air has a very devotional character, and was most expressively sung by Miss Hilda Wilson. Assuming the Ode to have been designed for Church use, we cannot for a moment doubt that its object will be fully attained. Mr. Tours conducted the performance in person, and received cordial acknowledgments. The "Stabat Mater" and "Hymn of Praise" followed, with Miss Thudichum, Miss Wilson, Mr. Lloyd, and Mr. Pierpoint as principals. The performance of these familiar works was good and encouraged expectations which, unfortunately, were not realised. The chorus sang with spirit and effect, and the orchestra rose with vigour and decision to the demands upon it. There was a large and fashionable audience. The second Concert began with a short, miscellaneous selection, including the Overture to "Der Freischütz"; Mozart's Concerto in E flat for two pianofortes (well played by Miss Néruda and her pupil, Miss Woodward), and a Choral Song for double choir and orchestra, the work of Dr. Frederick Iliffe. With regard to the last-named—a setting of Milton's "Sweet Echo, sweetest Nymph"—we have only to say that it is a highly respectable example of English choral writing, well made and thoughtfully conceived, if not inspired. We cannot but think that works of this class would be better without an orchestra. The instruments confuse the part-writing, upon the character and clear perception of which success so largely depends. In the performance of Sullivan's "Golden Legend" neither orchestra nor chorus were nearly so satisfactory as on the previous evening. All engaged in the concerted music and accompaniment seemed to lose confidence, and sometimes whole passages were omitted by important instruments, while unsteadiness generally prevailed. The soloists, Miss Henson, Madame Hope Glenn, Mr. Piercy, and Mr. Watkin Mills did their best under the circumstances, but must have shared in the general uncertainty amid which the work went on. On their part the audience were extremely lenient—that is, if they detected anything wrong, which was not distinctly obvious. "The Messiah" was given on Thursday afternoon, and a miscellaneous Concert, on Friday evening, brought the proceedings to an end. We cannot notice this in detail, and must be satisfied to mention that the programme contained Miss Ellicott's Festival Overture, Max Bruch's Violin Concerto (Op. 26), a charming Orchestral Suite by Sir Herbert Oakeley, Dr. Mackenzie's "Benedictus," and "Music," a choral song for voices only, written by Canon Bell, composed by C. Lee Williams. This is a delightful piece, full of the grace, sweetness, and delicate musicianship that characterise the Gloucester organist's work. It was not very well sung, owing, perhaps, to the absence, through illness, of the composer, who was to have superintended its performance. It is understood that the Festival was a financial success.

Hovingham.

What the exact population of Hovingham may be we know not, but, at any rate, it is capable of being expressed in three figures. This pretty hamlet in the North Riding of Yorkshire may therefore be with confidence designated the smallest Festival centre in the country. On the 17th and 18th ult. the fifth Hovingham Festival took place, and the three Concerts of which it consisted have afforded an excellent example of what such an event should be, as regards both programmes and performances. Hovingham is, indeed, fortunate in having three gentlemen who, among them, possess both the will and the ability necessary to carry the Festival to a successful issue. Canon Hudson, Rector of the neighbouring parish of Gilling, who, since his Cambridge days, has been well known in the musical world as an amateur of conspicuous ability, is the Conductor and artistic head of affairs; Sir William Worsley provides the concert-room in a spacious riding-school attached to his residence; and in Mr. E. S. Horton the Festival is provided with an honorary secretary whose energy and good nature make him well fitted for the endless duties that fall to his lot. A band of fifty, in which a large number of London players figured, made it possible to begin the Festival with Sir Arthur Sullivan's "Golden Legend," which has in all probability never before been adequately given in the district; while Schumann's Pianoforte Concerto, charmingly played by Mr. Leonard Borwick, and Bach's Concerto for two violins, were among the more notable of several instrumental compositions which garnished the programmes. To those whose motto is Stare super vias antiquas, Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise," which brought the Festival to a conclusion, would be particularly welcome. To those, on the other hand, who hold that a Festival which produces no fresh work, or revives no neglected work, has, in a measure, failed of its purpose, the presence in the programme of a new choral composition by Dr. Alan Gray, the Organist of Trinity College, Cambridge, would be a matter for satisfaction. Dr. Gray, who, as a native of York, had a locus standi not to be gainsaid, had chosen for his subject a poem by Mrs. S. K. Phillips, "The Legend of the Rock-Buoy Bell." Of this he has fashioned a choral ballad, very much on the lines of Professor Stanford's "Revenge." The tradition embodied in the poem is to the effect that a soul whose chief sin has been the leading astray of others is condemned to expiate its fault by adding its voice to that of the rock-buoy bell at the entrance to Whitby harbour. As the mission of the bell is to direct mariners in the right direction, the significance of the punishment is obvious. Dr. Gray's Leeds Cantata "Arethusa" had led us to expect a more than ordinary measure of constructive skill, refinement, and thoughtfulness in his music. All these are to be found in his latest work, which also shows a power and an ease not so traceable in its predecessor. The suitability of the subject for musical treatment lies chiefly in the opportunities it presents for the musical suggestion of natural phenomena. Thus we have the "Sweep of the great North Sea," the "Rising gale," the "Fog veiling all beneath," the "Ripples laughing and leaping," and the "Fierce Nor'-Easter," all of which in turn are very happily depicted, or rather suggested, for Dr. Gray has, with the possible exception of a few bars of storm music in which vigour may be thought to predominate over abstract beauty, been most careful to observe Beethoven's maxim: "Mehr Ausdruck der Empfindung als Malerei." But, as this musical landscape-painting is hardly the highest effort of which the art is capable, we should be inclined to lay greater stress on the beauty of the more emotional passages in the work, such as that in which the erring spirit seeks for grace on the plea of a Saviour's atoning death. Here the halting utterances of the voices and the general impressiveness of the music call for warm commendation, as does the poetic ending of the ballad, in which the voices and orchestra alternate with admirable effect. The performance, under the composer's direction, was, on the whole, the best in the whole Festival, the chorus-singing being in particular remarkable for its vigour and accuracy. It should be added that the principal vocalists of the Festival were Miss Florence Bethell, Miss Mary Morgan, and Mrs. Burrell; Messrs. Houghton, Andrew Black, and W. H. Dawson; and the solo violinists, Messrs. A. Bent, Stanley Blagrove, and G. Walenn—all of whom contributed to the success of the performances; though to Canon Hudson's tact and ability in the difficult post of Conductor is the praise chiefly to be accorded.

North Staffordshire.

The Triennial Festival given under the above name took place in the Victoria Hall, Hanley, on the 19th and 20th ult. It consisted of only three Concerts, instead of four, as in 1890; but the change should not be regarded as a sign of decadence, but rather as due to experience of the peculiar conditions of a manufacturing district where men have little inclination to waste, as they would say, the hours of business, and where, moreover, those who can afford to lose a day are comparatively few. Made aware of this by scanty morning audiences three years ago, the Committee struck off one of the two forenoon Concerts, and so saved expense, while securing for the solitary survivor an adequate measure of patronage. The Festival being still young, it has necessarily to fight against imperfect appreciation; but the principal managers, with their chairman, Dr. West, of Stoke, are indefatigable in the good cause, utterly refusing to contemplate the contingency of having to abandon it. That they will firmly establish the enterprise we as firmly believe.

The executive resources of the Festival were equal to any task. In the first place, they included the following solo vocalists: Miss Palliser, Miss Henson, Miss Clara Butt, Mr. Edward Lloyd, Mr. Piercy, Mr. Ffrangçon Davies, and Mr. Watkin Mills, with Mr. Willy Hess as solo violinist. The orchestra, drawn from Sir Charles Hallé's band and from Birmingham, was excellent, while the chorus, a large body, representative of the choral culture and enthusiasm of the Potteries, presented claims to rank among the best in the kingdom. With such a force as that assembled under the bâton of Dr. Swinnerton Heap anything might be done, and its final dispersal—absit omen—would be nothing short of disaster.

The first Concert, given in the evening of the 19th, attracted a large audience, among whom were the Duchess of Sutherland, wife of the President, and a party from Trentham, including Sir Arthur Sullivan and Dr. Hubert Parry. Berlioz's "Faust" filled the programme, with Miss Palliser, Mr. Piercy, and Mr. Watkin Mills as solo vocalists. The efforts of these artists need not be dwelt upon in detail. Enough that each and all did well, more especially Mr. Watkin Mills, who has complete mastery over the part of Mephistopheles. There was no fault to find with the orchestra, who were, of course, on familiar terms with the music, and worked together in excellent style. Both the Hungarian March and the Ballet of Sylphs were distinct triumphs. It is understood that the members of the chorus did not fall in love with their share of the Legend when first introduced to it. Favour may have come as a sense of novelty wore off, but, anyhow, the concerted vocal music was successfully rendered, if with some little show of hesitation. To sum up, the opening performance of the Festival gave promise of continued good fortune, which, let us say at once, was fully realised.

The Concert of the following morning began with Beethoven's Symphony in C minor, after which came Eaton Faning's part-song "Moonlight" and the Templar's Soliloquy from "Ivanhoe," conducted by Sir Arthur Sullivan, and very finely sung by Mr. Ffrangçon Davies; the first part ending with Mackenzie's "Pibroch," in which Mr. Willy Hess appeared as soloist. All these were quite successful, the rendering of the Symphony being matched, on the part of the capital chorus, by a finished execution of Faning's part-song—an excellent work, worthy of every effort. The performance of the "Pibroch" was not quite what it should have been in the orchestra, but the soloist made amends by vanquishing all difficulties—they are not a few—and coming out of the ordeal triumphantly. Smart's "Bride of Dunkerron" followed, supported by Miss Palliser, Mr. Lloyd, and Mr. Frangçon Davies—a thoroughly capable trio for a work which demands good vocalisation before everything else. Smart's tuneful, yet dramatic music, splendidly rendered, made a great impression, which will popularise that Cantata in the Potteries for many a year to come. "Elijah" closed the Festival on the evening of the same day, and with a good all-round performance of that great masterpiece the North Staffordshire music meeting left behind it such favourable regard as should warrant ample support three years hence.

Notice of the Bristol Festival, which commenced on the 25th ult., is necessarily postponed until our next issue.

Crystal Palace Concerts.

The thirty-eighth annual series of the Saturday Concerts opened on the 14th ult. The orchestra remains very much the same as in recent seasons, Mr. Celis being promoted to the post of chef d'attaque left vacant by the tragic end of Mr. Carl Jung, while one or two new names are noticeable amongst the strings. Mr. Manns, who was very heartily cheered on mounting the platform, led off with a very fine performance of Sullivan's brilliant and sonorously scored "Macbeth" Overture, the prevailing geniality of which, however, is hardly attuned to so tragic a subject. The next piece in the programme, an orchestral version of the Nachtgesang from Act 2 of "Tristan and Isolde," for which a certain Herr Arthur Seidel is responsible, was utterly unworthy of the Crystal Palace band and its conductor. It is simply a vulgar pot-pourri, in which the famous duet is arranged for trumpet and trombone. At the Crystal Palace, to make matters worse, trumpet means cornet nineteen times out of twenty, and it was in the bleating accent of that instrument that Isolde's rapture was expressed on the 14th ult. A new work by a native composer was brought to a hearing in Mr. Godfrey Pringle's "Durand," a crude and uncompromising piece of programme music, based on Uhland's sentimental ballad, which, though not wanting in cleverness, is at once pretentious and patchy. According to the programme, Mr. Pringle has been fortunate enough to spend some considerable time in Italy of late years. It must be added that he has been unfortunate enough to fall under the dominion of some of the less desirable tendencies of modern Italian music. "Durand" was well played and cordially received, the composer acknowledging the applause from the platform. M. Slivinski was heard in the second Pianoforte Concerto of Saint-Saëns—that in G minor—and minor solos by Liszt and Chopin, and played finely by fits and starts. But, as a whole, his performance showed decided signs of retrogression as compared with former efforts. Miss Palliser was very successful in Henschel's "Spring Song," as an encore to which she gave one of Chopin's Mazurkas, arranged as a song by Madame Viardot-Garcia. In the Ballatella from "I Pagliacci" the orchestral accompaniment was too roughly played for Miss Palliser to make much effect. A fine performance of Beethoven's Symphony in B flat (No. 4) concluded the Concert.

In consequence of the death of M. Gounod, alterations were made at the last moment in the arrangements of the second Concert, and two works by the deceased master were placed first in the programme—the "Marche Solennelle" and the beautiful, richly coloured, and exhilarating Overture to "Mireille." In this connection we may add that it has been decided to pay a further tribute to the memory of Gounod during the second half of the present series of Concerts, when an "In memoriam" performance of his sacred Trilogy "The Redemption" will be given. The novelty of the afternoon was an orchestral Prelude to the "Eumenides" of Æschylus from the pen of the young Scotch composer, Mr. William Wallace, whose Symphonic Poem "The Passing of Beatrice" was heard for the first time in public at the Saturday Concert of November 26, 1892. As in his earlier work, Mr. Wallace has refrained from descriptive or imitative treatment of his subject. For this alone we are devoutly thankful. But Mr. Wallace's new work has decided positive as well as negative merits. He handles the resources of the modern orchestra with results that are at once picturesque and impressive. Mr. Wallace has not written his music to a "programme," but it is so suggestive that it would be very easy to write a programme to the music. For example, the idea of retribution dogging the steps of the sinner might be said to be admirably typified by the obstinate iteration of the main theme. It is metamorphosed, augmented, diminished, but one never escapes from it from start to finish. From the structural point of view, this undoubtedly lends homogeneity to the work, though Mr. Wallace has perhaps carried his economy of material almost to excess. The work was excellently played under Mr. Manns's direction, and met, as it deserved, with a cordial reception, Mr. Wallace being summoned to the platform. The performances of the vocal and instrumental soloists on this occasion were of an exceptionally high order of merit and interest. Mdlle. Frida Scotta, who played Saint-Saëns's Violin Concerto in B minor (No. 3) as her principal solo, is a finished, a brilliant, and a delightful performer. Her tone is not very large, but it is round and sympathetic; her intonation is excellent, and her attack incisive and unerring. The Concerto is a curious example of the eclecticism of M. Saint-Saëns's genius. In it he is everything by turns and nothing long. At any rate, it affords the executant ample scope for distinction in the cantabile and bravura styles, in both of which Mdlle. Scotta excels. An enthusiastic reception, in which the members of the orchestra most heartily joined, was accorded to this gifted young artist at the close of the Concerto and of Sarasate's "Gipsy Melodies," in which her virtuosity was further displayed with the happiest results. Miss Emma Juch, the American prima donna, who had not been heard before at these Concerts, gave great pleasure by her refined and artistic singing of the familiar Recitative and Aria from "Der Freischütz," "Wie nahte mir," and "Leise, leise." Her voice is not of great volume, but it is perfectly under control. Miss Juch excels in piano and mezza voce effects. Her taste is excellent, and her tone—to judge, at least, from this occasion—unimpeachable. Miss Juch was not less successful in her rendering of three Lieder by Schubert; in particular, distinguishing herself by an exquisite performance of the pathetic "Leiermann." Wolfram's Fantasy from "Tannhäuser" is eminently ill-suited to Concert performance, but Mr. Bispham certainly sang it with much taste, in particular showing marked advance in his command of the legato style. He was also greatly applauded for a most spirited and incisive delivery of Purcell's remarkable scena "Tom a-Bedlam." The Symphony was Schumann's No. 1 in B flat, which seems to grow in loveliness each time one hears it. The performance was at all points splendid, and Mr. Manns received quite an ovation at the close. A special word of praise is due to Mr. Fransella for his beautiful playing of the delightful little solo for the flute in the Finale. Two numbers—Anitra's Dance and the "Dance of Imps"—from the "Peer Gynt" Suite (No. 1) completed the long programme.

MONDAY AND SATURDAY POPULAR CONCERTS.

Nearly thirty-five years have elapsed since Mr. Arthur Chappell, acting under advice which proved to be thoroughly sound, inaugurated a series of classical Chamber Music Concerts which filled a void in London musical life. In some respects one musical season may not resemble another, but the Popular Concerts continue their useful and, for the most part, placid existence scarcely influenced by passing changes of fashion. It does not seem likely that the thirty-sixth season, which commenced on the 16th ult., will be specially remarkable in any respect, but it opened favourably, the audience in St. James's Hall being rather above the average in numbers. The gifted young violinist, Miss Wietrowetz, gained warm commendation last year, and her re-appearance in the responsible position of leader was certainly not unwelcome. The concerted works in which she took part were Beethoven's Quartet in C, No. 3 of the Rasoumowski set (Op. 59), and Schumann's Sonata in A minor (Op. 105), in both of which her excellent tone and broad, vigorous style, wherein the influence of Mr. Joachim, from whom Miss Wietrowetz received lessons, may be clearly traced, were extremely effective. Nervousness was probably responsible for the rather feverish rendering of the first two movements of the Quartet, the remaining executants in which were Messrs. Ries, Gibson, and Whitehouse, all of whom have gained acceptance at these performances. The pianist was Miss Fanny Davies, of whose qualifications it is quite unnecessary to speak. Let it suffice that in her solo (Bach's Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue in D minor) Miss Davies once more displayed almost faultless technique and more reverence for the old master's text than many pianists evince at the present time. Miss Wietrowetz rendered Svendsen's melodious Romance in G with so much effect that the audience insisted upon an encore, the response being one of Brahms's Hungarian Dances. Finally, Mr. Eugène Oudin should be praised for his artistic rendering of a song, "La Procession," by César Franck, and three of Robert Franz's delightful little Lieder, the last of which, "Es hat die Rose sich beklagt," he was called upon to repeat.

The first of the Saturday performances, on the 21st ult., was signalised by the introduction of a Pianoforte Quartet in B minor by a composer named Robert Kahn, of whose claims to recognition very little was known until this occasion. From the preface to the analysis of his work given in the programme-book we gather that Mr. Kahn was born at Mannheim in 1865, that he received either direct instruction or, at any rate, encouragement in his art from such musicians as Frank, Lachner, Joachim, Kiel, Rheinberger, and Brahms, and that he is now settled in Leipzig. His efforts in composition, so far, include, beside his Pianoforte Quartet, a Violin Sonata, two Trios, a String Quartet, an Orchestral Serenade, and many songs. How it came to pass that he was accorded a place in Mr. Arthur Chappell's catalogue, which, it may be said, does not very readily expand, was not stated, nor did the Quartet itself proclaim the reason in unmistakable tones. It is a concise and thoroughly musicianly work in three movement, and shows that Mr. Kahn has studied to considerable purpose the methods of modern German composers, more particularly of Brahms, though Mendelssohn is slightly recalled in the middle Andante in A flat. In other words, the composer has apparently little of his own to say, but he can write in a workmanlike manner. The Quartet was received with a fair measure of approval, but it did not excite a profound desire to hear more from the same source. It certainly received full justice in performance from Miss Fanny Davies, Miss Wietrowetz, Mr. Gibson, and Mr. Whitehouse. The popular young English pianist gave a thoughtful if not very striking interpretation of Beethoven's Sonata in C (Op. 53), known as the "Waldstein," and Miss Wietrowetz was heard to the utmost advantage in Max Bruch's effective Violin Romance in A minor and major (Op. 42), both artists firmly and prudently declining encores. Mendelssohn's Quartet in E flat (Op. 44, No. 3) completed the instrumental portion of the programme, and Mr. Eugène Oudin contributed four songs by Gounod.

The Concert of the following Monday is the last we can notice this month, and it is unnecessary to speak of it at length. The central feature was Schumann's "Etudes Symphoniques," of which a splendid performance was given by Mr. Leonard Borwick, the young pianist entering fully into the spirit of the music and mastering all its technical difficulties with apparent ease. Miss Wietrowetz was unexceptionable in Spohr's frequently played Adagio in F from the Violin Concerto in F (No. 9), and the concerted works, with the same artists as at the previous Concerts, were Beethoven's Quartet in C minor (Op. 18, No. 4) and Brahms's Pianoforte Trio in C minor (Op. 101). Miss Louise Phillips, always welcome at these performances, rendered Lieder by Schubert and Brahms in her usual satisfactory manner.

MR. SARASATE'S CONCERT.

The first of three performances of violin and pianoforte music announced to be given before Christmas by the eminent Spanish violinist, in association with Madame Berthe Marx, took place at St. James's Hall, on Saturday afternoon, the 14th ult., and was attended by the usual crowd of admirers. Beethoven's Sonata in C minor (Op. 30, No. 2), which was marked "first time at these Concerts," headed the programme, and was accorded a highly finished, but somewhat cold reading. It was followed by Raff's Sonata in A minor (No. 2), a melodious if somewhat diffuse work, which the artistic pair have introduced on previous occasions and which they always play delightfully. Mr. Sarasate's solos included Wieniawski's "Légende," Bazzini's impetuous "Witches' Dance," and a Bolero from the executant's own pen; those of Madame Marx being Chopin's Scherzo (Op. 54) and an Etude in A minor by Thalberg. Both performers were, of course, called upon for more than was set down for them, and both complied with the wishes of the audience after some show of reluctance.

COVENT GARDEN THEATRE.

The Covent Garden Promenade Concerts were concluded on the 9th ult., when several of the most prominent vocalists who have sung during the season, including Mr. Sims Reeves, gave their services for the benefit of Mr. Farley Sinkins. To the very last the high standard of the programmes was well maintained. On September 27 the first performance in England was given of the Prelude to the third act of Cyrill Kistler's opera "Kunihild," a movement which, by its powerful themes and rich orchestration, made a very favourable impresion. The same programme included Mr. Cowen's fine "Scandinavian" Symphony, which received an excellent interpretation. The next evening was devoted to humorous music, orchestral and vocal, but although an admirable selection was made it failed to attract so numerous an audience as might have been expected. Another Wagner night was given on September 29, and on the following Wednesday, the day throughout the series devoted to classical music, or, to speak more correctly, to programmes chiefly consisting of works of serious design, Beethoven's Eighth Symphony was performed, and Miss Amina Goodwin created a most favourable impression by her admirable pianoforte playing in Mendelssohn's Concerto in D minor. Mr. Cowen having to conduct his Romantic Legend "The Water Lily" at the Norwich Festival on the 6th ult., the bâton was taken by Dr. Hubert Parry, who secured good performances of his "Hypatia" music, the Scherzo and Finale from his "English" Symphony, and his Overture to "The Frogs" of Aristophanes. The programme also included Hamish MacCunn's clever Overture "The Ship o' the Fiend"; and two young artists from the Royal Academy of Music, Miss Llewela Davies and Mr. Philip Cathie, gave most promising evidences of their skill and talent, the former in the solo part of Mendelssohn's Concerto in G minor and the latter in violin solos.

SAVOY THEATRE.

It would be idle to deny that a very large measure of musical and general public interest attended the production of Mr. W. S. Gilbert and Sir Arthur Sullivan's new Opera "Utopia (Limited)," on the 7th ult. Although difference of opinion has from the first prevailed respecting the intrinsic art value of the world-famous series of works bearing the joint-names of these gifted authors, the unique qualities they possess cannot be gainsaid; and when the fact was published that an unfortunate dispute over a trivial matter had been adjusted, and that dramatist and composer had once more joined hands, the rejoicing was widespread. Eminent English and foreign musicians and persons of both sexes who have attained celebrity in other walks of life were present in large force on the above-named occasion, and all would have indulged in renewed jubilations had "Utopia (Limited)" proved equal in humour and general freshness to the most successful of the companion works. This, unfortunately, cannot be said, although, of course, as compared with ordinary productions of the opéra bouffe class it stands out sufficiently clear. Mr. Gilbert could not put forward a silly or inane book, and Sir Arthur Sullivan could not pen music otherwise than refined, tuneful, and characterised by musicianly touches. It is only in comparison with such masterpieces of humour and dramatic and musical satire as "Patience," "The Mikado," "The Yeomen of the Guard," and "The Gondoliers" that the libretto of "Utopia (Limited)" seems a trifle dull, particularly in the first Act, and the music for the most part reminiscent rather than fresh. The mainspring of the action is in the caricature of English institutions, or rather of institutions supposed to be peculiarly English. These are introduced on an island somewhere in the South Pacific, which appears to be a very delightful place until the arrival of the King's daughter fresh from Girton, and accompanied by half-a-dozen "imported flowers of progress" as represented by a military officer, a learned Q.C., a Lord Chamberlain, a County Councillor, a company promoter, and a naval captain. These British worthies proceed to remodel the island, and the consequences are disastrous, but, of course, all is made right at the end. The first Act is, or was, much too long, for probably by this time it has undergone the needful compression. The second played much closer, and here occur the best of Sir Arthur Sullivan's numbers. There are, among other good things, a well built up Finale, a song caricaturing a tenor with a cold, an amazingly funny parody of a Christy Minstrel entertainment, and an unaccompanied concerted piece in which the composer is almost, if not quite, at his best. Mention should also be made of the stately dance measure accompanying the beautiful stage reproduction of a Court Drawing-room. From Mr. D'Oyly Carte's company we miss such old favourites as Miss Jessie Bond and Mr. Grossmith, but among the recruits Miss Nancy McIntosh and Mr. Charles Kenningham are highly acceptable; and Mr. Rutland Barrington, Mr. Scott Fishe, Mr. W. H. Denny, Mr. John Le Hay, and Miss Rosina Brandram are all provided with parts adapted to their several abilities.

THE FORESTERS."

Sir Arthur Sullivan's incidental music greatly enhanced the interest of the production, in England, of the late Lord Tennyson's last dramatic poem "The Foresters," on the 3rd ult., at Mr. Daly's new theatre. The happy appropriateness of the graceful melodies and the merit of their simple treatment can only be fully realised when the music is heard in connection with the scenes for which it was written. The setting of the beautiful lyric "To Sleep," the characteristic song "The Bee buzz'd up in the heat," with its descriptive accompaniment, and the numbers set for solo and chorus, "There is no land like England," "By all the deer that spring," and "Evil Fairy, do you hear?" gained immensely by the accompanying dramatic action; the tableau of the Fairy's Chorus, removed from the end of the second to the end of the third Act, being of remarkable beauty. Miss Catherine Lewis, as Kate, sang with much archness "The Warrior Earl" and "The Bee song" (transferred from the part of Marian); Mr. Lloyd Daubigny made use of a pleasing tenor voice, and the choruses were excellently sung. The performance of choir and orchestra reflected much credit on the Conductor, Mr. Henry Widmer.

OBITUARY.

We regret to have to announce the following deaths, viz.:—

Mr. Thomas Haddock, a popular violoncellist, and a member of a family well known in musical circles in Yorkshire and Lancashire. He was born at Leeds in 1812, but many years ago settled at Liverpool, where he became a highly esteemed teacher and performer, and, for some forty years, was chief violoncellist in the orchestra of the Philharmonic Society. He died at Liverpool on September 22.

Mr. J. Waterson, formerly Bandmaster of the 1st Life Guards, and afterwards Conductor of the Viceroy of India's Band. He was the composer and arranger of a great deal of music for military bands, amongst his more important works being an Overture to Dickens's "Tale of two Cities." He was buried in Windsor Cemetery on the 13th ult.

Miss Amelia M. Edwards, vocalist, pianist, and composer of some instrumental and vocal pieces, on the 1st ult. She came from Ireland some twenty-five years ago, and, thanks to her accomplishments and the charm of her refined personality, succeeded in a comparatively short period in establishing a large teaching connection, especially amongst ladies in the higher ranks of social life.

Charles Brindley, founder of the firm of Brindley and Foster, organ builders, of Sheffield. Mr. Brindley, who was in his sixty-first year, was the inventor of several patents in tubular pneumatic action, and the first to introduce pipes of the "Gedact" family into England.

Mr. Thomas Hill, the head of the well-known eminent firm of organ builders (Messrs. W. Hill and Son), on the 22nd ult., aged seventy-two, after a short illness. It was the deceased who entirely rebuilt the organ in Westminster Abbey. Hence, as a mark of respect to his memory, the Dead March in "Saul" was played by Dr. J. F. Bridge on this same organ after the service, on the 25th ult.

Bernhard Wittstatt, excellent clarinettist, at Munich, on September 29, aged forty-two.

Edouard Königsberg, well known at Brussels as a pianoforte teacher, on the 1st ult., aged sixty-six, at Saint-Gilles.

Carl Ress, at Leipzig, on September 19, aged fifty-five. From 1871 till 1884 he was first bass at the Leipzig Opera. Afterwards he became one of the best known singing masters in that town.

Alexander Rubinstein, the youngest son of the great pianist, on September 22, at Cadenabbia, Italy; he was only twenty-one.

Rosalie von Henselt, the widow of the composer Adolph von Henselt, on September 27, at Warmbrunn.

Adam Itzel, jun., talented composer, at Baltimore, U.S.A., on September 12, aged twenty-nine.

Adolphe Valentin Sellenick, formerly Conductor of the band of the Republican Guard, on September 26, at Andelys, near Paris, aged seventy-three. He was the composer of some opéras-comiques, and a great many pieces for military band, amongst which his "Indian March," composed in 1879, when he brought his band to London, is the best known. Under his direction the band of the Republican Guard became one of the very finest in Europe. He retired in 1884.

Alfred Quidant, pianist and composer, said to have been a pupil of Liszt and a friend of Chopin in the thirties. In his best days he was considered a remarkable player. He was born in 1815, and died on the 9th ult., at Paris.

Charles-César Le Roy, formerly the Librarian of the Paris Conservatoire de Musique, on the 19th ult., at Paris, aged eighty-nine.

Carlo Pedrotti, one of the most distinguished musicians of Italy, composer of fifteen operas, some of which were produced at Milan, Verona, Amsterdam, Paris, &c. Since 1869 he had been Conductor at the Royal Theatre, and of the "Popular" Concerts, Turin, and Director of the local Conservatoire of Music. He was also the author of a treatise on Counterpoint. He died, by suicide, at Verona, his native place, aged seventy-six.

Madame Tavary, a prima donna, who made a favourable impression as a dramatic singer at the Royal Italian Opera three years ago. She was a Russian by birth, and studied singing under Lamperti in Milan and Madame Marchesi in Paris. For six years she was engaged at the Munich Court Theatre, where she became celebrated as the exponent of Wagnerian characters. After leaving this country she went on tour in the United States. She was only thirty-four.

Joseph Hellmesberger, on the 24th ult., at Vienna, aged seventy-four. Born on November 3, 1829, he appeared in public as a prodigy at an early age. In 1852 he was appointed artistic director of the Vienna Society of the Friends of Music, and as such conducted its Concerts, and became director of the famous Vienna Conservatoire until 1859, when he resigned the former office. He retained the post of director of the Conservatoire until his retirement only a few weeks ago. He was a violinist of rare accomplishment, a string quartet led by and named after him being considered one of the very finest on the Continent. He held various Court appointments, such as solo violinist to the Court Chapel, Conductor of the Court orchestra, &c. With him one of the most striking and best-known figures of the musical world of the Austrian capital disappears.

MUSIC IN BELFAST.

(From our own Correspondent.)

During the past month there has been a plethora of Concerts here, principally of the popular type, of which there are several series—namely, Mr. G. C. Ferguson's Saturday Evening Concerts, which have attained a considerable amount of popularity among a certain class through the reasonableness of the charges for admission, while adhering to a high-class programme; then Dr. Collisson's Subscription, and extra Concerts also of a so-called popular character, and run in connection with his Concerts in Dublin and throughout the Provinces. The Philharmonic Society opened its twentieth season with a brilliant Concert on the 13th ult., at which the following artists gave an excellent account of themselves—viz., Miss Ella Russell, Madame Belle Cole, Mr. Ben Davies, Signor Foli, Mr. Frederick Dawson (solo pianist), Mr. Elkan Kosman (solo violinist), Mr. Sydney Brooks (solo violoncellist), and Mr. Spencer Lorraine (accompanist). The season just entered upon by this Society promises to break the record so far as the Subscription list is concerned, while the prospectus opens up new ground by the promised performance of several new choral works. At the Concert under notice there was an excellent performance of Dr. C. H. H. Parry's Cantata "Blest Pair of Sirens," by the chorus and orchestra, under the bâton of Mr. F. Koeller, the efficient Conductor of the Society. For the next Concert, on the 28th inst., we are promised Mackenzie's "The Dream of Jubal" and Stanford's "The Battle of the Baltic," and a miscellaneous selection; with the assistance of Miss Lucille Hill and Mr. Rhys Thomas, and Mr. Charles Fry, the original exponent of the poem, as reciter.

MUSIC IN BRISTOL.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Opera has reigned supreme in Bristol during the past month. From the 2nd to the 7th ult. D'Oyly Carte's Company, which includes several excellent artists, gave representations at the Prince's Theatre of Gilbert and Sullivan's operas "Patience," "Pirates of Penzance," "Yeomen of the Guard," "The Mikado," and "Iolanthe," which were all admirably staged and capitally performed.

The following week, from the 9th to the 14th ult, the Carl Rosa Opera Company were here and presented popular works, several for the first time in this city.

Another season of Saturday Popular Concerts opened on the 7th ult., but there being counter-attractions, the attendance was fair only. Musically the opening meeting was all that could be desired. Under the direction of Mr. George Gordon, whose energy seems never to flag, the choir sang charmingly the Bridal Chorus from Cowen's "Rose Maiden," Cooke's "Strike the Lyre," Smart's "Stars of the Summer Night," Pearsall's "Springs she not as light as air?" Martin's "The Queen of Night," and Leslie's "Daylight is fading." The crispness and precision with which these familiar pieces are always given are the chief charm of the Concerts. Madame Evans-Warwick, Mr. Harper Kearton, and Mr. Dan Price contributed songs; Miss Vera Evans (a child) played violin solos, Mr. George Riseley performed some organ pieces, and the band rendered overtures and Weber's "Invitation à la Valse."

The first of a series of Subscription Concerts, ballad and instrumental, provided by Messrs. Harrison, of Birmingham, was given in Colston Hall on the 6th ult. The audience was thin. The artists were Madame Amy Sherwin, Madame Hope Glenn, Mr. Durward Lely, Mr. Andrew Black, Little Frida Simonson (pianoforte), Miss Marianne Eissler (violin), Miss Clara Eissler (harp), and Master Gérardy (violoncello).

Dr. J. F. Bridge, the Gresham Professor, delivered a capital Lecture on "Pepys' Diary and Music" at the Merchant Venturers' School, on the 19th ult. Miss Marion Harrison and Mr. Percy Baldwin gave the vocal illustrations, and Dr. Bridge himself played the instrumental ones.

The Bristol Triennial Musical Festival, which commenced on the 25th ult., took place too late for notice in this number.

MUSIC IN DUBLIN.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Seldom has music in Dublin taken a more lengthened holiday than during the summer months of 1893. The operas at the Gaiety Theatre and military music on the promenades were the sole resource of our music-loving citizens during the hot trimestre.

The Carl Rosa Company occupied the Gaiety Theatre for four weeks ending September 9, and presented, for the first time in Dublin, Verdi's "Otello," Leoncavallo's "I Pagliacci," Adam's "Postillion de Longjumeau," and part of Goring Thomas's "Golden Web"; other novelties or revivals being Gluck's "Orfeo," Mascagni's "L'Amico Fritz" and "Cavalleria Rusticana," and Wagner's "Tannhäuser"—perhaps the most favoured and successful of their performances.

The opening Concert of the present season was the first of Dr. W. H. Collisson's annual series of Popular Concerts on the 7th ult., when the Leinster Hall was crowded in every part.

Mr. Farley Sinkins's Concert at the Antient Concert Rooms, on the 14th ult., was a most enjoyable one. Miss Ella Russell, Madame Belle Cole, and several other artists were heard with pleasure in a high-class programme.

A series of six classical Pianoforte Recitals, to precede the series of Chamber Music Recitals annually given under the auspices of the Royal Dublin Society, commenced on Monday afternoon, the 9th ult., Signor Esposito being the executant. Bach's "Fantasia cromatica," Scarlatti's Sonata in D, Beethoven's Sonata (Op. 109), and Schumann's Twelve Etudes Symphoniques were listened to by a large and appreciative audience.

Suitable honour has been paid to the memory of two prominent Dublin musicians recently deceased. Cherubini's Requiem Mass was performed with full choir and orchestra in St. Francis Xavier's Church, Gardiner Street, on September 26, at the "month's mind" of Mr. John M. Glynn, Organist of the Church, who died on August 26. The direction of the music was entrusted to Mr. Brendan Rogers, Organist of St. Mary's Cathedral, and a number of the professional brethren of the deceased took part in the function as vocalists or instrumentalists. A similar tribute was rendered at the obsequies of Mr. John Helmsley, vicar-choral, on the 17th ult., when a full choral service was sung at St. Patrick's Cathedral, under the direction of Mr. Chas. Marchant, Cathedral Organist.

The Dublin Musical Society has issued its prospectus for the coming season. At its first Concert, on the 29th inst., Berlioz's "Faust" will be given for the second time, under the direction of Dr. Joseph Smith, with Miss Lucille Hill, Mr. Edward Lloyd, and Mr. Bantock Pierpoint as principal vocalists.

MUSIC IN EDINBURGH.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The tide of the battle which is raging in the West has rolled as far East as Edinburgh. When Messrs. Paterson, in their seventh annual scheme, decided to cast in their lot with the new Scottish Orchestra, the Glasgow Choral Union scheme resolved to push forward one of its squadrons, under Manns, and with the advantage of the veteran Conductor's popularity, to establish and hold its ground in Edinburgh. Messrs. Methven and Simpson have charge of the Manns Concerts, and now that they have the tickets for the Harrison Subscription Concerts well taken up they may be trusted to do what they can for the scheme. Up till now the Scottish Orchestra has had the advertisement field all to itself, so Mr. Manns's friends will have to bestir themselves. The happy result to the public of this fierce contest is a very liberal supply of music at low prices, and the very conditions of the competition will ensure the best attainable performances. Mr. Henschel has many advantages in his "resident" orchestra, with more opportunity for rehearsal, in a most comprehensive and catholic programme containing the masterpieces of all representative composers except Bach, and in an imposing array of solo artists. In the two Choral Concerts Mr. Henschel will have the assistance of the Edinburgh Choral Union (Berlioz's "Faust") and Mr. Kirkhope's Choir (Mackenzie's "Story of Sayid" and a selection from "The Meistersingers"). Against these ten Concerts Mr. Manns has only four to offer, but the engagement of artists like Ysaÿe, Slivinski, and Rummel is as good a guarantee of solo quality as Mr. Manns's name is pledge of skilful and experienced leadership, and we cannot but wish well—the best—to such an old, such a tried friend. Mr. Manns's programmes are not yet published, which is a great omission, and in the meantime Messrs. Paterson have announced an extra series of six Saturday Evening Orchestral Concerts at popular prices.

Besides these Orchestral Concerts, the usual number of Choral and Chamber Concerts, as well as Recitals by pianists and violinists, promise us a busier musical season than Edinburgh has ever yet seen.

MUSIC IN GLASGOW.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The Glasgow Choral Union opened its season's campaign on the 26th ult. with a Chamber Concert, when Miss Gabrielle Wietrowetz (violin), Mr. E. W. Whitehouse (violoncello), Mr. John Daly (viola), Mr. Schönberger (pianoforte), and Miss Liza Lehmann were announced to appear in a remarkably attractive programme. On the following Monday evening, the 30th ult., the first season of the Scottish Orchestra Company was inaugurated with the "Meistersinger" and "Oberon" Overtures, Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto (for Miss Frida Scotta), and Beethoven's C minor Symphony as leading pieces in Mr. Henschel's bill of fare. We can only, of course, give a bare record of the familiar programme. Several miscellaneous Concerts of a more or less interesting type took place during last month, and foremost amongst these may be noted the "Patti" night at St. Andrew's Hall; Madame Ritter-Bondy's welcome re-appearance at her Pianoforte Recital at the Athenæum on the 3rd ult.; and at the same place, a few nights later on, Mr. H. A. L. Seligmann and his party made a distinctly favourable impression in Gounod's beautiful quartet from "De Profundis." But the prominent feature of the past month was, undoubtedly, the Paderewski Recital on the evening of the 23rd ult.

With such an unheard-of plethora of music as Glasgow has to face this winter it is small wonder that several of the minor choral societies have either retired from the field or are trimming their sails in the direction of purely miscellaneous programmes. The absolute prudence of such courses cannot, we fear, be gainsaid. Happily, however, a good many old friends have renewed the faith within them, and the following is an additional list of the works now in rehearsal by various societies in and around Glasgow:—Greenock Choral Union, "Elijah," Cowen's "Sleeping Beauty," and the Third Act of "Tannhaüser"; Paisley Choral Union, "St. Paul" and "Alexander's Feast"; The Glasgow Academy Choir, Mr. Gaul's "Una"; The Glasgow Athenæum Ladies' Choir, Mr. J. F. Barnett's Cantata "The Wishing Bell"; The South Side Choral Society, Handel's "Saul"; Airdrie Choral Union, "The Messiah"; Bridge of Allan Choral Society, "The Rose Maiden"; Vale of Leven Choral Society, "Samson"; New Kilpatrick Musical Association, "Ancient Mariner" (Pattison) and "Hear my Prayer"; Woodside Parish Church Choir, Gaul's "Ten Virgins"; Kelvinside Free Church Choir, Stainer's "The Crucifixion"; Pollok Street United Presbyterian Church Choir, "Samson"; and Sydney Place United Presbyterian Church Choir, "Rebekah." In each and every case the vineyards and the labourers are good, and it will be noticed with interest that in a couple of instances the novelties of the last Norwich Festival have been drawn upon, to wit, "Una" and "The Wishing Bell," both exceedingly tuneful works and likely to attain great popularity in their own special spheres of usefulness.

The opera class at the Glasgow Athenæum School of Music has Gounod's "Mirella" in active rehearsal, with a view to five performances of the delightful Pastoral in the early spring. Mr. J. K. Strachan's series of Saturday Afternoon Organ Recitals commenced on the 7th ult., when a very large audience was attracted to St. Andrew's Hall; and the Glasgow Glee and Catch Club has resumed its practisings for the season, under the watchful care of Mr. Allan W. Young, who has, as of yore, at his beck and call some of the finest vocal talent in Glasgow.

The first performance in Glasgow of Mr. J. More Smieton's prize Cantata "The Jolly Beggars" took place on the evening of the 21st ult., when a critical audience at once stamped the work with its approval. The composer has happily caught the spirit of Burns's familiar poem, delightful whiffs of Scotch caller air pervade the setting, and there is a peculiar melodic charm throughout the work which is certain to attract the attention of choral societies in search of novelty. The prize, it may be remembered, was given by the Glasgow Select Choir, an accomplished body of vocalists who, under the bâton of Mr. J. Miller Craig, did the work every justice.

MUSIC IN LIVERPOOL.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The full flood of an exceptionally busy musical season seems to have come upon us with a rush after many months of absolute inactivity. The first indication that another winter term has been entered upon came in the form of a Philharmonic Concert on the 3rd ult., the chief features of which were Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony and Hubert Parry's "Blest Pair of Sirens." The one found the orchestra but little changed in the excellence of its membership, and the other gave the choristers a chance of showing that they had made an earnest start in regard to the early rehearsals. The soloists were Miss Emma Juch and Mr. Hedmondt, vocalists; and Mr. Cesar Thomson, violinist. A fortnight later—namely, on the 17th ult.—Miss Clara Butt made her first appearance here in consort with Mr. Plunket Greene and Mr. Steudner-Welsing, the last-named giving a glowing reading of Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto for pianoforte. Professor Stanford conducted his "Irish" Symphony at this Concert, the fine work receiving a very happy rendering and its composer the heartiest of greetings. The regular Conductor, Sir Charles Hallé, otherwise directed both the Concerts named.

On the 21st ult. Mr. Steudner-Welsing and Mr. Plunket Greene gave a highly interesting Recital of pianoforte and vocal music in the Philharmonic Hall, a feature of the programme being a cycle of English, Welsh, Cornish, Manx, and Irish songs. In the evening of the same date, and at the first Smoking Concert of the Liverpool Orchestral Society, conducted by Mr. Rodewald, Grieg's Second "Peer Gynt" Suite and Beethoven's Seventh Symphony were given in the City Hall, songs being furnished by Mr. W. H. Atkinson and Mr. Plunket Greene, the latter gentleman going through no less than twenty pieces in the course of the afternoon and evening. The orchestra proved in excellent condition, the strings appearing to gain breadth and purity of tone at every successive performance, and the reading of the Beethoven number was conceived admirably. A day later the orchestra of the Sunday Society gave the first Concert of the season, under Mr. Argent, in St. George's Hall, the large building being crowded, while hundreds were unable to gain admission. The programme was miscellaneous in character, the vocalists being Miss Annie Nelson, a very fine mezzo-soprano, and Mr. Eaton Batty, one of the most popular local singers.

Not a few people hereabouts have been exercised in their minds owing to the adoption of the title "Utopia, Limited," for the latest Gilbert-Sullivan production, an opera apparently on not dissimilar lines, but bearing the simple name "Utopia," having been composed and duly produced two or three years ago by Dr. W. H. Hunt at Birkenhead. This was noted in these columns, as well as in those of other English and Continental papers, as an exceedingly clever work.

MUSIC IN MANCHESTER.

(From our own Correspondent.)

We are still in the expectancy rather than in the full enjoyment of music; looking forward to delights to come. Our season commences late, as though to give people time not only to get home from the seaside, or wherever they may have been idling during the summer, but to get through their round of resumed social duties, and to gain a keen appetite for more exciting pleasures. But, although our Concert-givers seem timid, the crowded state of the theatres during the recent visits of the opera companies show the readiness of the public to welcome and support any really attractive undertaking.

A sad disappointment clouded the first Saturday evening gathering at St. James's Hall. Through some strange misunderstanding about dates, Mr. Sims Reeves—who was looked upon as the great inaugurator of Mr. Barrett's campaign—did not come. He was announced for the 14th ult., but explains that he understood the engagement as for the 21st, yet his visit is postponed to the 28th. It is true that the artists secured for the 21st—including Miss Palliser, Signor Foli, Mr. Frederick Dawson, Messrs. Elkan Kosman and Sydney Brooks—were amply sufficient to furnish an attractive programme without Mr. Reeves. The afternoons of several Saturdays have been pleasantly passed in listening to the able Recitals of Mr. Pyne on the enlarged organ in the Town Hall; an instrument now of fuller tone and admirable variety.

The public opening of the Royal Manchester College of Music, on Saturday, the 7th ult., was most happy. The Concert Hall of the College was crowded by the patrons and pupils, and after short addresses by the Chairman of the Council (Dr. Ward, Principal of the Owens College), the Lord Mayor of the city (Alderman Anthony Marshall), and the Principal (Sir Charles Hallé), a delightful Concert was given by the chief professors. The College opens with an income of upwards of £4,000; with an admirable building; with an abundant supply of pianofortes—most liberally presented by Messrs. Broadwood, Erard, &c.; with the valuable library left by the late Mr. E. Hecht, and with the best wishes of all the music-lovers of the district. Nearly eighty students are enrolled, who have to pursue an all-round course of study, carefully planned to insure their thorough musicianship.

With some 200 members it was to be expected that the second annual Conference of the original section (the North-Western) of the Incorporated Society of Musicians would be a great success. A series of meetings, lectures, and musical performances filled a busy and extremely interesting day. Dr. Hiles occupied the chair. Mr. Prout attended to unfold his ideas of rudimentary "Form," and several new prize works were heard, among which should be specially noted the "Allegretto Capriccioso" for the violoncello of Mr. Austin, and the "Scherzo" for the pianoforte of Mr. W. Faulkes. The enlargement, each October, of the monthly meeting into a sectional conference should not be confused with the New Year's great gathering of the whole Society—now more than a thousand strong; but it shows the enthusiasm of the members, and is a welcome evidence of the increasing good feeling stimulated by the Society among the musicians of the kingdom.

MUSIC IN WILTS AND HANTS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Salisbury, never the most fortunate city so far as musical matters are concerned, seems just now to be under an unusually dark cloud. The Philharmonic Society, recently formed for the study of orchestral and choral music, has collapsed in the year of its birth, to the disappointment of many who hailed the new venture with satisfaction. The estimable Conductor of the Sarum Choral Society is now so seriously indisposed that for the present his services are not available. The old-established Society has, however, commenced rehearsals under temporary direction, and has selected "The Bride of Dunkerron" as the principal work to be performed at the usual Christmas Concert.

The Wilts Oratorio Society, which has done much good work in the county, has now in preparation Spohr's "Last Judgment," Bach's "My spirit was in heaviness," Hiller's "Song of Victory," and Weber's "Harvest Cantata." The headquarters of the Society are at Devizes, and Mr. Edwin Nunn is Conductor.

The financial position of the Southampton Philharmonic, as disclosed at the recent meeting of members, was not so satisfactory as could have been desired, but it was decided to make a special effort to wipe off the adverse balance and to continue the work of the Society on the same lines as heretofore. The first rehearsal was held on the 17th ult., Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise" and Handel's "Acis and Galatea" being selected for study. Mr. H. M. Pike is the Conductor.

The Ryde Choral Union, a flourishing body under the conductorship of Miss Margaret Fowles, has not yet commenced active operations. It is hoped, however, to give the usual Concerts during the season, and a definite programme will shortly be arranged.

Portsmouth is well to the front in musical matters. The Philharmonic Society, which has for its Conductor Mr. J. W. D. Pillow, intends to give its first Concert this month, for which Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise" is in course of preparation. The Orchestral Society has been at work since September, under Mr. Churcher's direction, and the Amateur Operatic Society will give a representation of "The Yeomen of the Guard" early next year.

At Bournemouth Mr. William Lee has been giving excellent Recitals upon the organs in the Pavilion and St. John's Church during the past month.

MUSIC IN YORKSHIRE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

At the present moment the music-lovers of Yorkshire may be said to be in a state of anticipation rather than realisation. The various choral societies are busy preparing for the season, and the Subscription Concerts, which furnish the chief supply of orchestral and chamber music of the better sort, have, with one notable exception, not yet begun. This exception is the series of Concerts given at Huddersfield, where Mr. Watkinson, an amateur whose laudable hobby it is to supply the people with music, has shown his fitness for the task by the marked success he has attained. It must be said, however, that he has had "to stoop to conquer," for of the dozen Concerts of which the series is to consist at least half are given by travelling concert parties and are of no great artistic value. A Pianoforte Recital by Paderewski and two Orchestral Concerts by Sir Charles Hallé's band go far, however, to leaven the lump. The series began on September 26, when Madame Fanny Moody and party, of whom the young violoncellist, Jean Gérardy, was perhaps the most accomplished artist, were heard in a programme too much permeated by the modern "shop ballad" to be of any particular interest.

At Leeds the Subscription Concerts are not supported so warmly as the size and repute of the town as a musical centre would seem to warrant. During the coming season, however, four Concerts are to be given, and popularity is being courted by the engagement of the Meister Glee Singers, while a Recital by Paderewski will have a spice of the sensational, and an Orchestral Concert by the Manchester Band, and a programme of Chamber Music, in which Dr. Joachim will take part, will attract serious lovers of music. The Bradford Subscription Concerts are, on the other hand, in a most satisfactory financial condition. Six Concerts are to be given, two of choral music, including Beethoven's Choral Symphony, Sullivan's "Martyr of Antioch," and Wagner's "Flying Dutchman." At these and at two Orchestral Concerts Sir Charles Hallé's band will be heard, the chorus being supplied by the Bradford Festival Choral Society. The Leeds Philharmonic Society, of which Mr. Broughton is Conductor, purpose giving three Concerts. Berlioz's "Faust" and Handel's "Messiah" form the first and second programmes, while the last will be remarkable as a tribute to native art. Smart's "Bride of Dunkerron" and Sullivan's "Kenilworth" are to be followed by a new work, written specially for the Society, "Robert of Sicily," a Cantata by Mr. F. K. Hattersley, an able young Leeds musician, whose Concert-Overture, performed at the Leeds Festival of 1886, will be remembered for the promise it displayed.

In point of enterprise, the Dewsbury Choral Society ranks high among its fellows. In addition to "Elijah," Mr. Cowen's "Sleeping Beauty" and Dr. Parry's "Blest Pair of Sirens" are to be given; and at an Orchestral Concert Mr. Edward German is to introduce several of his compositions, among them the Symphony performed last month at Norwich. Mr. G. H. Hirst, the Honorary Conductor of the Society, certainly deserves credit for the interesting character of this programme. The Huddersfield Choral Society is apparently content to rely on the exceptional power of its fine choir rather than on any special features in its programme, which is to consist of "The Messiah," "Elijah," and the "Golden Legend." Mr. John Bowling is the Conductor. The Glee and Madrigal Society, of the same town, under Mr. Bower's conductorship, gives a programme of part-songs, another of Mendelssohn's compositions, and a third at which Mr. Gaul's "Joan of Arc" is to be performed. The oldest of the West Riding Societies—that of Halifax—will give Brahms's "Song of Destiny" and Mendelssohn's "First Walpurgis Night" at a Concert in which the valuable assistance of Sir Charles Hallé's band will be forthcoming. Handel's "Messiah" is down for Christmas week, and at its final Concert an "abridged form" of Mendelssohn's "St. Paul," together with Handel's "Acis and Galatea," will be heard. Mr. Garland conducts not only the Halifax Society, but also the Bradford Festival Choral Society, which, in addition to its labours in connection with the Subscription Concerts, purposes giving Beethoven's Mass in C, Mendelssohn's 114th Psalm and "Walpurgis Night," and the "Faust" of Berlioz.

The Bradford Old Choral Society promises a miscellaneous programme, and Handel's "Samson," in addition to the perennial "Messiah." The Ripon Choral Society will give Spohr's "Last Judgment" and the Twelfth Mass attributed to Mozart, together with a Haydn Symphony, while another Concert will illustrate the growth of English Madrigals, Miss Wakefield giving a Lecture on the subject. One of the most interesting prospectuses of the season is that of the Middlesbrough Musical Union, an institution which, during the past ten years, has done much excellent work under Mr. Kilburn's able direction. "Acis and Galatea," "The Spectre's Bride," and Mr. Walthew's humorous and clever Cantata "The Pied Piper" are to be given during the coming season, together with a Concert of chamber music, in which Dr. Joachim and Miss Fanny Davies will be the principal performers. The Middlesbrough musical season may be said to have opened on the 11th ult., when a Concert was given by Mr. Corbett, at which Miss Evangeline Florence made an excellent impression by her artistic singing of Mr. Henschel's new song, "Spring," while M. Nachèz delighted the audience by his brilliant violin playing. Mr. Corbett purposes introducing M. Paderewski to Middlesbrough during the season, besides other well-known artists.

Six Concerts to be given by the Bradford Permanent Orchestra, under Mr. W. B. Sewell's direction, deserve the hearty support of music-lovers. Not only do they supply the people with good music very cheaply, but in laying the foundations of a local permanent orchestra they are doing a work the importance of which can hardly be overrated.

MUSIC IN AMERICA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Musical notices at this time must needs be anticipative, for as yet little has been accomplished except in the way of preparation. The preliminary announcements of the Oratorio Society, under Mr. Walter Damrosch, give the news that the Directors have booked for performance: the "Missa Solennis" of Grell, Bach's "St. Matthew" Passion, Mendelssohn's "St. Paul," and the usual Christmas performance of Handel's "Messiah."

The Symphony Society, under Mr. Damrosch, will give during the season Berlioz's "Harold in Italy," Brahms's C minor Symphony (No. 1); Dvorák's Concerto for violin (Henri Marteau, soloist)—new, first time; Grieg's melodrama, "Olaf Trygvason" (new); Mackenzie's ballad, "La belle Dame sans merci"; Saint-Saëns's Symphonic Poem, "Phaeton"; Schumann's D minor Symphony (No. 4); Tschaikowsky's Symphony (new, first time); Wagner's two duets from "Die Walküre: (a) Siegmund and Sieglinde, Act I.; (b) Wotan and Brünnhilde, Act III. Among soloists engaged are Madame Materna, Mr. Plunket Greene, Mr. Bispham, and Mr. Henri Marteau.

The Worcester Festival marked the week beginning September 25, and was notable for the adequate production, among other works, of "Miriam's Song of Triumph," Schubert; "The Bride of Dunkerron," Smart (soloists, Madame Lilian Nordica, Mr. Wm. H. Rieger, and Mr. Carl Dufft); "Samson and Dalila," Saint-Saëns; and Mendelssohn's "Loreley." The presence of Dr. Dvorák, who conducted his own 149th Psalm and "Husitzka" Overture, gave unusual interest to the Festival, which, as a whole, was more than usually successful. The last Concert was devoted to Handel's "Judas Maccabæus," with distinguished soloists, including Mesdames Nordica and Katherine Fisk, Mr. Rieger, Mr. Cafferty, and the full chorus, orchestra, and organ. Mr. Emil Fischer, Madame Caroline Ostberg, and M. Vladimir de Pachmann also contributed to the success of the Festival.

The Handel and Haydn Society will give during the season Bach's "St. Matthew" Passion and H. W. Parker's "Hora Novissima," which is to be put in rehearsal at once. Mr. A. S. Baker, at St. James's Church, is preparing to give the latter work early in November, in its English version, with his large and excellent choir.

A notable Church Service was given on Thursday, September 28, under the direction of Mr. R. H. Warren, who, in addition to his duties at St. Bartholomew's, has assumed the charge of Christ Church, Rye, N.Y. It included Gounod's Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, Mendelssohn's "I waited for the Lord" ("Lobgesang"), Rev. E. V. Hall's "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem," and Handel's "Sound an alarm," sung by Mr. E. C. Towne, solo tenor of St. James's. The service was heartily enjoyed by all who were present, and Mr. Warren is to be congratulated upon the admirable results attained during his brief term of service at Rye.

The elaborate schemes of the Bureau of Music at Chicago have dwindled very materially, although an occasional performance of Handel's "Messiah," under the direction of Mr. Tomlins, preserves the semblance of choral work. Mons. Alex. Guilmant gave a series of Recitals on the great organ, at which, among other numbers, he performed the Bach G minor Fugue and the Sonata "Pontificale" of Lemmens. The distinguished organist is now in the East and will give a series of Concerts at some of the leading churches, under the management of Mr. Gerrit Smith, Mr. William C. Carl, Mr. E. M. Bowman, and others.

Mr. Clement R. Gale, who has just returned to the city, intends to produce at Calvary "The Last Judgment," "St. Paul," Bridge's "The Lord's Prayer," Wesley's "The Wilderness," Stainer's "Crucifixion," and Mendelssohn's 42nd Psalm.

Two interesting plans of Mr. Walter Damrosch deserve particular mention: one that he intends to devote one evening of the Symphony Society exclusively to English composers, at which will be brought out certain of the orchestral works of Stanford, Cowen, Sullivan, Mackenzie, and Edward German; the other that he has nearly completed his own opera, upon which he has been at work during his residence in England. This is based upon Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter." The libretto is by George Parsons Lathrop, the son-in-law of Hawthorne, himself a novelist and poet of well-known excellence. Mr. Damrosch hopes to complete the work in December, and its production will follow as soon as possible.

The Choir of Emmanuel Church, Dulwich—the prize choir in the Crystal Palace competition in June last—gave a Concert on the 11th ult., at St. James's Hall, Stanstead Road, Forest Hill, in aid of the funds of St. James's Church. The glees and part-songs given by the choir were Smart's "Sea King," Mendelssohn's "Hunting Song," Horsley's "See the chariot at hand," Barnby's "Sweet and low," Macfarren's "The Miller," Pinsuti's "The Rhine Raft Song," and Eaton Faning's "Song of the Vikings," all admirably sung under the able Conductor, Mr. James W. Lewis. Scarcely inferior in merit were the performances of the small string orchestra, with the assistance of Mr. Alfred Furse at the pianoforte. A violin solo by Mr. W. H. Hunnex and a violoncello solo by Mr. Frank Thornton were loudly applauded. Mr. J. Thornton, Mr. W. M. Wells, Miss Lillie Scott, Miss Winifred Drake, and Mrs. Hunnex also gained hearty applause for their songs.

Mr. Henry J. B. Dart having resigned the position of Organist and Choirmaster at St. John's, Waterloo Road, the last of a long series of Oratorio performances, given under his direction in this church, took place on the 15th ult., when "Elijah" was sung, with Miss Florence Monk, Miss Florence Hoare, Mr. G. Denis, and Mr. F. Winton as soloists, under the conductorship of Mr. S. S. Martyn. It will be matter for regret if these performances, which have been so successfully carried on in the face of many difficulties for the last eleven years, should be permitted to cease. During the last four years sixteen sacred works by Handel, Mendelssohn, Mozart, Spohr, Weber, Macfarren, Sterndale Bennett, Benedict, Gounod, Sullivan, and others have been given on Sunday afternoons to large congregations, and the general excellence of the renderings can scarcely have failed to have exerted a healthy influence in the thickly populated district in which the church stands.

September 29 and the following Sunday were observed at St. Agnes's Church, Kennington Park, as days of thanksgiving for the harvest. On the evening of September 29 Part II. of Haydn's "Creation" was performed, and on the 1st ult. Weber's Mass in G was sung at the High Service, the solo work being excellently rendered by Mrs. Tait and Messrs. W. Toms, J. Wint, and R. Bayley. After evensong Part I. of the "Creation" was sung, the soloists on this occasion, as well as on the preceding Friday, being Mrs. Tait, Mr. J. Wint, and Mr. Colvin, each of them meriting high praise for the able and finished execution of their respective parts. The chorus did their work well, the basses being specially good, while the organist, Mr. Walter Hedgcock, was able to give full scope to his great skill on the splendid new organ recently built at this church. Mr. Cox conducted.

The Festal Evensong in connection with the Harvest Thanksgiving Services at Hanover Church, Regent Street, took place on the 19th ult. The Anthem "The Wilderness" (Wesley) and the Canticles (Marshall in D) were excellently rendered; in fact, the choir sang with precision and refinement throughout the whole of the Service. The soli parts in the Anthem were taken by members of the choir—viz., Masters Wickens and Millner, and Messrs. Barker, Holden, and Cope, the last-named singing the bass solo with fine effect. The Festival was continued on Sunday, the 22nd ult., Wesley's Anthem being repeated at Evensong, and the Service concluding with Handel's Hallelujah Chorus, while at Matins Barnby's beautiful Anthem "Ye shall go out with joy" was sung. Mr. David J. Thomas (the Organist and Choirmaster of the Church) presided at the organ.

On Sunday, the 15th ult., the choir of St. Mary's Church, Kilburn, resumed their monthly renderings of sacred cantatas after the evening service, the occasion being the Harvest Festival. The work performed was Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise." There was an efficient choir of about sixty voices. The solos were taken by Mr. Edwin Houghton and Miss Selina Quick. The precision and good tone of the choir were noteworthy throughout, though lacking perhaps in vigour in the chorale "Let all men praise the Lord." The orchestral effects of the fine organ, lately erected in the church by Messrs. Bishop and Son, added considerably to the effectiveness of the performance. The church was so crowded that many were unable to gain admission. The Organist and Director of the choir is Mr. Edgar Pettmann, who presided at the organ.

The Organ Recitals at the Royal Albert Hall on Sunday afternoons continue to prove acceptable to the public. On the 15th ult. Mr. H. C. Tonking was the Organist, and he displayed to great advantage the capabilities of the great organ, notably in Guilmant's Funeral March and "Hymn of Seraphs." Mr. Bernhard Carrodus played with rare ability the Andante and Finale from Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto and Wieniawski's "Légende," both being accompanied with organ and pianoforte. Miss Mary Reeve was the vocalist, and Mr. Liddle proved himself once more an able accompanist. Mr. Tonking has just concluded, at the Gardening and Forestry Exhibition, Earl's Court, a series of Organ Recitals extending over five months.

The Harvest Festival Services at South Hackney Parish Church commenced on Thursday, the 12th ult., with an early Choral Celebration at 7 a.m. to the music of Gadsby's Setting in C. At Evensong, West's Magnificat and Nunc dimittis and Goss's "Fear not, O land," were sung. The Festival was continued throughout the week, and concluded on the 19th ult. with a very praiseworthy rendering of West's Cantata "Seed-time and harvest," the solos being sung by Master Gough (solo boy of St. Alban's, Holborn) and Mr. Chas. Prickett (member of the choir). Mr. John E. West, Organist and Director of the Choir, presided at the organ throughout the Festival.

On the 16th ult. Cherubini's Requiem Mass in D minor was sung by the students of St. Mark's College, Chelsea, before Sir John Stainer and Mr. McNaught. As far as can be ascertained, this is the first time that the whole of this noble work has been performed in England. At the close Sir John Stainer said: "The work is magnificent, and has afforded me the greatest pleasure; the splendid performance which you have given reflects very great credit upon you." High praise is due to Mr. Owen Breden, Professor of Music at St. Mark's College, who entirely prepared the students and conducted the performance.

An entirely new and original operetta, entitled "The Lost Prince," written and composed by Mr. H. W. Rendell,

There were Shepherds.

ANTHEM FOR CHRISTMAS, FOR BARITONE, SOPRANO (OR TENOR) SOLI AND CHORUS.

S. Luke ii. 8—11, 14;
and part of a Hymn by MONTGOMERY.

Composed by MYLES B. FOSTER.

London: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO., 1, Berners Street (W.), and 80 & 81, Queen Street (E.C.); also in New York.

Copyright, 1893, by Novello, Ewer and Co.

dim.
p tranquillo.
keep - ing watch o - ver their flocks by night,
keep - ing watch o - ver their keep - ing watch, watch by night,
keep - ing watch o - ver their
keep - ing watch, watch by night,
keep - ing watch o - ver their
keep - ing watch, watch by night,
keep - ing watch o - ver their Voices alone.
p tranquillo.
flocks by night.
flocks by night.
flocks by night.
flocks by night.
Oboe.
Org.
add other Reeds.
dim.
accel.

Allegro con maesta.
And, lo, the an - gel of the Lord came up - on them,
And, lo, the an - gel of the Lord came up - on them,
And, lo, the an - gel of the Lord came up - on them,
And, lo, the an - gel of the Lord came up - on them,
Allegro con maesta.
molto cres.
f Gt.
Voices alone.
Man.
Ped.
and the glo - ry of the Lord
and the glo - ry of the Lord
and the glo - ry of the Lord
Gt. Tuba or Trumpet. and the glo - ry of the Lord
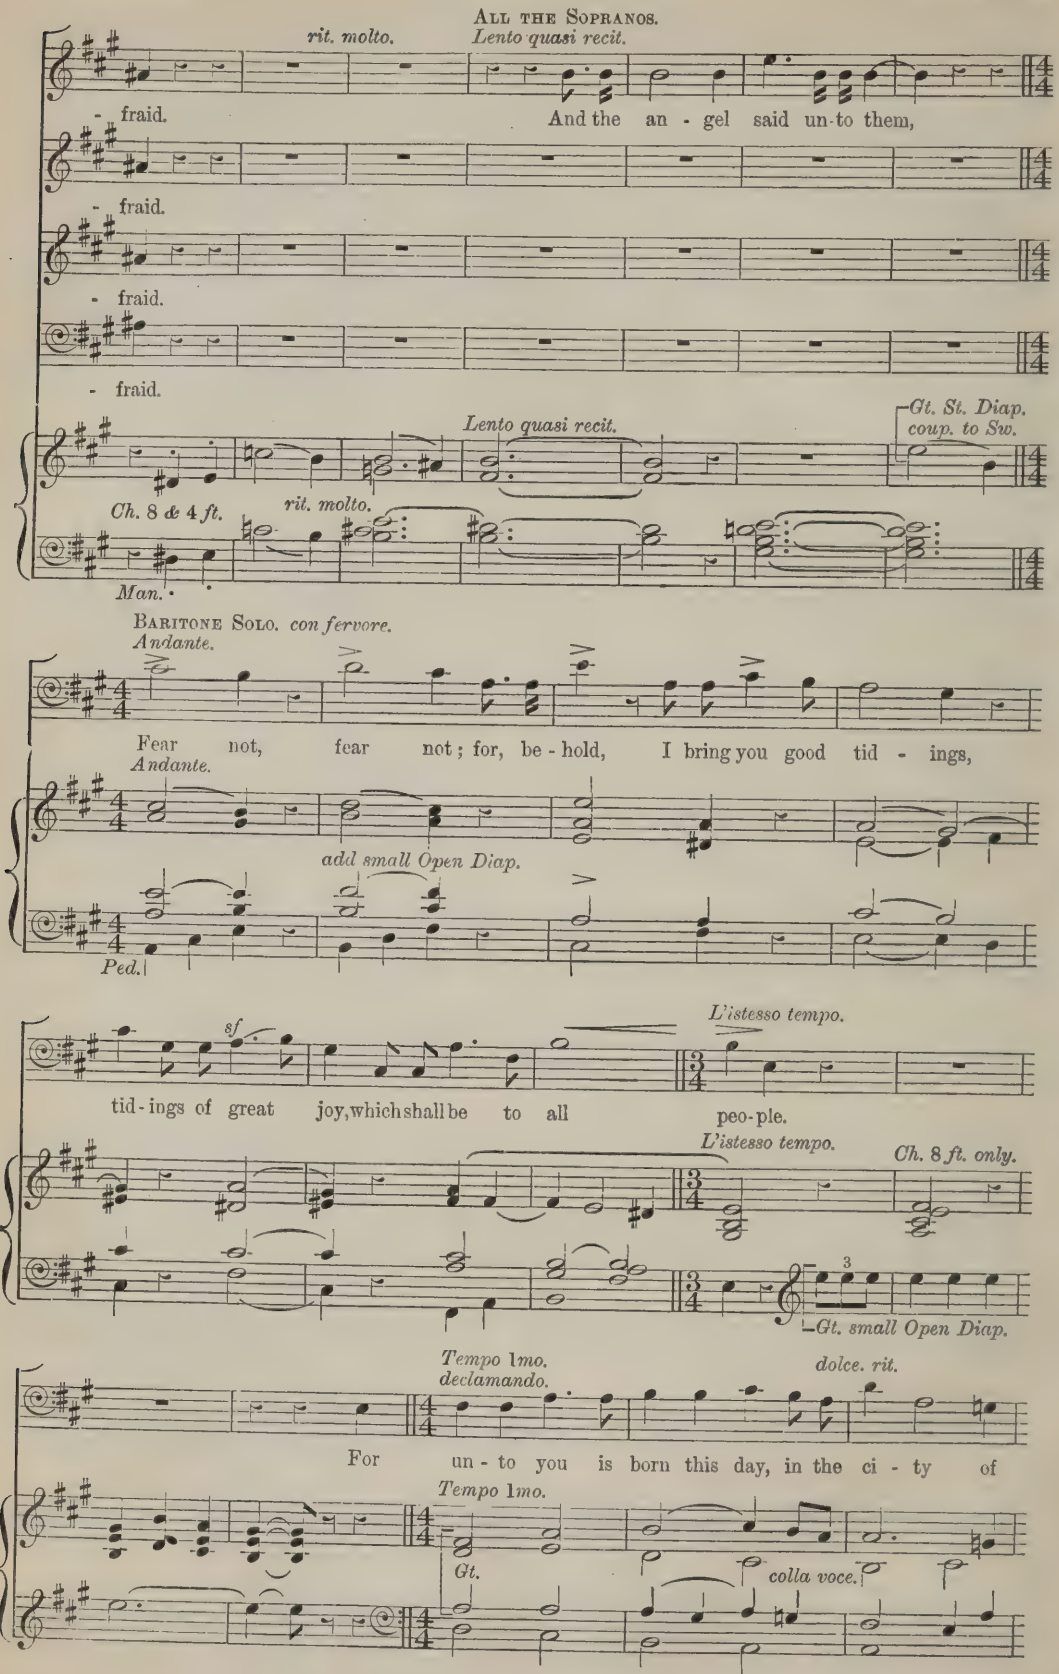
Sw.
Full Sw.
Voices alone.
Ped. coupled.
rit.
sempre rit.
shone round a - bout them,
and they were sore a -
shone round a - bout them,
and they were sore a -
shone round a - bout them,
and they were sore a -
shone round a - bout them,
and they were sore a -
Org. Sw. closed.
rit. marcato.
without Reeds.
sempre rit.



All the Sopranos.
rit. molto.
Lento quasi recit.
- fraid.
And the an - gel said un-to them,
- fraid.
- fraid.
- fraid.
Lento quasi recit.
Gt. St. Diap. coup. to Sw.
Ch. 8 & 4 ft.
rit. molto.
Man.
Baritone Solo. con fervore.
Andante.
Fear not, fear not; for, be - hold, I bring you good tid - ings, Andante.
add small Open Diap.
Ped.
sf
L'istesso tempo.
tid-ings of great joy, which shall be to all peo-ple.
L'istesso tempo.
Ch. 8 ft. only.
3
Gt. small Open Diap.
Tempo 1mo. declamando.
dolce. rit.
For un - to you is born this day, in the ci - ty of Tempo 1mo.
Gt.
colla voce.

poco accel.
cres.
agitato.
ff
Da - vid, a Sa - viour, a Sa-viour, a Sa - - viour, which is rit.
Christ, Christ the Lord. .
rit. dim.
Ch.
Gt.
3
CHOIR OF THE HEAVENLY HOST.
mf
Glo - ry, glo - ry, glo - ry to Glo - ry, glo - ry, glo - ry
Glo - ry, glo - ry
Glo - ry
Full Sw. closed.
16 ft. coup.
God . . . in the high - est, and on earth to God in the high - est, and on earth
to God in the high - est, and on earth
to God in the high - est, and on earth
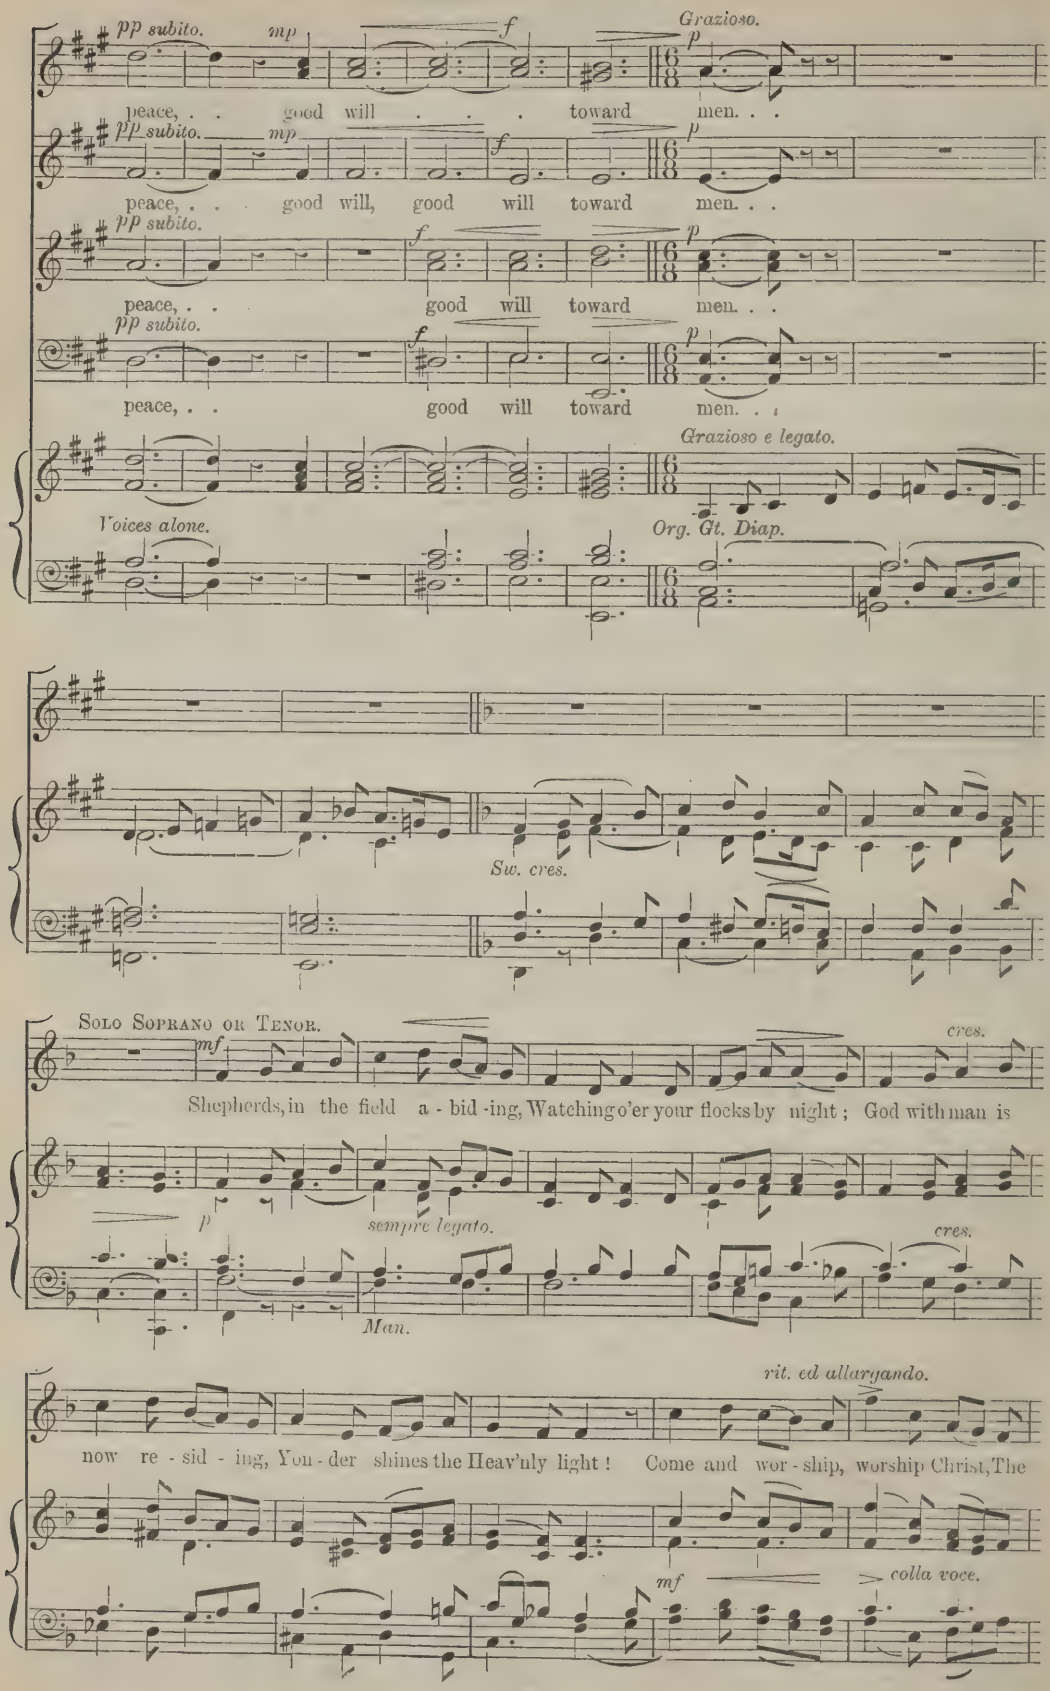
Full Org.
Voices alone.



pp subito.
mp
f Grazioso.
p peace, . . good will . . . toward men. . .
pp subito.
mp
f
p peace, . . . good will, good will toward men. . .
pp subito.
f
p peace, . . good will toward men. . .
pp subito.
f
p
peace, . . good will toward men. . .
Grazioso e legato.
Voices alone.
Org. Gt. Diap.
Sw. cres.
Solo Soprano or Tenor.
mf
cres.
Shepherds, in the field a - bid - ing, Watching o'er your flocks by night; God with man is
p sempre legato.
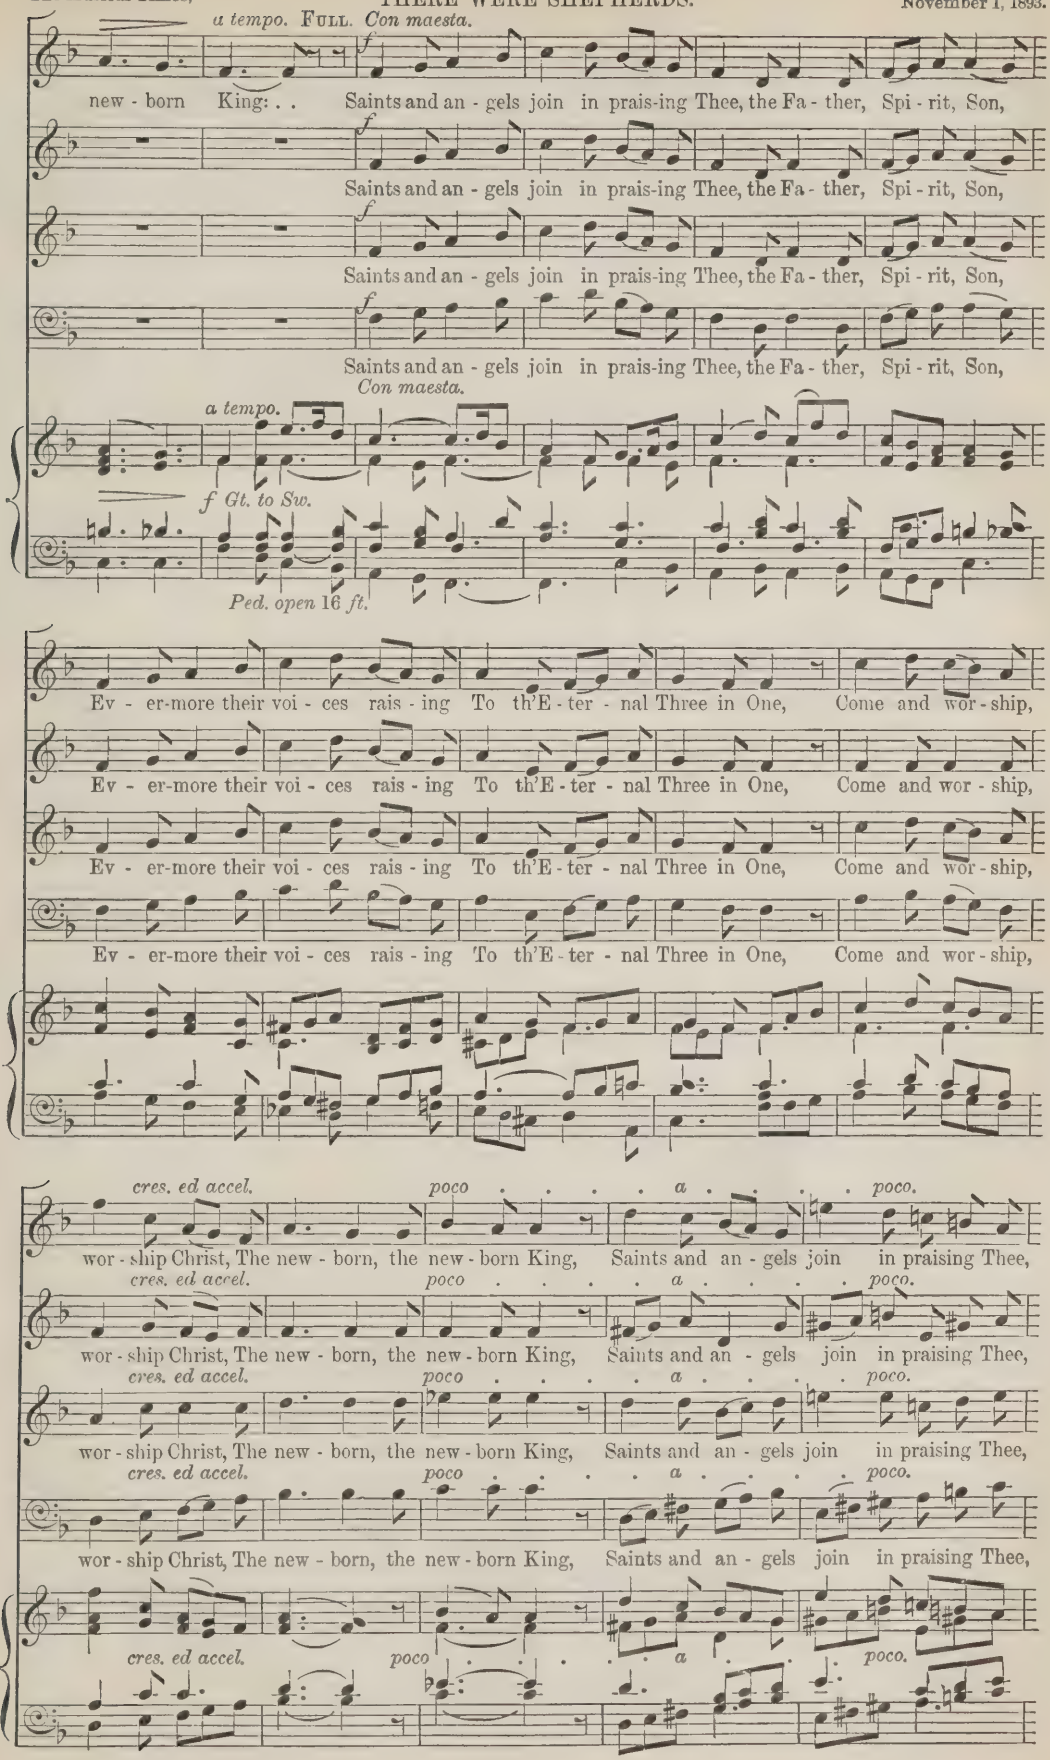
cres.
Man.
rit. ed allargando.
now re - sid - ing, Yon - der shines the Heav'nly light! Come and wor - ship, worship Christ, The
mf
colla voce.



a tempo. FULL. Con maesta.
new - born King: . . Saints and an - gels join in prais-ing Thee, the Fa - ther, Spi - rit, Son,
Saints and an - gels join in prais-ing Thee, the Fa - ther, Spi - rit, Son,
Saints and an - gels join in prais-ing Thee, the Fa - ther, Spi - rit, Son,
Saints and an - gels join in prais-ing Thee, the Fa - ther, Spi - rit, Son, Con maesta.
a tempo.
f Gt. to Sw.
Ped. open 16 ft.
Ev - er-more their voi - ces rais - ing To th'E - ter - nal Three in One, Come and wor - ship,
Ev - er-more their voi - ces rais - ing To th'E - ter - nal Three in One, Come and wor - ship,
Ev - er-more their voi - ces rais - ing To th'E - ter - nal Three in One, Come and wor - ship,
Ev - er-more their voi - ces rais - ing To th'E - ter - nal Three in One, Come and wor - ship, cres. ed accel. poco . . . . a . . . . poco.
wor - ship Christ, The new - born, the new - born King, Saints and an - gels join in praising Thee,
cres. ed accel. poco . . . . a . . . . poco.
wor - ship Christ, The new - born, the new - born King, Saints and an - gels join in praising Thee,
cres. ed accel. poco . . . . a . . . . poco.
wor - ship Christ, The new - born, the new - born King, Saints and an - gels join in praising Thee,
cres. ed accel. poco . . . . a . . . . poco.
wor - ship Christ, The new - born, the new - born King, Saints and an - gels join in praising Thee, cres. ed accel. poco . . . . a . . . . poco.

rit. molto.
ten.
dim.
saints and an - gels join in praising Thee, Christ the Lord, the new-born King, the new - born saints and an - gels join in praising Thee, Christ the Lord, the new-born King, the new - born saints and an - gels join in praising Thee, Christ the Lord, the new-born King, the new - born saints and an - gels join in praising Thee, Christ the Lord, the new-born King, the new - born dim. reduce Gt.
mp
p rit.
pp
King, . . Come and wor - ship the new - - - born King!
King, . . Come and wor - ship the new - - - born King!
King, . . Come and wor - ship the new - - - born King!
King, . . Come and wor - ship the new - - - born King!
Sw. Oboe Solo.
soft Gt.
Ch. 8 ft. only.
L.H.
Man.
Ped. soft 16 ft.
Swell without Reed.

Also published in Novello's Tonic Sol-fa Series, No. 818, price 1½d.

Organist of St. Michael's, Wood Green, was produced at the Assembly Rooms on the 6th and 7th ult., under the patronage of the Baroness Burdett Coutts, who attended the first of the performances. The scenery was very tastefully painted by Messrs. Hancock, of Stratford, and the costumes skilfully designed and arranged. The music, which is scored for orchestra as well as pianoforte and harmonium, is bright and attractive and of considerable merit.

A Harvest Festival was held at St. Philip's, Battersea, on the 1st. ult. At the 11 a.m. matins the Canticles used were Calkin in G. "I will give thanks" (Barnby) was sung as the Introit, followed by Eyre's Mass in E flat. At the 7 p.m. evensong Gounod's Meditation on Bach's First Prelude, for violin, pianoforte, and organ, was played as the in-going voluntary. The Canticles were Smart in F; the Anthems, "Let the bright Seraphim" and "Let their celestial concerts" (Handel). After the blessing Smart's Te Deum in F was sung, followed by Dr. Garrett's Harvest Cantata.

Harvest Festival Services were held at St. Michael's, Wood Green, on St. Michael's Day. After the Evening Service, John E. West's Cantata "Seed-time and harvest" was capitally sung by the well-trained choir of the church; the solos being rendered with excellent effect by Master J. Evans and Mr. Siddon Turner. A large congregation evidently appreciated the music as well as its effective interpretation, for, by desire, portions were repeated on the two following Sundays. Mr. H. W. Rendell is the Organist.

Harvest Festival Services were given at St. Mark's, Notting Hill, on the 11th ult., and continued on the following Sunday. On both evenings the Services were sung to Gadsby's setting in C. After the sermon Haydn's "Creation," Part I., was performed. The solos were sung by Masters Millett and Care, and Messrs. Jemmett, Hunt, and Wm. Vine. Mr. Hamilton Robinson, of St. Stephen's, South Kensington, presided at the organ, and Mr. Warren Tear, Organist and Choirmaster of St. Mark's, conducted.

The following is the result of the Nonconformist Choir Union competition: Anthem section (adjudicator, Mr. Ebenezer Prout)—"I will extol Thee," by C. M. Hudson, Stockwell Baptist Church. Hymn-tune section (adjudicator, Mr. Josiah Booth)—H. A. J. Campbell, Organist of New College Chapel, Swiss Cottage. Secular section (adjudicator, Dr. E. H. Turpin)—part-song, "Go, lovely rose," by Arthur Berridge, choirman, Kentish Town Congregational Church.

Harvest Thanksgiving was celebrated at the Church of St. Mildred's, Bread Street, on the 12th ult. A very large congregation attended, and, after an appropriate Service, partly choral, during which Hall's charming Anthem "Praise, oh, praise," was sung, Spohr's "God, Thou art Great" was given. The rendering throughout was most effective, both solos and choruses being admirably sung. Mr. Bell (Choirmaster) and Mr. Rolfe (Organist) are to be congratulated on the result.

On the 12th ult. a special Harvest Thanksgiving Service was held at St. Mildred's Church, Lee, at which Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise" was performed as the Anthem. The choir, largely augmented for the occasion, numbered about 100, and there was a full orchestral accompaniment. Mr. Spencer Mayor presided at the organ with his usual skill, and the Choirmaster (Mr. Francis L. Kett) conducted with marked ability.

The Earl of Dysart, in accepting the position of President of the St. Cecilia Musical Society, Richmond, expressed his approval of the Society's work, but suggested that works by Bach and Beethoven should soon be given by its members. The Conductor is Mr. H. Wharton Wells, and during the season Hofman's "Melusina" and "The Messiah" are to be performed with full orchestra.

Much choral activity is being shown in the Woodford district, where the following Societies are at work:—Woodford Choral Society (Conductor, Mr. J. P. W. Goodwin), Woodford Wells Musical Society (Mr. A. J. George), Loughton Choral Society (Mr. Henry Riding), Epping Choral Society (Mr. Donald Penrose).

Next month the Old Choristers of Westminster Abbey will hold their second Annual Dinner at the Westminster Palace Hotel. It may be of interest to note that among the choristers of the Abbey who have since attained eminence may be included Mr. Edward Lloyd, Mr. C. E. Willing, and Mr. W. S. Penley.

The Kyrle Choir, under the direction of Mr. F. A. W. Docker, gave a performance of "Elijah" on Wednesday, the 18th ult., at All Saints', Haggerstone. Dr. E. H. Turpin presided at the organ. The soloists were Mrs. Johnson, Miss Rina Robinson, Mr. John Probert, and Mr. Arthur Appleby.

The Royal Academy of Music re-opened on September 28 with a large accession of new students. The concert-room has been re-decorated, and is now lighted by electricity, an improvement which students and visitors alike will be certain to appreciate at its full value.

At the examinations in Music of the Royal University of Ireland, held in Dublin on the 10th ult. and following days, Mr. Haydn Mulholland, Organist and Choirmaster, St. Peter's Cathedral, Belfast, was admitted to the degree of Bachelor of Music.

Harvest Festival Services were held at St. Michael's, Star Street, Paddington, on the 18th ult. At the evening service Mendelssohn's "Lauda Sion" was well sung by the choir, under the direction of Mr. Edmund Rogers, Organist and Choirmaster of the Church.

The handsome statue of the Princess of Wales, executed by his late Serene Highness Prince Victor of Hohenlohe-Langenburg, has been placed in the vestibule of the new buildings for the Royal College of Music.

Mr. W. Stevenson Hoyte has been appointed Professor of the Organ at the Royal Academy of Music.

REVIEWS.

Summary of the History and Development of Mediæval and Modern European Music. By C. Hubert H. Parry. (Novello's Music Primers. No. 42.)

[Novello, Ewer and Co.]

This work is a veritable tour de force of condensation. It traces, in little over a hundred pages, the progress of vocal and instrumental music, in all forms, for more than a thousand years, and this not by means of a dry record of dates and names, such as might by some be considered sufficient for a "primer," but in the shape of thoroughly readable, thoughtful, and pithy essays, valuable not alone to the student who is commencing the study of musical history, but also of great interest to the musician as embodying the opinions of a musical thinker who takes high rank among even the small number of eminent writers on the subject. In such a summary most of the information has necessarily to be conveyed in a critical form. A digest of artistic progress is of course arrived at by the comparison of an enormous number of examples from one epoch among themselves, and with correspondingly complex groups derived from other epochs. The result is naturally a statement of the author's impressions rather than a description of the facts themselves; because he is compelled by the nature of his task to select from the huge accumulation of facts those which appear to him of most importance — which, in short, form the links of that great chain of the ages, neither end of which is ever visible to mortal eye. The facts chosen must be essential—representative—vital: not eccentricities—however curious, or instances—however interesting by reason of singularity. Such a task is akin to the production of a work of art, but much more difficult. The artist must select, eliminate, and group—perspective has to be considered, and effects of light and shade. Equally so the historian; and the more condensed his history, the more do these requirements assert themselves. But whereas the artist need be true only to himself or his ideal, the historian must also be true to his dates and data. There must be no manipulation of facts to justify an a priori theory or feed a prejudice; no effort even to enhance the brilliancy of a picture by an alteration of its true proportions. Small wonder that good histories are so rare, or that so few men are equal to the task of writing a good history—either of music or anything else. That Dr. Parry is among these few, none will doubt who are familiar with the work he has already done in this direction—more especially his lectures and his contributions to Sir George Grove's Dictionary; indeed, it would be difficult to name a musician at once so gifted, so industrious, so well-informed, and so philosophical—so magnificently equipped, in short, for the rôle of musical historian; and we note, therefore, with peculiar pleasure, that this volume is shortly to be followed by another from the same pen, containing musical illustrations of the periods and styles of art to which reference is here made, "together with references to authorities and collections and such particulars as may help to a fuller and more complete study of details than can easily be indicated in a primer." The importance of a study of the music itself is strongly insisted upon by Dr. Parry, who says: "The following summary is intended as a help to the understanding of the circumstances which have made music what it is, and of the aims and efforts of the men who tried to convey their ideas by its means, and the relations in which they stood to one another, and it will not fully attain the purpose for which it is intended without reference to the actual musical facts." Again: "The facts of the greatest use to the musician are the facts of the art itself." As a corollary to this, we may quote the following: "The personal details of the lives of men who played conspicuous parts in the story of art are of but little importance, except in so far as they throw light upon their style or method, or the line of art which they chose; and the consequent direction of the progress of art under their influence." The view here expressed is one which cannot be too often dinned into the ears of persons seeking information on the private lives of the great composers.

The Part-Song Book. Second series. Nos. 656-669. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

By the time these lines are in print choral societies throughout the length and breadth of the United Kingdom will have re-assembled for the work of the winter season, and new part-music will, of course, be in much request. The first of the above series is rather a curious piece from the French, circa 1650, the music being edited by H. Leslie. The words, commencing "This morning, at the dawn of day," are by Philip Latimer, and embody some quaint conceits, which are well illustrated in simple and old-world strains. No. 657, "Sad hearts," by A. Herbert Brewer, is, on the other hand, quite modern in feeling, though not elaborate, the harmonies being of the sensuous kind which, rightly or wrongly, musicians associate with the name of Spohr. A cheerful and simple little part-song is No. 658, "Advice to lovers," by Percy W. Pilcher, with cynical verses by Sir George Etheridge. More sad, but expressive and equally unpretentious, is No. 659, "Peace, come away," words from "In Memoriam," music by C. V. Stanford. No. 660, "Waiting for Father," by R. Bartholomew, is a tuneful and almost hymn-like little ditty that would be suitable for children were it not written for mixed voices. Those who like a humorous part-song by way of a change may be recommended to make acquaintance with "The Blue-Bottle's Fate," No. 661, by A. H. Ashworth, in which amusing touches of realism are united with musicianly taste. No. 662, "March like the Victors," by Roland Rogers, shows that a musical graduate of Oxford can write in the simplest style when called upon to set unsophisticated and child-like verse. No words of recommendation are necessary with respect to the next number, No. 663, "Hark! the Vesper Hymn is stealing," Sir John Stevenson's arrangement of the old Russian air commonly known as the Vesper Hymn or Chant; or of "Ye banks and braes," No. 664, the equally familiar Scottish tune, which is here arranged by W. G. McNaught. No. 665, "The trysting tree," by George J. Bennett, and "Jean," by Oliver King, No. 666, are both pleasantly written and easy part-songs, the former being modern in the harmonic progressions, while the latter, a setting of well-known lines by Burns, has some slight suggestions of Scottish character. No. 667, "Cupid is a wayward boy," by Charles H. Lloyd, is more ambitious, being written for six voices, which are employed for the most part antiphonally, in groups of three each. The writing is decidedly bold, but the piece should prove very effective if well sung, and although an accompaniment is provided, it should be dispensed with whenever advisable. No. 668, "Come, fairies, trip it," by Frederick Iliffe, is a light and pretty little composition; and the last on our list for the present, No. 669, "Song of the silent land," by John E. West, is a very expressive setting of stanzas by Longfellow, which have been previously utilised by composers, but not more felicitously than by Mr. West.

Scots Minstrelsie. A National Monument of Scottish Song. Edited and arranged by John Greig, Mus. Doc., Oxon. With original coloured Illustrations by J. Michael Brown. Vols. 1, 2, 3.

[Edinburgh: T. C. and E. C. Jack.]

The interest shown in Folk-Lore of all kinds during the past two or three decades has naturally not been without its effect on music, and, accordingly, within the last few years collections of the National airs of these isles have multiplied exceedingly. In several instances such collections have been the means of rescuing from permanent extinction, and making known, melodies that had not previously been published, if, indeed, ever committed to paper. In others, the aim has been solely to present well-known or favourite songs in editions distinguished either by greater bulk, more careful selection, better printing or paper, more appropriate accompaniments, or even by all these combined. Scotland, ever foremost in appreciation of her metrical and melodic wealth, has again drawn attention to the beauty and extent of her lyric treasures by means of these handsome volumes—the first three of a promised six. The collection as a whole "claims to be a complete compendium of Scottish Song in the sense that no song which, in the Editor's judgment possesses permanent value, has been omitted." Over 250 songs are included in the three volumes, and if we may regard them as half the number to be eventually given, the collection can scarcely fail to justify the claim put forward. The Editor has striven in the accompaniments to steer between the Scylla of baldness and the Charybdis of over-elaboration. Though, to our thinking, he has occasionally erred in the latter direction, we gladly acknowledge much that is excellent and appropriate in this important and most difficult part of Dr. Greig's labours. The songs are printed not only in the old notation, but also in Tonic Sol-fa—a concession which will, no doubt, be widely appreciated; and marks of expression have been added throughout with exceptional care. Historical, biographical, anecdotal, or critical notes are appended to every song in the collection; in several instances alternative sets of words are given; a coloured lithograph accompanies each volume; and printing, paper, and binding are entirely satisfactory.

Short Settings of the Holy Communion Office. Nos. 25, 26, and 27. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

Since our last notice three numbers have been added to a series which has met with a very large measure of favour wherever the Communion Service is celebrated with music, as it now is in numberless churches throughout the United Kingdom. No. 25 is in E flat, by A. C. Fisher, the voice parts being in unison throughout, desirable variety being furnished by the accompaniments, which are modern in feeling and suggest the influence of the French school of sacred music, though by no means too elaborate for fairly competent organists. Somewhat more ambitious is No. 26, by Myles B. Foster, in the same key. Musically this Service is extremely effective and is quite worthy of use at church festivals. Sticklers after doctrinal accuracy may possibly object to the strong accent placed on certain words, as, for example, "substance" in the Nicene Creed, but any intelligent choirmaster can make the requisite modifications without any injury to the music, which is in every section devotional and expressive. The last setting is in D, by Charles Naylor, who divides his voices sometimes into six or eight parts. It is, nevertheless, not difficult, the bold diatonic harmonies favoured by the composer giving a special English character to the Service. It is scarcely necessary to add that all the versions include the Benedictus and Agnus Dei, which, though not in the Prayer Book, are now in extensive use.

Album of Seven Songs. By Arthur Somervell.
Touch not the Nettle and Turn to Me. Arrangements of Old Scotch Songs. By Arthur Somervell.
[J. & J. Hopkinson.]

Schubert and Schumann, in the matter of songs, are every day exerting greater influence. More care is shown in the selection of words, and these—at any rate, with earnest composers—give form and colour to the music. Mr. Arthur Somervell is a promising worker in this department of musical literature. But although all the numbers in this Album display taste and skill, they are certainly not of equal merit. No. 1, a setting of Dibdin's "Oh, take me to your arms," is a little too quiet and prim; the song of the "Mad Lover" ought, one would think, to be sadder and wilder. "The Mother's Dream," again, is clever and interesting, but there is more intellect than imagination in the music. In "O my Queen" the passion seems from without rather than from within. The number most to our taste is the setting of D. G. Rossetti's charming poem "Three Shadows." Here the composer has caught the true spirit of the words; both melody and accompaniment reflect their dreamy character. The passionate phrase at the close is effective, and so, with their halting rhythm, are the closing instrumental bars. The characteristic "Young Sir Guyon" ballad and the quaint "Lay a Garland," from Beaumont and Fletcher's "The Maid's Tragedy," also deserve mention. The two arrangements of old Scotch songs are decidedly pleasing, especially the second.

Twelve Original Christmas Carols. Words by Mary Gillington; music by various composers.
[Robert Cocks and Co.]

New Christmastide music will shortly be in request, and as the fine old practice of carolling is once more in vogue, alike in church, chapel, drawing-room, and the open air, attention may fittingly be drawn to the above-named publication, which includes musical settings by Dr. A. C. Mackenzie, Dr. W. J. Westbrook, Mr. Arthur Godfrey, Dr. G. C. Martin, Mr. Frank L. Moir, Mr. Alfred J. Eyre, and Mr. Lawrence Kellie. For the most part these compositions are something more than mere tunes simply harmonised; they deserve recognition as part-songs worthy of attention by high-class choral societies in town and country, and to these they may be warmly recommended.

Christmas Holidays. Words by J. A. Campbell; music by Herbert W. Schartau. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

Messrs. Campbell and Schartau's little work combines music with recitation, the former being written for treble voices partly in unison and partly in two-part harmony. The vocal parts are given in Tonic Sol-fa and Staff notations, and the unpretending Cantata is well described as "suitable for the breaking-up of schools," the librettist and the composer having each discharged his share in the work in a manner calculated to win wide approval.

Si j'étais Dieu, Douleurs Divines, In the Garden (In dem Garten). Three Songs. By Maude Valérie White.
[Robert Cocks and Co.]

The first, to Sully Prudhomme's graceful words, has a broad melody with an accompaniment which testifies to the skill of the composer as a pianist. "Douleurs Divines" is a smoothly-written song, with an excellent English version of Emile Augier's words. The last is a setting of Rückert's little poem, with a good English translation by the composer. The music is light and graceful, but the song has a dangerous rival in Schumann's setting of the same words.

Original Compositions for the Organ. Nos. 186, 187, 188, and 189. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

Considerable attention was of course drawn to the Wedding March written by Dr. William Creser for the marriage of the Duke of York and the Princess May on July 6 last, and the piece, which forms the first number of the above series, was generally commended as being written in an appropriately cheerful style, but with the chaste dignity befitting an important national occasion. It need only be added that the march should prove generally serviceable as a concluding voluntary, and presents no difficulty whatever to ordinarily competent organists. The next three numbers contain six pieces, two in each, by Alfred Redhead. They are written mainly in what may be termed the contrapuntal style, though without any elaborate fugal development, and are eminently adapted for church use, undue ornamentation and sensuous melody being sedulously avoided. The pieces will find favour in churches where a plain and simple musical service is in use.

Six Pieces for the Violin. By H. W. Wareing, Mus. Doc., Cantab. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

The number of persons who study the violin increases daily, and it is therefore not surprising to find an increase in the musical literature of that instrument. Transcriptions are common, and to these, if well written, no exception can be taken; but original music, from an art point of view, is more profitable. These six pieces are clever, fresh, and of only moderate difficulty. No. 1, "May-Day Festival," is very bright and pastoral-like in character; it does not lack variety, but the closing section is a trifle spun out. No. 2 opens with a charmingly graceful theme, and, after a middle section, the piece is gradually worked up to an effective climax. No. 3 is a quiet, pleasing Romance; No. 4 a sprightly Pastoral Dance, No. 5 an expressive Légende, and No. 6 a lively Saltarello. The composer writes well for the solo instrument, and in many places the accompaniments are quite of a concertante character.

Ten Sketches for Violin and Pianoforte. By J. B. Poznanski. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

No. 1, "Sur le Fleuve," is a smooth flowing piece, which may serve to recall pleasant hours spent upon the river. No. 2, a "Berceuse," is soft and soothing; the Coda, with its delicate harmonies, is particularly attractive. No. 3 is a gentle Barcarolle; the poco più mosso section, with its marked change of rhythm, produces an excellent effect. No. 4, "Au revoir," is of marked simplicity; the music seems, at times, almost to speak the words of the superscription. No. 5, "L'Orientale," is graceful. No. 6, "Mazurka," is as neat as it is nice. No. 7, "La Rosée," with its light, tripping rhythm, is decidedly pleasing. No. 8, "Légende," tells of some romantic little episode. No. 9, "Gavotte," is light and piquant, and the last, "Danse des Faunes," is by no means the least interesting. The name of the composer is a sufficient guarantee that the violin part is ably written.

Quatre Morceaux pour Violon. Par Henri Seiffert.
[E. Ascherberg and Co.]

Though the composer of these pieces is presumably French or Belgian by extraction, there is no valid reason why a foreign language should be used on the title page, as they are published in London. But for considerably more than a century pure Anglo-Saxon has been regarded by many as a language unsuitable to employ in connection with music, and this silly prejudice is dying hard, though we are happy to think that it is dying. M. Seiffert's sketches are brief, generally speaking tuneful, and studiously unpretentious. Perhaps the most piquant of the set is No. 2, a "Menuet" in G minor, but they are all pleasing and within the means of elementary players.

A Sea Dream. A Cantata for Ladies' voices, with recitation. Words by Shapcott Wensley; music by Battison Haynes. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

The libretto of this Cantata is of the simplest character. There is a storm at sea; a maiden stands on the shore and prays for the safety of her lover; sirens assure her of their power and sympathy, and when morning dawns and the storm-tossed bark returns in gladness and sunshine, they join with the maiden in a song of thanksgiving. The music of Mr. Battison Haynes displays artistic qualities not generally looked for and not often found in compositions of this kind. It is, of course, not difficult or over-elaborate in structure, but it is full of musicianly touches and at times slightly suggestive of Schumann. Conductors of ladies' choirs will be pleased to make acquaintance with this excellent little work.

FOREIGN NOTES.

The Stuttgart Court Theatre will, during next month, produce a new opera by Ferdinand Langer. Its title is "Der Pfeifer von Hardt" ("The Piper of Hardt"), and the plot is founded on Hauff's novel "Lichtenstein," in which the said piper plays an important and most sympathetic part. The same work will also be produced at Mannheim, where the composer is Court Conductor.

Mascagni is said to be engaged on making various alterations in the score of his "William Ratcliff," in consequence of which the first performance in Berlin, originally fixed for November, will not take place till February next.

The Leipzig Riedel Society (Conductor, Professor Kretzschmar) will, during the winter, perform, inter alia, Berlioz's "Requiem," Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis," and Handel's "Deborah," while one of its Concerts will be devoted exclusively to a capella compositions of the Neapolitan school.

The Leipzig Liszt Society announces the Conductors for its forthcoming season; they are Messrs. Richard Strauss, Weingartner, Zumpe, F. H. Cowen, and Siegfried Wagner. At one of the Concerts Herr Stavenhagen will play a new Pianoforte Concerto of his own composition.

Felix Mottl's opera "Fürst und Sänger" ("Prince and Singer") was, on the 22nd ult., performed for the first time at Mannheim, under the direction of the composer, and seems to have met with an enthusiastic reception.

Dr. Hans von Bülow's health still gives cause for anxiety, and he will not, in consequence, conduct any of the Berlin Philharmonic or the Hamburg Orchestral Concerts. For the former, Herren Levi and Schuch have been engaged, and the first-named of these gentlemen and Herr Felix Mottl will conduct the Concerts in the Hansa town.

Berlioz's opera "Benvenuto Cellini" was, on the 1st ult., produced with much success at the Darmstadt Court Theatre.

At the Leipzig Town Theatre two novelties of very different types—viz., Smetana's "The Kiss" and Pergolesi's "La Serva Padrona"—were given on the 6th and 8th ult. respectively. The former pleased very much, but the Neapolitan master's old-fashioned music excited little interest.

The oldest German Male Voice Choir—that of Weida in Thuringia—celebrated, on September 24 and 25, the seventy-fifth anniversary of its foundation. It started in 1818 with eighteen members, and its first Conductor was Cantor Werner, an excellent musician.

The prospectus of the Leipzig Academical Orchestral Concerts has just been published. There will be six in all, and at the last one two movements from Mr. F. H. Cowen's "Scandinavian" Symphony will be played, presumably the Adagio and Scherzo. Mr. Cowen will be in distinguished company on the occasion in question, for the programme will also contain Beethoven's Pastoral Symphony, one of Liszt's Pianoforte Concertos, and Richard Strauss's remarkable symphonic poem "Death and Apotheosis."

The well-known organ virtuoso and composer, Herr S. de Lange, has joined the teaching staff of the Stuttgart Conservatoire of Music.

The large receipts taken during the late Wagner Cycle at the Munich Court Theatre have not only enabled the directors to clear off the deficit of the last two years, amounting to 125,400 marks, but also to cover the 60,000 marks spent this year on new scenery and decorations.

After a lengthy stay in Egypt and Sicily, Richard Strauss has at last returned to Weimar and resumed his duties as one of the Conductors at the Opera. He conducted, on the 15th ult., the first performance of a new opera by Richard Metzdorf, "Hagbart and Signe," and he is preparing Verdi's "Falstaff." According to some of the German papers, he is completely restored to health. May this good news be true news!

In connection with the 150th anniversary of the foundation of the famous Leipzig Gewandhaus Concerts the directors arranged three special Festival Concerts, on the 19th, 20th, and 22nd ult., the programmes of which included a new Festival Overture by Dr. Carl Reinecke; a Motet, "Ein feste Burg," by Johann Friedrich Doles (a pupil of Bach, and for thirty-three years Cantor at the Thomas Schule); Bach's D minor Concerto for three claviers; Mendelssohn's "Scotch" Symphony; Schumann's "Paradise and the Peri," &c. The choice of Doles's work is no doubt due to the fact of that worthy having been the founder and guiding spirit of some Subscription Concerts which were given from 1743 to 1756 at the "Three Swans" Inn, am Brühl, Leipzig. These may be considered the precursors of the Gewandhaus Concerts.

Apropos of the unveiling of the Liszt monument, the Museum of the Oedenburg Musical Society has been presented with the pianoforte on which Liszt practised when a boy. It was manufactured by Johann Schanz, of Vienna, and for many years was the property of the founder of the Society referred to above. After passing through several hands, it was purchased by an Oedenburg merchant, Herr W. Ritter, who handed it over to the Museum to be preserved for all time in remembrance of the greatest master of the pianoforte.

That splendid artist, Madame Calvé, has been engaged for a tour in America. She will sing in "Mignon," "Carmen," "Hamlet," "Manon," "Cavalleria," "L'Amico Fritz," and "Figaro."

Æschylus's tragedy "The Persians" was, on September 27, performed at the Castle, Altenburg, with music by the hereditary Prince of Meiningen.

Liszt's "St. Elizabeth" was, on the 22nd ult. (the composer's birthday), performed as an opera at the Munich Court Theatre. The theatre chorus was largely increased for the occasion by members of Herr Porges's Choral Society. The work is to be similarly performed at several other towns.

The Bremen Town Theatre celebrated, on the 16th ult., the fiftieth anniversary of its existence. It was opened on October 16, 1843, with a Festival Overture by Hagen and a play, "Hans Sachs," by Deinhardstein. The same piece, preceded by a prologue, was chosen for the Jubilee performance, and, as a contrast (in more respects than one, we should imagine), Wagner's glorious "Meistersinger" was given on the previous evening. A happy idea!

After forty years' service at the Frankfort Opera House Herr Georg Goltermann has retired from his post of Conductor. The last work which he conducted, on September 24, was Marschner's "Hans Heiling." The occasion was marked by much enthusiasm expressive of the regard in which the veteran musician has been held by the Frankforters.

Anton Rubinstein will be present at the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Königsberg Academy of Music's foundation, which will be held from the 27th to the 29th inst. He will conduct a performance of his "Paradise Lost."

Eugen d'Albert's anxiously awaited two-act opera "Der Rubin" ("The Ruby") was produced on the 12th ult., at the Carlsruhe Court Theatre, under the direction of Felix Mottl. The libretto has been written by the composer and is founded on a Fairy-tale Comedy ("Märchen Lustspiel") by Fr. Hebbel. D'Albert calls his work a "Musical Fairy-tale" (musikalisches Märchen), from which fact alone even those who are not acquainted with his previous achievements and high artistic ideals may conclude that his work has nothing in common with the fashionable specimens of operatic realism; that it makes no bid whatever for cheap popularity, but rather appeals to the tastes of the cultured few. Dr. Otto Lessmann calls the opera a masterpiece, in spite of some small blemishes. The style is that of Wagner, as shown in "Die Meistersinger," "Siegfried," and "Parsifal," but his themes are expressive, noble, and free from all reminiscences; the workmanship is excellent, the orchestration wonderfully fine, and the musical characterisation surprisingly successful. The work was received with much warmth.

The Prince Regent of Bavaria will shortly offer a prize of 6,000 marks for the best hitherto unperformed German opera.

A new one-act opera, "Mara," by Ferdinand Hummel, was given for the first time on any stage, at the Berlin Royal Opera, on the 11th ult., with emphatic success. The story is a tragic one, in which scenes of idyllic simplicity are strikingly contrasted with others of a passionate and dramatic character. It is free from theatrical absurdities and touchingly human. The composer has wedded a capital "book" to thoroughly appropriate and most effective music. Altogether, perhaps, the best "Einakter" as yet produced by a German composer. On the same evening Ignaz Brüll's "Gringoire" was but moderately successful. The stage performance of Mendelssohn's "Walpurgis Night" seems to have proved an artistic mistake, as no second performance is to be given.

The dates of next year's performances at Bayreuth are already fixed. Here they are: "Parsifal" on July 19, 23, 26, and 29, August 2, 5, 9, 15, and 19; "Lohengrin" (which is new to Bayreuth) on July 20 and 27, August 3, 10, 12, and 16; "Tannhäuser" on July 22 and 30, August 6, 13, and 18.

A Flemish National Theatre was, on the 3rd ult., opened at Antwerp. As its name implies, all operas will be sung in the vernacular, and particular attention will be paid to works by Flemish composers. For the opening performance Weber's "Freischütz" was selected. Two novelties are promised—viz., Benoit's "Meilief" and Vanderlinden's "Leiden ontzet."

The Netherlandish Theatre, Amsterdam, will, during the coming winter, perform Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci," Mascagni's "Rantzau," and Verdi's "Falstaff." There is no copyright law in Holland by which foreign authors can protect their works, and, as some time since Verdi's "Otello" was given there with a full score which had been concocted by a local musician from the vocal score, it is expected that a similar plan will be adopted with the three novelties named above. This is the way they interpret the good old adage about honesty being the best policy—in Holland.

Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci" has been added to the répertoires of the Hamburg and Hanover Theatres, at both of which the opera was very successful.

Wagner's "Lohengrin" will be given during the coming winter at Nantes. Other novelties will be "Samson and Dalila" (Saint-Saëns), "Sigurd" (Reyer), "Hérodiade" (Massenet), "Le Tribut de Zamora" (Gounod), "Le Roi d'Ys" (Lalo), and "Manon" (Massenet).

M. E. Colonne will, during the coming winter, conduct a series of Concerts and operatic performances at the Paris Eden Théâtre, at which works by Massenet, Gounod, Berlioz, Saint-Saëns, and Wagner will be given. He will have an orchestra of 110 and a chorus of 120 at his disposal, and renowned soloists will be asked to perform.

Signor Coronaro, the author of "Festa a marina," is writing a new opera, "Claudia," the book of which is founded on George Sand's "Claudie."

After the unfortunate contretemps during the performance of "Die Walküre" at the Paris Grand Opéra, to which we referred in our last issue, M. Paul Viardot sent in his resignation, which was accepted. M. Edouard Magnin, the deus ex machinâ of the occasion in question, has been appointed in his place, but he will also retain his position of chef de chant. M. Magnin is no novice with the bâton, for he was for a number of years Conductor at the Théâtre Lyrique, under M. Carvalho.

On the 4th ult. a one-act opera, "Aglaja," by Leo Blech, was produced for the first time at Aix la Chapelle. Although showing many signs of inexperience, the music is said to be full of promise and to reflect the wild and impassioned character of the story in a marked degree. The composer is a young man of twenty-two and lives at Aix.

In the absence of M. Guilmant, who is engaged to give a series of Concerts at Chicago, his post at the Trinité, Paris, is taken by an able organist, M. Regnault; the smaller instrument in the choir is in the hands of M. Salomé, whose name as a composer figures in many of the programmes of English Recital-givers. The performances at La Trinité rank high, but are less interesting than those in the German Cathedrals, from the tendency to mix ingredients. On Sunday, the 15th ult., a Mass by Silas was cut short to make way for two numbers by Gounod. The offertory was, as usual, improvised. The fashionable faithful of the Chaussée d'Autin were played out with an English piece, a Postlude by Edward Cutler, finely rendered by M. Regnault.

Mendelssohn's music to Sophocles' "Antigone" is not good enough for some French gentlemen who have just newly translated this tragedy from the Greek. They want to make the forthcoming performance of their version at the Comédie Française a "manifestation of essentially French art"; hence German music will not do on any account! M. Saint-Saëns, who, it has been said, can write equally well in all styles, will come to the rescue, and provide music "dans le sentiment grec," with unison choruses, &c. According to the versatile composer, it will contain "a great deal more of plainsong than music, and to appreciate this kind of melopœïa, it is necessary to completely forget the ordinary musical impressions of the concert-room and theatre, as one does when listening to the liturgical hymns in our churches. This melopœïa has rhythm and time, which make it very different from plainsong, from which it differs also in other respects." This reads somewhat contradictory, but we suppose it is all plain sailing. To make the affair a complete "manifestation of essentially French art," however, Sophocles surely should have been a Frenchman. But, of course, he wasn't.

At the Paris Opéra Comique two one-act operas—"Le Dîner de Pierrot," by Ch. L. Hess, and "Madame Rose," by Antoine Banès—were produced, for the first time, on September 25. The former is well spoken of as a refined, graceful, and charmingly orchestrated little work, which promises well for the composer's future efforts. M. Banès, on the other hand, seems to follow Mascagni's and the Norwegian Schjelderup's plan of illustrating a simple, homely plot with all the resources of the modern orchestra, and to do his best in the way of tearing a passion to tatters.

The 200th performance of Massenet's "Manon" at the Paris Opéra Comique took place on the 16th ult.

Smetana's opera "The Sold Bride" was not so successful as had been anticipated, when it was lately given under Herr Arthur Nikisch, at Buda Pesth, and this in spite of a performance which is stated to have been "quite superb."

The plan of campaign of the new Director and Conductor of the Pesth Opera, Herr Arthur Nikisch, is nothing if not ambitious. It includes a complete cycle of the operas by the lately defunct Hungarian national composer, Erkel, Wagner's "Tristan," "Meistersinger," and "Rienzi," Puccini's "Manon," a new Hungarian opera (composer's name not given), and one or the other of the latest additions to the répertoire of the French lyric stage. There will also be two new ballets.

Rubinstein's sacred opera "Moses" will be performed on December 3 by the Vienna Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde, under the direction of the composer.

Signor Tasca's opera "A santa Lucia," a striking and uncompromising specimen of the verismo of young Italy, was given on the 4th ult. at the Vienna Court Opera, and, thanks mainly to the superb performances of Signora Bellincioni and Signor Stagno, the success was a very brilliant one.

On the 14th ult. a new National Theatre was opened in Cracow, in Galacia, with great solemnity and appropriate festival performances.

The famous Vienna Männergesang-Verein (male-voice choir) celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its foundation on the 6th ult., when Messrs. Brahms, Bruch, and Gernsheim were appointed honorary members, and the town of Vienna presented the Society (or its Conductor, Herr Kremser, we are not sure which) with the double-sized Salvator medal, whatever that may be.

At Vienna there have just been published in fac-simile eight letters written by Wagner to the Princess Metternich before and after the performance of "Tannhäuser" in Paris in 1861. The lady was the wife of the Austrian Ambassador to the Court of Napoleon III., and it was in a great measure to her that Wagner owed the acceptance of his work by the Grand Opéra. They tell us nothing new respecting the disgraceful intrigue which succeeded in damning a masterpiece without giving it a fair chance of being heard and judged. But they more than confirm all that has been known of what must have been one of the most terrible trials which genius has ever been subjected to.

Signor Sonzogno, the Milan publisher, has had an iron theatre constructed in his mansion in which the new operas which he will publish are to be tried, with a view to gauging their effect in performance.

A new opera, "Evangelina," by Signor Arturo Berutti, was recently produced at the Alhambra Theatre, Milan.

The public gave the work an enthusiastic reception, but the press does not endorse the favourable opinion thus expressed. The plot is founded on Longfellow's poem.

Signor Giacomo Puccini, the composer of the very successful opera "Manon Lescaut," has been appointed Professor of Composition at the Milan Conservatoire, in the place of the lately deceased Alfredo Catalani.

Gaetano Cipollini's opera "Il piccolo Haydn" has been given at the Manzoni Theatre, Milan, with much success.

The saying "Semper aliquid novi ex Africa" is as true now as it was in Pliny's time. It might, however, be altered to apply to Mascagni, for one can scarcely take up a foreign musical paper without reading "something new" about the author of the "Cavalleria." The latest is a rumour that he has turned playwright and is engaged on a drama (N.B.—Not a music-drama) for an Italian actor, Signor Novelli. If this is to be a "stepping-stone to higher things," and he will in future write his own libretti, the news may be considered important; for since he excels pre-eminently in dramatic music, there can be no doubt that his genius will receive a powerful stimulus if he alone creates his characters—i.e., conceives them simultaneously dramatically and musically, and experiences those wonderful—we might say, uncanny—sensations which Wagner describes so graphically in a certain famous passage in his essay "Ueber das Opern Dichten" (Volume X. of his prose works).

The month's bulletin of new operas by the irrepressible composers of Italy is such a lengthy one that we really cannot reproduce it here. As nearly all the works are by unknown authors, and still in these gentlemen's portfolios, or in many cases as yet unfinished, we think it advisable to wait till they are performed. Perhaps some of them will either never reach that stage, or the event which their respective composers are no doubt anxiously looking forward to will be nothing but a still-birth.

The complete troupe of the St. Petersburg Imperial Opera will, during the first months of next year, give a series of sixteen performances in Paris. Rubinstein is expected to conduct his "Demon," and Tschaïkowsky will also direct one of his operas. So, at least, says the Paris Figaro!

The Moscow Conservatoire of Music is to be rebuilt, at an expense of 400,000 roubles, to be paid by the State. A grand Concert-room will be added to the building.

Apropos of the recently celebrated fiftieth anniversary of the first performance of Glinka's opera "Russlan and Ludmila," the town of St. Petersburg founded a Glinka scholarship at the local Conservatoire, and the street leading to the Opera-house was named after the first of Russian composers.

Wagner's "Siegfried" is in preparation at the Imperial Opera, St. Petersburg.

Tschaïkowsky has just completed a new Symphony, which will be performed for the first time by the St. Petersburg Musical Society at the first of the ten Concerts of the winter season. Amongst the novelties to be produced by this Society are two tableaux from Rubinstein's "Moses," fragments from "Nal and Damianti," by Arensky, Suites by Conus and Stojowski, Symphonic Poems by Smetana and Glazounow, an Overture by Tanéiew, &c.; Beethoven's C minor and Choral Symphonies, Schumann's "Rhenish," Mendelssohn's "Italian," Raff's "Im Walde," &c., will also be given. The Conductors are Messrs. Tschaïkowsky, Napravnik, Krouschensky, and Liadow.

In connection with the mysterious "unauthorised" publication of August Enna's new opera "Cleopatra," of which we spoke in our last number, the publisher of the vocal score in question, Herr Henrik Hennings, of Copenhagen, has issued a lengthy pamphlet in which full details of his transactions with the composer are given. These put a very different complexion on the affair.

Tschaïkowsky's opera "Iolanthe" was some time since performed at Copenhagen and very warmly received. The work is founded on Hertz's Danish drama "King René's Daughter."

The Norwegian composer J. Selmer, whose name is hardly known in this country, gave, on September 30, a most successful Concert at Christiania, the programme of which was made up of his own compositions.

M. Gevaert's opera "Quentin Durward" and M. Theodore Dubois's "La Guzla de l'Emir" are to be revived, during the present season, at the Brussels Théâtre de la Monnaie.

Signor Franchetti's opera "Christoforo Colombo" met with but very little success when it was lately performed at Hamburg.

At the Royal Theatre, Madrid, Puccini's "Manon Lescaut," Verdi's "Falstaff," Mascagni's "L'Amico Fritz," and—last, not least—Beethoven's "Fidelio" will be the novelties for the approaching season.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

* Notices of concerts, and other information supplied by our friends in the country, must be forwarded as early as possible after the occurrence; otherwise they cannot be inserted. Our correspondents must specifically denote the date of each concert, for without such date no notice can be taken of the performance.

Our correspondents will oblige by writing all names as clearly as possible, as we cannot be responsible for any mistakes that may occur.

Correspondents are informed that their names and addresses must accompany all communications.

We cannot undertake to return offered contributions; the authors, therefore, will do well to retain copies.

Notice is sent to all subscribers whose payment (in advance) is exhausted. The paper will be discontinued where the Subscription is not renewed. We again remind those who are disappointed in obtaining back numbers that, although the music is always kept in stock, only a sufficient quantity of the rest of the paper is printed to supply the current sale.

BRIEF SUMMARY OF COUNTRY NEWS.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for any opinions expressed in this summary, as all the notices are either collated from the local papers or supplied to us by correspondents.

Bacup.—The annual distribution of prizes in connection with the Mechanics' Institution took place on the 12th ult. There was a very large attendance. The proceedings were agreeably interspersed with songs by Miss Bessie Holt and selections of music by a glee party from the Temperance Prize Choir. Mr. F. Hamer accompanied with ability and taste.

Bedford.—An Organ Recital was given at St. Martin's Church, by Mr. T. O. Brooksbank, on the 19th ult., when works by Merkel Calkin, Archer, Rheinberger, and Rinck were ably performed.

Bournemouth.—A Service of Praise was held on the 3rd ult., at St. Michael's Church. Mr. M. Kingston, Borough Organist, assisted by Miss Edythe A. Oakley, contralto, and Mr. Bason, performed a selection of music which included Beethoven's Egmont Overture, Mendelssohn's Second Sonata, Gounod's "Nazareth," "O rest in the Lord" (Elijah), works by Smart, Capocci, Wely, Batiste, and other pieces. The church was crowded.

Bungay, Suffolk.—A large congregation assembled at Holy Trinity Church, on Wednesday, the 4th ult., the occasion of the opening of the new organ, built by Messrs. Norman Brothers and Beard, of Norwich. Mr. F. Cunningham Woods, Organist of Exeter College, Oxford, assisted by Miss Delia E. Woods (violin), performed pieces by Mendelssohn, Schumann, Merkel, Dubois, Silas, and others in a thoroughly artistic style.

Burnley.—A grand Concert was held in the Mechanics' Institute, under the auspices of the Cricket Club, on the 18th ult. The artists were Miss Marjorie Eaton, Mr. Cuthbert Blacow, and Mr. Eaton Batty. Miss Eaton's voice and style were much admired. Mr. Hartley most ably accompanied, and Mr. Whiteman gave several sketches.

Calverley.—A highly successful Concert was given at the Parish Church Schools, on the 16th ult., by Mr. Tom Child, assisted by Misses Wilby, Marie Rhodes, H. L. Parker, and Messrs. E. H. Walker, A. Armstrong, H. S. Parker, and others.

Carnarvon.—Harvest Festival Services were held in Christ Church on Monday, the 16th ult. At the Evening Service John E. West's Cantata "Seed-time and harvest" was performed. The solos were sung by Master H. O. Jones and Mr. T. H. Rawson. Miss M. M. Jones was the Organist, and Mr. John Williams, Organist of the Church, conducted.

Dornoch.—The inauguration of the new organ in the Cathedral was held on the 9th ult., when Mr. J. B. Lawson (Organist of the new Parish Church, Ardrossan) played pieces by Guilmant, Berthold Tours, Lemmens, S. S. Wesley, Gambini, Morandi, Haydn, and Salomé. Anthems and solos were also rendered by the Choir. The organ has been built by Mr. Eustace Ingram.

Dublin.—On Sunday, the 15th ult., the Annual Harvest Thanksgiving Service was held in St. Werburgh's Church. The rendering of the Anthem "O God, who is like unto Thee" (Myles B. Foster), and Service by Caleb Simper in F, as well as the chanting of the Special Psalms, &c., reflected great credit on choir and choirmaster.

Hereford.—An Organ Recital was given at the Cathedral on the 19th ult., by Mr. George Robertson Sinclair. The programme included Mendelssohn's Fifth Sonata, and pieces by Handel, Beethoven, Stainer, Lemmens, Schubert, and Widor.

KINGSTON.—An Organ Recital was given by Mr. A. Percy Alderson, on the 19th ult., at All Saints' Church, Kingston. The programme included works by J. S. Bach, Schumann, Saint-Saëns, Wagner, and Widor.

LINCOLN.—Mrs. Barraclough's fifty-fourth and Farewell Concert took place in the Masonic Hall, on the 11th ult., and attracted a large and fashionable audience. The performers were Mesdames Clara Samuell and Marian McKenzie and the Meister Glee Singers; violoncello, Mr. Leo Stern; pianoforte, Madame Gregory Hast.

LLANDUDNO.—Few Seaside resorts can offer their visitors such musical attractions as Llandudno has done during the season which has just ended. For over three months two first-rate orchestras—one under the experienced bâton of M. Jules Rivière, at the new Victoria Palace, the other under Mr. Gwyllym Crowe in the Pier Pavilion—have each given two Concerts daily. Both orchestras include many players of eminence, some being members of Sir Charles Hallé's band, others playing under Mr. Henschel in the Scottish Orchestra Company's Concerts at Glasgow.——The Autumn Concerts at the Pier (from the 2nd to the 14th ult.) have been under the direction of Mr. Verdi Fawcett, who has made praiseworthy efforts to vary the programmes by giving Chamber Music, including such pieces as Rheinberger's Quartet for pianoforte and strings, Schubert's "Trout" Quintet, &c. ——On the 12th ult. Harvest Thanksgiving Services were held throughout the town. At Holy Trinity Church, at Evensong, the Magnificat and Nunc dimittis (Tours in F) and Garrett's Harvest Cantata were admirably sung by an augmented choir. The organ (played by Mr. Llewellyn Jones, Organist of Llanfairfechan) was supplemented by a capital orchestra of strings and brass, consisting of members of the Pier and Victoria Palace orchestras. Mr. R. H. Whall, Organist of Holy Trinity Church, conducted.

LUTON.—The Harvest Festival Services, at Christ Church, were held on the 1st ult. The Anthems "Praise the Lord of heaven," by Dr. Elvey, and "Ye shall dwell in the land," Stainer, were sung in good style, the solo being taken by Mr. S. Heath; the Te Deum used was by Vaughan, and the well-known Evening Service of Adlam's in F. Mr. Lambert presided at the organ and at the end of the day's services gave a short selection.

MAIDSTONE.—The first annual Choral Festival in connection with the combined Maidstone choirs was held on Wednesday, the 4th ult., at the Corn Exchange, with band and chorus of 300 performers. The first part consisted of Farmer's Christ and His Soldiers, the second part being a miscellaneous selection. The soloists were Master W. Gough (treble), Miss M. Clark (contralto), Mr. T. Oldroyd (tenor), Mr. W. Syckelmoore (bass), and Mr. F. H. Squires (pianoforte). Conductor, Mr. F. W. Dutnall.

MALVERN.—The "Magdalen Vagabonds" gave a Concert on the 18th ult. at the College Hall. The Revs. W. O. Hughes, E. Vine Hall, A. H. S. Pattrick, Harcourt Fowler, and J. H. Lambert sang glees, old and new, with great success. Miss Martin (daughter of the President of the Council) contributed songs by Schubert and Spohr, and Miss Annie Glen was responsible for the pianoforte accompaniments throughout the programme.

MIDDLESBROUGH.—A special Musical Service was held at St. Hilda's Church on the 8th ult. During the service Miss Stevenson sang with much feeling Gounod's "Ave Maria" (violin obbligato by Mr. A. Wilson), and the choir did good service in the choruses in Mendelssohn's 42nd Psalm. Mr. Felix Corbett gave Mendelssohn's Second Sonata and Wély's Postludium on the organ. The service was a continuation of the recent Harvest Thanksgiving Services.

MORPETH.—The fourth of a very successful series of Organ Recitals was given in St. James's Church on the 20th ult., by the veteran Northumbrian Organist, Mr. J. F. Brewis. The programme was as follows: Organ Sonata, No. 2 (Mendelssohn); Air with Variations (Mozart); Andante from Fifth Symphony (Beethoven); "Hush, ye pretty warbling choir" (Handel); Adagio from Septuor (Beethoven); Benedictus from Twelfth Mass (Mozart); Adagio from Pianoforte Trio in C minor (Beethoven); Fugue in G minor (Bach).

NEWCASTLE.—Mr. Dodd's Choir gave an excellent Concert in the Town Hall on the 14th ult., and fully sustained its reputation in part-songs by Gounod, Faning, Vincent, &c. Organ pieces were played by Mr. George Dodds, Junr., who played the Overture to "Zampa" and Lemmens's "Storm" in a manner that secured the applause of a crowded house.

PERTH.—On the 6th ult. an opening Recital was given by Mr. Dan Wylie on the new electro-pneumatic organ lately erected in the City Church. Four Anthems were sung by the choir between the various pieces. As only one organ in Scotland had previously been built on the new system, considerable interest was naturally taken in this one. All who have played on it are, we learn, loud in expressions of approval.

ROMSEY.—The Harvest Festival was held in the Abbey, on Sunday, the 1st ult. The music for the Choral Celebration was that in G, by Agutter. At the evening service the organ was supplemented by a stringed orchestra. The Magnificat and Nunc dimittis were sung to Stainer's setting in A, the Anthem being "Ye shall dwell in the land" (Stainer). Mr. W. C. Bliss, the Organist, conducted, Mr. W. Grace presiding at the organ. Before the service Handel's "Pastoral" Symphony was played by organ and orchestra, and at its conclusion Mendelssohn's "Cornelius" March. The choir sang well throughout the day.——On the 5th ult. Mr. W. C. Bliss gave an Organ Recital in the Abbey. The Rev. C. L. Coghlan was the vocalist. Pieces by J. S. Bach, Handel, Mendelssohn, Guilmant, Saint-Saëns, Parker, and Dr. G. B. Arnold were given with perfect success.

STAFFORD.—On the 11th ult. a new organ was dedicated at St. Chad's Church, when Organ Recitals were given by the Rev. T. H. Spinney (late Organist of Exeter College, Oxford). The programmes included works by Handel, Haydn, Bach, Rossini, Wély, Mendelssohn, Stiehl, W. Spinney, Chopin, Batiste, and Meyerbeer.

TAUNTON.—A most successful Pianoforte Recital was given on the 12th ult., at the Hotel Assembly Rooms, by Miss Amy Hare, in aid of the "William Liddon" Memorial Hospital Fund. Miss Hare, who studied at the Royal Academy of Music, and is now settled in Washington, U.S.A., is a native of Taunton, and generously gave the Concert whilst at home for a short holiday. A large audience showed plainly that Miss Hare's artistic endowments were as fully appreciated as her kindness. The programme included Beethoven's Appassionata Sonata, and pieces by Chopin, Schumann, Brahms, Liszt, Grieg, Wagner, and Schubert.

WAKEFIELD.—Mr. Robert Hope-Jones, of Birkenhead, delivered a Lecture on the "Hope-Jones system of Electrical Organ Control," at the monthly meeting of the Wakefield and District Organists' Association, on the 5th ult. He said the tone of an organ depended to a much greater extent than was commonly supposed upon the form of action employed. The first essential of an organ was an absolutely prompt and steady supply of wind. The sensitiveness of organists' ears had been dulled by the fact that they had never heard the dignified result obtainable by steady and prompt wind. This had been secured by the Hope-Jones system. He then spoke of the advantages the system had from an architectural point of view. The instruments built on this system could be divided into any number of portions and placed wherever most convenient. The three-manual organ built on this system by Messrs. Denman, of York, for the Church of the Holy Trinity, Scarborough, showed what the system was capable of accomplishing. Its console was movable, being connected with the organ by a hundred feet of cable. The whole instrument did not occupy a single foot of ground space, and the immediate result of putting in the organ had been the gain to the congregation of forty sittings on the floor occupied by the old organ. Before closing the lecturer spoke of some experiments he was now carrying out with a view of producing the heavy thirty-two foot tones of an organ without the intervention of organ pipes.

WICKHAMBREAUX.—An Organ Recital was given in the Parish Church on the 23rd ult., by Mr. D. A. Fox (pupil of Dr. Longhurst). The programme included March in B minor (Schubert), Andante in F (Smart), Prelude and Fugue in E minor (Bach), Andantino (Lemare), Allegro, Fourth Concerto (Handel), Cantilène and Grand Chœur (Salomé), and Second Sonata (Mendelssohn).

ORGAN APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. W. H. Fraser, Organist and Choirmaster to the Parish Church, Northfleet.—Mr. Percy H. Fell, Organist and Choirmaster to St. Paul's, Upper Norwood.—Mr. H. Collier Grounds, Organist and Choirmaster to the Church of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, Boston, Mass.—Mr. G. A. Sarvent, Organist and Choirmaster to St. Agnes, Newmarket.—Mr. W. T. Winkworth, Organist and Choirmaster to Winkfield Parish Church, Windsor. —Mr. Ambrose Chittenden, Organist and Choirmaster to St. Peter's Church, Hersham.—Mr. Charles E. Daggett, Organist and Choirmaster to St. Paul's, West Brixton.—Mr. A. Madeley Richardson, to Malvern Priory Church.—Mr. P. Goodman, Organist and Choirmaster to the Church of St. Francis Xavier, Dublin.—Mr. John Van Craen, to St. Peter's, Phibsborough.

CHOIR APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. Henry Turner (Solo Tenor), to All Saints' Church, Colville Square.—Mr. E. Richardson (Lay Vicar-Choral), to Lichfield Cathedral.

MISS SIREMA BURTON (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, Cantatas, &c., address, 6, Woodland Villas, Arboretum Avenue, Lincoln.

MISS HONEYBONE (Soprano)
For Oratorios and Concerts, address, 41, Hampden St., Nottingham or, Holm Leigh, Earlsfield Road, Wandsworth Common, London.

MISS ALICE ASHFORD (Mezzo-Soprano)
32, Gold Street, Northampton.

MR. JAMES SKELTON
For Oratorio, Ballad, and other Concerts.
Address, 1, Dolbey Street, Weaste, Manchester.

SOPRANO WANTED, at Roman Catholic Church in N.W. District. Boy with good voice and accustomed to the Latin service. £12 per annum. Morning only. W. Wall, 1, St. Paul's Crescent, Camden Square, N.W.

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL, Oxford.—There is a VACANCY in the Choir for an ALTO voice. Salary, £90 a year, which may be raised to £100 at the end of the first year, if the Organist recommends this. Candidates must be Communicant members of the Church of England, and must not be above thirty years of age. Written applications, enclosing copies of one testimonial to musical ability and one to personal character, should be sent to the Organist, Basil Harwood, Esq., Christ Church, Oxford, by Wednesday, November 8.

WANTED, TENORS, for St. Gabriel's, Warwick Square, Pimlico. Good readers indispensable. Salary, £20 and £15. Apply, by letter, Ed. E. Douglas-Smith, 161, Ledbury Road, Bayswater.

WANTED, BASS VOICES for Nonconformist Church, Bromley, Kent. Small salary offered. Apply, P., 152, High Street, Bromley, Kent.

BASS.—Owing to the disbanding of a Choir, Choirmaster wishes to RECOMMEND his SOLO BASS. Good voice and reader. Used to full Cathedral Service. Address, Choirmaster, 20, Artillery Place, Woolwich.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO, EWER & CO.

SCHUMANN, R.—Complete Works for the Pianoforte. Edited and fingered by Agnes Zimmermann. Vol. 2, cloth, gilt, folio, 21s.

ARNOTT, ARCHIBALD DAVIDSON.—"Young Lochinvar." A Ballad. For Chorus and Orchestra. The poetry written by Sir Walter Scott. Paper cover, 1s. 6d.

COWEN, FREDERIC H.—"Village Scenes." Cantata. For Female Voices. With Pianoforte Accompaniment. The words by Clifton Bingham. Paper cover, 1s. 6d.

HAYNES, BATTISON.—"A Sea Dream." Cantata. For Ladies' Voices (with Recitation accompanied). The words written by Shapcott Wensley. Paper cover, 2s. 6d.

LEWIS, J. H.—"Counterpoint." Paper boards, 5s.

PARRY, C. HUBERT H.—"Summary of the History and Development of Mediæval and Modern European Music." (No. 42. Novello, Ewer and Co.'s Music Primers, Edited by Sir John Stainer.) Paper cover, 2s.; paper boards, 2s. 6d.

PITT, PERCY.—"Bagatelles." For Violin and Pianoforte. (Op. 1.) Paper cover, 3s. 6d. For Contents, see advertisement, page 702.

THOMSON, SYDNEY.—Seven Songs. For Mezzo-Soprano. The words selected from the poems of Alfred, Lord Tennyson. Paper cover, 4s.

THE SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW. No. 17. Contains the following music in both Notations: "A Lullaby" (Two-part Chorus), J. L. Roeckel; "Aldiborontiphoscophornio" (Trio, for S.S.A.), Dr. Callcott; Two-part Studies—Studies on the Sharp 4th and the flat 7th. 1½d.

BANKS, CHARLES P.—(in F). Magnificat and Nunc dimittis. (Mostly Unison.) 3d.

LLOYD, C. H.—(in D). Magnificat and Nunc dimittis. (No. 143. Novello's Parish Choir Book.) 4d.

MOTT, GEORGE E.—A Chant Service for the Te Deum laudamus, together with Kyrie and Three Offertory Sentences. 3d.

RYLEY, GEOFFREY C. E.—(in D). Te Deum laudamus. 4d.

CLARE, EDWYN A.—"The Prince of Peace." A short, full, and effective Anthem for Christmas. 3d.

PARKER, HORATIO W.—"Before the heavens were spread abroad." Full Anthem, with Tenor Solo, for Christmastide. (No. 440. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 3d.

PARRIS, A. E.—"Glory to God in the Highest." A Christmas Anthem. For Four Voices. 3d.

PARRY, C. H. H.—"Hear my words, ye people." Anthem. For Soprano and Bass Solo and Chorus. (No. 442. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 8d.

ROYLE, T. P.—"Praise the Lord, O my soul." Anthem. For Soprano Solo and Chorus. (No. 439. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 3d.

WILLIAMSON, JOSEPH.—"I beheld, and lo." Anthem. For Soprano and Bass Soli and Chorus. For Saints' Days and General use. 3d.

PHILLIPS, A. J.—Offertory Sentences. 3d.

HORNER, BURNHAM W.—Six Hymn Tunes. 6d.

LEES, JOSEPH.—"Rest, weary soul!" Hymn. On card. 3d.

GILL, W. H.—"Thou art gone to the grave." Elegy. Words by Reginald Heber. 3d.

BACH, JOHN SEBASTIAN.—"Christmas Oratorio" Book of the Words Parts 1 and 2. 5s. per 100

FANING, EATON.—"Buttercups and Daisies." A Pastoral Cantata. For Children's Voices. Book of the Words. 5s. per 100.

MOFFAT, ALFRED.—"A Christmas Dream." A Cantata for Children. Book of the Words. 7s. 6d. per 100.

TOZER, FERRIS.—Harvest Hymn. Words only, 2s. 6d. per 100.

BRIDGE, J. FREDERICK.—"The Well of St. Keyne." Humorous Ballad. For Men's Voices (A.T.T.B.). The words written by Robert Southey. (No. 267. The Orpheus.) 6d

SPOHR, L.—"Counsel." A Four-part Song. For Men's Voices (T.T.B.B.). (No. 268. The Orpheus.) 2d.

—— "Serenade." A Four-part Song. For Men's Voices (T.T.B.B.). (No. 269. The Orpheus.) 3d.

—— "The Minstrel's life." A Four-part Song. For Men's Voices (T.T.B.B.). (No. 270. The Orpheus.) 2d.

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

SPOHR, L.—"The Minstrel's Voyage." A Four-part Song. For Men's Voices (T.T.B.B.). (No. 271. The Orpheus.) 3d.

—— "Old Affection." A Four-part Song. For Men's Voices (T.T.B.B.). (No. 272. The Orpheus.) 2d.

—— "Drinking Song." A Four-part Song. For Men's Voices (T.T.B.B.). (No. 273. The Orpheus.) 4d.

—— "Hark! brothers, hark! A Four-part Song. For Male Voices (T.T.B.B.). (No. 262. The Orpheus.) 3d.

NOVELLO'S PART-SONG BOOK:—

No. 670.	The Time of Youth (S.A.B.).	King Henry VIII.	2d.
„ 671.	Come o'er the burn, Bessie (S.A.B.) Ed. by	C. F. Abdy Williams	2d.
„ 672.	Enforce yourself as God's own Knight (S.A.B.)	Edmund Turges	3d.
„ 673.	Thus musing (S.A.T.)	Wm. Newark	3d.
„ 674.	Ah, my dear son (S.S.A.) Ed. by	Charles W. Pearce	3d.
„ 675.	Pastime with good company (A.T.B.)	King Henry VIII.	3d.
„ 687.	The evening wind (S.A.T.B.) ..	Fred. J. Harper	3d.
„ 690.	It was a lover (S.A.T.B.)	Charles Wood	3d.
„ 692.	Sunshine (S.A.T.B.)	L. Spohr	2d.
„ 693.	Evening (S.A.T.B.)	„	2d.
„ 694.	Let me wander (S.A.T.B.)	„	2d.
„ 695.	To the stars (S.A.T.B.)	„	2d.
„ 696.	Resignation (S.A.T.B.)	„	3d.
„ 697.	Thoughts of Spring (S.A.T.B.)	„	2d.
„ 699.	Magdalen at Michael's Gate (S.A.T.B.)	Ethel M. Boyce	2d.

NOVELLO'S OCTAVO EDITION of TRIOS, &c., FOR FEMALE VOICES:—

No. 290.	The Falcon (S.S.A.)	..	Felix Woyrsch		2d.
„ 291.	The Sleeping Beauty (S.S.A.A.) ..		„	„	3d.
„ 292.	Love's Influence (S.S.A.A.) ..	..	„	„	2d.
„ 293.	Vicissitude (S.S.A.A.) ..	..	„	„	2d.
„ 294.	The Three Horsemen (S.S.A.A.) ..		„	„	3d.
„ 295.	In a year (S.S.A.A.)	..	„	„	3d.

PURCELL, H.—"With drooping wings" ("Dido and Æneas"). (No. 769. Novello's Octavo Choruses.) 1d.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. Edited by W. G. McNaught. (Music in both Notations):—

No. 113.	Hurrah for England. Unison Song	W. W. Pearson	1d.
„ 114.	The Cuckoo. Unison Song ..	„	1d.
„ 161.	The Little Haymakers. Action Song and Dance	John E. West	6d.

GREGORY, JAMES L.—"An Autumn Song." For Soprano or Tenor. The words written by S. J. Rowton. 2s.

LEWIS, J. EDWARD.—"The reaper and the flowers." Song. For Contralto or Baritone. The poetry by Longfellow. 2s.

PARSONS, BENJAMIN.—"Sleep, sleep." Song. For Mezzo-Soprano or Contralto. The words written by Ashmore Russan. 2s. 6d.

WRIGLEY, JOHN.—"Ave Maria." For Soprano. 2s.

TRANSCRIPTIONS for the Organ. By Arthur Boyse:—

			s.	d.
No. 31.	Romance in G	Beethoven	1	6
„ 32.	Noël	Adam	1	0
„ 33.	Nocturne	Tschaïkowsky	1	0

DICKINSON, JAMES M.—Triumphal March. For the Organ. 1s.

ORIGINAL COMPOSITIONS for the ORGAN:—

			s.	d.
No. 191.	Savoyard Chant	Herbert W. Wareing	1	6
„ 192.	Three Intermezzi	Alan Gray	1	0
„ 193.	Solemn Processional March ..	C. J. B. Meacham	1	0

WESLEY, SAMUEL SEBASTIAN.—Original Compositions for the Organ. Edited by G. M. Garrett, M.A., Mus. Doc.:—

			s.	d.
No. 1.	Andante in G (3-4 Time)		1	0
„ 2.	Larghetto with Variations in F sharp minor ..		1	0
„ 3.	Andante in E flat (2-4 Time)		1	0
„ 4.	„ „ (C Time)		1	6
„ 5.	Andante in F		1	6
„ 6.	Choral Song and Fugue in C		1	6
„ 7.	Voluntary (Grave and Andante)		1	0
„ 8.	Andante Cantabile in G (C Time)		1	0
„ 9.	Introduction and Fugue (C sharp minor)		2	0
„ 9A.	„ „ (First Edition)		1	6
„ 10.	National Anthem with Variations in G		2	0

—— A Selection of Psalm Tunes, arranged as Studies for the Organ, with Pedal obbligato:—

			s.	d.
No. 11.	Psalm Tunes	(St. Stephen, St. Matthew, 104th Psalm)	1	6
„ 12.	Ditto	(St. David, St. Bride, St. Ann, 100th Psalm)	1	6
„ 13.	Ditto	(Westminster, Angel's Hymn, Irish, St. Mary)	1	6
„ 14.	Ditto	(Windsor, Liverpool, Bedford, Manchester)	1	0

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

HILES, JOHN.—Organ Arrangements. Each Book 1s. 6d. net:—

Book 1.

Mein Gläubiges Herze Frohlocke	BACH.
Maestoso ("Der Berggeist")	SPOHR.

Book 2.

Allegretto Scherzando (Eighth Symphony)	BEETHOVEN.
Concluding Voluntary (Op. 38)	RINCK.

Book 3.

Trauer (Op. 85, No. 6)	SCHUMANN.
Aria ("Iphigénie en Aulide")	GLUCK.
Adagio (Quartet, No. 2, Op. 13)	MENDELSSOHN.
Musette (Suites Anglaises)	BACH.

Book 4.

Andante più tosto Allegretto (Sonata, Op. 12, No. 2)	BEETHOVEN.
Andante Espressivo	MENDELSSOHN.

Book 5.

Largo con Espressione (Trio, Op. 1, No. 2)	BEETHOVEN.

Book 6.

Adagio (Notturno, Op. 34)	SPOHR.
Simple Melodie (Op. 174)	H. HERZ.
Andante (Reformation Symphony)	MENDELSSOHN.

Book 7.

Allegretto e Andante (Violin Concerto)	MENDELSSOHN.

Book 8.

Adagio (Quartet, No. 1, Op. 6)	KALLIWODA.
Adagio (Sonate Pathétique, Op. 13)	BEETHOVEN.
Romance (Op. 58)	KULLAK.

Book 9.

Marche Funèbre	BEETHOVEN.
Moderato (Quintet, Op. 18)	MENDELSSOHN.
Adagio (Sextet, Op. 111)	MENDELSSOHN.

NOVELLO'S PUBLICATIONS in the TONIC SOL-FA NOTATION. Translated by W. G. McNAUGHT.

No. 807.	Thou heaven blue and bright	FRANZ ABT	1d.
„ 808.	Nurse's Song	B. LUARD SELBY	1d.
„ 809.	Sweet May	J. BARNBY	1½d.
„ 810.	Bells in May	FERDINAND HILLER	1d.
„ 811.	In the dell and dingle	GEORGE J. BENNETT	1d.
„ 812.	May Day	OLIVER KING	1d.
„ 813.	The Fisherwife's Song	J. L. HATTON	1d.
„ 814.	Youth, joy, and hope		1½d.
„ 826.	Hail! gladdening light	J. T. FIELD	1d.
„ 827.	O praise God in His Holiness	THEODORE DISTIN	1½d.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S New and Standard Publications

In the Press.—Nearly ready.

GABRIELLA: Lyric Drama in One Act. Composed expressly for and dedicated to Madame Adelina Patti, who will sing the title rôle on her forthcoming American Tour, and subsequently in London and elsewhere. Libretto by ALFRED BYRNE and FULVIO FULGONIO. English version by MOWBRAY MARRAS. The music composed by EMILIO PIZZI.

Vocal Score (English and Italian words)	net 7s. 6d.
Pianoforte Score	„ 5s. 0d.
Book of Words (English and Italian)	„ 1s. 0d.

The separate Vocal and Instrumental Numbers will be duly announced.

ORGAN RECITAL SERIES. Edited by EDWIN H. LEMARE:—

No. 1.	Scherzo Sinfonico. By AMHURST WEBBER.	2s. net.
„ 2.	Canzona and Minuet and Trio. By W. WOLSTENHOLME.	2s. 6d. net.
„ 3.	Toccata in E flat. By FILIPPO CAPOCCI.	2s. 6d. net.
„ 4.	Romance in D flat. By EDWIN H. LEMARE.	2s. net.

Other numbers in preparation.

FUNERAL MARCH (Grieg). Arrangement. By EDWIN H. LEMARE. 1s. 6d. net.

THE BURLINGTON VOLUNTARIES.—SHORT ORIGINAL VOLUNTARIES, by Organists of the day, suitable for American Organ, Harmonium, or Organ, for either Church or Home use. Ten Books, each 1s. net.

HANDEL'S CHORUSES. Arranged from the most favourite Oratorios and Anthems. By W. T. BEST. In Thirty-six Books. 1s. to 2s. each net.

ORGAN COMPOSITIONS—Ancient and Modern (containing the favourite Andante and Allegro by F. E. BACHE). By W. T. BEST. Twelve Books. 1s. each net.

THE BURLINGTON SERIES of MODERN CHURCH MUSIC.

No. 1.	Benedicite in B flat	Edwin H. Lemare	net 3d.
„ 2.	Benedicite in C	Arthur E. Godfrey	„ 3d.
„ 3.	Three Kyries and a Sevenfold Amen	Arthur E. Godfrey	„ 3d.
„ 4.	Morning and Evening Service in F, complete	Edwin H. Lemare	„ 2s.

Or, singly: Te Deum, 4d.; Jubilate, 3d.; Benedictus, 3d.; Communion, 1s.; Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, 6d.

No. 5.	Crossing the Bar (Kellie), for Tenor Solo and Chorus	Edwin H. Lemare	6d.
„ 6.	Pater Noster	Edwin H. Lemare	3d.
„ 7.	Rend your heart, for Baritone Solo and Chorus	Arthur E. Godfrey	4d.
„ 8.	Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D	Frank L. Moir	4d.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S

NEW AND STANDARD PUBLICATIONS—continued.

HOW TO ACCOMPANY. A Guide to the Artistic Accompaniment of any Musical Composition, from the simplest Ballad to the most difficult of modern works. Profusely illustrated with examples. Demy 4to, 153 pp. Paper cover, 4s. net; cloth, 5s. net. By ANNIE GLEN, Author of "Music in its social aspect," &c.

DR. H. KEETON'S CHURCH and CATHEDRAL CHORISTERS' SINGING METHOD. Impl. 8vo size, 73 pp. Paper cover, 2s. net; cloth, 3s. net; post-free.

CHAS. WEBB'S MANUAL of CLASS-SINGING in both Notations. Impl. 8vo size, 53 pp.. Paper cover, 1s. 6d. net; limp cloth, 2s. net; post-free.

W. A. THOMAS'S PROGRESSIVE EXERCISES in SIGHT SINGING. Used by the Guildhall School of Music. 1s. net.

CIRO PINSUTI'S DAILY VOCAL EXERCISES. 28th Edition. 1s 6d. net. The Exercises in this work are set down in every key, so that the Student will not have the trouble of transposing.

THE CANDIDATES' PRACTICAL SCALE and ARPEGGIO HANDBOOKS. Specially arranged for the use of Students preparing for the Examinations (Pianoforte) of the Associated Board of the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music.

BY GRAHAM P. MOORE.

Compiled in strict accordance with the Syllabus of the Associated Board, and each Book containing full directions as to the requirements of the Examiners. Issued in four Books, each Book being complete in itself, and containing only those scales required by Candidates for their respective Examinations.

Book 1. For the Local School Examinations, lower division. 1s. net.
„ 2. Higher division. 1s. 6d. net.
„ 3. For the Local Centre Examinations, junior grade. 1s. 6d. net.
„ 4. Senior grade: Part 1, Scales; Part 2, Arpeggi. Each 2s. net.

"Cannot fail to be of the greatest utility."—Daily News.

ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S List of Cantatas, Glees, Duets, and Trios, post-free on application.

NEW SONGS. By Lawrence Kellie, Angelo Mascheroni, A. C. Mackenzie, Maude Valérie White, F. H. Cowen, Hamish MacCunn, Frances Allitsen, Edward German, &c.

NEW PIANOFORTE MUSIC. By Angelo Mascheroni, Benedetto Palmieri, G. Jacobi, Edwin H. Lemare, Graham P. Moore, Isabel Hearne, Beatrice Hallet, &c.

NEW VIOLIN and VIOLONCELLO MUSIC. By Otto Peiniger, Tivadar Nachèz, David Popper, Leo Stern, Gilbert R. Betjemann, J. W. Ivimey, Emile Sauret, &c.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S new Edition of STANDARD CLASSICAL PIECES. 163 numbers issued. "This series is one of the best musical publications of the day, highly to be recommended to Professors and Teachers."—The Graphic.

ALSO

CLASSICAL MUSIC (new Series) selected, fingered, and edited by ADOLPHE SCHLOESSER, Professor at the Royal Academy of Music. 72 numbers issued. Lists on application.

6, NEW BURLINGTON ST., LONDON, W.

ST. MICHAEL'S CHURCH, Bournemouth.—ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED, for first week in February. Salary, £80 per annum. Apply, with testimonials and references, to T. O.Copland, Stirling Court, Portarlington Rd., B'mouth

ORGANIST WANTED, for John Knox Presbyterian Church, Stepney. Salary, £20 per annum. Apply, by letter, to Mr. Edward Smith, 398, Commercial Road, E.

ORGANIST WANTED, by the first week in January, for St. Jude's Church, Englefield Green (near Windsor). Salary, £30 per annum. Address, stating particulars and enclosing two recent testimonials, Rev. W. T. Nicholson, Egham Vicarage, Staines.

ACCOMPANIST (First-rate; rapid sight reader; brilliant pianist) seeks ENGAGEMENTS for Private or Concert Work. Address, Professor, 119, High Road, Lee, S.E.

PIANOFORTE TUNER WANTED (first class), for the North of Scotland. Enclose testimonials and photo. Apply, S. Z., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

ORGAN WANTED, for Church. ESTEY or MASON preferred. Full particulars to W. C. Rafarel, Barnstaple, Devon.

MUSICAL EXAMS.—Over 500 Certificates, Diplomas, &c., gained by Pupils of Mr. F. SOMMER, A.L.A.M., Correspondence Tutor, in HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c. A 16-page Prospectus free. 14, Mardale St., Shepherd's Bush, London.

HARMONY.—"Comparison of English and German Methods of Teaching Harmony." Gratis. (See above, F. Sommer.)

"CASABIANCA." A stirring and effective part-song for S.A.T.B., by J. W. ALDOUS, B.A. Price 4d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CONTENTS.

	Page
Charles Gounod	649
Savage Music and its Lessons	651
Folk-Songs in Symphonies	652
Occasional Notes	653
Facts, Rumours, and Remarks	655
Norwich Musical Festival	656
Musical Festivals	658
Crystal Palace Concerts	661
Monday and Saturday Popular Concerts	662
Mr. Sarasate's Concert	662
Covent Garden Theatre.—Promenade Concerts	663
Savoy Theatre.—"Utopia (Limited)"	663
"The Foresters"	663
Obituary	663
Music in Belfast	664
„ Bristol	664
„ Dublin	664
„ Edinburgh	665
„ Glasgow	665
„ Liverpool	665
„ Manchester	666
„ Wilts and Hants	666
„ Yorkshire	667
„ America	667
Anthem for Christmas—"There were Shepherds." Myles B. Foster	669
General News (London)	668
Reviews	677
Foreign Notes	680
General News (Country)	682
List of Music published during the last Month	684

THE MUSICAL TIMES.

SCALE OF TERMS FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

	£ s. d.
Two Lines	0 3 0
Three Lines	0 3 4
For every additional Line	0 0 10
Half a Column	2 0 0
A Column	4 0 0
A Page	7 10 0

Special Pages (Cover, &c.) by arrangement.

A remittance should be sent with each Advertisement.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To ensure insertion Advertisements should reach the Office

NOT LATER THAN THE

TWENTY-THIRD

OF EACH MONTH.

Just Published.

VILLAGE SCENES

CANTATA FOR FEMALE VOICES

THE WORDS BY

CLIFTON BINGHAM

THE MUSIC BY

FREDERIC H. COWEN.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

A SEA DREAM

CANTATA FOR LADIES' VOICES (WITH RECITATION ACCOMPANIED)

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

SHAPCOTT WENSLEY

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

BATTISON HAYNES.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PERFORMED AT THE NORWICH MUSICAL FESTIVAL, 1893.

THE WATER LILY

A ROMANTIC LEGEND

FOR SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

JOSEPH BENNETT

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

FREDERIC H. COWEN.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PERFORMED AT THE NORWICH MUSICAL FESTIVAL, 1893.

THE WISHING BELL

A CANTATA

FOR FEMALE VOICES AND ORCHESTRA

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

JETTA VOGEL

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

JOHN FRANCIS BARNETT.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

NEW SONATA

No. XVI., IN G SHARP MINOR

FOR THE ORGAN

BY

JOSEF RHEINBERGER.

Price Four Shillings net.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

ORCHESTRAL, MILITARY, and BRASS BANDS.—Music of every description ARRANGED and SCORED effectively, expeditiously, economically. F. Sommer, A.L.A.M., 14, Mardale Street, Shepherd's Bush, London.

£10.—MUSICSELLERS, TUNERS, TEACHERS, wherever resident, can make £10 easily without cost. State subjects taught, or whether Tuner, &c. Prospectus sent. Mutual, 64, High Street, Notting Hill Gate, London.

TO ORGANISTS, CONDUCTORS, &c.—Fine Stock ORGAN MUSIC, ANTHEMS, PART-SONGS, RARE GLEES, &c., to be SOLD cheap. On view. Book and Music Depôt, York House, 142, King's Cross Road, W.C. Two minutes from Metropolitan Station.

VOCAL EXERCISES, WITH ENGLISH WORDS. By FREDERIC PENNA.

"Unsurpassed for securing to English Vocalists the true Italian style of Singing." 2s. net.

AVE MARIA. Contralto Solo. Dedicated, by permission, to the Duke of Norfolk. 1s. 6d. net.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

SUITE for ORCHESTRA. By Sir HERBERT OAKELEY. Score, 58.; parts, 15s.

London: SCHOTT and Co., 159, Regent Street, W.

The Daily Telegraph, in noticing the recent Cheltenham Festival, says of this work: "The movements are a Pastorale, a Minuet, Gavotte, and Saraband—the last three 'in olden style'—and a Rondo Scherzoso. Both the first and last are extremely interesting, and have attractions which all can appreciate; but the dance measures are, I fancy, sure to be best received. They are delightful in their quaint old-world grace. Amateurs should give their attention to Sir Herbert's Suite."

POETRY or PROSE composed on any subject, by Mrs. M. E. GALPIN. Terms arranged at 2, Salcott Road, Wandsworth Common, S.W.

ORGANIST WANTED, for a Catholic Church (Preston, Lancashire). Must be a good player and accustomed to the Service (Catholic preferred). State age and experience, with reference; also salary required. Apply, J. R., Beech's Music Warehouse, 37, Lune Street, Preston.

CATHEDRAL CHURCH of St. Nicholas, Newcastle-on-Tyne.—WANTED, immediately, DEPUTY-ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER. Applicant must be Communicant of the Church of England, not over 36 years of age. F.C.O. or Mus. Bac. preferred. Full particulars from Vestry Clerk, to whom applications must be sent not later than November 30.

THE ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER of a West-End Church desires similar APPOINTMENT in City, West, or South London. Full Choral Service, with Recitals. Highest references. Apply, Delta, Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners St., W.

ORGANIST of Brighton Church seeks fresh APPOINTMENT in November. Nine years' experience. Excellent references. Certificated. T. W. O., 64, Goldstone Villas, West Brighton.

ORGANIST (10 yrs. exp.), accus. to full Choral Celebrations, good choir, large organ, seeks RE-APPOINTMENT. Greg. or Ang. Excellent testimonials. Communicant. Associate, 8, Richmond Street, Plaistow, E.

WANTED, SITUATION as ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER. Good references. Address, G. W., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

ORGANIST or DEPUTY, in Town or Suburbs preferred. Small salary; good experience. Address, R. A. M., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

AN ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER is open to an ENGAGEMENT in Church or Chapel in or near London. Small salary if good organ. S., 10, Cosmo Place, W.C.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER desires an ENGAGEMENT. Successful choir-trainer; first-class testimonials. Address, J. B., 93, Effra Road, Brixton, S.W.

MR. WILYAM RANSON (recently Assistant at an important West End Church) desires APPOINTMENT as ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER. Priory Rd., Anfield, Liverpool.

ORGANIST (B.A., Cantab.), experienced, desires POST in or near London. Good testimonials. W., 35, Bridge Road, Hammersmith.

ORGANIST.—LADY offers her SERVICES at Gospel Mission Hall or Evangelistic Services in North London. Agnes, Vale's Library, 30, Stamford Hill, N.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER, accustomed to daily services, choral celebrations, good choir, and organ, desires APPOINTMENT. Testimonials from Cathedral dignitaries and best known church musicians in England and France. Communicant. Church with good musical services of more importance than large salary. M., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

AS CHOIRMASTER.—Mr. A. R. MUSGRAVE, Organist and Choirmaster of St. James-the-Less, Westminster, is desirous of obtaining an APPOINTMENT as above, in addition to his present one, in good neighbourhood. Canon Blackly, Vicar of St. James-the-Less, will be glad to speak as to the Advertiser's ability to train a choir, and to the excellent results he has achieved at St. James-the-Less. Address, in first instance, to A. R. M., 37, Law Crescent, Kew Gardens.

ORGANIST, &c., desires POST in or near London. Moderate stipend. Excellent testimonials. Anglican Service. E., 51, Cumberland Street, Pimlico, S.W.

WANTED, SITUATION as ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER, in or near London. Good references. Write, D. D., Willing's Advertising Offices, 162, Piccadilly, W.

CONDUCTOR.—To ORCHESTRAL or CHORAL SOCIETIES. — An experienced Conductor of ability and reputation is open to Engagements. J. H. Beta, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

THE COMMITTEE of the London County Council Musical Society is about to appoint a CONDUCTOR to direct the performances at the three SMOKING CONCERTS and the ANNUAL LADIES' CONCERT given by the Society, and to Conduct the weekly Rehearsals of the Male Voice Choir and occasional practices of the small Orchestra. Applications, stating qualifications, should be addressed to J. Ollis, Hon. Sec., 21, Whitehall Place, S.W., from whom any further particulars can be obtained.

TO COMPOSERS.—"Jetta Vogel" (Miss H. M. Bird) has for DISPOSAL LIBRETTO of CANTATA; also LYRICS. Address, Boscobel, Redhill.

WORDS for Songs, Duets, Part-Songs, Cantatas, &c., by successful writer. Foreign music supplied with English words. Lyrico, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1. Berners Street, W.

TO COMPOSERS.—WANTED, to PURCHASE, Copyrights of good Modern Songs, in popular style; also quaint Pianoforte Pieces. Send copy of MSS., in first instance, stating price, to M. S., 87, High Street, Marylebone, W.

TO COMPOSERS (Amateur and Professional).—Rough sketched and other COMPOSITIONS of every kind WANTED that are worth finishing and placing for publication. All MSS. sent will be priced and returned, with full instructions how to proceed. No charge. F. Sommer, A.L.A.M., 14, Mardale Street, Shepherd's Bush, London.

TO COMPOSERS and CONDUCTORS.—Works SCORED, for large or small orchestras, by an experienced musician. Address, Wm. L. Frost, 26, Hatfield St., Hatcham, London.

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS. Dr. Horton Allison, 68, Nelson Street, Manchester.

TUNER, first-class, WANTED. Must be steady and reliable. State age, previous situations held, and how long. Salary, £2 weekly. Apply, by letter, to Bogg and Sons, John Dalton Street, Manchester.

WANTED, at once, an experienced PIANO TUNER, who thoroughly understands Organ and Harmonium work. References indispensable. Permanent situation. Apply, F. H. Thuell, Cornish Music Stores, Falmouth.

GOOD out-door TUNER WANTED. Dale, Forty and Co., Birmingham.

TUNER.—WANTED, experienced HAND, of good character. James Smith and Son, 76, Lord Street, Liverpool.

WANTED, an IMPROVER to the Tuning of Pianos, already considerably advanced. Apply, George Rogers and Sons, 40, Archer Street, King Street, Camden Town, N.W.

APPRENTICE WANTED, to the GENERAL MUSIC TRADE. He would have a good opportunity of learning Pianoforte Tuning and Repairing. W. G., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

APPRENTICE WANTED, to Music Business, Pianoforte, Organ, and Harmonium Tuning, Repairing, and Selling. Will be thoroughly taught. Must be able to play; also premium required. Apply, Stanton's Old Established Pianoforte Warehouse, 20, Owen Street, Tipton.

MUSIC ASSISTANT (Out-door) WANTED, for a leading BUSINESS in a West-End Suburb. Must be of good address, able to tune, and to show off Pianos; also have good knowledge of the Publishers' Catalogues. Good salary and permanent situation for a really capable man. Address, in first instance (with photo if possible), to M. A., care of Messrs. Phillips and Page, 8, Oxford Market, W.

PIANOFORTE REPAIRER WANTED. Permanency offered to practical all-round man; one who can put in planks and cover hammers, &c. Send reference from last employer, wages required, and photo, to Crane and Sons, Scotland Rd., Liverpool.

YOUNG MAN, MUSIC COUNTER ASSISTANT, with some knowledge of Bookkeeping. Unexceptionable references and experience with good houses indispensable. Paish and Co., Torquay.

TRAVELLER REQUIRED, on commission only, to SELL MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS. Superior specialty; one style only, commanding ready sale and frequent repeat orders. Address, Auto, Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

TO TRAVELLERS.—REQUIRED, TRAVELLER (on commission only) to SELL high-class FOREIGN PIANOS. Salary after having proved capability as salesman. State experience. Address, A. L., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

PIANOFORTE TUNER seeks ENGAGEMENT. References good. American Organs, Harmoniums, ordinary repairs. Francis, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

SITUATION WANTED, by TUNER, REPAIRER, &c., of Pianofortes, Harmoniums, and American Organs, in the Country. Small Goods Repairs thoroughly understood. Desirous of Permanent Situation. Good reference. Aged 22. M. A. G., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

GOOD Out-door TUNER desires ENGAGEMENT. Seven years in present situation. Contra-Bass, Viola, and Piano. Glover, 175, Commercial Road, Newport, Mon.

FIRST-CLASS PIANOFORTE TUNER desires RE-ENGAGEMENT. London preferred. Address, Pianoforte, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

TUNER (28)—thoroughly experienced; first-class repairer—seeks ENGAGEMENT. T. D., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

SITUATION WANTED, by PIANOFORTE TUNER. Well up in Harmonium and American Organ work. Address, C. A. G., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

YOUNG MAN (aged 22) desires SITUATION as PIANO TUNER in South or West of England (before Xmas). Pianist. Would accept small salary for experience. Total abstainer. Apply, H. T., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

WANTED, by Young Lady, RE-ENGAGEMENT in MUSIC WAREHOUSE. Has had management of Branch Shop and thoroughly understands the music trade generally. Address, Mandoline, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners St., W.

YOUNG LADY, thoroughly experienced in the Music and Musical Instrument Trade, desires ENGAGEMENT as BOOKKEEPER, ASSISTANT, &c. Competent to take Management of small Branch Business. Excellent references. A. C., Clift's Music Saloon, Bexhill-on-Sea.

ASSISTANT SALESMAN.—WANTED, by Young Man, of good address, SITUATION as above. Fully experienced in the Catalogues and Bookkeeping. Can tune. Seven years in trade. Highest references. Apply, Lancashire, Messrs. Novello, Ewer, and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

FURNISHED APARTMENTS, West Kensington, with or without BOARD, in a Professional Musician's family, for a LADY or GENTLEMAN engaged during the day. Capital opportunity for the cultivation of Chamber Music. Bath, h. and c. No other lodgers. Apply, by letter, to Quartet, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—Three manuals and pedals. One Shilling per hour. The South London Organ Studio, 343, Coldharbour Lane, close to Brixton Station.

ORGAN PRACTICE (near City), 1s. per hour. Three manuals, C.O. pedals. Willis (from Minories), 1, Aldgate Avenue.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—Three manuals; independent pedals. Terms, One Shilling per hour. Specification post-free. Blennerhasset's Studio, 1A, Vernon Street, King's Cross, W.C.

NEW ORGAN STUDIO, with Three-manual PIPE ORGAN, blown by water. Terms for Practice, 1s. per hour. At Smyth's Music Depôt, 54, London Road, Forest Hill, S.E.

CC ORGAN for SALE and HIRE, on easy terms of payment. Price very low. 3 manuals, 30 stops, 2 on pedals, 3 reeds. Apply, G. T., 23, Brunswick Street, Poplar.

MODERN CC ORGAN for SALE.—Two manuals, 18 stops. Great Organ: 8 stops; swell CC, 6 stops. Very fine 16-ft. tone; Bourdon Pedal Pipes, CCC to E; 3 couplers, 7 combination pedals. Suitable for hall, chapel, or church. Perfect condition. Handsome mahogany front. For further particulars, address, Organist, 139A, Alexandra Road, N.W.

ORGAN, with two Manuals, 19 stops, modern, built 1881. ORGAN, 12 stops, new; now building in works. W. E. Richardson & Sons, Central Organ Works, Hulme, Manchester.

PEDAL ORGAN, by Estey and Co., for SALE cheap. It has 11 stops, knee swell, side-blower, and stool. Price 30 guineas only; original price, 70 guineas. A drawing and all particulars of this organ may be had post-free. W. White, Grantham.

SECOND-HAND CHURCH ORGAN for SALE, containing two complete manuals and pedals; great, 7 stops; swell, 7 stops; pedal Bourdon, and 3 couplers; in excellent condition; C. of O. pedals and tubular pneumatic action, TO BE SOLD to make room for larger organ. Apply, NORMAN BROS. & BEARD, Organ Works, Norwich.

TWO-MANUAL and PEDAL AMERICAN ORGANS by Bell, Karn, Estey, &c. Several very fine instruments at low prices for cash. A single Manual and Pedal do., by Karn, for 25 guineas; also several large and powerful Harmoniums, by Alexandre, Tenyer, &c. A large Two-manual with 11 sets, by Evans, for 25 guineas. Stagg and Sons, 56, Red Lion Street, Holborn. Established 1867

ORGANS, one and two manuals; new and second-hand; excellent tone. Also "New Model Chancel Organs." A small Hydraulic Engine, in first-class order. Apply, Henry Speechly and Sons, St. Mark's Road, Dalston, N.E.

ORGANS (Second-Hand) for SALE. One 2-manual, 11 stops, pedals and Bourdon. One 1-manual, 5 stops. R. Cope, 21, Jardin Street, Camberwell, S.E.

PEDAL PIANO for SALE.—Piano, by Brinsmead, fitted with 2½ octaves Pedals, easily detached. In good order. £20 complete. Address, S. Y. Z., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

BROADWOOD Short DRAWING-ROOM GRAND PIANO, in walnut. Modern iron frame, 7 octaves, full trichord. Little used, in owner's mansion. A bargain, 55 guineas; cost 165 guineas. Take Cottage Piano in part. View at Organist, St. John's, Cromer House, Putney (near Railway Station).

BECHSTEIN GRAND, £42 cash. Powerful tone; in splendid condition. Also a short Grand, by Ibach (100-guinea model), 7¼ octaves, metal frame, full trichord, in black wood case. £55 cash. On view at Beringer and Strohmenger's, 82, High Road, Streatham, near Public Library.

GRAND PIANO, by Weber, of New York. In perfect condition. Massive rosewood case; very handsome; 7¼ octaves; size, 9 ft. by 5 ft. by 3 ft. 9 in. high. Suit mansion or club-room. 55 guineas, cost 300 guineas. The property of a lady in the district. To view, enquire, Cary and Watt, Newbury.

ORGAN PEDALS for PIANOFORTES, from £6 15s. to £7 15s. Pedals and Action complete are supplied, as above, by the inventor, Wm. Chinnock Dyer, Beresford Road, Norbiton, S.W. Send post card for list, &c.

ORGAN STUDENTS SHOULD TRY

RUMMENS'

Organ Pedal Attachment for Pianofortes

AS ADOPTED BY THE COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS.

Awarded Medal of Honour at the International Inventions Exhibition, London, 1885.

Equal to Organ Practice. Testimonials from all the chief Organists of the day.

Write for particulars to H. J. Rummens, 47, Church Rd., Brixton, S.W.

ORGAN PEDALS to PIANOS.—New method of Attachment by TUBULAR PNEUMATIC. This action surpasses all mechanical actions for prompt and Organ-like Touch. It is less expensive, easier to attach, and does not injure the most delicate Pianoforte. Prospectus, with full description and price lists, on application to Norman Bros. and Beard, Organ Works, Norwich.

RARE old VIOLIN, by one of the old Masters, dated 1663 (pedigree inside), bow and case. Price £9 10s. J. S. Greenwood, 27, Copthorne Road, Bradford, Yorks.

STRADIVARIUS VIOLIN for SALE. Warranted genuine, with voucher, made in 1724 (maker's best period), £600. On view Thursdays or Sundays; or write, L. D., 18, Rue Favart, Paris.

VIOLIN, by Villaume, Strad. Copy. 60 Guineas. Rare Specimen. Double-Bass, "Panorma," 30 guineas. Erard Gothic Harp, No. 5,653, 60 guineas. Bassoon, in leather case, 9 guineas. Townly, 68, High Street, Croydon.

DOUBLE BASS (said to be made by Testore), Violoncello, Viola, and Violin. All genuine old instruments. No time for correspondence. Inspection by appointment. Alpha, 23, Grosvenor Street, Camberwell, Surrey.

RUDALL CARTE Silver BOEHM FLUTE, for Left-Handed Player. In perfect order, equal to new. Ten guineas. Paterson and Sons, Edinburgh.

VIOLIN STRINGS.—Luigi Fiorini's renowned tested Roman Strings, as used by the greatest artists, are the most reliable Italian Strings. Sample set of three, 2s., post-free, of sole agent, F. Williams, 129, Queen's Road, Finsbury Park, London, N.

HYDRAULIC ENGINES for Organ Blowing. Blennerhasset's Patent "Perfect" Prize Medal Engines are the best. 1B, Vernon Street, King's Cross Road, London, W.C.

"TOWER" ORGAN WORKS.—Specifications, Rebuilding, Repairs, Voicing and Tuning by experienced Artists. Pipes and Fittings. Second-hand Organs and Materials. T. R. Wlilis (from Minories), 1, Aldgate Avenue, London, E.

TUNERS, REPAIRERS, &c., requiring Tuning Hammers, Kits (guaranteed), or TOOLS of any description, Reeds, Fittings, Materials. Please send for my complete Price List. Karl Wagenhaus, 2, City Road, Hulme, Manchester.

VIOLIN STRINGS. Finest imported. Twenty years' reputation. Sixpence each; sample packet of three, 1s. 1d., post-free. Alphonse Cary, 87, Oxford Street, London, W.

T. R. WILLIS (from Minories, est. 1827), Maker and Importer of Brass and Wood-Instruments, Harmonium Reeds, Strings, Wire, Violins, Concertinas, &c. 1, Aldgate Avenue, E.

CASSOCKS.—500 New, Tailor-made, all sizes, Black and Violet; very cheap. Also Surplices. Surplice, The Church Agency, Lombard House, E.C.

IMPORTANT TO MUSICSELLERS.—Having the largest and most varied stock in Europe, orders received in the morning are executed the same day. Terms and Catalogues on application.

AUTHORS' WORKS CORRECTED, REVISED, and PRINTED without delay, on exceptionally low terms. Estimates given on receipt of MSS.
London: B. Williams, 19, Paternoster Row, E.C.

SMITH JOHNSTONE'S PIANOFORTE POLISH. The only polish for Pianos. Specially adapted for black cases; also for furniture. Post-free, 1s. 3d., of the Manufacturers, W. Johnstone and Co., 35, Great James Street, Bedford Row, W.C.

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES.—For SALE, a large number of Chorus Parts and Vocal Scores of SACRED and SECULAR WORKS. Application for List to Dr. Bunnett, The Close, Norwich.

Auction Rooms specially for the Sale of Musical Property.

MESSRS. PUTTICK and SIMPSON, Auctioneers, 7, Leicester Square, London, W.C., hold SPECIAL SALES of MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS on or about the 20th of every month. Sales of Musical Libraries, Music Plates, and Copyrights, Trade Stocks, Manufacturers' Plant, &c., are held as occasion may require. Valuations for Probate or Legacy Duty, or for Public or Private Sale. Terms on application.

PIANOFORTE and MUSIC BUSINESS for SALE. Established 18 years. Ill-health cause of sale. Populous district, market town, capital position, principal street. Excellent Tuning and Hiring connection. Stock (could be reduced) and fixtures at a valuation. R. G., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

AN Old-established BUSINESS, in a fashionable inland Watering-place, having a good connection for hiring and tuning, for SALE. Established nearly 100 years; in present hands 35 years. The business is well known, and, to a practical Tuner, there is a big scope. A. B., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners St., W.

PIANOFORTE and MUSIC BUSINESS. Main thoroughfare, Midland Town. Well suited to a Practical Tuner. Goodwill, Lease, Stock, &c., under £1,000. Particulars from G. L., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

KELLY and CO., PIANOFORTE, AMERICAN ORGAN, and HARMONIUM MAKERS (to Her Majesty), 14 and 16, Mortimer Street, London, W.

Kelly and Co.'s Instruments are the only ones of English manufacture that gained any award at the DUBLIN and PARIS EXHIBITIONS; also PRIZE MEDAL, INVENTIONS EXHIBITION, 1885; GOLD MEDAL and DIPLOMA of HONOUR, YORK EXHIBITION, 1889.

A LIBERAL DISCOUNT for SCHOOLS, CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS, and the PROFESSION.

500 SECOND-HAND PIANOFORTES by the leading Makers, at all times, very cheap. NEW PIANOS (warranted) in elegant Walnut or Rosewood cases, from 19 Guineas.

The Trade, Merchants, and Shippers supplied.

Sole Importers of the celebrated HERMANN PIANOS, CHEAPEST and BEST IN THE TRADE, as recommended by Signor Tito Mattei, the late Sir Julius Benedict, the Abbé Liszt, and others.

NICHOLSON AND CO.,
ORGAN BUILDERS,
PALACE YARD, WORCESTER.
(ESTABLISHED 1841.)
Specifications and Estimates sent free.

THE OLD FIRM.
P. CONACHER & CO.,
Organ Builders,
SPRINGWOOD WORKS,
HUDDERSFIELD.
TWO GOLD MEDALS.

D'ALMAINE'S
PIANOS AND ORGANS
GREAT SALE.
Dealers and Professionals specially invited.
Large Discounts to Trade and Profession.
D'Almaine and Co. (Established 108 years), 91, Finsbury Pavement, E.C.

Just Published.

SIX EASY PIECES
FOR VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE
COMPOSED BY
H. GROSSHEIM.
(Op. 24.)
Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.
London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

SIXTY-ONE
MELODIES AND UNFIGURED BASSES
(To be Harmonised in Four Parts)
For the use of ADVANCED MUSICAL STUDENTS and CANDIDATES FOR DIPLOMAS
BY
ROWLAND M. WINN, Mus. Doc., Oxon., F.C.O.
Price One Shilling.
"Both the melodies and the basses are designed with no little ingenuity, and form the means of bringing out in the student all the amount of skill of which he may be possessed."—Musical Times.
PART-SONGS.
By the same Composer:
EVENING BELLS (6th thousand) .. .. 2d.
GO! HARK! (Hunting Song) .. .. 3d.
London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

ESTABLISHED 1843.
GEO. ROGERS & SONS'
PIANOFORTES.
(Makers to the Emperor of Russia.)
NOBLE IN TONE.
HANDSOME IN APPEARANCE.
UNRIVALLED FOR DURABILITY.
"The most PERFECT PIANOS of the day."
PIANOS
FOR INDIA AND THE COLONIES.
ALSO YACHT PIANOS.
GEO. ROGERS & SONS,
60, BERNERS ST., OXFORD ST., LONDON, W.

I. J. PADEREWSKI.
CHANT DU VOYAGEUR
(Op. 8, No. 3),
INTERMEZZO POLACCO
(Op. 14, No. 5),
PLAYED BY M. PADEREWSKI, AT HIS RECITALS IN BRIGHTON, GLASGOW, EDINBURGH, AND ST. JAMES'S HALL, LONDON.
NEW WORKS.
THE POLISH FANTASIA,
SERIES OF SIX SONGS,
THE ENGLISH SUITE.
The above are in course of Preparation, and will be Published as soon as possible.
Berlin:
E. BOTE & G. BOCK.
New York:
G. SCHIRMIR.
London:
WILLCOCKS & CO., Ltd., 42, BERNERS ST., W.

CHARLES GOUNOD.

THE REDEMPTION

A SACRED TRILOGY.

ENGLISH WORDS BY THE REV. J. TROUTBECK, D.D.

	s.	d.
Full Score	63	0
Vocal Score (French and English words) cloth, gilt	21	0
Ditto (English words only) 8vo, paper cover, 5s.; paper boards, 6s.; cloth, gilt	7	6
Ditto Tonic Sol-fa Edition	2	0
Vocal Parts 8vo, each	1	6
Vocal Score (French words) 8vo, paper cover	8	4
Vocal Parts ditto 8vo, each	1	6
Vocal Score (German words). By J. WEYL. paper cover	10	0
Vocal Parts ditto 8vo, each	1	6

	s.	d.		s.	d.
Violin, 1st	4	0	Viola	4	0
Violin, 2nd	4	0	Violoncello	5	0
Wind Parts				34	6

The Accompaniments, arranged for Pianoforte and Harmonium (instead of Orchestra), by J. W. ELLIOTT	10	6
Book of Words, with Commentary by the AUTHOR (per 100)	25	0
Ditto Parts I., II., and III., separately each	0	3
Ditto with Analytical Notes by J. BENNETT (per 100)	50	0
Ditto (French words), 1 franc (per 100)	Frs. 100
Ditto (German Words), 50 pfg. (per 100)	Mks. 50
A Study of "The Redemption," by JOSEPH GODDARD	0	6
Arrangement for Pianoforte Solo by B. TOURS	5	0

SEPARATE CHORUSES.

	s.	d.
The earth is my possession / Lord Jesus, Thou to all bringest light	0	4
The Reproaches (chorus or quartet)	0	3
Beside the Cross remaining	0	6
Choral: For us the Christ is made a victim availing	0	3
From Thy love as a Father	0	6
Unfold, ye portals everlasting	0	6
Lovely appear (s. solo and chorus)	0	6
The Word is flesh become	1	0
Saviour of Men	0	3
While my watch I am keeping (verse, A.)	0	1½

	s.	d.
A SELECTION OF MOVEMENTS, arranged for the organ by GEORGE C. MARTIN	5	0

Or, singly:—

The Creation—The Darkness	1	0
The March to Calvary	2	0
Beside the Cross remaining	1	0
From Thy love as a Father	1	0
Unfold, ye portals everlasting	1	0
Lovely appear over the mountains	1	0
Hymn of the Apostles	1	0

NINE TRANSCRIPTIONS, by BERTHOLD TOURS, for Violin and Pianoforte	2	6
Ditto, for Violoncello and Pianoforte	2	6

March to Calvary.
Mary at the foot of the Cross.
(a) Beside the Cross remaining.
(b) While my watch I am keeping.
The holy women at the Sepulchre.
From Thy love as a Father.
Lovely appear over the mountains.
The Apostles in prayer.
By faith salvation comes.
He has said to all the unhappy.
Power and love.

MARCH TO CALVARY, arranged for Harmonium by J. W. ELLIOTT	2	6
DITTO, arranged for Pianoforte by B. TOURS. Solo, 2s.; Duet	2	6

MORS ET VITA

A SACRED TRILOGY.

	s.	d.
Full Score	63	0
Vocal Score folio, cloth, gilt	21	0
Ditto 8vo, paper cover	6	0
Ditto paper boards	6	6
Ditto cloth	7	6
Ditto Tonic Sol-fa Edition	2	0
Vocal Parts each	1	6
Vocal Score, English Words by the Rev. J. TROUTBECK, D.D. 8vo, paper cover	6	0
Ditto paper boards	6	6
Ditto cloth	7	6
Ditto Tonic Sol-fa Edition	2	0
Vocal Parts each	1	6

	s.	d.		s.	d.
Violin, 1st	4	6	Viola	4	6
Violin, 2nd	4	6	Violoncello	6	6
Wind Parts				44	6

The Accompaniments, arranged for Pianoforte and Harmonium (instead of Orchestra), by KING HALL	10	6
Book of Words, with Preface by the AUTHOR (Latin and English words) (per 100) net	25	0
Ditto Part I.	0	3
Ditto Parts II. and III.	0	3
Ditto with Analytical Notes by J. BENNETT (per 100) net	50	0
Ditto (French words), with Preface by the AUTHOR (per 100) Frs.	100
Arrangement for Pianoforte Solo, by B. TOURS	5	0
PART I.—THE REQUIEM, separately. Vocal Score 8vo, paper cover, 2s. 6d.; paper boards	3	0

SEPARATE CHORUSES.

A fearful thing to fall into the hands of God	0	4
Rest and peace eternal	0	6
From the morning watch	0	4
Day of anger, day of mourning	0	6

SEPARATE CHORUSES—continued.

	s.	d.
Ah! what shall we then be pleading	0	4
Happy are we	0	4
Faint and worn	0	4
Lord, for anguish hear us moaning	0	6
While the wicked are confounded	0	6
Day of weeping
O Lord, Jesu Christ	0	6
Holy, holy, holy	0	4
Mighty Saviour	0	4
Lamb of God	0	4
To God high enthroned	0	4
The righteous shall enter	0	4
Holy, O Lord God omnipotent	0	4
And I heard a great voice	0	4
And God Almighty then will wipe away	0	4
Lo, all things I make new	0	6

A SELECTION OF MOVEMENTS, arranged for the Organ by GEORGE C. MARTIN	5	0

Dies iræ.
Felix culpa.
Quærens me, sedisti lassus.
Inter oves locum præsta.
Lacrymosa dies illa.
Sed signifer Sanctus Michael.
Pie Jesu.
Epilogus.
Lacrymæ, dolor, mors.
Ego sum Alpha et Omega.
Hosanna in excelsis Deo!

"JUDEX," arranged for the Organ by JOHN E. WEST	1	0
TEN TRANSCRIPTIONS, by BERTHOLD TOURS, for Violin and Pianoforte	2	6
Ditto, for Violoncello and Pianoforte	2	6

Introit et Kyrie.
Quid sum miser.
Felix culpa.
Ingemisco tanquam reus.
Inter oves locum præsta.
Pie Jesu.
Judex.
Judicium Electorum.
Jerusalem Cœlestis.
Lacrymæ, dolor, mors amplius, non exstabunt.

CHARLES GOUNOD.

MESSE SOLENNELLE.	s.	d.
Full score	60	0
Vocal score	8	0
Ditto 8vo, paper, 1s.; paper boards, 1s. 6d.; cloth	2	6
Ditto. Communion Service 8vo, paper cover, 1s. 6d.; paper boards, 2s.; cloth	3	0
Vocal parts. Latin words	4	0
Violin, 1st 1 9 | Viola	1	9
Violin, 2nd 1 9 | Cello and Double Bass	2	0
Wind parts	17	9
Arrangement for Two Harps, or Harp and Pianoforte, by John Thomas:
For Two Harps (each part, 2s.)	4	0
For Harp and Pianoforte	4	0
Choruses separately:— s. d.
Kyrie Eleison 0 3
Gloria in Excelsis 0 4
Credo 0 4
Sanctus and Benedictus 0 2
Agnus Dei 0 2

SECONDE MESSE DES ORPHÉONISTES.
For Men's voices (T.T.B.B.) Vocal score. Latin and English words paper cover, 2s.; cloth	3	6

TROISIÈME MESSE SOLENNELLE (De Pâques).
Full score	40	0
Vocal score 8vo	2	6
Vocal parts 8vo, each	1	0
Violin, 1st 1 0 | Viola	1	0
Violin, 2nd 1 0 | Cello and Double Bass	1	6
Wind parts	26	6

DE PROFUNDIS (Out of Darkness). 129th Psalm.
Full score. Latin and English words	15	0
Vocal score. Latin words 8vo, paper cover	1	0
Ditto. English words	1	0
Vocal parts. Latin and English words	3	0
String parts 4s. 6d.; Wind parts	7	0

GALLIA. Motet for Soprano Solo and Chorus.
Full score. French, Latin, and English words	12	0
Vocal score. Latin and English words paper cover	6	0
Ditto Ditto 8vo	1	0
Ditto Ditto Tonic Sol-fa edition	0	4
Vocal parts. Latin or English words each	0	6
String parts 3s.; Wind parts	4	6
The Accompaniments, arranged for Pianoforte and Harmonium, by T. E. Aylward	2	6
Paraphrase on "Gallia," by C. Saint-Saëns	2	6

SEVEN WORDS (filiæ Jerusalem), for voices without Accompaniment 8vo	1	0

MARCHE SOLENNELLE. Full score	12	0
Orchestral parts	6	6
Ditto. Arranged for Organ by E. Prout	1	6
Ditto. Arranged for Pianoforte Solo, 2s.; Duet	2	6
Ditto. Arranged for Harmonium and Pianoforte	2	6

SALTARELLO. Full score	10	0
Orchestral parts	6	6
Ditto. Arranged for Pianoforte by A. Zimmermann Solo, 3s.; Duet	4	0

WEDDING MARCH, No. 1, for Organ and Three Trombones	3	0
Full score. Original edition for Organ and Three Trombones	4	0
Ditto. Arranged for Full Orchestra by Composer. Full score, MS.
Orchestral parts	5	0
Ditto. Arranged for Organ by G. C. Martin	2	0
Ditto. Arranged for Pianoforte Solo, 2s.; Duet	2	0

WEDDING MARCH, No. 2, for Organ and Three Trombones	3	0
Ditto. Full score, MS.
Orchestral parts	6	6
Ditto. Arranged for Pianoforte Solo, 2s.; Duet	2	0

ANTHEMS.	s.	d.
All ye who weep. S.A.T.T.B.B. 1s. 6d.; 8vo, 3d.; Sol-fa	0	1½
Ditto Vocal parts	0	9
As the hart pants (Sicut cervus). Vocal score, 1s.; 8vo	0	3
Ditto Vocal parts	0	6
Ditto, for T.T.B.B. Vocal score, 1s.; 8vo	0	3
Ditto Vocal parts	0	6
Blessed is He (Easter). Verse, s. 6d.; 8vo, 1½d.; Sol-fa	0	1
By Babylon's wave Full score	5	0
Ditto Vocal score, 2s.; 8vo, 6d.; Sol-fa	0	1
Ditto Vocal parts	1	0
Ditto Orchestral parts	5	3
Come unto Him. S.A.T.T.B.B. 1s. 6d.; 8vo	0	2
Ditto Sol-fa	0	1
Ditto Vocal parts	0	9
Daughters of Jerusalem. (Lent)	1	0
Jesu, blessed Word of God (Ave verum). s.	0	1½
Jesu, Word of God Incarnate (Ave verum). Motet. Four voices. Inscribed to Henry Leslie's Choir Vocal score, 1s.; 8vo, 1½d.; Sol-fa	0	1
Ditto Vocal parts	0	6
O come near to the Cross. S.A.T.T.B.B. Full score	15	0
Ditto Vocal score, 3s.; 8vo	0	8
Ditto Vocal parts	1	0
O Day of Penitence. (Lent.) Four and Six Voices Vocal score	0	6
Ditto Vocal parts	1	0
Ditto Orchestral parts	7	6
O saving Victim. Quartet and Chorus 3s.; 8vo	0	4
Ditto, Latin words Vocal score	3	0
Ditto Orchestral parts	3	6
O sing to God (Noël). Verse, s. and A., with Treble Chorus Vocal score, 2s. 6d.; 8vo	0	6
Ditto Vocal parts	0	4½
Ditto Orchestral parts	7	0
O sing to God (Noël). Arranged for s. and A., with Chorus, S.A.T.B. 1½d.; Sol-fa	0	1½
Sing praises unto the Lord Vocal score, 2s. 6d.; 8vo	0	6
Ditto Sol-fa	0	1½
Ditto Vocal parts	2	0
Word of God Incarnate (Ave Verum). 1s.; 8vo	0	3
Ditto Vocal parts	0	7½

SONGS, PART-SONGS, &c.
Beware	2	0
Evening Song (Viola Obbligato)	2	0
Queen of love	2	0
Sweet baby, sleep	2	0
Six Songs of France each	1	6
1. May-day. 4. Autumn.
2. Hunting song. 5. O my proud one.
3. Dawn music. 6. Venice.
The Daisy ("La Marguerite")	2	0
Angel Hosts descending (Mors et Vita)	2	0
Power and love (Redemption)	2	0
Ditto (Latin words), "Christus factus est"	2	0
There is a green hill. (Orchestral parts, 3s.)	2	0
Ditto. Arranged for Organ by G. Calkin	1	6
Ditto. Arranged for Pianoforte by B. Tours	1	6
The Holy Vision. For Soprano or Tenor in F; Contralto or Baritone in D Full score and Orchestral parts, MS.	2	0
Jerusalem (Gallia)	2	0
La fauvette	2	0
Si vous n'ouvrez votre fenêtre	2	0
Perche piangi	2	0
Quanti mai	2	0
O Salutaris	3	0
La Siesta. Duet (Spanish words)	2	0
Bells across the snow. Part-song	0	3
Night. Part-song Folio, 1s. 6d.; 8vo	1	3
Full score and Orchestral parts, MS.
The Chase (T.T.B B.) Folio, 1s. 6d.; 8vo	0	4
There is a tinkling stream	0	3

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

Just Published.

WRITTEN AND COMPOSED EXPRESSLY FOR THE CHELTENHAM TRIENNIAL MUSICAL FESTIVAL, 1893.

A FESTIVAL ODE

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY THE

REV. CANON BELL, D.D.

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

BERTHOLD TOURS.

Price One Shilling.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

PERFORMED AT THE HOVINGHAM FESTIVAL, OCTOBER, 1893.

THE LEGEND

OF THE

ROCK-BUOY BELL

BALLAD FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

SUSAN K. PHILLIPS

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

ALAN GRAY.

Price One Shilling.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

EARLY SPRING

BY

ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON

SET TO MUSIC FOR CHORUS & ORCHESTRA

BY

VYVYAN WALLIS POPHAM.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.
Score and Orchestral Parts, MS.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

IN GONDOLA

FOR THE PIANOFORTE

COMPOSED BY

L. HERITTE-VIARDOT.

Price Two Shillings net.

This piece was suggested to the Composer while lying in a gondola on the "Canal Grande" in Venice, and following another gondola in which a young couple were singing. Hence the Venetian love-song forming the middle part.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

FIVE MINIATURES FOR PIANO

COMPOSED BY

S. B. SCHLESINGER.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence net.

CONTENTS.

No. 1. Pleasant Dreams.
„ 2. Good Morning.
„ 3. Melody.
No. 4. Meditation.
„ 5. Flirtation.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TO CONDUCTORS OF CHORAL SOCIETIES.

Recently Published.

LORD ULLIN'S DAUGHTER

BALLAD FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA

BY

HERBERT HAM.

Price Fourpence.

"Where the ill-fated lovers take boat amidst the roaring of the tempest and tossing of the waters is the best section; the music here is graphic. The ballad is well worth the attention of our choral societies on the look-out for novelties."—Musical News.

"The workmanship is admirable. Not only is the part-writing very fine and the orchestration skilful, but throughout the piece the composer displays the power of producing great effects by comparatively simple means."—East Essex Times.

"The selection of the evening was a choral ballad, 'Lord Ullin's Daughter.' . . . It was rendered in a faultless manner, and round after round of applause greeted its performance."—Essex County Chronicle.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Orchestral Parts and Full Score may be hired of the COMPOSER, Halstead, Essex.

ÉLÉGIE ET RONDO

POUR

VIOLON ET PIANO

PAR

EMILE SAURET.

(Op. 48.)

Price Four Shillings net.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

SIX PIECES FOR THE VIOLIN

WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

COMPOSED BY

HERBERT W. WAREING.

	s.	d.		s.	d.
1. May Day Festival ..	2	6	4. Pastoral Dance ..	2	0
2. At Killee	2	0	5. Legende..	1	6
3. Romance	1	6	6. Saltarello	2	0

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

New Songs Just Published.

SONG AND SILENCE

With an ad libitum part for Horn or Violoncello.

WORDS BY

ROBERT S. HICHENS.

MUSIC BY

GERARD F. COBB.

Price Two Shillings.

RETURN UNTO THY REST

SACRED SONG

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

D. PUGHE-EVANS.

Price Two Shillings.

FLOWER CROWNS

SONG

Poetry by ARTHUR BENSON

MUSIC BY

ARTHUR GOODHART.

Price Two Shillings.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

STAFF NOTATION MODULATOR

(40 by 10), 1s. 6d.; Mounted on Linen, with Rollers, 3s. 6d.
(10½ by 4), 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Popular Part-Songs for S.A.T.B.

By W. W. PEARSON.

The Skaters	3d.	The Oyster Dredgers	2d.
Blow, Western Wind!	3d.	*Sweet to live (32nd thou.)	2d.
Stars of the Night	3d.	*Welcome, young Spring!	2d.
The Lake	3d.	*The Anglers (12th thou.)	2d.
*'Tis Morn	3d.	The Dream of Home	2d.
Sweet Spring (Madrigal)	3d.	Summer and Winter	2d.
The River	3d.	*Departed Joys	2d.
Over the mountain side	3d.	There's beauty in the deep	1½d.
Soul of living music	3d.	Soldier, rest!	1d.
The Stormy Petrel	3d.	Woods in Winter	1d.
The Coral Grove	3d.	Autumn	1d.
Pibroch of Donuil Dhu	3d.

HUMOROUS PART-SONGS.

*Three Doughtie Men. (55th thousand)	3d.
Three Children sliding. (8th thousand)	3d.
A Ryghte Merrie Geste	4d.
The Snow-white Doe	4d.
*Ben Bowlegs (Edward Oxenford)	3d.
The Carrion Crow	3d.

DESCRIPTIVE CHORUSES for S.A.T.B.

Orchestral Parts on application to the Composer, Elmham, Dereham.

The Iron Horse. (6th thou.)	4d.	The Ocean (6th thou.)	3d.
Off to Sea	4d.	*The Ironfounders (32nd thou.)	3d.
The Lifeboat	4d.	The Jäger Chorus (6th thou.)	3d.

Tonic Sol-fa Editions at half the above prices of those marked *.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

HUMOROUS PART-SONGS, by Alfred Allen.

Dickory, dickory, dock 4d.
Tom, Tom, the Piper's son 3d.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

THE SPIDER AND THE FLY

NEW HUMOROUS PART-SONG

For mixed and Male Voices, by

ALFRED J. CALDICOTT, Mus. Bac., Cantab.

COMPOSER OF

Humpty Dumpty.	Where are you going, my pretty maid?
Jack and Jill.	Sobbing quartet, &c.
Jack Horner.
This is the house Jack built.

Just Published. Metzler and Co., 42, Gt. Marlborough Street, W. Specimen copies, Post-free, 6d., of the Composer, 239, Cromwell Road, S.W. Special terms to Societies.

TIME.—A Short Treatise on TIME, by Frank Manly, I.S.M. Dedicated to Sir Joseph Barnby. Patronised by the leading Members of the Musical Profession. Testimonials from Sir William Cusins, Professor Bridge, Mr. Sims Reeves, &c. Price 6d. London: F. Pitman, 20, Paternoster Row, E.C.

CLARIONET.—Church Organists—Decadence of the Musical Profession.—See November Musical Opinion and Music Trade Review. Also 200 cols. of Musical Literature and Advertisements. Price 2d. Order at book and musicsellers; Smith's Railway Stalls; or (by post, 3½d.) 150, Holborn Bars, London, E.C.

BOEKELMAN'S EDITION

OF

BACH'S FUGUES

Printed in Colours.

In this Edition the essential parts of each Fugue—viz., Subject, Answer, Counter-subject, Episodes, &c., are each printed in a distinct colour, with a view to helping the Student to a clear understanding of the structure and form of the composition.

Book I. contains—

Vol. 1.	Fugue 3, C sharp major.	Vol. 1.	Fugue 10, E minor.
„ 1.	Fugue 4, C sharp minor.	„ 2.	Fugue 7, E flat.

Book II. contains—

Vol. 1.	Fugue 1, in C.	Vol. 1.	Fugue 21, in B flat.
„ 1.	Fugue 7, in E flat.	„ 1.	Fugue 22, in B flat minor.

Price Two Shillings net each Fugue.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.
Sole Agents for Great Britain and the Colonies.

GRATIS.—"Comparison of English and German Methods of Teaching HARMONY." Post-free to any address. F. Sommer, A.L.A.M., 14, Mardale Street, Shepherd's Bush, London.

COWEN'S "ROSE MAIDEN."—Orchestral Parts, in good condition, for SALE, cheap. 5 1st Violin, 4 2nd Violin, 3 Violas, 4 Cello and Bass, 2 Flutes, 2 Clarinets, 1 Bassoons, 1 Oboe. Frank White, South Street, Taunton.

WILLIAM J. YOUNG'S

POPULAR FOUR-PART SONGS for S.A.T.B.

I love the merry springtime	2d.	Gaily thro' the greenwood	2d.
Welcome, merry May	2d.	The Mountain Maid	2d.
Come o'er the mountain	2d.	Sunshine and shadow	2d.
The air resounds with music	2d.	To a sleeping child	2d.
Blow, ye balmy breezes	3d.	Fairy revels	3d.
Forest Echoes	3d.	Sunny rays	3d.
Who is Sylvia	3d.	Where are you roaming?	3d.
England's glory	3d.	O Anglia, land of the brave	3d.
The streamlet	3d.	Oh, peaceful vale of rest	2d.

PART-SONGS FOR CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR.

Hail, merry Christmas	2d.	A merry Christmas to you all	3d.
A Happy New Year	3d.	Songs of Praise	3d.

Over 250,000 of W. J. Young's Part-Songs have been sold.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

Just Published, 8vo, 3d.

CALL JOHN!

HUMOROUS PART-SONG

Founded on the Popular American Melody "The Old Folks at Home"

Arranged for S.A.T.B. and Solo Bass by

W. W. PEARSON.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

COMPOSITIONS

BY

T. MEE PATTISON.

	Staff. s. d.	Sol-fa. s. d.
CANTATAS.
The Ancient Mariner	2 6	0 6
Do. do. (Choruses only)	1 0
The Lay of the Last Minstrel	2 6
Do. do. (Choruses only)	1 0
May Day	1 0	0 6
The Miracles of Christ (Sacred)	1 0	0 6
ANTHEMS, &c.
All Thy works praise Thee (Harvest)	0 3	0 1½
Thou visitest the earth (Harvest)	0 2
I know that my Redeemer liveth (Easter)	0 3
There were shepherds (Christmas)	0 2
Thirteen Offertory Sentences	0 4
Six Kyries	0 2
Te Deum laudamus (in F)	0 3
ORIGINAL ORGAN COMPOSITIONS.
Fifteen Introductory and Concluding Voluntaries	3s. 6d.
Five Concluding Voluntaries	1s. 6d.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

PRACTICAL HINTS ON BOY CHOIR TRAINING. By G. Edward Stubbs, M.A., Organist and Choirmaster of St. Agnes Chapel, Trinity Parish, New York.

Sixth Edition.

A useful treatise on the vocal training of Chorister Boys embodying the views of standard writers on the voice.

Although strictly scientific the book deals with the subject in a plain and practical way, and will be found of value to all who are entrusted with the training of boys' voices. It is highly endorsed by leading Clergymen and Choirmasters both in England and America. Price 3s. 6d. net.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

In the Press.

CANTATA

SET TO ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON'S POEM

CROSSING THE BAR

For Full Orchestra, Chorus, and Pianoforte

By ALFRED HARBOROUGH.

Vocal Score, with the Orchestral Score arranged for two performers on the Pianoforte, 2s. 6d.; String Parts, 5s.; Wind Parts, 13s.

Full Score on application to the Publishers.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

MUSICAL FORM. By Ebenezer Prout, B.A., Lond., Author of "Harmony: its Theory and Practice," "Counterpoint: Strict and Free," "Double Counterpoint and Canon," "Fugue," "Fugal Analysis." All in Augener's Edition. Bound, net 5s. each. 86, Newgate Street, and 1, Foubert's Place, London.

MUSIC FOR ADVENT.

ANTHEMS.

*It is high time .. .. J. Barnby	1½d.
*The grace of God that bringeth salvation .. .. J. Barnby	1½d.
When shades of night. Hymn .. .. J. Barnby	2d.
*O that I knew where I might find Him (St. Thomas's Day) W. Sterndale Bennett	3d.
Dies iræ, dies illæ .. .. W. T. Best	3d.
*The night is far spent (two-part Anthem) .. M. B. Foster	3d.
*Rejoice greatly .. .. H. Gadsby	3d.
*Prepare ye the way of the Lord .. .. .. Dr. Garrett	3d.
*Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace .. .. H. J. Gauntlett	3d.
*The wilderness and the solitary place .. .. .. J. Goss	6d.
*Blessed is He who cometh .. .. .. Ch. Gounod	1½d.
*And the angel said unto her .. .. King Hall	1½d.
To Thee do I lift up my soul .. .. King Hall	1½d.
How beautiful are the feet .. .. Handel	3d.
The Lord will comfort Zion .. .. H. Hiles	6d.
When the Son of Man .. .. Kent	4d.
Who is this that cometh? .. .. Kent	6d.
Arise, O Jerusalem .. .. Oliver King	1½d.
*Hosanna to the Son of David .. .. .. G. A. Macfarren	3d.
The great day of the Lord is near .. George C. Martin	1½d.
Day of anger, day of mourning ("Dies iræ," from the Requiem) Mozart	6d.
Rejoice in the Lord.. .. .. S. Reay	1½d.
Rejoice in the Lord.. .. .. John Redford	3d.
The night is far spent .. .. Montem Smith	1½d.
*Hosanna in the highest .. .. J. Stainer	1½d.
Lord, what love have I .. .. Steggall	6d.
*Hearken unto Me, My people .. .. .. A. Sullivan	1½d.
Beloved, now are we the sons of God .. .. E. H. Thorne	1½d.
*Thou Judge of quick and dead .. .. .. S. S. Wesley	3d.
*Rejoice greatly .. .. H. H. Woodward	1½d.
Far from their home .. .. .. H. H. Woodward	3d.

 Anthems marked thus (*) may be had in Tonic Sol-fa, 1d., 1½d., or 2d. each.

NINE HYMNS WITH TUNES
SELECTED FROM "THE HYMNARY."

Price One Penny.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE BENEDICITE
SET TO MUSIC BY THE FOLLOWING
MODERN COMPOSERS.

GEORGE J. BENNETT (in E flat)	1½d.
GEORGE J. BENNETT (in G)	1½d.
GEORGE J. BENNETT (in D)	3d.
W. T. BEST	3d.
HUGH BLAIR	1½d.
J. F. BRIDGE, JAMES TURLE, and Dr. HAYES	1½d.
J. W. ELLIOTT	2d.
ALFRED J. EYRE (with a Quadruple Chant for the Te Deum)	2d.
ALFRED J. EYRE (No. 2, in F)	1½d.
PERCY H. FROST	2d.
HENRY GADSBY (in G, Chant Form)	1½d.
F. E. GLADSTONE (Chant Form)	3d.
F. E. GLADSTONE (Unison)..	1½d.
W. HUGHES	1½d.
FREDERICK ILIFFE (No. 1)	1½d.
GEORGE C. MARTIN (No. 1, in F; No. 2, in E flat; No. 3, in G) each	4d.
C. E. MILLER	2d.
C. E. MILLER (second setting)	2d.
C. E. MILLER (third setting)	2d.
BOYTON SMITH (in A flat)	1½d.
J. STAINER, R. DE LACEY, A. GIBBS, and F. CHAMPNEYS ..	1½d.
J. STAINER, W. WINN, and F. WALKER	1½d.
TURLE, HAYES, and BRIDGE (in A)	1½d.
S. S. WESLEY (easy setting)	2d.
J. BARNBY
JOHN FOSTER
MONTEM SMITH (two settings)	1½d.
J. TURLE (two settings)
C. A. WICKES (two settings)
W. G. WOOD (in D)	1½d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

A CHRISTMAS DREAM
A CANTATA FOR CHILDREN
(WITH ACTION)

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY
K. R. MOFFAT.

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY
ALFRED MOFFAT.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence
(Music in both Notations).

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

FOR ADVENT AND CHRISTMAS.

SUITABLE FOR USE
IN THE CHURCH SERVICE.

THE TWO ADVENTS
A CHURCH CANTATA
WORDS SELECTED AND WRITTEN BY THE
REV. E. W. BOWLING, M.A.,
Rector of Houghton Conquest, Beds.
COMPOSED BY GEORGE GARRETT, M.A.,
MUS.D., F.C.O.
(Op. 23.)
Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

ADVENT HYMN
"IN LOWLY GUISE THY KING APPEARETH"
BY SCHUMANN
TRANSLATED FROM THE GERMAN OF FRIEDRICH RÜCKERT
BY THE REV. J. TROUTBECK, D.D.
For Soprano Solo and Chorus, with Orchestral Accompaniment.
Price One Shilling.

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS MORN
A BIBLICAL PASTORAL
THE WORDS WRITTEN BY THE REV. S. J. STONE
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY HENRY LESLIE.
Vocal Score, 8vo, 2s. 6d. Vocal Parts, 6d. each.

CHRISTMAS EVE
A SHORT CANTATA
FOR ALTO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA
COMPOSED BY
NIELS W. GADE.
(Op. 40.)
Price One Shilling. Tonic Sol-fa Notation, Fourpence.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE CHRISTMAS ORATORIO
BY
JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH.
THE ENGLISH TRANSLATION AND ADAPTATION BY THE REV. J. TROUTBECK, D.D.

Price, in paper cover, 2s.; paper boards, 2s. 6d.; cloth, gilt, 4s.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE SECOND ADVENT
SACRED CANTATA
SOLOS FOR TENOR AND BASS, EASY CHORUSES,
AND
FOUR WELL-KNOWN HYMNS FOR THE CONGREGATION.
PART I.—THE CRY OF THE CHURCH.
PART II.—THE SIGNS. PART III.—THE ADVENT.
PART IV.—THE TRIUMPH OF THE CHURCH.
These four parts may (if preferred) be sung separately as Anthems on the four Sundays in Advent.
The Words selected from Holy Scripture by the Rev. C. T. MAYO.
THE MUSIC (EXCEPT THE HYMN TUNES) COMPOSED BY ARTHUR H. D. PRENDERGAST.
Vocal Score, with Organ Accompaniment, 1s. 6d.
Words only (with the Hymn Tunes), 1½d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

POPULAR ANTHEMS

FOR

ADVENT & CHRISTMAS.

BARNBY, J.

*It is high time to wake out of sleep	1½d.
*The grace of God that bringeth salvation	1½d.
*Behold, I bring you good tidings	3d.
*Like silver lamps	1½d.
*Sing and rejoice	1½d.
Drop down, ye heavens	1½d.

ELVEY, G.

*Arise, shine, for Thy light is come	1½d.

GARRETT, G. M.

*Prepare ye the way	3d.
It shall come to pass	6d.

GOSS, J.

*The wilderness	6d.
*Behold, I bring you good tidings	1½d.

GOUNOD, C.

*O Sing to God (Noël)	1½d.
Ditto (Female Voices)	6d.

HOPKINS, E. J.

*Let us now go even unto Bethlehem	1½d.

STAINER, J.

*Awake, awake, put on Thy strength, O Zion	6d.
*Awake, thou that sleepest	6d.
*O Zion, that bringest	1½d.
*Hosanna in the highest	1½d.
*The hallowed day hath shined	1½d.
*The morning stars sang together	6d.
*Thus speaketh the Lord of Hosts	1½d.

SULLIVAN, A.

*Hearken unto me, My people	1½d.

TOURS, B.

*God hath appointed a day	1½d.
*Sing, O heavens	1½d.
*There were shepherds	1½d.

*Anthems marked thus * are to be had in Tonic Sol-fa*, 1d. to 3d. each.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TEN HYMNS WITH TUNES

SELECTED FROM "THE HYMNARY."

Price One Penny.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CAROLS FOR CHRISTMASTIDE

SET TO ANCIENT MELODIES

BY THE

REV. THOMAS HELMORE, M.A.

Words, principally in imitation of the original,

BY THE

REV. J. M. NEALE, D.D.

	s.	d.
18mo, Melody only	0	6
„ „ „ in packets of 50	20	0
„ Compressed Score	1	0
Folio, with Pianoforte Accompaniment	4	6
Words only	0	1½
„ „ in packets of 50	5	0

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

ANTHEMS FOR CHRISTMAS.

*In the beginning	G. B. Allen 1½d.
Christians, be joyful	Bach 3d.
*Like silver lamps	J. Barnby 1½d.
Drop down, ye heavens	J. Barnby 1½d.
*The grace of God, that bringeth salvation	J. Barnby 1½d.
*Sing and rejoice	J. Barnby 1½d.
*Behold, I bring you good tidings	J. Barnby 3d.
*While Shepherds watched	W. T. Best 1½d.
*Give the king Thy judgments, O Lord	A. H. Brown 1½d.
Hail! thou that art highly favoured	Arthur Carnall 4d.
Break forth into joy	S. Coleridge-Taylor 3d.
Behold, I bring you good tidings	J. M. Crament 4d.
Behold, I bring you glad tidings	Giovanni Croce 1½d.
*Arise, shine, for Thy light is come	Geo. Elvey 1½d.
*Let me now go even unto Bethlehem	J. T. Field 1½d.
Behold, a star appeareth	Niels W. Gade 4d.
Sing, O daughter of Zion	H. Gadsby 1½d.
*Behold, I bring you good tidings	J. Goss 1½d.
O sing to God (Noël). (Female Voices)	Ch. Gounod 6d.
*O sing to God (Noël). (Arranged for S.A.T.B.)	Ch. Gounod 1½d.
*Brightest and best	E. V. Hall 4d.
Behold, I bring	E. V. Hall 3d.
*Hark! the herald angels sing	E. V. Hall 3d.
How beautiful are the feet (Appendix to "The Messiah")	Handel 3d.
*Let us now go even unto Bethlehem	E. J. Hopkins 1½d.
Sing, O heavens	Kent 4d.
*While all things were in quiet silence	Oliver King 1½d.
Hallelujah! the light hath shined	Oliver King 3d.
The star that now is shining	Oliver King 1½d.
For unto us was born	G. A. Macfarren 3d.
While all things were in quiet silence	G. A. Macfarren 1½d.
God, who at sundry times	J. H. Mee 4d.
Blessed be the Lord God of Israel	The Earl of Mar 1½d.
Rejoice, O ye people	Mendelssohn 1½d.
*Hallelujah! for unto us a Child is born	W. H. Monk 1½d.
*Sing unto the Lord	Vincent Novello 1½d.
I will set his dominion in the sea	Horatio W. Parker 4d.
Glory to God in the highest	Pergolesi 1½d.
*Break forth into joy	T. Ridley Prentice 6d.
*Behold, I bring you glad tidings	C. W. Smith 1½d.
The light hath shined	E. Silas 1½d.
*The morning stars sang together	J. Stainer 6d.
*O Zion, that bringest good tidings	J. Stainer 1½d.
*The hallowed day hath shined upon us	J. Stainer 1½d.
*Thus speaketh the Lord of Hosts	J. Stainer 1½d.
*The angel Gabriel was sent from God	H. Smart 1½d.
In the beginning was the Word	E. H. Thorne 1½d.
*Sing, O heavens	B. Tours 1½d.
*There were shepherds	B. Tours 1½d.
*This is the day which the Lord hath made	J. Turle 3d.
The light hath shined	C. G. Verrinder 1½d.
*There were shepherds	Charles Vincent 4d.
Behold, I bring you glad tidings	Vittoria 1½d.
Blessed be the Lord God of Israel	S. S. Wesley 1½d.
*Glory be to God on high	S. S. Wesley 2d.
Blessed be the Lord	C. L. Williams 4d.
Jesu, who from Thy Father's throne	F. C. Woods 3d.

Anthems marked thus * to be had in Tonic Sol-fa, 1d., 1½d., and 2d. each.

Most of the above may be had in Folio, Vocal Score, and Vocal Parts.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HYMNS AND CAROLS.

Adeste Fideles ("O come, all ye faithful")	Arr. by V. Novello 1½d.
Christians, awake! salute the happy morn	W. H. Monk 1½d.
Hark! the herald angels sing	J. Baptiste Calkin 1½d.
„ „ „	Dr. Ions 1½d.
„ „ „	Mendelssohn 1½d.
Now join we all with holy mirth	J. Stainer 1½d.
O come, all ye faithful	J. Barnby 1½d.
Of the Father's love begotten	J. B. Dykes 1½d.
See, the morning star	E. G. Monk 1½d.
Shades of silent night	Samuel Gee 1½d.
There were whisperings	J. T. Cooper 1½d.
O come, all ye faithful	Old Melody 1d.
Approach, all ye faithful	J. Barnby 1d.
Holy night	J. Barnby 2d.
Christians, awake!	J. Goss 1d.
Hark! the hosts of heaven are singing	Henry Smart 1d.
O come, new anthems let us sing	H. J. Gauntlett 1d.
Hark! the heavens' sweet melody	J. Goss 1d.
O come, loud anthems let us sing	S. S. Wesley 1d.
Christ is born, tell forth His fame	Ch. Gounod 1d.
Come, ye nations, faithful own	G. Elvey 1d.
Hark! the herald angels sing	Mendelssohn 1d.
When Christ was born / What child is this?	J. T. Field 2d.
Softly the night is sleeping / In Excelsis gloria	J. Maude Crament 3d.
O Babe! in manger lying / The Virgin is hushing her Baby to rest / What Child is this? / Darkness fell on the weary earth	J. Barnby 1½d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

New Christmas Anthems.

Now Ready.

THERE WERE SHEPHERDS

COMPOSED BY

MYLES B. FOSTER.

Price Three-halfpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence.

Now Ready.

THERE WAS SILENCE IN BETHLEHEM'S FIELDS

CAROL FOR UNISON SINGING

BY

J. STAINER.

Price Three-halfpence
(Music in both Notations).

Now Ready.

BEFORE THE HEAVENS

COMPOSED BY

HORATIO W. PARKER.

Price Threepence.

Will be Published November 3.

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS

A CAROL-ANTHEM

COMPOSED BY

J. BARNBY.

Price Threepence.
Tonic Sol-fa, 2d. Words only, 3s. per hundred.

Will be Published immediately.

THERE WERE SHEPHERDS

COMPOSED BY

H. W. WAREING.

Price Threepence.

Will be Published immediately.

HARK! WHAT NEWS THE ANGELS BRING

COMPOSED BY

OLIVER KING.

Price Threepence.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

Will be Published immediately.

TEN CHRISTMAS CAROLS

PRICE, COMPLETE, ONE SHILLING
or, Singly, 1½d. each.

Tonic Sol-fa Edition, 8d.; Words only, 2d.

Contents.

Carol for Christmas day	J. T. Field.
Good people, give ear	John Swire.
Now dies in David's city	John Swire.
Now join we all with holy mirth	John Stainer.
Ring out, ye bells	J. H. Wallis.
Shine calm and bright	John Swire.
Sleep, Holy Babe	J. T. Field.
Softly the night	J. M. Crament.
There dwelt in old Judea	R. Jackson.
Two thousand troubled years	J. F. Bridge.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

TWELVE NEW

CAROLS FOR CHRISTMASTIDE

WRITTEN BY

SHAPCOTT WENSLEY

SET TO MUSIC BY

J. BARNBY.	G. M. GARRETT.
J. F. BRIDGE.	BATTISON HAYNES.
EATON FANING.	EMMA MUNDELLA.
MYLES B. FOSTER.	JOHN STAINER.

BERTHOLD TOURS.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.
Tonic Sol-fa, Eightpence. Words only, Twopence.
Each Carol may be had separately, price 1½d.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co

Just Published.

CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS

A Short Musical Sketch

SUITABLE FOR THE BREAKING UP OF SCHOOLS

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

J. A. CAMPBELL

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

HERBERT W. SCHARTAU.

Price Ninepence
(Music in both Notations).

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

FOUR

CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

No. 1. The Anthem of Peace .. .. J. BARNBY.
„ 2. On Christmas Morn .. .. A. C. MACKENZIE.
„ 3. Across the desert sands by night .. .. G. C. MARTIN.
„ 4. Shepherds! shake off your drowsy sleep .. .. J. STAINER.

PRICE THREE-HALFPENCE.

Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence. Words only, Three Shillings per 100.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TWELVE OLD CAROLS

ENGLISH AND FOREIGN

ADAPTED AND ARRANGED BY

SIR JOHN STAINER,

MUS. DOC., OXON.

CONTENTS:

BESANÇON CAROL—"Shepherds! shake off your drowsy sleep."
TYROLESE CAROL—"Come, shepherds, come! shake off your sleep."
POITOU CAROL (Lucas Le Moigne, 1520)—"Now sing we all full sweetly."
ARPAJON CAROL (Sixteenth Century)—"The good men all of Chastres."
CAROL OF THE BIRDS (Bas-Quercy)—"Whence comes this rush of wings afar?"
CAROL OF THE FLOWERS (Bas-Quercy)—"Come with us, sweet flowers, and worship Christ the Lord."
GASCON CAROL—"Infant, so gentle, so pure, and so sweet!"
CAROL OF BASSE-NORMANDIE—"O Night, peaceful and blest!"
FLEMISH CAROL—"Of the Father's love begotten."
THE GOLDEN CAROL (English)—"We saw a light shine out afar."
ENGLISH (1661)—"Christmas hath made an end."
ENGLISH (1661)—"Now farewell, good Christmas."

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

Tonic Sol-fa, Sixpence. Words only, One Penny.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

POPULAR CHRISTMAS CAROLS

ARRANGED FOR

TWO-PART SINGING

With an ad libitum Pianoforte Accompaniment

BY

W. G. McNAUGHT.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

Tonic Sol-fa, price Sixpence. Words only, Three-halfpence.

CONTENTS:

Good King Wenceslas.
Christmas hath made an end.
Good Christian men, rejoice.
God rest you merry, gentlemen.
The first Nowell.
A Virgin unspotted.
The Wassail Song.
I hear along our streets.
The seven joys of Mary.
The Boar's Head Carol.
Hark! how sweetly the bells.
The holly and the ivy.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

FOUR CHRISTMAS CAROLS

WRITTEN BY

W. CHATTERTON DIX

SET TO MUSIC BY

JOSEPH BARNBY.

O Babe! in manger lying.
The Virgin is hushing her Baby to rest.
What Child is this?
Darkness fell on the weary earth.

Price Three-halfpence.

Tonic Sol-fa, One Penny; words only, Three Shillings per 100.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CHRISTMASTIDE CAROLS

HARMONISED BY

GEORGE C. MARTIN.

FIRST SERIES.—Old Breton Melodies.
SECOND SERIES.—Old French Melodies.

PRICE SIXPENCE EACH SERIES.
Words only, One Penny each series.

CONTENTS OF FIRST SERIES.

Hail! Christmas Bells.
O'er her Child the Virgin weeps.
The stars are bright.
On this day was born.
Glad hymns with one accord.
Outside the city gates.
On Asia Minor's sunny shore.
Across the desert sands by night.

CONTENTS OF SECOND SERIES.

Round the Virgin gently sleeping.
In the golden lands afar.
The sombre shadows darken fall.
The Circumcision.
The Shepherds glad.
Poising bright on golden wings.
A legend of the flight.
Merrily ring the Christmas bells.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

NEW AND OLD

THE WORDS EDITED BY THE

REV. HENRY RAMSDEN BRAMLEY, M.A.

THE MUSIC EDITED BY

JOHN STAINER, M.A., MUS. DOC.

THREE SERIES (MUSIC & WORDS), ONE SHILLING EACH.

Cloth, gilt, 2s. Three Series, complete, cloth, gilt, 4s.; or, in Seventy numbers, 1d. each.

Words only, each Series, 1½d.; or, complete, 4d.; cloth, 6d.

First Series, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation, 1s.; or, in separate numbers, 1d. each.

A Selection from the above (24) for Men's Voices, 2s.

Illustrated Edition (First and Second Series), handsomely bound in cloth, gilt, 7s. 6d.

Library Edition, with Historical Preface, Roxburgh binding, 7s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TEN CHRISTMAS CAROLS

SET TO MUSIC BY

EDWARD BUNNETT, MUS.D., CANTAB.

Price, in paper wrapper, complete, 1s.; or, in single numbers, 1d. each.

CONTENTS.

1. The Carollers.
2. The stars are shining bright and clear.
3. Carol, sweetly carol.
4. Christmas Bells.
5. A child this day is born.
6. Hark! what means those holy voices?
7. The Angels' Carol.
8. While shepherds watched.
9. Angels from the realms of glory.
10. A Christmas Chime.

Also, by same COMPOSER,

A SECOND SET OF TEN CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

1. Awake! arouse! ye Christian band.
2. Ring out, sweet chimes.
3. Brightest and best.
4. Hail! happy morn.
5. O let our voices.
6. Christmas Eve.
7. Hark! the bells.
8. A Christmas Carol.
9. Joyful is the morn.
10. Noël.

Price, in paper wrapper, complete, 1s.; or, in single numbers, 1d. each

The words of both sets (which are chiefly copyright) can be had of the COMPOSER. One Penny each set.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

While Shepherds watched (Old Cornish Carol) 2d
Shepherds in the field .. .. 3d.
Christians, be thankful .. .. 2d.
All my heart. Solo and Chorus .. .. 6d.

BY VYVYAN WALLIS POPHAM.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Price Threepence. Tonic Sol-fa, price Three-halfpence.

THERE WERE SHEPHERDS

BY

E. A. SYDENHAM.

"An effective, bright, melodious composition."—Church Review.
"An able composition."—Church Times.
"A gain to music of this class."—Musical Times.

By the same COMPOSER.

THREE CAROLS or HYMNS for CHRISTMAS. Music and words, 3d.; words only, 3s. per 100.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

TWELVE ORIGINAL CAROLS

WORDS BY

MAY GILLINGTON

1.	All in the heart of the winter tide	Howard Talbot	2d.
2.	An Angel came to Bethlehem	A. C. Mackenzie	2d.
3.	Bring forth a carol for Christmas time	W. J. Westbrook	2d.
4.	Dark was the night	Arthur E. Godfrey	2d.
5.	Who is this that comes to Zion?	George C. Martin	2d.
6.	The Morning Stars	Frank L. Moir	2d.
7.	The nights are so cold	Alfred J. Eyre	2d.
8.	Oh, rich and poor	Howard Talbot	2d.
9.	Slumber Song	Arthur E. Godfrey	2d.
10.	Sun, Moon, and Stars	Lawrence Kellie	2d.
11.	When Christ the Lord	Arthur E. Godfrey	2d.
12.	In the wintry darkness (for Children)	Arthur E. Godfrey	2d.

Complete, in paper cover, 1s. net; cloth, 2s. net. Words only, complete, 2d.

"Some are of remarkable beauty."—The Scotsman.

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., 6, New Burlington Street, W.

WINCHESTER'S Anthems and Services FOR CHRISTMAS.

		s.	d.
ANTHEM.	"Let us now go even unto Bethlehem."	0	3
ANTHEM.	"There were Shepherds"	0	3
TE DEUM,	Service in F (No 25 of Series)	0	3
TE DEUM,	Five Chant Settings (Nos. 3, 4, 32, 36, and 46) each	0	2
BENEDICITE.	Three Settings (Nos. 8, 35, and 42) each	0	2
BENEDICTUS.	No. 9, in F, 2d.; also, No. 10, in G	0	1½
JUBILATE,	Service in F	0	1½
COMMUNION SERVICE in F		0	4
KYRIE ELEISON (Two).	DOXOLOGIES and NICENE CREED (No. 49)	0	2
AGNUS DEI		0	1½
BENEDICTUS QUI VENIT		0	1½
OFFERTORY SENTENCES	(Ten Settings)	0	3
OFFERTORY ANTHEM.	"Be merciful"	0	1½
TALLIS'S FESTIVAL RESPONSES		0	1½
MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS,	Services in F and G each	0	3
MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS.	Two Chant Settings (Nos. 17 and 48) each	0	3
GRAND FESTIVAL MARCH FOR ORGAN	net	1	6

BOUND VOLUME OF

WINCHESTER'S CHURCH-MUSIC SERIES,

Containing ORIGINAL ANTHEMS, MORNING, EVENING, and COMMUNION SERVICES, HYMN TUNES, &c.

Nos. 1 to 50, bound in cloth, gilt, red edges, 4s.

London: HART and Co., 22, Paternoster Row, E.C.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

SET TO MUSIC BY

J. FREDERICK BRIDGE, MUS. DOC.

CHILD DIVINE. Words by Rev. F. K. HARFORD. 2d.
JOY, YE PEOPLE. Words by Rev. F. K. HARFORD, M.A. 2d.
IN SORROW AND IN WANT. Words by Archdeacon FARRAR. 3d.
ALL JUBILANT WITH PSALM AND HYMN. Words by the Ven. Archdeacon FARRAR. 2d.
CHRISTMAS BELLS. Words from "In Memoriam," by ALFRED TENNYSON. 4d.
SWEETER THAN SONGS OF SUMMER. Words by the Author of "The Sower went forth sowing." 3d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS, &c.

BY CALEB SIMPER.

Interesting, attractive, popular, easy, melodious, and effective.

*BE JOYFUL, O EARTH (New, moderately easy) (3rd 1,000) 4d.
Band Parts of this attractive Anthem also issued.
*THE GLORY OF THE LORD (New, moderate) (7th 1,000) 4d.
*REJOICE GREATLY (New) (5th 1,000) 3d.
*BREAK FORTH INTO JOY (9th 1,000) 4d.
Sung at Choral Festivals in Downpatrick Cathedral and at Begelley.
*THE HEAVENS ARE TELLING (4th 1,000) 3d.
*BLESSED BE THE LORD GOD (14th edition) 4d.
LET US NOW GO EVEN TO BETHLEHEM (6th 1,000) 3d.
WE HAVE SEEN HIS STAR (27th edition) 4d.
SING, O HEAVENS (17th 1,000). GLORY TO GOD (16th ed.) each 3d.
AND HE SHALL REIGN (12th 1,000) 3d.
THERE WERE SHEPHERDS (16th ed.). BEHOLD I BRING (35th ed.) each 3d.
TE DEUM IN G (7th edition), 4d. TE DEUM in F (23rd edition) 3d.
FAVOURITE MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS IN F (47th edition) 4d.
Sung at Choral Festivals in Lismore, Derry, and Downpatrick Cathedrals; also at Barrow, Skegness, Great Budworth, Sleaford, East Devon, &c.
MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS IN E FLAT (16th edition) 4d.
Sung at a Choral Festival in Llandaff Cathedral.
MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS IN G (New) (6th edition) 4d.
EASY HOLY COMMUNION SERVICE IN E FLAT (8th 1,000) 4d.
HOLY COMMUNION SERVICE IN F (6th edition) 6d.
*EASY HOLY COMMUNION SERVICE IN G (New) (2nd 1,000) 4d.
All these Services are complete, with Agnus Dei and Benedictus.
O HOW AMIABLE. Festivals (2nd 1,000) 3d.
GIVE GLORY TO THE LORD. Festivals (11th edition) 3d.
THE LAMB SHALL LEAD THEM (New) 3d.

*POPULAR CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

68th 1,000. Price 1d. each. Nos. 13 to 18 are just published.

*1. CAROL SWEETLY.	*10. SWEET ANGELS, EVER BRIGHT.
*2. O LOVELY STAR.	*11. OH, CHRISTMAS BELLS.
*3. WHAT SAY THESE BELLS?	*12. BETHLEHEM'S PEACEFUL HILL
*4. COME, HAIL THE DAY.	*13. SWEET CHRISTMAS DAY.
*5. GOOD NEWS WE BRING.	*14. RING, BELLS, RING.
*6. SWEETEST MUSIC.	*15. FAIR EDEN'S GATES.
*7. AWAKE, AWAKE!	*16. SONGS OF RAPTURE.
*8. O SO SWEETLY.	*17. ALL HAIL! WE SING.
*9. HAPPY MORNING.	*18. SILVERY STARS.

Words only—Set 1 contains Nos. 1 to 6 complete; Set 2, Nos. 7 to 12; Set 3, Nos. 13 to 18. Price of each Set, 3s. 3d. per 100.
Those marked * are also published in Tonic Sol-fa.

London: WEEKES and Co., 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.
Chicago, U.S.A.: CLAYTON F. SUMMY, 174-176, Wabash Avenue.

Now Ready.

TWELVE CHRISTMAS CAROLS

Words by Mrs. G. F. BYRON (Miss Gillington)

MUSIC BY

F. PASCAL.

Octavo. Price One Shilling net.

Sample Copies sent (to Organists, &c.) post-free on receipt of six stamps.

London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 24, Berners Street.

EDWYN A. CLARE'S CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS

These compositions are very effective and not difficult.

THE PRINCE OF PEACE (New) (2nd 1,000) 3d.
A very pretty, melodious, and easy Anthem.
WE HAVE SEEN HIS STAR (New) (6th 1,000) 3d.
BEHOLD, I BRING (9th 1,000) 3d.
SING, O HEAVENS (6th 1,000) 3d.
{ PRAISE THE LORD, O JERUSALEM (12th 1,000) 3d.
{ THE LORD REIGNETH (New). (Sol-fa. 2d.) (3rd 1,000) 3d.
Two easy Anthems, suitable for any Festival or special occasion.
MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS IN D (6th 1,000) 4d.
Full of vigour and flowing melody.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW COMPOSITIONS

BY SYDNEY T. SPALDING.

CHRISTMAS ANTHEM, "While the Shepherds." Price 3d.

"Noteworthy for extreme unconventionality."
"The composer has dared to think for himself."
"His style is uncommon."—Musical Times.
"Worthy the attention of choirs with limited capabilities."—Daily News.
"A Xmas Anthem of pastoral type, the theme well worked out, the harmonies solid and good."—Liverpool Daily Post.
"Eminently suitable for Church choirs."—Brighton Gazette.

TE DEUM. Price 3d.

"A clever composition."—Daily News.
"One of the finest settings we have heard for some time."—Brighton Gazette.
"Has vigour and style, and within the capacity of parish choirs."—Liverpool Daily Post.
"Should be in the library of every organist."—The Lady.

REST. Song for Soprano. Price 2s. net.

"The composer is to be congratulated on having set the Rev. J. Jennings's words to charming music, and the song is an assured success."—Lady's Pictorial.
"A very pleasing song of devotional cast."—Liverpool Daily Post.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Fiftieth Thousand.

FOURTEEN ORIGINAL

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

EDITED BY THE REV.

T. HERBERT SPINNEY, M.A., OXON., F.C.O.

First Series.	Second Series.
1. The Christmas Rose.	1. Brightest and best.
2. Christians, carol sweetly.	2. To Bethlehem's city.
3. Alleluia!	3. Slumber, O Child.
4. Hallowed Day.	4. The Prince of Peace.
5. The snow lay on the ground.	5. Choirs of Angels.
6. It is Christmas-tide.	6. The Celestial Flower.
7. Our King hath come.	7. The night watch.

Church Bells says: "We cannot too highly recommend this excellent selection."
Dr. H. A. Harding, Mus. Doc., Oxon., F.C.O., says: "Words and music are alike admirable."
Dr. E. W. Taylor, Mus. Doc., Oxon., F.C.O., says: "Your Carols were much appreciated at both church and schools."
Lady Milbank: "The most lovely I ever heard."
Rev. G. L. Bingham, M.A., Rector of Litcham: "Immensely liked."
Musical Standard: "An excellent little book."
Rev. C. F. Thornewill, M.A., Vicar of Bakewell: "Children delighted with your carols."

Price 2d. each series; or, in separate numbers (superior edition), 1d. each.
Sol-fa edition, in separate numbers only, 1d. each.
Words only, either series, 2s. 6d. per 100.
Sole London Agents: WEEKES & Co., 14, Hanover Street.
Chicago, U.S.A.: CLAYTON F. SUMMY, 174-176, Wabash Avenue.
Ballarat, Australia: WILLIAM KING, 10, Drummond Street.

REJOICE GREATLY, O DAUGHTER OF ZION. Christmas Anthem, by THOS. SMITH. 3d. "Spirited, and not difficult." London: NOVELLO and Co., Berners Street. Post-free from the COMPOSER, Music Warehouse, Bury St. Edmund's.

Second Edition.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS. — For Treble Voices (Unaccompanied). Arranged or composed by ROSAMOND PHILPOTT. Price Fourpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW ANTHEM for CHRISTMAS. By R. T. CLARK MORRISON. "Sing, O daughter of Zion." Bright, melodious, and effective. Price Threepence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW CHRISTMAS CAROLS, by JOSEPH C. BRIDGE, M.A., Mus. Doc., Oxon., Organist of Chester Cathedral. "Away with grief" and "Christmas Night." Price Threepence each. London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

SACRED SONGS

FOR

LITTLE SINGERS

WORDS BY F. R. HAVERGAL

MUSIC BY

A. RANDEGGER.

Illustrated, paper cover, 2s. 6d.; cloth, gilt, 5s.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CHRISTMAS CAROL, "Ring the joyful Christmas Bells," for Soprano Voices and Chorus, by F. PESKETT, price 2d.; "Dame Durden," humorous Part-song, by H. TOWNSEND, 2d.; Accompaniments to the Lord's Prayer, by H. TOWNSEND, 1s. net.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS, by THOS. SMITH.—Melodious and Easy.—"For unto us," "Glory to God." Advent: "The night is departing," "How lovely are the messengers." General Anthems: "O worship the Lord," "Sing we merrily," "Hear my prayer," "Like as the hart," "The Lord is my Shepherd." Price 3d. each.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

SPECIALLY SUITABLE FOR CHRISTMAS.

AWAKE, PUT ON THY STRENGTH

NEW ANTHEM

BY

F. R. GREENISH, MUS.D., OXON.

Price 4d. Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.

Composed for the Haverfordwest District Musical Association, and sung by over 500 voices at their Annual Festival, June, 1893, when it was most warmly received. The local Press is unanimous in its praise.

"A most effective composition. Perfectly easy, yet full of variety, and extremely melodious throughout. The striking subject given to the tenors at the words 'Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice'; the expressive soprano melody 'For the Lord hath comforted,' and the fine Christmas Hymn, with its re-appearance for the voices in unison, in the final movement, are alone sufficient to ensure its popularity."

Also, by the same COMPOSER,

O GOD, MY SOUL THIRSTETH. 8th Thousand. Price 3d.
Most successful Anthem. Easy and effective. Immensely popular wherever it has been heard.

MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in D. Price 3d.
An excellent setting, and not difficult. Composed for the re-opening of organ at St. Mary's, Haverfordwest, 1889.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

MENDELSSOHN'S

SIX CHRISTMAS PIECES

FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

Price Three Shillings net.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HOLIDAY SONGS

Written by C. F. ALEXANDER

MUSIC BY

LADY ARTHUR HILL.

Reduced Price, 2s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE

SUNLIGHT OF SONG

A COLLECTION OF

SACRED AND MORAL SONGS

With original Music by the most eminent Composers, with 46 Illustrations, cloth, gilt, 5s.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NATIONAL NURSERY RHYMES AND SONGS

BY

J. W. ELLIOTT.

With 65 Illustrations, and elegantly bound, cloth, gilt, 7s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

YOUNG LOCHINVAR

A BALLAD FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA

THE POETRY WRITTEN BY

SIR WALTER SCOTT

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

ARCHIBALD DAVIDSON ARNOTT.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

MODERN FOUR-PART SONGS
FOR MIXED VOICES.

With (ad lib.) Pianoforte Accompaniment. Quarto Size—Printed from Engraved Plates.

		Price Net. s.	d.
1. As the sunshine to the flowers	W. G. Cusins	0	4
2. Away, away to the summer woods	James Coward	0	6
3. Children—"Come to me, O ye children"	Walter Maynard	0	6
4. Lo! the peaceful shades of evening	Walter Maynard	0	6
5. The dream	Alice Mary Smith	0	6
6. Golden slumbers—"Golden slumbers kiss your eyes"	W. H. Cummings	0	4
7. Oh, the merry May	Mary Dowling	0	6
8. Hurrah for Father Christmas	G. W. Lyon	0	6
9. Violet—"Brighter than the rays of morning"	Walter Maynard	0	6
10. The hemlock tree	Walter Maynard	0	6
11. Venetian boat song	W. G. Cusins	0	4
12. Rock them, rock them—"Golden slumbers"	Alice Mary Smith	0	6
13. Lover's melancholy	Alice Mary Smith	0	4
14. Still the angel stars are shining	Charles Gardner	0	6
15. We are waiting by the river	J. L. Hatton	0	4
16. Vesper bells are softly pealing	J. L. Hatton	0	4
17. Sunshine	A. H. D. Prendergast	0	6
18. Lady wake—"Lady wake, the village chimes"	Walter Maynard	0	6
19. Take thy banner	James Coward	0	6
20. Lovely spring is come again	Emanuel Aguilar	0	6
21. Fall on us, O night	W. J. Westbrook	0	6
22. Star that bringest home the bee	W. J. Westbrook	0	4
23. Queen of love	Alice Mary Smith	0	6
24. Hail, thou bright-eyed virgin morning	W. N. Watson	0	6
25. Waken, lords and ladies gay	Georgina Bairnsfather	0	6
26. Oh! slumber, my darling	Henry Leslie	0	6
27. The corsair's home	John Thomas	0	6
28. Spring and autumn	John Thomas	0	6
29. Resignation	J. G. Calcott	0	4
30. Go, lovely rose	Charles Gardner	0	6
31. Sweet stream that winds thro' yonder glade	Sir W. S. Bennett	0	6
32. Rock me to sleep	F. Berger	0	4
33. Summer rain	F. Berger	0	6
34. Spring	Henry Hiles	0	6
35. Think of me	Ciro Pinsuti	0	6
36. Old Daddy Longlegs	C. A. Macirone	0	6
37. May morning	J. L. Hatton	0	6
38. The golden days	J. L. Hatton	0	4
39. Good-night, good-night, beloved	Miss Lindsay	0	6
40. Maytime	S. Reay	0	6
41. The hour of thought	S. Reay	0	6
42. Arise, my love	F. Westlake	0	6
43. They whom He loved on earth	F. Westlake	0	6
44. Cynthia	J. B. Surgey	0	4
45. Roses of the sea	F. A. Jarvis	0	4
46. The crier	O. Prescott	0	6
47. A matin song	T. R. Prentice	0	6
48. Low dies the day	H. C. Banister	0	6
49. Wake, dearest love	Westley Richards	0	6
50. Love wakes and weeps	Sir G. A. Macfarren	0	6
51. The two stars	Walter Macfarren	0	6
52. Bells across the sea	Walter Macfarren	0	6
53. Beside a placid silver stream	C. H. Couldery	0	6
54. My lady sleeps	A. Schloesser	0	6
55. Of all the arts beneath the heaven	Sir W. S. Bennett	0	6
56. Love's young dream	E. W. Hamilton	0	6
57. O well I love the spring	J. L. Hatton	0	4
58. Pack clouds away	Henry Smart	0	4
59. Proud Maisie	Arthur O'Leary	0	6
60. On a day, alack the day	W. H. Cummings	0	6
61. Ask me no more	Cleveland Wigan	0	6
62. When the wind blows	William Horsley	0	6
63. Hear our prayer, O Heavenly Father	T. R. Prentice	0	6
64. And shall Trelawny die?	C. A. Macirone	0	6
65. Welcome day of joy and gladness. Christmas Carol	J. L. Hatton	0	6
66. And now we'll say good-night	Seymour Smith	0	6
67. My soul is sinking	Ignace Gibsone	0	4
68. The grasshopper	Ignace Gibsone	0	4
69. Beyond life's troubled sea (Six Sacred four-part songs.)	J. L. Hatton	0	6
70. Tears (Six Sacred four-part songs.)	J. L. Hatton	0	6
71. The star (Six Sacred four-part songs.)	J. L. Hatton	0	6
72. A sound of music floateth (Six Sacred four-part songs.)	J. L. Hatton	0	6
73. The rainbow (Six Sacred four-part songs.)	J. L. Hatton	0	6
74. The ladder (Six Sacred four-part songs.)	J. L. Hatton	0	6
75. Echoes	C. Gordon Hall	0	6
76. Who is Sylvia?	C. A. Macirone	0	6
77. The bonnie blackbird	J. L. Hatton	0	6
78. The home of song	Seymour Smith	0	6
79. Good evening (Humorous quartet)	Seymour Smith	0	6
80. Harvest time	W. G. Wood	0	4
81. Winter, grim winter	W. G. Wood	0	4
82. The meeting of the waters	Michael Watson	0	4
83. Evening's tranquil time	Michael Watson	0	4
84. Merrily oh!	Michael Watson	0	4
85. It was a lover and his lass	Michael Watson	0	4
86. The girl for me	Francesco Berger	0	4
87. The grand panjandrum	Edwin M. Lott	0	4
88. To the swallow	Seymour Smith	0	4
89. In the good old time	J. L. Hatton	0	4
90. Harvest time	W. Smallwood	0	4
91. If 'tis love to wish you near	S. E. Hudson	0	4
92. Under the maple tree	H. Baumer	0	6
93. Sweet June roses	Seymour Smith	0	4
94. Hush! the night draws on	R. H. Earnshaw	0	4
95. It was a lover and his lass	John E. West	0	4
96. The skylark	Henry Smart	0	4
97. The starry midnight hour	Henry Smart	0	4
98. Springtime is here	Henry Smart	0	4
99. Summer winds	Henry Smart	0	4
100. Breezes of evening	C. Oberthür	0	4
101. The bell's message	Ciro Pinsuti	0	6

SONGS OF NATURE.

TWELVE TWO-PART SONGS OR CHORUSES FOR SCHOOL CLASSES OR CHOIRS

BY

J. L. ROECKEL.

One Shilling net. Ditto, arranged Tonic Sol-fa, Sixpence net.

Catalogue of Vocal Part-Music forwarded gratis and post-free on application to—

EDWIN ASHDOWN, LIMITED,

NEW YORK: 1 and 3, UNION SQUARE. LONDON: HANOVER SQUARE. TORONTO: 122 and 124, YONGE STREET.

THE BRISTOL TUNE BOOK

EDITION 1891.

Containing 905 Tunes and Chants.

NOW READY.

THIRD SERIES, including Supplement 1881, containing 190 Tunes and 118 varieties of metre.

A COMPANION TO ALL HYMN BOOKS.

EDITION 1881.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 9.	Limp Cloth.. ..	4 0	No. 11.	Small Edition ..	3 0
„ 10.	Cloth Boards, red edges	5 0	„ 12.	Tonic Sol-fa ..	3 0

THIRD SERIES.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 13.	Limp Cloth ..	2 0	No. 16.	Tonic Sol-fa, limp cloth	1 6
„ 15.	Small Edition, limp cloth	1 6

COMPLETE EDITION, 1891.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 17.	Limp Cloth ..	5 0	No. 19.	Small Edition ..	3 6
„ 18.	Cloth Boards, red edges	6 0	„ 20.	Tonic Sol-fa ..	3 6

Communications and enquiries as to copyright, and also as to supplying at reduced prices, may be addressed to the Bristol Publishers.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Bristol: W. AND F. MORGAN, Clare Street.
And all Booksellers and Musicsellers.

Price 3s. 6d., cloth, red edges.

THE TUNE BOOK, with the additional Tunes as used at ST. ALBAN'S, HOLBORN, containing nearly 270 Tunes, for Long, Common, Short, and Peculiar Metres; together with several Gregorian Hymns and Antiphons; the Eight Gregorian Tones; the Music of the Reproaches; the Seven Last Words; and Litany Tunes, &c. London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

FOR MALE VOICE CHOIR.—THE NATIONAL ANTHEM, price 4d.; JUBILEE ODE, price 6d. net. By GEORGE RISELEY.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Twenty-third Edition.

JOULE'S COLLECTION OF 527 CHANTS, 57 RESPONSES, &c. Reduced price, 4s. 6d., paper cover; 6s., limp cloth; separate vocal parts, 2s. each.—Tonic Sol-fa Notation, Score, 1s. 6d.
The Chants are selected with due reference to the position of the Reciting-note.

THE PSALTER, PROPER PSALMS, HYMNS, and CANTICLES. Pointed for Chanting by B. ST. J. B. JOULE. Large type, price 2s. 6d. This Psalter, having been collated with the Sealed Books, is free from the errors contained in all other pointed Psalters, through printing from the incorrect copies commonly sold by the Stationers.

Tenth Edition.

JOULE'S DIRECTORIUM CHORI ANGLICANUM. 18mo, price 1s.; in cloth, 1s. 6d.

Seventh Edition.

JOULE'S DIRECTORIUM CHORI ANGLICANUM. 4to, in cloth, elegant, price 7s. 6d.

Seventh Edition.

THE ORDER FOR THE HOLY COMMUNION. Harmonised on a Monotone in a very simple manner for Parochial use. By B. ST. J. B. JOULE. Price 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Fourth Thousand.

MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in E flat, by WILLIAM S. VINNING, Mus. Bac., Cantab. Price 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Third Thousand.

VESPER HYMN. To be sung after Evensong. Words and music by GEORGE KETT. "A very charming hymn-tune."—Sir John Stainer. On card. Price One Penny.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Words alone, for congregational use, One Shilling per hundred, of the AUTHOR, 100, Gordon Road, Nunhead, S.E.

THE

OFFICE FOR THE HOLY COMMUNION

(Including Benedictus qui venit and Agnus Dei)

SET TO MUSIC IN THE KEY OF A FLAT

BY

BASIL HARWOOD.

Price One Shilling.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

GILL'S EASY VOLUNTARIES.—"Messiah," "Judas," "Elijah," "Creation," "St. Paul." 1s. each set of twenty Voluntaries.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

COMPOSITIONS for the PIANOFORTE, by RALPH H. BELLAIRS, Organist of Bradfield College.
Twelve Lyrical Sketches. Two books. 2s. each. ROBT. COCKS & Co.
Strelinka, Capriccio. J. WILLIAMS.

Published by BREITKOPF and HÄRTEL, Leipzig and London, 54, Great Marlborough Street, W.

T. F. BORDONEL'S

COMPLETE BENEDICTION SERVICE, "THE LORETTO."

Sung at the Pro-Cathedral, Liverpool; Pro-Cathedral, Clifton, &c.
Complete score for Soli, Chorus, Harp, and Organ, 4s. net.
Complete vocal score, 1s. 6d. net.

PENTECOST MASS

Dedicated, by special permission, to the Right Rev. Bernard O'Reilly, D.D., Lord Bishop of Liverpool.
Complete score for Soli, Chorus, and Organ, 5s. net.
Complete vocal score, 2s. net.

CHURCH MUSIC

BY

EDWARD BUNNETT, MUS.D., CANTAB.

ANTHEMS.

ADVENT.—"O Lord my God."	Four voices	3d.
CHRISTMAS.—"In the beginning."	Four voices	3d.
"The Lord is my Shepherd"	.. ..	3d.
"I was glad."	Four voices	3d.
„	„ Tonic Sol-fa	1½d.

SERVICES.

Te Deum laudamus in E.	Chant form	3d.
Benedictus and Jubilate in E	„ „	3d.
	Tonic Sol-fa.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in F	.. ..	1½d.
„ „ „	A	1½d.
„ „ „	E	1½d.

HYMNS.

Twenty-four Original Hymn Tunes	.. ..	6d.
Twelve Original Hymn Tunes	.. ..	3d.
Amen (on Card)	.. ..	1d.

ORGAN.

Three Short Organ Pieces	.. .. net	2s.
	Larghetto in A flat major.
	Allegretto Pastorale in A major.
	Andante con Moto in F major.
Minuetto	.. .. net	1s. 6d.
Twelve Short and Easy Pieces	.. .. „	2s. 0d.
Largo in E flat	.. .. „	1s. 0d.
Ave Maria	.. .. „	1s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CHURCH MUSIC

BY

F. A. BRASSEY. SALT, F.C.C.G.

MORNING and EVENING SERVICE in G. The Music being bright is very suitable for Christmas or Easter: TE DEUM and JUBILATE (partly in Unison and Harmony).. 4d.
KYRIE, GLORIA, GRATIAS, NICENE CREED (2nd edition) 3d.
(This popular and favourite setting is most effective and extremely easy, over 1,000 copies were sold within three months of the first advertisement.)
MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS (partly in Unison and Harmony) .. .. 3d.
(As sung at the Choral Festival of the C.C.G., and in regular use at Liverpool Cathedral and others; also at many leading London and Provincial Churches.)

Musical Standard says: "A very good set of Services. The free organ parts add dignity and force to the well-written vocal parts, and the whole series belong to a high order of Service music."

Church Musician says: "The whole is well within the capacity of ordinary parish choirs. . . . The four-part writing is very smooth and agreeable, and some of the harmonised portions are very effective, and the unisonal passages bold."

Liverpool Courier says: "A setting of the Church service, full of beauties. . . . The morning service is throughout a noble inspiration, most impressive contrasts being furnished in the delightful change to the key of E flat, in the passage 'Holy, holy,' of the 'The Deum,' and in the 'For the Lord is gracious' of the 'Jubilate,' which follows upon a particularly fine opening in unison. The 'Kyrie' is one which a congregation will sing after once hearing, while the 'Nicene Creed' is a composition the hearing of which will afford much pleasure. The evening service also is extremely beautiful."

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in F (chiefly unison). By the Rev. CHARLES P. BANKS, Precentor of St. Philip's, Sydenham. Price 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

MAUNDER'S CHURCH MUSIC.

"DEVOTIONAL," "GOOD," "EASY,"
"EFFECTIVE," "SINGABLE," "DIGNIFIED,"
"POPULAR," AND "MUSICIANLY."
Vide Religious and Musical Press.

Used at numerous Choral Festivals.

Two Settings of the Benedicite, Te Deum, Evening Service; a Christmas Carol, Easter Anthem, Harvest Anthem, and Short Communion Service.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Complete Lists and Specimens free on application to J. H. MAUNDER, 10, Manor Road, St. John's, London, S.E.

Published June, 1893.

THE OFFERTORY SENTENCES (complete, without the repetition of words). Set to music by G. GAFFE. Price 1s. Published by NOVELLO, EWER and Co., 1, Berners St., W., from whom copies may be obtained. Specimen copy sent post-free for eight stamps. Address, Mr. G. GAFFE, 4, London Road, St. Albans, Herts.

NEW CHURCH MUSIC. By J. CHARLES B. TIRBUTT, Mus. Bac.
EIGHT EASY OFFERTORY SENTENCES. Price Sixpence.

New Anthem for All Saints' Day.—THE RIGHTEOUS LIVE FOR EVERMORE. Price Sixpence.

"Perfectly easy of execution throughout and by no means ineffective. Commended to the notice of choirs of even moderate capacity."—Monthly Journal of I.S.M. for September.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in F. By ARTHUR CARNALL. Price 4d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

GREAT SUCCESS.

MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in D. By D. R. MUNRO.

"Simple and melodious. Welcome change."—Musical News.
"A musicianly piece of work."—Musical Standard.
"Partly unison. Bold and broad. Can recommend it."—Church Musician.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Price 3d.; specimen copy sent post-free from the COMPOSER, 78, West Princes Street, Glasgow.

PLAIN-SONG MUSIC. Edited by Rev. H. A. WALKER, M.A. Missa in Duplicibus, 3d.; Missa de Angelis, 3d.; Organ, 2s.; Missa Regia, 3d.; Organ, 2s.; Dumont's Mass, No. 2 (Easy, like Merbecke's Service), 3d.; Organ, 2s.; Te Deum Chant, from Alfieri, 3d.; Dies Iræ, Sequence for Solo Voices and Chorus in Faux Bourdon, 9d.; The Holy Communion, Rules for Chanting Collects, Epistles, and Gospels, and other music; Organ for Sursum Corda, Pater Noster, Versicles and Responses for Matins and Evensong, 9d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

GOUNOD'S ANTHEMS.

1. GLORY TO THEE, MY GOD, THIS NIGHT.
2. FOR EVER WITH THE LORD.
3. THE KING OF LOVE MY SHEPHERD IS.
4. THE PEACE OF GOD.

8vo size, with Organ Accompaniment, 4d. each; Sol-fa, 2d.
London: PHILLIPS and PAGE, 8, Oxford Market, W.

CHORAL MUSIC.

	s.	d.
THE OFFERTORY SENTENCES FROM THE GOSPELS	0	6
SANCTUS, BENEDICTUS, AGNUS DEI, GLORIA ..	0	9
TWENTY TUNES FOR WELL-KNOWN HYMNS ..	1	0
TE DEUM LAUDAMUS	0	4
HYMN TO PEACE. Aristophanes	1	0
THE DREAM. Sir Philip Sidney	0	3

By VYVYAN WALLIS POPHAM.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

GOUNOD'S ORGAN PIECES.

1. The King of Love .. .. Arranged by Dr. C. Steggall.
2. Glory to Thee .. .. .. „ „
3. The Peace of God .. .. „ Dr. Wm. Spark.
4. For ever with the Lord .. .. „ „
5. An Evening Lullaby .. .. „ „

Each 2s. net.
London: PHILLIPS and PAGE, 8, Oxford Market, W.

MUSICAL TIMES. Six years (from 1878 to 1884). What offers? H. G. Knight, Newbury.

IMMENSE SUCCESS
OF ARTHUR SOMERVELL'S
SHEPHERD'S CRADLE SONG

(The most successful Cradle Song of Modern Times)
In F and G. Price 2s. net.
30th Edition Now Ready.
Organ Arrangement of above, by the COMPOSER. Price 2s. net.

Just Published.

JOAN OF ARC

CANTATA FOR LADIES' VOICES.
Written by MARK H. COLLET
MUSIC BY
ARTHUR SOMERVELL.
Price 2s. net; Tonic Sol-fa Notation, 1s. net.

FOR CHRISTMAS.

O LOVELY VOICES OF THE SKY

CHRISTMAS CAROL FOR CHORUS WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT Words by FELICIA HEMANS
MUSIC BY
OLIVER KING.
3rd Edition Now Ready. Price 4d. net.

London: J. AND J. HOPKINSON,
34, 35, AND 36, MARGARET STREET, CAVENDISH SQ., W.

Just Published.

AH! LIKE A TENDER FLOWER THOU ART. Song. The words translated from Heine by C. M., AIKMAN, M.A.; the music composed by MARGUERITE MARIGOLD. Price 2s. net.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

SONGS by BENJAMIN PARSONS.—"O Time and Change." Words by W. E. HENLEY. Price 2s. "The Winds' Story." Words by ALICE E. GILLINGTON. Price 3s. "Sleep, sleep." Words by ASHMORE RUSSAN. Price 2s. 6d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Dedicated (by permission) to the Right Rev. Lord Bishop of Ripon.

NEW SONG, by JEAN CHARLES, THE LORD SHALL COMFORT ZION, with Chorus ad lib., suitable for Church Choirs. Price 2s. net; post-free, 2s. 1d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

BAGATELLES

FOR VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE
COMPOSED BY PERCY PITT.
(Op. 1.)

CONTENTS.

Air de Ballet.	March.
Lamento.	Amoroso.
Romance.	Gavotte.
Souvenir.	Moto Perpetuo.

Price Three Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

SONATA for PIANO and VIOLIN (Op. 4), 5s. "A Sonata in D for piano and violin, by W. H. Speer, is an effective piece of work, and the first and last movements are especially good, a somewhat rare merit in these days when the romantic side of music has so many attractions for young composers."—The Times. "A really noble composition in the best classical style."—Saturday Review. "A piece of excellent workmanship, of sustained interest, beauty, and effectiveness."—New Quarterly Musical Review.
London: BREITKOPF and HÄRTEL, 54, Great Marlborough Street, W.

THE ORGANIST'S HANDBOOK of Accompaniments to the Creeds, Lord's Prayer, and Kyrie. Arranged by H. W. JAMES. Price 1s. HART and Co., 22, Paternoster Row, E.C.

OPINIONS OF THE LONDON AND PROVINCIAL PRESS

ON

A. R. GAUL'S CANTATA

"UNA"

COMPOSED FOR AND PRODUCED AT THE NORWICH MUSICAL FESTIVAL, 1893.

"This composer sees no reason to change the method which has popularised his name wherever choral societies need music that is musicianly, melodious, and within the scope of moderate executive means. The result, in the present case, leaves no doubt that into all the places which know his previous compositions 'Una' will find a way and become as much a favourite as its forerunners. . . . Mr. Gaul considers before all things the elegance and symmetry of his melodic phrases. . . . The two orchestral numbers—an Introduction and an Intermezzo entitled 'Early morning in the woods'—are both in the gentle, flowing, and melodious style which seems the natural expression of Mr. Gaul's musical feeling."—Musical Times.

"To the list of works which have proved widely acceptable, 'Una' should be added, for the flow of pleasant unaffected tune and the simple and suave part-writing are just as noteworthy as in 'The Holy City' and 'Joan of Arc.'"—Athenæum.

"Over the country there exist hundreds of choral associations who demand music within their means. For these Mr. Gaul has catered, and it only remains to inquire whether he has done his work well. This undoubtedly can be answered in the affirmative. The best appreciated numbers to-night were an 'Angelus' chorus, with bell accompaniment; a tenor ballad, a duet for the tenor and contralto, a soprano solo for Una, and a chorus of the forest people with waltz refrain."—Daily News.

"Where our townsman is mostly at home is in his charming flow of melody and effective and flowing choral writing. The whole work is from beginning to end replete with delicious passages, and will prove one of the best productions from his fertile pen. No one knows better than Mr. Gaul what is suitable and acceptable to choral societies and what the masses like. He writes for his people, and his success lies in that direction. We may safely predict for 'Una' a similar popularity to that accorded to 'The Holy City.'"—Birmingham Daily Mail.

"Without doubt the Concert of Wednesday evening was the most popular feature of the whole Festival, for in addition to the attraction afforded by the appearance of M. Paderewski, the interest of the Norwich people was aroused to the fullest by the production of Mr. Gaul's 'Una,' a new work specially written for the occasion by a fellow-citizen by birth, and a distinguished musician as well. Every seat was occupied, and the audience included distinguished members of society, social and artistic, who, as the evening advanced, threw off all restraint and united together in giving a hearty East Anglican welcome to the Norwich musician and his artistic associate, M. Paderewski. The performance of Mr. Gaul's new work was a self-evident success. Mr. Gaul has his hand in a favourable position on the pulse of the public, and no one is better acquainted with the qualifications which go to make up a successful Cantata. 'Una' has already been described in detail; it is only necessary to add that the performance was quite in accordance with the merits of the work. The chorus, to whom no small share is allotted, entered thoroughly into the spirit of their work. The Angelus chorus made a lasting impression on its hearers, the introduction of the campanels (which were especially made for the occasion by Messrs. Martineau and Smith, of Birmingham) giving a most picturesque colouring to the whole. The choral numbers, including 'Let us hasten,' and the tuneful Finale, were admirably sung, while the heartiness which marked the performance augured well for the future of the work, and was also shown in the reception given to Mr. Gaul at the conclusion, when he was heartily congratulated. Further evidence of the favour with which the Cantata is regarded may be inferred from the announcement that six performances of it have already been arranged."—Norfolk Chronicle and Norwich Gazette.

"We believe that Mr. Gaul has attained greater popularity with small English provincial choral societies than any other composer, living or dead."—London Daily Graphic.

"Very pleasing it is, abounding in smoothly-flowing passages, and there is no doubt at all but that it will become very popular with the smaller choral societies, for which the composer has done a great deal already, and thereby placed the musical world under an obligation which cannot be gainsaid. There are many steps to the temple of the Muses, and those who render assistance at the middle height do as great a service as those who chant pæans of praise at the summit."—Norwich Argus.

"Musicianly, melodious, and pleasing. As a composer of easy cantatas for amateur choral societies, Mr. Gaul has for a long time been well known, and in this respect he has done good service to the divine art. This new work of his, 'Una,' is quite one of his best."—Musical Standard.

"The general features of the work are those we have had occasion to notice before. Refinement and finish in the vocal writing, the accompaniment subordinated to the voices, whether solo or chorus; elegant part-writing, and well-rounded phrasing. The form is that of the classic school, before dramatic demands worked the revolution so conspicuous in the music of to-day. Mr. Gaul has apparently set himself limits he has no desire to overstep, but within those limits he moves with always increasing freedom; and the conviction is borne upon one that if he sought to be more ambitious he has the power to achieve his aim. . . . Distinguished by sound musicianship, if also with artistic restraint, and choral societies will heartily welcome this latest product of his pen."—Birmingham Daily Post.

"The pleasant and unaffected vein of melody noticeable in his 'Joan of Arc,' 'The Holy City,' and other works is evidently not exhausted. The Cantata may be heartily recommended to the notice of the innumerable smaller bodies which now flourish in every corner of the United Kingdom."—Standard.

"Is there not a definite mission for those who make good music possible without a London orchestra and expensive principals? I think there is."—Norfolk Daily Standard.

"Mr. Gaul is a composer who has devoted much of his time and talent to the provision of easy and popular music for choral societies of moderate executive powers. Those societies need a caterer able to supply them with pieces suited to their means, and they have long shown that Mr. Gaul is a composer whom they are glad to accept. 'Una' will find its way amongst them easily."—Daily Telegraph.

	s.	d.		s.	d.
Paper cover .. .. price	2	6	Tonic Sol-fa .. .. price	1	0
,, boards .. .. ,,	3	0	Vocal parts .. .. each ,,	1	0
,, cloth, gilt.. .. .. ,,	4	0	Words only .. .. per 100 ,,	7	6

The loan of Instrumental Parts may be had on application to the Composer, and full liberty is given to perform this Cantata and to insert the words in any programme without further permission.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

READY ON DECEMBER 14.

A

SPECIAL NUMBER

OF THE

MUSICAL TIMES

DEVOTED TO

HANDEL

HIS LIFE AND WORKS

EDITED BY

JOSEPH BENNETT

WILL BE ISSUED ON

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 14.

THE NUMBER WILL CONTAIN NUMEROUS ILLUSTRATIONS, CONSISTING OF PORTRAITS, VIEWS, FAC-SIMILES OF MANUSCRIPTS, AND LETTERS OF GREAT INTEREST, HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

Postage, 1½d.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

Printed by Novello, Ewer and Co., at 69 & 70, Dean Street (W.), and published at 1, Berners Street (W.), and 80 & 81, Queen Street (E.C.)
Sold also by Kent and Co., Paternoster Row (E.C.)—Wednesday, November 1, 1893.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR.

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH.

No. 610.—Vol. 34. Registered for transmission abroad. DECEMBER 1, 1893. Price 4*d.*; Post-free, 5*d.* Annual Subscription, Postage-free, 5*s.*

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY,

ROYAL ALBERT HALL.

Patron: HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH, K.G.
Conductor: Sir JOSEPH BARNBY.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 7, at Eight,

HANDEL'S "JEPHTHA"

WITH ADDITIONAL ACCOMPANIMENTS

BY SIR ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

Artists: Mrs. HENSCHEL, Miss M. HOARE, Miss AGNES JANSON, Miss F. OLIVER, Mr. EDWARD LLOYD, and Mr. NORMAN SALMOND. Organist, Mr. HODGE.

Prices: 10s. 6d., 7s., 5s., 4s.; Gallery (Promenade only), 1s.

MONDAY, JANUARY 1, at Eight,

HANDEL'S "MESSIAH."

Artists: Madame ALBANI, Madame BELLE COLE, Mr. PHILIP NEWBURY, and Mr. PLUNKET GREENE.

Prices: Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Arena, 7s.; Balcony (reserved), 5s.; Unreserved, 4s.; Gallery (Promenade only), 1s.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC,

TENTERDEN STREET, W.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patrons: HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN AND THE ROYAL FAMILY.
President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF SAXE-COBURG AND GOTHA (DUKE OF EDINBURGH, K.G.).
Principal: Dr. A. C. MACKENZIE.

Fortnightly Concerts, Saturdays, December 2 and 16, at 8.
Lecture every Wednesday at 3.
Orchestral Concert at St. James's Hall, Tuesday, December 19, at 3.
Sainton-Dolby Scholarship, for Contraltos. Last day for entry, December 15.
Lent Term Entrance Examination, January 8, at 11.
Entry Forms and all information may be obtained from the Secretary.

F. W. RENAUT, Secretary.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC,

KENSINGTON GORE.

Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1883.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
Director: Sir GEORGE GROVE, D.C.L., LL.D.

Schumann's Opera "Genoveva" will be performed by the Pupils at the Drury Lane Theatre Royal, on Wednesday, December 6, at 1.30.
Fourteen Open Free Scholarships will be competed for in February, 1894. Last day for receiving application forms, January 6.
Examination for Certificate of Proficiency (A.R.C.M.), March 27 to 31, 1894.
Regulations and official entry forms may be obtained from Mr. George Watson, Registrar, at the College.

CHARLES MORLEY, Hon. Sec.

THE GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Established by the Corporation of London, 1880.

Principal: Sir JOSEPH BARNBY.

The Michaelmas Term commenced Monday, September 25.
For prospectuses and all further particulars apply to the Secretary.

By order of the Committee,
CHARLES P. SMITH, Secretary.

Victoria Embankment, E.C.

SHEFFIELD SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION.—Tune Competition, Whitsuntide, 1894.—The Committee offer prizes of £3, £1, and £1. Particulars, with copies of suggested hymns, on application to me. Entrance fee, 1s., to cover postages, &c. Tunes to be forwarded by January 10, 1894. C. B. Hobbis, 53, Brunswick Street, Sheffield.

THE COMMITTEE of the WESLEYAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION, Manchester, are prepared to receive ORIGINAL TUNES for their 1894 Selection for WHITSUNTIDE and ANNIVERSARIES.

One Guinea will be paid for each Accepted Tune, to become the property of the Committee.

Compositions to be sent to Mr. S. Filzey, 79, Mosley Street, Manchester, not later than December 31.

THE ASSOCIATED BOARD

OF THE

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC AND ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC

FOR

LOCAL EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC.

President—H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

ASSOCIATED BOARD:

THE RIGHT HON. THE LORD CHARLES BRUCE, Chairman.
A. C. MACKENZIE, Esq., Mus. Doc., Principal of R.A.M.
Sir GEORGE GROVE, D.C.L., LL.D., Director of R.C.M.

Professor JAMES DEWAR, F.R.S., &c.,
ALBERTO RANDEGGER, Esq.,
THOMAS THRELFALL, Esq.,
FREDERICK WESTLAKE, Esq.,
His Honour Judge MEADOWS WHITE, Q.C., } R.A.M.

EDWARD W. HAMILTON, Esq., C.B.,
Sir WALTER PARRATT, Mus. Bac.,
C. HUBERT H. PARRY, Esq., M.A., Mus. Doc.,
Sir ARTHUR SULLIVAN, Mus. Doc.,
FRANKLIN TAYLOR, Esq., } R.C.M.

HONORARY TREASURER:
CHARLES MORLEY, Esq.

HONORARY AUDITOR:
Sir CHARLES LISTER RYAN, K.C.B., Comptroller and Auditor-General.

SECRETARY:
GEORGE WATSON, Esq. Central Office, 52, New Bond St., London, W.

BANKERS:
BANK OF ENGLAND, Western Branch, Burlington Gardens, London, W.

SYLLABUS A.

LOCAL CENTRE EXAMINATIONS.

LAST DAY FOR RECEIVING FORMS OF APPLICATION FROM CANDIDATES—

JANUARY 31, 1894.

THE PRELIMINARY LOCAL EXAMINATION (Paper Work) will take place at the various Centres on February 21, 1894.

THE FINAL LOCAL EXAMINATIONS will commence on and after March 27, 1894.

SYLLABUS B.

LOCAL SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS.

LAST DAY FOR RECEIVING APPLICATIONS FOR REGISTRATION FROM SCHOOLS AND TEACHERS OF MUSIC—

FEBRUARY 28, 1894.

THE LOCAL SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS will be arranged in Circuits, and conducted once during the year by a School Examiner appointed by the Board.

They will be held during four periods as follows:—

(a) December.
(b) March, April.
(c) June, July.
(d) October, November.

Schools and Teachers will, so far as is practicable, be allowed to select the period which they prefer for Examination, provided that they notify the same to the Secretary within seven days after receiving notice that their Applications to be Registered have been accepted.

NOTE.—The Board have under consideration the desirability of organizing a department for examining and reporting on the general music teaching in Registered Schools, without granting any individual Certificates. Heads of Registered Schools desirous of taking advantage of this are requested to send in their names, with full particulars as to the probable number of pupils, to the Secretary at the earliest possible date.

Copies of either Syllabus may be obtained at the Central Office, 52, New Bond Street, London, W.

GEORGE WATSON, Secretary.

SPOHR'S LAST JUDGMENT will be sung at Christ Church, Westminster Bridge Road, December 4, 11, and 18. Doors open at 8. Admission free.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES.

MISS FLORENCE ARMRIDING (Soprano)
(Pupil of Mr. Shakespeare and Medalist, R.A.M.).
Oratorios, Concerts, Lessons, &c., at 20, Conduit Street. Address, Leicester Villa, Ealing, W.

MISS MAUDE BALLARD, A.G.S.M. (Soprano)
(Cert. of Merit and Silver Medal, Cert. of Proficiency and Gold Medal, G.S.M.; Gold and Silver Medals, L.A.M.)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c., 13, Herbert Road, Stockwell, S.W.
Please note Change of Address.

MADAME BARTER (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., Westbury Road, Wood Green, N.

MADAME CARRIE BLACKWELL (Soprano)
(Pupil of the late Madame Sainton-Dolby).
Orchestral, Oratorio, Ballad Concerts, &c., 4A, Sloane Square, S.W.

MADAME MARIE BRETON (Soprano)
"Happy Sunday Hour" Sacred Recital,
Vocal and Pianoforte,
16, Zetland Street, Southport.

MADAME CONWAY (Soprano)
New address, 444, Moss Lane East, Manchester.

MISS MABEL CROSS (Soprano)
(Of the Royal College of Music, London).
For Oratorios, Cantatas, Concerts, &c., Winsford, Cheshire.

MISS EMILY DAVIES (Soprano)
Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., address, Severn House, Seven Sisters' Road, Finsbury Park, N.

MADAME ELEANOR DAY (Soprano)
Concerts, Private Lessons, &c. Strathaven, Hendon, N.W.

MISS AMY B. DEVONSHIRE, L.R.A.M. (Sop.)
For Concerts, Oratorios, Teaching, &c., 110, Broomwood Road, Wandsworth Common, S.W.

MISS ADA DUMVILLE (Soprano)
For Oratorio, Ballad, and Operatic Concerts. Terms, press opinions, references, &c., 14, Duke Street, Broughton, Manchester.

MISS MARJORIE EATON (Soprano)
For Concerts, Oratorios, &c., 237, Katherine St., Ashton-under-Lyne. Engaged: November 23, Gloucester; 25 and 26, Bristol; December 2, Bolton; 12, Salford; 13, Chepstow; 15, Lynn; 16 and 17, Lincoln; 21, Newport (Mon.); January 9, Huddersfield; 26, Stonehaven; 27, Glasgow; February 6, Sheffield; London, Manchester, Liverpool, &c.

MRS. FITZURSE (Soprano)
26, Spencer Place, Leeds.

MISS FUSSELLE (Soprano)
Licentiate (Artist) R.A.M.
For Concerts, Oratorios, &c. 37, Harrington Square, N.W.

MRS. GLOVER-EATON, L.R.A.M. (Soprano)
Of Worcester Triennial Festivals. Pupil of Signor Garcia.
Oratorios, Concerts, Lessons, &c. Address, Stourport, and Britannia House, Worcester.

MADAME MADELINE HARDY (Soprano)
27, Loughborough Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS HEROD (Soprano)
Address, Woodley, near Stockport; or, Forsyth's, Manchester.

MISS BESSIE HOLT ("The Lancashire Soprano")
Address: Rawtenstall, near Manchester; or, 6, Ducie Street, Clapham, London, S.W.

MISS HONEYBONE (Soprano)
For Oratorios and Concerts, address, 41, Hampden St., Nottingham; or, Holm Leigh, Earlsfield Road, Wandsworth Common, London.

MISS JESSIE HOTINE (Soprano)
Oratorios, Concerts, Operettas, Banquets, &c.
Address, Craignorth, 33, Upper Bedford Place, Russell Square, W.C.

MADAME MINNIE JONES (Soprano)
"Possesses a voice of great purity and sweetness."—Chronicle.
Address, Grove Lodge, Seven Sisters' Road, London, N.

MISS EMILY MACFARLANE (Soprano)
(Pupil of Henry Blower, Esq.).
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes. Benallyn, New Barnet, London, N.

MISS FLORENCE MONK (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., Glebe Field, Stoke Newington, N.

MISS ANNIE NORLEDGE (Soprano)
(Pupil of W. Shakespeare, Esq.)
For Oratorios and Ballad Concerts, At Homes, and Musical Parties.
Address, 221, South Lambeth Road, London, S.W., and Roseleigh, Newark-on-Trent. Telegrams—Norledge, London.

MISS LILY PEARCE, L.R.A.M. (Soprano)
(From the Weimar Conservatorium).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c. 229, Hyde Park Road, Leeds.

MISS MINNIE ROBINSON (Soprano)
Parepa-Rosa Gold Medalist, R.A.M.
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c. 29, King St., Portman Sq., W.

MISS AMY SARGENT (Soprano)
124, Marylebone Road, N.W.

MISS LIZZIE SCOTT (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c. 38, York Road, Northampton.

MISS FANNIE SELLERS (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Recitals, Concerts, &c., Crag Cottage, Knaresbro'.

MISS SIMPSON (Soprano)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c.
For terms, apply, Miss Simpson, Todmorden.

MISS ELLA R. SWARBRECK (Soprano)
Essex Villa, Leicester Road, New Barnet.

MISS GEORGINA TEAR (Soprano)
33, Loughborough Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS AGNES WALKER (Soprano)
(Pupil of Fred. Walker, Esq.)
"Miss Agnes Walker was rewarded with an encore for her capital rendering of 'The Moorish Maid.'"—Luton Times.
104, Lewisham High Road, New Cross, S.E.

MISS ETHEL WEBB (Soprano)
Concerts, &c. 14, Balmoral Road, Nottingham.

MISS GERTRUDE WESLEY (Soprano & Harpist)
(Great-granddaughter of Samuel Wesley).
For Oratorio or Ballad Concerts. Testimonials and Critiques from 53, High Street, Doncaster.

MISS MARY WILLIS (Mezzo-Soprano)
For Oratorios, Operas, Concerts, or Private Lessons, address, 9, Rochester Terrace, Camden Road, N.W.

MISS M. L. BOOKER, L.R.A.M. (Contralto)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, care of Mr. Wm. Marriott, 295, Oxford Street, W.; or, Shirebrook Villa, Heeley, Sheffield.

MISS LILIAN CLOSE (Contralto)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c. 134, Goldhawk Road, W.

MISS FLORENCE CROFT (Contralto)
MR. D'ARCY CLAYTON (Tenor)
88, Lady Margaret Road, Tufnell Park, N.

MISS TERESA DEVIENE (Contralto)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c. 70, St. George's Avenue, Tufnell Park, N.

MISS EMMIE FINNEY (Contralto)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c.
42, Pembridge Road, Notting Hill Gate, W.

MISS EMILY FOXCROFT (Contralto)
76, Calabria Road, Highbury, N.

MISS ADELENE GLOVER (Contralto)
(Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden).
For Concerts, Operatic Recitals, &c., address, 5, Brudenell View, Hyde Park, Leeds.

MISS LILIAN HOVEY (Contralto)
(Medalist, R.A.M.; Pupil of Mr. Richard Cummings, A.R.A.M.)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 82, Norfolk Road, Sheffield.

MISS FANNY MILLSON (Contralto)
For Oratorios, Ballads, &c., address, Point House, Brigg.

MISS ANNIE NORTHCROFT (Contralto)
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, &c., 38, Gunter Grove, Chelsea.

MISS RINA ROBINSON (Contralto)
For Oratorio and Ballad Concerts. 80, Tufnell Park Road, N.
References kindly permitted to Dr. A. H. Mann, Dr. E. H. Turpin, and Mr. F. A. W. Docker.

MISS KITTY SABINE (Contralto)
Ballad Concerts, At Homes, &c. 34, Stockwell Park Road, Clapham.

MISS HELEN SAUNDERS (Contralto)
(Sainton-Dolby Prizeholder, and Sub-Professor, R.A.M.)
Oratorios, Banquets, At Homes, &c., 25, Cloudesley St., Barnsbury, N.

MADAME and MR. SUTTON SHEPLEY
(Contralto and Baritone).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 97, Dalberg Road, Brixton, S.W.

MISS LOTTIE SWEENEY (Contralto)
(Pupil of Madame Sainton-Dolby).
For Concerts, Oratorios, &c., address, Miss Sweeney, Vocalist, Armley, near Leeds.

MISS LILIAN VERKRÜZEN (Contralto)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., 119, Petherton Road, Highbury, N.

MISS ALICE WOLSTENHOLME (Contralto)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Radcliffe, Manchester.

MR. AUGUSTUS BALFE (Tenor)
For Oratorios, Ballad Concerts, Banquets, At Homes, address, care of Organist, Brasted, Kent.

MR. CHARLES BLAGBRO (Tenor)
Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Bradford, Yorkshire.

MR. RIDSDALE BOWLEY (Tenor)
For Concerts, Cantatas, Oratorios, &c.
Weaste, Manchester; or, Forsyth Bros., Deansgate, Manchester.

MR. BEN. BURY, L.R.A.M. (Tenor)
Oratorios, Ballads, &c. Church, Lancs.

MR. TOM CHILD
(Principal Tenor, Parish Church, Leeds).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Parish Church, Leeds.

MR. HERBERT CLINCH (Tenor)
Oratorio. Ballads, &c., address, 41, Frederick St., St. John's Wood, N.W.

MR. OTTO DENE (Tenor)
(Pupil of Sims Reeves, Esq.)
Is open to accept Engagements for Oratorio, Ballad, and Operatic Concerts.

"Hymn of Praise."—"Mr. Dene was in excellent voice, and sang with splendid execution and fine taste. He was heard to great advantage in 'Sing ye praise.'"—Rawtenstall Times, November 18, 1893.

"Mr. Dene sang his solos with expression and great ease, and it was immediately evident that he was entirely at home with his part, and thoroughly capable of taking it."—Free Press, November 18, 1893.

"Mr. Dene's rendition of 'Come into the Garden, Maud,' and 'My Queen' elicited loud and continued applause."—Rossendale Gazette, November 18, 1893.

For terms, address, 151, Milkwood Road, Herne Hill, S.E.

MR. SINCLAIR DUNN (Scottish Tenor)
For Oratorios, Opera, his popular Entertainments, or Concerts, and the "Balfe Quartet," address, 67, Berners Street, W.

MR. J. B. FEARNLEY (Tenor)
Concerts, Oratorios, &c., address, Cathedral, Rochester.

MR. WILLIAM FELL (Tenor)
(Lay-Vicar of Westminster Abbey and late Choral Scholar of King's College, Cambridge).
For Oratorios, Concerts, At Homes, and Private Lessons, address, 50, Bessborough Street, South Belgravia, S.W.

MR. LYON FERRAND
(Tenor)
63, St. John's Villas, N.

MR. J. MELLOR (Tenor)
Eccleshill, Bradford, Yorkshire.

MR. T. OLDROYD (Tenor)
For Oratorios and Concerts, address, The Cathedral, Rochester.

MR. GEO. RILEY (Tenor)
Oratorios, Ballad Concerts, address, 36, Chetwynd Terrace, Leeds.

MR. BEN. ROBERTS
(Principal Tenor, Liverpool Cathedral).
For Oratorio, Ballad, and Operatic Concerts. The Cathedral, L'pool.

MR. JOHN JAS. SIMPSON (Solo Tenor)
Ripon Cathedral.
For terms and vacant dates, address Cathedral.

MR. HARRY STUBBS, R.C.M. (Tenor)
(Of St. George's Chapel, Windsor).
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, 18, The Cloisters.

MR. HERBERT ALDRIDGE (Baritone)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, South Street, Romford, Essex.

MR. ROBERT W. BAKER (Baritone)
(Pupil of Mr. Wm. Shakespeare).
For Oratorios and Concerts. For press notices, terms, and dates, address, 77, Alexandra Road, Manchester.

MR. WARWICK CEIGH (Baritone)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c. 21, Sewardstone Rd., Victoria Pk., N.E.

MR. GORDON HELLER (Baritone)
(Of St. James's Hall Concerts, London; late Pupil of Hy. Blower, Esq.)
For Oratorios, &c., address, 20, Blenheim Terrace, Leeds.

MR. W. THORNTON (Baritone)
Address, care of Wood and Marshall, Bradford.

MR. JOHN FELLOWS (Bass-Baritone)
For Oratorio, Ballad, and Operatic Concerts, address, Leamington Spa.

MR. JOHN BROWNING
(Principal Bass, Leeds Parish Church Choir).

"Elijah."—"Mr. Browning scored a distinct triumph in the very trying work allotted to the baritone, the declamatory sentences of the Prophet being dramatically rendered. He certainly proved himself to be one of the best representatives of Elijah Sheffield has heard."—Sheffield and Rotherham Independent, April 15, 1893.

For Oratorios, Concerts, &c., address, Parish Church, Leeds.

MR. JNO. W. GREENWOOD (Bass)
For Oratorios, Ballads, &c. 140, Queen's Road, Halifax.

MR. WILLIAM ROWE
(Principal Bass, College Chapel, Eton). For Oratorios, Concerts, Masonic Banquets, &c. Address, Edgewater, Clewer.

MISS HILDA MEREDITH (Violinist)
(Medalist, R.A.M., and Pupil of the late Mons. Sainton).
For Concerts, At Homes, &c., 52, Holmdale Rd., W. Hampstead.

MISS A. MARIE HOLLOWAY (Solo Violinist)
At liberty for Concerts, At Homes, &c.
For vacant dates and notices, address, 84, Tierney Road, Streatham, S.W.; and Bull's House, St. Ives, Hunts.

MISS KATE OULD (Violoncellist)
(Holder of Medals and Certificate from the Royal Academy of Music).
Solos, Ensemble Playing, and Lessons. For terms, address, 28, Lansdowne Gardens, Clapham Road, S.W.

Opinions of the Press.

"Miss Kate Ould, a promising member of a famous musical family, was much applauded for her violoncello solo."—The Times, Sept. 21, 1893.

"Miss Kate Ould, a clever young violoncellist, played with much taste and refinement."—Morning Post, Sept. 21.

"The only instrumental solo was an Adagio, by Bargiel, gracefully played by Miss Kate Ould. This young lady displayed a sympathetic tone and neat artistic phrasing, well earning her recall."—Sunday Times, Sept. 24, 1893.

"Miss Kate Ould, a young violoncellist of considerable talents, and still greater promise, played an Adagio by Woldemar Bargiel very charmingly."—Daily News, Sept. 21, 1893.

"Miss Kate Ould, a worthy representative of a musical family, displayed great ability in her violoncello solo."—Era, Sept. 23, 1893.

"Miss Kate Ould rendered effectively an Adagio by Bargiel."—Standard, Sept. 21.

"Miss Kate Ould showed not only excellent musical taste by a clever mastery of the cello in the piece styled 'Czárdas,' hand following sentiment with notable self-possession and refinement of feeling."—Daily Chronicle, March 24, 1893.

MR. JOHN H. COCKERILL (Harpist)
(Sir Chas. Hallé's Orchestra),
48, Carter Street, Greenheys, Manchester.

MR. C. HUGH ROWCLIFFE, F.C.O.
(Accompanist, Organ and Pianoforte).
For Concerts, Banquets, &c., 76, Brighton Road, Stoke Newington, N.

MISS VINNIE BEAUMONT (Soprano), Point House, Brigg. For Oratorios, Ballads, Organ Recitals, &c.

MISS JULIA JONES (Soprano) begs that all communications respecting Oratorios, Concerts, Vocal Recitals, &c., will be addressed to 15, St. Thomas Road, Finsbury Park, N.

MADAME AGNES LARKCOM requests that all communications respecting Concerts or Lessons may be addressed to her at 53, Westbourne Park Villas, W.

MADAME LAURA SMART (Soprano) requests that all communications respecting Oratorio, Operatic Recital, or Ballad Concerts be addressed, 106, Bolingbroke Grove, Wandsworth Common, S.W.; or, 50, Church Street, Liverpool.

MADAME PHEROZE LANGRANA (Mezzo-Soprano) (Pupil of Mr. Sims Reeves) and Miss JEANNE POTTINGER (A.A. Oxon.), Pianist and Accompanist, are open for Engagements at At Homes, Receptions, &c. They also undertaket o supply other Artists and provide an entire Programme. For particulars and terms for Lessons, apply to Miss Pottinger, 2, Powis Gardens, Bayswater, W.; and to Madame Pheroze Langrana, 84, Kensington Gardens Square, W.

MR. and MRS. HENRY BEAUMONT (Miss Adelaide Mullen), principal Tenor and Soprano, Burns-Crotty Grand Opera Company, disengaged December 16. Long recess. For Opera, Oratorio, Concerts, &c., address, 59, Elgin Crescent, W.

MR. W. CARTLEDGE-WHITE (Tenor) begs to announce his CHANGE OF ADDRESS to 7, Guildford Road, South Lambeth, S.W., where all communications respecting Concert, Opera, and Oratorio Engagements should be addressed.

MR. E. DUNKERTON (Tenor, Lincoln Cathedral) is booking Engagements for present season. Engaged: Skegness, Woodhall Spa (twice), Newark, Market Rasen, Lincoln, Nottingham (twice), Long Eaton, Stamford, Market Harborough, Ingleby, Grantham, Halifax, Sleaford. Other engagements pending. Address, Cathedral, Lincoln.

MR. JAMES GAWTHROP (Tenor), Gentleman of Her Majesty's Chapel Royal, St. James's Palace, begs to announce his CHANGE of ADDRESS to 5, Hazelmere Road, Brondesbury Road, N.W.

MR. T. W. HANSON (Tenor Vocalist), of St. Paul's Cathedral, the Saturday Popular Concerts, &c., begs to announce his CHANGE of ADDRESS to 32, Dalmore Road, West Dulwich, S.E. The Guardian says:—"Mr. Hanson possesses a voice of the purest quality, and always sings with refined taste and sound judgment."—Albert Hall Choral Society's Concerts.

MR. JOSEPH HEALD (Tenor) requests that all communications respecting Engagements for Oratorio, Ballad and Smoking Concerts, &c., be addressed to his residence, 5, Hyde Park Mansions, Marble Arch, W.

MR. ROBERT GRICE having resigned his appointment in St. Paul's Cathedral Choir, is now at liberty to devote the whole of his time to Concert Work, and is prepared to provide complete party for Oratorios, Concerts, Dinners, &c. For terms and vacant dates, address, 38, Tytherton Road, Tufnell Park, N.

MR. ROBERT GRICE (Baritone), of the Royal Choral Society, Crystal Palace, St. James's Hall, and other important Musical Societies' Concerts, in addition to his numerous London engagements, will sing at Bournemouth ("Messiah"), Sheffield (Ballads), Wolverhampton ("Redemption"), Stockport ("Creation"), Glasgow ("Flying Dutchman"), Walsall ("Elijah"), High Wycombe ("Seasons"), Maidenhead ("Seasons"), York ("Messiah"), Nottingham (Ballads), Birmingham (Ballads), West Bromwich ("King Arthur"), Redhill ("Creation"), Fenny Stratford ("Messiah"), Exeter ("Judas"), Manchester (Ballads), &c. For vacant dates (en route), address, 38, Tytherton Road, Tufnell Park, N.

MR. WALTER HEAD (Baritone) begs to notify CHANGE of ADDRESS to 103, Gaisford Street, Camden Road, N.W.

MR. ROBERT GRICE (Baritone) requests that all communications respecting Engagements for Oratorios, Concerts, Masonic and other Dinners, be addressed to 38, Tytherton Road, Tufnell Park, N.

CHANGE of ADDRESS.—MR. JOHN COATES (Baritone) requests that all communications respecting Oratorio, Opera, and other Engagements be addressed to 59, Comyn Road, Wandsworth Common, S.W.

MR. J. G. HEWSON (Baritone). Engaged: Nov. 20, "Creation," Milnrow; 25, Ballads, Manchester; Dec. 2, Ballads, Kirkham; 7, Holmfirth, "Building of the Ship"; 10, pending; 12, Chorlton, "Messiah"; 14, Ludlow, "Hero and Leander"; 20, Walkden; 21, Newport, Mon., "Mors et Vita"; 24, pending; 25, pending. 276, Hyde Road, Manchester.

CHANGE of ADDRESS.—MR. DAN PRICE (Baritone, of Westminster Abbey) begs to announce his CHANGE of ADDRESS to 9, Clarendon Road, Holland Park, W., where all communications respecting Concert, Masonic, Oratorio Engagements, and Private Lessons should be addressed.

Telephone No. 496.

MR. BINGLEY SHAW (Baritone), CONCERT AGENT and MANAGER, Pianoforte Warehouse, Nottingham.

MR. EGBERT ROBERTS (Bass) requests that all communications respecting Oratorios, Opera, or Concerts be addressed, 45, Pentonville Road, N.

THE MISSES THORPE (Violinists), Pupils of Herr Professor Joachim, Mus. Doc., and Herr Professor Jacobsen, are prepared to accept Engagements. Christ Church Vicarage, 130, Peckham Park Road, S.E

MR. THEODORE DISTIN (Mandolinist).—Concerts, Banquets, At Homes, Recitals, &c. Vacant dates and Lessons, please address, Craignorth, 33, Upper Bedford Place, Russell Square, W.C.

MISS CLARA TITTERTON, Associate and Silver Medalist, R.A.M., First Class Certificate Society of Arts, &c., &c., receives PUPILS for the VIOLIN and PIANOFORTE on moderate terms. Lessons given at pupils' own residences. Schools attended. Miss Titterton also accepts Engagements for Concerts and At Homes 38, Agate Road, The Grove, Hammersmith, W.

MR. FRANK FREWER, L.R.A.M., A.C.O. (Organist, St. James's, Garlickhithe, E.C.), teaches the PIANOFORTE, ORGAN, &c. For terms for Concerts, Organ Recitals, Pianoforte or Organ Lessons, address, 6, Wilmot Place, Rochester Road, and Camden Road, N.W.

PIANOFORTE.—Advanced LESSONS given by a Lady (Pupil of Dr. Hans von Bülow). HARMONY and COUNTERPOINT CLASSES held weekly. M. von Z., Ward's Library, 112, Kensington Park Road, W.

MUNRO DAVISON, F.C.O., Professor of Singing, the Organ, &c. Organist, St. Anne's, Holloway; Principal Alto, Temple Church, &c.
For Organ Recitals, Concerts, Masonic Banquets, &c. 101, Tollington Park, N.

MISS
FANNY BOUFFLEUR
(SOPRANO).
For Oratorios, Cantatas, Concerts, &c., 239, Upper Parliament Street, Liverpool.
Agent, N. VERT, Esq., 6, Cork Street, London, W.

MISS LOUISE WEAVER
(CONTRALTO)
AND
MR. GILBERT THORNE
(BARITONE)
Are now booking Engagements (either together or separately) for Oratorios, Miscellaneous Concerts, At Homes, &c., for the ensuing season.
For terms, &c., please address, The Ferns, Richmond Park Road, Kingston-on-Thames; or, 11, Penryn Street, Oakley Square, N.W.

MISS
MARIE HOOTON
(CONTRALTO)
(Late Parepa-Rosa Gold Medalist and Westmorland Scholar of the Royal Academy of Music)
AND
MR.
EDWARD BRANSCOMBE
(TENOR)
(LAY-VICAR OF WESTMINSTER ABBEY)
Are now booking Engagements for the present season.

Miss HOOTON and Mr. BRANSCOMBE are prepared to undertake Engagements for the following extensive répertoire at short notice:—

ANDERTON.
John Gilpin
BACH.
Christmas Oratorio
Mass in B minor
The Passion (St. John)
The Passion (St. Matthew)
God goeth up
BALFE.
Bohemian Girl
BARNBY.
Rebekah
The Lord is King
BARNETT.
The Ancient Mariner
Building of the Ship
BENEDICT.
St. Cecilia
St. Peter
STERNDALE BENNETT.
May Queen
Woman of Samaria
BERLIOZ.
Faust
Childhood of Christ
BRAHMS.
Liebeslieder
Gipsy Songs
BRIDGE.
The Festival
Callirhoë
Repentance of Nineveh
Boadicea
CARTER.
Placida
CLAY.
Lalla Rookh
COSTA.
The Dream
Eli
Naaman
COWEN.
Ruth
The Rose Maiden
Sleeping Beauty
St. Ursula
St. John's Eve
DAVID.
The Desert
DVORÁK.
Stabat Mater
The Spectre's Bride
Requiem Mass
St. Ludmila
FARMER.
Christ & His Soldiers
GADE.
The Crusaders
Psyche
GADSBY.
Lord of the Isles
Columbus
GARRETT.
The Shunamite
GAUL.
Joan of Arc
The Holy City
Ruth
GOUNOD.
Faust
Mors et Vita
Messe Solennelle
The Redemption
GRAUN.
Der Tod Jesu
HANDEL.
Acis and Galatea
Alexander's Feast
Dettingen Te Deum
Chandos Anthems
Judas Maccabæus
Jephtha
Joshua
Israel in Egypt
The Messiah
Ode on St. Cecilia's Day
Samson
Saul
Solomon
Theodora
Belshazzar
The Passion
HAYDN.
Creation
Masses
The Seasons
The Passion
JENSEN.
The Feast of Adonis
KING.
The Epiphany
MACFARREN.
Lady of the Lake
Jessy Lea
MACKENZIE.
The Bride
The Dream of Jubal
The Rose of Sharon
The Story of Sayid
MAX BRUCH.
Lay of the Bell
MACCUNN.
Lay of the Last Minstrel
Bonny Kilmeny
MENDELSSOHN.
Athalie
Christus
Come, let us sing
Elijah
First Walpurgis Night
Hymn of Praise
Lauda Zion
St. Paul
To the Sons of Art
MOLIQUE.
Abraham
MOZART.
Cossi fan tutte
Requiem Mass
Twelfth Mass
Motets
PARRY, C. H. H.
Judith
PARRY, JOS.
Saul of Tarsus
PATTISON.
Ancient Mariner
PROUT.
Alfred
Hereward
Red Cross Knight
ROSSINI.
Stabat Mater
ROMBERG.
The Lay of the Bell
SAWYER.
The Star in the East
SCHUBERT.
Masses
SCHUMANN.
Paradise and the Peri
Pilgrimage of the Rose
Requiem Mass
Spanish Songs
SMART.
Bride of Dunkerron
SMIETON.
Ariadne
SMITH.
The Little Baltung
SPOHR.
Christian's Prayer
God, Thou art Great
Last Judgment
Fall of Babylon
STAINER.
The Crucifixion
Daughter of Jairus
St. Mary Magdalen
STANFORD.
Voyage of Maeldune
SULLIVAN.
Golden Legend
Light of the World
Martyr of Antioch
On Shore and Sea
Prodigal Son
GORING THOMAS.
The Sun Worshippers
VERDI.
Requiem
WALLACE.
Maritana

For terms and vacant dates, please apply 37, Torrington Square, Bloomsbury; or,
Messrs. HEALEY and SON,
17, Great Marlborough Street, W.

MR.

HAMLYN CRIMP

(TENOR)

Is now booking Engagements for Oratorios, Cantatas, Concerts, &c.

Please address, The Woodlands, Heathfield Road, Birmingham.

Closed dates:—December 2, 4, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 18, 23, and 26.

MR.

SMALLWOOD METCALFE

(BASS)

For Oratorios, Concerts, &c.

"Special praise must be given to Mr. Smallwood Metcalfe for his admirable singing. He is the possessor of a fine bass voice of considerable compass and sonority."—The Times, December 6, 1892.

Terms, &c., address, 142, Belsize Road, London, N.W.

MISS ALICE MARY SMITH

(HARPIST)

(Associate of the Royal College of Music),
16, Gerald Road, Chester Square, S.W.

MR. THOMAS KEMPTON

(Bass, Vicar Choral, St. Paul's Cathedral)

AND

MR. JAMES BATES

(Director of Choir, Christ Church, Lancaster Gate, W.)

PROVIDE

SOLO BOYS and LEADING BOYS

For Oratorios, Festival Services, Concerts, Organ Recitals, &c.

Messrs. Kempton and Bates's Solo Boys are booked to sing the "Last Judgment" six times; "Mors et Vita" twice; "Messiah," "O come, let us sing," "Praise to the Holiest," "Hear my Prayer," "Eli," &c.

MASTER SYDNEY LOVETT

(Solo Boy, Christ Church, Lancaster Gate, W.)

"Master Sydney Lovett is possessed of a singularly sweet soprano voice and a most refined style."—Daily Telegraph, April 12, 1893.

"Master Sydney Lovett's singing was received with the utmost enthusiasm" (Lord R. Churchill and Right Hon. A. J. Balfour's Primrose League Demonstration, at Paddington).—Globe, May 6, 1893.

"Master Sydney Lovett, a boy with a splendid voice, was the soloist." (Visit of T.R.H. the Prince and Princess of Wales to Westminster Town Hall.)—Standard, July 3, 1893.

Disengaged December 4th, 5th, 7th, 8th, 15th, 19th, 28th, and 29th.

MASTER LEONARD TUDGAY

(Solo Boy, St. Mary's Church, Stoke Newington, N.)

MASTER CHARLES AKAST

(Solo Boy, St. Matthew's Church, Ealing, W.)

MASTER HARRY PEACOCK

(Solo Boy, Hampstead Parish Church, N.W.)

Also ten other thoroughly trained and reliable vocalists. Can be seen by appointment.

Letters and applications for testimonials, criticisms, terms, &c., to be addressed:

Messrs. KEMPTON and BATES, 60, Moorgate Street, E.C.

Provincial Clergy, Organists, Musical Directors, and others will find this address easily accessible from all the London termini.

MR. JOSEF CANTOR'S

"GEMS OF THE OPERAS"

CONCERT COMPANY.

All communications, Church Street, Liverpool.

Telegrams—"Cantor, Liverpool."

THE HORSE-SHOE GLEE SINGERS.

ALTO: Mr. PERCY COWARD (St. George's Chapel Royal, Windsor Castle); TENOR: Mr. ARTHUR S. COWARD; BARITONE: Mr. RANDULPH L. COWARD; BASS: Mr. BELL KEMPTON (St. George's Chapel Royal, Windsor Castle).

For Concerts, &c. Terms on application to Bell Kempton, 16, the Horse-Shoe Cloisters, Windsor Castle; or to Arthur S. Coward (care of Messrs. Metzler and Co., Ltd.), Great Marlborough St., W.

Telegrams—"Horse-Shoe, Windsor."

PROFESSIONAL and AMATEUR MEMBERS WANTED, for a Ladies' Orchestra, now forming. For particulars apply, by letter, to M. von Z., 112, Kensington Park Road, W.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS.

MR. DUTTON (Alto, St. Paul's Cathedral) provides SOLO BOYS, specially prepared for Church Festivals, Organ Recitals, At Homes, Concerts, &c.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Are trained entirely by himself.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Have received splendid testimonials.

HIS Grace The DUKE of NEWCASTLE writes:

"I have heard many excellent Boy Soloists, but never any more perfect both in beauty of voice and in execution."

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS may be engaged for "Last Judgment," "Stabat Mater," "Mors et Vita," "Redemption," "Hear my Prayer," "Holy City," "Messiah," "Elijah," "St. Paul," "Lobgesang," "Lauda Zion," "Creation," "Daughter of Jairus," "Prodigal Son," "Song of Victory," Carols, &c.

MR. DUTTON'S SOLO BOYS
Have sung SPOHR'S "LAST JUDGMENT" at:—
Beckenham (four times), Lewisham (four times), Brighton (three times), St. Leonard's (twice), Devizes (twice), Bromley (twice), Hornsey (twice), Honor Oak (twice), Haverstock Hill (twice), Bishop's Stortford, Bristol, Camberley, Dulwich, Fulham, Grove Park, Kentish Town, Kilburn, Melksham, Norwood, Potterne, Twickenham, and Westminster.

MASTER W. A. GOUGH, Solo Boy (4 years), St. Alban's, Holborn.
Has sung ROSSINI'S "STABAT MATER" during the past year with marked success at:—
St. Leonard's (four times), Holborn (three times), Hatton Garden, Maidstone, Pembroke, and Sutton.

Mr. Dutton would be glad if Clergy and Organists desiring the services of his Solo Boys would kindly secure them as far in advance as possible.

MR. DUTTON can supply a Choir of twelve highly trained Boys for special occasions.

Address, 19, Alpha Road, New Cross, S.E.

THE

ENGLISH CONCERT PARTY

MADAME LESLIE ARNOTT.

MADAME JULIA HUTCHINGS.

MR. A. BOWYER BRISTOL.

MR. EDMUND EDWARDS.

Solo Pianoforte—
MRS. A. L. RICHARDSON, L.R.A.M.

Solo Violin—
MR. W. H. HENLEY.

Solo Harp—
J. H. COCKERILL
(Sir CHARLES HALLÉ'S BAND).

Conductor and Accompanist—
MR. WALTER J. EVANS.

The above Party are prepared to accept Engagements or the forthcoming season for Sacred, Chamber, or Ballad Concerts; also,

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS WITH

SIR AUGUSTUS HARRIS,

FOR

CONCERT RECITALS OF GOUNOD'S OPERA

PHILEMON AND BAUCIS.

Applications for vacant dates to be made to Manager,
P. Henry Jones, Hampden House, Phœnix Street, London, N.W.
Special arrangements for Charity Concerts.

ROYAL ALBERT HALL,

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1893, AT 8 O'CLOCK.

SIXTH GRAND ANNUAL EVENING CONCERT IN AID OF THE
DISTRICT RAILWAY EMPLOYÉS' BENEVOLENT FUND.

Mrs. HUTCHINSON.
Miss WINIFRED LUDLAM. Miss EMMA PHILLIPS.
Miss ELSIE HOLME. Miss CLARA BUTT.
Mr. IVER McKAY.
Mr. JOHN RADCLIFF. Mr. NORMAN SALMOND.
Mr. J. T. CARRODUS. Mr. LELAND LANGLEY.
Mr. CHARLES FRY.
THE NOMAD GLEE SINGERS
(Messrs. Savage, Taylor, Shuter, and Moore).
THE CONCERT TROMBONE QUARTET
(Messrs. Colton, Davis, Atherley, and Booth).
At the Piano, Mr. HENRY J. WOOD.
Solo Organist and Conductor, Mr. H. C. TONKING.

Admission: Stalls, 3s.; Arena, 2s.; Balcony and Orchestra, 1s.; Gallery, 6d.; Boxes, 10s. 6d. to £2 2s.
Tickets may be obtained from the Station Inspectors at all the District Railway Stations, and at the Royal Albert Hall.
Doors open at 7; commence at 8. Carriages, 10.30.

THE MUSICAL ASSOCIATION.

Founded in 1874 for the Investigation and Discussion of Subjects connected with the Art and Science of Music.

President: Sir JOHN STAINER.

The Meetings are held at the Royal Academy of Music at 8 o'clock on the second Tuesday in November, December, January, February, March, April, May, and June, when papers are read and discussed; at the end of the year, a copy of the proceedings is sent to every Member.
Subscription, One Guinea per annum.
J. PERCY BAKER, Secretary, Willersley House, Old Charlton.

CHURCH CHOIR GUILD

(Guild of Church Musicians),

35, WELLINGTON STREET, LONDON, W.C.

Under the patronage of the Bishops and Clergy of the Church of England.
For Organists, Choirmasters, Precentors, and Choristers.

President:
The Very Rev. FRANCIS PIGOU, D.D., Dean of Bristol.
Warden and Licensed Lay Chaplain:
J. H. LEWIS, Mus. Doc., D.C.L.
ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION (Membership), 10s. 6d. LIFE, £5 5s.
CHOIRS ENROLLED, 10s. 6d.

A.C.C.G. and F.C.C.G. Diploma Examination, Organists' and Choirmasters' Sections, on January 9 and 10, 1894. Full set of last Examination Papers, post-free, thirteen stamps.

COMPETITIONS.
Two Guineas for a simple Evening Service.
Silver Medal for Communion Service.
Silver Medal for Anthem.
Bronze Medal for Kyrie in Canon.
The 1893 Calendar gives full particulars of the Guild, also contains a Table of University Degrees and College Diplomas, with Academic Costume, post-free, fourteen stamps.
See The Church Musician, and apply to Dr. LEWIS, "Silvermead," Twickenham, S.W.

By Order of the Council.

VICTORIA COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Instituted by the Victoria College Corporation, Ltd.
Incorporated 1891.

Patrons:
The Right Hon. THE MARQUIS OF LORNE, K.T.
The Right Hon. THE EARL OF DARTMOUTH.
Next Diploma Examination (Central), JANUARY 8, 1894.
Next Local Theoretical Examination (all Centres), APRIL 11, 1894.
Local Practical Examinations will be held at various Centres during the season.
Local Secretaries required for towns not already represented.
Full particulars and Regulations on application.
GEO. A. STANTON, Secretary.
11, Burleigh Street, Strand, W.C.

MR. W. C. AINLEY, Mus. Bac., Cantab. (1884), teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c., by Correspondence. Terms moderate. New House, Mirfield, Yorkshire.

DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who passed the following EXAMINATIONS:—MUS. DOC., OXON. and DUBLIN; MUS. BAC. Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, and Durham (1893); L.R.A.M., 1893; L.L.C.M., 1893; F.C.O., 1893. FOUR HUNDRED Certificates, "Diplomas," and Degrees have been gained by Dr. ALLISON'S Pupils at Musical Examinations, and they won SIX GOLD MEDALS and Three Silver Medals. Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Revision of Compositions, by Post, to Correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, Organ, and Piano 68, Nelson St., Manchester.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS.

December 5, at 8.—Lecture by J. Hamilton Clarke, Esq., Mus. Bac., "Two Years' Music in Australia."
January 9, 10, 11, F.C.O. Examination; January 12, Diploma Distribution; January 16, 17, 18, A.C.O. Examination; January 19, Diploma Distribution. Candidates' names to be sent in on or before December 28.
The Solo-playing Tests for the F.C.O. Examination in January will be: Prelude and Fugue in G major, Bach (No. 2, Book II., Peters); Fantasia in C minor, Op. 25, H. Berens (No. 22, Cecilia Collection, Augener); Choral, with Variations, H. Smart (Novello, Ewer and Co.).
The College Library is open daily from 10 to 5, and on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 9.
Members desiring practice on the College Organ may obtain particulars on application.
The large room, and sundry smaller rooms, may be hired for concerts, meetings, &c. For terms, application should be made to the Assistant Secretary.

E. H. TURPIN, Hon. Secretary.
Hart Street, Bloomsbury, W.C.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, A.R.A.M., teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, &c., by post. Personal Lessons in Pianoforte or Theory at own or pupil's residence; or at 34, New Bond Street, W. Schools attended. Address, Willersley House, Old Charlton.

MR. T. HEMMINGS, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.C.O., L.Mus., T.C.L., prepares Candidates for ARTS and MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS by Post. Stoke-on-Trent.

DR. F. J. KARN, Mus. Bac., Cantab.; Mus. Doc., Trinity College, Toronto; L.Mus., T.C.L., gives LESSONS Personally or by post in HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, FUGUE, ORCHESTRATION, ACOUSTICS, &c.; and prepares for Musical Examinations. Latest successes: MUS. BAC., DURHAM, 1891, 1892, and 1893 (all Candidates passed); FIRST EXAM., 1890, 1891, 1892, and 1893; CAMBRIDGE, MUS.BAC., 1892; LONDON, MUS.BAC., 1891; DUBLIN, MUS. BAC., 1891 and 1892; F.C.O. and A.C.O.; L.R.A.M. (Composition); Preliminary Mus. Bac., Cambridge, 1893; Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc., Toronto, 1893; Gold Medalists, 1890, 1892, and 1893; L.Mus., L.C.M.; L.T.C.L. and A.T.C.L.; F.T.S.C.; Senior Local, R.A.M. and R.C.M., Theory and Pianoforte; and T.C.L., Senior Honours; A.R.C.M. Special and individual attention given to Correspondents. Upwards of 300 Diplomas and Degrees and several Gold and Silver Medals gained by pupils. MSS. corrected and revised for publication. Terms very moderate. Address, 70, Park Road, Haverstock Hill, N.W.

DR. W. JOHN REYNOLDS, D.Mus., Lond., L.Mus., T.C.L., gives LESSONS, personally or by post, in the Theory of Music (including acoustics). Recent successes. 48, Highbury Grove, N.

MR. R. STOKOE, Mus. Bac., Cantab., F.C.O., gives ORGAN LESSONS at Christ Church, Down Street, Piccadilly. Harmony, Counterpoint, &c., taught personally or by post. 86, Rossiter Road, Balham, S.W.

DR. TAYLOR, Mus.D., Oxon., F.C.O., L.Mus. (Author of "Vocal Score Reading Exercises for F.C.O. Students"), prepares CANDIDATES for MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS by Post. Address, Wolverhampton Road, Stafford.

MR. A. W. TOMLYN, Mus.B., Dunelm, L.T.C.L., Berwick-on-Tweed, COACHES CANDIDATES for University and all other Exams. by post. Every possible attention and assistance guaranteed. Many past successes.

MR. W. H. TUTT, Mus. Bac., Cantab., L.R.A.M., teaches HARMONY, COUNTERPOINT, ACOUSTICS, &c., by Correspondence. Ashburn, Derbyshire.

DR. J. WARRINER prepares Candidates successfully for all MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS, and receives Resident and Professional Students, on advantageous terms, if talented. De Crespigny Lodge, Denmark Hill, S.E.

ELEMENTS of MUSIC.—SPECIAL LESSONS by Mrs. WEBSTER, L.R.A.M., Author of the "Groundwork of Music," "Child's Primer" of the Theory of Music. Granville House, 90, Angell Road, Brixton, S.W.

MUSICAL PROFESSION.—MR. W. DE M. SERGISON, Organist and Director of the Choir of St. Peter's, Eaton Square, S.W., trains Youths as Musicians, especially as CHOIR-TRAINERS and ORGANISTS. Mr. Sergison's course affords advantages not attainable at any London Academies. Many past pupils are now holding Cathedral and important Church appointments in England, America, and the Colonies. Applications should be addressed to Mr. Sergison, at the Vestry of the Church.

DR. W. E. THOMAS can receive RESIDENT PUPILS. Preparation for Univ. Degree and all Exams. Thorough grounding in all branches of the art. Three-manual organ. All Saints', Bloxham, Banbury.

DR. H. WALMSLEY LITTLE, F.C.O., Organist, Holy Trinity, Tulse Hill, has a VACANCY for a PUPIL to train for the profession. Preference for one able to play easy services. Reciprocal terms. Huntsville, Palace Road, Tulse Hill Park, S.W.

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL, Oxford.—There will shortly be VACANCIES for PROBATIONERS in the Cathedral Choir. Candidates should be between the ages of 9 and 11. Probationers on being promoted to be Choristers receive their board and education free. During probation, which lasts on the average two years, the school fees amount to about £25 per annum. The boys live in the Choir House, under the superintendence of the Head Master. All communications to be addressed to the Rev. The Master, Cathedral Choir House, Oxford.

ST. MICHAEL'S, PATERNOSTER ROYAL, College Hill, Cannon Street, E.C.—WANTED, a good LEADING BOY. Must be able to read. Salary according to ability. Apply, C. F. Champion, Jun., Organist and Choirmaster, 17, Jeffreys Road, Clapham Road, S.W.; or, at the Church on Fridays, 6 to 7.

SOLO TREBLE REQUIRED, for St. Cuthbert's, Philbeach Gardens. Good salary to a suitable boy. Apply to Lieut.-Colonel Douglas, 70, Warwick Road, Earl's Court, S.W.

LEADING BOY WANTED, for St. Paul's, Tottenham. Strong voice, good reader. Park and White Hart Lane Stations, G.E.R. Apply to E de Lisle, 81, Park Lane, Tottenham.

KING'S COLLEGE, Cambridge.—There is a VACANCY in the Choir for an ALTO, either a Lay Clerk or a Choral Scholar. Stipend offered, £100 a year for the former; £90 a year for the latter. Date of Competition, December 14, 1893. For further information apply to the Dean, King's College, Cambridge. Applications to be sent in by December 7.

ALTO WANTED, for St. John Baptist, Kensington. £15. Apply, Miller, 49, Philbeach Gardens, S.W.

ALTO, TENOR, and BASS WANTED, for Holy Trinity Church, Gray's Inn Road. Salary, £8 to £10 per year each. Apply to Organist.

GOOD TENOR WANTED. One of the largest Churches in N. London. State terms. Organist, 53, Middle Lane, Hornsey.

WANTED, TENOR, for Christ Church, Stafford Street, Marylebone. Must be good reader and communicant. Salary, £20. Apply, enclosing copies of testimonials, to the Organist, Mr. Fred. J. Chaffer.

BASS and CONTRALTO WANTED, for the Choir of Chapel near Sydenham. State terms, &c., to J. E. Booth, Lynton, Honor Oak Park, S.E. No week-day services.

WANTED, BASS and TENORS. Salary, £5 per year. Sundays and one practice. Apply, Wednesday, at 8, Christ Church, Endell Street, W.C.

BASS (not Baritone) WANTED, for St. Peter-le-Poor, Old Broad Street, E.C. Light duties. Salary, £10 per annum. Apply, by letter, to Geo. F. Grover, Organist.

BASS SINGER WANTED, for St. Asaph Cathedral. For particulars, apply to H. A. Cleaver, Chapter Clerk, St. Asaph.

SOLO BOY (fine voice) open to accept permanent SUNDAY ENGAGEMENT. Interview and terms, apply Mr. Blaxland, 11, Powis Square, W.

TO CONDUCTORS and CONCERT-GIVERS.—A Young Lady (22), prepossessing, with fine, powerful Contralto voice, good musical experience, is desirous of giving her SERVICES for a term, in lieu of further training for Ballad and Oratorio Concerts. Highest references required and given. F. Moss, Sawston, Cambridge.

BASS-BARITONE.—Mr. GEORGE THOMSON, having completed his engagement with the American Church of the Holy Trinity, Paris, is desirous of obtaining a similar ENGAGEMENT in England. Address, 8, Belmont Park, Lee, S.E.

THE ORGANISTSHIP at the Theological College, Salisbury, will be VACANT after Christmas. The Applicant must reside in the College with a view to preparation for Holy Orders. A Graduate will be preferred. For all particulars, apply to The Principal.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED, for St. George's Church (Presbyterian), Darlington. New three-manual tubular pneumatic Organ, to be opened in February. Choir to be selected and trained. Salary, £25. Apply, at once, Rev. Dr. Cullen, The Manse, Darlington.

EXPERIENCED ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED, for West Free Church, Helensburgh, to commence duty on January 15. Salary, £70 per annum. The organ to be used will be a three-manual one, being built by WILLIAM HILL and SON, London. Applications, with copies of testimonials, to be sent by December 4, to Mr. P. L. Miller, Leewood, Helensburgh.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH, Clapham Rise, S.W.—WANTED, at once, an ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER. Salary, £70. First-rate extempore playing essential. Applications (in writing only) to be sent before December 9, together with references, to Rev. R. Brown-Borthwick, St. John's Vicarage, Clapham Rise, S.W. After that date a leet for consideration will be selected from among the Candidates, and the testimonials, &c., of the others returned at once. Elaborate Choral Service.

WANTED, ORGANIST (moderate views), West-End Church. Small salary. Private means and residence (West) preferred. Address, Zim, Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners St., W.

WANTED, an ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER. Apply to the Rev. J. Lawless, Canton Street Poplar, E.

ASSISTANT CHOIRMASTER REQUIRED, for Church in Kensington. Well up in Boy Training. Alto or Tenor voice preferred. Good stipend. B., Novello, Ewer and Co., 80 and 81, Queen Street, Cheapside, E.C.

ORGANIST (Lady), good, experienced, WANTED, about Christmas, for Church in country. Salary, £40. No opening for private pupils. Some private means indispensable. Mrs. Joad, Patching, Worthing, Sussex.

WANTED, in January next, a Young Gentleman, unmarried, as ASSISTANT MUSIC MASTER at Harrow School. Must be a thoroughly competent Pianist and Organist, and reside at Harrow. Salary, £200 per annum. Apply, by letter, stating age and previous experience, to Eaton Faning, Esq., Director of the Music at Harrow School, Harrow-on-the-Hill, N.W.

ORGANIST (F.C.O.) desires RE-APPOINTMENT. Good organ; choral services. Excellent Choir-training testimonials. F.C.O., 32, Albert Street, Barrow-in-Furness.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER.—Young English Gentleman, holding post in Church of Ireland (near Dublin), desires APPOINTMENT, England or Wales. Excellent testimonials as to efficiency and character; good musician. Address, O. C., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER (late of Hawarden Parish Church) will shortly be open to RE-APPOINTMENT. Sphere for Teaching necessary. Good testimonials. R. W. P., 24, Lechmere Road, Willesden Green, N.W.

ORGANIST and C., Deputy-O., or Music Master. RE-ENGAGEMENT desired. Mr. Arthur Mangelsdorff, Fant School of Music, Maidstone.

£50 OFFERED for good ORGAN APPOINTMENT, by experienced Conductor, Organist, Diplomé, &c. Cathedral experience. Replies, in strict confidence, to Cantor, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W., by December 9.

ORGANIST, &c., desires POST in or near London. Moderate stipend. Excellent testimonials. Anglican Service. E., 51, Cumberland Street, Pimlico, S.W.

AS CHOIRMASTER.—Mr. A. R. MUSGRAVE, Organist and Choirmaster of St. James-the-Less, Westminster, is desirous of obtaining an APPOINTMENT as above, in addition to his present one, in good neighbourhood. Canon Blackly, Vicar of St. James-the-Less, will be glad to speak as to the Advertiser's ability to train a choir, and to the excellent results he has achieved at St. James-the-Less. Address, in first instance, to A. R. M., 37, Law Crescent, Kew.

ACCOMPANIST (Lady) desires ENGAGEMENTS. Experienced. Good reader. Concerts, At Homes, Private Practice, &c. Address, A. T., 2, Penn Road Villas, Camden Road, N.

A LADY, Professor of Music in London (L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.), has a VACANCY for a STUDENT-TEACHER, on mutual terms. Address, C., Novello, Ewer & Co., 1, Berners St., W

ITALY.—English Lady resident in Milan OFFERS all the comforts of an English HOME to young lady desirous of pursuing her musical studies at the Conservatoire or privately. Unexceptional references given and required. Inclusive terms, Eight Guineas a month. Mrs. B., Tamar House, St. Mark's Road, North Kensington, W.

WANTED, a thoroughly reliable and first-class TUNER, accustomed to Country work. Send photo, &c. Also wanted, a good Repairer. Duck, Son and Pinker, Bath.

PIANOFORTE, American Organ, and Harmonium TUNER and REPAIRER WANTED. Must be a first-class and experienced workman, and give unexceptional references as to character, &c. The situation is in a pleasant London suburb, and will be permanent and progressive. Address, stating salary expected and all particulars, to M. P., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners St.

PIANOFORTE TUNER WANTED. Must be thoroughly capable, energetic, and trustworthy. State age, experience, and wages. Starmer, Tunbridge Wells.

WANTED, at once, an experienced PIANO TUNER, who thoroughly understands Organ and Harmonium work. References indispensable. Permanent situation. Apply, F. H. Thuell, Cornish Music Stores, Falmouth.

TUNER and REPAIRER WANTED. Must be thoroughly competent and fit to send out to high-class connection. Permanent post and good opportunities for a gentlemanly and obliging man. Clift's Piano Saloons, Eastbourne.

FIRST CLASS TUNER WANTED, for permanent Situation in Scotland. Salary, 50s. per week. Apply, with photo and references, to M. P., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

TRINITY COLLEGE LONDON.

For Musical Education and Examination.—Inst. 1872.

President:
Sir RICHARD E. WEBSTER, Q.C., M.P.
Warden: Professor E. H. Turpin, Mus.D.
Director of Studies: Professor Bradbury Turner, Mus.B.
Director of Examinations: Professor Jas. Higgs, Mus.B.

The next ORCHESTRAL CONCERT will take place at Princes' Hall, Piccadilly, on Monday, December 18, at 8 o'clock. Conductor, Mr. F. CORDER.

LOCAL EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC.

Eighteenth Annual Series. Session, 1893-94.

The LOCAL EXAMINATIONS in INSTRUMENTAL and VOCAL MUSIC take place at the various Centres throughout the United Kingdom, and include Pianoforte, Organ, and Harmonium Playing, Pianoforte Duet Playing, Solo Singing, Violin or other Orchestral Instruments. The Examinations are conducted in Two Divisions—Senior and Junior; and in Pianoforte and Violin Playing there is also a Primary (Elementary) Division. Honours Certificates and Pass Certificates are awarded. Arrangements are being made for holding Examinations during the present Session (December, 1893, to July, 1894) at the following amongst other centres:—

Aberdeen, Aberystwith, Aldershot, Alloa, Ayr, Barrow-in-Furness, Ballymena, Banbury, Bath, Bedford, Belfast, Birmingham, Blackburn, Blackpool, Bodmin, Bolton, Bournemouth, Bradford, Brecon, Brentwood, Brighton, Bristol, Brockley and New Cross, Burnley, Bury St. Edmunds, Cambridge, Cardiff, Carlisle, Carmarthen, Carnarvon, Chatham, Cheltenham, Chesterfield, Chichester, Cirencester, Cleator Moor, Colchester, Crieff, Croydon, Derby, Douglas (Isle of Man), Dover, Dublin, Dumfries, Dundee, Ealing, Eastbourne, Edinburgh, Elgin, Exeter, Falkirk, Folkestone, Glasgow, Gloucester, Goole and Howden, Great Yarmouth, Greenock, Grimsby, Guildford, Halifax, Hanley, Harrowgate, Hastings, Haverfordwest, Hawick, Hereford, Hull, Inverness, Ipswich, Jersey, Keighley, Keswick, Kilmarnock, King's Lynn, Lancaster, Leamington, Leeds, Leicester, Liverpool, Llandudno and Colwyn Bay, London, Londonderry, Lowestoft, Macclesfield, Maidstone, Manchester, Margate, Newcastle, Newport, Northampton, Norwich, Nottingham, Oldham, Oxford, Pembroke Dock, Perth, Peterborough, Plymouth, Portsmouth, Preston, Ramsgate, Reading, Redhill, St. Ives, Sheffield, Shrewsbury, Sleaford, Southampton, Southend-on-Sea, Southport, Stockport, Stockton-on-Tees, Stroud, Surbiton, Swansea, Swindon, Taunton, Tiverton, Torquay, Truro, Tunbridge Wells, Walsall, Walthamstow, Ware, Wellington (Salop), Weymouth, Whitby, Wisbech, Wolverhampton, Worcester, Worthing, York.

Any or all of the following printed papers may be had on application to the undersigned: (a) Regulations and list of music to be performed for the Local Examinations in Instrumental and Vocal Music, and Regulations for the (Theoretical) Local Examinations in Musical Knowledge; (b) List of Local Centres; (c) Regulations for the Higher Examinations for Diplomas and Certificates, and List of Music to be performed for the Higher Certificates in Vocal and Instrumental Subjects; (d) Prospectus of the Classes and Lectures Department; (e) General Prospectus containing List of Honorary Officers, &c.

By Order of the Academical Board,
SHELLEY FISHER, Secretary.
Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, W.

THE
SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW
FOR DECEMBER
CONTAINS:—

General Notes.
How should Intervals be named?
Staff Notation and the Movable Doh. By W. G. McNaught.
The Associated Board Examinations.
Singing Competition at Sheffield.
Birmingham Board School Competition.
London School Board Choir Competition.
Reviews.
Correspondence.
News from all Parts.

THE
SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW
FOR DECEMBER
CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING MUSIC IN BOTH NOTATIONS:—

"Hark! how sweetly the Bells." Two-part Carol by George Fox.
"Rose among the Heather." Unison Song. By Schubert.
Studies in changes of Key and in combining Time and Tune.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.
Office: 1, Berners Street, W.

John Broadwood & Sons

(ESTABLISHED 1732)

PIANOFORTE MAKERS

BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT TO

HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES
HER ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCESS OF WALES
HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH
AND THE
REST OF THE ROYAL FAMILY.

FOR THEIR ROYAL HIGHNESSES
THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF YORK
AT YORK COTTAGE, SANDRINGHAM
JOHN BROADWOOD & SONS
have had the honour of supplying
AN UPRIGHT GRAND PIANOFORTE
in a decorated and painted Spanish Mahogany case

33, GREAT PULTENEY STREET (near Regent Street),
LONDON, W.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE REQUIEM
FROM
"MORS ET VITA"
BY
CH. GOUNOD.

	s.	d
8vo, paper cover	2	6
Paper boards	3	0

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

READY ON DECEMBER 14.

A SPECIAL NUMBER
OF THE
MUSICAL TIMES DEVOTED TO HANDEL
HIS LIFE AND WORKS
EDITED BY
JOSEPH BENNETT
WILL BE ISSUED ON THURSDAY, DECEMBER 14.

The Number will contain numerous Illustrations, consisting of Portraits, Views, Fac-similes of Manuscripts, and Letters of great interest, hitherto unpublished.

PRICE SIXPENCE.
Postage, 1½d.

London and New York: Novello, Ewer and Co.

THE MUSICAL TIMES
AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR.
DECEMBER 1, 1893.

GOUNOD:
THE MAN AND THE MASTER.

A French writer upon Gounod has said: "In time to come, when the Master has left the scene, when the author of 'Faust' belongs to posterity, the biographers will seize their prey. They will deliver their judgment with larger freedom, greater authority, and more disinterestedness. . . . Contemporary criticism is forgetful or unjust, and so often deceives itself." As regards the works of the lately-deceased composer these words may stand, but with reference to the man himself, the present has an advantage which the future can never enjoy. We have known Gounod, met him face to face, and felt the warm grasp of his hand. He is to all who were his contemporaries, and are now his survivors, a being, body, soul, and spirit, not a mere memory, and the impressions he made, as of one personality upon another, are at this moment fresher and more clear than, in the nature of things, they can ever be again. An admirer of a great English statesman once said that, like a mountain, he needs to be looked at from a distance for a clear idea of his height and grandeur. But the farther the standpoint the less precise the details. We may get the full outline; the traits which really determine the physiognomy are lost. Hence there is something to be said about Gounod even now, while we are still close to him, and his figure, though receding, remains distinct.

In all the articles called forth by Gounod's death, very positive recognition of that which mainly determined his individuality may be found. We see it, however, described in different ways; as, for example, sensuousness, or, more vaguely, mysticism, or, in some cases, pietism. All these terms may, to some extent, be applicable, but not one of them covers the case entirely. We must go deeper to find the key to Gounod's nature, and may discover a suggestion of it, perhaps, in a sentence now before me: "Il y a toujours un peu de la femme chez Gounod," and again, "Il y a, ça et là, dans ses œuvres quelque chose du boudoir." If we assume in the French master the predominance of a nature essentially feminine, his life ceases to puzzle the analyst of character. The distinguishing feature of the feminine in humanity is an extreme sensibility to outward influences, above all, to everything that is sensuous in nature and art. This is true, in some measure, of humanity as a whole, for, to quote an English writer: "We are plunged into the universe, tremblingly alive all over, and rendered capable of receiving impressions, pleasant or unpleasant, from every object that addresses our senses, from everything we perceive, and from everything of which we can form an idea." A strong development of this sensibility is a mark of the feminine, and that quite independent of sex, for there are womanly men as well as manly women. We all know, however, that the particular organisation in question is, generally speaking, an endowment of the female, and if we have lived in the world with our eyes open to the facts of humanity, we are no less acquainted with the forms in which it is manifested. Generally attendant upon the strong sensibility recognised as feminine is sympathy with every kind of beauty that appeals to the emotions through the senses. Blended colours, harmony of sounds, ornate displays of ceremony—these are the things to which it responds with alacrity, and the alliance of these with religious worship largely helps to fill our churches with women and with young men of almost equally susceptible organisation. Nothing is more common than the inclination of feminine sensibility to pietism. Not alone in such cases do impressive rites attract. There is the sense of awe and mystery which thrills the soul; there are the dreams of heavenly splendours, and desires for that saintly purity which may be described as the "beauty of holiness." That Gounod, in his early days, felt and was subdued by all these, and that some of them dominated him to the end, seems to be quite clear. By his very nature he was destined to pass under the sway of some or other forms of that to which extreme sensibility responds, and the same necessity which, in one case, makes a pietist, in another produces a libertine. Says Hannah More: "Sensibility appears to me to be neither good nor evil in itself, but in its application. Under the influence of Christian principle, it makes saints and martyrs; ill directed or uncontrolled, it is a snare, and the source of every temptation."

Gounod inherited the sensitive artistic temperament. His father was a painter, his grandfather had rooms in the Louvre, as keeper and repairer of the Royal armoury, which contained magnificent examples of artistic workmanship, and his great grandfather held the same post. But it was from his mother that the master derived his susceptibility to music. In a brochure, entitled "L'Allaitement Musical," Gounod says: "I had the happiness—happiness which seems to become more and more rare—of being nursed by my mother. Maternal nourishment contains more of education than is supposed. If it do not, like language, transmit ideas, it is, very probably at least, the vehicle of instincts, aptitudes, and inclinations which add so many traits the more of resemblance between child and mother." Madame Gounod is described as a charming woman, full of intelligence and energy, and an excellent musician. Indeed, after the death of her husband, the painter, she formed and taught a pianoforte class, among the members of which was her son Charles. The boy took to music as to the manner born, but his mother made the usual mistake of those to whom gifted children are entrusted, and, like the parents of Schumann, intended him for the law—a profession in which he would have failed miserably. Madame Gounod had the sense to yield in view of her son's manifest destiny, and in 1836, when the lad was eighteen, he entered the Conservatoire, having first been influenced by Reicha in favour of German art. At this period the latent characteristics of Gounod's nature began to develop, and, of his masters, it was Lesueur rather than Halévy who drew them out. A word as to Lesueur seems necessary here.

In common with all the French composers, this professor wrote operas, but he was, first and foremost, a Church musician, and it may be said that he devoted himself, as an artist, to the service of religion. Quite early in life he became a cathedral chapel-master, and acted in that capacity at Notre Dame. He was not twenty years old when Sacchini said of him: "I know only two chapel-masters in Italy who are his equals." Lesueur succeeded Paesiello in the musical direction of the Imperial chapel, and subsequently acted as composer to the Royal chapel. As to his music, Gounod said in after life: "Mediæval frescoes, or those strangely grand Byzantine mosaics, can give an idea of the works of Lesueur." Versed in all the learning of the schools, in taste inclining towards the breadth and massiveness of the antique, and full of enthusiasm for religious music, Lesueur was just the man to acquire an influence over Gounod, and, by drawing him into his own path, to place him where the æsthetics of sacred art could appeal most strongly to his sensibility. Gounod's heart went out to his congenial professor, whose music, long years after Lesueur had disappeared from the scene, he would sing with the fervour of profound admiration. Residence in Rome, as Grand Prix, completed that which the old chapel-master had begun.

The influence of the Eternal City must be great, in some form or other, upon every sensitive nature, and was, doubtless, much more powerful before the changes made in recent times than now. Gounod went prepared for submission to the glamour of religious life and ceremonial as seen in the capital of the Popes. The oratory of Lacordaire, itself a source of sensuous emotion, had aided the ministry of sacred music in exciting pietistic feeling, and personal intercourse with that eloquent man completed the conquest of Gounod's nature. The immediate result was the most natural thing in the world. Young, and burning with the ardour of youthful conviction, or sentiment, as, perhaps, the word should be, he would consecrate himself to the Church, put on the rich garments of the priest, and stand, a picturesque figure, amid forms and sounds of beauty. To this end he withdrew from the extremely secular life of the Villa Médicis—the home of the French students—and entered a Seminary, to begin the work of preparation for a new career.

Here necessarily arises the question whether Gounod's mind and soul were really subject to religious conviction. It is quite possible for a man to deceive himself, and believe that he has within him "the root of the matter," when merely revelling in an emotion the like of which, au fond and in degree, might be excited by other means. An answer to the question can, of course, be reached only through observation of results, and then must, from the nature of the case, be more or less speculative. Entering upon that observation, it is discerned, first of all, that while Gounod, as a critic said of him, had one foot in the Church and one in the world, he never wholly quitted his secular standpoint. The tendency was rather the other way. On leaving Rome, and during the year of travel prescribed by the Grand Prix, as well as for some time after his return to Paris, Gounod was more the musician than the pietist. He carried secular songs from publisher to publisher, and only when no man would buy them, accepted the post of organist to the little church of the Missions Etrangères, soon becoming known as the Abbé Gounod, just as his old master was familiarly styled the Abbé Lesueur. Once more religious feeling dominated him. He became an out-student (externe) at the Mission seminary, and, we are told, read and annotated the Fathers with much industry. Still he kept one foot in the world. His biographers speak of indecision—of a halting approach to the door of the sanctuary. At last came a time which applied a real test of earnestness and devotion. As to this, Adolphe Adam may be quoted :—

"When he found his independence restrained by all the rigours of ecclesiastical rule, the young neophyte understood the greatness of the sacrifice he proposed to make. He had the courage to go back, while losing none of his convictions. He saw that the more sincere those convictions were the more it behoved him to begin only that which he was in a state to continue, and he frankly returned to artistic life."

Accepting these remarks, the suggested conclusion is plain enough, and still more plain if we agree with the statement that Gounod's renunciation of an ecclesiastical career was due to the action of Madame Viardot, who, at a critical moment, opened to him the doors of opera. Madame Viardot had heard and admired the young composer's music. She had an organ in her salon, and there he would sit and accompany his own singing of the songs at which Parisian publishers would not look. In the result, Madame Viardot procured for her protegé a commission to write the music of a lyric drama ("Sapho") by Emile Augier. From that moment Gounod had both feet in the world. The sensuous side of religion still commanded his sympathies, but opera also had a sensuous side. On the stage as well as around the altar were splendour and beauty, and sounds that reached and thrilled the strings of emotion. Across it, moreover, ran a high road to fame, along which the traveller could pass without loss of personal liberty, and not only without mortification, but with incentives to indulgence. In 1846 Richault published, in Paris, "Offices de la Semaine Sainte, par l'Abbé Gounod." In 1851 the composer, no longer styled Abbé, even in error, was writing an opera on a pagan theme. The object was different; the impelling influence the same. Nothing in Gounod's after-life throws doubt upon the conclusion derived from a study of his early years. He was throughout swayed more by external impressions than by internal convictions. Beauty in any form captivated him. He lived in a world of fascinating shapes, colours, and sounds, where, to his fancy, the great masters of the beautiful in art were as gods, to be worshipped with all the intensity of feminine devotion. There were moments when he fancied that the glory of heaven shone down into his soul. Writing from London to a friend, he said: "My art begins to burn when I am tranquil. It seems that the heavens brighten all at once, and that voices sing to me that which I ought to write, compelling me to believe in them. Is not that glorious?" So, like the most illustrious of his countrywomen, he had his "voices," which urged, not the sacrifices of patriotism, but the indulgence of sensuous emotion excited through the most seductive means. The present writer was privileged to accompany Gounod to Drury Lane Theatre on an evening when his "Faust" was performed. A more indifferent representation could hardly have been given in a house of any pretensions, and the composer must have suffered much as it went on. He said nothing by way of complaint, however, and nothing suggestive of deprecation till, as Margaret, Faust, and Mephistopheles were together in the prison scene, he drily remarked: "They are a trinity, but I should not like to say which is the holy ghost." This by the way. In the course of that evening—memorable to the master's companion—Gounod mentioned a fact now generally known—namely, that his first impulse towards the illustration of Goethe's drama was felt in Rome, and that he there found the musical equivalent of its more prominent scenes and characters. "I was fascinated first of all," he said, "with the beauty of Margaret and the shining purity of her love, before demoniacal art worked upon her. Under the influence of that emotion I wrote the passage in D flat—and those were the first notes of 'Faust.'" It was characteristic that Margaret, with her virginal charms, rather than any more profound consideration, drew the master to the subject in treating which he sowed the seed of his richest harvest. Under the influence of beauty in some form or other much, indeed most, of his best work was done.

Unquestionably a nature so susceptible to sensuous impressions, and capable of almost voluptuous enjoyment of the fair and gracious in art and life, ensures advantages to a musician. It is as an Æolian harp out of which every fragrant breath of summer air strikes sweetest harmony. The music is there and needs only the awakening touch. It is this nature, moreover, which falls down in worship before the creators of artistic beauty in the past, doing so as instinctively as a devotee prostrates himself before saints and martyrs. Gounod was, in this respect, true to the law of his being. His reverence for departed genius extended even to its imperfections. When there was much talk in Paris of liberties taken with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony by Wagner, the French composer wrote: "Touch not the works of great masters. It is a dangerous example of daring and irreverence." And again: "It is far better to leave a great master with his imperfections, if he have any, than to impose upon him our own." Knowing Gounod's artistic constitution, it seems the most natural thing in the world that he made Mozart the chief god of his idolatry—the composer in whom he found the sweetest and noblest combination of the beautiful and the true. Influenced by this admiration he necessarily raised his voice against the vagaries of the day: "We are infected with a craze for the extreme. We run after the strange, the excessive, the bewildering (vertigineux); simplicity seems to us silliness; every rule a timidity, every method a fetter, all discipline a prison." Writing only ten years ago, in support of his theory that it is the artist who progresses and not art, Gounod said: "Are not all the conditions of art fulfilled in 'Don Giovanni'? Have we there the art of the ancients or of the moderns? Do we not find there, along with the exquisite and incomparable charm of pure music, the most just and complete expression of human truth, and, consequently, all the psychological profundity that one can demand in a drama?" Gounod would have belied his nature had he committed himself to the developments of the present day. In so far as modern progress is not towards the beautiful it could have for him no charm, and scarcely any meaning.

But while there are advantages in a constitution framed for the sensuous delight which all things of beauty can give, we find it attended by very considerable drawbacks. In the case of a creative artist, one of those drawbacks is, often, a limited scope. There seems to be a natural law which decrees that what is gained in susceptibility to particular impressions shall be lost in breadth and depth of general sympathy. Mystic and dreamer as some declare the French master to have been, he was not the apostle of an ideal, charged to reveal the music of a world above and beyond his own. How significant was his wish to compose the Mass to the memory of Jeanne d'Arc amid the architectural splendours, the religious and historic impressiveness of Rheims Cathedral! He looked without for inspiration—for the motive power which should set the chords of his sensitive and high-strung nature in vibration. Beethoven found such power in the depths of his own spirit, where it sprang unceasingly, not with intermissions, like the flow of a mountain stream dependent upon the chances of weather. In his early years, Gounod was like a man "possessed" when placed under conditions which appealed with power to his extreme sensibility. Some interesting examples of this may be found in Fanny Mendelssohn's Letters, written at Rome during Gounod's residence in the Papal city. She describes the young student as a personality of extraordinary expansiveness, who could not find adequate words when he wished to tell her what influence she had over him, and how happy her presence made him. Again she says: "Gounod is passionate and romantic to excess. Our German music has upon him the effect of a bomb bursting in a house. Imagine the confusion!" And once more: "I played the Sonata in C minor of Beethoven. Gounod was mad with enthusiasm, and finished by crying 'Beethoven is a blackguard (polisson).' Upon this, his friends, judging that it was time to put him to bed, bore him away." The word polisson was, of course, used as a term of endearment, just as a French mother might call her boy "Mon petit chou" and mean not cabbage, but darling.

Another drawback to the possession of such a nature as Gounod's is the danger of limited expression. All forms of sensuous beauty, whether they exist in the actual world or in the realms of fancy, make much the same appeal to susceptible natures, and the creative artist in whom susceptibility is abnormally developed stands in imminent danger not only of working in one groove, but of doing so in the same manner. Examples of this may be found among the poets, and, in his famous indictment of "The fleshly school of poetry," Mr. Robert Buchanan points out how uniform were the results in the case of a man—Dante Gabriel Rossetti—who was both poet and painter. Says Mr. Buchanan: "He is distinctively a colorist, and of his capabilities in colour I cannot speak, though I should guess that they are good, for if there is any quality by which his poems are specially marked, it is a great sensitiveness to hues and tints as conveyed in poetic epithet. On the other hand, those qualities which impress the casual spectator of the photographs from his pictures are to be found abundantly among his verses. There is the same thinness and transparence of design, the same combination of the simple and the grotesque, the same morbid deviation from healthy forms of life, the same sense of weary, wasting though exquisite sensuality; nothing virile, nothing tender, nothing completely sane; a superfluity of extreme sensibility, of delight in affected forms, hues, and tints, and a deep-seated indifference to all agitating forces and agencies." This description does not apply at all points to the works of Gounod, but it indicates phenomena which the French Master in some measure exemplified. Following up the train of thought above suggested, we get to see why his music is generally so unvarying in expression and even in construction—why it can be distinguished at once and recognised as his without reference to title-pages. Inspired by the sight of beauty, or mental conceptions of it, Gounod's art strains after the same quality. It revels in luscious harmonies, slow moving and languorous, decked out with all the voluptuous colouring that a modern orchestra affords; it is rich in melodies of sensuous charm—chaplets of flowers laid at the feet of Venus or the chaster Diana, or the Christian embodiment of feminine purity. Such music is the natural outcome of such a nature, and in Gounod's case no other was possible without effort and constraint fatal to success. He sometimes made that effort, and subjected himself to that constraint, but the results were not always happy.

Gounod as a humorous musician is by no means unworthy of note. He who wrote "Le Médecin malgré lui" and the "Funeral March of a Marionette," assuredly had in his nature a vein of the precious quality, and it would have been well, perhaps, had the composer worked it more than he did. Gounod, however, was mastered by voluptuousness—the word is not used offensively, but because, in its general application, it is the best—and he rarely emancipated himself from its influence. We must not complain, for to this is due music in hearing which we might exclaim, with Keats—

> Its loveliness increases; it will never > Pass into nothingness,

It was natural that, approaching the close of his life, Gounod turned again towards the beauty of religion—at once an artistic delight and a source of consolation. There, we doubt not, he found peace, and, as he neared the end, may have heard in quiet moments an increasing "noise of harpers harping with their harps." One loves to picture him now in the very bosom of heavenly beauty where, as old Monk Rolles says—

> . . . There is bright somur ever to see,
> And there is never winter in that countrie,
> And there is great melody of angeles songe,
> And there is preysing Him among.

Joseph Bennett.

FROM MY STUDY.

One of the latest additions to my library is a book entitled "The Taste of the Town; or, a Guide to all Public Diversions. London, 1731." The author, who appends the name "A. Primcock" to his epistle dedicatory, treats (I.) of music, operas, and plays; (II.) of poetry; (III.) of dancing; (IV.) of ancient mimes, pantomimes, and choruses; (V.) of audiences; (VI.) of masquerades; and (VII.) of ancient athletic sports. I believe the book to be rare, and, as it is not without interest from a musical point of view, entitled to more than passing notice at my hands. First, a word as to the author. According to Lowndes, "A. Primcock" was the pseudonym of James Ralph, a writer best known by his History of England during the reigns of William III., Anne, and George I., and Ralph is credited by the bibliographer with having written two books on the subject of public amusements—namely, "The Touchstone; or, Historical, Critical, Political, Philosophical, and Theological Essays on the reigning Diversions of the Town. London, 1728," and "Taste of the Town; or, a Guide to all Public Diversions answered. London, 1730." There is evidently some confusion here, since Ralph could not have replied in 1730 to his own book published in 1731. It may be that some of my readers possess Dr. Drake's Essays, in which there is a notice of Ralph and his works. If so, I shall be obliged by more particular information concerning him.

Our author, in his dissertation on opera, answers various objections to that form of entertainment as practised in his day. There were some, it appears, who complained of the recitatives, and to them Ralph observes: "The recitative is but a tunable method of speaking, and, in the article of music, but refines upon speech as far as polite comedy excels common conversation, or tragedy in heroics the ordinary style of the great." He insists upon this, and calls upon critics to reform the absurdities of stage plays before attacking the opera: "I cannot imagine that to sing all the parts of an opera is by half so unnatural as the sparkling nonsense, gilded fustain, and pompous bombast in most, if not all our tragedies; nor so improper as the quaint double-entendres and forced similes squeezed out in the midst of misfortunes or at the point of death." Proceeding, he declares that nothing is ridiculous that executes a regular design, and the design of an opera is "to represent to us, in a dramatic way, some instructive fable, where the words are all to be delivered in music; therefore a king must rule, a general fight, a lover sigh in harmony." Returning to his favourite argument, our author thus winds up: "Nor can I observe anything in singing a conversation-piece more absurd or ridiculous than a familiar dialogue in heroic rhyme."

To the objection that opera disregards the rules of the classic stage and is a law unto itself, the writer makes a reply which may interest Wagnerian readers: "It has ever been granted by those who allow an opera any existence at all, that things wholly supernatural and marvellous are warrantable in this kind of drama, though they would be damned in a regular tragedy or comedy. An opera may be called the tyrant of the stage; it is subject to no poetical laws, despises the power or limitations of a parliament of critics, and subsists altogether by absolute sway and its own uncontrollable prerogative. It has liberty to range heaven, earth, and hell, call gods, spirits, and devils to its assistance, and all this unbounded freedom is taken for the probable, or rather what is necessary in this entertainment." In support of his contention the words of "one of our most eminent playwrights and critics" are cited: "An opera is a poetical tale or fiction, represented by vocal and instrumental music; the supposed persons of this musical drama are generally supernatural, as gods, goddesses, and heroes; the subject, therefore, being extended beyond the limits of human nature, admits of that sort of marvellous and surprising conduct which is rejected in other plays; human impossibilities are to be received in faith, because where gods are introduced a supreme power is to be understood, and second causes are out of doors. But still propriety must be observed even here."

Discoursing upon the subjects proper for operatic treatment, Ralph again utters words not devoid of present interest. He strongly inclines to the myth, and proposes, half in jest, half in earnest, recourse to the literature of the nursery, discussing the merits of "Whittington and his Cat," "Valentine and Orson," and "The Seven Champions of Christendom." With reference to the last-named, our author, as if with a dim perception of events to come more than a century later, enlarges upon the question of presenting St. George's dragon: "But I fear that we should find some difficulty in meeting with a proper dragon, unless the African Company could procure us a sucking one, just out of the nest, to be brought up tame, and skilful masters to instruct it in the rudiments of music; or that Doctor Faustus could be prevailed upon to part with his artificial one, which really roars out a good tunable bass. Then, if Signor Boschi would condescend to sing the part of St. George's horse, with Senesino upon his back, and Signor Pal—ni would allow himself to be clapped into the dragon's belly, I believe this plan would surprise us not only with a noble scene of recitative, but furnish us with an opportunity of throwing in the newest and finest duet that ever was heard—viz., between the horse and the dragon. . . . As my mentioning the dragon may excite the curiosity of many connoisseurs to see such a creature fly or tread the stage, and hear him sing, I think we need not go from home for a fable whose authority is undisputed, and which can furnish out as noble a monster scene as if we had gone to China for the story." I have not looked into the matter, but believe that no singing dragon appeared on the operatic stage till the fortunate year of grace, 1876.

Turning to ballad literature for subjects, the writer greatly favours "Moor of Moor Hall," perhaps because a dragon figures in that story also. Here he has prophetic visions of an approved nineteenth century music-drama. Read the following:—

"In the first Act you have a chorus of men, women, and children, whose bread-and-butter, milk porridge, or relations the dragon had devoured, accompanied by a suitable noise of sobs, sighs, and groans on proper instruments, which must have a fine effect, as to moving pity. These lamentations, rousing up the dormant spirit of Moor, he declares for the combat, which naturally ushers in the second Act with a chorus of warlike instruments preparative to the battle, joined to a complete roar on the part of the dragon, which must exhibit terror to a vast degree. Then the third Act concludes nobly with the dragon's death, and a grand chorus of the whole country, where sounds of triumph and joy, mixed with bells, bonfires, and country dances, performed by country squires, shepherds, milkmaids, and a saint or two introduced by a machine; one supposed to have given Moor a breastplate and headpiece, another more than human courage to achieve so wonderful an exploit."

On another point this writer anticipates later developments. Contending that operas should be staged by "a superior genius" who would not call down ridicule where admiration was expected, he goes on to mention that, in the case of an opera (Handel's "Rinaldo") produced at the Haymarket, "a chorus of wild sparrows was let fly behind the scenes, but they were never heard (the managers being out in their choice of a singing bird) nor seen, but in their effects upon the ladies' heads. Now had the wise-acres planted some tuneful flageolets behind the scenes and let several artificial nightingales appear hopping to and fro in the grove, art there, by imitating, would have outdone nature. This example may suffice to give the managers of these entertainments a caution not to be deceived into things unnatural by following nature too far."

At the time when this book was written, Italian operas contained no choruses, or, at best, but a short and unsatisfactory ensemble at the end of the work—"a few sorry canting notes," says Ralph, "fit only to accompany a Wapping crowdero." Our author contends very forcibly for a larger employment of the chorus, but shrinks from allowing it to "break in upon the thread of the design, by appearing in any part of the act." He would have it used by way of interlude, "to fill up the vacancies between the acts, which are now passed over in dull chit-chat, or in our duller gaping and staring at one another; so never suffering the business of the stage to drop." This plan, of course, would not work, but it is interesting to find a writer who flourished 160 years ago urging the employment of means—Ralph does not mention the chorus only—which have since become essential features in lyric drama. Our author, for all his banter and occasional extravagance, was a far-sighted and sensible man, whose book, even now, cannot be read without profit as well as amusement.

The other day I took up MM. D'Heylli and Marescot's splendid edition of Beaumarchais—("Théâtre Complet de Beaumarchais, avec les Variantes des Manuscrits originaux, publiées pour la première fois. Paris. Libraire des Bibliophiles. 1871")—my copy of which, by the way, is "extra illustrated" with nearly seventy portraits of artists who "created" the characters. Beginning to read, by mere chance, the author's address to lovers of opera, issued with "Tarare," I came upon another proof of the clearness with which some men in the last century saw the needs of the lyric stage. Beaumarchais begins, as might be expected in the case of a librettist, by asking why the poem of an opera is regarded as of slight importance, and complains that the true order—namely, Subject, Poetry, Music—is not observed. "By a strange inversion," he remarks, "it seems that the (dramatic) piece is nothing but a banal means—a pretext for the glorification of everything but itself. Here the subordinates have taken first rank, while the basis of the whole is no more than an insignificant accessory—the canvas upon which an embroiderer works what designs he will." Pursuing his enquiry, Beaumarchais addresses himself to the task of discovering why, in opera, the poem counts for nothing, while the music, insignificant though it be when without support, interests more than the words, and the dance more than the music. He holds that for this the public are not to blame. The public seek pleasure, and if they cannot find it in one way they will search in another. "Weary, at the opera, of not hearing the words, they turn to the music, which, even apart from the interest of the poem, pleases the ear to some extent. But music soon yields place to the dance, which amuses the eye more. In this deadly subversion of theatrical effect, pleasure is always the object, the rest becomes a matter of indifference. If the opera, instead of presenting a powerful interest, offers only a puerile amusement, what claim has it on esteem? Wherefore, the public are right; it is the opera which is wrong."

Falling back upon his own experience, after quoting La Bruyère and Voltaire, Beaumarchais declares that, while sensitive to the charms of good music, the opera wearies him, despite all the means taken to a better end. He accounts for this in the following words:—

"There is too much music in the music of the theatre, which is always overcharged; to use the naïve expression of a justly celebrated man, the famous Chevalier Gluck, 'our opera stinks of music.'"

Dramatic poets, argues our author, do not indulge in the magnificence of words and luxury of diction which are proper to the Ode. They recognise the duty, in the theatre, of coming nearer to nature. Composers of opera must learn the same lesson. "If it be true—and who can doubt it?—that music is in opera what verse is in tragedy, a stronger manner of presenting the thought or sentiment, let us be careful not to abuse this species of affectation, not to put too much of luxury into this manner of painting. A vicious abundance stifles, extinguishes truth; the ear is satiated, and the heart remains unaffected." Just as a French author said to a colleague, "You are Italian; translate this work into Italian, but keep out everything foreign," so would Beaumarchais say to a composer: "Friend, you are a musician; translate this poem into music, but do not, like Pindar, make a mistake in your gods and praise Castor and Pollux for the triumph of an athlete, since they have nothing to do with it." Here follow some weighty words: "If my musician possess a real talent, if he think before writing, he will feel that his duty and his success consist in rendering my thoughts through a medium more harmonious, in giving them stronger expression, and not in making a work apart. The imprudent person who wants to shine alone is but a phosphoric light, a will-o'-the-wisp. If he seek to live without me he will do no more than vegetate; pride forced so far kills both him and me. He dies at the last coup d'archet and hurls us to the bottom of Erebus."

Beaumarchais shows himself as eager for rapid action in opera as the most modern of the moderns. "As soon as the actor sings," he declares, "the action stops, and while the action stops, interest is annihilated. 'But,' you say, 'how if he must sing, since he has no other idiom?' . . . Here the art of the composer comes in. If he sing the subject, as it has been versified, solely to set it forth, I find a charm the more, not an agent of distraction." Proceeding, our author defines the situation thus: "What comes of all this? While the poet, chary of words, struggles to condense his style and concentrate his thought, if the musician does the contrary, delays, lengthens his syllables, drowns them in shakes, and robs them of force or meaning, the one pulls to the right and the other to the left; we know not which to hear; a melancholy yawning seizes me, and weariness drives me out of the theatre." Could there be a more complete anticipation of Wagner's theory regarding the word and the tone?

Much other in Beaumarchais's interesting preface deserves attention. He foreshadows the union of poet and musician in one person by dwelling upon the fact that Salieri (the composer of "Tarare") was born a poet and that he (Beaumarchais) was something of a musician. "Never, perhaps," he adds, "will there be success without the union of both these things." For the singer he has one precept: "Articulate the words distinctly"; and one also for the orchestra: "Be subdued. Orchestra of our Opéra! noble actor in Gluck's system, in Salieri's and in mine, you make but noise if you smother the words, and your glory is to express the sentiment."

X.

PETER ILTITSCH TSCHAIKOWSKY.

A very serious loss has befallen the musical world by the sudden death, while still in the prime of life and activity, of P. I. Tschaikowsky, who, only four months ago, as the honoured representative of Russian music, visited Cambridge to receive the complimentary Degree conferred upon him by that University. He was, however, no stranger to our shores, having previously visited England in 1888 and 1889, appearing in both years as the conductor of his own compositions at the Philharmonic Society's Concerts. And it is, perhaps, not too much to say that of all foreign contemporary composers who have been our guests, none inspired a more cordial liking than the genial and unaffected Russian whose premature removal we so deeply deplore. He was absolutely free from any affectation, and, in the fullest and best sense of the word, a thorough gentleman.

It is a curious feature about so many of the modern Russian composers that they have not come of a musical stock, and, more than that, before embracing the profession of music have embarked on other careers. This is true of Borodine, of César Cui, who was Professor of Fortification at the Engineering School of St. Petersburg, and of the subject of the present memoir. Peter Iltitsch Tschaikowsky was born on April 25, 1840, at Wotkinsk, in the Ural district, where his father held the post of engineer to the Imperial mines. When some years afterwards the latter removed to St. Petersburg to assume the directorship of the Technological Institute, his son was entered at the School of Jurisprudence in the Russian capital, and having pursued his studies in that department to a satisfactory close, he was appointed, in 1859, to a post in the Ministry of Justice. However, like Schumann, he soon discovered that the law was not his vocation, and when the new Conservatorium of Music was founded in St Petersburg in 1862, by the energy of Anton Rubinstein, who became its first director, Tschaikowsky resigned his Government appointment and entered the new school, where he remained till 1865, studying harmony and counterpoint under Professor Zaremba and composition under Anton Rubinstein. His career as a student was highly distinguished, and in the year last-mentioned he took his diploma and won a prize medal for a cantata on Schiller's "Ode to Joy." In the following year he accepted the invitation of Nicholas Rubinstein to join the staff of the newly founded Conservatorium at Moscow, and here for twelve years he held the Professorship of Harmony, Composition, and Musical History. The friendly relations that subsisted between him and his chief are commemorated in one of his latest works, a pianoforte trio inscribed "to the memory of a great artist—Nicholas Rubinstein." On quitting Moscow, where he had done excellent work as a teacher, Tschaikowsky devoted himself entirely to composition. As we have seen, he was somewhat late in beginning his musical education; but, once started, he soon made up for lost time by his inexhaustible productive energy. The list of his orchestral works includes no fewer than five symphonies; two pianoforte and two violin concertos—all familiar pieces in the repertory of the leading European virtuosi; several symphonic poems, one of which ("Francesca da Rimini") was given at the Doctor's Concert last June; a variety of orchestral pieces (overtures, suites, marches, serenades, &c.), quartets and other chamber music, pianoforte pieces and songs, some of his best work coming under the last category. Lastly, there remain his extensive and important contributions to the stage. The "Voivode," an opera in three acts, was produced at Moscow in 1869; "Opritschnik," four acts, 1874; "Wakule the Smith," three acts, 1876; "Eugen Onegin," 1879; "The Maid of Orleans," 1881; "Mazeppa," 1884; "La Dame de Pique," 1890; and "Iolanthe," 1892, complete the list of his operas. He also composed two or three ballets and incidental music to the drama "Snegourotchka." Of all his dramatic compositions, none have attained so much success as "Eugen Onegin," founded on Poushkine's well-known poem. It is, perhaps, the most popular Russian opera ever written, and the moderate impression it created when given in London a couple of years ago may be accounted for, in part at least, by the inadequateness of the performance.

After leaving Moscow, Tschaikowsky resided successively in a variety of places, spending a good deal of time in Italy and Switzerland. From 1878 onward, when his friend, Nicholas Rubinstein, introduced his music to the Parisian public at the Concerts in the Trocadéro during the Exhibition, he was known and appreciated in Paris. In Germany his name, of late years, has constantly figured in the programmes of orchestral and chamber concerts, and in Berlin, in particular, thanks in great measure to Dr. von Bülow, he was always sure of a cordial welcome.

The predominant characteristics of Tschaikowsky's music have been described by Mr. Dannreuther as essentially Slavonic—fiery exaltation alternating with languid melancholy, a fondness for huge outlines and barbaric gorgeousness of colour. This is no doubt true to a very considerable extent, but although Tschaikowsky undoubtedly made considerable use of national themes and rhythms in his works, and in the choice of subjects almost invariably drew upon the treasures of Northern literature, his wide culture and extensive acquaintance with German music inclined him to an eclecticism which in his earlier days aroused the hostility of Chauvinistic critics in Russia. "Eugen Onegin" might have been written by a cultivated musician of any nationality, so free is it from local or national colour. Though somewhat severe, there is undoubtedly much truth in Rubinstein's remarks, in his recently published "Conversation on Music," on the modern Russian school of which Tschaikowsky was, perhaps, the most distinguished representative. This school, he says, "on its instrumental side is the outcome of the influence of Berlioz and Liszt, and, with special reference to the pianoforte, one must add the influence of Schumann and Chopin as well. Above all this, a studied and deliberate national tendency makes itself felt. The productions of the Russian school reveal a thorough-going acquaintance with technique and a veritable mastery of colour, but, at the same time, a complete absence of design or form."

Latterly Tschaikowsky had resided in St. Petersburg, where he enjoyed a personal popularity second to no artist throughout the length and breadth of Russia. He was an especial favourite with the Imperial family, but remained unspoiled by his social success. Thanks to the munificence of the Czar and the profits of his copyrights, he was the possessor of a handsome income, but it is stated that he has left next to nothing. Having no wife or family dependent upon him he never saved his money, but spent it freely in charity. As an instance of the chivalrous and gentlemanly feeling which was so marked a feature in his character, we may conclude this notice with the following anecdote. When M. Lamoureux, the famous French conductor, visited Russia early this year, he was entertained at a dinner in Moscow, at which some of his hosts went out of their way to institute invidious comparisons between him and Von Bülow, whose name was greeted with derision and abuse. Tschaikowsky had no sympathy with this mixing up of art and politics, which was at the bottom of this demonstration, and though it involved no little courage to run counter to the popular current of Gallomania, he issued a most spirited protest in the Russian and French papers against the indecency of the attack on Von Bülow, who was then lying dangerously ill, and who, whatever his faults and extravagancies, had done more than any other foreign musician to popularise Russian music outside Russia.

American journalists are nothing if not forcible. A recent article in the Chicago Indicator, professing to sum up the case of the musical fiasco in the World's Fair, exemplifies this in a most amusing manner. It informs the world that the cause of failure was "the downright stupidity and arrogance of the musical director of the Bureau, Theodore Thomas." No details are given, and we are left to wonder what acts of a gentleman who for years has been held up to us as a model director can have deserved such reprobation. "He is one of the kind of men," says the Indicator, "that believe no one should have the temerity to criticise or suggest." This does not seem a very serious fault in the head of a Bureau. We read on, hoping to find some more definite charges, and only come to this: "The Bureau of Music became an eyesore. It seemed to be organised chiefly for the benefit of Director Thomas and Secretary Wilson. Thomas was defiant and arrogant. He shook his fist at the whole music trade, and the music trade turned about and, like a python, crushed Mr. Thomas in a twinkling." Really, really, the spectacle of a conductor shaking his fist at the whole music trade—were they gathered together on purpose?—must have been a strange one. But before we have time to recover from the shock of hearing how poor Mr. Thomas met a frightful fate, the Indicator confounds us with the next sentence: "That was the beginning of his humiliation." We should not have thought that anything of importance could happen to a man after he was crushed, either physically or morally. What happened to Mr. Wilson is equally perplexing. We are told "Secretary Wilson aped his master. He, too, was proud and arrogant in a two-for-a-nickel manner. He found immense satisfaction in expanding himself like the frog in the fable that tried to emulate the ox. The frog finally burst wide open, and Mr. Wilson's fate was not much better. Water always finds its level." This paragraph is a perfect conundrum. The phrase "two-for-a-nickel" is probably American for "two-penny-ha'penny," and may pass. But has Mr. Wilson really burst, if not quite "wide open" then partially? And did the water which obeyed the laws of gravity cause the disaster, as though Mr. Wilson were a reservoir—or what, what does our friend mean? We never remember to have read an article which, in the space of two columns, could more thoroughly mystify us as to the writer's purport.

Writing of the recent discovery at Delphi of a hymn to Apollo inscribed on stone, with the musical notation, the Standard says: "This discovery is the more remarkable as it is expected that it will be the key to the music of Ancient Greece, which has hitherto been unknown." Nearly all the daily papers have alluded to it as the "key" to ancient Greek music, and one paper even goes so far as to say, "This is the only record yet found that music was used by the ancient Greeks centuries before Christ." (The italics are ours.) Students of musical history have good reason to wonder at the extreme ignorance of the subject shown by some of our daily contemporaries, several of which have devoted long articles to the matter, evidently written by persons well acquainted with the Greek language and classics. It is well known—the information is given in several easily-accessible works on musical history—that treatises on Greek music, amply sufficient to reconstruct the scales, have come down to us, and that Alypius has supplied us with the complete notation used by the Greeks. For the reconstruction of their rhythm, we have Aristoxenus, and an anonymous writer of the second century of our era, who gives the signs for time measurement, corresponding with our crotchet, quaver, dotted crotchet, &c., and rests. Hence, when the recent "find" is published, as it shortly will be by the French Government, we have a complete "key" to its translation into modern notation. The Standard informs us that "the musical notation is that of Aristoxenus, a pupil of Aristotle," by which we may conclude that the composition is that of Aristoxenus, for he furnishes us with no examples of musical notation in his treatises. If this hymn proves to be really a composition by Aristoxenus, it will certainly be the most valuable piece of Greek music yet discovered. Aristoxenus was an earnest student and admirer of the classical school of music, then in its decline; hence his compositions would certainly partake of the characteristics of this school. Another example of the classical school is a fragment of a chorus of Euripides exhibited last year at the Vienna Exhibition. This contains notes of the enharmonic genus, and suggestions of a very beautiful rhythmical construction, distributed between the voice and instruments, somewhat in the manner of Schubert's "Geheimes." We shall return to the subject of these recent discoveries of Greek music in a future number.

A recent article on "The Organ and the Pianoforte" in the columns of a weekly contemporary, though calling for no comment in itself, raises a question on which we have a few words to say. There has ever been a conflict of opinion between teachers of the organ and of the pianoforte as to whether the study of the two instruments is compatible. Many pianoforte teachers assert that playing the organ hardens the touch. Many organists desire their pupils to practise the pianoforte with a view to improving their execution. Moreover, some people believe that the modern pneumatic or electric action, having removed the objectionable resistance in the organ keyboard, the two instruments are now on a level. But they one and all appear to have overlooked the fact that what is called "the touch"—that is, the mode in which the key is moved by the fingers—is (or should be) diametrically opposed in the two instruments. In the pianoforte a hammer has to deliver a blow of infinitely graduated strength. The finger therefore deals a blow of infinitely graduated swiftness (or power). This is the alpha and omega of pianoforte tone-production. But in the organ there is nothing of this. So long as the key is pushed down the amount of speed put into the finger matters nothing. Strength sufficient to overcome the resistance of the key and to depress many keys in rapid succession is indeed necessary, and here, indeed, the modern organs are kind to lady-like fingers, but the delicate variations of touch required for the pianoforte are only wasted nerve-power on the organ. Legato and staccato are achieved in a totally different way on the two instruments, since on the organ a note will sound if the key be only partly depressed, whilst in the pianoforte every blow must go home. It would appear, therefore, that though organists may improve their manual dexterity by practising the pianoforte, pianists have nothing to gain by practising the organ, and may lose much, unless they can dissociate the two instruments in their minds. That this is possible many brilliant examples, from Mendelssohn to Saint-Saëns, afford proof. But in this scientific age it behoves pianists and organists to know exactly what task their fingers have to perform, and this is wholly distinct and radically different on the two instruments.

The paper read by Mr. Naylor at the first meeting of the Musical Association voiced an objection which many intelligent persons urge against the later dramas of Wagner on the ground that they lack "action." It is said that works of which the action is so slow are undramatic, and therefore, of course, bad dramas. It seems to us that this argument, though plausible, is nevertheless superficial. A drama that is intended for musical treatment in the modern manner should obviously be full of emotional suggestion of a kind expressible only by means of music. Its "action" consequently will be rather a progress of emotions and passions than one of events. True, these emotions and passions are revealed to us dramatically by their causes and effects—i.e., the march of events which forms the action proper, and, of course, by the gestures of the actors; but they are not depicted as emotions and passions, but inferred by us from the action. Emotions and passions can only be depicted in shapes which have an affinity with their own. Music supplies these in a more perfect, more direct and unmixed way than any other art. It follows that if the action be too swift and the emotion too fully expressed by means of the action, the drama will not be suitable for musical treatment. For, firstly, music cannot do much to help dramatic action, and is felt at once to be, if not an actual hindrance to it, yet a thing on the outside of and in no way necessary to it; and secondly, music being only capable of depicting the colour, the feeling, the emotional atmosphere (Stimmung) of the action, these must be in excess of any possible adequate presentation by means of the action, or there will be nothing for music to express. Now a spoken drama overcharged with psychical elements always drags. Here, of course, music steps in to deal with the emotional overflow in its own characteristic fashion. The "book" of a music-drama should not be judged by the canons applicable to a spoken play, any more than the form in which its music is cast should be measured by standards derived from works the scope and aim of which are totally different. As Mr. Swinburne puts it: grapes do not grow on figtrees, nor figs on a vine.

Parliamentary Blue-Books are not, as a rule, very interesting to musical people, but an exception is found in the Annual Report of the British Museum which has recently been issued. The fact that "7,497 titles have been written for the Music Catalogue during the year" proves that there has been considerable activity in the music department. In regard to additions, "5,148 pieces of music, each piece complete in itself, have been acquired by copyright during the year." Who will say that England is not a productive musical nation after that, even supposing that all the published music has been sent to the Museum, as it ought to be? And how many of these 5,148 pieces were stillborn, or will die in infancy, are very natural questions. Turning to the antiquities in printed music, it is gratifying to learn that "several works of interest and rarity" have been acquired, especially in madrigals and motets of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Two rare works by Matheson, Handel's rival; a copy of the plain-chant setting of the Music for Holy-week, by Juan Navarro, printed in Mexico in 1604, one of the earliest musical works printed in America, are amongst the new treasures, as are also two works for the Spanish guitar, both published in Bologna in 1646. In musical MSS., Liszt's Oratorio of "Christus," full score, in the composer's autograph, has been secured for our national treasure-house; also an "Antiphonarium et Graduale" (Ambrosianum), of the eleventh century; a book of Masses and Motets, temp. Henry VIII.; and what is partly a native production, a MS. of "Fidelio," with Recitatives by Balfe; in addition to other works of interest. Those who utilise the invaluable resources of the Museum will readily testify to the present efficiency of the printed and MS. music departments, under the able superintendence of Mr. Barclay Squire and Mr. Hughes-Hughes respectively. Even analytical concert-programmes and festival word-books now receive attention, and the music catalogue has been improved.

Our readers may perhaps remember that when Peter Cornelius's posthumous and unfinished opera "Gunlöd" was some time since performed at Weimar, Strasburg, and Mannheim, it was announced as "completed and orchestrated by Dr. E. Lassen." Some friends of the deceased composer, Karl Hoffbauer, a pupil of Cornelius's, have now protested against this description, and affirmed that it was this musician who completed his master's work, and that Lassen only altered and amplified the orchestration. The matter was discussed at some length in several German papers, with the result that Dr. Max Hasse, of Weimar (where Lassen is Conductor at the Theatre), who was appointed arbitrator, gave it as his opinion, after a careful perusal of all the available material, that Hoffbauer's friends are correct in their assertion. Thereupon Dr. Lassen declared that he had, "on artistic grounds," taken all Hoffbauer's "additions" as having been founded on sketches by Cornelius, and that it never entered into his head to appropriate somebody else's work. He was, however, now convinced of his mistake, and would therefore withdraw his score. When Dr. Lassen, for the first time after this declaration, appeared at the conductor's desk, the Weimar public gave him a most enthusiastic ovation to express their implicit belief in the perfect good faith of his statements. The conductor's desk and seat were smothered under a profusion of laurel wreaths and flowers, and it was with some difficulty that Dr. Lassen could restore quiet, to address a few words of thanks for these marks of the esteem in which the Weimar public hold him.

In a recent issue of the Indépendance Belge a wholly delightful tale is told of the resourcefulness and audacity of an Italian impresario, which is almost too good to have been invented. It appears that this impresario, who was touring in Italy with a small opera company, was about to produce Bizet's "Djamileh" for the first time in an out of the way town, when the tidings reached him of Gounod's death. The news placed him in rather an awkward position, for, whereas it was clearly his duty to improve the occasion by giving an in memoriam performance of one of the late composer's works, he did not see his way to mounting any of Gounod's operas at short notice with the forces at his disposal. Suddenly a brilliant idea occurred to him, and he hastened off at once to the local printer to make a slight alteration in the bills with which he was about to placard the town. As emended they now ran as follows:

Homage to Gounod.
Positively the first performance of
The One Act Opera
"Djamileh"
Words by M. Louis Gallet.
Music by Charles Gounod.

On the eventful night the enthusiasm of the inhabitants knew no bounds. "Djamileh" drew a splendid house, recalls were numerous, and at the end of the performance the curtain went up on a group of the whole company posed round a plaster bust of the deceased master—a truly touching sight. After three more successful performances of "Djamileh" the impresario made his preparations for departure, being due at another town. But before he left, a puzzle-headed native came to see him and asked him point blank, "Surely Gounod never wrote 'Djamileh'"? "Well," replied the unabashed impresario, "now that I come to think of it, I'm not so sure that he did. But, anyhow, he wrote 'Medjé,' and it's the most natural thing in the world to confuse the two titles—'Medjé,' 'Djamileh,' why they're as like as two peas."

Evil fortune has not yet done with Mr. Cowen's "Signa," which finds its Italian career cut short for the present, through no fault of the work, or, we are very sure, of the composer. The truth is that the Temple of Art prosaically known as an opera-house is no less the scene of inharmonious contention now than when Handel "among the foremost fighting fell." Those who know anything about such matters are quite prepared to believe that the appearance in Milan of an English composer and an English opera gave concern to the men already in possession, and if they took action accordingly there is no reason for surprise. What seems inexplicable and not a little absurd is the manager's reported belief that Mr. Cowen had influenced the English press to attack Leoncavallo's "I Medici," by way, we suppose, of reprisal. This notion shows a lamentable ignorance of possibilities. In the first place, Mr. Cowen could not turn the English press in the direction of unjust strictures if he tried ever so hard; and in the next place, he would not if he could. To put the case on the lowest ground, what had he to gain by inspiring attacks on "I Medici," the good or evil fortune of which is a matter quite apart from himself and his own work? As for the gratification of unworthy personal feeling, those who know Mr. Cowen know also that he is incapable of such conduct.

English public dinners are fruitful in effects of various kinds—all more or less powerful and permanent; but few banquets that we can call to mind are more likely to yield good results than that given the other day at the Mansion House by the Lord Mayor "In Honour of Music." By this graceful act Sir Stuart Knill gave forceful expression to the high esteem in which music and its professors are now held by all classes of the community, and, at the same time, established a precedent which it will be difficult in future to ignore. We trust that musicians generally will appreciate the compliment which the City of London, through its head, has paid them; and that they will do so, moreover, in the most practical way—namely, by supplying still further justification for the respect now shown to them by members of the learned professions and votaries of the sister arts. That this respect has been legitimately won is as true in the case of music as it is in that of the drama; but, in each profession, it has been won by the leaders, rather than by the rank and file. Let the imprint of the civic seal serve as a reminder that Noblesse oblige.

There is ample food for thought in the following letter, addressed to a Bristol daily paper: "Sir,—May I respectfully ask the clergymen who signed the letter to you, what they consider a 'living wage' for their organists, and if their conscience acquits them of getting the best talent that they can obtain at the lowest possible remuneration? They may tell me that, if I am not satisfied with my salary, why not get another organ? I lately tried at one of the churches, where the salary offered was moderately good—say, £25 per annum. I was informed by one of the vestry that they had about fifty applications, some offering to take the office at less salary, so anxious were they to obtain the situation. I ask the reverend gentlemen how this excessive competition is to be avoided between musicians, as they say it may be in the coal trade?—Yours truly, Organist."

FACTS, RUMOURS, AND REMARKS.

The leading features of The Musical Times Supplements are so well known, and have been so widely approved, that it is not strictly necessary to do more, with regard to the Supplement which will appear in the early part of this month, than to mention the name of the master chosen as its subject. Beethoven and Mozart have had their turn, and now Handel will receive all the honour that such a medium can convey. The illustrations will be numerous and of great interest, while the literary matter, edited and partly written by Mr. Joseph Bennett, can hardly fail in commending itself to the nation which has given Handel a place among its heroes. Mr. W. H. Cummings, Mr. A. J. Hipkins, Dr. A. H. Mann, and Sir Walter Parratt are among those who will contribute articles of special importance.

This is how our generally sober contemporary, the Musikalisches Wochenblatt, writes àpropos to Eugen d'Albert's opera "Der Rubin," lately produced at Carlsruhe: "E. d'Albert has made a piece of the German musical motherland his own, a delightful place, situated at the foot of the proud mountain range crowned by Richard Wagner's creations, and not far away from the fragrant flower gardens of the too soon departed Cornelius. He has watched and tended this piece of the musical world of thought, religiously observing the rules laid down by the greatest masters of musical agriculture. Here and there he may have sought counsel of his more experienced neighbour Brahms, and now he invites us to an inspection of his young plantation. Everything stands in fullest bloom. Lovely fragrant flowers of melody surround us; artistically entwined creepers fringe the paths which are nowhere obscured; some oriental sycamores give shade, and swelling fruits of harmony invite to enjoyment. A clear streamlet, forming here and there pleasant waterfalls, ripple with never ceasing motion through the entrancing garden, and we who have so frequently nowadays to push our way past gigantic imitation trees and artificial waterfalls, through whole forests of scentless paper flowers and tin cactuses, and to wade through endless deserts of absolute poverty of invention, we feel how our heart warms and thrills in the midst of all this simple and well ordered naturalness." Air! Air!

Her Majesty's choice of "Fra Diavolo" for performance at Balmoral by the Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company serves to remind amateurs that in the present day Auber's charming works are denied them. Time runs apace, and we now look back over a long interval to the period when "Fra Diavolo" still held the Covent Garden stage, and it was possible now and then to hear "La Muette de Portici," "Le Domino Noir," and "Les Diamants de la Couronne." Whether the operas which have supplanted these are better or worse is a consideration not now to the point, because, in either case, the fact that the French composer's delightful music is mute affords just ground for regret. We do not expect Sir Augustus Harris to remember Auber. On his vast stage and in his big house French opéra comique resembles a small picture with a disproportionately large frame, and cannot be seen to full advantage. What we require is a theatre of moderate size devoted to this class of lyric drama, with performances in English by native artists, as at Balmoral. It may be said that French opera needs French acting, and there is much truth in the remark; but if we cannot attain the best, let us get as near thereto as possible. We have operatic classes in our great music schools and plenty of young people resorting to them. Surely from these there must be some results of a satisfactory nature. But even the Carl Rosa Company, a complete organisation with a name and a career, holds aloof from London as uncertain of support. Nevertheless, a change must come some day, and, at the worst, one is permitted to hope.

The choice of Schumann's "Genoveva" for performance by the operatic class of the Royal College of Music distinctly claims approval from a musical point of view. It has many times been urged that the public work done by students, alike in the concert-room and on the stage, should be made to serve a double purpose, and not only exhibit the talents of pupils, but increase public knowledge of unfamiliar compositions. It is not with the managers of such performances as with the impresario, who has to produce that which he thinks his patrons will approve rather than what they ought to hear. Amateurs may be perfectly assured that "Genoveva" will never be brought out in the ordinary course of business. The book is a bad one, not only in construction, but because it ignores the most pathetic and moving passages in the legend. Even the music, beautiful as much of it is, rarely attains to strong dramatic expression. Yet the opera should be heard, in common with everything from the pen of genius, and the Royal College deserves well of London music-lovers for undertaking to present it.

The prospectus of the new season of Britton Concerts (Hampden Club, Phœnix Street, King's Cross) is a quaint document. We read in it, after a statement that the Concerts do for concerted vocal music what the "Pops" do for concerted instrumental works: "But while the former Concerts are popular chiefly with gentlefolks and the well-to-do, these are meant to be popular with the common people, who, on payment of the inconsiderable price of four pots of beer, are admitted to any part of the room. . . . The vocal music, as in last year's Concerts, will be mostly the unhackneyed glees of the English school; and we shall omit 'By Celia's Arbour,' 'When Evening's Twilight,' and such crambe repetita of the glee clubs. Of the great Elizabethans, Wilbye will be represented by some of his less known madrigals, and Weelkes by some of his entirely unknown, though incomparable, three-part songs." There is a pleasant smack of old-world heartiness and geniality about this, and we are very likely to pay the Britton Concerts a visit.

The other day, in a town not a thousand miles from the Scottish border, a worthy and gracious Mayoress distributed prizes to certain successful students in music, and made them the usual speech. A very good address it was; eloquent in praise of the art, but more especially brave in its confession of a comprehensive taste. "I must confess," said the Mayoress, "to a liking for a really good comic song—nothing vulgar, avoid that as you would poison—but a song that called forth honest, hearty laughter was of great value in these days of keen competition and strain. I feel our thanks are due to Chevalier for his 'Old Dutch,' 'Dear Eliza,' and the humorous 'Old Kent Road.' Some people seem to forget that the same God who made us to weep made us also to laugh, and that wit and humour were his gifts, and worthy of cultivation." What the grave and learned musicians present thought of this they seem to have kept to themselves.

The movement for a Gounod memorial in France is progressing, and the end will certainly be reached. Something should be done in this country to show our appreciation of the master and the respect in which we hold his memory. It is the fashion now—and a very sensible fashion too—to found scholarships as monuments of departed worth. Why not a Gounod Scholarship at the Royal Academy of Music, our senior "Conservatoire"? The deceased composer lived amongst us for some years; for us, in effect, he wrote two great sacred works, and to us, in common with all nations, his undying opera, "Faust," has given infinite pleasure. Here is provocation enough for such a memorial as we suggest.

In Pagnerre's "Charles Gounod, sa Vie et ses Œuvres," it is stated that the "Funeral March of a Marionette" was written as a joke, and intended to imitate the walk of an English critic. It would be interesting to know on what authority this statement rests, and it is almost impossible to suppose that the French master could sink so low as to prostitute his art for the purpose of ridicule. If he did so, he must have been, at the moment, under very evil influence. The only English critic at that time having anything peculiar in his gait was J. W. Davison, whom an accident in infancy lamed for life. That Mr. Davison entertained no suspicion of what Pagnerre asserts is quite certain. The "Funeral March" was a special favourite with him, and the present writer often joined him in playing it as a pianoforte duet. On such occasions there was generally a stoppage somewhere for an explosion of laughter.

Three thousand people crowded into Gloucester Cathedral when the first Recital of sacred music for the present season took place. This was the eightieth performance since Dean Butler, now Master of Trinity, started the Recitals in 1886, with Mr. C. Lee Williams as his willing helper and musical "right hand." The popularity of the meetings increases rather than abates as time goes on, while their procedure is the same in its simplicity as at first. A few vocal solos, with a certain number of choruses and organ pieces, make up the programme, and one or two devotional hymns are sung by the entire congregation. Cannot this admirable and successful example be more widely followed than it is? At present, as far as we are aware, only Norwich and Bristol have similar gatherings in their Cathedrals.

It is interesting to know that the string quartets at the Monday Popular Concerts are now played upon instruments all of which were made by Antonius Straduarius, Mr. Alfred Gibson having lately purchased of Messrs. Hart and Son a Straduarius viola of great beauty. This instrument was formerly in the possession of the late Charles Reade, the novelist, and was purchased from him by the late Mr. George Hart, in whose private collection it remained upwards of fifteen years. It then passed into the hands of an eminent collector in Paris, and was subsequently repurchased by Messrs. Hart and Son. The four instruments now composing the quartet are all of the "grand period" of Straduarius's work, and are dated as follows: Lady Hallé's, 1709; Mr. Ries's, 1710; Mr. Gibson's, 1728; and Signor Piatti's, 1720.

The Allgemeine Musik-Zeitung prints a hitherto unpublished letter of Franz Schubert which, although but short, is so characteristic of his modesty and conscientiousness, and such a striking proof of his admiration for one greater than himself, that we feel justified in translating it. It bears no date: "Most esteemed Herr v. Bärtel,—As I have really nothing for full orchestra which I could send forth into the world with a calm conscience, and there are in existence so many pieces by great masters—e.g., by Beethoven: Overture 'Prometheus,' 'Egmont,' 'Coriolan,' &c., &c., &c., I must most sincerely beg your pardon if I cannot be of service to you on this occasion. Forgive me, therefore, my too hasty and thoughtless promise.—Yours obediently, Franz Schubert."

The other day the Lübeck General Anzeiger gravely announced that a new opera, "'Der Bajazzo,' by Signor I. Pagliacci," would shortly be performed in the old Hansa town. The credit of discovering the composer, Signor I. Pagliacci, belongs, we may remark, to a London musical contemporary; but the Lübeck scribe has certainly gone "one better"—"Der Bajazzo" being merely the German title of Leoncavallo's famous opera. In the far distant future, we may safely prophesy, some conscientious Biographical Dictionary maker will include "I. Pagliacci" among nineteenth century composers. That is the way history is made.

According to a report from Buda-Pesth, engagements have been made there for the next season at Covent Garden Theatre, subject to the approval of the Intendant of the Royal Opera. It is purposed, if this authority may be credited, to bring over the orchestra and three of the principal artists. By way of Pesth comes, also, news that "Tannhäuser," "Lohengrin," "Tristan," "Die Meistersinger," the "Nibelungen Ring," "Fidelio," and "Don Giovanni" will be performed at Covent Garden in the course of June and July next. We mention the foregoing "under all reserves," and hoping that the threatened importation of an orchestra may not be true.

That wonderful provincial critic is now on the Montgomery County Times, and doing his very best Here are a few of his latest gems: "Mrs. —— sang with her usual taking effect, the rising and sinking of the voice was most attractive." "Mr. —— was in good form, his deep voice pervading the whole room, and sometimes sounding as of a deep subterranean rumbling." "Mr. —— sang extremely well, his beautiful voice breaking out sometimes like the sun from behind a cloud." Our friend will never be able to excel himself as we have him here.

Amateurs who look with a jealous eye upon the frequent visits of our best artists to America may be glad to learn that Mr. Edward Lloyd's absence from his English admirers next year is by no means certain. In all probability our leading tenor will spend the season among his own people. Anyhow, it is comfortable to know that English artists visiting the States do their work and come back. Fancy the consequences if, like American artists who favour England with their presence, they stayed on!

On the occasion of his eightieth birthday Verdi received the following telegram from Signor Crispi, the ex-Premier of Italy: "Francesco Crispi rejoices with Giuseppe Verdi, and hopes that for the greater glory of Italian Art he will attain at least the age of the Maëstro Galmini." To which Verdi replied: "It gives me great satisfaction to receive the good wishes of Francesco Crispi. I declare that I shall do everything possible to reach the age which he wishes me." The worthy referred to, an obscure Italian musician, died at the age of 135!

The Violin Times is the title of a new monthly journal, the first number of which appeared on the 15th ult. Its editors are Messrs. E. Polonaski and Edward Heron-Allen. It might be better printed, but the literary matter is distinctly good. Two letters of Paganini's (one in fac-simile); a translation of the "Arts and Crafts book of the Worshipful Guild of Violin makers of Markneukirchen, from 1677 to 1772"; and the first of a series of helps for violinists by Mr. Wallace Sutcliffe are prominent features. The Violin Times is welcome.

The Directors of the Cincinnati Festival Chorus have finally determined upon the following works for performance at the forthcoming Festival, under Mr. Theodore Thomas:—Brahms's "Song of Destiny" (Schicksalslied); Goetz's 137th Psalm, Posthumous; Schumann's "Song for the New Year"; Parker's "Hora Novissima." This latter work is also in rehearsal with the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston and the Springfield Choral Society.

The interest manifested on all occasions by H.R.H. Duke Alfred of Saxe-Coburg in the cause of music and its votaries has received a further illustration. He has signalized his accession by conferring the Order of Merit for Art and Science upon Dr. A. C. Mackenzie, Sir George Grove, Sir Joseph Barnby, and Mr. George Mount—a practical illustration of the adage Palmam qui meruit ferat. English music-lovers have reason to feel gratified at the honour conferred upon their fellow-countrymen.

Scene: A London Church. Parson and Choir discovered.

Parson: I claim to direct, not only the theological aspirations of the congregation, but the demisemiquavers, sharps, and flats of the choir as well.

Choir: We won't stand it. Confine yourself to dogma, and leave music to those who know something about it. We strike.

Parson: I shall fill up your places.

Choir: And we will go to another church.

[Exeunt severally.

The Guildhall School of Music is to be congratulated upon the gift of a portion of the late Sir W. G. Cusins's musical library—200 volumes. These books will doubtless be the nucleus of a much larger collection, and their utility in their new home will be far greater than would have resulted from dispersal by auction.

BRISTOL MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Last month we were unable to do more in connection with this Festival than record its beginning, on October 26. The lapse of four weeks makes ancient history of the event and all its circumstances, and as no new work was produced, and nothing of particular interest occurred in any other way, a brief notice will suffice. It should be stated, first of all, that the Festival, in point of executive means, was thoroughly well equipped. Sir Charles Hallé, who again acted as Conductor, had his Manchester orchestra there, and we all know what that means. As for the choir, it is open to question whether Mr. Rootham, the experienced chorus-master, ever turned out a better lot of singers. In this respect the Western City has a reputation to keep up, and right well was it sustained by careful balance of parts, purity of tone, and executive skill. The programme invited attack from those who consider that a Festival should always offer a proportion of novelty. But we must remember that the committee catered, not for quidnuncs who run about in pursuit of new things, but for the population of Bristol, to whom more than one of the works chosen was utterly unfamiliar, if not absolutely unknown. This would appear to be a sufficient defence of their policy, which, moreover, received the approval of local amateurs, who attended in numbers greater than those recorded in connection with the Festival of 1890.

The performances began with Handel's "Samson"—a work not often heard in Bristol, or, for that matter, anywhere else, despite the manifold beauties of its airs and the grandeur of its choruses. In the execution of this Oratorio the orchestra might certainly have done better, but the chorus was heard at its best and did everything as well as could reasonably be wished. The solos were entrusted to Madame Albani, Miss Clara Butt, Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. Bantock Pierpoint, and Mr. Andrew Black. Madame Albani was brilliant as ever in "Let the bright Seraphim," while Miss Butt earned the respect of the discriminating by her very artistic delivery of "Return, O God of Hosts." All the gentlemen did excellently well and it is hard to discriminate, but a special word may be said for Mr. Ben Davies and his effective singing of the important tenor solos. The attendance was not so large as it should have been, having regard to the nature of the work. Berlioz's "Faust" attracted a much larger audience in the evening of the same day. Here the orchestra, engaged upon a perfectly familiar task, made amends for defects in "Samson," and had to repeat both the Hungarian March and the Ballet of Sylphs. As with the band, so with the other divisions. Better choral singing could not have been desired, while Miss Esther Palliser, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Worlock, and Mr. Santley answered for the solos in a manner which need not be particularised.

On the second day the morning programme was the "Hymn of Praise" and Rossini's "Stabat Mater," as to which nothing need be said, save that the solo vocalists were Madame Albani, Miss Landi, Mr. Lloyd, and Mr. Santley. The attendance was again smaller than it should have been. In accordance with the rule at this Festival, no performance took place in the evening.

The morning of the third day brought a varied selection, comprising S. S. Wesley's anthem "The Wilderness," Dvorák's Symphony in G, and Schumann's "Paradise and the Peri." Dvorák's work was inserted rather late, to increase the attraction of a programme at which the public looked askance, thinking, perhaps, that "The Wilderness" is best heard in a church, for nothing, and not knowing what to think about "Paradise and the Peri." At any rate, the booking for this Concert was very poor, and in order to make an audience respectable in point of numbers the committee were obliged to scatter "paper" with a liberal hand. Wesley's anthem (which should have been given with the original organ accompaniment) went off tamely, but the Symphony, capitally played, stirred the public, and was the success of the occasion. What a fine and characteristic work it is! Let those who weakly believe with Wagner that Symphony said its last word in Beethoven's No. 9 perpend this remarkable composition. "Paradise and the Peri" was heard, it is to be feared, with somewhat languid interest, although the performance was generally good and the soloists—Miss Henson, Miss Landi, Mr. Ben Davies, and Mr. Andrew Black—were excellent. Truth to tell, some portions of the Cantata "hung fire" terribly, as usual—nay, as must needs be, for Schumann, who in great measure prepared his own libretto, showed himself anything but skilful at the task. The evening of this day was devoted to a Wagner programme, in which were the last two acts of the "Flying Dutchman" and a number of well-known pieces, orchestral and vocal. The much-discussed music attracted a large audience, who appeared highly to appreciate excerpts from the master's earlier operas. The singers were Miss Palliser, Miss Boucher, Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Santley, Mr. Worlock, and Miss Marie Gane, a local artist who did good service on various occasions during the week.

The proceedings ended, on the morning of the fourth day, with a performance of "The Messiah," in which the principal soloists engaged took part. We append the figures of attendance throughout the Festival: "Samson," 1,307; "Faust," 1,421; "Hymn of Praise," &c., 1,652; "Paradise and the Peri," 1,701 (counting "deadheads"); Wagner Selection, 1,762; "Messiah"—well, "The Messiah" headed the lot. The grand total, 7,843, was an advance of 170 upon that of 1890.

THE BERLIOZ CYCLE AT CARLSRUHE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

It may safely be said that those who are unacquainted with Berlioz as an opera composer (i.e., at least 99-100ths of the musical public) know only one side of the composer's qualities. Strange to say, in the three operas which date from the youth and advanced age of the composer, there is scarcely a trace of any one of his less admirable peculiarities such as are to be found in nearly all his works for the concert-room. One would have expected the composer of the "Symphonie Fantastique" and "Harold en Italie" to out-Meyerbeer Meyerbeer in his desire to make a sensation on his audience. So far from this being the case, there is never a moment at which the slightest element of unrefinement appears. It is true that in "Benvenuto Cellini," his first opera, there are arie with cadenzas, and all the usual paraphernalia of the operatic composers of the day; but compare the score, as a whole, with any opera that had lately been written in 1838, and it will be found that it marks a real and important degree of advance from the accepted conventions of the time. The libretto is, indeed, rather a poor affair, but it had the excellent result of making Berlioz determine henceforward to be his own librettist. And the masterly way in which he has treated each scene, and, in particular, the whole second act, with its vivid pictures of the Carnival, is especially surprising to those who remember the somewhat disjointed style of much of the composer's work. Musically, the third act, which concerns itself mainly with the casting of the statue of Perseus, is the most important, though much of the effect of the beautiful tenor air, with its exquisite pastoral accompaniment, is lost when it is sung during the progress of the founding, at a moment when the superintendence of the sculptor in person is above all things necessary. The work, as a whole, is justly reproached with a certain want of characterisation; the personages of the story have become the types that are so familiar in grand opera—for instance, in the central figure there is nothing to reflect the self-confidence, not to say "swagger," of the famous artist.

It is only when judged by the higher standard of the later operas that these defects appear; as compared with the grand operas of its own date, with any of Meyerbeer's, for example, it is a masterpiece of dramatic as well as of musical art. No better opening to such a series of performances as were given at Carlsruhe under Herr Felix Mottl's able direction from the 5th to the 12th ult. could be imagined, and its performance, in most respects, was excellent.

In the exquisite opéra comique "Béatrice et Bénédict," given on the 7th ult., the main dramatic motive of Shakespeare's play has been so completely left out of sight that Don Pedro becomes a purely superfluous character, being used, like Ursula, merely for the purpose of completing two delicious trios, though it must not be forgotten that Ursula takes part in the loveliest number of all, the inspired Duo-Nocturne, "Vous soupirez, Madame?" the effect of which upon the stage is quite extraordinary. Berlioz has added a most amusing scene, in which a fatuous musician directs a rehearsal of a composition of his own; the effect of this and of many other scenes is heightened by the excellently written music which Herr Mottl has set to what was spoken dialogue, and which, if it seems at times a little sombre in tone, serves all the better to throw up the brilliancy and unending vivacity of the original numbers. With a very little alteration, consisting, in fact, merely of the excision of two short passages in which the celebrated idée fixe occurs, the lovely scène du bal from the "Symphonie fantastique" is arranged to serve as an accompaniment for a dance at the opening of the second act, and the complete success of the result amply justifies the proceeding.

The crowning work of the composer for the stage, "Les Troyens," which occupied the evenings of the 11th and 12th, must be described as a "music-drama" of almost as full development as those of Wagner, though on completely different lines. Nothing can be more dissimilar than the actual methods of the two masters, yet it is certain that the effect produced by both is to some extent the same—viz., that the characters of the story, and the story itself, have been presented to us with a truth and force far beyond the power of drama unaccompanied by music. It is one of the most amazing things in the history of France and of music that as yet no attempt should have been made at either of the Parisian opera-houses to present this masterpiece of French music worthily. Its great length is, of course, the chief stumbling-block to its being performed all in one evening, though, even so, it is not as long as the "Götterdämmerung." The happy idea of connecting the story together by means of a bold addition to the Virgilian text, is entirely successful, and its suggestiveness will be plain at once. In the rapid course of events that pass in the first two acts, making up the part called "La Prise de Troie," Æneas is visited in a dream by the ghost of Hector, who commands him to seek, not merely, as in Virgil, a new country, but definitely, Italy. From that point onwards the hero is continually reminded of his destination, and the word "Italia" is uttered in almost every one of the subsequent scenes. Cassandra and the Trojan women cry it aloud as they prepare for death; the Naiads, Fauns, and Satyrs utter it (we must suppose in entire ignorance of its meaning) during the picturesque "chasse royale" in the Numidian forest; Mercury descends from heaven to prevent (by merely repeating it) Æneas from forgetting his mission in the charms of Dido; and, finally, Dido, as she expires, sees a vision of the Roman capitol and prophesies of Hannibal, who shall avenge her wrongs. In some ways the first part is the more dramatic of the two; the scenes follow one another with extraordinary power and conviction, and the inevitable doom of the city is felt from first to last. Musically, the numbers which demand notice are a remarkably beautiful duet between Cassandra and Chorœbus, her lover; a five-part chorus, "Dieux protecteurs," and the subsequent scene, enacted in dumb show, where Andromache enters with Astyanax to mourn over Hector's grave. A wonderful ensemble succeeds to this, in which each of what would naturally be called the solo parts is sung by either two or three voices (of soloists) in unison, and a most impressive effect of statuesque dignity is thereby created. A scene of enormous dramatic power, in which Cassandra, left alone, hears the sacred march of Troy, and gradually realises that it is being used to accompany the entrance of the wooden horse into the citadel, she being aware all the time of the purpose of the artifice. The Finale of this part, in which the prophetess inspires her companions to destroy themselves rather than become the slaves of Greek warriors, is marvellously beautiful, and their wild hymn is worked up to a splendid pitch of exaltation. These two acts are so exciting to those who have ears to hear that the opening of the next part, "Les Troyens à Carthage," would inevitably lose some of its effect if the whole work were played in one evening. Not that it matters much to discuss practical questions such as this, for there is not much chance, in the present condition of operatic matters, of seeing this noble opera in London, although M. Jean de Reszké would find himself suited "down to the ground" in the music of Æneas. The general design of much of this part, the pageants, triumphal choruses, &c., a certain "pas d'esclaves Nubiennes," and many of the utterances of the Queen after she realizes that Æneas has forsaken her, remind one so strongly of passages in "Aïda" that one is tempted to wonder whether Verdi ever witnessed one of the few performances which were given of this section at the Théâtre Lyrique in Berlioz's lifetime. It would be pleasant to linger over the many beauties of the earlier scenes (Act III. of the whole as originally cast), but the music of the later scenes is incomparably more important as well as more beautiful. The curious movement, almost purely instrumental, called "Chasse royale," is a most picturesque section, in the course of which the frightened sylvan creatures fly from the hunters; the storm and the peaceful end of the scene have given Berlioz so many suggestions that the neglect of this strange and characteristic piece by concert-givers is hard to account for. It might conceivably be more effectively arranged than it was at Carlsruhe, where, however, the stage management, as a rule, was most excellent throughout the cycle. The next scene opens with three delightful ballet numbers, and a lovely pastorale for the second tenor, "O blonde Cérès." There succeeds to this a group of three most beautiful movements, a quintet, a septet with chorus, and the love duet, which is the only number of the work known to most musicians. The last of these, the duet "Nuit d'ivresse," belongs to the loveliest things of its class in the whole range of music; nothing more melodious or appropriate to the situation can be imagined, and, in its own way, it is not less dramatic than the love-duet in "Tristan." For its words Berlioz has adapted the lovely scene between Lorenzo and Jessica in the last act of "The Merchant of Venice," a passage which is known to have been among his prime favourites in the whole of his adored Shakespeare. The fifth act of the whole, played at Carlsruhe as the fourth and fifth of the second evening, begins, à la Tristan, with a characteristic little sailor's song, sung, as in the opening of Wagner's work, by a singer out of sight. A little duet for sentinels leads to a splendid scene for Æneas in the course of which the ghosts of famous Trojans appear to remind him of his mission. This, and the subsequenf scene with Dido, reach a point of dramatic truth rarely, if ever, attained before; and the same high level is maintained in the last scenes, where Dido has a splendid solo, culminating in a pathetic reminiscence of the theme of the love-duet, and a noble piece of declamation before she stabs herself.

The climax of the final scene is preceded by a gloomy march of Priests, of most tragic import, and by a spirited piece of invective for two voices (Anna and Narbal, mezzo-soprano and bass) in unison. The course of the scene, from Dido's command to build a pyre until the end, where she kills herself as an apotheosis of Rome appears in the sky, presents a curious parallel with the end of "Götterdämmerung," and throws into all the stronger relief the entire absence of any musical resemblance between the two composers. Berlioz in this, his greatest achievement, appears rather as the legitimate successor of Gluck; his statuesque severity of style, the unconventionality in his means of expression, and in some ways the actual form of his melodies, remind the hearer continually of the great reformer of an earlier day. But, as a matter of course, Berlioz's treatment of the orchestra throughout his operas is most individual and always delightful. It is something of a surprise to find that he never overloads the accompaniments or sacrifices dignity to effect.

Wherever it is heard the work must make the same profound impression upon musicians as it did at Carlsruhe, although few companies will be able to provide two singers of such dramatic power and musical intelligence as Frau Reuss-Belce, whose Cassandra was wonderfully impressive, or Fräulein Mailhac, whose Dido was an impersonation of the utmost charm and intensity, even though she is scarcely a sufficiently perfect vocalist to do full justice to the music. In the less congenial part of Beatrice she showed unexpected comic power. The performance was wonderfully fine in nearly all ways, and, in particular, the excellent singing and acting of the chorus merits a word of commendation.

At the Concert given on the 8th, the "Symphonie fantastique" was given as a main attraction. Its performance, though creditable, was not nearly up to the level usually attained in London, and the two bells, which are a necessary part of the band in the Finale, were (apparently) represented by one tea-tray. Two movements from "Harold in Italy" were played—the Pilgrims' March and the Serenade; the former was taken almost exactly half as fast again as the metronome marks indicate, and both were far more finely played at Sydenham the other day. Frau Henriette Mottl's really exquisite singing (in French) of four of the strangely-neglected "Nuits d'Eté" was, perhaps, the most agreeable feature of the Concert, which began with the "Roi Lear" Overture.

MR. COWEN'S "SIGNA."

(From our own Correspondent.)

Mr. Cowen's new opera "Signa," which was produced on the 12th ult. at the Teatro Dal Verme, Milan, seems an eligible candidate for admission to the circle of compositions whose merits have only been brought to revelation through great tribulation. Certainly, few musicians have been beset by greater difficulties and annoyances than those which have dogged Mr. Cowen in his endeavours to produce "Signa." Commissioned originally for the Royal English Opera, it was not performed before the collapse of that ill-fated theatre; and when its composer, whose arrangements with Mr. Carte prohibited the presentation of the work in England until after the expiration of a considerable time, determined to produce it in Italy, curiously persistent ill-luck awaited him there. Arrangements were made for its production at Genoa, but when Mr. Cowen arrived to superintend rehearsals, he found that the artists engaged were so incompetent that he refused to allow the work to be given. From Genoa he went with his score to Milan, where he placed it before Signor Sonzogno. That gentleman at first refused to entertain the proposal for its production, but he eventually changed his mind; the announcement of his promise to bring out the opera coinciding happily with the appearance in Milan of many English critics and musicians, come thither for the performance of Verdi's "Falstaff." What further trials befell the composer—how, after giving his word of honour that "Signa" should be performed at least three times, that being, by custom, the regulation number for any new opera—the impresario declined to give more than two; how he further demanded 6,000 francs as the price of the third performance; how Mr. Cowen indignantly refused to pay that or any price—all these things are now matters of history and regret. After all, the point of immediate interest is that "Signa" has been performed, and was pronounced good by an audience from which the management had carefully excluded all those constituents of sympathy which are not usually disdained on such occasions.

Although some description of the libretto and analysis of the score of "Signa" appeared in The Musical Times of January, so many alterations have been made that it will not be superfluous to recapitulate the main features of the book, which was originally designed, it will be remembered, by the late Gilbert à Beckett, completed by Mr. H. A. Rudall, translated into Italian by Mr. Mazzucato, and finally revised and condensed by Mr. Cowen himself. At present the story may be briefly described as follows: Passing over the early incidents in the life of Ouida's hero, we find him in the first act a young man who, as he approaches manhood, betrays less and less inclination for the rustic life to which the affection of his uncle Bruno condemns him. Music is his one passion, and all his dreams are of the fame and fortune that would await him if he could but be made free of the outside world. Of his two playmates, Gemma and Palma, the first sympathises with him in his desire for freedom, though she is inspired by less worthy ambitions; Palma, on the other hand, represents the more placid joys of country life and virtues. So when Sartorio, an impresario travelling in search of undiscovered talent, arrives, and desires to take both Signa and Gemma away, Gemma goes with him cheerfully, but Signa is still kept by Bruno, who ends by driving the impresario from his door. Bruno reproaches the boy with his ingratitude, and at last snatches the violin from his hand and dashes it shattered to the ground. The second act shows us Signa apparently resigned to his lot; he would remain so, happy in the love of his uncle and Palma, were it not that Gemma returns suddenly, now rich and famous. She fires Signa's brain once more with the old dreams, and Bruno at last, seeing that the boy will never be content, declares his intention to withdraw his opposition. A pathetic leave-taking ensues, and the act ends as Sartorio, Gemma, and Signa go out together. We are next at Naples. It is Carnival time, and in the crowd of dancers and revellers is Signa, now broken-hearted. Gemma, it is clear, has quickly tired of his love, and in his despair he neglects his art and is sinking fast to ruin. Gemma appears, but will not heed his entreaties—she has a ducal lover. Presently comes Bruno, who, in his lonely village, has heard the story of Signa's distress, and is determined to put an end to the fatal passion which is wrecking his nephew's life. He begs Signa to come back and leave his treacherous mistress, but to no purpose, and when, shortly afterwards, he meets Gemma and finds her as heartless as ever, he stabs her to the heart. As Signa enters, drawn by her cries, he says, "I give you back your life." "No," is Signa's answer, "you have destroyed it for ever," and therewith slays himself upon his lover's corpse.

It requires no very close examination to discover that of the three acts the third is by far the richest in dramatic interest. In the first and second, it must be confessed, the material is spread somewhat thinly. The terminal incident of the first, for instance, is one that might easily fail of impressiveness, for, however clearly one may realise the psychological value of the situation in reading the novel, it is always a dangerous thing to put such an incident on the stage, where an awkward actor may ruin the most beautiful music. It is said that Mr. Cowen meditates still further changes in the plan of the opera, and may possibly merge the first and second acts. This will be a distinct strengthening of the book. Nevertheless, even as matters stand, the libretto has given Mr. Cowen some admirable opportunities; and it should be said at once that he has turned them to the fullest advantage. It is not easy to give any adequate description of the music, and in the absence of the score analysis is equally difficult. Perhaps I can best transcribe my impression of it by saying that in it Mr. Cowen's peculiar gifts have found completer and more distinct expression than in any of his previous works. His lyric faculty is familiar enough; here he gives us more beautiful melody than we have yet had from him. The duet between Bruno and Signa at the end of the first act, Bruno's solo at the beginning of the second, and the Finale of the same act; than these Mr. Cowen has written nothing more beautiful. Bright and spirited choral-writing has always been one of his characteristics; the chorus of the second act, "Questi fior," and the carnival choruses, show this faculty at its fullest. We have known him for a cunning master of orchestration, of a peculiarly subtle and distinguished quality; in the score of "Signa" he touches, for this part, his highest level.

There remains the greater question: How far does Mr. Cowen show in this work that he has the dramatic instinct—theatrical were, perhaps, the better word, since music may be dramatic and yet ineffective on the stage? It is a question not to be answered off-hand, or with any pretence of finality; but I have little hesitation in saying that in this work Mr. Cowen has proved his right to be counted amongst the few masters of dramatic music, and that he will be a potent factor in the future developments of modern opera. Mr. Cowen is certainly not of that more than modern school, whose chief artistic canon is that, so long as the ear of the spectator is filled with hearing and his eye with seeing, it matters not at all to regard sincerity and restraint. It is the abundance of these qualities in "Signa," quite as much as the actual beauty and strength of much of the music, that induces me to believe that, when he shall have found a really powerful libretto, Mr. Cowen may prove himself the English operatic composer for whom we have waited so long. The emotional constituents in the story of "Signa" are simple—primitive, if you will; and Mr. Cowen has shown the sincerity of his purpose by treating his subject upon natural and perfectly honest lines. Signa himself is scarcely heroic, and only a Young Italian would seek to bring into the musical expression of his story those cyclonic passions with which a perverse generation of opera-goers loves to be deafened. And if not Turiddu, neither is he Tristan; so you shall look in vain for Wagnerian methods. There are, it is true, two or three themes of which frequent use is made, but the manner of their employment is the composer's own. The most important is the theme of Signa's "Song of Liberty," in C minor, 6-8, on which the Prelude is formed; it appears in fragmentary form at intervals through the first act, re-appears as a prelude to the duet in the third, and, with a tragic cynicism in which Mr. Cowen would hardly have been suspected, is given out fff by the whole orchestra as the curtain falls on Signa's suicide. I use the word cynicism for want of a better, and with no suggestion of a light mockery: for this is no mere stage trick, but rather the expression of a great poetic idea which alone would proclaim the opera very considerable. Other themes might be noted, and instances be cited of the happiest results of Mr. Cowen's inspiration; but since to name an isolated passage, or to announce the key of a theme, can do little towards appreciation of a work, I prefer to do neither; nor shall I insist at length on the only conspicuous fault in his dramatic method—the too frequent employment of an almost "dry" recitative. I am content to record that my final impression is of a genuinely beautiful work of art, to the making of which heart and hand have wrought with equal sympathy and sincerity.

For the performance and mise-en-scène, it is sufficient to remark that the latter scarcely reached even the Italian notion of adequacy, but that the former was remarkable for the enthusiasm and sympathy brought to bear by all the interpreters. Mesdames Busi and Danisi, the representatives of Gemma and Palma, showed laudable intelligence; Signor Palermini failed to realise fully the rugged tenderness of Bruno's character, but his fine voice was well suited with the music of the part; and the extremely difficult character of Signa could hardly have found a cleverer interpreter than Signor Trabadelo, who is a singer of quite remarkable resources. Signor Cimini, a conductor of tact and experience, is entitled to no stinted praise; and a word of special commendation must be given to the chorus, than which I cannot remember to have heard a better.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY.

The recent death of the gifted French musician and composer, Charles Gounod, served to recall the circumstances under which the above-named Society was founded; and although in its early years it experienced some vicissitudes, it is now happily in vigorous life and is by common consent regarded as the leading Association for the performance of oratorios and secular choral works of magnitude in the metropolis. The new season was successfully opened, on the 2nd ult., with a performance of Berlioz's "Faust," the masterpiece of the gifted though eccentric French master as usual attracting a large and enthusiastic audience. It is not a little curious that although the wonderful colour and variety of Berlioz's orchestration must inevitably suffer to no small extent in the Albert Hall, yet the loudest applause was accorded to the famous Hungarian March and the Danse des Sylphes, both movements being vociferously re-demanded and repeated. But the forces under Sir Joseph Barnby's direction were heard to most advantage in the choruses, these being rendered with superb power and precision, and, where needful, delightful refinement. Owing to the illness of Madame Moran-Olden, who was engaged for the part of Marguerite, Mrs. Hutchinson took her place and gave full satisfaction. Mr. Ben Davies as Faust, Mr. Henschel as Mephistopheles, and Mr. R. Grice as Brander merit similar commendation.

Nowhere, save at the Handel Festival, can the magnificent double choruses in "Israel in Egypt" be heard to such advantage as at the Albert Hall, and the performance on the 23rd ult. was one of the finest ever given in this building. The "Hailstone" chorus was, of course, encored, and so was the duet "The Lord is a man of war," sung, as usual, by 400 tenors and basses. Though we object on principle to tampering with the works of the great masters, it cannot be denied that the effect in this instance is exceedingly fine. Mr. Edward Lloyd, who was in magnificent voice, fairly surpassed himself in "The enemy said," and was compelled to yield to the vociferous demands for a repetition. In the two contralto airs, "Their land brought forth frogs" and "Thou shalt bring them in," Miss Clara Butt's fine voice told well, but the young lady's method of production is not improving, and she should guard against a growing tendency to indulge in the vibrato. Once acquired this vicious habit is very difficult to cure. The useful service rendered by Miss Anna Williams and Miss Margaret Hoare should not pass without acknowledgment.

LONDON SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

These Concerts supply a striking illustration of the familiar adage, "Nothing succeeds like success." Last season it was felt that Mr. Henschel had "turned the corner," and the state of things revealed on the 8th ult., when the first Concert of the present series (the eighth) was given, left no room for doubt as to the ultimate success of the enterprise. A large and brilliant audience assembled, and there was a "something in the air" that, however difficult to describe, told unmistakably of confidence and prosperity. Mr. Henschel has a right to feel proud of his triumph over that deadliest of the foes of art, apathy. The stimulating atmosphere was not without results. We have never heard a better performance under Mr. Henschel's bâton than was given on this occasion of the C minor Symphony of Brahms. It was so good that the audience recalled the Conductor to the platform in order to express their thanks Of similar excellence was the rendering of Tschaikowsky's Elegie for strings, which, in memory of the composer, was substituted for Wagner's "Faust" Overture, originally announced. A fine performance of Bruch's beautiful G minor Concerto—which, by the way, is rather too often played—was given by Miss Frida Scotta, who in mastery of her difficult instrument is advancing by leaps and bounds. Her second solo was Svendsen's Romance. Two songs with orchestral accompaniment were sung with customary dignity and taste by Mr. Plunket Greene—one, Professor Stanford's newly-composed "Prince Madoc's Farewell," the power and pathos of which were quickly recognised; the other, his arrangement of the charming old Irish song "Sweet Isle." The Concert concluded with the "Magic Garden" scene from "Parsifal"—the least satisfactory number of the programme.

At the second Concert, on the 22nd ult., an Overture in D minor, by Mr. Emanuel Moór, was played for the first time, and made an exceedingly favourable impression, due chiefly to its Introduction, which is long enough and strong enough to serve as prelude to a symphony. The Allegro which follows, though of considerable merit, is much less interesting. Mr. Moór has imagination, and handles the orchestra with a sense of responsibility that bodes well for his future. The hero of the Concert was M. Paderewski, who played Schumann's Concerto and his new Polish Fantasia, written for the Norwich Festival. Schumann viewed through Sclavonic spectacles may not be to every one's taste, but no listener possessed of musical feeling could fail to sympathise with the player's obvious desire that the beauties of the noble work should lose nothing at his hands. He erred, if at all, in the right direction. His own Fantasia justified the reputation it had gained through its first hearing. We have here a work worthy to rank with the best of Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsodies, full of life, full of character, and abounding in poetical suggestion of a kind that haply only a Pole may fully appreciate. Its performance was a triumph for all concerned, and nothing would appease the excitement but a repetition of the last movement. The programme included Haydn's delightful Symphony in G (not of the Salomon set), the mingled humour, vivacity, and tenderness of which found full appreciation; and the splendours of Wagner's "Kaisermarsch" brought the Concert to an end.

CRYSTAL PALACE CONCERTS.

After an interval of almost exactly a month from its production at Norwich, Mr. Cowen's "Water Lily" was given at the fourth Saturday Concert, on the 4th ult., under the direction of Mr. Manns, the composer having been obliged to abandon his intention of conducting the performance owing to the claims on his presence at Milan. Of the original cast of soloists only Mr. Norman Salmond remained, but the new representatives of the parts of Ina, Galahad, and Norna proved at all points equal to the requirements of their respective rôles. Miss Emma Juch gave an exceedingly sympathetic and artistic rendering of the important solos allotted to the heroine, while Miss Hilda Wilson, though her conception of the part was somewhat lacking in dramatic point, sang the contralto music with her wonted suavity of style. Mr. Ben Davies, whose command of the higher register of his voice seems to improve each time he sings, was an admirable Sir Galahad, and Mr. Norman Salmond, though suffering from cold, lent due impressiveness to the rôle of Merlin. The part of King Arthur was efficiently filled by Mr. Robert Grice. The choral numbers were given with laudable precision by the Crystal Palace Choir, and although the performance of the orchestra hardly came up to the high level reached at Norwich, a fair measure of justice was rendered to Mr. Cowen's clever and picturesque instrumentation. The performance of the cantata was prefaced by a spirited rendering of Mendelssohn's ever-green "Midsummer Night's Dream" Overture.

Undoubtedly the most notable feature of the Concert of the 11th ult. was the delightful performance given by the band of that most delightful work, Goetz's Symphony in F, each successive hearing of which only enhances the regret inspired by the premature removal of its gifted composer. The claims of native art were recognised by the inclusion in the programme of Mr. Granville Bantock's Overture to "The Fire-worshippers," a work in which warmth of feeling and a sense of the picturesque are allied to considerable constructive skill and power of dramatic presentment. Miss Beatrice Langley, who made her début in Max Bruch's Violin Concerto in G minor—a charming work which might be given a rest—is a young artist whose natural talent has been cultivated in an excellent school. She plays with animation and feeling, and, but for a momentary lapse of memory, acquitted herself with marked credit in the Concerto. Later on she gave a remarkably fluent rendering of Gade's posthumous Capriccio, the pianoforte accompaniment to which has been scored for orchestra by Carl Reinecke. The vocalist was Mr. Plunket Greene, whose fine singing of two old Irish melodies—"The Foggy Dew" and "Patrick Sarsfield"—was heavily handicapped by the slipshod and perfunctory playing of the orchestra. Mr. Greene was also heard in Franz's "Im Rhein, im heiligen Strome," and two Lieder by Brahms, "Auf dem Kirchhofe" and "Wie bist du, meine Königin." Here he had the advantage of the sympathetic pianoforte accompaniment of Mr. Waddington Cooke, and his rendering of all these songs was of masterly excellence. The programme was completed by the Prelude to "Lohengrin" and Berlioz's arrangement for orchestra of Weber's "Invitation à la Valse."

Mr. C. H. Couldery's "Cradle Song for Orchestra," which was heard for the first time at the Concert of the 18th ult., forms part of a Suite, the Romance from which was given at one of these Concerts three years ago. The "Cradle Song" is of a tuneful and pleasing character, but calls for no special remark on the score of originality of idea or treatment. Berlioz's "Harold" Symphony was the pièce de résistance of the programme, and was admirably interpreted by the band, the part for solo viola being very finely played by Mr. Krause. Schubert's Fantasia in C, as transcribed by Liszt for pianoforte and orchestra, served to introduce M. Siloti to the Crystal Palace audience, and though opinions may differ as to the merits of the work, there could be no doubt as to the artistic and workmanlike character of M. Siloti's performance. For his minor solos M. Siloti chose Arensky's curious tour de force entitled "Basso ostinato," Tschaikowsky's picturesque Romance (Op. 5), and Chopin's Ballade in A flat, and distinguished himself in all by his charm of touch, sympathetic expression, and finished technique. In response to the demand for an encore, M. Siloti added a piece by Jensen. Mrs. Hutchinson sang the Cavatina "Glöcklein im Thale," from "Euryanthe," with much refinement, and gave two beautiful songs by Alessandro and Domenico Scarlatti with her wonted distinction of style. The Concert opened with a fine performance of Schubert's "Rosamunde" Overture, and concluded with the immortal "Leonora, No. 3."

MR. SARASATE'S CONCERT.

There is little to be said concerning the second of Mr. Sarasate and Madame Berthe Marx's Concerts of violin and pianoforte music, at St. James's Hall, on the afternoon of the 4th ult., as no new works or interesting revivals were included in the programme. It opened with Schumann's rarely-played Sonata in D minor (Op. 121), a work which does not share the popularity of the companion Sonata in A minor (Op. 105), though, leaving out of account the first movement, which is rather laboured, it is equally worthy of admiration; the Scherzo and the slow movement being among the composer's most genial inspirations. The two artists likewise coalesced in Emile Bernard's Suite (Op. 34), which they have rendered familiar, and in Raff's brilliant, if rather trivial piece "La Fée d'Amour." Subsequently Mr. Sarasate played his own clever "Zigeunerweisen" and Madame Marx gave Liszt's remarkable fantasia on Mozart's "Don Juan," encores being demanded in both instances. How the several pieces were rendered it is unnecessary to mention.

MONDAY AND SATURDAY POPULAR CONCERTS.

On the whole the interest of these performances has been well maintained during the past month, and some additions have been made to the repertory. At the Concert of Monday, October 30, Mr. Leonard Borwick introduced Bach's Suite Anglaise in G minor (No. 3) for the first time, and played it with admirable clearness and in the quiet unaffected style which the old master's music demands. This fine work is best known by its piquant Gavotte and Musette, the latter bearing a remarkable resemblance to an old English tune. Remarkably fine performances were also given of Brahms's Sonata in D minor for pianoforte and violin (Op. 108), by Mr. Borwick and Miss Wietrowetz, and of Schumann's Pianoforte Quartet in E flat (Op. 47). Miss Jessie Hudleston displayed her pleasant and well-trained soprano voice to advantage in Goring Thomas's "A Summer Night," and in a pretty song, "The Voice," by Mr. Hermann Klein. Mozart's Quartet in E flat (No. 4) completed an excellent programme.

There is very little to be said concerning the Concert of Saturday, the 4th ult. The concerted works were Mendelssohn's Quartet in E flat (Op. 12) and Beethoven's Pianoforte Trio in the same key (Op. 70, No. 2). Mr. Borwick was again the pianist, and gave a beautiful reading of Schumann's little pieces, the "Kinderscenen" (Op. 15). Mr. Hugo Becker, the violoncellist for this occasion, gave Boccherini's old-fashioned Sonata in A in excellent style, and Miss Florence Hoskins was satisfactory in Mr. Santley's "Ave Maria" and Schumann's song "The noblest."

On the following Monday Lady Hallé made her first appearance this season and was warmly greeted by a large audience. A magnificent performance was given of Beethoven's Quartet in E minor (Op. 59, No. 2), and the Moravian violinist was heard alone in the Adagio from Dvorák's Concerto in A minor (Op. 53). Mr. Borwick repeated his intelligent performance of Chopin's Sonata in B flat minor, with the Funeral March, and Miss Damian was the vocalist. The Concert ended with Beethoven's rarely heard Sonata in D, for pianoforte and violoncello (Op. 102, No. 2).

The Concert of Saturday, the 11th ult., may be dismissed with equal brevity. Beethoven's Quartet in F minor (Op. 95) and Schubert's Pianoforte Trio in B flat (Op. 99) were the concerted works. Lady Hallé played in her finest manner three of Dr. A. C. Mackenzie's pieces for violin, including the popular "Benedictus," and Mr. Schönberger, the pianist on this occasion, gave a vigorous rendering of Schumann's Sonata in G minor (Op. 22), both artists being encored. Mr. William Nicholl contributed with effect three of Brahms's Lieder and two songs from Grieg's "Reminiscences from Mountain and Fiord."

Another considerable assemblage welcomed Mr. Piatti on his return at the Concert of Monday, the 13th ult. Notwithstanding his advancing age the powers of the great violoncellist show no signs of deterioration, his playing in Schubert's Quartet in D minor, Schumann's once abused but now popular Pianoforte Trio in D minor (Op. 63), and in three movements of his own refined and elegant Sonata for violoncello and pianoforte in C (Op. 28) being as unapproachable as ever. Miss Fanny Davies may be thanked for her selection of eight of Chopin's Preludes, as only one of them had been heard before at these Concerts, and also for her excellent interpretation of these brief but difficult little pieces. She was three times recalled, but wisely refused an encore. Miss Amy Sherwin rendered with much effect Handel's air "Ombra mai fu" and two of Schubert's Lieder.

On Saturday, the 18th ult., the programme consisted, with the exception of Haydn's Quartet in B flat (Op. 64, No. 5), of unfamiliar works, vocal as well as instrumental. Miss Fanny Davies revived Handel's "Suite de Pieces" in D minor (Book I., No. 3), and played the quaint music exceedingly well; Mr. Piatti also revived Valentini's melodious Sonata for violoncello in E (Op. 8), and rendered it with exquisite expression; and the Concert concluded with Saint-Saëns's Pianoforte Quartet in B flat (Op. 41), which, like the two other pieces last-named, had not been heard for many years at Mr. Arthur Chappell's performances. Miss Liza Lehmann, who was very cordially received, sang Bishop's song "By the simplicity of Venus's doves" and a charming new lyric, "Fleur aimée," by Francis Thomé, in her most pleasing style and was twice encored.

The last Concert we can notice this month took place on the following Monday, when Goldmark's Pianoforte Quintet in B flat (Op. 30) was performed for the first time at these Concerts. It is an elaborate and apparently, at a first hearing, rather laboured work; but most of the themes are melodious and it should be heard a second time before any dogmatic opinions are passed upon its merits. Lady Hallé gave a magnificent rendering of Tartini's sonata "Il Trillo del Diavolo," and was also heard at her best in Schubert's delightful Quartet in A minor (Op. 29). Mr. Schönberger was fairly commendable in Beethoven's Sonata in A (Op. 101), and Mr. David Bispham received enthusiastic applause for his very expressive interpretation of Loewe's fine song "Archibald Douglas," the accompanist, Mr. Henry Bird, fairly sharing in the compliments bestowed on an excellent performance.

PIANOFORTE RECITALS.

To adopt an expression in common use at the present day, Mr. Paderewski "beat the record" at his Recital on October 31, at St. James's Hall, the demand for places, notwithstanding the high charges for admission, being absolutely unprecedented. The musical public has made up its mind that the Polish artist is infinitely superior to every other pianist of the time, and although thoughtful musicians would scarcely endorse the extravagant estimate, they cannot fail to acknowledge his exceptional gifts, which were displayed at this Recital perhaps more fully than on any previous occasion. True, his rendering of Beethoven's favourite Sonata in D minor (Op. 31, No. 2) was open to question on the ground of extreme feminine delicacy, particularly in the middle movement; but in some pieces by Chopin, especially the Etude in A minor (Op. 25, No. 11), Mr. Paderewski fairly surpassed himself. Magnificent too, in every sense, was his execution in Bach's Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue in D minor and Schumann's Sonata in F sharp minor (Op. 11). From his own pen he introduced a set of variations on "Home, sweet home," from an "English Suite" shortly to be published. Perhaps we may trace in this selection a pretty compliment to his Anglo-Saxon admirers, and the variations are clever and far more musicianly than those of Thalberg. But the sickly air is hackneyed beyond endurance.

Much curiosity was felt by earnest lovers of pianoforte music in the first appearance of Miss Thérésa Gérardy, on the 21st ult., at St. James's Hall, the young lady being the sister of Master Jean Gérardy, the extraordinarily gifted young violoncellist who is already regarded less as a "prodigy" than as an accomplished artist. Miss Gérardy is understood to be one year his senior, and she may also be judged from a high standpoint, her playing, except in Beethoven's Sonata, commonly known as the "Moonlight," being more intelligent and expressive than that of average adult performers. She was especially commendable in Mozart's Rondo in A minor and Chopin's Scherzo in B flat minor—no mean tests of a pianist's ability. Mr. Edward Arthur, a vocalist with an agreeable but very light tenor voice, contributed some songs.

On the following afternoon the platform at St. James's Hall was occupied by Mr. Siloti, a Russian pianist from Moscow, who first appeared in London at the Princes' Hall on May 24, last year. His programme on the present occasion was rather peculiar, only three of the great masters usually associated with pianoforte music being represented. Two of Bach's celebrated Forty-eight Preludes and Fugues and two movements by Handel were played with unexceptionable taste. In Chopin's Sonata in B flat minor, with the Funeral March, Mr. Siloti commenced well, but, for some unexplained reason, he took the March, or rather the middle section of the movement, at a surprisingly rapid pace, and consequently made it quite ineffective. The most noteworthy piece in the rest of the programme was the historical series of Variations written by Liszt, Thalberg, Pixis, Herz, and Chopin on a once popular melody from Bellini's "I Puritani." These and other examples of what may be termed virtuoso music were played with much brilliancy and, perhaps, excessive force. Of Mr. Siloti's second Recital, which was fixed for the 27th ult., we must speak next month.

WESTMINSTER ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY.

Two papers indicative of the wide area now covered by music were read, on the 3rd ult., before the members and friends of the Westminster Orchestral Society at the Westminster Town Hall. The occasion was the introduction, by Sir John Hassard, of the new Chairman of the Council, Sir Benjamin Baker, and the papers were severally read by Archdeacon Sinclair and Mr. D. J. Blaikley. The former is of opinion that the religious sentiment of the people would be deepened by the use of full orchestras in churches on special occasions when oratorios and services of song are given. Music, he said, spoke a language more penetrating than any other, and he claimed for music no small part of the success of the Reformation. What Ambrose had done for the Church song in the fourth century, Luther did in the sixteenth. It had indeed been said that many people had sung themselves into the new doctrine. Of all musical combinations, that which was most multiform in tone-character, and consequently most expressive, was the orchestra. Why, then, should it not, in proper circumstances and at fitting times, be employed as a help in the worship of God? The Archdeacon, however, refrained from dealing with the financial side of the question.

Mr. Blaikley's paper dealt with the development of that branch of the orchestra popularly known as "the brass." With a painstaking earnestness born of thorough mastery of his subject Mr. Blaikley went back to the days of primeval man, and extracted horn-like notes from brobdignagian shells, bones, pipes, unlovely looking animals' horns, and finally blew a bombardon some sixteen feet long; in fact, everything that touched Mr. Blaikley's lips was forced to yield up its musical soul. Sometimes the audience wished it had been otherwise. The explanations were, however, lucid and most instructive. A fine collection of modern instruments, lent by Messrs. Boosey, included a trombone fitted with a slide tube made of aluminium, the lightness of which removes the unsteadiness at the player's lips when the instrument is suddenly extended. Mr. Blaikley and Mr. George Case have been for some years endeavouring to use this metal, and their success would seem likely to cause a revolution in "the brass family."

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

The first public Students' Concert of the season took place at St. James's Hall on the 20th ult., and was rendered memorable by a performance of Pergolesi's "Stabat Mater," a work which was formerly heard more frequently than at the present time. Originally written, of course, for boys' voices, this masterpiece of the gifted young Italian composer, who was cut off ere he had attained the prime of manhood, should now acquire new popularity in the choirs of ladies which have recently sprung into existence. Pergolesi lived at a time when contrapuntal art was on the decline in the Peninsula, and was destined shortly to disappear entirely in favour of trivial tune by which the so-called land of song was, in a measure, disfigured for nearly a century. There is an abundance of melodic grace in the "Stabat Mater," and if the display of science is not great, it must be borne in mind that Pergolesi was writing merely for voices in two parts. There is much beauty mingled with expressiveness in the duets "Quis est Homo," "Sancta Mater," and "Quando corpus morietur," to name but three of the thirteen movements in the work, and there is not one that is not marked by a certain degree of quaint freshness of style, if such a paradoxical description may be pardoned. The choir of 163 lady students and the stringed orchestra of 37 players, in which the female element was also largely represented, did their work exceedingly well under Dr. A. C. Mackenzie's direction, and, on the whole, the solo parts received justice from the numerous young people who shared them. In the miscellaneous programme which followed were two movements from Mozart's Quartet in C for strings (No. 6), in which a good ensemble was secured; a very well written Andante and Scherzo for violin and pianoforte, by Marie Mildred Ames (student), in which Miss Ethel Barns once more displayed her remarkable promise as a violinist; and Rossini's duet "Mira la bianca luna," sung with much taste by Miss Clara Williams and Mr. Reginald Brophy.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

A Pianoforte Quartet by a student, Mr. H. Walford Davies, opened the first of the Concerts in the new Term. It is evidently an earlier work than his highly creditable String Quartet played during last Term, for the themes are much less interesting and the reminiscences more frequent—sure signs of youth! It was well played by the composer, Miss Jessie Grimson, Mr. Charles Jacoby, and Miss Alice Elieson. The programme included also Beethoven's Septet. The Orchestral Concert, on the 1st ult., brought a quasi-novelty in the shape of Mozart's Clarinet Concerto in A, a very melodious work in three short movements. Mr. Charles Draper, who played the solo part, is already a very capable performer; his tone and execution are both excellent. Miss Marie Motto gave a meritorious rendering of Dvorák's long Violin Romance in A, and Mr. Albert Archdeacon sang two airs from "Don Giovanni," in which his fine voice was not, however, heard at its best. Schumann's D minor Symphony, that "joy for ever," was played by the orchestra, and more especially by the splendid strings, with the utmost gusto. Nothing more inspiriting than these enthusiastic young people's performances can well be imagined.

The last Concert we can notice this month took place on the 9th ult. The programme contained the "Kreutzer" Sonata, played in capital style by Mr. Charles Jacoby and Miss Annie Fry; Rubinstein's Polonaise from "Le Bal" (Op. 14), in which Mr. Francis Böhr showed promise as a pianist; Max Bruch's everlasting Romance in A, given with a full tone and considerable "go," but little "romance," by Mr. William Ackroyd; and Schumann's String Quartet in A minor (Op. 41, No. 1), carefully led by Miss Lilian Wright, who had Miss Kathleen Thomas, Mr. Ackroyd, and Mr. Paul Ludwig for her associates. The singers were Miss Evelina Benzabatti, who attempted a very florid song "Thy mighty power," with a curiously old-fashioned double bass obbligato by Vincent Novello; and Mr. Norman Jones, who, in two beautiful songs by Jensen, proved himself a tenor of more than average excellence.

MUSICAL GUILD.

The tenth series of these Concerts opened, on October 31, with Schubert's String Quintet (Op. 163), of which an exceptionally good performance was given; ensemble, tone, and finish were alike deserving of high commendation. Mendelssohn's String Quartet in E flat (Op. 12) was the other concerted piece. Messrs. Arthur Bent, Wallace Sutcliffe, Alfred Hobday, and Paul Ludwig performed in both works, Mr. J. T. Field taking the second violoncello in the Quintet. Miss Ethel Sharpe gave a brilliant and romantic rendering of Schumann's exacting Pianoforte Sonata in F sharp minor (Op. 11), and demonstrated once more that she has but very few rivals amongst native pianists. Mr. Charles Magrath displayed his fine bass voice to the greatest advantage in Purcell's "Incantation" from "The Indian Queen," and in an extremely spirited and unconventional setting of Browning's Cavalier tune "Give a rouse," by A. Davidson Arnott, which he sang with quite refreshing emphasis and abandon.

At the second Concert, on the 14th ult., the most interesting number was Brahms's String Quartet in C minor (Op. 51, No. 1), perhaps the most original and intellectual of his chamber compositions. The performance, by Miss Isabella Donkersley, Messrs. Sutcliffe, Hobday, and Ludwig, was a very creditable one, considering the exceptional difficulties of the first and last movements, with their storm and stress. Miss Donkersley was once more an excellent leader. Miss Annie Fry and Mr. Arthur Bent gave a finished rendering of the "Kreutzer" Sonata, Mr. Bent's violin playing showing a marked improvement on his efforts in previous seasons. Three German songs by Mr. Algernon Ashton were sung by Miss Einna Holden, who also attempted Mozart's "Mi tradi." Mozart's Quintet for pianoforte and wind instruments completed the programme. It was well played by Miss Annie Grimson, Messrs. E. V. Davies, W. H. Hall, E. Hall, and J. Smith.

MUSICAL ASSOCIATION.

The monthly meetings of the Musical Association were resumed on the 14th ult., when Mr. E. W. Naylor, Mus. Bac., read a paper on the comparative merits of Verdi and Wagner as operatic composers. Both men, the lecturer said, took the old Italian style of opera as their model for their early works. The former, however, had developed the Italian style continuously, until he had produced "Aïda," "Otello," and "Falstaff"; but the latter, by adopting Leitmotiven as the basis of composition, had removed his work from the Italian plane to another quite incompatible with it. Hence there existed a radical difference of method and style, which made it for ever impossible to institute any analogy between the later productions of these composers. The term Leitmotif should be limited strictly to the technical sense of "associated melodic phrase," as used by Wagner in "Tristan" and his subsequent works. Leitmotiven, of course, were used by Verdi, but not in the Wagnerian manner—i.e., as a method of composition. Each composer had sacrificed the song and singer on the dramatic altar, but to very many the result had not been an equal increase of dramatic power by both masters. "Aïda" and "Otello" were certainly dramatic in the best and fullest sense. But could this be said of "Tristan"? In the first four scenes there was "absolutely no action whatever." The Leitmotif system was certainly capable of producing lovely music, which some of us might be inclined to enjoy as abstract music; but as a factor in dramatic music the system took an entirely different standpoint. To very many, however, it appeared that any view of music that leant towards any mechanical identification of melodies and their various combinations and developments with mental and psychical motives and processes, must inevitably tend to foster a materialistic view of an art which was as much higher than facts as the spiritual life was higher than the actual.

The paper elicited a discussion in which the Chairman, Dr. Vincent, Mr. W. H. Cummings, Mr. Banister, Mr. Southgate, and Mr. Gilbert Webb took part, but with the only result that, like the proverbial husband and wife, "the more they arg'ed th' question th' more they didn't agree."

GRESHAM LECTURES.

THIS winter's series of Professor Bridge's Gresham Lectures, delivered on the 6th, 7th, 8th, and 10th ult., at the City of London School, afforded more than usual pleasurable interest owing to the picturesque and instructive picture they drew of the state of music in this country in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Professor Bridge based his discourses upon the autobiography of the Hon. Roger North, an enthusiastic dilettante who died in 1734. He was a pupil and intimate friend of John Jenkins, who was born in 1592, and thus his remarks concerning music in the autobiography covered a singularly interesting transitional period of about 150 years, during which time the viol was replaced by the violin, and the Italian style of music was introduced into this country. Professor Bridge took for the title of his first Lecture the heading of a chapter in Roger North's book—viz., "Of Music and its Importance in Education." This naturally led to gratifying remarks concerning the satisfactory recognition now given to music. It is always pleasurable to be assured of one's superiority over one's forefathers; but, the Professor said, although music was now admitted to be an important factor in education, he thought our modern system of concert-going had tended to check the development of "home music." It was music in the home, not the concert-room, that made a nation truly musical. He would like to remind them of the lines in Shakespeare's Eighth Sonnet, i.e.—

> Mark how one string, sweet husband of another,
> Strikes each in each by mutual ordering;
> Resembling sire and child and happy mother,
> Who, all in one, one pleasing note do sing.

The second and third Lectures, although entitled "On the road to the String Quartet," and forming the first two of a proposed series on chamber music, were virtually a continuation of the opening subject, the Professor's attention being chiefly directed to showing how the new Continental style of music gradually replaced the "interwoven hum-drum." The early history of the string chamber music was, the Professor said, practically the story of the development of the sonata form. The earliest attempts with instruments were made in three directions—viz., accompanying voices, playing dance tunes, imitating vocal forms. Through the last-named we obtained the term sonata, meaning something sounded or played, in contra-distinction to "cantata," which was applied to music to be sung. The man who undoubtedly exerted a remarkable influence for good on English composers was Nicola Matteis, a Paganini of his day (saving that he was described as being robust), who came to England about 1672, but concerning whose influence musical histories for the most part seemed to have overlooked. Dr. Burney said of him: "The compositions and performances of Nicola Matteis had polished and refined our ears and made them fit and eager for the works of Corelli." Roger North in his MS. book (in the British Museum) had written: "Nicola Matteis gave a new taste and made a revolution in music in this country. . . . He was the means of settling the Italian music in England and after him the French was wholly laid aside, and nothing in Town had a relish without a spice of Italy, and the masters here begin to imitate them, witness Mr. H. Purcell in his noble set of sonatas."

The concluding Lecture, entitled "Roger North and his Musical Contemporaries," contained most interesting information concerning the life and work of Matteis. Concerning his playing Roger North said: "He was very tall, and having very long arms held his instrument (the violin) almost at his girdle. His bow was very long, and he touched his divisions with the very point . . . he first showed us the holding of the bow without touching the hair which before time was not done in England, but from him it was immediately taken up by the best hands, and in a few years it became the universal practice." His playing, indeed, must have been a revelation to English violinists, and that he was the first to introduce the Italian style of music here might be gathered from Roger North's remark that: "I remember no Italians till Nicola (Matteis) came." Matteis afterwards went to Paris, where Roger North said "He took a large house, and had a thing called a wife, and pretended to entertain. Excess of pleasure brought on illness. He came at last to lose both his invention and his hand, and in a miserable state of body and poor in mind died." He left one son, who many years after taught French and music at Shrewsbury, and from whom Dr. Burney had lessons.

As on former occasions, a most interesting series of pieces illustrative of the Professor's remarks were played and sung by pupils from the Royal College of Music and choristers from Westminster Abbey.

THE MUSICIANS' COMPANY.

ON October 31 the annual dinner of the Livery and Court of this old City Company took place at the Albion, Professor Bridge, the Master of the Company for the year, presiding, and being supported by Mr. J. C. Collard and Sir John Stainer, the Wardens. In giving the toast of the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Master gratefully recognised the interest taken by His Royal Highness in music, and referred to the presentation of the Company's gold medal to the Prince. The toast of the Army was responded to by General Sim, who declared that music was the link which bound the Army, Navy, and Volunteers together and rendered the services attractive and popular. In proposing the toast of the evening, "The Worshipful Company of Musicians," the Master pointed out the value that this Company could be to the musical world, attracting to itself the clergy, soldiers, composers, artists, and those whose business was connected with music. At the conclusion of his speech, he presented the silver medal of this year to Miss Llewela Davies, of the Royal Academy. Dr. Mackenzie, in expressing thanks on her behalf, dwelt at some length on the danger in these days of doing too much for the student, and also on the mania for examination with which people were now overtaken. To this eagerness he attributed the existence of the bogus examining colleges and persons ready to supply certificates and big brass plates to adorn the front doors of the incompetent. Sir John Stainer, in a speech of much interest, pointed out what great services the Cathedrals had rendered to our noble school of Church music. Dean Hole, of Rochester, returned thanks for the musical institutions of England, and, in a lengthy speech of singular power and eloquence, placed before his audience a picturesque account of what music had done for the Church from the earliest ages. The health of the Worshipful Master was proposed by Mr. W. M. Wilkinson.

"IN HONOUR OF MUSIC."

Among the conspicuously happy thoughts of the year, that which took effect at the Mansion House, on the 6th ult., is, perhaps, most worthy of perpetual remembrance in the annals of English music. On that date the Lord Mayor, Sir Stuart Knill, Bart., LL.D., entertained a representative gathering of ladies and gentlemen connected in various ways with the art of music, together with a number of distinguished members of other professions. With the exception of Sir Arthur Sullivan—who was confined to his house by a bronchial attack—and Mr. Cowen—who had gone to Milan to produce "Signa"—the guests included most of the "chief musicians" of England—composers, conductors, performers, teachers, critics, and many of the most prominent concert-givers, instrument makers, and publishers. During the dinner the excellent string band of the Royal Engineers played in the balcony; and between the speeches a selection of glees, madrigals, and part-songs was sung by a male voice choir, under the direction of Mr. W. Coates, Mr. Ben Davies contributing a song from "Utopia, Limited."

The health of Her Majesty having been duly honoured, the Lord Mayor, in proposing that of the Prince and Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal family, read a telegram from Duke Alfred of Saxe-Coburg regretting his inability to be present; and warmly recognised the services rendered to music by various members of the Royal family.

Sir Richard Webster proposed the "Defensive forces," and paid a tribute to the value of Dibdin's nautical songs, which had cheered and animated our seamen for generations. The art of music, he maintained, was closely connected with the art of war, and he thought that this beautiful art had rendered incalculable services to our soldiers and sailors in their toils and wanderings.

Lord Roberts, who responded, confessed to a very slight knowledge of music as an art. Soldiers had little time to spare for the study of art, but he could tell them from personal knowledge of the effect of music upon the soldier. It put heart into the despairing, footsore infantrymen on the line of march, and they pulled themselves together, and stepped out firmly and briskly when they heard the cheery strains of the familiar regimental march, when but a few moments before they had seemed as if they could go no farther, and as if they must give up the weary struggle. He could also tell them of the marvellous effect the bagpipes had on the Scottish soldiers. He was prepared to be thought somewhat of a barbarian for placing the bagpipe among musical instruments, but he had had experience of their inspiriting effect upon Highlanders. The main incentive of the bagpipe was to make a man do more than was expected of him. (Hear, hear.) Military music had of late years distinctly improved. This was no doubt largely due to the training given at the Royal Military School of Music, under the direction of Colonel Shaw-Hellier.

Mr. Justice Chitty, in an amusing speech, replied for the Volunteers, and the Lord Mayor then proposed the toast of the evening—"Music." He said that he was glad his last festival in that great hall should be one in honour of music. (Cheers.) Music had been described as the memory of the heart. He honoured music and all who made music their profession. Personally, he loved music, although, at the same time, he was ignorant of its chief beauties. Music was the one art which entered into our souls and elevated us above worldly cares; it solaced and helped us all. He regretted that Sir Arthur Sullivan was unable to be present. With the toast, he coupled the names of Dr. Bridge, the Gresham Professor; Sir Joseph Barnby, and Sir Augustus Harris, all civic officials, together with that of Dr. A. C. Mackenzie, the Principal of our famous old English school, the Royal Academy of Music.

Dr. Bridge, in a graceful speech, responded on behalf of Sir Arthur Sullivan, and read an eloquent letter from him, expressing his high appreciation of the honour to the art. We give its concluding words: "To-day is a red-letter day in our musical calendar. Your Lordship, who is notably much given to good works, may, perhaps, forget it; believe me, we never shall; and I would fain have been present to-night to thank your Lordship in the name of the musicians of England, whose humble representative I was to have been, for the splendid manner in which you have emphasised the fact that music is a powerful and important element in the lives of mankind."

Dr. A. C. Mackenzie, who was received with great warmth on rising, said there was no country in which so much had been done, and was being done, for musical education, as in England. He commended the City of London for the part it had taken in advancing musical training at the Guildhall School, and compared the facilities now afforded to students throughout the country with those existing years ago. There were many benevolent institutions doing much to popularise music and make it more easy for the people to learn. It was possible a time might arrive when those benevolent schemes might be revised a little. A lively and healthy proof of the genuine popularity of music might be found in the fact that there were so many orchestral societies, he might say in full blast, in all the districts and suburbs of London. (Hear, hear.) Music had been brought close to the door of the amateur, and stars in the milky way of Piccadilly were obliged occasionally to travel a little out of their sphere if they wanted their harmonious motion to be felt. (Laughter.) That was good. There was a time when the door was shut to the young English composer, and he was bound to say that no man had done more to open it than Mr. Manns. (Cheers.)

Sir Augustus Harris and Sir Joseph Barnby having also spoken, Professor Villiers Stanford proposed the "Kindred Arts," pointing out the imaginative characteristics of music, and how the arts reacted on one another; he coupled with the toast the name of the President of the Royal Academy of Arts.

Sir Frederick Leighton, in acknowledgment, said the sympathy between the kindred arts of music was not merely that which it was the privilege of music to inspire almost universally in the roughest as in the most cultured nature—it was a closer sympathy—a sympathy rooted in deep-lying analogies which exist between an art which speaks to the ear and those which appeal through the eye. It was a kinship which was felt more obviously, perhaps, in architecture than in the others, for architecture not being, like painting and sculpture, mimetic, exhibited, on the one hand, more manifestly that co-operation and combination of science and emotion which was more characteristic of music than did the other arts. On the other hand, it seemed more closely in touch with music from the exclusively abstract character of the emotions it evoked. It would be well for artists and for art if the intimate relationship of the arts were more clearly perceived and more generally grasped, and if men would ask of art primarily that which it was the primary duty of art to give.

Dr. Hubert Parry proposed the health of the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, and his Lordship having replied, the company shortly afterwards separated.

MR. COENEN'S CONCERT.

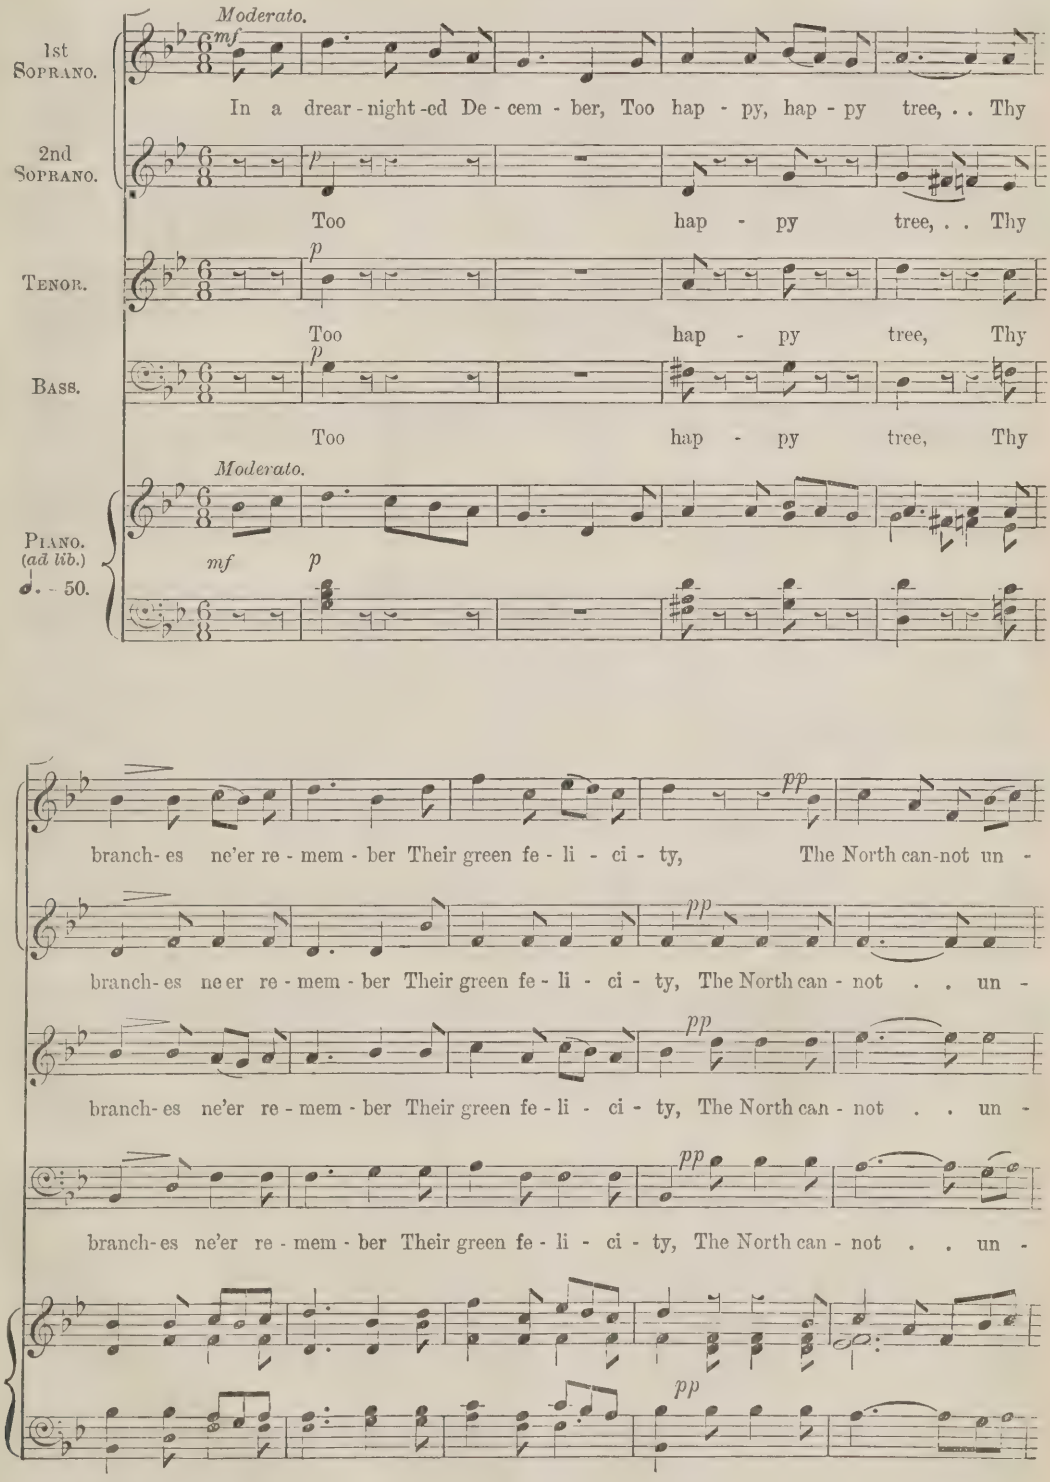
An admirable programme of Chamber music was put forward by Mr. Coenen at his Concert in the Brighton Pavilion on the 15th ult. It included two Sonatas for pianoforte and violin, Grieg's (Op. 45) and Beethoven's "Kreutzer," in both of which Mr. Coenen was associated with Mr. Johannes Wolff. These were, of course, most artistically played, and pleased so much that attempts were made to obtain the repetition of single movements; encores, however, were firmly and wisely refused throughout the evening, with the result that the Concert finished at a reasonable time and did not satiate. Both gentlemen played solos on their respective instruments with the skill and taste for which they are famous, and that charming artist, Miss Liza Lehmann, contributed several songs to the evident delight of her hearers.

In a drear-nighted December.

A FOUR-PART SONG.

Words by J. Keats. Composed by G. A. Macfarren.

London: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO., 1, Berners Street (W.), and 80 & 81, Queen Street (E.C.); also in New York.



Moderato.
mf
1st Soprano.
In a drear - night - ed De - cem - ber, Too hap - py, hap - py tree, . . Thy 2nd Soprano.
p
Too hap - py tree, . . Thy
Tenor.
p
Too hap - py tree, Thy
Bass.
p
Too hap - py tree, Thy Moderato.
Piano. (ad lib.)
mf p
pp branch - es ne'er re - mem - ber Their green fe - li - ci - ty, The North can - not un - branch - es ne'er re - mem - ber Their green fe - li - ci - ty, The North can - not . . un - branch - es ne'er re - mem - ber Their green fe - li - ci - ty, The North can - not . . un - branch - es ne'er re - mem - ber Their green fe - li - ci - ty, The North can - not . . un -

- do them, With a sleet - y whis - tle thro' them, Nor fro - zen thaw-ings
- do them, With a sleet - y whis - tle thro' them, Nor fro - zen thaw - ings
- do them, With a sleet - y whis - tle thro' them, Nor fro - zen thaw - ings
- do them, With a sleet - y whis - tle thro' them, Nor fro - zen thaw - ings glue them, From bud - ding at the prime, . . . from bud - ding at the prime. . .
glue . . them, From budding at the prime, . . from bud - ding at the prime. . .
glue them, From budding at the prime, . . from bud - ding at the prime. . .
glue . . them, From budding at the prime, . . from bud - ding at the prime. . .
In a drear - night-ed De - cem - ber, Too hap - py, hap - py brook, . . Thy Too hap - py brook, . . Thy
Too hap - py brook, Thy
Too hap - py brook, Thy bub-blings ne'er re - mem - ber A - pol - lo's sum-mer look, But with a sweet for - bub-blings ne'er re - mem - ber A - pol - lo's sum- mer look, But with a sweet . . for - bub-blings ne'er re - mem - ber A - pol - lo's sum-mer look, But with a sweet . . for - bub-blings ne'er re - mem - ber A - pol - lo's sum-mer look, But with a sweet . . for -

- get - - ting They stay their crys - tal fret - ting, Nev - er, nev - er
- get - ting They stay their crys - - tal fret - ting, Nev - er, nev - - - er
- get - ting They stay their crys - - tal fret - ting, Nev - er, nev - - - er
- get - ting They stay their crys - - tal fret - ting, Nev - er, nev - - - er pet - ting A bout the fro - zen time, . . a - bout the fro - zen time. . .
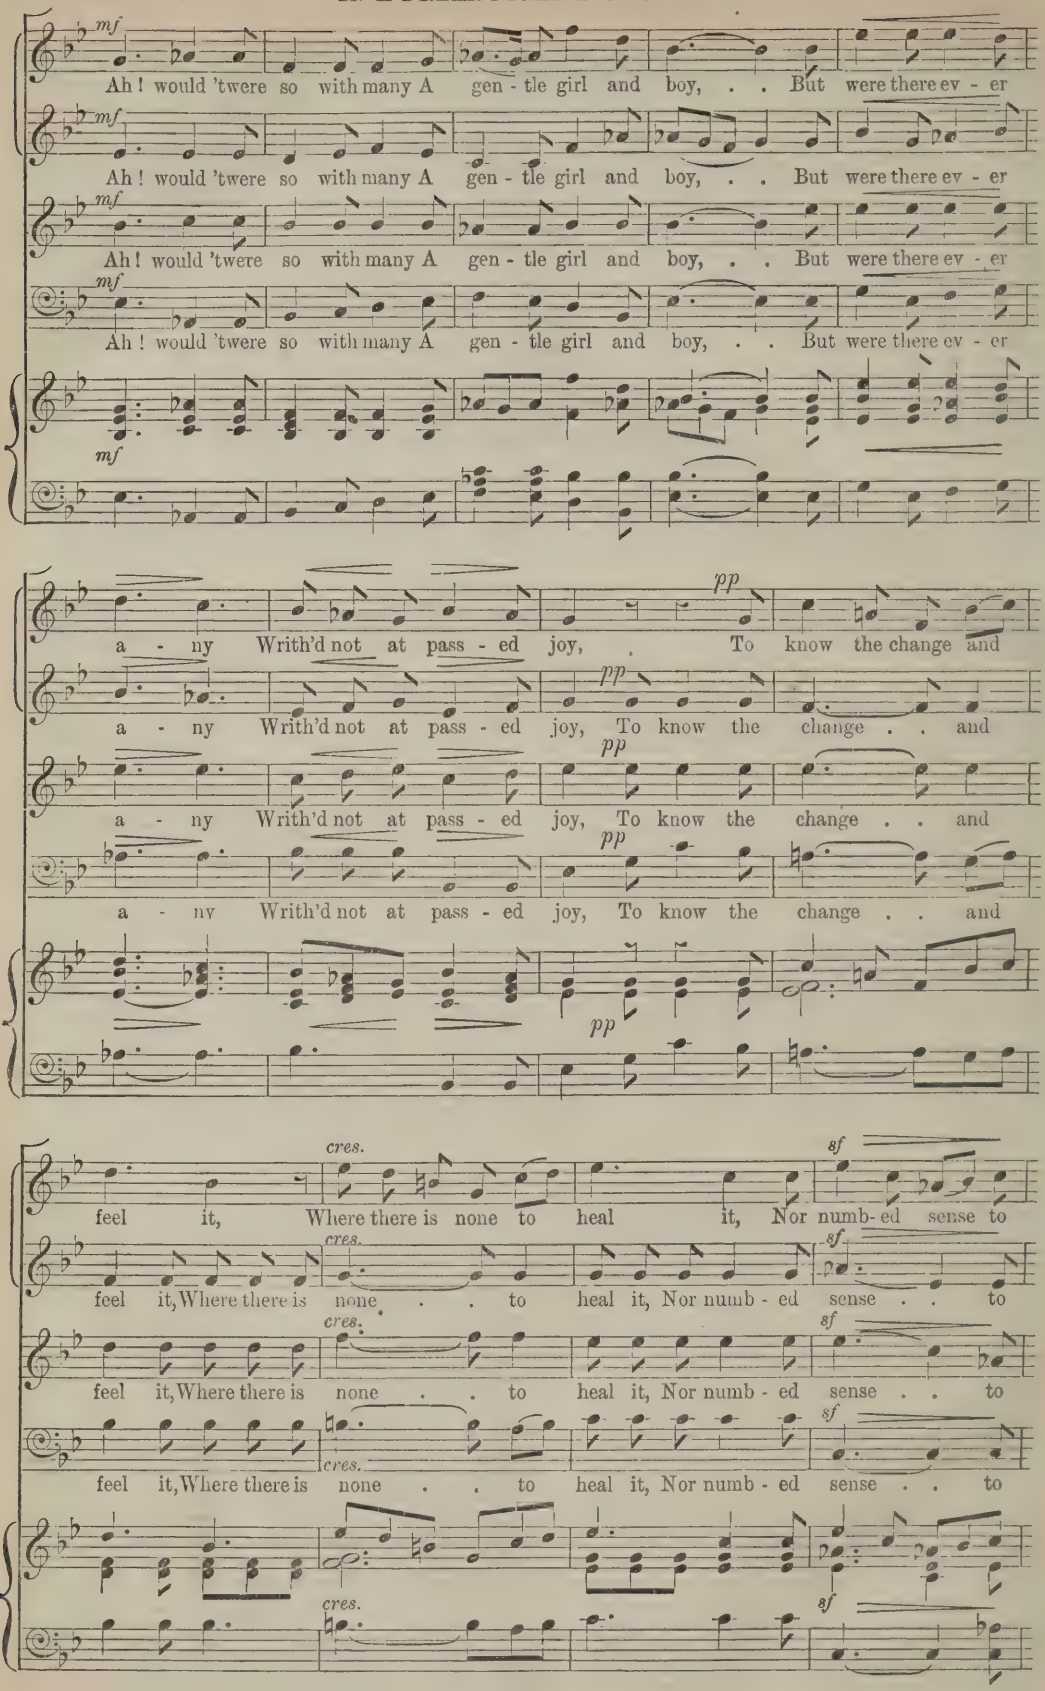
pet - ting A - bout the fro - zen time, a - bout the fro - zen time. . .
pet - ting A - bout the fro - zen time, a - bout the fro - zen time. . .
pet - ting A - bout the fro - zen time, a - bout the fro - zen time. . .



mf
Ah! would 'twere so with many A gen - tle girl and boy, . . But were there ev - er
Ah! would 'twere so with many A gen - tle girl and boy, . . But were there ev - er
Ah! would 'twere so with many A gen - tle girl and boy, . . But were there ev - er
Ah! would 'twere so with many A gen - tle girl and boy, . . But were there ev - er
pp a - ny Writh'd not at pass - ed joy, . To know the change and a - ny Writh'd not at pass - ed joy, To know the change . . and a - ny Writh'd not at pass - ed joy, To know the change . . and a - ny Writh'd not at pass - ed joy, To know the change . . and cres.
sf feel it, Where there is none to heal it, Nor numb - ed sense to feel it, Where there is none . . to heal it, Nor numb - ed sense . . to feel it, Where there is none . . to heal it, Nor numb - ed sense . . to feel it, Where there is none . . to heal it, Nor numb - ed sense . . to steel it, Was nev - er said in rhyme, ... was nev - er

steel . . it, Was nev-er said in rhyme, . . was nev - er steel it, . . Was nev-er said in rhyme, . . was nev - er steel . . it, Was nev-er said in rhyme, . . was nev - er said in rhyme, . . nev-er said . . . in . . rhyme, . . nev-er said in rhyme, . . nev-er said . . . in . . rhyme, . . nev-er said in rhyme, . . nev-er said . . . in . . rhyme, . . nev-er said in rhyme,nev-er said . . . in . . rhyme, . . . nev-er said . .
said . . . in rhyme, was nev - er said in rhyme. . . .
said . . . in rhyme, was nev - er said in rhyme. . . .
said . . . in rhyme, was nev - er said in rhyme. . . .
. . in . . rhyme, . . . was nev - er said in rhyme. . . .

READY ON DECEMBER 14.

A

SPECIAL NUMBER

OF THE

MUSICAL TIMES

DEVOTED TO

HANDEL

HIS LIFE AND WORKS

EDITED BY

JOSEPH BENNETT

WILL BE ISSUED ON

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 14.

THE NUMBER WILL CONTAIN NUMEROUS ILLUSTRATIONS, CONSISTING OF PORTRAITS, VIEWS, FAC-SIMILES OF MANUSCRIPTS, AND LETTERS OF GREAT INTEREST, HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

Postage, 1½*d.*

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

THE QUEEN'S HALL.

Regent Street is in future destined to become more than ever the chief centre of Metropolitan musical activity. Its Northern extremity now boasts a Concert-room of altogether exceptional size and beauty, and of which the comfort and security are certainly equal, if not superior, to those of any house in the world devoted to purposes of music. The building adjoins St. George's Hall and occupies a corner site, having an area of 21,000 feet. It has seventeen entrances, on three sides, and the vestibules and corridors are so spacious that danger and discomfort, under any conceivable circumstances, are practically impossible. The front is built of Portland stone in the style of the French Renaissance, and adorned with busts of the great composers; and an open-air balcony runs along the side on the first-floor level. The large hall (there is also a smaller one, holding about 500 persons) has seating accommodation for an audience of nearly 3,000, with an orchestra with space for over 400 performers. At the back of this is a very fine organ, with four manuals, sixty-four stops, and the latest improvements in mechanism. It has been built by Messrs. Hill. The hall contains two balconies, both free of vertical support—the lower, on the street level, having a Royal box in the centre—and between them capable of seating nearly 1,200 without suspicion of discomfort. Lighting and ventilation are in every respect admirable, and the eye has been liberally catered for as regards both form and colour, the prevailing tints being grey, gold, and terra-cotta. The ceiling has been painted by M. Carpegat, of the Paris Opéra, and floors, seats, and staircases throughout the building are covered with carpets in two shades of Venetian red. The arena can be used for dancing, or built up in the form of an amphitheatre for Concert purposes. Owing to its width and two balconies, the hall has some resemblance to a large theatre. An opportunity of testing its acoustic qualities was afforded on the evening of the 25th ult., when Mr. Robert Newman, the manager of the hall, entertained a brilliant company (some 2,000) of musicians and amateurs at a "Private View." During the evening the band of the Coldstream Guards, under Mr. Thomas, played selections; Mr. Best revealed the capabilities of the magnificent organ, and at the same time illustrated his own, in pieces by Handel, Bach, Wesley, Smart, and himself; Miss Greta Williams and Mr. Arthur Oswald sang a number of excellent songs; and Miss Llewela Davies discoursed upon a Broadwood grand. The result was a unanimous and emphatic verdict of approval. A performance of the "Hymn of Praise," on the 2nd inst., by which the public opening of the hall is to be signalised, will afford a final test. It remains to say that the architect is Mr. T. E. Knightley, and that he has had the valuable advice of Mr. Morton Lathom, of the Bach Choir, on several important details. Both are to be congratulated.

THE LONDON BOARD SCHOOL CHOIR COMPETITION.

The annual Competition of choirs composed of children from the London Board Schools will be held in Exeter Hall on Wednesday, the 13th inst., at 2.30 p.m. The prizes consist of a challenge medallion, held by the winning choir until it is wrested from them; a set of books, presented by Mr. J. S. Curwen; and a handsomely-framed portrait of a great composer, presented by Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co. Preliminary competitions have reduced the number of choirs to seven. Each choir will sing the test-piece "Divine Cecilia" (arranged from S. Webbe), a piece of its own choice, and a sight-test in three parts. The adjudicators will be Sir John Stainer and Mr. W. G. McNaught. This competition is considered an important one in the elementary school circle. Last year one of the adjudicators wrote as follows: "The singing of the London Board School children on the occasion of the contest for the possession of the challenge medallion, probably represents the highest level of executive skill attainable under the present conditions of elementary school life. The influence of this annual event is widespread and pregnant."

OBITUARY.

We regret to have to announce the following deaths:—

Mr. George Alexander Osborne, the doyen of London musicians, at 5, Ulster Terrace, Regent's Park, on the 16th ult., aged 87. Born at Limerick, in 1806, he became a pupil of Pixis, Kalkbrenner, and Fétis, in Paris, where he lived from 1826 to 1843. He was an intimate friend of Chopin and Berlioz, and other famous musicians who have long since passed away. He was considered one of the best pianists of his time, and made also a name as a composer, especially of drawing-room pieces, one of which, "La Pluie des perles," achieved quite a phenomenal popularity. He wrote also string quartets, fantasias, variations, &c. Almost up to within a few months ago he took the greatest interest in musical events.

Madame Julia Woolf, on the 20th ult., at Ravenscourt, Woodchurch Road, West Hampstead, aged 62. She was an Associate, Honorary Member, and King's Scholar (thrice elected) of the Royal Academy of Music, and the composer of an opera, "Carina" (which was performed in 1888 at the Opéra Comique), and other works of less importance.

Mr. William Murray, senior, after a rather protracted illness, at his residence, Barns Park, Ayr, on the 12th ult. He was a partner in the firm of Messrs. Paterson, Sons and Co., the well-known pianoforte and musicsellers, Glasgow, Edinburgh, &c. Mr. Murray was one of the most amiable of men, and will be greatly missed in literary and artistic circles.

Mr. John Sullivan Dwight, one of the most remarkable men in the musical history of the United States. Without being a musician he did more to elevate the taste for high class music, and to spread the knowledge of the works of the great masters, than almost any man in the States. Born on May 13, 1813, he was educated at Harvard University, where he studied divinity. For a short time he became a Unitarian minister, but his desire to devote himself to literary work in connection with the art he loved caused him to leave the Church. In 1852 he founded the famous Dwight's Journal of Music, by far the best of all American musical papers, and until the end of its existence, in 1881, a model of its kind. As early as 1837 he had taken a prominent part in the foundation of the Harvard Musical Association, which has done so much to improve the musical taste of the country, and to which Boston owes its Music Hall and the celebrated Symphony Concerts. In the musical world of Boston he occupied a unique position, his intense love of, and enthusiasm for everything that is beautiful and elevating in our art, causing him to devote himself entirely to the task of infusing a similar love into his countrymen, and letting them share in the pure enjoyment he derived from the muse. With his death the best known and best loved figure in musical circles of Boston disappears.

Herr Theodor Wachtel, the famous operatic tenor, on the 14th ult., at Berlin, aged seventy. Born at Hamburg, on March 10, 1823, as the son of a cab proprietor, he worked in his father's business until his voice was discovered. At the age of twenty-six he made his début; thanks to his splendid organ, and, in spite of his lack of musical education and histrionic gifts, he soon became known. His chief successes were the rôles of the heroes in Adam's "Postillon de Longjumeau" (in which his performances with the whip were as much a feature as his singing) and Boieldieu's "La Dame Blanche," which two parts he must have sung countless times. He appeared in London in 1862, and frequently afterwards. He sang as late as in March last, when he celebrated his seventieth birthday by appearing in his favourite part of the Postillon. His attempt (in 1876) to add "Lohengrin" to his répertoire was a failure. In Germany he was always a great favourite with the public, and long after his voice had lost its freshness he "starred" with never-failing success.

M. Jules Uzès, pianist and composer, well known and highly esteemed in Paris as a teacher, and much in request as an accompanist. He was born at Avignon in 1839. Of his compositions, an operetta, "Le Soleil d'Or," may be named. He was at one time Chef de Chant at the Théâtre des Italiens and the Théâtre-Lyrique. He was killed in a street accident on his way back to Paris from Poissy, where he had spent a few days to escape from the noise of the festivities given in honour of the Russian marines.

M. Ernest Cahen, pianist and composer of considerable talent, born on August 18, 1828. In 1849 he gained the second Grand Prix de Rome at the Paris Conservatoire. He became known as a writer of several operettas, two of which, "Le Calfat" and "Le Souper de Mezzetin," were played at the Folies-Nouvelles Theatre. He died in Paris.

Mr. Lewis Williams, a harpist of considerable reputation in Wales, and well known at the National Eisteddfodau, at which he met with many successes. He died on his farm of Gellihâf, near Maesycwmmer, on the 19th ult., aged forty-nine.

M. Gaetano Riccio, a distinguished violoncello player, and assistant librarian at the Naples Conservatoire. He was also a composer of promise, a one-act lyric drama, "Russalka," being his most important work. He died at Naples, aged 36, and, like M. Uzès, in a street accident.

Mr. Joseph Antonio Belagna, aged 77, at Bayonne, U.S.A. He was an operatic and concert singer of some repute in his day, and in 1849 toured with the late Madame Jenny Lind in America.

Fräulein Marie Schmidtlein, concert singer, highly esteemed in Germany, on the 15th ult., at Berlin.

We regret having given currency to the erroneous news of Madame Tavary's death, which we derived from our German contemporaries.

MUSIC IN BIRMINGHAM.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company gave (October 16-21) seven performances at the Theatre Royal, the Mascagni and Leoncavallo pieces being, of course, brought to the fore. "I Rantzau," however, failed to please. The performances of "Tannhäuser" and "Aïda" were very fine. Gluck's "Orpheus" interested as a novelty; but a finer rendering was afterwards to be given by the Italian Company.

The Festival Choral Society produced the "Elijah" on October 12. So far as the chorus is concerned—every member of the Society being able, if required, to sing his or her part without the aid of notes—a good rendering of this work is always a foregone conclusion. Miss Anna Williams was the leading vocalist on this occasion.

Mr. Stockley, on the 2nd ult., gave the first of his orchestral series, Madame Alice Gomez being engaged as vocalist and Fräulein Wietrowetz as solo violinist. The pièce de résistance for the band on this occasion was Schumann's "Rhenish" Symphony (in E flat), a very perfect presentation of the work being given. Noteworthy was an example afforded us of the work of Cyrill Kistler. The Prelude from the third Act of this composer's opera "Kunihild" was given. The music is much in the style of Wagner: the same yearning, striving melody seemed the characteristic feature of this extract. A good rendering of the ever-welcome "Tannhäuser" Overture opened the Concert. Miss Wietrowetz, who made a great impression here last season by her truly masterly playing, gave this time Mendelssohn's Concerto; her style combining boldness and grace in the most happy manner. Madame Gomez sang Goring Thomas's "A summer night."

The Italian Opera performed here for six nights (6th-11th ult.), and, with the exception of the opening performance, that of Gluck's "Orpheus," did excellent business. We made the round of the Mascagni-Leoncavallo operas over again, varied by excellent presentations of "Faust," "Lohengrin," "Carmen," and "Les Huguenots." The sisters Ravogli greatly distinguished themselves.

A party of young instrumentalists, bearing the device of the Birmingham String Quartet, gave a Concert on the 7th ult., in the Masonic Hall. The leader is Mr. Henley, whose skilful playing has already gained for him a good local reputation; he is undoubtedly a "rising" artist. The principal pieces on this occasion were Beethoven's Quartet in F (Op. 18, No. 1), B. Godard's Quartet in A (Op. 136), and a Suite for pianoforte and violin—a set of four short, but very interesting movements—by the Parisian composer, Bernard. Dr. Winn was the pianist, and Miss Laura Taylor, as vocalist, agreeably varied the entertainment by two songs of Gounod and Weber.

Miss Marie Fromm, assisted by Mr. Schiever (violin), gave her annual Concert on the 13th ult. This lady, who, we believe, graduated under Madame Schumann, has, on several occasions, obtained honours here as a highly proficient pianist. She produced this time the little heard Fantasia in F sharp minor of Mendelssohn, together with Tausig's version of some Hungarian Gipsy Melodies, also taking part with Mr. Schiever in the "Kreutzer" Sonata—the latter work always welcome to our Birmingham audiences.

The Clef Club, whose semi-private Concerts are extremely enjoyable to privileged listeners, gave an entertainment on the 14th ult., at which one of Godard's String Quartets again entered among the chief instrumental pieces.

Upon the many popular Concerts given usually on Saturday nights at the Town Hall we have no space to comment in detail. We may mention, however, the highly pleasing part-singing of Mr. Monteith Randell's Choir upon one or two occasions. Mr. G. Halliley attracted, at his opening Concert, by the extremely clever concertina playing of Mr. Hopkins, this gentleman proving himself a true virtuoso upon this very popular, but much-abused instrument. Mr. Halford's Orchestral Society gave a very successful rendering of the "Bohemian Girl"—though with many "cuts"—on the 13th ult.

A series of free Concerts for the people has been started, with, we need hardly say, remarkable success, at the Volunteers' Drill Hall, in Thorpe Street. We have, indeed, become so accustomed of late to these free presentations of music, that we feel little or no surprise when certain local critics refer, as they do at times, quite reproachfully to the ordinary undertakings of professional musicians, as arising out of desires for "monetary gain" and "self profit."

MUSIC IN BRISTOL.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The Triennial Festival (which is noticed in another column) has been the only important musical event in Bristol during the past six weeks. Besides that there is little to record. It may be fitting here to say that since the Festival there has been affixed to the beautiful timepiece (then presented to Mr. D. W. Rootham, the Choirmaster) a tablet, the inscription on which sets forth the attachment existing between the donors and recipient of the gift: "Presented to Mr. D. W. Rootham, Choirmaster of the Bristol Musical Festival, by the members of the choir, on the eve of the conclusion of his Sixth Triennial Festival, as a mark of their esteem for him as a Conductor and Musician, and their affection for him as a friend. 27th October, 1893."

On the 1st ult. the second Popular Concert of the present season given by the Bristol Musical Society took place in Colston Hall. The choir, as usual, sang crisply and artistically some well-chosen and familiar part-songs, choruses, &c., including Wagner's "Hail! bright abode," the Swabian Volkslied "Come, Dorothy, come," Adams's "The Comrades' Song of Hope," Martin's "Sweet Twilight," Faning's "The Miller's Wooing," and Mendelssohn's "The Wood Minstrel." The band played overtures and selections with becoming spirit. Madame Alice Gomez, Mr. Ager Grover, and Mr. Henry Bailey contributed songs.

Montpelier Choral Society gave a complimentary Concert to Mr. Alfred Brookes, their Conductor, on the 9th ult. Dr. E. T. Chipp's "Naomi" and Sir Sterndale Bennett's "The May Queen" were brought forward and performed with gratifying results. The soloists were Miss Marie Gane, Miss Clara Aldersley, Mrs. T. Fisher, Mr. E. T. Morgan, and Mr. W. Thomas; Miss Agnes Blick (pianoforte) and M. A. E. Hill (harmonium) were the accompanists.

On the 11th ult. the delightful Popular Chamber Concerts provided every season by Miss Lock and her associates were resumed. The chief works in the list were Goetz's Quintet in C minor (Op. 16) for pianoforte and strings, a similar composition from the pen of the late Sir George Macfarren, Spohr's Duet Concertante (Op. 95) for violin and pianoforte, and a posthumous fragment of a Quartet for strings of Schubert. All, or nearly all, these works were brought forward for the first time at these Concerts. The executants were Miss Lock, Messrs. Theo. Carrington, F. Gardner, H. Bernard, E. Pavey, and Bourke. Mr. Owen Roberts was the vocalist, and Mr. Fulford the accompanist.

Another of the Harrison Subscription Concerts was given in Colston Hall on the 21st ult., when the artists were Miss Palliser, Madame Belle Cole, Mr. Braxton Smith, and Signor Foli; Mr. F. Dawson (pianoforte), Mr. Kosman (viola), Mr. W. L. Barrett (flute), and Mr. Sydney Brooks (violoncello). Madame Albani was announced to sing, but was unable to do so through indisposition.

Mr. Lawford Huxtable has resumed his Musical Saturday Afternoons at the Fine Arts Academy.

MUSIC IN EDINBURGH.

(From our own Correspondent.)

As far as Edinburgh, at least, is concerned, Mr. Henschel may say veni, vidi (or, rather, exercitavi), vici. From the first vigorous and unanimous bar of the "Euryanthe" Overture, it was evident that the band was as excellent generally as later it proved to be artistic individually; and the complete understanding already established between Conductor and orchestra enabled one of the most interesting musicians of the day to display his experience, his skill, and his personality as in a mirror. The C minor Symphony has often been played here, but it is quite safe to say that it was never played as we heard it at Henschel's first Concert on the 6th ult. It was pathetic to hear Tschaikowski's "Elegie," a few hours after the telegram had been published announcing the composer's premature death. Miss Ella Russell was the vocalist and was loudly applauded. The large audience frequently testified also to their appreciation of Mr. Henschel's work.

The second Concert of the Scottish Orchestra was given on Monday, the 20th ult., when an equally interesting programme was equally well received by a crowded house. The soloists were Señor Sarasate and Madame Berthe Marx.

Not content with their larger scheme, Messrs. Paterson and Sons have embarked on the risky, but pre-eminently praiseworthy, enterprise of high-class popular Concerts on Saturday evenings. The public did not respond on the 11th ult. in such numbers as might have been expected; but when it is made so clear that the standard of performance is as high, and the programmes every whit as interesting as on Monday nights, all the seats vacant at the last Concert will surely be filled on the next occasion. The most interesting number was the "Scotch" Symphony—beautifully played, and Madame Emily Squire gave great pleasure in two songs.

Another novelty of the season for which we are indebted to Messrs. Paterson was an Afternoon Concert, when the beautiful Empire Theatre was crammed to the doors by an audience which lavished applause upon the Meister Glee Singers, Mr. Leo Stern, Miss Clara Samuel, Miss Marian McKenzie, and others.

Mdlle. Krüger-Velthusen was very successful in some pianoforte pieces interpolated in Mr. Lawrence Kellie's rather lachrymose programme in the Queen Street Hall.

Two gentlemen presented their credentials as resident pianists in Recitals which showed their capabilities to advantage. Both Herr Denhof and Herr Tramm commanded large and indulgent audiences. Herr Tramm is a distinct acquisition to the ranks of Edinburgh musicians. He was assisted at his Concert in the Music Hall by Herr Werner, the Dublin violinist.

Mr. Todd's Edinburgh Select Choir gave a successful Concert on the 8th ult. The choir, which numbers eighteen voices, sang the different numbers to the evident appreciation of the audience. The eight gentlemen of the choir also made an excellent appearance in several part-songs for male voices. The soloists acquitted themselves with credit.

MUSIC IN GLASGOW.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Now that the Scottish Orchestra Company has fairly settled down to its work party feeling runs, if anything, higher than ever. At Mr. Henschel's inaugural Concert it was soon made apparent that the Conductor had gathered around him an excellent band, remarkable for the fine quality of both the brass contingent and the violoncellos. The tone of the first violins is singularly good, but their spirited efforts have been more than once overpowered by reason of undue energy at the trombone desks. Ample provision had been made for rehearsals, inasmuch as the new-comers were at work for a fortnight in advance of their first public appearance. Such facilities told an agreeable tale in Beethoven's C minor Symphony, the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto (in which Miss Frida Scotta made a welcome début here), and the "Oberon" Overture. As often as not the performance of those familiar works showed perfect acquaintance with the text, and it only remains to be said that Mr. Henschel, whose reception was something of the nature of an ovation, kept a firm control over his forces.

On the evening of the 4th ult. the first Popular Concert of the series took place in presence of a large audience. The programme included Mendelssohn's "Scotch" Symphony—always a prime favourite with Glasgow folks—a stirring performance of Wagner's "Rienzi" Overture, and as good an account of the "Euryanthe" Prelude as anybody could well desire. The vocalist was Madame Emily Squire.

On the 9th ult. the Company's first Chamber Concert was given. It was very poorly attended, and, truth to tell, Mr. Sons and his coadjutors were not at their best in Schubert's C major Quintet. The Classical Concert, on the 13th ult., was memorable for Mr. Paderewski's first appearance in Scotland with an orchestra. His exposition of the pianoforte part in Schumann's A minor Concerto was overflowing with points of marked excellence, and at the close of the work both Mr. Henschel and the Polish artist won the enthusiastic favour of the audience. Primary interest centred, however, in the new "Fantaisie" specially composed for the last Norwich Festival. The enormous difficulties of this stimulating, if not very great work, were deftly overcome both by the band and the soloist, and another outburst of enthusiasm greeted all concerned in the performance. At the second Popular Concert, on the 18th ult., Beethoven's C minor Symphony was again heard, and the programme otherwise included Weber's Pianoforte Concerto (Op. 32) and Mendelssohn's "Ruy Blas" Overture. The pianist of the evening was Miss Pauline Hofmann. On the 27th ult. Mr. Sarasate was announced to appear in Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole" and in Saint-Saëns's "Rondo Capriccioso" for violin and orchestra. The Symphony was Brahms's No. 2, in D.

The Glasgow Choral Union season proper commences on the 14th inst., when Mr. Manns will renew acquaintance with his many Glasgow friends. A choice series of programmes has been prepared, and Mr. Frederic Lamond will be the pianist. While we write, it is known that the popular Sydenham chef brings North with him a band many of whose members hold foremost rank in their profession.

Fresh from another triumph before the Queen at Balmoral, where "Fra Diavolo" was performed on the 13th ult., the Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company began, on the following evening, an engagement at the Theatre Royal, Glasgow. One of the features of the short season was the highly successful début of Madame Frances Saville, an accomplished Australian soprano, and who will soon make her mark in this country, if we mistake not.

MUSIC IN LIVERPOOL.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The choral forces of the Philharmonic Society were put to the first important test of the season on the 7th ult., when Rubinstein's "Tower of Babel" was given. Mr. H. A. Branscombe being indisposed, his place as chorus-master had to be taken by Mr. Wilson, of Manchester, and perhaps, under all circumstances, it will be best to say but little of the performance, for which some special rehearsals had been arranged. Any way, the work itself is not one which affords especial gratification to the chorister. Be the cause, however, what it may, the general verdict seems to be hardly favourable to a repetition of the work of the famous pianist. The orchestra created the expected effect in the Storm episodes and so forth, causing all the more regret that so fine a body of players could not be more frequently employed on legitimate symphonic efforts. On the 22nd ult. a Miscellaneous Concert was given by the same Society; Sir Charles Hallé conducted both performances, and, at the latter, Lady Hallé appeared..

The Musical Society, a rehabilitated organisation which erst did good service as the Musical Association, under Mr. J. F. Swift, gave Handel's "Judas Maccabæus," on the 14th ult., in St. George's Hall, with Mr. D. O. Parry as Conductor. The choruses generally went well, precision and crispness being commendably in evidence. Mr. W. T. Best was at the organ, and there was an orchestra; but while the presence of the former lent dignity to the whole, the playing of the latter might have been improved upon. Nevertheless, the new arrangements entered into by the Society in question have been justified in the general results.

The series of Orchestral Concerts proposed by Mr. Goossens appear to have come to an untimely end. For the first, which took place with the close of October, a Wagner programme was arranged and the performance was of a high order. Of the support accorded by the public the same cannot be said, and in some correspondence which has ensued in the local press the late Conductor of the Carl Rosa Company distinctly and properly protests against elevating the tastes of this city at the expense of his own pocket.

On the other hand, orchestral music is still well to the front with Mr. A. E. Rodewald and his large orchestra, in regard to which it is difficult to understand where the line of demarcation exists between professional and amateur instrumentalists. One thing is, however, certain, and that is the popularity of these Gentlemen's Concerts, the second of which was given on the 18th ult., at the City Hall, with a programme representative of various periods of history and ranges of thought, from Purcell to Brahms.

In Birkenhead the Chester Diocesan Choral Association held a Festival on the 16th ult., under the Rev. Hylton Stewart; Stainer's "Daughter of Jairus" being given by a chorus of 150 voices in St. Mark's Church. The singing of the massed choirs was highly commendable, and upon the results of the Festival the Vicar of New Brighton, who was lately the Precentor of Chester Cathedral, may be congratulated. For the 28th of the same month Mendelssohn's "Elijah" was announced across the river by the Birkenhead Cambrian Choral Society, with Mr. D. O. Parry in the rostrum.

Runcorn and Warrington have coalesced, under Mr. Crossley, for the performance of Handel's "Samson" on successive dates at the towns named; and at Freshfield Handel's "Judas" has been given, under Mr. McCulloch.

MUSIC IN MANCHESTER.

(From our own Correspondent.)

We have no longer to complain of a dearth of music, for we now revel in an atmosphere of sweet sounds, if of chilly temperature. The campaign opened in a brilliant manner with the annual visit of Madame Adelina Patti and an able staff of coadjutors, combining the excellent violin and harp playing of the Sisters Eissler, the naïve pianoforte efforts of little Frida Simonson (with her quaint curtsey), and the vocalisation of Madame Hope Glenn, Messrs. Durward Lely and Norman Salmond, with the wonderful violoncello playing of Jean Gérardy—as charming in its way as even the singing of the great artist who seems destined to be the last of a race which recognised that beauty, equality, and purity of tone, steadiness of intonation and polished execution are essentials, for the lack of which violent declamation (so often mistaken for dramatic power) can never atone. A few evenings later the Free Trade Hall was again crowded to enjoy the Pianoforte Recital of M. Paderewski, who had been enticed to break through his resolve not to visit us again this season. As the same programme seems to have been presented everywhere, I need not record it: and the power of the popular pianist is too well known to require eulogy. Probably it is inevitable that, amid the excitement of a closely packed audience, eagerly listening for novel readings and exaggerated effects, the real intentions of the authors whose works are being displayed with immense skill and vigour should be, to some extent, lost sight of. Being dead, the great masters yet speak to some of us; but, perhaps, more clearly and potently among less disturbing influences.

Owing to the Bristol Festival our subscription Concerts commenced somewhat later than usual, but it was worth while to wait a week to be rewarded by such a rendering of Mendelssohn's great "Midsummer Night's Dream" Overture and of Beethoven's Seventh Symphony as showed how well balanced and admirably associated Sir Charles Hallé's orchestra still is. Further evidence has been given by the rendering of Stanford's "Irish" Symphony at the second Concert, of Sullivan's "Macbeth" Overture at the fourth, and of many smaller works scattered through well arranged programmes. The Cambridge professor conducted his own work, which is admirably scored, and replete with the colouring suggested by its title. Among the soloists of the month, we have had Signor Sarasate—with Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole" and a not very interesting "Carmen" Fantaisie; and we have hailed the re-appearance of the Manchester pianist, of whom we are proud — Mr. Frederic Dawson, of unsurpassed executive skill. Lady Hallé's advent was delayed till the fourth Concert—quite long enough to try the patience of her admirers—that is, of all music-lovers. Beside welcoming Miss Palliser, Mr. Iver McKay, and Mr. Andrew Black at the Recital of the "Flying Dutchman" on the 16th ult., we warmly applauded Miss Emma Juch at the opening Concert on the 2nd ult., and admired the finish of her method and—when not forced beyond its fair power—the purity of her voice; and we have listened with pleasure to the warblings of Madame Amy Sherwin. And just as we delighted in the excellence of the band on the first evening, so we congratulated ourselves, after the Wagner opera, upon Mr. Wilson's care of his choir, and upon the promise it afforded of admirable choral performances during the winter.

The Saturday evening Concerts of Mr. Barrett and of Mr. Cross are in full and successful swing; while, to more serious students, the Organ Recitals of Mr. Pyne, at the Town Hall, are extremely attractive. The Philharmonic Choir, under Mr. Lane, has already given "Judas Maccabæus" and, admirably guided by the bâton of Mr. Goossens, the "Rustic Chivalry" of Mascagni, and is intent upon making our Wednesday evenings alluring and cheerful.

But still more interesting is the perseverance, amid much discouragement, of Mr. Bauerkeller with his Quartet Concerts, and the assistance which Mr. Willy Hess has promised toward the popularising of a class of music too long neglected here. Many attempts have been made to foster a love of chamber music in Manchester; but, beyond doubt, the rapidly growing number of young violinists of both sexes must lead to an increased cultivation of that music which, more than any other, ought to interest all wielders of the tuneful bow. The first meeting of Mr. Hess's party at the Concert Hall, on the 13th ult., was most enjoyable. A more excellent rendering of Schumann's Second Quartet (Op. 41) or (by Sir Charles Hallé, Messrs. Hess, Briggs, Speelman, and Carl Fuchs) of Dvorák's Quintet in A (Op. 81) could not be heard anywhere; and very pleasant variety was afforded by Mr. Hess's masterly execution of Bach's Chaconne in D minor and by the clever singing of Miss Medora Henson.

MUSIC IN NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The success of our recent Triennial Festival has increased the interest in musical circles. All the principal choral societies are reaping advantage from this wave of musical enthusiasm, and the excellence of our Concerts will be improved upon in the near future.

Burslem Tonic Sol-fa Choir has probably the best record for honours won in competition, but of recent years a rapid decline set in, and early in this season the committee seriously considered the advisability of abandoning the programme. Happily, the members rallied round the Conductor (Mr. W. Sherratt), and a vigorous committee is endeavouring to make the first performance a success. T. Hulme, Esq., C.C., J.P. (President of the Choir and Chairman of the School Board), has rendered splendid service in reviving the choir of the mother town.

Stoke (now North Staffordshire) Philharmonic Society (with Dr. C. Swinnerton Heap, the Festival Conductor) has over 200 members, and here there are reasonable grounds for expecting both musical and financial success.

Hanley Glee and Madrigal Society is conspicuous for spirited enterprise, and for years all its Concerts have proved to be financial successes. With a comfortable balance of nearly £200, a strong list of eminent artists is engaged for the initial performance of "The Messiah." Among the younger societies, the Tunstall Sir Smith Child is rehearsing Mendelssohn's "St. Paul," under the bâton of Mr. Alcock, from Newcastle, and in time, with its exceptional advantages, will be worthy to rank among the senior societies.

The Sunday School Union, of Hanley, tried a novel experiment this month. Over 400 scholars sang appropriate hymns and songs at what will probably be an annual Festival. Mr. J. W. Turner's English Opera Company occupied Hanley Theatre Royal for a week, and among other works produced Mascagni's famous "Cavalleria Rusticana." The Hanley Corporation have had the advantage of a sum of money left by the late Mr. Meakin "to provide high-class music for the people." Two Concerts have been given under this scheme during the month. At the first, Miss Esther Palliser, fresh from her Festival triumphs, and Signor Foli sang with great success. At the second all the tickets were sold nine days before the date fixed. Master Cyril Tyler, the wonderful boy soprano, sang with great feeling. Madame Dotti and a party from Covent Garden gave the celebrated Garden Scene from Gounod's "Faust." In the first part of the programme almost every piece was encored, and a return visit was announced for the 30th ult.

The Hanley School Board Festival was in advance of the usual success. By these Concerts funds for purchasing pianofortes for school use are secured.

MUSIC IN NOTTINGHAM.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The last month has been an exceptionally busy one in music here. An unusually heavy list of Concerts of all kinds has been supplemented by Opera at both Theatres.

Amidst all these counter-attractions it was gratifying to find that Herr Ellenberger's first Concert, on October 26, was well supported. The audience was rewarded with excellent renderings of Brahms's C minor Quartet, Beethoven's Quartet in F major, Miss Ellenberger giving as her solo Schumann's Pianoforte Toccata in C major, and Herr Ellenberger the Andante from Joachim's Violin Concerto in G minor. Herr Ellenberger deserves high praise for the care and taste devoted to the selection and preparation of his programmes.

The Philharmonic Choir commenced its season on October 31 with a miscellaneous Concert; its own share in the programme being the modest contribution of four part-songs: Benedict's "Hunting Song," Pinsuti's "The sea hath its pearls," Caldicott's "Little Jack Horner," and Berger's "Lovely night," which were admirably sung, under the direction of Mr. F. Marshall-Ward.

The Sacred Harmonic Society gave a Recital of "Cavalleria Rusticana" on the 9th ult., providing a very strong cast in Miss Ella Russell, Miss Norledge, Miss Damian, Mr. Edward Lloyd, and Mr. Ffrangçon Davies.

The Newark Philharmonic Society gave, on the 21st ult., Barnett's "Ancient Mariner," under the bâton of Mr. Samuel Reay, with Miss Norledge, Miss E. Hart, Messrs. Holmes and A. H. Ellis sustaining the principal parts.

Two charities were benefited by four successful performances of Mrs. Lambert's operetta for children, "Nell." The piece was capitally mounted, under the supervision of the talented composer—better known to the musical public as Emily Bardsley Farmer—Mr. Nolan Peat undertaking the stage management, Mr. E. Theodore Gilmer the children's ballet, and Mr. Ralph Horner the musical direction.

The Philharmonic Choir organised a Solo and Choral Contest on the 18th ult. The entries in the solo contests were well filled, but the choral contest only attracted two choirs. Dr. Henry Hiles, of Manchester, who acted as adjudicator, in alluding to the increasing reputation of Nottingham choralists, expressed a hope that in a future contest the arrangements may prove more attractive to local choirs, and consequently stimulate progress in choral singing.

Mr. Allen's second Classical Concert, on the 22nd ult., was very poorly attended, notwithstanding the fact that the programme included Brahms's Clarinet Quintet, Beethoven's Septet, and Haydn's "Emperor" Quartet, played by such artists as Messrs. Willy Hess, C. Rawdon Briggs, Spielmann, Carl Fuchs, Hofmann, Egerton, Lalande, and Paersch. True, there were no great stars, but it is lamentable that such an artistic treat should have such poor appreciation in a town professedly musical.

MUSIC IN SHEFFIELD AND DISTRICT.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Mr. H. Coward's historical cantata "Magna Charta" was performed by the Attercliffe Zion Choral Society on the 13th ult. The chorus singing, under the direction of Mr. W. W. Chisholm, was excellent, the unaccompanied "Prayer" being especially admirable.

On the 18th ult. the St. Cecilia Musical Society gave a Concert performance of "Cavalleria Rusticana" in the Albert Hall. The opera was followed by a selection from Haydn's "Creation," the old and new styles being thus happily contrasted. In both works the chorus attained a high pitch of excellence, and Mr. William Brown, who conducted, is to be congratulated on the result.

On the 15th ult. Sir Charles Hallé brought his Manchester orchestra to Sheffield, and, in addition to conducting Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, the "Rienzi" and "William Tell" Overtures, and other works, played the "Emperor" Concerto in splendid style. Miss Medora Henson was the vocalist.

The Rotherham Choral Society announces "The Messiah" for the Christmas Concert, and for performance in March the "Creation" and "Hymn of Praise."

On the 14th ult. Gounod's "Messe Solennelle" was performed in the Town Hall, Ilkeston. Miss Dennis, Mr. F. Featherston, and Mr. J. Nugent were the soloists.

The Doncaster Musical Society announces Handel's "Samson" and Wallace's "Maritana." Mr. J. M. Kirk is the Conductor.

MUSIC IN WILTS AND HANTS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

On account of ill-health, Mr. South has been compelled to retire for the present from the conductorship of the Sarum Choral Society, and the next Concert, which will take place on the 16th inst., will be under the direction of Mr. A. Aylward.

The Westbury Philharmonic Society gave its first Concert of the season on the 28th ult. The programme included Macfarren's "May-day," in which the solo was sung by Miss Elsie Mackenzie. The orchestra was led by Mr. E. Jones, and Mr. Alfred Foley conducted.

Gaul's cantata "Ruth" has been put into rehearsal by the Wilton Choral Society, of which Mr. Herbert Naish is the Conductor.

The Marlborough Choral Society, with Mr. W. S. Bambridge as Conductor, and the Swindon Harmonic Society, under the direction of Mr. George Whitehead, commenced work for the season last month. "St. Paul" has been selected by both bodies for rehearsal, and a performance of the work will be given early in the coming year by the two societies combined. The New Swindon Choral Society, of which Mr. A. Reekes is the Conductor, has "Acis and Galatea" and the "Hymn of Praise" in preparation.

Southampton has been well provided with music during the past month. Concerts of the usual miscellaneous character have been given by Madame Antoinette Sterling's party, Miss Marie Wurm, and the Southampton Amateur Orchestral Society, under the direction of Mr. E. Moon. Mr. Valentine Smith's Opera Company has appeared at the Theatre and given successful performances of "Maritana," "The Bohemian Girl," and an adaptation of the French opera by Adolphe Adam, "Si j'étais Roi." Amongst the announcements for the present month is a Pupils' Concert to be given by Madame Lily Lowe on the 12th inst., when Roeckel's cantata "The Gitana" will be the chief piece of the programme.

Mr. Paderewski gave a Recital at the Town Hall, Portsmouth, on the 23rd ult.

Miss Margaret Fowles, the Honorary Conductor of the Ryde Choral Union, has been obliged, by pressure of other professional work, to announce that only one Concert will be given this season, on which occasion "The Messiah" will be performed. The proceeds of this Concert will be given to the Isle of Wight Infirmary.

MUSIC IN YORKSHIRE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

In Leeds the honour of opening the musical season should have belonged to Mr. and Mrs. Norman Salmond, who were to have given a Recital of vocal and pianoforte music on October 23. Mrs. Salmond's illness, however, caused a postponement sine die, so it fell to the lot of Mr. Isidor Cohn, a brilliant pianist who has recently left the West Riding to take up his abode in London, to lead the way with a Pianoforte Recital on October 25. A fine rendering of Schumann's Sonata in G minor was, perhaps, the most remarkable feature in a highly interesting programme.

On October 28 the Royal Carl Rosa Company began a fortnight's season of opera at the Grand Theatre. The programme was less hackneyed than has been the case of late years, and, in spite of unavoidable orchestral deficiencies, the production of "Tannhäuser" was of exceptional excellence, Mr. Hedmondt's admirable impersonation of the title rôle lending it absolute distinction.

Mr. Edgar Haddock, whose "Musical Evenings" have gained in popularity what they may have to some extent lost in artistic significance, has already given two of these popular Concerts to large and appreciative audiences. At the former, on October 31, Miss Mathilde Verne was the pianist and Mr. Haddock the violinist, the vocalists being Miss Palliser, Madame Belle Cole, Messrs. Braxton Smith and Foli. At the latter, on the 14th ult., there appeared a touring party, including Miss Trebelli, Madame Antoinette Sterling, Mr. Santley, and Mr. Arbos. In neither case was the programme of more than ephemeral interest.

The Leeds Subscription Concert Committee began its thirteenth season on the 9th ult., encouraged by the largest subscription list for several years past. The programme indicated a desire to cater for popular tastes, the clever Meister Glee Singers forming one of its chief attractions. Fortunately the excellent choice of songs by the two solo vocalists, Miss Samuell and Miss Marian McKenzie; the fine violin playing of Mr. John Dunn, especially in a Fugue of J. S. Bach; and a finished performance of Mendelssohn's Variations in D for violoncello and pianoforte, by Mr. Leo Stern and Madame Hast, redeemed the programme from the reproach of worthlessness.

On the 22nd ult. the Leeds Philharmonic Society, under Mr. Alfred Broughton, gave a performance of Berlioz's "Faust." Mrs. Hutchinson, Mr. Edward Lloyd, Mr. D. Billington, and Mr. Watkin Mills were the soloists. The soloists were quite equal to their reputation, the chorus-singing indicated careful training, and the band was, on the whole, more efficient than usual.

At Bradford that excellent Society, the Bradford Permanent Orchestra, under Mr. W. B. Sewell's conductorship, began its series of popular Saturday Concerts on October 28. Two movements of the "Surprise" Symphony and the "Oberon" Overture formed the classical "powder," while the "jam" was represented by a selection from "Cavalleria," some of Ponchielli's "Gioconda" ballet music, and similar attractive pieces. Miss Maggie Davies and Mr. Blagbro were the soloists. On the 18th ult. the second Concert took place, three movements from Mozart's E flat Symphony and the "Tannhäuser" Overture being the chief features of the programme. Mrs. Helen Trust and Mr. E. Branscombe were the vocalists.

The first of the Bradford Subscription Concerts afforded an excellent example of what such a Concert should be. The programme included Brahms's Third Symphony, Mendelssohn's incidental music to the "Midsummer Night's Dream," and the "Egmont" Overture. The Brahms Symphony had not been heard before at these Concerts, so that it was the more unfortunate that the performance, by Sir Charles Hallé's band, was a somewhat perfunctory one. Mendelssohn, on the other hand, had more than justice done to him. Mr. Sarasate was the violinist and introduced Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole." As vocalist Miss Landi replaced Madame Vasquez, prevented by illness from appearing. On the 10th ult. the Bradford Festival Choral Society performed Beethoven's Mass in C and Mendelssohn's "When Israel out of Egypt came" and "First Walpurgis Night." It cannot be said that the performance achieved more than mediocrity. The band, consisting of local players, was an efficient one; the chorus good, if not quite up to West Riding level; the soloists not fully equal to the demands made upon them. Mr. Thornton, the bass, made the best impression, and sang the important soli in the "Walpurgis Night" well. Miss F. Coates, the soprano, though not powerful, was at least efficient. The contralto (Miss E. Rhodes) was less satisfactory, and the tenor (Mr. W. Knight) was ill-advised in attempting a task manifestly beyond him. Mr. W. H. Garland was the Conductor.

The Huddersfield Choral Society's first Concert of the season took place on October 20, when the "Golden Legend," with Miss Margaret Hoare, Miss Sarah Berry, Mr. Houghton, and Mr. Bantock Pierpoint as principals, was the most important thing in the programme, which included Mendelssohn's 114th Psalm and Sullivan's "In Memoriam" Overture. In the Psalm the very powerful chorus was heard to the greatest advantage, their grandeur of tone being remarkable. The "Golden Legend" performance was correct, but rather too tame to be in keeping with the character of the work. Mr. J. Bowling conducted. The Huddersfield Subscription Concerts are proving as popular as ever, and do credit to Mr. Watkinson's discrimination as a caterer for the public. A slight and unintentional injustice committed in our last notice may be here corrected. Not six, but only four of the Huddersfield Concerts are given by touring parties, the remaining eight being individual separate engagements. On October 31 the Huddersfield Glee and Madrigal Society, of which Mr. Ramsey Bower is the Conductor, were to give a Concert of well-selected madrigals, glees, and part-songs.

The Halifax Choral Society gave a most varied and interesting Concert on the 17th ult. With the aid of Sir Charles Hallé's band, Mendelssohn's "Walpurgis Night" and Brahms's "Song of Destiny" were admirably rendered, the singing of the chorus in the latter work being of a high order of excellence as regards finish and intelligence. Sir Charles Hallé conducted both works, and played Beethoven's Pianoforte Concerto in E flat; Mr. W. H. Garland, the Society's Conductor, contenting himself with directing the performance of Walmisley's "Sweete Floweres." Mr. E. Houghton, Mr. Bantock Pierpoint, and Mrs. Brooks were the principals.

At Wakefield a Subscription Concert of chamber music was given on the 17th ult., Mr. A. R. Briggs being the violinist, Miss Margaret Wild the pianist, and Miss Sylvia Wardell the vocalist. At York Mr. Sarasate and Madame Berthe Marx have given one of their Recitals for violin and pianoforte.

At the Examinations for Degrees in Music at the University of Oxford, Michaelmas Term, 1893, the following have satisfied the Examiners: 1. First Examination for the Degree of Bachelor in Music.—Broughton, Samuel Hull, Queen's College, and of Blackburn; Chaplin, Wyndham Allan, Keble College, and of Boxhill, Dorking; Clark, Robert Ernest, Queen's College, and of Barnet; Collins, Henry Bird, New College, and of Sinclair Road, West Kensington Park; Ewer, Dawson Crisp Wilson, Queen's College, and of Stratton-on-Fosse, Bath; Fellowes, Edmund Horace (B.A.), Oriel College, and of Feering Vicarage, Kelvedon, Essex; Gregory, Alfred Edward, Queen's College, and of Lanark, N.B.; Holloway, Henry, Non-Collegiate, of Bournemouth; Lyon, James, Queen's College, and of the Cathedral, Bangor; Nock, Benjamin, Queen's College, and of Smethwick; Rolfe, Herbert, Queen's College, and of Marlboro' Road, Bowes Park; Wainwright, James Charles, Queen's College, and of Guildford. 2. Second Examination for the Degree of Bachelor in Music.—Acton, John, Queen's College, and of Albert Square, Manchester; Alderson, Montague Frederick (B.A.), Merton College, and of Holdenby Rectory, Northampton; Cliffe, Frank Hodsdon (B.A.), St. Mary Hall, and of Musselburgh; English, Fitzwilliam de Guadaloupe (M.A.), St. Mary Hall, and of Scarborough; Hibbert, Norman Burrell, Queen's College, and of West Hartlepool; Kennedy, Arnold, Queen's College, and of Hampstead; Walker, Ernest (B.A.), Balliol College, and of Anerley. 4. Examination for the Degree of Doctor in Music.—Buck, Percy Carter, Worcester College, and of West Ham House, Essex, E.; Sweeting, Edward Thomas, New College, and of Rossall School, Fleetwood; Thomas, William Edwin, St. Edmund Hall, and of All Saints' School, Bloxham, Banbury. The Examiners were Sir John Stainer, M.A., D.Mus., Magdalen College, Professor of Music; C. Hubert H. Parry, M.A., D.Mus., Exeter College, Choragus; and Charles H. Lloyd, M.A., D.Mus., Christ Church.

A Concert was given, on the 13th ult., at Princes' Hall, in aid of the Neighbourhood Guild, Leighton Hall, Kentish Town. The programme was above the level generally reached at similar entertainments, as it contained a goodly proportion of high-class music—e.g., some violin and pianoforte duets by Schubert and Saint-Saëns, which were excellently played by Mr. John Saunders (a most able violinist, of whom more should be heard) and Miss Josephine Troup. This lady, who is known as the writer of some impassioned and artistic songs, contributed several new compositions from her pen—viz., two well-written Sketches for violin and pianoforte (a charming Berceuse and a very spirited Allegro vivace), and two melodious and refined Trios for ladies' voices, "Song by the river" and "Hark, hark, the lark!" which were sung by Mrs. Trust, Miss Beatrice Lucas, and Miss Clara Myers. A number of songs were contributed by these ladies, as well as by Messrs. Jack Robertson and Herbert Thorndike, a word of praise being due to Miss Lucas for her singing of the lovely seductive air "Mon cœur s'ouvre à ta voix," from Saint-Saëns's "Samson et Dalila." Miss Genevieve Ward gave a recitation, which was much appreciated.

The Hampstead Popular Concerts of Chamber Music had a good beginning on the 10th ult., when four interesting works, effectively diversified in style, held the attention of a large audience in the Vestry Hall. It says much for the enterprise of the directorate that such a composition as Brahms's String Sextet in B flat (Op. 18, No. 1) should have figured at the opening Concert of the season. The executants were Messrs. Gompertz, Inwards, Kreuz, Hobday, Howell, and Squire. Another important feature was Goetz's Quartet for pianoforte and strings in E (Op. 6), which, if not among the productions displaying to special advantage the talents of the ill-fated musician, is certainly deserving occasional hearing. In this Mr. Dannreuther took part. The same player gave an intellectual reading of Schumann's Pianoforte Sonata in G minor (Op. 22), and Mr. Gompertz selected as solo Max Bruch's elegant Romance (Op. 42), the charm of which has rarely been more manifest. Mr. Plunket Greene did justice to one of Schubert's songs and a couple of old Irish ditties.

The Guildhall School of Music was among the last of the Institutions that obtained notice from the retiring Lord Mayor, Alderman Sir Stuart Knill. With the Lady Mayoress and the Sheriffs he attended the Guildhall in State on October 28 to present the prizes and certificates gained by students. The proceedings began with a Concert, in the course of which Miss Jessie Hudleston, Miss Gertrude Izard, and Madame Annie Fisher as vocalists, and Master Edward Parlove as pianist, specially distinguished themselves. Some excitement was created by Mr. Bates Maddison, a young tenor, fainting on the platform whilst singing Pinsuti's "The Last Watch." Among the acceptable part-songs, carefully given by the choir under the conductorship of Sir Joseph Barnby, were Barnby's "Sweet and Low" (encored), Walter Macfarren's "You stole my love," and Ravenscroft's "In the merry Spring."

The Clarence Orchestral Society, an Association numbering about fifty instrumentalists and a hundred choralists (sopranos and basses preponderating), gave a Concert in St. Andrew's Hall, Newman Street, on the 16th ult. Confidence in the taste of the friends of the Society, shown by devoting the first part of the programme to Sterndale Bennett's melodious cantata "The May Queen," was not misplaced. This work, thoroughly representative of the English school at the period at which it was penned, was listened to with evident gratification, and hearty encouragement was bestowed upon the efforts of the Misses Janie Bridges and Nellie Thorne, Messrs. Arthur Wilson and Morgan Wilkinson as soloists, of the orchestra, and of the chorus, the latter throwing considerable spirit into their work. Mr. Andrew Buckley conducted with zeal and intelligence.

At the Archæological Museum, Cambridge, on the 4th ult., Mr. Sedley Taylor gave the first of two Lectures on the Church Cantatas of Bach. The numerous and difficult musical illustrations from these works were executed by Miss Katie Thomas (soprano), Miss Evelyn Downes (contralto), Mr. J. F. Horncastle (tenor), and Mr. Norman Alston (bass), all of whom are students at the Royal Academy of Music and performed their arduous tasks in a manner which called forth the highest encomiums from all present. Among the pieces given were the peculiarly trying opening chorus from "Weinen, Klagen, Sorgen," the concluding chorus of "Ich hatte viel Bekümmerniss," and the great duet in "Der Herr ist mein getreuer Hirt."

Mr. Aldebert Allen, a young artist who gave his first Flute Recital at Steinway Hall, on the 22nd ult., is a very able player on what seems to be rapidly becoming quite a favourite solo instrument. His tone is of excellent quality and his execution equal to the heaviest demands which pieces like Mr. John Francis Barnett's Sonata, Meyer Olbersleben's Fantasia Sonata (Op. 17), and show pieces by J. Andersen make upon the performer. Mr. Allen was assisted by several singers, of whom Mrs. Lee and Mr. John Sandbrook deserve mention. The gentleman made his greatest success with a fine Cavalier Song "Give a rouse," by A. Davidson Arnott, a virile and original conception, which he sang with much dramatic impulse.

A series of six Lectures, "About Music and what it is made of," was delivered by Miss Oliveria Prescott, at the Church of England High Schools, Upper Baker Street, between October 25 and November 29. The titles of these —"Popular Music of Old Times," "Old Scholarly Music," "Modern Music: from Ballad to Minuet," "from Minuet to Sonata," "from Ballad to Rondo," "Suite and Symphony"—sufficiently indicate the scope of the lectures. That the subjects were dealt with attractively and adequately will readily be assumed by all who know Miss Prescott's peculiar fitness for such a task. Such lectures have an educational value which can scarcely be too highly rated.

The 297th monthly Concert of the St. George's Glee Union took place on the 3rd ult. Mr. Edward Lewis, Mr. W. H. Webb, Miss Ada Tomlinson, and Miss Ida F. Price sang solos, and the choir gave Cowen's graceful part-song "The Moss Rose," Martin's "Now the golden morn," the old but welcome "In the Merry Spring," "The Cruiskeen lawn," "Gather ye rosebuds," "Moonlight," and "The belfry tower." Mr. Ralph Stewart played pianoforte solos. Miss Ellen Bliss, Mr. J. H. Maunder, and Mr. S. H. Lamb accompanied, and Mr. Joseph Monday conducted as usual.

The "professional" students of the London Academy of Music gave a capital Concert at St. George's Hall, on the 17th ult., when diplomas and medals were presented to those non-students who passed the July examinations. Mr. Pollitzer conducted very good performances of Bach's Suite in D for strings and Haydn's Variations on "God preserve the Emperor." Several excellent singers, pianists, and violinists, whose efforts we have not space to mention in detail, gave proof of the results possible to talent and training when acting in combination.

Arrangements are being made for holding another Welsh National Festival, at St. Paul's Cathedral, next St.

David's Eve. Mr. Dyved Lewys has been appointed Conductor, and Mr. David J. Thomas has again been selected as Organist. The music to be performed will include the anthem "Bendigedig fyddo Arglwydd Dduw Israel," by John Thomas (Llanwrtyd), and a new setting of the Canticles by the Organist of the Festival.

The prize of ten guineas offered to the students of the Royal Academy of Music by the Bristol Orpheus Glee Society has been awarded to Mr. Charles Macpherson for his composition of an unaccompanied five-part glee for male voices. Mr. Macpherson chose for his subject "There sits a bird on yonder tree," from the "Ingoldsby Legends." A similar prize, offered by the same Society to the Students of the Royal College of Music, was gained by Mr. H. Walford Davies, Composition Scholar, for his setting of "The Sturdy Rock," from Percy's "Reliques of Ancient Poetry."

An organ of three manuals and forty stops has just been finished by Messrs. Peter Conacher and Co., of Huddersfield and Dublin, for the English Church in Rome. The instrument left England for Italy on the 9th ult., and is to be opened by Professor Sir Herbert Oakeley on Christmas Day. It will be the only organ by an English firm in the Eternal City.

Gaul's "Israel" was sung at Holy Trinity Church, Upper Tooting, on Sunday afternoon, the 5th ult., with orchestral accompaniment. The church was crowded. Messrs. D. Attwater and Musgrove Tufnail sustained respectively the tenor and baritone soli portions and M. Willet sang the soprano solo work. Mr. Warren Tear presided at the organ and Mr. Alfred Physick conducted.

On Sunday afternoon, the 5th ult., the Waterloo Oratorio Society gave a performance of Sir A. Sullivan's Oratorio "The Prodigal Son," at St. John the Evangelist, Walworth Road. The solos were contributed by Miss Gertrude Izard, Mr. Gilbert Denis, and Mr. Fred. Winton. Mr. S. S. Martyn conducted, and Mr. Henry J. B. Dart accompanied on the organ. The church was filled to overflowing.

The Dedication Festival was held at St. Philip's, Sydenham, on the 4th ult. The Mass was sung to the English arrangement of Gounod's "Messe Solennelle," the solo parts being taken by Master Steerman, Messrs. Crump and Osborn. Mr. T. J. Woodall, the Organist and Choirmaster, presided at the organ with great taste and skill.

Dr. J. Varley Roberts, of Magdalen College, has resigned the conductorship of the Oxford Choral and Philharmonic Society, which post he has held for over seven years. During his tenure a heavy financial debt has been paid off and the Philharmonic Society amalgamated with the Oxford Choral Society.

Mr. Henry Irving has given Mr. Oscar Barrett permission to use Mr. German's "Shepherds' Dance" from "Henry VIII.," in the forthcoming pantomime of "Cinderella" at the Lyceum.

Mr. John Wm. Ivimey, Assistant-Organist and Music Master at Harrow School, has been appointed Conductor to the London County Council Musical Society.

Mr. Sims Reeves sang in Manchester, on October 28, at Mr. T. A. Barrett's Concert, before the usual crowd. The local press were eloquent in expressions of wonder at Mr. Reeves's retention, in so large a measure, of his old power and charm. As to the audience—but why say more?

REVIEWS.

School Songs. Books 1 to 10. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

The days when music was taught in our public schools in parrot fashion—that is to say, when it was sufficient to make the children sing by ear in order to earn the full Government grant—have happily passed, and compositions or arrangements suitable for the little ones are consequently in large and increasing request. The present series is edited by Mr. W. G. McNaught, and is published in two forms: one with the voice parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa notations, with pianoforte accompaniment, and the other with voice parts only in Tonic Sol-fa. Of course simplicity and tunefulness are essential in music of this order, but there need be no lack of artistic feeling, and for the most part these songs contain in modest measure this element, though in no single instance transgressing the limits required. Each book contains half-a-dozen ditties, and as the price is either sixpence or ninepence in the edition first-named, little hesitation need be observed in making selections. At the same time, it may be as well to indicate the contents of the several numbers. Nos. 1 and 2 contain each six songs by Alfred Moffat, and Nos. 3 and 4 each six duets by the same facile composer. In the other books at present under notice we meet with many charming little compositions and transcriptions by Mendelssohn, Abt, Reinecke, Smart, Pinsuti, Rubinstein, Schumann, Cowen, Macfarren, Hatton, and Battison Haynes. The names of these musicians will of course carry much weight, and it only remains to be added that Mr. McNaught has so far proved himself a thoroughly trustworthy editor. The "School Songs" fulfil a distinct want, and are therefore certain to prove acceptable in the circle for which they are intended.

Two-Part Songs for Female Voices. Octavo edition. Nos. 1 to 61. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

Part-music for ladies' voices is in very strong demand at present, and Novello's edition of trios, quartets, &c., is constantly undergoing enlargement; but, of course, in many instances, pieces in three or more parts are useless, and the present publication seems likely to supply just what is wanted in schools or choirs of such modest dimensions that the practice of anything more elaborate than duets would be inexpedient. The first forty-six numbers consist of compositions previously issued in various forms, and consequently need not be mentioned separately. They include more or less familiar and admired pieces by Mendelssohn, Schumann, Abt, Pinsuti, Henry Smart, Rubinstein, and Cowen. Nos. 47 to 58 are new little sketches of three or four pages each, by Carl Reinecke. The name of the composer is almost a guarantee for their excellence, for Reinecke's fairy cantatas are widely esteemed for their delightful freshness, piquancy, and melodic beauty. Within their limited scope the present trifles will be found equally charming, for although the vocal part-writing and the accompaniments are necessarily of a very simple character, the gifted Leipzig musician has proved once more that effects are to be gained without wealth of means. The last three that we shall mention for the present are by C. Mühlfeld, and are attractive little pieces in the style of German Volkslieder. The third, entitled "Faithlessness," though rather sad, is especially pleasing.

Bagatelles for Violin and Pianoforte. By Percy Pitt (Op. 1). [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

These are interesting pieces, though it is to be hoped that the composer will soon tone down his tendency to extravagant harmonies. The first efforts of a composer should, however, be judged leniently; the tendency in question really proceeds here from a good motive—viz., from a desire to avoid the commonplace. No. 1 is a graceful Air de Ballet with piquant rhythms both in the melody and accompaniment. No. 2, a Lamento in A minor, has a good deal of character; the Coda, with its appasionata phrase for the violin, followed by low dolorous notes, supported by plaintive harmonies, is effective. No. 3, Romance, has a flowing, tender melody and a graceful accompaniment. No. 4, Souvenir, opens with an expressive theme, from which is evolved a short, well-sustained movement. No. 5, March, is clear in rhythm; the brief trio presents simplicity and its reverse in close contact. No. 6, Amoroso, commences in 9-8 measure with a soft, flowing melody; the meno mosso section is highly seasoned with accidentals. The Gavotte, No. 7, is a clever, taking piece; the old and the new are pleasantly combined; the Musette, with its quaint fifths, is of good effect. The concluding Moto Perpetuo is lively and sparkling. So then, there is much to praise; and in time, and with experience, Mr. Pitt will learn the value of the old proverb—Inter utrum tene.

A Christmas Service of Song. [Skeffington and Son.]

This little book contains a complete order of Service for Christmastide, to be used in church, mission-room, or school, consisting of prayers, versicles, psalms, lessons, &c., and some hymns and carols. New and original tunes are supplied by Sir John Stainer, Mr. Berthold Tours, Professor Bridge, and Mr. Martin S. Skeffington. The idea is excellent, and it has been well carried out, though the name of the compiler of the Service is not given on the title-page. It need scarcely be added that the music is throughout of the simplest character. An edition of the words only is also published.

Christmas Carols for Church use. Edited and composed by the Rev. T. Herbert Spinney. First and Second Series. [William Reeves.]

The revival of the ancient and pleasant practice of carol singing at Yuletide has stimulated composers and editors to supply what is evidently a growing want, and about this season of the year new publications are expected. Each of the two little books named above contains seven ditties by Herbert Spinney, Walter Spinney, Frank Spinney, and other composers, for the most part bright and tuneful, as befits the festive season, but not invariably irreproachable as regards the accent of the words. In the first example of the first series there are four or five false accents. An intelligent choirmaster, however, could remove these defects without injury to the music.

The First Christmas. A Carol-Anthem. Words by Angela Goetze. Music by Joseph Barnby. S.A.T.B. (Novello's Octavo Anthems, No. 448.) [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

This is a setting of the familiar story, likely to become extremely popular—it is effective without being difficult, possesses variety and charm, and is, of course, admirably written from the singer's point of view. It consists of four movements: "The Annunciation," a quaint, simply harmonized melody in A minor; "The message to the shepherds," a particularly tuneful and graceful pastoral in D; a tender "Cradle Song" in F, and a triumphant "Gloria in Excelsis" in D. Choirs will here find ample opportunity for the exercise of their capabilities in the direction of appropriate expression.

Ten Christmas Carols. [Novello, Ewer and Co.]

In these carols, which are issued in a small and convenient form, we meet with simple but effective compositions in the good old style by Sir John Stainer, Mr. J. T. Field, Professor Bridge, and other lesser known but competent musicians. There is a pleasant quaintness in the words, some of which are anonymous, and the composers have also for the most part written in the delightful archaic spirit which always seems appropriate to Yuletide. It would be invidious to single out specimens for mention, as all are good, and the little set should meet with wide appreciation.

Twelve Christmas Carols. By F. Pascal. [Joseph Williams.]

Mr. Pascal's carols, which have words by M. C. Gillington (Mrs. G. F. Byron), are slightly more ambitious, those for voices in unison being written in the style of English ballads, while those in harmony might pass very well for part-songs. They are all effective, and display good musicianship, but are not difficult either in the voice parts or the accompaniments.

FOREIGN NOTES.

The funeral of the late Charles Gounod, which took place on October 27, and was witnessed by enormous crowds, was a magnificent and most impressive ceremony, in which almost all the greatest living representatives of French art took part. The pall bearers were: the Minister of Fine Arts, MM. Ambroise Thomas, Victorien Sardou, Gérôme, Ernest Reyer, Jules Barbier, Eugène Bertrand, and Carvalho. Gounod having been a grand officer of the Légion d'Honneur, he was buried with full military honours. The service in the Madeleine Church was, by the special wish of the deceased master, chanted to plain-song, MM. Saint-Saëns and Theodore Dubois playing the great organ alternately. The remains were deposited in the Gounod family vault in the cemetery of Auteuil.

M. Bruneau's new opera, "L'Attaque du Moulin," was produced with great success at the Paris Opéra Comique on the 23rd ult., too late for more than a passing reference in this number. To judge from the accounts to hand at the moment of going to press, the new work from the pen of this very gifted, though eccentric, artist seems to be a great improvement on his much discussed "Rêve." We hope to give further details in our next issue.

A new musical Society has been started in Paris which will give performances in the Eden Theatre four times a week. Besides ordinary orchestral and vocal Concerts there will be performances of whole operas, or complete acts from the same, but without scenery and costumes. The orchestra consists of 120 musicians, and the chorus of 100 singers. M. Colonne is the Conductor, and M. Derembourg, the director. Amongst the works to be performed are Wagner's "Parsifal," "Rheingold," and "Tannhäuser," Berlioz's "Romeo et Juliette" Symphony and "Requiem," Gounod's "Mors et Vita" and "Maître Pierre," Schumann's "Manfred," Massenet's "Eve" and "Marie Magdalene," and many other works, old and new, by French composers. A big undertaking!

M. Maurel is anxious to sing the title part in Massenet's opera "Werther." As the same was originally written for a tenor, the composer is making a new arrangement of the music to make it suitable for M. Maurel's baritone. The heroine's husband will be transformed from a baritone into a tenor.

The Brussels Concerts populaires will, this season, be conducted by Messrs. J. Dupont, Hermann Levi (Munich), and Felix Weingartner (Berlin). At one of the six Concerts, Wagner's rarely heard Biblical scene, "The Love-feast of the Apostles," will be performed.

The Carlsruhe Court Theatre, under Felix Mottl, is certainly the ideal "educational" establishment amongst opera-houses in Germany, or, we dare say, in the world. No sooner has the Berlioz Cycle been brought to a most successful conclusion than a series of "Historical Opera Evenings" has been started. On the 3rd ult. the first of these was given, when three comic operas were revived—viz., Pergolesi's "La Serva Padrona" (dating from 1731), Cherubini's "L'hôtellerie Portugaise" (1798), and Donizetti's "L'elisire d'amore" (1832). The eclecticism of Herr Mottl's taste is truly remarkable, and the scrupulous attention which he devotes to works of all styles and schools compels our admiration. Yet it is no more than must be expected from a true Wagnerian—i.e., from an artist who has grasped the whole significance of Wagner's teaching, and all he has done for the elevation of the lyric drama.

The American pianist, Mrs. Fanny Bloomfield-Zeisler, has lately been playing at a number of Concerts in Berlin and other German towns. Her success has been very great.

A valuable find has been made in the Nuremberg town library—viz., a volume of hitherto unknown poems by Hans Sachs. It contains fourteen "Meistergesänge" by the famous cobbler-poet whom Wagner's art has endeared to all music-lovers.

The Berlin Royal Opera commenced, on the 24th ult., a Mozart Cycle, which will terminate on the 5th inst. The operas produced were, or will be, in the order named: "Idomeneo," "Bastien and Bastienne," "Die Entführung aus dem Serail," "Figaro," "Don Giovanni," "La finta Giardiniera," "Così fan tutte," "La clemenza di Tito," and "Die Zauberflöte."

On the 16th ult. Professor Carl Reinecke celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his first public appearance in Leipzig.

Wagner's "Walküre" was recently performed for the first time at Graz, in Moravia, and enthusiastically received. The same work will be produced shortly at the San Carlo Theatre, Lisbon, when a German tenor, Herr E. Rittershaus, will sing the part of Siegmund.

Edgar Tinel's Oratorio "Franciscus" was, on the 6th ult., performed both at Berlin and Leipzig, and in both places made a very great impression. The Flemish composer was present at the Leipzig performance, and enthusiastically applauded.

During the present month Anton Rubinstein will give three Concerts in the Bechstein Rooms, Berlin, at which he will play only compositions by himself. These Recitals are especially meant for musicians and musical students, who will be admitted free of charge. One hardly knows what to admire more, the great man's liberality or his unusual mode of advertising his works. At any rate, our musicians, and more especially our musical students, will heartily envy their Berlin confrères such a chance of hearing the greatest living pianist free, gratis, and for nothing.

A new one-act music-drama, "Erlöst" (Released), by Franz Curti, was produced for the first time, with great success, at Mannheim, on the 7th ult. Both libretto and music seem to be written under the influence of the popular specimens of the "young Italy" Verismo.

At a Beethoven Concert given at Kiel, on the 4th ult., Herr C. Borchers played three of the Bonn master's Concertos—viz., the first, fourth, and fifth. No slight task!

Smetana's opera "The Sold Bride" has been given at the Frankfort-on-Maine Opera-house, as well as at Magdeburg, and in both places seems to have pleased very much.

Handel's "Samson," a work not often heard in Germany, was recently performed by the Städtische Musikverein, Düsseldorf, and, on October 20, by the Berlin Singakademie. "Joshua" was given on October 14, at Barmen, and on October 25, at Eutin; "Israel" on October 24, at Cologne; and "L'Allegro, il Pensieroso ed il Moderato" on October 21, at Elberfeld. These data bear eloquent testimony to the grand old master's continued popularity with choral societies in the land of his birth.

The Mannheim Musical Society opened its season on October 10, with a programme consisting of Brahms's "Song of Destiny" and Berlioz's Requiem. Could a greater contrast be imagined than these two great works, so strikingly representative of their respective composers and countries of origin?

On October 20 a new building, erected for the Grand Ducal Conservatoire of Music at Carlsruhe, was opened with appropriate ceremony.

The director of the Munich Court Theatre, Herr E. Possart, has been presented by the municipality of that town with an address, in which he is thanked for the brilliant success of the recent Wagner Cycle arranged by him. The address mentions with special satisfaction that the performances attracted many thousands of visitors to the Bavarian capital.

The Royal Court Theatre, Munich, has published the particulars of a competition for the best German opera. The prize, offered by the Prince Regent, Luitpold, consists of 6,000 marks. Both German and Austrian composers can compete, and the choice of a subject is left to them. Operas which have already been performed or published are not admitted. All manuscripts must be delivered before November 1, 1894. The judges are Count von Hochberg, General-Intendant of the Berlin Royal Opera; Baron von Perfall, General-Intendant of the Royal Court Music, Munich; Herren Ernst Schuch (Dresden), Hans Richter (Vienna), Hermann Zumpe (Stuttgart), Hermann Levi (Munich), and Theatre-Director Julius Hofmann (Cologne). If no work is found worthy of the prize the amount will be divided amongst the composers of the three relatively best operas. The decision of the judges will be made known on March 12, 1895.

Johannes Brahms's latest works will shortly be published. They are Op. 118—Intermezzi, Romanze, &c.; and Op. 119—Intermezzi, Rhapsodie, &c., all for the pianoforte. A "Faust" Overture for orchestra is also talked of.

During the recent Wagner Cycle at the Munich Court Theatre, that splendid artist, Herr Eugen Gura, sang the part of Hans Sachs in "Die Meistersinger" for the hundredth time. At the same theatre, Verdi's eightieth birthday was celebrated with a performance of his "Trovatore."

Bronislaw Hubermann is the name of yet another violin prodigy, who created a "furore" at some Concerts given recently at Amsterdam and several other Dutch towns. He is barely nine years old and a pupil of Professor Joachim.

A new one-act opera, "Der Brautmarkt zu Hirn" (The Bride-market at Hirn), by Bogumil Zepler, was successfully performed, for the first time, at the Brunswick Court Theatre, on October 17.

Paul Umlauft's prize opera "Evanthia" was, on October 21, performed with much success at Leipzig. A perusal of the score of this beautiful little work reveals the fact that the word "Evanthia" is accentuated on the third syllable, similar to Galatea.

The Weimar Court Theatre produced, on the 2nd ult., a new three-act opera, "Clare Dettin," words and music by Max Meyer-Olbersleben. The music is very well spoken of, but the "poem" is considered decidedly weak.

Johann Strauss's newest operetta, "Princess Ninetta," was a complete failure at the Carl Schultze Theatre, Hamburg, where it was produced on October 28. It was withdrawn after only very few performances.

Giacomo Puccini's opera "Manon Lescaut," which has been so successful in Italy, was, on the 7th ult., produced, for the first time in Germany, at the Hamburg Stadt-Theater, and seems to have met with a very favourable reception. The young composer is hailed by some of the German papers as possessing a greater talent than either Mascagni or Leoncavallo, and portions of the work, especially two love duets, a menuet, and the prelude to Act III., are described as pieces of the greatest beauty. Such an epithet we have never seen applied by the German press to any music from the pens of the above-named two popular compatriots of Puccini's.

The municipality of Genoa has let the local Carlo Felice Theatre to the impresario Carnori, and—mirabile dictu!—has actually increased the subvention by 15,000 lire. The novelties during the forthcoming season will be Wagner's "Walküre" and Puccini's "Manon Lescaut." In many other Italian towns the usual subvention has this year been refused, in consequence of which the theatres will remain closed.

Signor Leoncavallo's new opera, "I Medici," was produced on the 9th ult., at the Theatre Dal Verme, Milan. In spite of the frequent "calls" for the poet-composer it seems somewhat doubtful whether the work has gained a real success, and it is a peculiar fact that almost all our Continental contemporaries accept the news telegraphed from Milan with much reserve.

The Palermo Opera will this season receive an extra subvention of 5,000 lire to enable the director to produce two new operas by Sicilian composers. They are "Guido di Morandi," by Bertini, and "Maruzza," by Florinde.

Two new Italian operas are "Il Castello di Brivio," by Antonio Fissone, and "Il Trionfo d'amore," by Luigi Minuto. They were recently produced at Asti and Alba respectively, and both with success.

Beethoven's "Fidelio" does not appeal to the tastes of the Spaniards; at least, the recent first performance of the marvellous work at Madrid left the audience quite cold. Perhaps they looked for plenty of local colour in an opera dealing with a Spanish subject, and were disappointed.

At the first Concert given by the Copenhagen Philharmonic Society, on October 28, only compositions by Edvard Grieg were performed, under the conductorship of the popular Norwegian composer. The Concert opened with three movements from the new Orchestral Suite from his music to Björnsen's "Sigurd Jorsalfar." The programme also comprised "Bergliot," declamation with orchestral accompaniment (Op. 42), the Pianoforte Concerto in A minor, played by Madame Teresa Carreño-d'Albert, the two Melodies for strings (Op. 34), and three songs, which were sung by the Swedish vocalist, Mrs. Gulbranson, to the pianoforte accompaniments of the composer. The immense audience included all the members of the royal family and the élite of the musical world in Copenhagen.

On account of his wife's health, which does not allow her to travel much, Grieg intends to spend the winter months in Copenhagen. At present he is composing a large work, which he hopes to finish before he leaves the Danish capital.

"Musikföreningen," a Vocal and Instrumental Society in Copenhagen, has, after nineteen years of activity, been dissolved. Under the conductorship of Professor Otto Malling, no less than 212 works have been given, of which 152 were performed for the first time in Copenhagen. Amongst these were Sir Arthur Sullivan's "Golden Legend" and Mr. Cowen's "Sleeping Beauty."

Exceptional pressure on our space compels us to hold over a letter from Mr. John Heywood defending his "Art of Chanting," reviewed in our last number.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 Notices of concerts, and other information supplied by our friends in the country, must be forwarded as early as possible after the occurrence; otherwise they cannot be inserted. Our correspondents must specifically denote the date of each concert, for without such date no notice can be taken of the performance.

Our correspondents will oblige by writing all names as clearly as possible, as we cannot be responsible for any mistakes that may occur.

Correspondents are informed that their names and addresses must accompany all communications.

We cannot undertake to return offered contributions; the authors, therefore, will do well to retain copies.

Notice is sent to all subscribers whose payment (in advance) is exhausted. The paper will be discontinued where the Subscription is not renewed. We again remind those who are disappointed in obtaining back numbers that, although the music is always kept in stock, only a sufficient quantity of the rest of the paper is printed to supply the current sale.

COMPOSER.—Longfellow's Songs are not copyright in England.

ENQUIRER.—You should write to Messrs. Rudall, Carte and Co., 23, Berners Street. We believe, however, that the matter you refer to will be rectified in the next issue of the Musical Directory.

PAKEHA, CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z.—Thanks; but most of your information arrived too late.

H. R. PHILLIPS.—The examinations at either the Royal College of Music or the Royal Academy of Music, or the Associated Board of these two Institutions, are the most valuable.

W. RACE.—The volume is probably worth about 10s.

X. Y. Z.—A pianoforte can be lowered a tone or half a tone in a day, but it will not remain long in tune. If a good instrument of modern make it should be tuned again after a few days, after which it ought to stand. To tune four pianos, in one house, may take from four to six hours.

BRIEF SUMMARY OF COUNTRY NEWS.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for any opinions expressed in this summary, as all the notices are either collated from the local papers or supplied to us by correspondents.

ABERDEEN.—On Wednesday, the 8th ult., Mrs. Webster, Principal of the Music School, addressed the students upon the necessity of earnest work in their music, claiming for it good hours of study, not the minutes so often thought sufficient at this present time of school over-pressure. After the address a good programme, mostly of pianoforte music, was gone through. There was a crowded audience.

BASINGSTOKE.—An operatic performance was given at the Drill Hall, on the 16th ult., when three one-act operettas were presented to a large audience. The first was The Amateur, in which Miss Blanche Powell and Mr. Arthur Barlow sang and acted very efficiently. This was followed by a bright and effective operetta, Feminine Strategy, written by Catherine Adams, and composed by F. G. Hollis. In this Miss Jessie Moore and Mr. Arthur Barlow acquitted themselves admirably. The performance concluded with The Girton Girl and the Milkmaid, written by Catherine Adams, and composed by Alfred J. Caldicott. The most attractive number in this, "Come up, my bonny cows," a charming pastoral air, was encored. Miss Blanche Powell appeared to advantage as the Girton Girl, and Miss Jessie Moore made a very vivacious Milkmaid.

CHRISTCHURCH (N.Z.)—Mr. Wallace's series of Chamber Concerts has proved an artistic and a financial success. With the assistance of Miss Beath, Miss Rich, and Mr. Loughnan, he gave Quartets by Brahms, Mozart, and Beethoven. Pianoforte solos by local players, violin solos by the leader, and Schubert's "Trout" Quintet, together with songs by leading Christchurch singers, have whetted the appetite of the subscribers, and it is to be hoped that next season will see a fresh series of similar Concerts. Naaman, Elijah, and The Messiah are to be given during the year by the Musical Society and the Motet Society.

DEMERARA.—An Organ Recital was given in St. George's Cathedral on October 17, under the patronage of His Excellency the Governor and Lady Lees, by Mr. Nusiom, the Organist and Choir Director. The organ solos comprised Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony, Beethoven's March Funèbre, Fantasia by Tours, "Quis est Homo" from the Stabat Mater, and a March by the Organist. Mr. Hemery's violoncello solos, "If with all your hearts" and Lieder by Mendelssohn, were faultlessly played. Santley's "Veni, Sancte Spiritus," sung by the Cathedral choir (Mr. Van Elden taking the solo), and the trio, "Protect us through the coming night" (Curschmann), were very well rendered, as were also "O rest in the Lord" and "Their land brought forth frogs," sung respectively by Masters Charles Lewis and George Carto, members of the choir.

HARROW-ON-THE-HILL.—Mr. H. W. Whatmoor, Assistant Pianoforte Teacher at Harrow School and local Examiner to the Royal College of Music, gave a Pianoforte Recital at the Public Hall on October 24. An attractive programme, well played, was much enjoyed by a large audience. Mrs. Trust sang with her customary taste.

LEICESTER.—A very successful musical Service was held in St. Margaret's Church on the 12th ult., when the choir, under the direction of the Choirmaster, Mr. W. Preston, gave an excellent rendering of Spohr's beautiful cantata God, Thou art great. The soloists were: Soprano, Master D. Oldham; Alto, Mr. W. Mudford; Tenor, Mr. A. G. Stangon; Bass, Mr. W. Harding. Some 500 people were present.

MIDDLETON.—A good performance was given on the 6th ult., at St. Leonard's Church, of Dr. Hiles's interesting and effective cantata The Crusaders. The solos were sung with taste by Mrs. Wood and Mr. D. Benn; the accompaniments were played by Mr. J. Lawton, and Mr. J. F. Slater, Organist of the Church, conducted.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—There was a large audience at the Concert in the Town Hall, on the 4th ult. The artists were Miss Marjorie Eaton, Mr. Child, Mr. Alexander Tucker, and Mr. J. T. Carrodus. Dr. Rea accompanied.

SLEAFORD.—The first Festival of the Lafford Deanery Choral Union took place in St. Deny's Church, on October 26. There were present about 300 singers from the various church choirs in the neighbourhood, who sang the music appointed for a choral Evensong with good effect. The Magnificat and Nunc dimittis were by Caleb Simper, in F, and the anthems, "Rejoice in the Lord" (Elvey) and Handel's "Hallelujah" Chorus. Mr. A. Barnacle, Organist of Sleaford Church, conducted, and Mr. G. H. Gregory, of Boston, presided at the organ. The Lord Bishop of Nottingham, President of the Union, was present at the Service.

TODMORDEN.—The Musical Society gave an excellent performance of Prout's Red Cross Knight, under the direction of the composer, on the 7th ult. The soloists were Miss Florence Monk, Miss Mary Reeve, Mr. H. Beaumont, Mr. Pierpoint, and Mr. Albert Barnes. The chorus did their work so well as to earn special praise from Mr. Prout, who warmly recognised the efforts of the chorus-master, Mr. Bowling.

WATFORD.—Mr. F. Whatmoor gave two Pianoforte Recitals at the Conservative Club on October 31. The programme included compositions by the Concert-giver, amongst which "Une Petite Valse" and "Gavotte Fantastique" were much appreciated. Miss Rosa Tomkins sang with much taste.

ORGAN APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. J. C. Turvey, to Dr. Barnardo's Mission Church, the "Edinboro' Castle," Rhodeswell Road.—Mr. James M. Simpson, to St. Paul's Church, Jarrow-on-Tyne.—Mr. H. J. Dean, to Holy Trinity, Cannes.—Mr. Charles F. Champion, Organist and Choirmaster to St. Michael's, Paternoster Royal, College Hill.—Mr. H. Whitby Hickin, Organist and Choirmaster to the Parish Church, Dunmow.—Mr. S. S. Martyn, Organist and Choirmaster to All Saints' Church, Upper Norwood.—Mr. F. C. Boyes, Organist and Choirmaster to St. John the Evangelist, Waterloo Road.—Mr. Edward Brooms, Organist and Choirmaster to the Presbyterian Church, Brockville, Ontario, Canada.—Mr. Owen Price, Organist and Choirmaster to St. Mary's Church, Bangor.

CHOIR APPOINTMENT.—Mr. F. H. Noyes, Lay Vicar (Tenor) to Salisbury Cathedral.

DEATH.

At Ravensdowne, Berwick-on-Tweed, on the 10th ult., MARY, the beloved wife of ALFRED W. TOMLYN, Mus. Bac., L.Mus., T.C.L.

TWENTY-FOUR SONGS

WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

COMPOSED BY

P. TCHAÏKOWSKY.

Selected, and translated into English, by LADY MACFARREN.

CONTENTS.

No. 1. None but a lonely heart.
„ 2. What torment, what rapture!
„ 3. A heavy tear.
„ 4. Why so pale are the roses?
„ 5. This only once.
„ 6. The song that you sang long ago.
„ 7. What matters?
„ 8. The sleep of sorrow.
„ 9. Know'st thou the land?
„ 10. Canary bird.
„ 11. The Czar's drinking house.
„ 12. Invocation to sleep.
„ 13. O never leave me, sweet friend.
„ 14. Mother dear, oh, was I born?
„ 15. No, whom I love I will not name.
„ 16. Why?
„ 17. No, I have never loved.
„ 18. No tidings came from thee.
„ 19. Sweet maid, give answer.
„ 20. Spanish Serenade.
„ 21. The dawn of spring.
„ 22. The tapers were flashing.
„ 23. Oh, would you but for one short hour.
„ 24. If thou wilt hold my heart secure.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.—On JANUARY 6, 1894, and every week after,

MUSICAL STANDARD (Estab. 1862) will be enlarged in size and reduced to ONE PENNY weekly.

MUSICAL STANDARD, 24 pp., ONE PENNY weekly (from January 6), with Supplement of PORTRAIT or ILLUSTRATION of ORGAN.

MUSICAL STANDARD. Enlarged to 72 columns. Advertisements same rate: three lines, 2s. 6d.; 6d. per line after. Special rates for series. Subscription, 6s. 6d. per year, post-free; 3s. 3d. for six months. Specimen copy, 1½d.

London: W. REEVES, 185, Fleet Street, E.C.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO, EWER & CO.

GOUNOD, CHARLES. — Requiem Mass from "Mors et Vita." Paper cover, 2s. 6d.; paper boards, 3s.

WALTHEW, RICHARD H.—"The Pied Piper of Hamelin." Set to music for Tenor and Bass Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra. 1st Violin, 1s. 6d.; 2nd Violin, 1s. 6d.; Viola, 1s. 6d.; Violoncello and Bass, 2s.

TAYLOR, FRANKLIN.—Progressive Studies for the Pianoforte. Edited, arranged in groups, and the fingering revised and supplemented:—

			s.	d.
Book 8.	Broken Chords (Part IV.)	.. ..	1	0
„ 19.	Velocity (Part III.)	.. ..	1	0
„ 26.	Broken Thirds, Sixths, and Octaves (Part I.)	..	1	0
„ 27.	Broken Thirds, Sixths, and Octaves (Part II.)	..	1	0
„ 30.	Shakes (Part III.)	.. ..	1	0
„ 38.	Chords (Part II.)	.. ..	1	0
„ 51.	Rhythm (Part I.)	.. ..	1	0
„ 52.	Rhythm (Part II.)	.. ..	1	0

MADRIGALS BY ENGLISH COMPOSERS OF THE CLOSE OF THE FIFTEENTH CENTURY. Edited for The Plainsong and Mediæval Music Society. 1. "The Time of Youth"; 2. "Come o'er the burn, Bessie"; 3. "Enforce yourself as God's own Knight"; 4. "Thus musing"; 5. "Ah! my dear son"; 6. "Pastime with good company." Cloth, 6s.

MOFFAT, ALFRED.—Twelve Transcriptions for Two Violins and Pianoforte. Paper cover, 5s. (For contents, see Advertisement, page 766.)

GLINKA, M. I.—Polonaise. From the Opera "The Life for the Czar." Arranged for the Pianoforte by Berthold Tours. 2s.

TEN CHRISTMAS CAROLS. Set to Music by John Stainer, J. T. Field, John Swire, J. H. Wallis, J. M. Crament, R. Jackson, and J. F. Bridge. Price, complete, paper cover, 1s.; or, singly, 1½d. each. Tonic Sol-fa Edition, 8d.; Words only, 2d. (For contents, see Advertisement, page 757.)

DUNKLEY, FERDINAND.—"The Wreck of the Hesperus." A Ballad. For Chorus and Orchestra. The Poetry by H. W. Longfellow. Paper cover, 1s.

THE SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW. No. 18. Contains the following Music in both Notations:—"There was silence in Bethlehem's fields." Carol for Unison Singing. By Sir J. Stainer. "The Star in the East." Unison Carol. By Henry Leslie. Studies on the Major and Tonic Major. Easy Studies in Three-part Singing. Price 1½d.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS.—Edited by W. G. McNaught. Book XX. Seven Unison Songs, by W. W. Pearson. Price (Music in both Notations) 8d. Tonic Sol-fa, 4d.; or, singly:—

		A.	B.
No. 108.	Song of the Zephyr	1½d.	1d.
„ 109.	The Swing	1½d.	1d.
„ 110.	The Windmill	1½d.	1d.
„ 111.	Summer	1d. }	1d.
„ 112.	Up in the morning early	1d. }
„ 113.	Hurrah for England	1d. }	1½d.
„ 114.	The Cuckoo	1d. }

—— Book XXIII. Twelve Sacred Songs, by Sir J. Stainer. Price (Music in both Notations) 1s.; Tonic Sol-fa, 6d.; or, singly:—

		A.	B.
No. 133.	Listening Angels	1d. }	1d.
„ 134.	Morning Hymn	1d. }
„ 135.	Hour by Hour	1d. }	1d.
„ 136.	The Beautiful Land	1d. }
„ 137.	The Crown is waiting	1d. }	1d.
„ 138.	The Cross of Life	1d. }
„ 139.	We will praise Thee	1d. }	1d.
„ 140.	Sabbath Bells	1d. }
„ 141.	The good Shepherd	1d. }	1d.
„ 142.	The Haven of Glory	1d. }
„ 143.	The Golden Shore	1d. }	1d.
„ 144.	Evensong	1d. }

—— Book XXV. Ten Unison Songs, by Cath. van Rennes. Price (Music in both Notations) 8d.; Tonic Sol-fa, 4d.; or, singly:—

		A.
No. 151.	Summer Evening	1d.
„ 152.	Little Brother	1d.
„ 153.	The Old Beggar	1d.
„ 154.	Little Things	1d.
„ 155.	Cock-a-doodle-do	1d.
„ 156.	Patience	1d.
„ 157.	Summer Showers	1d.
„ 158.	A Song for Boys	1d.
„ 159.	The Sunshine of the Heart	1d.
„ 160.	Cradle Song	1½d.

A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment, 8vo size; B. Voice Parts only in Tonic Sol-fa Notation. Where no prices are given under B, the A edition only is published.

—— Book XXIX. Sight Singing Studies from Vol. I. of "The School Music Review" (Staff Notation). 4d.

—— Book XXX. Sight Singing Studies from Vol. I. of "The School Music Review" (Tonic Sol-fa). 4d.

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

FIELD, J. T.—The Canticles of the Church. Comprising the Te Deum laudamus, Benedictus, Magnificat, and Nunc dimittis. Set to Chants by well-known composers, with varied harmonies, &c. Set 2. 6d.

MACARTHUR, DONALD.—Pater Noster. For use at the Celebration of the Holy Communion. 4d.

MERRICK, FRANK G. — Benedicite, omnia opera." Set to Music in Quadruple Chant Form. 2d.

BARNBY, JOSEPH.—"The first Christmas." A Carol-Anthem. The Words written by Angela Goetze. (No. 448. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 3d. Words only, 3s. per 100.

KEETON, HAYDN.—"Beloved, now are we the sons of God." Anthem for the Feast of the Purification. For Bass Solo and Chorus. 6d.

KING, OLIVER.—"Hark! what news the Angels bring." A Carol-Anthem for Christmas. (No. 444. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 3d.

MORRISON, R. T. CLARK.—"Sing, O Daughter of Zion," Christmas Anthem. For Four Voices. 3d.

PETTMAN, EDGAR.—"There were Shepherds." Christmas Anthem. For Tenor or Treble Solo, Chorus, and Chorale. 4d.

POWELL, JAMES BADEN.—"God is our hope." Anthem. For Soprano Solo and Chorus. 4d.

WAREING, HERBERT W.—"There were Shepherds." Christmas Anthem. For Soprano Solo and Chorus. (No. 447. Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 3d.

LEES, JOSEPH.—"Rest, weary soul." Hymn. On card. 3d.

BRIDGE, JOSEPH C.—"Away with grief." Christmas Carol. For Four Voices. Words (from the Dutch) by the Rev. Gerard Moultrie. 3d.

GILL, W.—"In Excelsis Gloria." Christmas Carol. The words adapted from a 16th Century Hymn. 3d.

BARNETT, JOHN FRANCIS.—"The Wishing Bell." A Cantata. For Female Voices and Orchestra. Words written by Jetta Joyce. Book of words, 25s. per 100.

ROECKEL, J. L.—"The Silver Penny." An original fanciful Children's Operetta. Book of Words, 25s. per 100.

BOOTH, JOSIAH.—"A Pastoral Ballad." A Four-part Song. For Men's Voices (A.T.T.B.). The words from Shenstone's "Pastoral Ballad," 1740. (No. 266. The Orpheus.) 3d.

HILES, HENRY.—Select Movements from "The Crusaders." A Sacred Cantata:—

No. 1.	March of the Templars	4d.
„ 2.	Evening shadows, gently falling	2d.

HUTCHINSON, THOMAS. — "The Lamps of Faërie-land." Part-Song. For Four Voices. The words written by Harry Barnes. 3d.

HOLLINGWORTH, WM.—"Good-night." Glee (A.T.T.B.). 3d.

PEARSON, W. W.—"Evening." Part-Song. For Four Voices. The words written by Edward Oxenford. 2d.

SCHARTAU, HERBERT W.—"Gentle sleep." A Four-part Song. The words written by Mrs. Hemans. (No. 701. Novello's Part-Song Book.) 3d.

WESLEY, SAMUEL SEBASTIAN.—"O worship the Lord." Quartet (S.S.S.A.). For Female Voices. From "Ascribe unto the Lord." (No. 289. Novello's Octavo Edition of Trios, &c., for Female Voices.) 3d.

NOVELLO'S OCTAVO EDITION OF TWO-PART SONGS for FEMALE VOICES:—

No. 77.	In the Forest	Karel Bendl	3d.
„ 78.	What is Love?	„ „	2d.
„ 79.	A summer evening	„ „	2d.
„ 81.	The song of the nightingale ..	„ „	3d.
„ 82.	A marriage song	„ „	2d.
„ 83.	The song of love	„ „	3d.
„ 84.	The Lovers	„ „	2d.
„ 85.	A Gipsy Pair	„ „	3d.
„ 86.	Evening Peace	„ „	3d.
„ 87.	The dewdrop's folly	Myles B. Foster	2d.
„ 88.	Blackberries	„ „	3d.
„ 89.	Work and play	„ „	2d.
„ 90.	An Elfin frolic	„ „	2d.
„ 91.	All must be well	„ „	3d.

ARNOTT, A. DAVIDSON. — "Give a rouse." Cavalier Song. For Baritone or Bass Voice. The words written by Robert Browning. 2s.

BUTT, W. D.—Festive March. For Pianoforte. 2s.

FRANZ, ROBERT.—Romanze ("Adown the vale the horseman passed"). Written by Heinrich Heine. The English version by the Rev. Dr. Troutbeck. 2s.

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

COUPERIN.—Passecaille. Arranged for the Organ by JAMES SHAW. (No. 18. Organ Arrangements. Edited by GEORGE C. MARTIN.) 1s.

NOVELLO'S PUBLICATIONS in the TONIC SOL-FA NOTATION. Translated by W. G. McNAUGHT.

No. 815.	A lover's counsel	FREDERIC H. COWEN	1d.
„ 817.	Jack Frost (Trio)	J. L. HATTON	1d.
„ 819.	The minstrel boy	M. W. BALFE	1d.
„ 820.	The harp that once thro' Tara's halls	„ „	1d.
„ 821.	The drooping wings	HENRY PURCELL	1d.
„ 822.	Sing heigh-ho!	C. V. STANFORD	1d.
„ 823.	Corydon, arise!	„ „	1d.
„ 824.	The Knight's Tomb	„ „	1d.
„ 825.	The Silver Swan	ORLANDO GIBBONS	1d.
„ 828.	The First Christmas	JOSEPH BARNBY	2d.

COWEN, F. H.—"Summer on the river." 9d.
ROECKEL, J. L.—"The Silver Penny." 9d.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S New and Standard Publications.

Now Ready.

GABRIELLA: Lyric Drama in One Act. Composed expressly for and dedicated to Madame Adelina Patti, who is at present singing the title rôle on her American Tour. Libretto by CHARLES ALFRED BYRNE and FULVIO FULGONIO. English version by MOWBRAY MARRAS. The music composed by EMILIO PIZZI.

Vocal Score (English and Italian words) .. .. .. net 7s. 6d.
Pianoforte Score .. .. „ 5s. 0d.
Book of Words (English and Italian) .. .. .. „ 1s. 0d.
The separate Vocal and Instrumental Numbers will be duly announced.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS.—TWELVE ORIGINAL CAROLS. Words by MAY GILLINGTON.

1.	All in the heart of the winter tide	Howard Talbot	2d.
2.	An Angel came to Bethlehem	A. C. Mackenzie	2d.
3.	Bring forth a carol for Christmas time ..	W. J. Westbrook	2d.
4.	Dark was the night	Arthur E. Godfrey	2d.
5.	Who is this that comes to Zion?	George C. Martin	2d.
6.	The Morning Stars	Frank L. Moir	2d.
7.	The nights are so cold	Alfred J. Eyre	2d.
8.	Oh, rich and poor	Howard Talbot	2d.
9.	Slumber Song	Arthur E. Godfrey	2d.
10.	Sun, Moon, and Stars	Lawrence Kellie	2d.
11.	When Christ the Lord	Arthur E. Godfrey	2d.
12.	In the wintry darkness (for Children) ..	Arthur E. Godfrey	2d.

Complete, in paper cover, 1s. net; cloth, 2s. net. Words only, complete, 2d.

ORGAN RECITAL SERIES. Edited by EDWIN H. LEMARE:—

No. 1. Scherzo Sinfonico. By AMHURST WEBBER. 2s. net.
„ 2. Canzona and Minuet and Trio. By W. WOLSTENHOLME. 2s. 6d. net.
„ 3. Toccata in E flat. By FILIPPO CAPOCCI. 2s. 6d. net.
„ 4. Romance in D flat. By EDWIN H. LEMARE. 2s. net.
Other numbers in preparation.

FUNERAL MARCH (Grieg). Arrangement. By EDWIN H. LEMARE. 1s. 6d. net.

THE BURLINGTON VOLUNTARIES.—SHORT ORIGINAL VOLUNTARIES, by Organists of the day, suitable for American Organ, Harmonium, or Organ, for either Church or Home use. Ten Books, each 1s. net.

THE BURLINGTON SERIES of MODERN CHURCH MUSIC.

No. 1.	Benedicite in B flat	Edwin H. Lemare	net 3d.
„ 2.	Benedicite in C	Arthur E. Godfrey	„ 3d.
„ 3.	Three Kyries and a Sevenfold Amen	Arthur E. Godfrey	„ 3d.
„ 4.	Morning and Evening Service in F, complete	Edwin H. Lemare	„ 2s.

Or, singly: Te Deum, 4d.; Jubilate, 3d.; Benedictus, 3d.; Communion, 1s.; Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, 6d.

No. 5.	Crossing the Bar (Kellie), for Tenor Solo and Chorus	Edwin H. Lemare	6d.
„ 6.	Pater Noster	Edwin H. Lemare	3d.
„ 7.	Rend your heart, for Baritone Solo and Chorus	Arthur E. Godfrey	4d.
„ 8.	Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D ..	Frank L. Moir	4d.

HOW TO ACCOMPANY. A GUIDE TO THE ARTISTIC ACCOMPANIMENT OF ANY MUSICAL COMPOSITION, FROM THE SIMPLEST BALLAD TO THE MOST DIFFICULT OF MODERN WORKS.

Profusely illustrated with examples. Demy 4to, 153 pp. Paper cover, 4s. net; cloth, 5s. net. By ANNIE GLEN, Author of "Music in its social aspect," &c.

CANTATAS, GLEES, DUETS, and TRIOS. List post-free on application.

SONGS. By Lawrence Kellie, Angelo Mascheroni, A. C. Mackenzie, Maude Valérie White, F. H. Cowen, Hamish MacCunn, Frances Allitsen, Edward German, &c.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S

NEW AND STANDARD PUBLICATIONS—continued.

MODERN METHOD SERIES:—

No. 1. WALTER MACFARREN'S PIANOFORTE METHOD. Folio size, 88 pp. Paper cover, 3s. net; cloth, 4s. 6d. net.
„ 2. OTTO PEINIGER'S VIOLIN METHOD. Large 4to size, 147 pp.; Violin Part, 30 pp. Paper cover, 3s. 6d. net; cloth, 5s. net.
„ 3. EDWIN HOLLAND'S METHOD OF VOICE PRODUCTION. Large 4to size. Nearly ready. Paper cover, 4s. net; cloth, 5s. net
„ 5. DR. H. KEETON'S CHURCH AND CATHEDRAL CHORISTERS' SINGING METHOD. Impl. 8vo size, 73 pp. Paper cover, 2s. net; cloth, 3s. net.
„ 6. CHAS. WEBB'S MANUAL OF CLASS-SINGING IN BOTH NOTATIONS. Impl. 8vo size, 53 pp. Paper cover, 1s. 6d.; limp cloth, 2s. net.
„ 7. HERMANN SMITH'S ART OF TUNING THE PIANOFORTE. Crown 8vo, 100 pp. A new and comprehensive treatise, to enable the musician to tune his Pianoforte upon the system founded on the theory of EQUAL TEMPERAMENT. Limp cloth, 2s. net.

Other methods in preparation.

THE CANDIDATES' PRACTICAL SCALE and ARPEGGIO HANDBOOKS. Specially arranged for the use of Students preparing for the Examinations (Pianoforte) of the Associated Board of the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music. By GRAHAM P. MOORE. Compiled in strict accordance with the Syllabus of the Associated Board, and each Book containing full directions as to the requirements of the Examiners. Issued in four Books, each Book being complete in itself, and containing only those scales required by Candidates for their respective Examinations.

Book 1. For the Local School Examinations, lower division. 1s. net.
„ 2. Higher division. 1s. 6d. net.
„ 3. For the Local Centre Examinations, junior grade. 1s. 6d. net.
„ 4. Senior grade: Part 1, Scales; Part 2, Arpeggi. Each 2s. net.

"Cannot fail to be of the greatest utility."—Daily News.

PIANOFORTE MUSIC. By Angelo Mascheroni, Benedetto Palmieri, G. Jacobi, Edwin H. Lemare, Graham P. Moore, Isabel Hearne, Beatrice Hallet, &c.

VIOLIN and VIOLONCELLO MUSIC. By Otto Peiniger, Tivadar Nachèz, David Popper, Leo Stern, Gilbert R. Betjemann, J. W. Ivimey, W. R. Cave, Emile Sauret, &c.

STANDARD CLASSICAL PIECES (new Edition) 163 numbers issued.

"This series is one of the best musical publications of the day, highly to be recommended to Professors and Teachers."—The Graphic.

ALSO

CLASSICAL MUSIC (new Series) selected, fingered, and edited by ADOLPHE SCHLOESSER, Professor at the Royal Academy of Music. 72 numbers issued. Lists on application.

6, NEW BURLINGTON ST., LONDON, W.

MISS LILLIAN CORNER (Contralto)
Oratorios, Ballads, &c. 22, Campbell Road, Bow.

MR. FRANK JOHNSON (Baritone)
For Oratorios, Concerts, &c. Belgrave Rd., Dresden, Stoke-on-Trent. References kindly permitted to Dr. Swinnerton Heap, Birmingham.

MR. HENRY SUNMAN (Bass)
Licentiate (Artist) of the Royal Academy of Music.
For Concerts, &c., address, Christ Church Cathedral, Oxford.

MASTER GEO. TURNBULL SINCLAIR (Soprano), Solo Boy to W. S. Hoyte, Esq. For Sunday Evenings, Festivals, Concerts, &c. "His rendering of 'O may we ne'er forget,' in Dr. Parry's 'Judith,' was excellent."—Birmingham Daily Post, 24th inst. 102, College Place, Camden Town, N.

WANTED, for Christ Church Cathedral, Dublin, a Principal SOLO TENOR. Salary, about £130, particulars of which and duties required may be known on application to Rev. J. H. Monahan, D.D., Precentor, 44, Rutland Square, Dublin. Candidates must not be over thirty years of age.

BASS (not Baritone) WANTED, for the American Church of the Holy Trinity, PARIS. Cathedral service. Candidates must be thoroughly experienced in Church music and have ability in Solo Singing. Apply, stating age and experience, with testimonials, to Mr. Stedman, Musical Agency, 12, Berners St., W.

WANTED, First-class PIANOFORTE TUNER. Must have knowledge of American Organs and Harmoniums. Permanent situation for steady, respectable man. Reference, age, salary, and photo, to J. Herbert Marshall, Leicester.

PIANO TUNER.—WANTED, immediately, First-class Hand. One accustomed to Organs and Harmoniums preferred. Apply, with full particulars, J. B. Cramer and Co., 26, Church Street, Liverpool.

MISS CARRINGTON (Soprano)

NOTICES.

"'JUDITH' AT CAMBRIDGE.—KING'S COLLEGE CHAPEL.—For the Oratorio the Hon. Mrs. R. Lyttelton had undertaken to sing the numbers allotted to Judith, but she was unfortunately prevented from essaying the task by indisposition, and her place was taken by Miss Carrington, whose sweet soprano voice was heard to great effect. In a work of such magnitude it would be tedious to specially mention each individual item, but when we deal with Miss Carrington it is somewhat difficult to make any selection as being better than another. Her rendering of the solo appealing to the Queen of Israel was, however, wonderfully impressive, particularly the passage declaring the believer's spirit unmoved even though we walk through the shadow of death on the gaping jaws of hell. The summons to the Priests of Moloch to stay their hideous mockeries was again a remarkable performance; but where Judith breaks out in thanks to the Lord, and commands the gates of Jerusalem to be opened that she may wreak vengeance on Holofernes, and again in the final solo, 'I will sing,' Miss Carrington surpassed her former efforts."—Cambridge Chronicle and University Journal, June 19, 1891.

"Miss Carrington possesses a sweet soprano voice, and sang her two songs with effect. For her second effort she was warmly recalled and gracefully responded with another song."—Huddersfield Chronicle, March 18, 1891.

"Miss Carrington displayed a very pure quality of voice in 'Rose, softly blooming' (Spohr), and 'Should he upbraid' (Bishop), for the latter of which she was encored."—Bradford Observer, March 18, 1891.

"THE PRINCE'S CONCERT SOCIETY.—Solos were sung by Miss Carrington, a young soprano gifted with a charming voice, which she employs artistically."—Sporting and Dramatic News, June 20, 1891.

"'ST. PAUL' AT CAMBRIDGE.—KING'S COLLEGE CHAPEL.—Miss Carrington again took the soprano solos; of course, her masterpiece was the beautiful air 'Jerusalem,' but we thought her enunciation of the recitatives, which are frequent, evinced even more strongly the fine quality of her voice and the perfect training it has received. Miss Carrington is an accomplished singer."—Cambridge Chronicle and University Journal, June 17, 1891.

LAYING THE MEMORIAL STONE OF THE UNITED SERVICE INSTITUTION BY H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

"When they had taken their places on the daïs, Miss Carrington sang 'God save the Queen' in a clear voice with admirable expression."—Daily News, June 7, 1893.

"Miss Carrington, in the absence of Miss Macintyre, took the solo of 'God save the Queen,' and would have been heartily applauded had etiquette allowed."—Daily Chronicle, June 7, 1893.

All communications to be addressed to Mr. N. VERT, 6, Cork Street, Burlington Gardens, W.

CHOIR SCHOOL SCHOLARSHIPS.—At a great reduction of School Fees a Tutor (B.A., Cantab.) PREPARES BOYS for the above. Minim, at Shelley's, 38, Gracechurch St., E.C.

PIANO TUNER (First-Class) WANTED, for Country. Must be experienced, well recommended, and competent to Tone and Regulate thoroughly well. Salary, £2 15s. per week. Apply, by letter, to Alpha, Klinker and Co., 16, Fore Street, London, E.C.

SITUATION WANTED, as ASSISTANT TUNER. Town or country. Total abstainer. Apply, A. W. J., 85, Greenwood Road, Dalston, N.E.

WANTED, GENERAL ASSISTANT, able to Tune and Repair Pianos and Harmoniums. State salary and send references to F. Parkinson, 22, Broadway, Wimbledon.

WANTED, thoroughly efficient ASSISTANT, who understands Sheet Music, Catalogues, and Small Goods, and can play the Pianoforte. First-class references indispensable. Reply, stating age, salary required, experience and photo, to J. Herbert Marshall, Leicester.

WANTED, a respectable young Man, as ASSISTANT for Music Warehouse. Must thoroughly understand small goods, &c., and able to play Piano. Apply, stating salary, &c., to Shackell and Co., Ltd., 104, Duke Street, Barrow-in-Furness.

70-GUINEA UPRIGHT GRAND, by KAPS. Metal frame, 7 oct. A magnificent instrument, in splendid condition, nearly new, £38; and several other Grand and Upright Pianos, at reduced prices. On view at Beringer and Strohmenger, 82, High Road, Streatham.

BROADWOOD Short DRAWING-ROOM GRAND PIANO, in walnut. Modern iron frame, 7 octaves, full trichord. Little used, in owner's mansion. A bargain, 55 guineas; cost 165 guineas. Take Cottage Piano in part. View at Organist, St. John's, Cromer House, Putney (near Railway Station).

RUDALL CARTE Silver BOEHM FLUTE, for Left-Handed Player. In perfect order, equal to new. Ten guineas. Paterson and Sons, Edinburgh.

	s.	d.
ADESTE FIDELES, with Variations for Organ .. .. net	2	0
Benedicite, omnia Opera .. .. „	0	2
The Star of Bethlehem. Carol .. .. „	0	2
The Holly Tree and Mistletoe. Part-Song, Score and Parts „	0	6
I wish you a merry Christmas. Song .. .. net 6d. or	1	6
Ditto, as a Four-part Song .. .. net	0	3
A Happy New Year. Song .. .. net 6d. or	1	6

To be had of Dr. BELCHER, 228, Stratford Road, Birmingham.

AGATE & CO.'S
Christmas Presents and New Year's Gifts.

SABBATH RECREATIONS. In Two Volumes, each containing 12 numbers of this work, with music by the best masters. Arranged by J. PRIDHAM. Handsomely bound in cloth, gilt edges and lettering; beautifully illustrated with views of the Cathedrals of England.

Post-free, 21s. each Volume.

THE MINSTER VOLUNTARIES. For the Organ, Harmonium, American Organ, or Pianoforte. Handsomely bound in red cloth, with gilt lettering. One Volume, containing six Books of Original Voluntaries by GEORGE C. RICHARDSON, F.C.O., HENRY T. PRINGUER, Mus. Doc., Oxon., F.C.O., T. MERTON CLARK, and W. J. AGATE.

Post-free, 5s.; or, in single numbers (1 to 6), 1s. each.

LITTLE LAYS for LADS and LASSES. Words and music by LINDSAY LENNOX.

CONTENTS:

Dolly's Lullaby.	Story-Land.
Fidgety Fee.	The Wimwom and the Whirligig.
Spring, Summer, Autumn, Winter.	Sliding
Which flower do you like best?	The Young Grenadiers.
The Mill Wheel.	Santa Claus.

"Easy to sing, easy to play; children will be sure to like them."

In paper covers, 1s., and in cloth, 2s.

London: AGATE and Co., 300, Regent Street, W.; Or of all Musicsellers.

CONTENTS.

	Page
Gounod: The Man and the Master	713
From my Study	716
Peter Iltitsch Tschaikowsky	718
Occasional Notes	719
Facts, Rumours, and Remarks	721
Bristol Musical Festival	724
The Berlioz Cycle at Carlsruhe	724
Mr. Cowen's "Signa"	726
Royal Choral Society	727
London Symphony Concerts	727
Crystal Palace Concerts	728
Mr. Sarasate's Concert	728
Monday and Saturday Popular Concerts	728
Pianoforte Recitals	729
Westminster Orchestral Society	729
Royal Academy of Music	730
Royal College of Music	730
Musical Guild	730
Musical Association	730
Gresham Lectures	731
The Musician' Company	731
"In Honour of Music"	732
Mr. Coenen's Recital at Brighton	732
The Queen's Hall	739
The London Board School Choir Competition	739
Obituary	739
Music in Birmingham	740
„ Bristol	740
„ Edinburgh	741
„ Glasgow	741
„ Liverpool	741
„ Manchester	742
„ North Staffordshire	742
„ Nottingham	743
„ Sheffield and District	743
„ Wilts and Hants	743
„ Yorkshire	744
Four-part Song—"In a drear-nighted December." G. A. Macfarren	733
General News (London)	744
Reviews	746
Foreign Notes	747
Answers to Correspondents	749
General News (Country)	749
List of Music published during the last Month	750

THE MUSICAL TIMES.

SCALE OF TERMS FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

	£	s.	d.
Two Lines	0	3	0
Three Lines	0	3	4
For every additional Line	0	0	10
Half a Column	2	0	0
A Column	4	0	0
A Page	7	10	0

Special Pages (Cover, &c.) by arrangement.

A remittance should be sent with each Advertisement.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To ensure insertion in January number Advertisements should reach the Office

NOT LATER THAN THE TWENTIETH

OF THIS MONTH.

WANTED, JUNIOR TUNER. To board in house. Salary according to abilities. Apply, by letter, to R. Rayner, 28, Regent Street, Leamington, W.

WANTED, for Music Warehouse, JUNIOR ASSISTANT, used to Music and general Counter Trade. Must be a good Tuner, and able to try over. S. Morley, 258, Clapham Road. State salary asked and last employer.

SALESMAN and thorough MUSIC ASSISTANT WANTED, after Christmas. Must be gentlemanly, an accomplished Pianist, able to Read at Sight, and perfectly acquainted with the Publishers' Catalogues. Preference given to one who can keep books. Clift's Piano and Music Saloons, Eastbourne.

PIANOFORTE TUNER, thoroughly experienced, desires permanent ENGAGEMENT. American Organs, &c. Steady and reliable. P. F., Messrs. Novello and Co., 1, Berners St., W.

PIANOFORTE TUNER, DISENGAGED Xmas. Excellent references. American Organs, and repairs to all kinds of small goods. Organist, Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners St., W.

PIANOFORTE TUNER desires RE-ENGAGEMENT. Town or Country. Aged 34. Alpha, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

WANTED, by young man (aged 19), SITUATION as TUNER. Four years' good factory experience. Fair pianist. Salary to commence, 25s. F. L., 2, Ellington Street, Barnsbury, N.

TUNER (Good) seeks ENGAGEMENT, whole or part time, in London. Understands Harmoniums and American Organs. First-class references, including Factory. G. G., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

PIANOFORTE TUNER seeks RE-ENGAGEMENT. Good Tuner and Repairer. Understands Harmoniums and Organs. Satisfactory references from present employer. Abstainer. Address, A. W., 6, Trinity Street, Hastings.

FIRST-CLASS TUNER (Brinsmead) seeks ENGAGEMENT. Many years' experience in London and Provinces. Address, Musicus, 12, Summerlock Terrace, Fisherton, Salisbury.

PIANO TUNER wants ENGAGEMENT, as IMPROVER. Whole or part time. Knowledge of Sheet Music and Small Goods. W. M. L., 39, Benbow Road, Hammersmith, W.

MANCHESTER.—To PIANOFORTE, &c., MANUFACTURERS, DEALERS, CAPITALISTS, and others.—MANAGER (32), thoroughly experienced and capable—having had entire control of large staff and absolute command of Business (Showrooms and Factory) in absence of Principal—is open for similar position, or as Traveller, Representative, &c., of good house. Highest credentials as to character and ability. Address, Trichord, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

AS MANAGER, or similar position. Advertiser is open to ENGAGEMENT as above. 16 years' experience. Pianos, Organs, Small Goods, and Music. Excellent references. Full particulars of R., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

AS MANAGER or ASSISTANT.—SITUATION required by Young Man (27). Thorough practical knowledge of music trade, sheet, instruments, and small goods. Musical. Address, H. J. W., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

ASSISTANT.—SITUATION WANTED, as above, by advertiser, aged 30. Tall, of good appearance and address. Twelve years in the trade; London experience. Considered a good salesman; small goods a specialty. Wages moderate. Town or country. B., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

YOUNG LADY, aged 25, experienced in all departments of a MUSIC WAREHOUSE, desires ENGAGEMENT. Address, X. B., care of J. W. Vickers, 5, Nicholas Lane, E.C.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—Three manuals and pedals. One Shilling per hour. The South London Organ Studio, 343, Coldharbour Lane, close to Brixton Station.

ORGAN PRACTICE (City), 1s. per hour. Three manuals, C.O. pedals. Willis (from Minories), 1, Aldgate Avenue, E.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—Three manuals; independent pedals. Terms, One Shilling per hour. Specification post-free. Blennerhasset's Studio, 1A, Vernon Street, King's Cross, W.C.

NEW ORGAN STUDIO, with Three-manual PIPE ORGAN, blown by water. Terms for Practice, 1s. per hour. At Smyth's Music Depôt, 54, London Road, Forest Hill, S.E.

A PRIVATE ROOM to be LET, by the day or the hour, for TEACHING purposes, in a music business house situated in Berners Street. Address, E. B., Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

CC ORGAN for SALE and HIRE, on easy terms of payment. Price very low. 3 manuals, 30 stops, 2 on pedals, 3 reeds. Apply, G. T., 23, Brunswick Street, Poplar.

ORGAN, with two Manuals, 19 stops, modern, built 1881. ORGAN, 12 stops, new; now building in Works. W. E. Richardson & Sons, Central Organ Works, Hulme, Manchester.

PEDAL ORGAN, by Estey and Co., for SALE, cheap. It has 11 stops, knee swell, side-blower, and stool. Price 30 guineas only; original price, 70 guineas. A drawing and all particulars of this organ may be had post-free. W. White, Grantham.

TO be SOLD, a CHAMBER ORGAN. Suitable for Church or Chapel. Three manuals; pedals, CCC to F. A reasonable price will be accepted. Address, Churchwardens, Cheadle-Hulme, near Stockport.

ORGAN for SALE.—CC, two manuals; mahogany front, gilt pipes. Great: open and stopt diapasons, principal, fifteenth; swell: dulciana, lieblich gedacht; couplers, swell to great, swell to pedals, great to pedals; foot and side-blowers; pedals, CC to F; stool. Price £45. Apply, 27, Hurstbourne Road, Forest Hill, S.E. Suitable for Private Dwelling, School, or small Hall.

ORGANS for SALE or HIRE. New and Second-hand, RETURNED from HIRE. Ten 2-manual Organs, with 10 to 27 stops; three 1-manual Organs, from £20. A. Monk's Organ Works, 550, Holloway Road, London.

ORGAN, by Trayser & Co. (of Stuttgart). Two manuals, 2½ octaves pedals; 16 and 32-ft. tone on pedal organ; foot and side-blowers; elegant Gothic oak case; about 10 ft. high. £50. Also 2½ octaves of pedals, with all appliances for connection to a piano, £3 5s. Grover, 752, High Road, Tottenham.

UNUSUALLY sweet-toned Two-manual CC CHAMBER ORGAN, by Hill and Sons. Swell, 2 stops; Great, 3; folding pedals; Bourdon. Hydraulic engine. Height, 10 ft. 6 in. Photo, &c., R. Collingham, Newland Park, Hull.

ORGANS for SALE (New and Second-hand). Apply, C. H. Walker, 25, Manchester Street, Manchester Square, London, W.

ORGAN. £25. 7 stops, 1 octave pedals, in playing order. Grained oak case, gilded pipe front. 10 ft. 6 by 6 ft. 6 by 4 ft. Suitable for Church or Hall. Pipe Organ, Messrs. Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

TWO-MANUAL and PEDAL AMERICAN ORGANS by Bell, Karn, Estey, &c. Several very fine instruments at low prices for cash. A single Manual and Pedal, by Estey, 25 guineas; several large and powerful Harmoniums, by Alexandre, Trayser, &c. Two-manual and Pedal Organ, by Alexandre, 40 guineas, cost 150; Two-manual with 11 sets, by Evans, 25 guineas. Stagg and Sons, 56, Red Lion Street, Holborn. Estbd. 1867.

ORGANS (New and Second-hand).—One and two manuals, for Church and Chamber. All full compass and separate pedal organs. First class instruments at low prices. Also Gas and Hydraulic Engines (nearly new). Henry Speechly and Sons, Organ Builders, St. Mark's Road, Dalston, N.E.

GRAND PIANO, by Weber, of New York. In perfect condition. Massive rosewood case; very handsome; 7¼ octaves; size, 9 ft. by 5 ft. by 3 ft. 9 in. high. Suit mansion or club-room. 55 guineas, cost 300 guineas. The property of a lady in the district. To view, enquire, Cary and Watt, Newbury.

TRANSPOSING HARMONIUM, by Alexandre. In oak case, in perfect order, £12 12s. Harris and Co., 33, Rathbone Place, Oxford Street, W.

FOSTER VIOLONCELLO. — For SALE, the VIOLONCELLO made by Foster, Sen., for George the Fourth, and played by him. Elaborately painted in front with Royal Arms and Prince of Wales's badge and motto; on the side, "Liberty and Loyalty." Fine tone and in beautiful preservation. For price, apply to Cello, care of C. Fletcher, Esq., Tower House, Branksome Park, Bournemouth.

ORCHESTRAL KETTLE DRUMS (Second-hand pair) WANTED. Good and cheap. Apply, James, Victoria Street, Crewe.

HARP.—Cost £120. Fully strung. Good working order. Beautiful instrument. Cover and travelling case, taken from customer. £23. Jenn, 6, Arthur Road, Holloway, N.

ORGAN PEDALS for PIANOFORTES, from £6 15s. to £7 15s. Pedals and Action complete are supplied, as above, by the inventor, Wm. Chinnock Dyer, Beresford Road, Norbiton, S.W. Send post card for list, &c.

ORGAN PEDALS to PIANOS.—New method of Attachment by TUBULAR PNEUMATIC. This action surpasses all mechanical actions for prompt and Organ-like Touch. It is less expensive, easier to attach, and does not injure the most delicate Pianoforte. Prospectus, with full description and price lists, on application to Norman Bros. and Beard, Organ Works, Norwich.

VIOLIN STRINGS.—Luigi Fiorini's renowned tested Roman Strings, as used by the greatest artists, are the most reliable Italian Strings. Sample set of three, 2s., post-free, of sole agent, F. Williams, 129, Queen's Road, Finsbury Park, London, N.

HYDRAULIC ENGINES for Organ Blowing. Blennerhasset's Patent "Perfect" Prize Medal Engines are the best. 1B, Vernon Street, King's Cross Road, London, W.C.

"TOWER" ORGAN WORKS. — Specifications, Rebuilding, Repairs, Voicing and Tuning by experienced Artists. Pipes and Fittings. Second-hand Organs and Materials. T. R. Willis (from Minories), 1, Aldgate Avenue, London, E.

ORGAN STUDENTS SHOULD TRY
RUMMENS'
Organ Pedal Attachment for Pianofortes
AS ADOPTED BY THE COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS.
Awarded Medal of Honour at the International Inventions Exhibition, London, 1885.
Equal to Organ Practice. Testimonials from all the chief Organists of the day.
Write for particulars to H. J. RUMMENS, 47, Church Rd., Brixton, S.W.

TUNERS, REPAIRERS, &c., requiring Tuning Hammers, Kits (guaranteed), or TOOLS of any description, Reeds, Fittings, Materials. Please send for my complete Price List. Karl Wagenhaus, 2, City Road, Hulme, Manchester.

VIOLIN STRINGS. Finest imported. Twenty years' reputation. Sixpence each; sample packet of three, 1s. 1d., post-free. Alphonse Cary, 87, Oxford Street, London, W.

T. R. WILLIS (from Minories, est. 1827), Maker and Importer of Brass and Wood Instruments, Harmonium Reeds, Strings, Wire, Violins, Concertinas, &c. 1, Aldgate Avenue, E.

CASSOCKS.—500 New, Tailor-made, all sizes, Black and Violet; very cheap. Also Surplices. Surplice, The Church Agency, Lombard House, E.C.

IMPORTANT TO MUSICSELLERS.—Having the largest and most varied stock in Europe, orders received in the morning are executed the same day. Terms and Catalogues on application.

AUTHORS' WORKS CORRECTED, REVISED, and PRINTED without delay, on exceptionally low terms. Estimates given on receipt of MSS.
London: B. WILLIAMS, 19, Paternoster Row, E.C.

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS. Dr. Horton Allison, 68, Nelson Street, Manchester.

MUSIC of every description ARRANGED and SCORED by a former Principal of a Continental Conservatoire. 92, Percy Road, Uxbridge Road, W.

EVERY MUSICIAN should send for our Specimens of MUSIC AUTO-LITHO PRINTING (black ink). Kyries, Anthems, &c., printed, from 24 copies and upwards, at trifling cost. Specimens free. Dinham, Blyth and Co., 28, Fenchurch Street, London. Established 1872.

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES.—For SALE, a large number of Chorus Parts and Vocal Scores of SACRED and SECULAR WORKS. Application for List to Dr. Bunnett, The Close, Norwich.

Auction Rooms specially for the Sale of Musical Property.

MESSRS. PUTTICK and SIMPSON, Auctioneers, 7, Leicester Square, London, W.C., hold SPECIAL SALES of MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS on or about the 20th of every month. Sales of Musical Libraries, Music Plates, and Copyrights, Trade Stocks, Manufacturers' Plant, &c., are held as occasion may require. Valuations for Probate or Legacy Duty, or for Public or Private Sale. Terms on application

PIANOFORTE and MUSIC BUSINESS for SALE. Established 18 years. Ill-health cause of sale. Populous district, market town, capital position, principal street. Excellent Tuning and Hiring connection. Stock (could be reduced) and fixtures at a valuation. R. G., Novello, Ewer and Co., 1, Berners Street, W.

A FIRM of MUSIC PUBLISHERS in the West-End desire a PARTNER (sleeping or active) with £5,000 capital. Principals only, to M. T. K., care of Gould's Advertising Offices 54, New Oxford Street, W.C.

KELLY and CO., PIANOFORTE, AMERICAN ORGAN, and HARMONIUM MAKERS (to Her Majesty), 14 and 16, Mortimer Street, London, W.
Kelly and Co.'s Instruments are the only ones of English manufacture that gained any award at the DUBLIN and PARIS EXHIBITIONS; also PRIZE MEDAL, INVENTIONS EXHIBITION, 1885; GOLD MEDAL and DIPLOMA of HONOUR, YORK EXHIBITION, 1889.
A LIBERAL DISCOUNT for SCHOOLS, CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS, and the PROFESSION.
500 SECOND-HAND PIANOFORTES by the leading Makers, at all times, very cheap. NEW PIANOS (warranted) in elegant Walnut or Rosewood cases, from 19 Guineas.
The Trade, Merchants, and Shippers supplied.
Sole Importers of the celebrated HERMANN PIANOS, CHEAPEST and BEST IN THE TRADE, as recommended by Signor Tito Mattei, the late Sir Julius Benedict, the Abbé Liszt, and others.

NICHOLSON AND CO.,
ORGAN BUILDERS,
PALACE YARD, WORCESTER.
(ESTABLISHED 1841.)
Specifications and Estimates sent free.

ESTABLISHED 1843.
GEO. ROGERS & SONS'
PIANOFORTES.
(Makers to the Emperor of Russia.)
NOBLE IN TONE.
HANDSOME IN APPEARANCE.
UNRIVALLED FOR DURABILITY.
"The most PERFECT PIANOS of the day."
PIANOS
FOR INDIA AND THE COLONIES.
ALSO YACHT PIANOS.
GEO. ROGERS & SONS,
60, BERNERS ST., OXFORD ST., LONDON, W.

THE OLD FIRM.
P. CONACHER & CO.,
Organ Builders,
SPRINGWOOD WORKS,
HUDDERSFIELD.
TWO GOLD MEDALS.

D'ALMAINE'S
PIANOS AND ORGANS
GREAT SALE.
Dealers and Professionals specially invited.
Large Discounts to Trade and Profession.
D'ALMAINE and Co. (Established 108 years), 91, Finsbury Pavement, E.C.

NOTICE OF REMOVAL.
MESSRS. DUFF and STEWART, Limited, beg to inform Professors of Music and the Trade that they have REMOVED from No. 60, Berners Street, to more convenient premises at No. 40, BERNERS STREET, where their celebrated Hanover Edition of Classical and Standard Pianoforte Works and Standard Vocal Music may be had. New list now ready.
Duff and Stewart, Limited, 40, Berners Street, London.

Just Published.
YOUNG LOCHINVAR
A BALLAD FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA
THE POETRY WRITTEN BY
SIR WALTER SCOTT
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY
ARCHIBALD DAVIDSON ARNOTT.
Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PERFORMED AT THE NORWICH MUSICAL FESTIVAL, 1893.

THE WATER LILY

A ROMANTIC LEGEND

FOR SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

JOSEPH BENNETT

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

FREDERIC H. COWEN.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PERFORMED AT THE NORWICH MUSICAL FESTIVAL, 1893.

THE WISHING BELL

A CANTATA

FOR FEMALE VOICES AND ORCHESTRA

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

JETTA VOGEL

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

JOHN FRANCIS BARNETT.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

VILLAGE SCENES

CANTATA FOR FEMALE VOICES

THE WORDS BY

CLIFTON BINGHAM

THE MUSIC BY

FREDERIC H. COWEN.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Tonic Sol-fa Edition, Ninepence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

A SEA DREAM

CANTATA FOR LADIES' VOICES (WITH RECITATION ACCOMPANIED)

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

SHAPCOTT WENSLEY

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

BATTISON HAYNES.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

ROMANZE

(ADOWN THE VALE THE HORSEMAN PASSED)

Written by HEINRICH HEINE

The English Version by the Rev. Dr. TROUTBECK.

COMPOSED BY ROBERT FRANZ.

Price Two Shillings.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

WRITTEN AND COMPOSED EXPRESSLY FOR THE CHELTENHAM TRIENNIAL MUSICAL FESTIVAL, 1893.

A FESTIVAL ODE

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY THE

REV. CANON BELL, D.D.

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

BERTHOLD TOURS.

Price One Shilling.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PERFORMED AT THE HOVINGHAM FESTIVAL, OCTOBER, 1893.

THE LEGEND

OF THE

ROCK-BUOY BELL

BALLAD FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

SUSAN K. PHILLIPS

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

ALAN GRAY.

Price One Shilling.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

EARLY SPRING

BY

ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON

SET TO MUSIC FOR CHORUS & ORCHESTRA

BY

VYVYAN WALLIS POPHAM.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.
Score and Orchestral Parts, MS.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TO CONDUCTORS OF CHORAL SOCIETIES.
Recently Published.

LORD ULLIN'S DAUGHTER

BALLAD FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA

BY

HERBERT HAM.

Price Fourpence.

"Where the ill-fated lovers take boat amidst the roaring of the tempest and tossing of the waters is the best section; the music here is graphic. The ballad is well worth the attention of our choral societies on the look-out for novelties."—Musical News.

"The workmanship is admirable. Not only is the part-writing very fine and the orchestration skilful, but throughout the piece the composer displays the power of producing great effects by comparatively simple means."—East Essex Times.

"The selection of the evening was a choral ballad, 'Lord Ullin's Daughter.' . . . It was rendered in a faultless manner, and round after round of applause greeted its performance."—Essex County Chronicle.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Orchestral Parts and Full Score may be hired of the COMPOSER, Halstead, Essex.

STAFF NOTATION MODULATOR

(40 by 10), 1s. 6d.; Mounted on Linen, with Rollers, 3s. 6d. (10½ by 4), 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW SONG.—"Ah! don't be sorrowful, Darling" (D flat to D flat). Suitable as encore. From the Composer, EDWARD T. FLETCHER, Steventon, Berks. 1s. 6d.

New Christmas Anthems.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THERE WERE SHEPHERDS

COMPOSED BY

MYLES B. FOSTER.

Price Three-halfpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence.

THERE WAS SILENCE IN BETHLEHEM'S FIELDS

CAROL FOR UNISON SINGING

BY

J. STAINER.

Price Three-halfpence
(Music in both Notations).

BEFORE THE HEAVENS

COMPOSED BY

HORATIO W. PARKER.

Price Threepence.

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS

A CAROL-ANTHEM

COMPOSED BY

J. BARNBY.

Price Threepence.
Tonic Sol-fa, 2d. Words only, 3s. per hundred.

THERE WERE SHEPHERDS

COMPOSED BY

H. W. WAREING.

Price Threepence.

HARK! WHAT NEWS THE ANGELS BRING

COMPOSED BY

OLIVER KING.

Price Threepence.

Will be Published December 4.

DAWNS THE DAY, THE NATAL DAY

CAROL-ANTHEM

COMPOSED BY

ROBIN H. LEGGE.

Price Threepence.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

ANTHEMS FOR CHRISTMAS.

*In the beginning	G. B. Allen	1½d.
Christians, be joyful	Bach	3d.
*Like silver lamps	J. Barnby	1½d.
Drop down, ye heavens	J. Barnby	1½d.
*The grace of God, that bringeth salvation	J. Barnby	1½d.
*Sing and rejoice	J. Barnby	1½d.
*Behold, I bring you good tidings	J. Barnby	3d.
*The first Christmas	J. Barnby	3d.
*While Shepherds watched	W. T. Best	1½d.
*Give the king Thy judgments, O Lord	A. H. Brown	1½d.
Hail! thou that art highly favoured	Arthur Carnall	4d.
Break forth into joy	S. Coleridge-Taylor	3d.
Behold, I bring you good tidings	J. M. Crament	4d.
Behold, I bring you glad tidings	Giovanni Croce	1½d.
*Arise, shine, for Thy light is come	Geo. Elvey	1½d.
*Let me now go even unto Bethlehem	J. T. Field	1½d.
*There were shepherds	Myles B. Foster	1½d.
Behold, a star appeareth	Niels W. Gade	4d.
Sing, O daughter of Zion	H. Gadsby	1½d.
*Behold, I bring you good tidings	J. Goss	1½d.
O sing to God (Noël). (Female Voices)	Ch. Gounod	6d.
*O sing to God (Noël). (Arranged for S.A.T.B.)	Ch. Gounod	1½d.
*Brightest and best	E. V. Hall	4d.
Behold, I bring	E. V. Hall	3d.
*Hark! the herald angels sing	E. V. Hall	3d.
How beautiful are the feet (Appendix to "The Messiah")	Handel	3d.
*Let us now go even unto Bethlehem	E. J. Hopkins	1½d.
Sing, O heavens	Kent	4d.
*While all things were in quiet silence	Oliver King	1½d.
Hallelujah! the light hath shined	Oliver King	3d.
The star that now is shining	Oliver King	1½d.
Hark! what news the angels bring	Oliver King	3d.
For unto us was born	G. A. Macfarren	3d.
While all things were in quiet silence	G. A. Macfarren	1½d.
God, who at sundry times	J. H. Mee	4d.
Blessed be the Lord God of Israel	The Earl of Mar	1½d.
Rejoice, O ye people	Mendelssohn	1½d.
*Hallelujah! for unto us a Child is born	W. H. Monk	1½d.
*Sing unto the Lord	Vincent Novello	1½d.
I will set his dominion in the sea	Horatio W. Parker	4d.
Before the heavens	Horatio W. Parker	3d.
Glory to God in the highest	Pergolesi	1½d.
*Break forth into joy	T. Ridley Prentice	6d.
*Behold, I bring you glad tidings	C. W. Smith	1½d.
The light hath shined	E. Silas	1½d.
*The morning stars sang together	J. Stainer	6d.
*O Zion, that bringest good tidings	J. Stainer	1½d.
*The hallowed day hath shined upon us	J. Stainer	1½d.
*Thus speaketh the Lord of Hosts	J. Stainer	1½d.
*The angel Gabriel was sent from God	H. Smart	1½d.
In the beginning was the Word	E. H. Thorne	1½d.
*Sing, O heavens	B. Tours	1½d.
*There were shepherds	B. Tours	1½d.
*This is the day which the Lord hath made	J. Turle	3d.
The light hath shined	C. G. Verrinder	1½d.
*There were shepherds	Charles Vincent	4d.
Behold, I bring you glad tidings	Vittoria	1½d.
There were shepherds	H. W. Wareing	3d.
Blessed be the Lord God of Israel	S. S. Wesley	1½d.
*Glory be to God on high	S. S. Wesley	2d.
Blessed be the Lord	C. L. Williams	4d.
Jesu, who from Thy Father's throne	F. C. Woods	3d.

Anthems marked thus * to be had in Tonic Sol-fa, 1d., 1½d., and 2d. each.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HYMNS AND CAROLS.

Adeste Fideles ("O come, all ye faithful")	Arr. by V. Novello	1½d.
Christians, awake! salute the happy morn	W. H. Monk	1½d.
Hark! the herald angels sing	J. Baptiste Calkin	1½d.
" " "	Dr. Iones	1½d.
" " "	Mendelssohn	1½d.
Now join we all with holy mirth	J. Stainer	1½d.
O come, all ye faithful	J. Barnby	1½d.
Of the Father's love begotten	J. B. Dykes	1½d.
See, the morning star	E. G. Monk	1½d.
Shades of silent night	Samuel Gee	1½d.
There were whisperings	J. T. Cooper	1½d.
O come, all ye faithful	Old Melody	1d.
Approach, all ye faithful	J. Barnby	1d.
Holy night	J. Barnby	2d.
Christians, awake!	J. Goss	1d.
Hark! the hosts of heaven are singing	Henry Smart	1d.
O come, new anthems let us sing	H. J. Gauntlett	1d.
Hark! the heavens' sweet melody	J. Goss	1d.
O come, loud anthems let us sing	S. S. Wesley	1d.
Christ is born, tell forth His fame	Ch. Gounod	1d.
Come, ye nations, faithful own	G. Elvey	1d.
Hark! the herald angels sing	Mendelssohn	1d.
When Christ was born / What child is this?	J. T. Field	2d.
Softly the night is sleeping / In Excelsis gloria	J. Maude Crament	3d.
O Babe! in manger lying / The Virgin is hushing her Baby to rest / What Child is this? / Darkness fell on the weary earth	J. Barnby	1½d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NOW READY.

TEN CHRISTMAS CAROLS

PRICE, COMPLETE, ONE SHILLING.
Or, Singly, 1½d. each.

TONIC SOL-FA EDITION, 8d.; WORDS ONLY, 2d.

CONTENTS.

Carol for Christmas day	J. T. Field.
Good people, give ear	John Swire.
Now dies in David's city	John Swire.
Now join we all with holy mirth	John Stainer.
Ring out, ye bells	J. H. Wallis.
Ye Stars of Night	John Swire.
Sleep, Holy Babe	J. T. Field.
Softly the night	J. M. Crament.
There dwelt in old Judea	R. Jackson.
Two thousand troubled years	J. F. Bridge.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CAROLS FOR CHRISTMASTIDE

SET TO ANCIENT MELODIES

BY THE

REV. THOMAS HELMORE, M.A.

Words, principally in imitation of the original,

BY THE

REV. J. M. NEALE, D.D.

	s.	d.
18mo, Melody only	0	6
„ „ „ in packets of 50	20	0
„ Compressed Score	1	0
Folio, with Pianoforte Accompaniment	4	6
Words only	0	1½
„ „ in packets of 50	5	0

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

FOR CHRISTMAS.

TEN HYMNS WITH TUNES

SELECTED FROM "THE HYMNARY."

Price One Penny.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

FOURTH GRAND CONCERT SONATA.

CHRISTMAS SONATA

COMPOSED BY

OTTO DIENEL.

(Op. 32.)

(No. 175. ORIGINAL COMPOSITIONS FOR THE ORGAN.)

Price Three Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TWELVE NEW

CAROLS FOR CHRISTMASTIDE

WRITTEN BY

SHAPCOTT WENSLEY

SET TO MUSIC BY

J. BARNBY.
J. F. BRIDGE.
EATON FANING.
MYLES B. FOSTER.
G. M. GARRETT.
BATTISON HAYNES.
EMMA MUNDELLA.
JOHN STAINER.
BERTHOLD TOURS.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.
Tonic Sol-fa, Eightpence. Words only, Twopence.
Each Carol may be had separately, price 1½d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

FOUR CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

No. 1.	The Anthem of Peace	J. BARNBY.
„ 2.	On Christmas Morn	A. C. MACKENZIE.
„ 3.	Across the desert sands by night	G. C. MARTIN.
„ 4.	Shepherds! shake off your drowsy sleep	J. STAINER.

PRICE THREE-HALFPENCE.
Tonic Sol-fa, Three-halfpence. Words only, Three Shillings per 100.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TWELVE OLD CAROLS

ENGLISH AND FOREIGN

ADAPTED AND ARRANGED BY

SIR JOHN STAINER,

MUS. DOC., OXON.

CONTENTS:

BESANÇON CAROL—"Shepherds! shake off your drowsy sleep."
TYROLESE CAROL—"Come, shepherds, come! shake off your sleep."
POITOU CAROL (Lucas Le Moigne, 1520)—"Now sing we all full sweetly."
ARPAJON CAROL (Sixteenth Century)—"The good men all of Chastres."
CAROL OF THE BIRDS (Bas-Quercy)—"Whence comes this rush of wings afar?"
CAROL OF THE FLOWERS (Bas-Quercy)—"Come with us, sweet flowers, and worship Christ the Lord."
GASCON CAROL—"Infant, so gentle, so pure, and so sweet!"
CAROL OF BASSE-NORMANDIE—"O Night, peaceful and blest!"
FLEMISH CAROL—"Of the Father's love begotten."
THE GOLDEN CAROL (English)—"We saw a light shine out afar."
ENGLISH (1661)—"Christmas hath made an end."
ENGLISH (1661)—"Now farewell, good Christmas."

PRICE ONE SHILLING.
Tonic Sol-fa, Sixpence. Words only, One Penny.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

FOUR CHRISTMAS CAROLS

WRITTEN BY

W. CHATTERTON DIX

SET TO MUSIC BY

JOSEPH BARNBY.

O Babe! in manger lying.
The Virgin is hushing her Baby to rest.
What Child is this?
Darkness fell on the weary earth.

Price Three-halfpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, One Penny. Words only, Three Shillings per 100.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

NEW AND OLD

THE WORDS EDITED BY THE

REV. HENRY RAMSDEN BRAMLEY, M.A.

THE MUSIC EDITED BY

JOHN STAINER, M.A., Mus. Doc.

THREE SERIES (MUSIC & WORDS), ONE SHILLING EACH.

Cloth, gilt, 2s. Three Series, complete, cloth, gilt, 4s.; or, in Seventy numbers, 1d. each.

Words only, each Series, 1½d.; or, complete, 4d.; cloth, 6d.

First Series, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation, 1s.; or, in separate numbers, 1d. each.

A Selection from the above (24) for Men's Voices, 2s.

Illustrated Edition (First and Second Series), handsomely bound in cloth, gilt, 7s. 6d.

Library Edition, with Historical Preface, Roxburgh binding, 7s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

POPULAR CHRISTMAS CAROLS

ARRANGED FOR

TWO-PART SINGING

With an ad libitum Pianoforte Accompaniment

BY

W. G. McNAUGHT.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

Tonic Sol-fa, price Sixpence. Words only, Three-halfpence.

CONTENTS:

Good King Wenceslas.
Christmas hath made an end.
Good Christian men, rejoice.
God rest you merry, gentlemen.
The first Nowell.
A Virgin unspotted.
The Wassail Song.
I hear along our streets.
The seven joys of Mary.
The Boar's Head Carol.
Hark! how sweetly the bells.
The holly and the ivy.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

SIX CHRISTMAS CAROLS

SET TO MUSIC FOR FOUR VOICES

BY

H. E. HAVERGAL, M.A.

No. 1. Christmas Morn.
„ 2. The Kings of the East.
„ 3. The Star.
No. 4. The Angels' Song.
„ 5. The Holy Birth.
„ 6. The Humiliation.

Price 1s. Separate Vocal Parts, 2d. each.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

TEN CHRISTMAS CAROLS

SET TO MUSIC BY

EDWARD BUNNETT, Mus.D., CANTAB.

Price, in paper wrapper, complete, 1s.; or, in single numbers, 1d. each.

CONTENTS.

1. The Carollers.
2. The stars are shining bright and clear.
3. Carol, sweetly carol.
4. Christmas Bells.
5. A child this day is born.
6. Hark! what means those holy voices?
7. The Angels' Carol.
8. While shepherds watched.
9. Angels from the realms of glory.
10. A Christmas Chime.

Also, by same COMPOSER,

A SECOND SET OF TEN CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

1. Awake! arouse! ye Christian band.
2. Ring out, sweet chimes.
3. Brightest and best.
4. Hail! happy morn.
5. O let our voices.
6. Christmas Eve.
7. Hark! the bells.
8. A Christmas Carol.
9. Joyful is the morn.
10. Noël.

Price, in paper wrapper, complete, 1s.; or, in single numbers, 1d. each.

The words of both sets (which are chiefly copyright) can be had of the COMPOSER. One Penny each set.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CHRISTMASTIDE CAROLS

HARMONISED BY

GEORGE C. MARTIN.

FIRST SERIES.—Old Breton Melodies.
SECOND SERIES.—Old French Melodies.

PRICE SIXPENCE EACH SERIES.
Words only, One Penny each series.

CONTENTS OF FIRST SERIES.

Hail! Christmas Bells.
O'er her Child the Virgin weeps.
The stars are bright.
On this day was born.
Glad hymns with one accord.
Outside the city gates.
On Asia Minor's sunny shore.
Across the desert sands by night.

CONTENTS OF SECOND SERIES.

Round the Virgin gently sleeping.
In the golden lands afar.
The sombre shadows darken fall.
The Circumcision.
The Shepherds glad.
Poising bright on golden wings.
A legend of the flight.
Merrily ring the Christmas bells.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

While Shepherds watched (Old Cornish Carol) .. .. .. 2d.
Shepherds in the field .. .. 3d.
Christians, be thankful .. .. 2d.
All my heart. Solo and Chorus.. .. .. 6d.

BY VYVYAN WALLIS POPHAM.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

WINCHESTER'S Anthems and Services FOR CHRISTMAS.

	s.	d.
ANTHEM. "Let us now go even unto Bethlehem."	0	3
ANTHEM. "There were Shepherds"	0	3
TE DEUM, Service in F (No. 25 of Series)	0	3
TE DEUM, Five Chant Settings (Nos. 3, 4, 32, 36, and 46) each	0	2
BENEDICITE. Three Settings (Nos. 8, 35, and 42) .. each	0	2
BENEDICTUS. No. 9, in F, 2d.; also, No. 10, in G	0	1½
JUBILATE, Service in F	0	1½
COMMUNION SERVICE in F	0	4
KYRIE ELEISON (Two). DOXOLOGIES and NICENE CREED (No. 49)	0	2
AGNUS DEI	0	1½
BENEDICTUS QUI VENIT	0	1½
OFFERTORY SENTENCES (Ten Settings)	0	3
OFFERTORY ANTHEM. "Be merciful"	0	1½
TALLIS'S FESTIVAL RESPONSES	0	1½
MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS, Services in F and G each	0	3
MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS. Two Chant Settings (Nos. 17 and 48) .. .. each	0	3
GRAND FESTIVAL MARCH FOR ORGAN.. .. net	1	6

BOUND VOLUME OF

WINCHESTER'S CHURCH-MUSIC SERIES,

Containing ORIGINAL ANTHEMS, MORNING, EVENING, and COMMUNION SERVICES, HYMN TUNES, &c.

Nos. 1 to 50, bound in cloth, gilt, red edges, 4s.

London: HART and Co., 22, Paternoster Row, E.C.

NEW CHRISTMAS CAROLS, by JOSEPH C. BRIDGE, M.A., Mus. Doc., Oxon., Organist of Chester Cathedral. "Away with grief" and "Christmas Night." Price Threepence each. London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW ANTHEM for CHRISTMAS. By R. T. CLARK MORRISON. "Sing, O daughter of Zion." Bright, melodious, and effective. Price Threepence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Price Threepence. Tonic Sol-fa, price Three-halfpence.

THERE WERE SHEPHERDS

BY

E. A. SYDENHAM.

"An effective, bright, melodious composition."—Church Review.
"An able composition."—Church Times.
"A gain to music of this class."—Musical Times.

By the same COMPOSER.

THREE CAROLS or HYMNS for CHRISTMAS. Music and words, 3d.; words only, 3s. per 100.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Now Ready.

TWELVE CHRISTMAS CAROLS

Words by Mrs. G. F. BYRON (Miss Gillington)

MUSIC BY

F. PASCAL.

Octavo. Price One Shilling net.

Sample Copies sent (to Organists, &c.) post-free on receipt of six stamps.

London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 24, Berners Street.

NEW COMPOSITIONS

BY SYDNEY T. SPALDING.

CHRISTMAS ANTHEM, "While the Shepherds." Price 3d.

"Noteworthy for extreme unconventionality."
"The composer has dared to think for himself."
"His style is uncommon."—Musical Times.
"Worthy the attention of choirs with limited capabilities."—Daily News.
"A Xmas Anthem of pastoral type, the theme well worked out, the harmonies solid and good."—Liverpool Daily Post.
"Eminently suitable for Church choirs."—Brighton Gazette.

TE DEUM. Price 3d.

"A clever composition."—Daily News.
"One of the finest settings we have heard for some time."—Brighton Gazette.
"Has vigour and style, and within the capacity of parish choirs."—Liverpool Daily Post.
"Should be in the library of every organist."—The Lady.

REST. Song for Soprano. Price 2s. net.

"The composer is to be congratulated on having set the Rev. J. Jennings's words to charming music, and the song is an assured success."—Lady's Pictorial.
"A very pleasing song of devotional cast."—Liverpool Daily Post.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

EDWYN A. CLARE'S

CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS

These compositions are very effective and not difficult.

THE PRINCE OF PEACE (New) (4th 1,000) .. .. 3d.
A very pretty, melodious, and easy Anthem.
WE HAVE SEEN HIS STAR (New) (6th 1,000) .. .. 3d.
BEHOLD, I BRING (10th 1,000) .. .. 3d.
SING, O HEAVENS (6th 1,000) .. .. 3d.
{ PRAISE THE LORD, O JERUSALEM (12th 1,000) .. .. .. 3d.
{ THE LORD REIGNETH (New). (Sol-fa, 2d.) (3rd 1,000) .. .. 3d.
Two easy Anthems, suitable for any Festival or special occasion.
MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS IN D (6th 1,000) .. .. .. 4d.
Full of vigour and flowing melody.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW MUSIC FOR CHRISTMAS

(Especially written for Children).

KLING, HENRI

SCENES OF CHILDHOOD

CHRISTMAS FANTASIA FOR PIANOFORTE WITH TOY INSTRUMENTS.

Price Two Shillings net.
Easy and very effective.

Toy Instruments, of the best quality, can be obtained for the above Fantasia, also for Haydn and Romberg's Toy Symphonies.

String Parts (Flute, Clarinet, Cornet) to the above Fantasia may be had also at 4d. net each.

LOUIS OERTEL and Co., 69, Berners Street, London, W.

REJOICE GREATLY, O DAUGHTER OF ZION. Christmas Anthem, by THOS. SMITH. 3d. "Spirited, and not difficult." London: NOVELLO and Co., Berners Street. Post-free from the COMPOSER, Music Warehouse, Bury St. Edmund's.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

SET TO MUSIC BY

J. FREDERICK BRIDGE, MUS. DOC.

CHILD DIVINE. Words by Rev. F. K. HARFORD. 2d.
JOY, YE PEOPLE. Words by Rev. F. K. HARFORD, M.A. 2d.
IN SORROW AND IN WANT. Words by Archdeacon FARRAR. 3d.
ALL JUBILANT WITH PSALM AND HYMN. Words by the Ven. Archdeacon FARRAR. 2d.
CHRISTMAS BELLS. Words from "In Memoriam," by ALFRED TENNYSON. 4d.
SWEETER THAN SONGS OF SUMMER. Words by the Author of "The Sower went forth sowing." 3d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS, &c.

BY CALEB SIMPER.

Interesting, attractive, popular, easy, melodious, and effective.

*BE JOYFUL, O EARTH (New, moderately easy) (5th 1,000) .. .. 4d.
Band Parts of this attractive Anthem also issued.
*THE GLORY OF THE LORD (New, moderate) (7th 1,000) .. .. 4d.
*REJOICE GREATLY (New) (6th 1,000) .. .. 3d.
*BREAK FORTH INTO JOY (9th 1,000) .. .. 4d.
Sung at Choral Festivals in Downpatrick Cathedral and at Begelley.
*THE HEAVENS ARE TELLING (6th 1,000) .. .. 3d.
*BLESSED BE THE LORD GOD (14th edition) .. .. 4d.
LET US NOW GO EVEN TO BETHLEHEM (6th 1,000) .. .. .. 3d.
WE HAVE SEEN HIS STAR (27th edition) .. .. 4d.
SING, O HEAVENS (17th 1,000). GLORY TO GOD (16th ed.) each 3d.
AND HE SHALL REIGN (12th 1,000) .. .. 3d.
THERE WERE SHEPHERDS (17th ed.). BEHOLD I BRING (37th ed.) each 3d.
TE DEUM IN G (7th edition), 4d. TE DEUM in F (24th edition) 3d.
FAVOURITE MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS IN F (49th edition) 4d.
Sung at Choral Festivals in Lismore, Derry, and Downpatrick Cathedrals; also at Barrow, Skegness, Great Budworth, Sleaford, East Devon, &c.
MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS IN E FLAT (17th edition) .. 4d.
Sung at a Choral Festival in Llandaff Cathedral.
MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS IN G (New) (6th edition) .. 4d.
EASY HOLY COMMUNION SERVICE IN E FLAT (9th 1,000) .. .. 4d.
HOLY COMMUNION SERVICE IN F (6th edition) .. .. .. 6d.
*EASY HOLY COMMUNION SERVICE IN G (New) (2nd 1,000) .. 4d.
All these Services are complete, with Agnus Dei and Benedictus.
O HOW AMIABLE. Festivals (3rd 1,000) .. .. 3d.
GIVE GLORY TO THE LORD. Festivals (12th edition) .. .. 3d.
THE LAMB SHALL LEAD THEM (New) .. .. 3d.

---

*POPULAR CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

73rd 1,000. Price 1d. each. Nos. 13 to 18 are just published.

*1. CAROL SWEETLY.
*2. O LOVELY STAR.
*3. WHAT SAY THESE BELLS?
*4. COME, HAIL THE DAY.
*5. GOOD NEWS WE BRING.
*6. SWEETEST MUSIC.
*7. AWAKE, AWAKE!
*8. O SO SWEETLY.
*9. HAPPY MORNING.
*10. SWEET ANGELS, EVER BRIGHT.
*11. OH, CHRISTMAS BELLS.
*12. BETHLEHEM'S PEACEFUL HILL
*13. SWEET CHRISTMAS DAY.
*14. RING, BELLS, RING.
*15. FAIR EDEN'S GATES.
*16. SONGS OF RAPTURE.
*17. ALL HAIL! WE SING.
*18. SILVERY STARS.

Words only—Set 1 contains Nos. 1 to 6 complete; Set 2, Nos. 7 to 12; Set 3, Nos. 13 to 18. Price of each Set, 3s. 3d. per 100.
Those marked * are also published in Tonic Sol-fa.

London: WEEKES and Co., 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.
Chicago, U.S.A.: CLAYTON F. SUMMY, 174-176, Wabash Avenue.

52nd Thousand.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

EDITED BY

T. HERBERT SPINNEY,

M.A., OXON., F.C.O.

Tonic Sol-fa Edition now Ready. Six different Editions published.

Price 2d. each series; or Separate Numbers (superior edition), 1d. each. Tonic Sol-fa Notation, in separate numbers only, 1d. each; Words only, each series, 2s. 6d. per 100.

There is nothing in the market, either so cheap, so popular, or so extensively adopted.—Vide Press opinions.

London Agents: WEEKES and Co., Hanover Street.
American Agent: CLAYTON F. SUMMY, Wabash Avenue Chicago.
Australian Agent: W. KING, Drummond Street, Ballarat.

N.B.—To the Clergy or Organists. A Specimen Copy of either series, 1d., on application to the EDITOR, Newborough Vicarage, Burton-on-Trent.

APPROACH, ALL YE FAITHFUL. Hymn for Christmas. Set to music by BENJAMIN CONGREVE. Price 1½d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

IN EXCELSIS GLORIA. New Carol (with bright, lively Chorus). By W. H. GILL. 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

FOR CHRISTMAS, 1893.

JUST OUT.

With Music, price 4d. The Words separately, ½d., or 3s. 6d. per 100; by Post, 3s. 9d.

A CHRISTMAS SERVICE OF SONG

A COMPLETE ORDER OF SERVICE

FOR

CHRISTMASTIDE

TO BE USED IN CHURCH, MISSION ROOM, OR SCHOOL

INCLUDING

PRAYERS, VERSICLES, PSALMS, LESSONS, &c.,

ALSO

HYMNS AND CAROLS.

WITH SPECIALLY COMPOSED TUNES

BY

SIR JOHN STAINER, Mus. Doc.
BERTHOLD TOURS.
PROFESSOR J. F. BRIDGE, Mus. Doc.
MARTIN S. SKEFFINGTON.

LONDON: SKEFFINGTON AND SON, PICCADILLY.

Second Edition.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS.—For Treble Voices (Unaccompanied). Arranged or composed by ROSAMOND PHILPOTT. Price Fourpence.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CHRISTMAS CAROL, "Ring the joyful Christmas Bells," for Soprano Voices and Chorus, by F. PESKETT, price 2d.; "Dame Durden," humorous Part-song, by H. TOWNSEND, 2d.; Accompaniments to the Lord's Prayer, by H. TOWNSEND, 1s. net.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS, by THOS. SMITH.—Melodious and Easy.—"For unto us," "Glory to God." Advent: "The night is departing," "How lovely are the messengers." General Anthems: "O worship the Lord," "Sing we merrily," "Hear my prayer," "Like as the hart," "The Lord is my Shepherd." Price 3d. each.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CHURCH MUSIC

BY

EDWARD BUNNETT, Mus.D., CANTAB.

ANTHEMS.

ADVENT.—"O Lord my God." Four voices	3d.
CHRISTMAS.—"In the beginning." Four voices	3d.
"The Lord is my Shepherd"	3d.
"I was glad." Four voices	3d.
" " Tonic Sol-fa	1½d.

SERVICES.

Te Deum laudamus in E. Chant form	3d.
Benedictus and Jubilate in E " "	3d.
Tonic Sol-fa.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in F	1½d.
" " " A	1½d.
" " " E	1½d.

HYMNS.

Twenty-four Original Hymn Tunes	6d.
Twelve Original Hymn Tunes	3d.
Amen (on Card)	1d.

ORGAN.

Three Short Organ Pieces	net 2s.
Larghetto in A flat major.
Allegretto Pastorale in A major.
Andante con Moto in F major.
Minuetto	net 1s. 6d.
Twelve Short and Easy Pieces	" 2s. 0d.
Largo in E flat	" 1s. 0d.
Ave Maria	" 1s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

SUITABLE FOR USE IN THE CHURCH SERVICE.

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS MORN

A BIBLICAL PASTORAL

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY THE REV. S. J. STONE

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

HENRY LESLIE.

Vocal Score, 8vo, 2s. 6d. Vocal Parts, 6d. each.

CHRISTMAS EVE

A SHORT CANTATA

FOR ALTO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

COMPOSED BY

NIELS W. GADE.

(Op. 40.)

Price One Shilling. Tonic Sol-fa Notation, Fourpence.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE

CHRISTMAS ORATORIO

BY

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH.

THE ENGLISH TRANSLATION AND ADAPTATION BY THE REV. J. TROUTBECK, D.D.

Price, in paper cover, 2s.; paper boards, 2s. 6d.; cloth, gilt, 4s.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

YULE-TIDE

A CANTATA

The Words written by JULIA GODDARD

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

THOMAS ANDERTON.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Paper boards, 2s.; cloth, gilt, 3s.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

SONG FOR THE NEW YEAR

FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA

COMPOSED BY

ROBERT SCHUMANN.

Price One Shilling.
Tonic Sol-fa, Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CAROLS FOR CHRISTMASTIDE

SET TO MUSIC

FOR LITTLE SINGERS

BY GEORGE FOX.

Paper cover, price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CHRISTMAS BELLS AT SEA

SONG

COMPOSED BY

ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

Price Two Shillings net.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published. 8vo, 2d.

THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME. Popular American Melody with vocally-imitated Banjo Accompaniment. Arranged for T.T.B.B. and Tenor Solo, by T. BLACKSHAW.
London: WEEKES and Co., 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.
Manchester: HIME and ADDISON, and JOHN HEYWOOD.
Huddersfield: WOOD and MARSHALL.

NATIONAL NURSERY RHYMES AND SONGS

BY

J. W. ELLIOTT.

With 65 Illustrations, and elegantly bound, cloth, gilt, 7s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE

SUNLIGHT OF SONG

A COLLECTION OF

SACRED AND MORAL SONGS

With original Music by the most eminent Composers, with 46 Illustrations, cloth, gilt, 5s.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HOLIDAY SONGS

Written by C. F. ALEXANDER

MUSIC BY

LADY ARTHUR HILL.

ILLUSTRATED COVER AND FRONTISPIECE.

Price, Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

SACRED SONGS

FOR

LITTLE SINGERS

WORDS BY F. R. HAVERGAL

MUSIC BY

A. RANDEGGER.

Illustrated, paper cover, 2s. 6d.; cloth, gilt, 5s.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

MENDELSSOHN'S

SIX CHRISTMAS PIECES

FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

Price Three Shillings net.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

A CHRISTMAS DREAM

A CANTATA FOR CHILDREN

(WITH ACTION)

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

K. R. MOFFAT.

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

ALFRED MOFFAT.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence

(Music in both Notations).

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS

A SHORT MUSICAL SKETCH

SUITABLE FOR THE BREAKING UP OF SCHOOLS

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

J. A. CAMPBELL

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

HERBERT W. SCHARTAU.

Price Ninepence

(Music in both Notations).

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

NEW CHRISTMAS CAROL.

FATHER CHRISTMAS

FOR SOLO AND CHORUS

Words and Music by H. CUBITT.

"Bright and attractive."

Octavo, price 4d. net. Sample copy, post-free, 2d. net.

London: J. and J. HOPKINSON, 34, 35, 36, Margaret St., Cavendish Sq.

ORGAN MUSIC FOR CHRISTMAS.

		Net s.	d.
SIX ORGAN PIECES (Book V. of "Collection of Organ Pieces")	W. T. Best	3	0
POSTLUDE	Dr. Garrett	1	6
OFFERTOIRE ("The Modern Organist," No. 9)	Lefèbure-Wély	2	6
OFFERTORIUM (Four Organ Pieces, No. 2)	J. Lemmens	2	6
VOLUNTARY for Christmastide	Sir Fred. Ouseley	1	0
CHRISTMAS SONATA (Sonata, No. 4)	Otto Dienel	3	6

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PART-SONGS for CHRISTMAS.

A blithe old Carle is Christmas	T. R. Prentice	3d.
A Carol round the fireside	V. Gabriel	3d.
*A Christmas Madrigal	T. Ions	1½d.
A New Year's Carol	James Shaw	1½d.
A Wreath for Christmas	Bartholomew	1½d.
Bells across the Snow	C. Gounod	3d.
Caput apri defero	R. L. de Pearsall	3d.
Christmas	G. A. Macfarren	1½d.
Come, let us be merry	R. L. de Pearsall	1½d.
*Holly berries	Dr. Westbrook	1½d.
*In dulci jubilo	R. L. de Pearsall	3d.
*New Year's song	B. Tours	1½d.
*Oh! the roast beef of Old England		1½d.
*Silvery Christmas Bells	A. Randegger	1½d.
The brightest day of all the year	A. H. Brown	1½d.
The Christmas fairies	C. Goodban	1½d.
*The last night of the year	A. Sullivan	1½d.
The Waits	Savile	1½d.
The wintry winds are blowing	J. Müller	4d.
Up, brothers, up	J. B. Calkin	1½d.
Wassail	A. M. Goodhart	3d.

* These published in Tonic Sol-fa Notation, 1d. and 1½d. each.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

SAY, WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?

SPECIALLY SUITABLE FOR ADVENT.

The last Hymn ever written by the late CANON ELLERTON, in place of an older Hymn commencing with the same first line.

Copies of the Music and Words, price Threepence net, or 2s. 6d. per dozen; and also of the Leaflet, with words only, for Congregational use, price 1s. per hundred, to be had of Mr. HENRY FROWDE, Oxford University Press Warehouse, Amen Corner, E.C.

THE LORD REIGNETH

(Psalm xciii.)

SET TO MUSIC BY

ROBERT PARKER PAINE.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

"The Composer of this work is evidently well versed in the English School of Music, and his Psalm would make an extremely effective Anthem for festival occasions."—The Musical Times.

"'The Lord Reigneth' (Ps. xciii.) has been well set to music by Robert Parker Paine, with a baritone solo, three choruses, and two symphonies. It will prove a welcome addition to the 'Sunday Evening at Home.'"—The Graphic.

"A very successful setting. The opening solo (baritone) is effective, and the choruses are bold and striking. The music is quite in keeping with the words."—Ecclesiastical Gazette.

"Dear Mr. Paine,—Allow me to thank you for sending me a copy of your 93rd Psalm. I have great pleasure in looking it over, and I consider it a composition of great merit, and have no doubt you will produce other good works. With many thanks,

"I am, yours truly,

"G. L. ELVEY."

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

HERBERT BUNNING

(Op. 43)

THE SHEPHERD'S CALL

LARGHETTO FOR STRING ORCHESTRA AND HORN.

Score and Parts, 3s. net; Extra Parts, 6d. net.

LOUIS OERTEL and Co., 69, Berners Street, London, W.

THE BRISTOL TUNE BOOK

EDITION 1891.

Containing 905 Tunes and Chants.

NOW READY.

THIRD SERIES, including Supplement 1881, containing 190 Tunes and 118 varieties of metre.

A COMPANION TO ALL HYMN BOOKS.

EDITION 1881.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 9.	Limp Cloth.. ..	4 0	No. 11.	Small Edition ..	3 0
„ 10.	Cloth Boards, red edges	5 0	„ 12.	Tonic Sol-fa ..	3 0

THIRD SERIES.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 13.	Limp Cloth ..	2 0	No. 16.	Tonic Sol-fa, limp cloth	1 6
„ 15.	Small Edition, limp cloth	1 6

COMPLETE EDITION, 1891.

		s. d.			s. d.
No. 17.	Limp Cloth ..	5 0	No. 19.	Small Edition ..	3 6
„ 18.	Cloth Boards, red edges	6 0	„ 20.	Tonic Sol-fa ..	3 6

Communications and enquiries as to copyright, and also as to supplying at reduced prices, may be addressed to the Bristol Publishers.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Bristol: W. AND F. MORGAN, Clare Street.
And all Booksellers and Musicsellers.

Price 3s. 6d., cloth, red edges.

THE TUNE BOOK, with the additional Tunes as used at ST. ALBAN'S, HOLBORN, containing nearly 270 Tunes, for Long, Common, Short, and Peculiar Metres; together with several Gregorian Hymns and Antiphons; the Eight Gregorian Tones; the Music of the Reproaches; the Seven Last Words; and Litany Tunes, &c. London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

FOR MALE VOICE CHOIR.—THE NATIONAL ANTHEM, price 4d.; JUBILEE ODE, price 6d. net. By GEORGE RISELEY.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Twenty-third Edition.

JOULE'S COLLECTION OF 527 CHANTS, 57 RESPONSES, &c. Reduced price, 4s. 6d., paper cover; 6s., limp cloth; separate vocal parts, 2s. each.—Tonic Sol-fa Notation, Score, 1s. 6d.

The Chants are selected with due reference to the position of the Reciting-note.

THE PSALTER, PROPER PSALMS, HYMNS, and CANTICLES. Pointed for Chanting by B. ST. J. B. JOULE. Large type, price 2s. 6d. This Psalter, having been collated with the Sealed Books, is free from the errors contained in all other pointed Psalters, through printing from the incorrect copies commonly sold by the Stationers.

Tenth Edition.

JOULE'S DIRECTORIUM CHORI ANGLICANUM. 18mo, price 1s.; in cloth, 1s. 6d.

Seventh Edition.

JOULE'S DIRECTORIUM CHORI ANGLICANUM. 4to, in cloth, elegant, price 7s. 6d.

Seventh Edition.

THE ORDER FOR THE HOLY COMMUNION. Harmonised on a Monotone in a very simple manner for Parochial use. By B. ST. J. B. JOULE. Price 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Fourth Thousand.

MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in E flat, by WILLIAM S. VINNING, Mus. Bac., Cantab. Price 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Third Thousand.

VESPER HYMN. To be sung after Evensong. Words and music by GEORGE KETT. "A very charming hymn-tune."—Sir John Stainer. On card. Price One Penny.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Words alone, for congregational use, One Shilling per hundred, of the AUTHOR, 100, Gordon Road, Nunhead, S.E.

THE

OFFICE FOR THE HOLY COMMUNION

(Including Benedictus qui venit and Agnus Dei)

SET TO MUSIC IN THE KEY OF A FLAT

BY

BASIL HARWOOD.

Price One Shilling.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Church Compositions

BY

CLEMENT R. GALE, B.A.,

MUS. BAC., OXON.

		s. d.
MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in D	.. .. ..	6d.
MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in F	.. .. ..	3d.
WE MARCH, WE MARCH TO VICTORY (Processional Hymn.)	.. .. ..	1½d.
BENEDICITE, OMNIA OPERA, in D	.. ..	1½d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Second Edition. Price Sixpence.

FOR PARISH CHOIRS.

OFFICE for HOLY COMMUNION. Set to easy Music, in the key of G, including Introit, Gradual, Alleluias, Benedictus, Agnus Dei, Paternoster (Ancient), and Antiphon,

COMPOSED BY

THOMAS ADAMS, F.C.O.,

Organist and Choirmaster of St. Alban's, Holborn, E.C.

"We gladly welcome Mr. Adams's Communion Office."—Church Times.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Specimen copy, post-free, three stamps, of the AUTHOR.

COMES, AT TIMES, A STILLNESS AS OF EVEN (Evening and Morning), sung at the Funeral Service of the late Sir Andrew Clark, at Westminster Abbey, on the 11th ult., and on other similar occasions. Composed by Sir HERBERT OAKELEY ("Memorial Choruses," No. 1). Published by FORSYTH BROTHERS, 267, Regent Street. Price 6d.

GILL'S EASY VOLUNTARIES.—"Messiah," "Judas," "Elijah," "Creation," "St. Paul." 1s. each set of twenty Voluntaries.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

BORDONEL'S PENTECOST MASS. To be produced at Liverpool, Clifton, Suffolk, Manchester, and London, in the various Cathedrals, Pro-Cathedrals, Jesuit and Benedictine Churches. Organ score, 5s. net; vocal score, 2s. net.
London: BREITKOPF and HÄRTEL, 54, Great Marlborough Street, W.

PREVENT US, O LORD. Short Anthem for special and general use. By JOHN A. METCALFE. Price 3d. Copies from COMPOSER, Guisborough, Yorkshire; or,
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

In the Press.

MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in G. By S. T. CAUDWELL. Price 3d. "Tuneful and congregational."
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Published June, 1893.

THE OFFERTORY SENTENCES (complete, without the repetition of words). Set to music by G. GAFFE. Price 1s. Published by NOVELLO, EWER and Co., 1, Berners St., W., from whom copies may be obtained. Specimen copy sent post-free for eight stamps. Address, Mr. G. GAFFE, 4, London Road, St. Albans, Herts.

MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in F. By ARTHUR CARNALL. Price 4d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PLAIN-SONG MUSIC. Edited by Rev. H. A. WALKER, M.A. Missa in Duplicibus, 3d.; Missa de Angelis, 3d.; Organ, 2s.; Missa Regia, 3d.; Organ, 2s.; Dumont's Mass, No. 2 (Easy, like Merbecke's Service), 3d.; Organ, 2s.; Te Deum Chant, from Alfieri, 3d.; Dies Iræ, Sequence for Solo Voices and Chorus in Faux Bourdon, 9d.; The Holy Communion, Rules for Chanting Collects, Epistles, and Gospels, and other music; Organ for Sursum Corda, Pater Noster, Versicles and Responses for Matins and Evensong, 9d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

CHORAL MUSIC.

	s. d.
THE OFFERTORY SENTENCES FROM THE GOSPELS	0 6
SANCTUS, BENEDICTUS, AGNUS DEI, GLORIA ..	0 9
TWENTY TUNES FOR WELL-KNOWN HYMNS ..	1 0
TE DEUM LAUDAMUS	0 4
HYMN TO PEACE. Aristophanes	1 0
THE DREAM. Sir Philip Sidney	0 3

BY VYVYAN WALLIS POPHAM.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published.

KYRIE, set to Music in E flat. By J. E. CAMPBELL. On card, 1d. This setting is already in use at six Churches.
London: WEEKES and Co., 14, Hanover Street, W.

OPINIONS OF THE LONDON AND PROVINCIAL PRESS

ON

A. R. GAUL'S CANTATA

"UNA"

COMPOSED FOR AND PRODUCED AT THE NORWICH MUSICAL FESTIVAL, 1893.

"'Una' differs considerably from some of the earlier works of Mr. Gaul. Mr. Frederick Enoch is the capable librettist, and in setting his words to music, Mr. Gaul has scored another marked success."—Nelson Chronicle.

"Mr. Gaul's music is, as usual with him, replete with spontaneous melody. The soprano solo, "O love will love," is really a delicious piece of writing."—Manchester Examiner.

"Mr. Gaul's choral writing is always fluent and pleasing, and this is fast becoming something to be thankful for."—Leeds Mercury.

"This composer sees no reason to change the method which has popularised his name wherever choral societies need music that is musicianly, melodious, and within the scope of moderate executive means. The result, in the present case, leaves no doubt that into all the places which know his previous compositions 'Una' will find a way and become as much a favourite as its forerunners. . . . Mr. Gaul considers before all things the elegance and symmetry of his melodic phrases. . . . The two orchestral numbers—an Introduction and an Intermezzo entitled 'Early morning in the woods'—are both in the gentle, flowing, and melodious style which seems the natural expression of Mr. Gaul's musical feeling."—Musical Times.

"To the list of works which have proved widely acceptable, 'Una' should be added, for the flow of pleasant unaffected tune and the simple and suave part-writing are just as noteworthy as in 'The Holy City' and 'Joan of Arc.'"—Athenæum.

"Over the country there exist hundreds of choral associations who demand music within their means. For these Mr. Gaul has catered, and it only remains to inquire whether he has done his work well. This undoubtedly can be answered in the affirmative. The best appreciated numbers to-night were an 'Angelus' chorus, with bell accompaniment; a tenor ballad, a duet for the tenor and contralto, a soprano solo for Una, and a chorus of the forest people with waltz refrain."—Daily News.

"Where our townsman is mostly at home is in his charming flow of melody and effective and flowing choral writing. The whole work is from beginning to end replete with delicious passages, and will prove one of the best productions from his fertile pen. No one knows better than Mr. Gaul what is suitable and acceptable to choral societies and what the masses like. He writes for his people, and his success lies in that direction. We may safely predict for 'Una' a similar popularity to that accorded to 'The Holy City.'"—Birmingham Daily Mail.

"Without doubt the Concert of Wednesday evening was the most popular feature of the whole Festival, for in addition to the attraction afforded by the appearance of M. Paderewski, the interest of the Norwich people was aroused to the fullest by the production of Mr. Gaul's 'Una,' a new work specially written for the occasion by a fellow-citizen by birth, and a distinguished musician as well. Every seat was occupied, and the audience included distinguished members of society, social and artistic, who, as the evening advanced, threw off all restraint and united together in giving a hearty East Anglican welcome to the Norwich musician and his artistic associate, M. Paderewski. The performance of Mr. Gaul's new work was a self-evident success. Mr. Gaul has his hand in a favourable position on the pulse of the public, and no one is better acquainted with the qualifications which go to make up a successful Cantata. 'Una' has already been described in detail; it is only necessary to add that the performance was quite in accordance with the merits of the work. The chorus, to whom no small share is allotted, entered thoroughly into the spirit of their work. The Angelus chorus made a lasting impression on its hearers, the introduction of the campanels (which were especially made for the occasion by Messrs. Martineau and Smith, of Birmingham) giving a most picturesque colouring to the whole. The choral numbers, including 'Let us hasten,' and the tuneful Finale, were admirably sung, while the heartiness which marked the performance augured well for the future of the work, and was also shown in the reception given to Mr. Gaul at the conclusion, when he was heartily congratulated. Further evidence of the favour with which the Cantata is regarded may be inferred from the announcement that six performances of it have already been arranged."—Norfolk Chronicle and Norwich Gazette.

"We believe that Mr. Gaul has attained great popularity with small English provincial choral societies than any other composer, living or dead."—London Daily Graphic.

"Very pleasing it is, abounding in smoothly-flowing passages, and there is no doubt at all but that it will become very popular with the smaller choral societies, for which the composer has done a great deal already, and thereby placed the musical world under an obligation which cannot be gainsaid. There are many steps to the temple of the Muses, and those who render assistance at the middle height do as great a service as those who chant pæans of praise at the summit."—Norwich Argus.

"Musicianly, melodious, and pleasing. As a composer of easy cantatas for amateur choral societies, Mr. Gaul has for a long time been well known, and in this respect he has done good service to the divine art. This new work of his, 'Una,' is quite one of his best."—Musical Standard.

"The general features of the work are those we have had occasion to notice before. Refinement and finish in the vocal writing, the accompaniment subordinated to the voices, whether solo or chorus; elegant part-writing, and well-rounded phrasing. The form is that of the classic school, before dramatic demands worked the revolution so conspicuous in the music of to-day. Mr. Gaul has apparently set himself limits he has no desire to overstep, but within those limits he moves with always increasing freedom; and the conviction is borne upon one that if he sought to be more ambitious he has the power to achieve his aim. . . . Distinguished by sound musicianship, if also with artistic restraint, and choral societies will heartily welcome this latest product of his pen."—Birmingham Daily Post.

"The pleasant and unaffected vein of melody noticeable in his 'Joan of Arc,' 'The Holy City,' and other works is evidently not exhausted. The Cantata may be heartily recommended to the notice of the innumerable smaller bodies which now flourish in every corner of the United Kingdom."—Standard.

"Is there not a definite mission for those who make good music possible without a London orchestra and expensive principals? I think there is."—Norfolk Daily Standard.

"Mr. Gaul is a composer who has devoted much of his time and talent to the provision of easy and popular music for choral societies of moderate executive powers. Those societies need a caterer able to supply them with pieces suited to their means, and they have long shown that Mr. Gaul is a composer whom they are glad to accept. 'Una' will find its way amongst them easily."—Daily Telegraph.

	s.	d.		s.	d.
Paper cover .. .. price	2	6	Tonic Sol-fa .. .. price	1	0
,, boards .. .. ,,	3	0	Vocal parts .. .. each ,,	1	0
,, cloth, gilt .. .. ,,	4	0	Words only .. .. per 100 ,,	7	6

The loan of Instrumental Parts may be had on application to the COMPOSER, and full liberty is given to perform this Cantata and to insert the words in any programme without further permission.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS

FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

BACHMANN, G.

	s.	d.
Gavotte nouvelle	3	0
Paris-Londres. Valse de salon	4	0

BOYCE, ETHEL M.

A Book of Fancies:—
1. Farewell	1	0
2. A dream	1	0
3. Springtime	2	0
4. Gavotte	1	0
5. Lullaby	2	0
6. On the mountains	1	0
7. Forsaken	2	0
8. Tarantella	3	0
By the brook. Sketch	4	0
Valse in F	4	0

BRIGHT, DORA.

Romanza and Scherzetto	4	0

GERMAN, EDWARD.

Album leaf	4	0
Bourrée	3	0
Elegy	3	0
Graceful Dance	4	0
Impromptu	4	0
Intermezzo, in A minor	4	0
Intermezzo Funèbre ("Richard III.")	3	0
Mazurka	4	0
Minuet, in G	4	0
Processional March ("Richard III.")	3	0
Selections from Incidental Music ("Richard III.")	4	0
Polish Dance	4	0
Tarantella	4	0
Valse, in A flat	4	0
Valse caprice	4	0
Valsette	4	0

GIBSONE, IGNACE.

Idylle	3	0
Playfulness	3	0
Romanza	3	0
Song without words	3	0
The rivulet. Caprice	3	0
Valse-impromptu	3	0

GURLITT, C.

Nine Musical Sketches. Op. 182:—
1. Allegretto, in E flat	2	0
2. Allegro molto, in D minor	1	0
3. Con moto, in G	1	0
4. Allegretto scherzando, in D	1	0
5. Con moto, in A minor	1	0
6. Vivace, in E flat	1	0
7. Moderato, in A flat (Menuetto)	2	0
8. Lento, in E	1	0
9. Vivace, in E minor	2	0

KIRCHNER, FRITZ.

	s.	d.
Album leaves (Albumblätter). Ten characteristic pieces. Op. 375:—
1. Serenade (Ständchen)	2	0
2. Forget-me-not (Vergissmeinnicht)	2	0
3. Spring thoughts (Frühlings-empfindung)	1	0
4. May bells (Maiglöckchen)	1	0
5. Pastoral (Pastorale)	2	0
6. Evening bells (Abendläuten)	1	0
7. Song without words (Lied ohne Worte)	2	0
8. Humoresque (Humoreske)	2	0
9. Autumn song (Herbst-stimmung)	1	0
10. Hunting song (Jägerlied)	2	0
Deux Improvisations. Op. 387:
1. Andante cantabile religioso	2	0
2. Romanze	2	0
May-flowers. Four characteristic pieces. Op. 411: each	3	0
1. The violet. 2. The marigold. 3. The pansy. 4. The tulip.
Tonbilder. Three characteristic pieces each	3	0
1. Zitherklange. 2. Romanze. 3. Reiterfanfaren.
Elfen-Reigen. Scherzo	3	0
Fantaisie-impromptu	3	0
Felice notte. Serenade	3	0
Intermezzo lyrico	3	0
Les clochettes (Glockenspiel)	3	0
Polka-impromptu	3	0
Rhapsodie Espagnole	4	0
Scherzino und Humoreske. Zwei Clavierstücke each	3	0
Six Preludes. Op. 438	4	0
The Miller's Song (Müllerlied)	3	0

MACFARREN, WALTER.

Third Impromptu	4	0
Valse caprice	4	0

MATTEI, TITO.

Fleur d'Avril. Scherzo	4	0
L'Aimant (The Magnet). Morceau de salon	4	0
Rothesay. Valse dansante	4	0

MERKEL, GUSTAV.

Rondo grazioso	4	0

NOLLET, E.

Rêverie pastorale	4	0

PARRY, J. HAYDN.

Ballade, in C minor	4	0

London: EDWIN ASHDOWN, Limited,
HANOVER SQUARE.

GOUNOD'S ANTHEMS.

1. GLORY TO THEE, MY GOD, THIS NIGHT.
2. FOR EVER WITH THE LORD.
3. THE KING OF LOVE MY SHEPHERD IS.
4. THE PEACE OF GOD.

8vo size, with Organ Accompaniment, 4d. each; Sol-fa, 2d.
London: PHILLIPS and PAGE, 8, Oxford Market, W.

GOUNOD'S ORGAN PIECES.

1.	The King of Love	Arranged by Dr. C. Steggall.
2.	Glory to Thee	,, ,,
3.	The Peace of God	,, Dr. Wm. Spark.
4.	For ever with the Lord	,, ,,
5.	An Evening Lullaby	,, ,,

Each 2s. net.
London: PHILLIPS and PAGE, 8, Oxford Market, W.

Price 1s. 4d. per doz.

LUX MUNDI. Hymn for Evensong. Music by R. C. MACKNESS; words by G. M. MACKNESS. London: B. WILLIAMS, 19, Paternoster Row, E.C. Specimen copy (2d.) from COMPOSER, St. Mary's Rectory, Broughty Ferry.

Just Published.

NEW SONATA

No. XVI., IN G SHARP MINOR
FOR THE ORGAN
BY JOSEF RHEINBERGER.

Price Four Shillings net.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

WILLIAM J. YOUNG'S

POPULAR FOUR-PART SONGS for S.A.T.B.

I love the merry springtime ..	2d.	Gaily thro' the greenwood ..	2d.
Welcome, merry May	2d.	The Mountain Maid	2d.
Come o'er the mountain ..	2d.	Sunshine and shadow ..	2d.
The air resounds with music ..	2d.	To a sleeping child	2d.
Blow, ye balmy breezes ..	3d.	Fairy revels	3d.
Forest Echoes	3d.	Sunny rays	3d.
Who is Sylvia	3d.	Where are you roaming? ..	3d.
England's glory	3d.	O Anglia, land of the brave ..	3d.
The streamlet	3d.	Oh, peaceful vale of rest ..	2d.

PART-SONGS FOR CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR.

Hail, merry Christmas ..	2d.	A merry Christmas to you all	3d.
A Happy New Year	3d.	Songs of Praise	3d.

Over 250,000 of W. J. YOUNG'S Part-Songs have been sold.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

COMPOSITIONS
BY
T. MEE PATTISON.

CANTATAS.	Staff. s.	Staff. d.	Sol-fa. s.	Sol-fa. d.
The Ancient Mariner	2	6	0	6
Do. do. (Choruses only)	1	0
The Lay of the Last Minstrel	2	6
Do. do. (Choruses only)	1	0
May Day	1	0	0	6
The Miracles of Christ (Sacred)	1	0	0	6
ANTHEMS, &c.
All Thy works praise Thee (Harvest)	0	3	0	1½
Thou visitest the earth (Harvest)	0	2
I know that my Redeemer liveth (Easter)	0	3
There were shepherds (Christmas)	0	2
Thirteen Offertory Sentences	0	4
Six Kyries	0	2
Te Deum laudamus (in F)	0	3

ORIGINAL ORGAN COMPOSITIONS.

Fifteen Introductory and Concluding Voluntaries	3s. 6d
Five Concluding Voluntaries	1s. 6d

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published, 8vo, 3d.

CALL JOHN!

HUMOROUS PART-SONG
Founded on the Popular American Melody "THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME"
ARRANGED FOR S.A.T.B. AND SOLO BASS BY
W. W. PEARSON.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE SPIDER AND THE FLY

NEW HUMOROUS PART-SONG
For mixed and Male Voices, by
ALFRED J. CALDICOTT, MUS. BAC., CANTAB.
COMPOSER OF

Humpty Dumpty.	Where are you going, my pretty maid?
Jack and Jill.	Sobbing quartet, &c.
Jack Horner.
This is the house Jack built.

Just Published. METZLER and Co., 42, Gt. Marlborough Street, W.
Specimen copies, Post-free, 6d., of the COMPOSER, 239, Cromwell Road, S.W. Special terms to Societies.

Popular Part-Songs for S.A.T.B.

By W. W. PEARSON.

The Skaters	3d.	The Oyster Dredgers ..	2d.
Blow, Western Wind! ..	3d.	*Sweet to live (32nd thou.) ..	2d.
Stars of the Night	3d.	*Welcome, young Spring!	2d.
The Lake	3d.	*The Anglers (12th thou.) ..	2d.
*'Tis Morn	3d.	The Dream of Home ..	2d.
Sweet Spring (Madrigal) ..	3d.	Summer and Winter ..	2d.
The River	3d.	*Departed Joys	2d.
Over the mountain side ..	3d.	There's beauty in the deep	1½d.
Soul of living music ..	3d.	Soldier, rest!	1d.
The Stormy Petrel	3d.	Woods in Winter	1d.
The Coral Grove	3d.	Autumn	1d.
Pibroch of Donuil Dhu ..	3d.

HUMOROUS PART-SONGS.

*Three Doughtie Men. (55th thousand)	3d.
Three Children sliding. (8th thousand)	3d.
A Ryghte Merrie Geste	4d.
The Snow-white Doe	4d.
*Ben Bowlegs (EDWARD OXENFORD)	3d.
The Carrion Crow	3d.

DESCRIPTIVE CHORUSES FOR S.A.T.B.

Orchestral Parts on application to the COMPOSER, Elmham, Dereham.

The Iron Horse. (6th thou.)	4d.	The Ocean (6th thou.) ..	3d.
Off to Sea	4d.	*The Ironfounders (32nd thou.)	3d.
The Lifeboat	4d.	The Jäger Chorus (6th thou.)	3d.

Tonic Sol-fa Editions at half the above prices of those marked *.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

HUMOROUS PART-SONGS, by ALFRED ALLEN.
Dickory, dickory, dock .. .. 4d.
Tom, Tom, the Piper's son .. .. .. 3d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

"CASABIANCA." A stirring and effective part-song for S.A.T.B., by J. W. ALDOUS, B.A. Price 4d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Just Published. 8vo, 2d.

EVENING

PART-SONG FOR S.A.T.B.
The Words by EDWARD OXENFORD
THE MUSIC BY
W. W. PEARSON.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co

Just Published.

GIVE A ROUSE

CAVALIER SONG, FOR BARITONE OR BASS VOICE
The words written by ROBERT BROWNING
THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY A. DAVIDSON ARNOTT.

Price Two Shillings.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

SONGS by BENJAMIN PARSONS.—"O Time and Change." Words by W. E. HENLEY. Price 2s. "The Winds' Story." Words by ALICE E. GILLINGTON. Price 3s. "Sleep, sleep." Words by ASHMORE RUSSAN. Price 2s. 6d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

Dedicated (by permission) to the Right Rev. Lord Bishop of Ripon.
NEW SONG, by JEAN CHARLES, THE LORD SHALL COMFORT ZION, with Chorus ad lib., suitable for Church Choirs. Price 2s. net; post-free, 2s. 1d.
London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE COMING MUSICIAN.—Wind Instrument Solos—Beethoven's Homes.—See December Musical Opinion and Music Trade Review. Also 200 cols. Musical Literature and Advertisements. Price 2d. Order book and musicsellers; Smith's Railway Stalls; or (by post, 3½d.) 150, Holborn Bars, London, E.C.

Just Published.

TWELVE TRANSCRIPTIONS

FOR

TWO VIOLINS AND PIANOFORTE

BY ALFRED MOFFAT.

CONTENTS:

1. Gavotte .. .. Gluck.
2. Preludio and Giga .. .. Corelli.
3. Song without words .. .. Mendelssohn.
4. Prayer .. .. Beethoven.
5. Gavotta .. .. Leclair.
6. Corrente .. .. Corelli.
7. Lento .. .. Handel.
8. Arioso .. .. Sipriutini.
9. Bourrée .. .. Handel.
10. Song .. .. Schubert.
11. Lento .. .. Gluck.
12. Menuetto .. .. Haydn.

Price Five Shillings.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and CO.

Ready December 1. Price 2s. net.

IN D, MEZZO OR BAR.; IN E, SOPRANO OR TEN.

THE HEAVENLY BABE

SONG

BY THOMAS ADAMS,

Organist of St. Alban's, Holborn.

This beautiful composition will be sung as a Solo by the Principal Treble at the Midnight Mass on Christmas Eve, at ST. ALBAN'S, HOLBORN.

It will be found very suitable, either as song or Anthem, at Christmas Services.

The Anthem (S.A.T.B.) will be ready Dec. 7. Price 4d. net.

London: PHILLIPS and PAGE, 8, Oxford Market, W.,
Publishers of Gounod's Anthems "The King of Love," "Glory to Thee," &c.

SUITE FOR ORCHESTRA

BY SIR HERBERT OAKELEY.

Score, 5s.; Parts, 15s.

London: SCHOTT and Co., 159, Regent Street, W.

In noticing the recent Cheltenham Festival the Daily Telegraph thus alludes to this work:—

"The movements are a Pastorale, Minuet, Gavotte, and Saraband—the last three 'in olden style'—and 'a Rondo Scherzoso.' Both the first and the last are extremely interesting, and have attractions which all can appreciate, but the dance measures are, I fancy, sure to be best received. They are delightful in their quaint old-world grace. Amateurs should give their attention to Sir Herbert's Suite. It is not beyond their means, and out of it may be got both pleasure and profit."

BOEKELMAN'S EDITION

OF

BACH'S FUGUES

PRINTED IN COLOURS.

In this Edition the essential parts of each Fugue—viz., Subject, Answer, Counter-subject, Episodes, &c., are each printed in a distinct colour, with a view to helping the Student to a clear understanding of the structure and form of the composition.

Book I. contains—

Vol. 1. Fugue 3, C sharp major. | Vol. 1. Fugue 10, E minor.
" 1. Fugue 4, C sharp minor. | " 2. Fugue 7, E flat.

Book II. contains—

Vol. 1. Fugue 1, in C. | Vol. 1. Fugue 21, in B flat.
" 1. Fugue 7, in E flat. | " 1. Fugue 22, in B flat minor.

Price Two Shillings net each Fugue.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.
Sole Agents for Great Britain and the Colonies.

NEW FOREIGN PUBLICATIONS.

	s.	d.
BACHMANN, G.—Romance appassionata. For Violin (or Flute) and Pianoforte	4	0
BORDIER, J.—Scherzo Oriental. For Two Pianofortes net	5	0
BRAHMS, J.—Intermezzi, &c. For Pianoforte Solo. Op. 118	8	0
—— Intermezzi and Rhapsodie. For Pianoforte Solo. Op. 119	8	0
CHERUBINI, L.—Concert-Overture. Composed for the Philharmonic Society of London:—
Full Score .. .. net	8	0
Parts .. .. "	12	0
—— The same. Arranged as Pianoforte Duet	8	0
DÖRING, C. H.—Suite in A minor. For String Orchestra:—
Score .. .. net	4	0
Parts .. .. "	7	0
GREITH, C.—"Master Rubens." Musical Comedy, in Two Acts. German and English words:—
Vocal Score .. .. net	7	0
GRIEG, E.—Quartet. Arranged as Pianoforte Duet. Op. 27 net	4	4
—— Danse arabe. For Pianoforte Solo. Op. 55, No. 2.. "	1	1
—— The same. Arranged as Pianoforte Duet .. .. "	1	1
—— Lyrische Stücke. Op. 57. Book VI.:—
No. 1. Menuet; No. 2. Gade; No. 3. Illusion complete, net	1	8
No. 4. Geheimniss; No. 5. Sie tantzt; No. 6. Heimroch complete, net	1	8
GRIEG-ALBUM. For Harmonium .. .. .. net	2	2
HOFMANN, H.—"Johanna von Orléans." Cantata. For Soprano and Baryton Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra. English and German words. Op. 105:—
Score .. .. net	20	0
Parts .. .. "	32	0
JADASSOHN, S.—Sérénade (March, Notturne, Scherzo, and Boléro). For Wind Instruments (Two Flutes, Two Oboes, Two Clarinets, Two Bassoons, and Two Horns). Op. 104c:—
Score .. .. net	8	0
Parts .. .. "	10	0
—— "Kinderfest" ("Children's Frolics"). Six Easy and Instructive Pieces. For Pianoforte, Four hands. Op. 112:—
No. 1. Auszug in's Freie (The departure for the country)	2	0
" 2. Ruhe am Bache (A rest by the rivulet)	2	0
" 3. Ringelreihn (Ringa, ringa, rosie)	2	0
" 4. Ballspiel (Playing ball)	2	0
" 5. Tanz (Dance)	3	0
" 6. Fröhliche Heimkehr (Returning home)	2	0
LAMOND, F.—Symphony. For Orchestra. Op. 3:—
Full Score .. .. net	20	0
LAUB, V.—Valse noble. For String Quintet. Op. 30:—
Score .. .. net	1	6
Parts .. .. "	5	0
MOSZKOWSKY, M.—Suite. For Pianoforte. Op. 50.. net	2	2
—— Capriccioso. Op. 50, No. 3 .. .. "	1	8
—— Danse aux flambeaux. Op. 51:—
No. 1. For Pianoforte Solo .. .. net	1	8
" 2. For Pianoforte Duet .. .. "	1	8
MOZART.—Adagio. For Flute and Pianoforte. Arranged by BARGE	3	0
—— Three Duets. For Two Flutes. Edited by BARGE:—
Nos. 1, 2, and 3 .. .. each	3	0
RHEINBERGER, J.—Sonata. For Organ. Op. 175, No. 16 ..	8	0
—— The same. Arranged as Pianoforte Duet	8	0
ROTH, PH.—Eight Characteristic Pieces. For Violoncello Solo	4	0
SAURET, E.—"Gradus ad Parnassum." Technical Studies. For the Violin:—
Book I.	12	0
" II.	10	0
" III.	12	0
SINDING.—Symphony (D minor). Op. 21:—
Full Score .. .. net	20	0
—— The same. Arranged as Pianoforte Duet .. .. "	6	6
STANFORD, C. V.—String Quartet (G major). Op. 44:—
Score .. .. net	1	6
Parts .. .. "	8	0
—— String Quartet (A minor). Op. 45:—
Score .. .. net	1	6
Parts .. .. "	8	0
UMLAUFT, PAUL.—"Evanthia." Opera:—
Introduction (Vorspiel). For Orchestra. Score and Parts net	10	0
Intermezzo. For Orchestra. Score and Parts .. "	8	0
Grand Love-Duet (Evanthia and Dimitrios). For Orchestra, with condensed Conductor's Part net	8	0
Grand Selection (arranged by Arthur Seidel). For Orchestra, with condensed Conductor's Part net	10	0
WALDER, OTTO.—Sonatine (Allegro, Romanza, and Rondo). For Four Violins:—
Score and Parts	4	0
WEKERLIN, J. B.—Pastorale. For Flute and Oboe, and Pianoforte Accompaniment	10	0

Sold at half-price, if not marked net.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC.

NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S List of FOREIGN MUSICAL PUBLICATIONS and ALBUMS,

SUITABLE FOR CHRISTMAS, FREE ON APPLICATION.

LONDON & NEW YORK: NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.

J. & J. Hopkinson's Recent Publications.

ONE SHILLING BOOKS.

THE

GROSVENOR ALBUM.

Book 1. POPULAR SONGS. By BIRCH, BONHEUR, DIEHL, WEKERLIN, &c.

Book 2. SONGS and PIECES for the Banjo and Pianoforte. By G. NEVILLE.

Book 3. NEW DANCES, VALSES, POLKAS, &c.

Book 4. POPULAR SONGS (Second Selection). By PINSUTI, BLUMENTHAL, ROECKEL, ERNEST, &c.

Book 5. SONGS and PIECES for the Banjo and Pianoforte (Second Selection). G. NEVILLE.

Just published.

Book 6. SONGS (Third Selection). By GOUNOD, BEHREND, GERALD LANE, ROECKEL, &c.

Book 7. SONGS for GENTLEMEN. By BONHEUR, BIRCH, OLIVER KING, CIRILLO, &c.

MERRIE RHYMES FOR YE YOUNGSTERS. J. M. BARNETT. 8th Edition (Illustrated). For Two Voices with Pianoforte Accompaniment.

SYLVAN ECHOES. Five charming Duets for Female Voices. OLIVER KING.

SIX SONGS. Words by R. BURNS. Music by ARTHUR SOMERVELL.

TWO SHILLINGS NET.

SIX PIECES for GUITAR and PIANOFORTE. GEORGE NEVILLE. Containing:—"Russian Air," "Shadows" (Idyl), "Fleur de Lys" Polka, "Landler" Valse, "Niobe" Mazurka, "Elsa" Gavotte.

THREE SHILLINGS NET.

NEW ALBUM of SEVEN SONGS. ARTHUR SOMERVELL. Containing:—"Mad Lover's Song," "Three Shadows," "Mother's Dream," "Young Sir Guyon," "Lay a Garland," "O Nanny," "O, my Queen."

J. & J. HOPKINSON, 34, 35, and 36, Margaret Street, Cavendish Square, London, W.

Just Published.

SUMMARY

OF THE

HISTORY AND DEVELOPMENT OF MEDIÆVAL AND MODERN

EUROPEAN MUSIC

BY

C. HUBERT H. PARRY.

Price Two Shillings.
In paper boards, 2s. 6d.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

MUSICAL FORM. By EBENEZER PROUT, B.A., Lond., Author of "Harmony: its Theory and Practice," "Counterpoint: Strict and Free," "Double Counterpoint and Canon," "Fugue," "Fugal Analysis." All in Augener's Edition. Bound, net 5s. each. 86, Newgate Street, and 1, Foubert's Place, London.

TIME.—A Short Treatise on TIME, by FRANK MANLY, I.S.M. Dedicated to Sir JOSEPH BARNBY. Patronised by the leading Members of the Musical Profession. Testimonials from Sir William Cusins, Professor Bridge, Mr. Sims Reeves, &c. Price 6d. London: F. PITMAN, 20, Paternoster Row, E.C.

In the Press:

CANTATA

SET TO ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON'S POEM

CROSSING THE BAR

FOR FULL ORCHESTRA, CHORUS, AND PIANOFORTE

BY ALFRED HARBOROUGH.

Vocal Score, with the Orchestral Score arranged for two performers on the Pianoforte, 2s. 6d.; String Parts, 5s.; Wind Parts, 13s.

Full Score on application to the Publishers.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

WILL BE PUBLISHED DECEMBER 1.

NOVELLO, EWER AND CO.'S MUSIC PRIMERS.
No. 43.
EDITED BY SIR JOHN STAINER.

MUSICAL GESTURES

A PRACTICAL GUIDE TO THE STUDY OF THE RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC

BY

J. FREDERICK BRIDGE

MUS. DOC., OXON.

ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CHORISTERS OF WESTMINSTER ABBEY; GRESHAM PROFESSOR OF MUSIC.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

This little work is designed to present, by means of a series of short lessons, in which manual exercises are the leading feature, an attractive and expeditious method of learning the simpler rudiments of music.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.

In Paper Boards, Two Shillings and Sixpence.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

PRACTICAL HINTS ON BOY CHOIR TRAINING. By G. EDWARD STUBBS, M.A., Organist and Choirmaster of St. Agnes Chapel, Trinity Parish, New York.

Sixth Edition.

A useful treatise on the vocal training of Chorister Boys embodying the views of standard writers on the voice.

Although strictly scientific the book deals with the subject in a plain and practical way, and will be found of value to all who are entrusted with the training of boys' voices. It is highly endorsed by leading Clergymen and Choirmasters both in England and America. Price 3s. 6d. net.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE ART OF MUSIC

BY C. HUBERT H. PARRY, M.A., MUS. DOC., OXON., CANTAB., AND DUBLIN.

Demy 8vo. 12s.

"Dr. Parry treats the subject, of which he is an acknowledged master, comprehensively in both its historical and modern phases."—The Times.

"To say that it is the best work of its size on the subject seems cold, and even when, in addition to our inadequate account of the scope of the volume, we mention that it is written in as attractive a style as its matter is full of broad insight and keen discrimination, we feel we have still not paid the work its proper due."—Musical Standard.

KEGAN, PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER and Co., Ltd., Paternoster House, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.

Just Published.

POLONAISE

FROM THE OPERA

THE LIFE FOR THE CZAR

COMPOSED BY

M. I. GLINKA.

Arranged for the Pianoforte by BERTHOLD TOURS.

Price Two Shillings.

London and New York: NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE BEHNKE VOICE-TRAINING METHOD.

JUST PUBLISHED. PRICE, IN PAPER COVERS, TWO SHILLINGS; IN CLOTH, THREE SHILLINGS

VOICE-TRAINING PRIMER

BY

MRS. EMIL BEHNKE AND DR. CHARLES W. PEARCE.

An easy Catechism of Vocal Physiology and Musical Theory, for the use of Vocal Students generally. This work is also intended as a Text-book for preparing Candidates for Vocal Examinations, particularly those of the Associated Board of the R.C.M. and R.A.M., the Incorporated Society of Musicians, and Trinity College, London. It contains in one volume all the information required for answering the vivâ voce questions of Examiners.

SIXTIETH THOUSAND. PRICE, IN PAPER COVERS, ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE; IN CLOTH, THREE SHILLINGS.

VOICE-TRAINING EXERCISES

In Six separate Books, for Soprano, Mezzo-Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, Baritone, and Bass.

BY

EMIL BEHNKE AND DR. CHARLES W. PEARCE.

"Admirable, and doubtless will prove of great utility."—Rev. Sir F. A. Gore Ouseley.
"Far more precise in plan than anything I have seen."—Sir R. P. Stewart.
"Scientific, systematic, and ingenious."—Sir John Stainer.

THIRD AND IMPROVED EDITION. PRICE, IN PAPER COVERS, ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE; IN CLOTH, THREE SHILLINGS.

VOICE-TRAINING STUDIES

In Six separate Books, for Soprano, Mezzo-Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, Baritone, and Bass.

BY

EMIL BEHNKE AND DR. CHARLES W. PEARCE.

"This work contains 24 Progressive Studies in different styles, and is intended as a companion or supplementary volume to 'Voice-Training Exercises.' Those of a more cantabile character are to be used as Solfeggi, the others are to be sung as Vocalises. In this Second Edition the accompaniments have been simplified. Highly favourable opinions of these Studies have been expressed by Sir John Stainer, Sir Robert Stewart, Mr. W. H. Cummings, and other eminent authorities.

"There can be little doubt that these 'Studies,' which are published in separate keys for all voices, will share the popularity of the 'Exercises.'"—Sunday Times.
"We have no doubt that the second volume will equal the first in popularity."—Morning Post.
"I am glad to find you are still going ahead in your valuable sphere of work. The 'Voice-Training Studies' are a solid and sound contribution to the repertory of teachers and students."—Sir John Stainer.
"Your new book of 'Voice-Training Studies' is admirable, and will prove of very great value to students and teachers. I like it much."—C. Vincent, Mus. Doc.

NEW NUMBERS OF

CHAPPELL'S VOCAL LIBRARY OF PART-SONGS.

114. Strange Adventure ("Yeomen of the Guard"). S.A.T.B. .. .. .. Arthur Sullivan 6d.
115. Serenade (Men's Voices). T.T.B.B. Reginald de Koven 4d.
116. Madrigal ("Haddon Hall"). S.A.T.B. Arthur Sullivan 6d.
117. I loved a lass, a fair one (Men's Voices). T.T.B.B. King Hall 3d.
118. Venetian Song (F. Paolo Tosti). S.A.T.B. King Hall 4d.
119. Mighty Lord (Gounod's "Marche Religieuse"). S.A.T.B. .. .. King Hall 3d.
120. On Angels' Wings (Viviani's "Silver Trumpets") S.A.T.B. .. .. King Hall 3d.
121. Crossing the Bar. S.S.A.T.B.B. Arthur M. Goodhart 3d.
122. Sigh no more, ladies. A.T.T.B.B. R. J. S. Stevens 3d.

NEW ORGAN MUSIC.

IMPERIAL MARCH ... ... ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Arranged for Organ by KING HALL.

SOLDIERS' CHORUS (from "Faust") ... ... GOUNOD.
Arranged for Organ by KING HALL.

CANZONETTA ... ... FRANCIS THOMÉ.
Transcribed for the Organ by KING HALL.

MARCHE RELIGIEUSE ... ... GOUNOD.
MARCHE ROMAINE ... ... GOUNOD.
MARCHE MILITAIRE ... ... GOUNOD.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS NET EACH.

CHAPPELL AND CO., 50, NEW BOND ST., LONDON.

Printed by NOVELLO, EWER and Co., at 69 & 70, Dean Street (W.), and published at 1, Berners Street (W.), and 80 & 81, Queen Street (E.C.)
Sold also by KENT and Co., Paternoster Row (E.C.)—Friday, December 1, 1893.

No. 600

THE MUSICAL TIMES

Price 4d.

FEBRUARY 1, 1893.

THE

"CHALLEN" PIANOS

Are constructed in Three Classes,

PIANETTES, COTTAGES, and UPRIGHT GRANDS,

With ENTIRE METAL FRAMES, PATENT CHECK ACTIONS with front Escapement, and every Modern Improvement.

The most Eminent Musicians of the day concur in their unqualified recommendation of these high-class Pianofortes, and the same are extensively used by Students of the Royal College of Music, Royal Academy, and other Musical Institutions in London and Provinces.

Highest Awards for Upright Pianos,
1862, 1877, 1878, 1881, 1885, 1886.

CHALLEN & SON, 46, Oxford Street, London, W.
ESTABLISHED NEARLY A CENTURY.

Agents throughout the United Kingdom. Lists and Photos, post-free, to all parts of the World.
Telegraphic Address—"MEDALLISTS, LONDON."

HIGHEST AWARDS, 1851, 1855, 1862, 1865, 1872, 1875, 1877.
Paris, 1878; London (Inventions), 1885; Melbourne, 1888-9.

J. & J. HOPKINSON

Beg to announce that they have introduced the following new style of Upright Piano:

No. 15 IRON UPRIGHT GRAND.

With a complete Iron Frame, Full Trichord, Check Action, Brass Down-Pressure Bar, Seven Octaves. Height, 4 ft. 1 in.; Width, 4 ft. 9 in.

In Rosewood or Walnut Cases, 60 Guineas; In Ebonized Case, 65 Guineas.

NOTICE OF REMOVAL.

J. and J. HOPKINSON invite attention to their superb stock of HORIZONTAL and UPRIGHT GRAND and COTTAGE PIANOFORTES, now on view at their New Warerooms—

34, 35, & 36, Margaret Street, Cavendish Square, W.

BISHOP & SON,

Organ Builders

TO HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN AND H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

INVENTORS AND PATENTEES OF AN ENTIRELY NEW SYSTEM OF

TUBULAR PNEUMATIC ACTION

WHICH ENSURES THE UTMOST PROMPTITUDE OF SPEECH AND A PERFECTION OF TOUCH AND REPETITION HITHERTO IMPOSSIBLE.

BUILDERS OF THE LARGE ORGANS AT—Southwell Cathedral.

The Oratory, Brompton.
St. James's, Bermondsey.
St. Mary's, Nottingham.
St. Matthew's, Bayswater.
St. Anselm's, Lincoln's Inn Fields.
St. Andrew's, New Kent Road.
All Souls', Eastbourne.
Adelaide Cathedral.
Auckland Cathedral.
Reims, France.
Holy Trinity, Folkestone.
H. Trinity, Milton-next-Gravesend.
St. James's, Piccadilly.
St. George's Cathedral, Southwark.
Battersea.
Notting Hill.
St. Giles's, Camberwell.
St. Matthew's, Walsall.
Great Yarmouth. Rebuilt.
St. Andrew's, Newington.
St. Luke's, Southampton.
Holy Trinity, Stroud Green.
Bombay Cathedral.
Bombay Town Hall.
Madras Cathedral.
St. Luke's, Christ Church, New Zealand.
St. Giles's, Northampton.
St. Mary's, Kilburn.
All Saints', Acton. Rebuilt.
Edinburgh Exhibition.
Manchester Exhibition.
Roehampton.
Southsea.
Croix, France (2).
Roubaix, France (2).
Davos, Switzerland.
Lago Maggiore, Italy.
Paris, St. George's.
Holy Innocents', Hammersmith.
&c., &c.

250, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.

CHAPPELL'S PIANOS

From 16 to 135 Gs.

ON THE THREE YEARS SYSTEM
OF HIRE AND PURCHASE.

Also a large assortment of New and Second-hand Pianofortes by BROADWOOD, COLLARD, BECHSTEIN, and CHICKERING, at greatly reduced prices.

ILLUSTRATED LISTS POST-FREE.

AGENT FOR CLOUGH & WARREN'S AMERICAN ORGANS.
ALEXANDRE'S HARMONIUMS.
CHICKERING & SONS' PIANOFORTES.

50, NEW BOND STREET,
AND OF ALL THE PRINCIPAL MUSICSELLERS.

Recommend the Real, be Real, and Success is Yours.

The original Patentee, largest Manufacturer of Organ Pedal combinations for Pianofortes; himself an Organist of Twenty years' experience; received Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent

THRICE for REAL IMPROVEMENTS, are the recommendations offered for your consideration by the Inventor and Patentee of the Cresdimo p ◁ f expressivo f ▷ p Organ Pedals.

"Organists who desire to perfect their performances will welcome your inventions as a happy auxiliary. In use (with my Pianoforte) I find them in every point superior to any others." The preceding extract from a Cathedral Organist's spontaneous letter is the "key-note" to thousands of Testimonials from professional gentlemen of the highest rank in all parts of the world.

EXPORT ORDERS despatched immediately on receipt of remittance. Goods easily combined with any Piano or Pianette. Trade Export price for Export Class (including case, F.O.B.), £8. Two sets in one case, £15.

Class.	Price.
A.C.O.	£5 5s.
B.C.O.	£7 7s.
C.C.O.	£9 9s.
D.C.O.	£11 11s.
E.C.O. Export Class.	£15 15s.
F.C.O.	£16 16s.
Connoisseurship Class	£25 0s.

Trade and Professional Terms with Lists free.

AINSWORTH'S CRESDIMO PATENT WORKS, Brinscall, Chorley, England.

FORSYTH BROTHERS' PUBLICATIONS.

PIANOFORTE SOLOS.

ALGERNON ASHTON.	s.	d.
Gigue. Op. 63. No. 1	3	0
Elegy. „ „ 2	2	0
Scherzetto. „ „ 3	3	0
Complete	6	0

W. CARROLL.
Two Sonatinas—No. 1, in C major	3	0
„ 2, in D major	3	0

SIR CHARLES HALLÉ.
Gluck's Ballo and Bourrée. Transcribed	4	0
Do. Menuet Grazioso in G. „	3	0
Do. Tambourin in D „	3	0
Geminiani's Gavotte in C „	4	0

S. JADASSOHN.
Lose Blätter. Op. 103 .. .. .. each	3	0
No. 1. Elegie.
„ 2. Mazurka.
„ 3. Walzer.

B. M. RAMSAY.	s.	d.
Carnival March	3	0
Gymnasium March	3	0
Tarantella in D minor	3	0

ANTON STRELEZKI.
Douze Morceaux. Op. 209:—
No. 1. Valse Intime	3	0
„ 2. Scherzino	4	0
„ 3. Mazurka in D flat	3	0
„ 4. Mazurka in C	2	0
„ 5. Une Nuit à Seville	3	0
„ 6. Alla Marcia	3	0
„ 7. Chant Polonaise	3	0
„ 8. Valse Oubliée	4	0
„ 9. Novellezza	3	0
„ 10. Danish Bridal Procession	3	0
„ 11. Polonaise	4	0
„ 12. Toccata	3	0

Youthful Reminiscences. Five Pieces, by FERDINAND HILLER. Paper, 1s. net.

Schubert's 15 Melodies. Transcribed by STEPHEN HELLER. Paper, 3s. net; Cloth, gilt edges, 5s. net.

Heller Albums (Nos. 1 and 2). A Collection of the latest Compositions. Paper, 3s. net; Cloth, gilt edges, 5s. each net.

Reinecke Album. 31 Original Pieces. Paper, 3s. net; Cloth, gilt edges, 5s. net.

Pauer's Album for the Young. 40 Short Pieces in two Books. 1s. net each.

PIANOFORTE DUETS.

FREDERICK CORDER.

Overture, Entr'acte, and Ballet Music from "Nordisa."

Overture	6	0	Entr'acte	3	0

BALLET MUSIC.

No. 1. Polska	3	0	No. 3. Children's Dance	3	0
„ 2. Ring Dance	3	0	„ 4. Halling	4	0

101 ORIGINAL ROUNDS

RANGING FROM VERY EASY TO DIFFICULT, FOR TREBLE VOICES.

The Words by BERNARD PAGE.

The Music, composed and collected, by ARTHUR PAGE.

Price, Part I., Easy to Moderately Difficult, 6d. net; Part II., Moderately Difficult to Difficult, 8d. net; complete, 1s. net.

New Enlarged and Improved Edition of

E. PAUER'S

BIRTHDAY BOOK OF MUSICIANS AND COMPOSERS.

This elegant little book contains upwards of 650 dates and places of the births and deaths of the most celebrated, influential, and popular Composers, Singers, Instrumentalists, Musical Historians, Archæologists, Authors, and Critics, with a short reference to their chief works.

Cloth, gilt edges, 3s. net; Leather, 4s. net; Morocco, 7s. 6d. net.

FORSYTH BROTHERS,

267, Regent Street, London, W., and 122 and 124, Deansgate, Manchester.

ESTABLISHED IN THE REIGN OF KING WILLIAM IV.

Knighthood of the Legion of Honour, 1878. Knight Commander of Villa Vicoza, 1883.
Gold Medals at the principal International Exhibitions.

JOHN BRINSMEAD & SONS'

PIANOFORTES

Are the Perfection of Tone, Touch, and Durability.

The BRINSMEAD PIANOFORTE as an exponent of Sacred Music (in Church or Orchestra), Solo or Accompaniment.

INTELLECTUALLY.

1. THE BRINSMEAD PIANOFORTE can render the subject, counter-subject, and counter-point of a Fugue, &c., with due accent and subordination of the part-writing by its touch. This is impossible on the Organ, as Piano and Forte are made by the stops and the swell (mere lifeless mechanism). Example: Prelude and Fugue in D minor, Bach.

EMOTIONALLY.

2. THE BRINSMEAD PIANOFORTE renders melody with true expression from the pressure of the fingers and nervous system. Example from Rossini's "Stabat Mater."

RANGE AND POWER IN ACCOMPANIMENT.

3. ORCHESTRAL PARTS can be executed with equal accent, expression, and brilliancy on the BRINSMEAD PIANOFORTE (especially with Organ Pedals), and with many effects of 8ves., Staccato, and Arpeggio, which even the Orchestra cannot imitate. Example: "Inflammatus," Rossini, &c., &c.

JOHN BRINSMEAD & SONS,

PIANOFORTE MAKERS,

To the Royal Family, and by Special Appointment to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, His Majesty the King of Bavaria, His Imperial Majesty the King of Portugal, &c.

18, 20, 22, WIGMORE STREET, CAVENDISH SQUARE

(TEMPORARY PREMISES—104, NEW BOND STREET),

LONDON, W.

AND OF THE PRINCIPAL MUSICSELLERS.

Illustrated Catalogues and Hire System Priced Lists on application.

Printed by NOVELLO, EWER and Co., at 69 & 70, Dean Street (W.), and published at 1, Berners Street (W.), and 80 & 81, Queen Street (E.C.)
Sold also by KENT and Co., Paternoster Row (E.C.)—Wednesday, February 1, 1893.

BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY
3 9999 08818 983 0

B.P.L. Bindery.
MAY 24 1894

K.T JUN 19